DESERT NEWS ON TEMPLE SUIT.

THE Deseret News for March 6 has the short dispatch given to the general press of the country regarding the Temple Lot suit at Independence, Missouri, and its termination, with a comment, which we give below:—

The following telegram as a part of the regular daily press report, was received at a late hour this afternoon. It will be read by Latter Day Saints in Utah and elsewhere with great interest:—

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 3.—The Temple Lot, a sacred piece of Mormon soil in Independence, for which the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Independence faction of the Mormon Church have been fighting in the courts for four years, was to-day decided by Judge Phillips of the district court to be the property of the Reorganized Church. The Independence faction of the Mormons is by the opinion enjoined from asserting its title to the property, the cloud is removed, and full possession is allotted to the plaintiff. The successful organization has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. Its following numbers twenty-five thousand souls and its president is Joseph Smith, Jr., son of the Prophet Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon Church.

The News is right. That little dispatch will go in the United States wherever the daily and weekly press can carry it. The warring between the two churches has become nearly as widely circulated as the message borne by the elders has gone; and it is a wonder to many that there should be such a division between the people calling themselves Saints. But, as the division was thrust upon us, not having been sought by us, we are not justly blamable, and are not responsible for the consequences. We can cheerfully agree with the News that the decision will be read with interest by all Latter Day Saints, of every shade of belief. It will be read by many in the world with surprise, and will affect them favorably to the truth.

Mr. Smith McPherson, attorney-at-law, resident at Red Oak, Iowa, hits one of the results likely to accrue to the church from the decision of the Temple Lot suit, in a congratulatory note, dated March 6. He says:—

It is a triumph for you, and your church, and will be so regarded by the public all over the country. It will be of much benefit in many ways.

Many years ago, when there were more divisions between so-called Latter Day Saints than there are now, we stated to the Saints that of all the contending parties seeking to be regarded as the true church, the Reorganization could best afford to wait the arbitrament of time and the culmination of events. Late occurrences corroborate this statement. We have watched; we have prayed; we have waited, and to us has come again the fulfillment of the word; "and ye shall find favor and grace in the eyes of the people."

Rev. John McCalman, of New Bedford, Massachusetts, preached in the Middle Street Christian church in that place, Sunday, March 4, in the course of which sermon he said:—

The word of the Lord is divine communication, teaching his children what to do under circumstances in which they find themselves at a given time and place. Sometimes we call it confidence. If to-day your hearts are open to receive divine communication, the word of the Lord will be present. You ask, how shall I know it is the word of God? Joseph Smith published to the world at large that he had received a divine communication. Now what right have I to say that that communication was not a divine one?

His text was 1 Samuel 3: 1:—

"And the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord before Eli. And the word of the Lord was rare in those days; there was no open vision."

The word of the Lord was rare in those days; there was no open vision; there was no divine communication spread abroad. Why is it that the word was rare? Because there was no medium through which God could talk to men. There are so few interpreters that there are few communications. Interpreters are scarce for two reasons; one is lack of suitability, or fitness, and the other is lack of faith. In the time of Samuel it was lack of fitness. At that time in Israel there was nobody to whom God could speak. There is just one way by which every one in the world can keep himself from being an interpreter of God—let him hear and let him refuse to obey. Eli refused. Fitness through action comes when the word is put into practice. Fitness through faith comes of the expectancy that God has a message for one. What we need in our Sunday school, what we need in our meetings, what we need in our homes, is the faith that God has a message for us. And those who are thoroughly acquainted with the Bible are those to whom God can speak best.

This power of interpretation, this power to receive divine communication from God is the privilege of every child of God. It is your privilege to wait upon God, to receive his message and deliver it, and if you have not that faith I trust that God may give it to you.

It would not be easy for one of our own elders to express the sentiment in better words than has Rev. John McCalman. The great need of the religious word to-day is the light of revelation; in a personal and a collective way; and this will not, cannot be reached, until men shall be willing to say, "We believe God did reveal himself to man anciently, and that holy men of old did speak as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost; and that God not only has revealed himself to men in the past, but that he does now reveal his will, and will continue to reveal it to them who believe and have faith, whenever the necessities of his people and his purposes for good to them shall require."

Clipping was sent us by Bro. John Smith.

* *

Bro. Joseph S. Lee, laboring in Utah, was at Willard, February 26, obtained the use of the opera hall, and had spoken three evenings up to March 3. At the last meeting he was questioned pretty sharply by some of the elders; which questioning and his answers resulted in an agreement to debate, beginning March 5. Of the discussion, whether it came off or not we are not yet informed.

* *

At Bro. J. S. Lee's meeting in Amusement hall, at Ogden, Utah, March 2, the audience kept him replying to questions until 11 o'clock, amid some excitement. He had hopes of a discussion there but was in doubt.

* *

A sister, Mrs. Lydia Hoag, 439 Washington avenue, Muskegon, Michigan, would be pleased to have an elder in passing to call on her. She has been separated from church communion several years, not having heard a sermon in ten years. Her husband is not a believer, but she still cherishes the faith. She was baptized by Bro. Robert Davis some fifteen years ago, her name at the time being Degroat, her maiden name. It may be that if some of the Saints living near to Muskegon, should correspond with, and if possible visit Sr. Hoag; good may come of it.

Bro. Morris T. Short, writing from New Albany, Indiana, expresses himself pleased with the decision at Kansas City. Writing of brotherly regard and the sympathy of fellow laborers for each other he pithily and plaintively says:—

I would sooner the roses would enliven my senses than to fall on my bier. Let food and drink thrill my gustatory nerves before they are cold, inanimate clay. May the songsters of the grove warble forth their merry, sweet roundelays all before the rodent discovers my dark domain, or rank vegetation drinks up my blood, and dissects my bony frame. What I want, under the great law of reciprocity, I ought to be ever willing to bestow, hence strive on, brave heart, nor doubt that you have the sympathy and love of old Morris T.

* *

Bro. Morris is right; the cheery word as one is climbing the heights, weary with the labor, from one also toiling will do more to steady the pulse and strengthen the step, than a whole epitome of eulogy pronounced over the grave of the toiler. "Bear on brave soul, bear on;" suggests a cheer; and all will accept it from the brother, albeit he is not "old."

IS THE BATTLE ON?

BRO. R. R. DANA sends to Bro. W. W. Blair, a clipping from the San Francisco, California, Examiner, of March 4, from which it appears that the Utah Church are attempting to carry out the threatened investment of the lines of the Reorganized Church, or as the Examiner has it, the "Josephite Mormons." Prof. Karl Maeser of the Brigham Young College, is in charge of Upper California, it would appear, and is doing all that is possible to turn things their way. From this clipping we quote:—

Just how California came to be selected as a mission ground is probably best explained by the fact that the Josephites, or "Reorganized" Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the monogamist sect, had begun work here with some success. The Josephites are more obnoxious to the old-line Mormons than any sect in existence, and much of the proselyting of to-day is with a view of uprooting the faith of the renegades from the tithing-house and the temples. Such is not the avowed object, of course, for the old-line Mormons utterly refuse to recognize the reorganized as a branch worthy of recognition.

It appears from Bro. Dana's report that Bishop Elmer Taylor, is in charge in Southern California; and that Elder Marian F. Lyman, of the Utah Twelve, and Brigham H. Roberts, are especially active at San Bernardino, Los Angeles, San Diego, and other southern towns. These men have been allowed the use of the Saints' building at San Bernardino, which they occupied freely, and we believe unmolested. Bro. David L. Harris has reviewed their teaching. Bro. R. R. Dana and William Gibson, being of the opinion that the efforts of Bro. Harris were timely and effective.

It would seem as if there would be a special effort upon the part of the Utah Church to overthrow the theory of the Reorganized Church and take captive the members thereof. All we have to say of this effort at present writing is this: Look to your defences, brethren; do not shun any fair investigation, being not afraid of the truth; insist upon a fair hearing for both sides; treat the Utah elders courteously and "as ye would that men should do unto you." Invite the elders to open and fair disputation, but avoid contemptuous quarreling, or spiteful vituperation. Allow the use of the houses you control for a presentation of the claims of those elders; use them courteously; exchange views with them when they will allow you to, and review what they present, without bluster and without noisy altercation, contention, or confusion; and in their presence, if practicable, find out where the truth lies in the contest, and if theirs proves to be the better cause, the work of God, no one can blame you if you be vanquished and be led to a change of opinion and religious devotion. We virtually say to others, "You have been and are in error; come with us into the light. It is both honorable and your duty to abandon your error and accept our truth;" and we should not hesitate to apply the same principle to the hearing of others.

Be not fearful, nor unbelieving. God rules in Israel and wills that his truth shall prevail.

The Deseret News for March 9 discusses the Temple Lot suit in an editorial in which some surprise is expressed that the question of succession in the church line should have been considered, and closes the editorial thus:—

The Saints in Utah regard the Temple lot in Independence, as they regard in a certain sense "the earth and the fullness thereof," as the Lord's, to be disposed of as he in his providence sees fit. Certain promises apply particularly to that sacred spot, and they will all be fulfilled in the Lord's own due time, for his plans and purposes are never known to have failed. There is no likelihood that the church will enter into any legal controversy on the subject with the "Josephites" or any one else. It has kept out of it thus far, and probably will continue to do so. But when the time comes for the building of Zion and the Temple in Jackson county, the Latter Day Saints will be ready to perform the glorious work and the Lord will open the way.

The succession was an issue incidental to the suit, a part of the thing contested; for Bishop Hill of the defence, specifically testified that he as Bishop of the defending church held the property "in trust for the church organized in 1830;" and an effort was made by the defence to prove by implication that the Utah Church was "that church." If this could have defeated the cause of the Reorganized Church, the time was propitious for it to have been pleaded; and to the best judgment of those managing the case of the defending church it was so pleaded, and witnesses for the Utah philosophy were put on the stand and testified in behalf of the defence.

It may be clearly true that the Utah Church may not enter into a legal controversy with the "Josephites, or anyone else," in regard to the Temple

Lot; but the truth remains that the question of succession is in a large sense a legal one; and of such a nature that under certain contingencies the courts in which the law of the land is administered, legally, must and will take cognizance. There is a legal and a spiritual, or ecclesiastical side to the controversy and it is well to be ready for the examination of either in its time.

When the pamphlet containing the text of the decision shall be in the hands of the elders, it will be seen that there was no practicable way of avoiding the issue of succession in church line, and for that reason the Reorganization made the point in the court—if the church represented by the Deseret News were ignorant of what was going on it is not our fault, as the proceedings were all open to inquiry, at any time, by any interested parties.

Bro. H. N. Hansen wrote card from Provo, Utah, March 7, stating that the Saints were feeling well at that place. Two, man and wife, at Salem, had given their names for baptism.

REQUIRED TO FORGIVE.

YE are commanded to forgive all men; I will forgive whom I will.—Christ.

The foregoing charges the man who will be a follower of Christ to forgive, as it is only within the province of Deity to discriminate between those who are really entitled to forgiveness and those not to be forgiven.

For this reason, that is, because man has not the wisdom to rightly judge, he must forgive all; leaving the recompense of reward and the visitation of punishment to God, to whom both wisdom and power belong.

AN INCIDENT AND COMMENT.

We have been accused by some with having joined hands with the persecutors of the Saints and those who were enemies to the Prophet Joseph and the Saints of his time; because we have in our public ministrations and private life expressed no bitterness of feeling, or vindictiveness towards men who it has been held by some to have been engaged in the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith at Carthage, Illinois. The fact is, that we had no personal knowledge as to who was, or was not guilty of that crime. Public opinion on the one side said that certain men were; public opinion on the other side said that others were; but, an actual prosecution by the authorities of the State, the facts of which remain a matter of public record, failed to convict any.

Whether this prosecution was a fair and honest effort to locate the crime on the part of the authorities of the State, or a legal farce, we have no means of determining, whatever we may believe about it; hence, as a citizen remaining in the State mingling with its citizens of all classes, the only honorable course left to us was to let the matter rest to the arbitrament of time to reveal the perpetrators and vindicate the memory of the victims. The last has been fairly well accomplished; and whether the first will ever occur, or the mystery be solved only in the final judgment, it has passed beyond human powers—and we are content to let it there abide.

If we have ever met any who were the active movers in the tragedy at Carthage we had no knowledge of it at the time we met them, or since; hence have not at any time condoned the crime, or fraternized with the perpetrators of it.

What has been beyond our knowledge and measure we have let alone, for conscience' sake; and entreating all men courteously have sought to magnify the calling of a preacher of Christianity, under conditions which those who have accused us have had no just conception.

In a letter of a brother to the HERALD some months since a reference was made to our having met a man at Carthage, Illinois, who was a very active partisan against the Saints in Hancock county; and one of those believed by many at Nauvoo to have been among the murderers of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. This reference states that we met this man with a pleasant "Good morning." The man referred to was Thomas C. Sharp, the editor of the Warsaw Signal, a bitter anti-Mormon sheet, and open antagonist of the Saints at Nauvoo. He was one of those indicted and tried for the murder of the Smiths and acquitted. He remained in the county, and many years after was chosen as Probate Judge, in which position it is stated he served to the satisfaction of the people as an upright citizen of the State should do. It was during a term of his service as Probate Judge that we met him in the courthouse and was introduced to him by an attorney, a mutual acquaintance. This was but a few years ago, and the only time, except the one referred to in the brother's letter that we ever met the man to speak to him; and aside from the common greeting of a casual meeting no conversation ever passed between us.

At the time we met Judge T. C. Sharp, and passed the "Good morning," referred to in the brother's letter, he was a helpless paralytic, sitting in a wheeled chair on the sidewalk in the shade of the buildings. Whether he recognized us, and knew who it was that spoke to him, or cared to know, we do not know.

There is a class of Latter Day Saints, who seem to think it to be their duty to cherish resentment against those who have despitefully used the Prophet Joseph, his Brother Hyrum, and their brethren in those far off years, in such degree that they will not write or speak of them except in denunciation; and would not either speak to or have anything to do with them. When we saw the reference to Mr. Sharp in our brother's letter in the HERALD, we were impressed that some of this class referred to above, would object to our action related in this incident and would take it to our discredit. And this has occurred, one going to the extent of writing to us condemnatory of it, and stating that it would not "raise the son of the prophet in the estimation of the old-time Saints." But, be that as it may, we remember that our blessed Lord, our living exemplar, when suffering from the cruel pangs inflicted upon him to his death, lifted his eyes and heart to his Father, and said: "Forgive them; they know not what they do."

Those men who killed Joseph and Hyrum Smith sinned grievously. Whether Colonel, afterwards Judge Sharp was one of them, we do not know. If he was, he must answer to the God who commanded "Thou shalt not kill." If he was not, no punishment awaits him. And whether he was, or was not, there is no power granted us, or others to take vengeance directly, or indirectly; and so the only true philosophy is to let the matter pass. Those who choose to condemn what we did may do so. Many of the old-time Saints seem to forget that we were one of them, and have as good right to our judgment and action in personal matters as any of that now rapidly lessening number of people called "old-time Saints."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

IN a late letter from Bro. G. S. Lincoln, San Francisco, California, he says:—

All goes well with us. Our meetings are quite well attended and quite a number of friends are interested. The Master assists us in presenting the word of life, and we are looking for better results in the future. Bro. G. E. Deuel is with us and doing good work. Our Sunday school and Religio-Literary are successful.

Bro. A. H. Parsons wrote from Banks, Maryland, March 11, of good work being done in the Philadelphia district:—

District conference passed off pleasantly at Brooklyn, New York. As the Sunday schools of Brooklyn and Philadelphia concluded to organize a district association, the conference was continued over Sunday, convening again on Monday. After some talk as to the advisability of such an organization, it was moved to proceed and organize, which was done. Elders W. H. Kelley and A. H. Parsons were chosen as delegates to the General Assembly. On Tuesday evening following I met with the young people of Brooklyn and organized Zion's Religio-Literary Society.

Bro. George Box was chosen president. There is some talk of organizing here. A full house last night; interest good; some near the fold.

The Burlington, Iowa, Post of the 10th inst. publishes a one third column notice of the visit of Sr. Catharine Salisbury and Son Frederick to Burlington, while attending conference of the Nauvoo and String Prairie district. The item concludes as follows:—

Mrs. Salisbury has lived to see the rise and spread of the church that her brother founded. She was a member of her father's family when Joseph Smith was translating the Book of Mormon. She speaks of him as being an intelligent, honest, and upright man. She is now and always has been a firm believer in the mission of her brother, and because of this belief she and her family have suffered much from the hands of fanatic men. When the church was driven from Hancock county Illinois, Mrs. Salisbury with her family and a few others remained, and by a straight-forward, upright life has made for herself and the church many friends. She left the city Monday, going to Lamoni, Iowa, to be in attendance at the Annual Conference that convenes there in April.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. L. R. DEVORE reports that between October and January 1 last he baptized one hundred and fifty-two persons on Aratua Island. This is about one hundred and eighty miles from Papeete. Sister Devore writes that her health is improved and that for the good of the work they will remain another year. Both Brn. Devore and Gilbert are preaching in the Tahitian tongue. Bro. William Newton had been absent on distant islands since October, no late reports having been received from him.

Numerous letters received will be inserted or noted as space permits.

The action of General Conference concerning scattered members of branches is, in effect, that after due notice to report, they should be enrolled and retained on branch records as "scattered members"—it is contrary to the action of the conference that such names be stricken from records. Those interested please take notice. Some notices have been sent us in which it was proposed to drop such names.

Bro. Heman C. Smith arrived home from Western Iowa on Monday, the 12th inst.

Bro. and Sr. I. N. Roberts returned to Lamoni from Minnesota and Dakota on Thursday, March 15.

A letter from Bro. L. L. Wight, dated Oscar, Indian Territory, March 13, contains a newspaper clipping account of the burning of a sanitarium in San Antonio, Texas, in which the wife of Bro. H. L. Thompson, a paralytic in attendance, lost her life. The occurrence is a very sad one and a severe blow to Bro. Thompson, for whom Bro. Wight asks prayer that he be sustained and comforted. Bro.

Wight expects to be present at the coming General Conference. He reports an active, intelligent branch of Saints at Oscar.

The reports of the ministry to General Conference will be published in pamphlet form and issued as a supplement to the HERALD dated April 4. The supplement will be the same in size as the Conference Minutes and with the latter will form a complete report of the conference proceedings.

The appeal from the decision in the Temple Lot Suit will be heard at Minneapolis, Minnesota, in June next.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"See the rivers flowing Downward to the sea,
Pouring all their treasure
Bountiful and free;
Yet to help their giving,
Hidden springs arise;
Or, if need be, showers
Feed them from the skies."

THOUGHTS ON WHAT WE READ.

LAST evening as I sat down all alone here in my mountain home and took up the newly arrived and ever welcome Herald, after glancing briefly over the editorial, I turned to the Home Column, and the first my eyes rested upon was the sister disclaiming the "robes of perfection" in which she had been clothed in the editorial of January 10. I admired the sentiment of that letter. I know of others, one in particular, who has at times been presented to the readers of the Herald and Autumn Leaves clothed in garments far richer and more brilliant than any she possessed, and felt truly sorry that she should be looked upon or thought of as being rich when she knew only too well however much she desired to be worthy of all that kind hearts and hands adorned her with, she in truth was not; that she was poor, and weak, and erring, and the situation often made her feel uncomfortable. I have no idea who the "Sister" is, but from the prompt and straightforward manner in which she hands back those "robes," conclude that Sister Walker was not incorrect in her statements, though all truth may not be written.

Next came Sr. Devore's interesting letter. The entire silence that reigned about me while I read, aided in losing myself to present surroundings and to partake of the true spirit of her situation. I could realize it more fully because of all that Sister Helen had told me of her life there, and because I too have been a stranger in a far distant land on the same important errand, and was filled with the same desire for the souls among whom we were laboring. I felt the Spirit bear witness while she spoke concerning Bro. Gilbert, and seemed to see the man (though my natural eyes never beheld him) as he stood preaching to the crouching natives.

Yes, indeed, Sister Ella, there is many a lonely hour, many trials and sacrifices in your experience that never reach America in the form of words. It is the bright, the cheering, and the encouraging features of the work that one feels impelled to communicate. When we "find a piece of silver," then do we "call in our neighbors to rejoice with us." And knowing as I do by my former experience, how prized by the far off missionaries is a letter from kindred or friends, is it not a betrayal of my want of thoughtfulness that I do not often send those missives across the great deep bearing what they may to cheer and to comfort, at least to convey the knowledge that the absent, laboring, sacrificing, lonely sister is not forgotten?

One more word and I will close. I have acted upon Sr. Jennie Newberry's suggestion of reading a verse from the Bible each morning as a lesson for the day. The first verse I read on opening the Bible this morning—while these thoughts that I have written were revolving in my mind—was: "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God."—2 Cor. 3:5. Sweet is the work of God's children to help one another.

SISTER EMMA.

MOUNT OLIVET, Cal., Feb. 8.

Dear Sisters:—I have long thought to send in my mite if perchance it might help others, as I have been helped and edified. I have received so much benefit from the letters of my sisters I feel it selfish to always receive without at least expressing my appreciation of all their efforts.

I would like to speak a word for the Daughters of Zion. From the first published matters in Herald my heart felt to say, Amen. I felt the necessity and importance of the work till my whole soul went out in gratitude to God and I said, "If I have any influence it shall be used in this grandest movement that is stirring the hearts of women to-day."

"Come up higher" has been the burden of the Spirit these long months! How far beneath our privileges as Saints we were living God only knew. Yet in the heart of each one of us we knew just what that meant to us and what must be put away from us to make us pure and holy in his sight and to make us strong to withstand the fiery darts of the adversary.

Social purity is the foundation of our success. The condition of the world is dreadful to behold. We as Saints partake more or less of the surrounding influences. Therefore let us arise, and by our united efforts as one help to bring ourselves on that higher plane that God may receive us as a "living sacrifice, holy and acceptable, which is our reasonable service."

The training of children seems to have been the main thought thus far in this movement, and if we will go back to its proper beginning this training will not be so puzzling as it is now to some mothers. We must as fathers and mothers understand our sacred relations to each other and the laws that govern our being. We must know our children are to some extent at least what we determine them to be by our own actions, influences, and impulses. Their prenatal conditions may influence their whole lives. If we as mothers could only understand this and the importance of bringing children into this world under the pure laws of God, governing and controlling all that is evil in our own natures and cultivating all that is lovely and pure, how comparatively easy would be the training of that child. My brothers and sisters, how forcibly it comes to my mind that the right beginning of "child-training" and all pertaining to it lies right with the previous training of father and mother. They must know how to properly govern themselves. Love must be the incentive to every word and action. Love, perfect love, that melts all differences into harmony.

So much could be said on this subject. It is inexhaustible. But thank God we are awakening to the emergency and that fathers and mothers are stepping to the front and are willing to sacrifice their time and talents in bringing about a reformation in the home as well as in spiritual affairs. God speed the day when we shall, as a people, understand and obey all the laws that govern our temporal being as well as our spiritual.

Our young daughters have organized themselves as an auxiliary to the Daughters of Zion. I pray it may be far-reaching in its benefits. Now if our sons could be organized into a similar band and some noble father who thoroughly understands the laws of God and those governing our being could instruct them in all that is necessary to make them equally pure as our daughters, then could we our lift up our heads and rejoice, for surely redemption draweth near.

AN OBSERVER.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Jan. 19.

Dear Sisters:—The Saints of the Pleasant Grove branch and those of others surrounding us are rejoicing in the gospel work still more greatly of late, for this reason: Bro. Hilliard has been with us explaining and teaching the law of God, and being greatly blessed by the power of the Holy Spirit, the words spoken went with convincing power to the minds of the Saints, and members are going to comply with one very essential part of the law; namely, that of tithing. The sisters of the Prayer Union here are rejoicing and giving thanks unto our heavenly Father, who is moving the minds of the Saints in this direction. We know the Lord is greatly blessing Brn. Hilliard and Chatburn in their labors together since the last district conference, and may their labors be crowned with that marked degree of success elsewhere as here, is my earnest prayer.

Sisters, let us remember that of the earthly possessions the Lord has seen fit to place in our hands, one tenth belongs to him, and do not rest until it is paid, after that one tenth of the increase. What a small portion he requires, giving us nine tenths. As in bestowing all other blessings, how generous he is! My soul delights in his great mercy, and in the justice of his law. I know he has blessed me tenfold in complying with this part of the same law both spiritually and temporally. Then let us be encouraged and press on in our labors of love.

We have met regularly in our society—Daughters of Zion. Although few in number, we have been blessed in our efforts and feel that some good is being done. We hold our meetings on a separate day from the Prayer Union. Your sister in gospel bonds, MARGARET J. HEAD.

WESTON, Iowa.

Dear Sister Walker:—I feel impressed to tell the sisters some of the great blessings I have received from my Heavenly Father. Last summer I was thrown from a buggy and hurt my back very badly. I was taken home and put to bed where I lay quite helpless as I could not move myself one inch one way or the other I sent for Bro. H. Peterson who came and administered to me, and by the Spirit I was promised if I would trust in God I should be speedily healed and should have no further trouble therefrom, and two hours after administration I was able to turn over in bed and two days after I was able to do my housework again, for which I truly feel thankful. Five weeks later a little daughter was born to us, after which I was taken dangerously sick. My relatives were sent for, for to all human appearance I was dying. I was cold all over and life was nearly gone. They sent for the elders, Brn. J. J. Christensen and H. Peterson. They came and administered to me and in the name of the Lord said that my life should be spared to raise my children as I had earnestly prayed for, telling me also I had been near the portals of death, but because of my faith and trust in God my life had been spared, and while their hands were yet upon my head I felt life and strength returning to me, and I believe every soul in the house was touched by God's Holy Spirit which was present in much power. I also saw a most beautiful light shining around me. It was so bright I had to close my eyes. I could not look upon it. Dear Saints, I have not words to express my gratitude to my heavenly Father for these great blessings he has seen fit to bestow upon me, but I desire to spend the remainder of my days in his service and do all I can to bring others to a knowledge of the gospel. I know that God is true to his promises and he will not forsake us in our trying hour if we will put our trust in him, and he will hear and answer the prayers of his trusting children. Hoping these few lines will encourage others who may be called to pass through the same trying scenes I have, and praying God to help his suffering children to trust in him, who is indeed the greatest of all physicians,
Your sister,

CHRISTINA RASMUSSEN.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. CLEDA M. SIMPSON writes from Washburn, Maine, expressing thankfulness for the comfort and peace the gospel has brought her although it has brought upon her severe persecution as well. She is keenly alive to the many hardships endured by the families of the ministry. We are greatly afraid that it is a subject which few of us fully appreciate. Sr. E. L. V., writes from Newton, Pennsylvania, that there is only one member of the church, beside herself in that place. She tries to present the claims of the gospel to those who will listen, but marvels that they are so slow to see them when it is so clear and plain to her. She rejoices in the day she embraced the work, and can bear testimony with Job of old, "I know that my Redeemer liveth" She thinks the leaflets "Talks with mothers" should have been published long ago, as they cannot help being useful to mothers in helping them to shield their children from the evils in the world.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things, Or aspirations high, or musings deep Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea, In which we children dip our tiny pails And bring up water, we recur to prayer: For loving, living, longing every hour, We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength, That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, April 5.—The church, its ministers, and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 3: 8, 9; 1 John 5: 1, 2.

Thursday, April 12.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Proverbs 29: 15; Ephesians 6: 1-4.

Thursday, April 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Isaiah 55: 10, 11; Proverbs 28: 3.

Thursday, April 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 107: 1-8; Joel 2: 32.

MALAD, Idaho, March 5.

Editors Herald:—To-day closes my year's labors in the mission assigned me, and looking back over the year I cannot say that I have not made mistakes. Would to God I could! Mistakes, however, are only evidence of my human nature. Somewhere I have read, "If God had to have perfect instruments with which to work, his kingdom would never come." And as Bro. Derry in writing for the Advocate several years ago says in regard to his mistakes, so I believe I can say in regard to mine: "And when the secrets of all hearts are made known, my errors will be seen to be through a want of judgment, and not from a wanton desire to break the commandments of God. I have no fear of individuals appearing at the august bar of God to accuse me of wrongs inflicted upon man or woman." However, I hope that I may in future live nearer to God, that I may deserve his favor more fully than I have in the past.

God has indeed blessed me in my efforts in the past year, and it seems to me that I have never had clearer conceptions of my subjects than in the last fifty sermons preached since I came into this valley. I can already see the effect of my work here and elsewhere, and although that effect has not taken the form of additions to the church, I am satisfied that God will not let the word spoken return to him void, but will cause it to spring up unto eternal life in the hearts of some.

I recently preached eight sermons in the town of Samaria, about ten miles distant. One man who has been looked upon as the champion in the "Mormon" Church there acknowledged to me that they had made mistakes in the past, one of which was to continue to vote in Brigham Young as Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, when he himself frequently said that he was neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet. I can say that for some reason or other the outlook is much more encouraging to me than a few weeks ago.

I have been engaged in a critical examination of the reasons for the hope within us, and as I study the word I become more and more convinced of the righteousness of our cause. One of the reasons for the encouraging outlook is that for thirty-one years we have been trying to prod "Brighamism" out of its hole and have been unsuccessful until recently, but 1894 is ushered in with a blast from the enemy's camp in the shape of a book on "Succession" by their champion, Brigham H. Roberts, and which we can safely conclude is as strong as they can make it. Mr. Roberts is a man of no mean ability. I have listened to him twice upon religious subjects, and once upon politics, and I rate him as the best speaker I have listened to in the West; but my judgment is that Mr. Roberts' effort will do us more good than harm, as many, no doubt, taking their cue from him will endeavor to come out and oppose us, and by so doing will bring us prominently before the people; and that is what we have been wanting for a long time. I have obtained Mr. Roberts' book and have carefully read and reread it, and my faith is not shaken, strange though it may appear.

Mr. Roberts, of course, attacks what he calls our strongest positions, but he fails by the feebleness of the strokes to shake them. He attacks section 84:3 Doctrine and Covenants and endeavors to show that it did not refer to Joseph the Martyr, personally, and accuses us of dishonesty because we say it does, because of the clause in the beginning of the revelation, "Verily thus saith the Lord unto you my servants," using the word "servants" in the plural. Unfortunately perhaps for us we do not know who all the words "my servants" refer to, as the revelation does not state, neither does history inform us; but there is one thing that we are safe in concluding; that is, that Joseph Smith the martyr was one of them, and by throwing "him and his seed" out as the Brighamites do, we are simply exchanging a certainty for an uncertainty. Mr. Roberts also ridicules the idea advanced by "Josephites" that because the Lord commanded the Saints to build a house in Nauvoo and provided that Joseph and his seed should have place in it from generation to generation, for no other reason, he states, than that their father had paid a large amount of stock toward building of it, that therefore the priesthood should remain with them also. He says that the revelation as it stands is easy to be comprehended. He quotes the passage: "And now, I say unto you, as pertaining to my boarding house, which I have commanded you to build, for the boarding of strangers," etc., and then says, "That is the subject of the passage, not the priesthood nor the succession of the Prophet Joseph's son to his father's position as president of the church." But there is one clause of the revelation, that while it is quoted by Mr. Roberts, is overlooked, and it will be necessary for him to make an explanation of it before thinking men will accept his exegesis, and that is this simple question: How is the fact that the Lord commanded the Saints to build a house for Joseph Smith and his posterity and the fact that they are to occupy or inherit the property, going to affect the kindreds of the earth and bring blessings to them? I apprehend that this will be a difficult question to answer; whereas, upon the other hand, if we accept the explanation of the Josephites then when the Lord said to Joseph the Martyr that "his blessing," meaning evidently his prophetic powers and priesthood, should be placed "upon the head of his posterity after him," we can readily understand how blessings would follow to the "kindreds of the earth." I do not accuse Mr. Roberts of dishonesty because of this, but I must confess that after hearing him upon other questions, I expected better things of him and that he would not betray his lack of mental penetration in such a way.

Mr. Roberts quotes with a great deal of assurance what he calls a prophetic statement of Brigham Young made in a speech in Nauvoo just after Joseph Smith's death; viz.: "All that want to draw away a party from the church let them do it if they can, but they will not prosper." He then takes up Sidney Rigdon, William Smith, Lyman Wight, and James J. Strang, examines after a fashion their claims, and shows how they one by one went down, and closes each time with the above prophecy in italics; but when he comes to the consideration of the "Josephites," or "Reorganization," he assumes the role of prophet himself and says: "Now that we draw to the close of our consideration of the claims of this 'Reorganized' church, we cannot point to its destruction as we have done in the case of Sidney Rigdon's church, William Smith's church, and James J. Strang's church; for the Reorganized church still exists. But its doom is written as distinctly as that of the other false churches that we have seen crumble to pieces into shapeless heaps of ruin. It is only a question of time with regard to its failure. MENE, MENE, TEKEL, is written upon its walls—God hath numbered thy kingdom—weighed in the balance—found wanting."

I suppose the God meant here is Mr. Roberts, and that the Reorganization has been weighed in the balance of his logic and intellectual powers; but we have seen that these are unreliable. It reminds me of what I once read from the pen of the great infidel, Thomas Paine, near the close of one of the parts of his "Age of Reason" he says, as near as I can remember: "I have now gone through the Bible much as a woodsman might go through the forest, cutting down a tree here and there. Now let the priests try to put them on their stumps and make them grow again." The trees are still growing, and the Bible is just as strong or stronger for its second growth; and just as the wind blowing upon the stalk of corn loosens the soil around its roots and causes it to produce a more vigorous growth, so we believe that the effort of this modern infidel will benefit rather than retard the work of God.

When I started out I did not intend to write so lengthily upon this question, but only to incidentally mention it; but I could not refrain from noticing some of the weaknesses of this book. My heart was made to rejoice while reading it that even from the champion of Brighamism could come no stronger blows, and I said, "Surely this is the work of God!" I have just read the decision of Judge Phillips in the Temple Lot Suit, and you cannot tell how the news cheered my heart and the hearts of other patient ones who have waited long for justice to be done. Surely that prophecy of Joseph the Martyr is being fulfilled before our very eyes: "While water runs and grass grows, while virtue is lovely and vice hateful, and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was, I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins." The "Saints" in the valleys of the mountains have another dodge now. When asked what they will do if the Temple Lot is placed in our hands, "Oh," they say, "that's all right; God is simply letting you go ahead and build the Temple, and then we will be permitted to drive you out and take possession. You know the Israelites found the promised land overrun with Canaanites." Oh! that the chains might be broken and that we might reach the people with the glad tidings of peace upon earth, good will towards men.

Robert Atkins, in a sermon preached in London some years ago, in speaking of the various churches of Christendom, uses language that is so appropriate to the Utah Church that I cannot refrain from quoting it here: "Apostasy, apostasy, apostasy, is engraven on the very front of every church; and did they know it, and did they feel it, there might be hopes; but, alas! they cry, We are rich, and increased in goods, and have need of nothing." For that reason I anticipate no startling results from our labors in Utah, not for the present at least. I do not believe that we can accomplish anything by a great blare of trumpets, but I do believe that a steady, persistent effort will tell in the end. But we cannot carry everything by storm as we can in the East, as we have an organization to deal with here that is as effectual in protecting the body as a turtle in his shell. If they see you making a great display they simply crawl into their hole and pull the hole in after them and you are helpless. The man who takes this mission must make up his mind that he must work hard with slow returns. Persistency is a good qualification for a minister in this field. With prayers for Zion's weal, Yours,

H. O. SMITH.

SANTAQUIN, Utah, March 5.

Editors Herald:—I am just returning from a tour through Juab, San Pete, and Sevier counties; Bro. N. Oleson, of Provo, has been with me and furnished horse and buggy to travel with. We have preached at Nephi, Manti, Glenwood, Richfield, Elsinore, and Annabell. There are a few Saints at each of these places with the exception of Glenwood and Annabell, but not enough to maintain branch organizations, hence they are left without spiritual food and encouragement save such as can be obtained from church publications and from the visit of an elder once in a great while. There are also a few of the faith at Salina, Salem, and at this and other places similarly situated. Six were added to the church by baptism at Manti, and we left some in other places whom we have reason to hope will obey the truth at no distant day. Our meetings were well attended in some places, but in others only a few would come out.

Now after having labored in this mission for some time I have come to the conclusion that the church need not look for any general turnover from the people here; at least I can see no indications to that effect. But I do yet consider this field of importance, and do not feel discouraged; for I still believe that patient and continued labor will bring about a grand result. A persistent effort should be kept up with a force large enough to care for what has been gained, and still to open up places where the work has not as yet been presented. I am persuaded that the church can profitably employ ten or twelve elders in Utah alone, but they should be men that will rustle and find the work to be done, not waiting for others to have all things prepared before them. What I mean is, An elder coming here must not expect a congregation to be waiting for him anxious to hear him preach. He must first go to work and find a house in which to speak, then do his own advertising as well as to see that there are lamps with oil so that he can light up when time for meeting arrives. Should he fail in one place he must go to another. A place to stop must be of second consideration; he will not often be left on the street without food or shelter, but he must be prepared to put up with circumstances as he finds them. I would not have any think that the Saints in this mission are not doing their duty in caring for the missionary and in other respects aiding the work, for I have found as warm-hearted Saints here as it has been my privilege to meet anywhere, but they, too, are governed by circumstances. We have been hindered some in our work by bad roads and bad weather, and I have not been able to reach as many places as I would like to have done, nor as I had promised. I labored some last summer at Coalville, Wanship, and Kamas, where I found good openings for preaching and where I was well cared for. I promised to return, but have been unable to do so because I found even more to attend to in other places than my time would permit.

I regret to learn that the church treasury is at a low ebb. That may mean a smaller force in the field for the coming year. However, I for one will be glad to accept a mission "as circumstances permit." I do not consider that a minister for Christ is released from duty because there is no financial support to be expected from the Bishop. I have been sorry to observe that some few of my brethren have thought that there was nothing for them to do until they obtained a General Conference appointment and were assured a certain amount for family support. Of course when the church takes away from the family the one whose duty it is to provide for the same it is but just that the church take the responsibility, but it is my opinion that an elder who will do nothing for the cause until he is certain of a stated recompense for his time is unfit to represent the Church of Christ. May the Master's work prosper and spread is my prayer, and to that end I am willing to labor.

Your brother,

H. N. HANSEN.

DAME, Moen, Denmark, Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—About two weeks ago I left Aalborg for this place. This is a country place, and the place where I was born. Last year one of the merchants here built a hall, but it was not finished the last time I was here, so I did not get to hold meetings; but this time I secured the hall and have so far held three meetings. The first evening there were some over one hundred persons present, the next evening there were about one hundred and fifty, and on last evening the weather and roads were quite unfavorable, but still the congregation was the largest, there being between one hundred and fifty and two hundred persons present. Attention and interest were good, and many have expressed themselves as very favorably surprised at what was said. The last evening I gave the people opportunity to aid me in paying for the hall, and one man started around with the hat and collected more than enough for hall rent.

Our doctrine is new to the people here, and quite different from what they are used to hearing, and it will no doubt be subjected to a great deal of discussion. I distributed several hundred tracts; so they will have something to study.

We have distributed thousands of tracts in and around Aalborg, and done much preaching, also some about where Bro. Sorensen was born, and I can but think that our efforts will result in some good in days to come. There is much for the people here to overcome before they can accept the truth, so we must have patience and forbearance.

I expect to go to Copenhagen and Malmo soon. Winter has been very mild here this year, but we have had plenty of rain, mud, and storms, the latter having caused many shipwrecks and much damage to forests and houses.

In gospel bonds,

PETER ANDERSON.

FIFE LAKE, Mich., March 7.

Editors Herald:—Another year has nearly rolled away since last General Conference, and soon it will meet again. What have we accomplished? Anything? Yes, I am satisfied we have accomplished a good deal altogether; but the little one can do seems so little that it is not worth mentioning at all, still the Scriptures tell us, "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." So we must work on and on, and "not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." And we must also rely on the word which says, "I the Lord will hasten it in its time."—Isa. 60: 22.

The work in this part is progressing slowly. This whole northern country is waiting to hear the gospel, with only myself here to tell the story; and I feel to say, O Lord send more laborers into thy vineyard; for "the harvest is great, but the laborers are few." What a wide difference between God's way and man's way; as much difference and as wide as west is from the east! God says by his inspired apostle, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." Man says we will send to college and educate for that purpose, and so get a good deal of man's doctrine. O, when will sleeping humanity awake to the truth of God's word, and see that a man whom God sends will preach the gospel in all its beauty and grandeur and never say to his congregation "This is done away," "or that," but tell them it is all necessary for the salvation of souls.

In this town of Fife Lake where I could not get a congregation to hear the word a short time ago, they turn out well and some are much interested and nearly ready for baptism. I expect to stay here a short time yet and then go to Wexford, where I have the use of the Methodist church. I spoke eight times in it and had from seventy-five to one hundred to listen, and they were anxious to have me return before long; so when God wills I shall be there. I met with Bro. Asa Cochran's sister and family up there, and they seemed quite interested, and invited me over to see them. The son, Wilbur, spoke of the visit he had at the Herald Office last fall, and I guess by the way he talks he enjoyed his visit very much. Well, Saints and collaborators, let us fight on, and keep our lamps trimmed and burning. We are the light of the world, and we must let it shine and all labor together. One can lift a very small load, but let a hundred men and women take hold of a large load and it can be moved very easily; so let us all take hold and do our part and spread forth the glad tidings of great joy which is to go to "all people."

In bonds,

F. C. SMITH.

VINITA, I. T., Mar. 7.

Editors Herald:—The work is progressing here nicely; we have calls for preaching in every direction. I baptized one near here on the 1st, a citizen, the head of a large family; and two on Grand River, one the head of the family; and others are believing there. There are quite a number believing, and several await baptism at various other places. Most all the Saints are aroused to the idea of warning their neighbors. Bro. and Sr. Kelley intend furnishing a good-sized house free for all religious services, located just across the road from Bethany church, the one we were shut out of last summer. Mr. Evans, who kindly offered his largest room and seated his beautiful grove for us last August, was prominent in helping to build and keep up that church, part of whose family belong to it, and he says he intends that we "shall have the use of it." "They cannot keep you out;" "they said it was to be free to all who teach the Bible, and you do that." He is usually out to hear us. Sr. Watson said, "Tell all my acquaintances that I am one of those despised ones now." Her husband, not yet a member, said: "Tell them also that that is about where I am."

On Sunday just as we were preparing to fill appointments near Echo our darling boy met with a serious accident. In a moment several in the house were in tears; he looked like he was dying, but we did as Jesus said we should (Mark 16: 18), and history repeated itself. (Mark 16: 20.) It is beyond my power to describe our little one's deathly appearance or his speedy recovery; but like history was again repeated (Luke 13: 13); the weeping ones were made to rejoice and to glorify the God that is. (Heb. 11: 6.) This is the second time the Lord has fulfilled his part of Mark 16: 18, 20 in the presence of those young members and others, thus helping to fulfill John 7: 16, 17. We rejoice many times while God has been with us, although we have various disadvantages that many would never think of, too numerous and peculiar to occupy your valuable space in description.

We had a hint from Bro. I. N. not to apply for a mission across the sea, because of any friend's writing. So I might say that I believe I was the only Saint present when the young brother, J. W. Gilbert, made his first effort. He was at our first protracted effort when some jumped on the desks, stamped, and swore they would break up our meetings or kill us, and at another time when they threw stones at him while we were speaking; all because of a spite they had against him and others. I do not know that I would dread being over where he is, but I feel as though some one must preach to the "heathen at our doors." Yours for the work,

A. C. HART.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, March 14.

Editors Herald:—I went to Cainesville, Missouri, early in January, as was intended at last communication, but found the opportunities for preaching then altogether unpropitious. No suitable place for holding services could be obtained, although Brn. Wight and Blakeslee did all they could to have the efforts a success. The pretended anxiety of some to hear the gospel was shown to be unreal. While some had talked favorably of an effort, they acted to the contrary. The G. A. R. hall was procured, four appointments filled, but so poorly attended that we concluded the effort. Saints there were zealous, however, and attentive to duty, both at services and at their flourishing but as yet small Sunday school. Bro. D. W. Wight's efforts, as branch president and Sunday school superintendent are promptly seconded by the noble little band of Saints resident at Cainesville and vicinity. Opposition was strong there at the time referred to.

Bro. B. B. Bennet, who resides at Mount Moriah, some eight miles south of Cainesville, having procured the use of the M. E. church of that place, Bro. Wight and I went there on Sunday, January 14, and began a series of meetings of a week's duration with a full house, Bro. Wight having the meetings in charge up to the evening of this date. A liberal sentiment prevails at Mount Moriah; large audiences attended the services, and the Lord graciously stood by and blessed me while presenting the claims of the unchangeable gospel of his Son, and those of its restoration in these last days. Bro. Bennet has distributed our church literature quite profusely to his neighbors, and they listened attentively and earnestly to the word as delivered to them. Audiences were large to the last, and there were many invitations to return. I believe an effectual opening has been effected there and that some will yet receive the gospel. Bro. Bennet and family did all necessary to make my stay pleasant, as did others there, whose kindness is not forgotten. Bro. H. R. Harder's labors in the community are pleasantly remembered. Shall be glad to visit Mount Moriah again as opportunity offers.

A flying visit to York county, Nebraska, January 26-29, at solicitation of President Joseph Smith, who had been requested to go and preach the funeral of Sr. Morrill, former widow of Bro. Isaac Sheen, but who was by force of circumstances unable to attend the call at the time, I responded. Funeral the 28th, at the Christian church at Charleston; house filled to overflowing; splendid attention. Whether I was mistaken for the prophet, I did not learn. But one thing happened that caused me to think seriously. A sister present, after hearing the sermon, did not mistake me for a Latter Day Saint elder, till I so informed her! I reflected whether I was in the faith, or, whether it might have been because I was out of the boundaries of my mission! Will Bro. James Caffall answer?

Being detained over night at St. Joseph by non-connection of trains, I went to our chapel in the evening, endeavoring to be late so as to hear a sermon, but like the unfortunate Irishman when attempting to "catch the tartar," tardiness did not work: "I was caught," so severely that the brethren "heard" instead of me. But no wonder! Brn. Luff, Hilliard, and "Tom" Chatburn headed the "opposition." I was alone; "resistance was useless."

Returning from Nebraska through Council Bluffs, I stopped over two days, and by request preached twice at the Overton Mission, rented by the Saints for a month. Bro. T. W. Williams was occupying, with a good hearing, and with satisfaction to the brethren.

I reached Eagle Grove, Wright county, in the Des Moines district, February 2. Found the Saints feeling well in the work and Bro. D. M. Rudd faithfully holding the fort, battling against clouds of darkness growing out of, not only the usual prejudice against the word because not understood by those without, but caused largely by the wrongdoing of some visitant to that as well as other parts of the district, as is now well understood by not only the General Conference appointees, but the faithful ministry in and of the district, and Saints as well. We hope the load will not have to be carried by the church much longer. It militates against the efforts of the elders strongly at times, in divers places. I have labored since to the present at Eagle Grove, Des Moines, and Runnells and vicinity, with the hearty cooperation of all so far as I am able to judge. Have felt well and enjoyed good liberty while endeavoring to do duty for the Master. Bro. O. B. Thomas is an indefatigable gospel worker, occupying mostly new ground, and ably defends the work. Bro. F. A. Smith is an acceptable, faithful worker, and his labors are successful; quite so, at least.

The late district conference held at Grinnell was quite well attended and showed some growth in numbers here; hardly any friction was discernible in the transaction of business. Peace, unity, and good will prevailed; I am sure it would have done the heart of any Saint good to have seen the spirit of the two brethren candidates for the presidency of the district, as each stood and heartily preferred the other, a scene I have rarely witnessed at any time. God bless those brethren—Nirk and Shimel. They are both deserving of esteem and confidence. Bro. C. E. Hand is doing a good work. He paid his tithing, and is giving most of his time to the work, at his own expense, mostly. I had the blessed privilege of baptizing one at Grinnell, a pure son of Erin, lately from the Roman Catholics, but is learning the sweets of gospel liberty, and seemed very earnest. His conversion is the result of others' labors. I trust Bro.

Patrick Riley may run successfully the holy race and gain the beautiful crown, in the "sweet bye and bye."

Grinnell is a nice town, of some three thousand inhabitants, the Congregational college located there giving it airs of rather aristocratic bearing. It is nicely laid out. Holding the conference there did good. Just at its closing the news came thrilling along of Judge Phillips' decision in the Temple Lot suit, and our work, as it proceeds, is looked at more significantly by the people than before. Our relative position as a body is more distinctly made and seen than before. The clouds are rolling by, thank God. Justice, white-winged, with messages of peace and good will for Zion gives a fixed bow of promise to us. Let Zion arise and shine.

Yours hopefully,

C. SCOTT.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, March 7.

Editors Herald:—I rejoice in this great work. I can see the benefit derived from a service to God and his cause, and that it is our duty to live by every word of instruction that he may give. One word is found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 86, a Word of Wisdom. A brother asked me this evening if I thought it a sin to eat the flesh of swine. My answer was, that I thought it a sin, at certain times of the year, as it states. It is not pleasing to God for man to use meats only in time of winter, cold, or famine. That is the statement as near as I can remember. But what I wish to write is this: There are some who think that it is not our duty to keep this Word of Wisdom. It is not given by commandment, but we are to live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God, and this is given as a Word of Wisdom: so it states. Shall we think that we know more than God? He has said certain things were not good for us. Have we the right to say they are? or as some say, It may hurt you to eat meat in summer, but I do not think it hurts me. So they go on as they always have, as did Father Adam; it was told him not to eat of the fruit of a certain tree, but he did. There is a promise given those who will keep this Word of Wisdom. Shall we still go on without that which will give health? Are any of you sick? Why? Have you lived by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God? Christ sent forth the apostles, saying, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," etc. Do we believe this? We find a promise here that if we do what is pleasing in the sight of God we shall be saved. Do you not think it is worth trying for to be saved? Then why not think it is worth trying for to have good health and to please God? We find Paul saying that we should keep our bodies pure for they are temples of the Spirit of God; and the good book says the Spirit of God cannot dwell in unholy temples. Shall we keep the Spirit out for the sake of our idols, such as tobacco? It is one of the most filthy things that can be found. Why, a hog won't eat it, but will turn from it in disgust.

I would ask of you, one and all, to try this Word of Wisdom, and if after you have kept it for a few months and find it don't help you, then you can have the right to say it is not needful. I write these few lines hoping they may do some good; as I have received aid from others through the letters they wrote. It is my prayer that we may all live as we should with the Spirit to help us. I ask the prayers of all who may read this, that I may be true to the cause of Christ.

Your brother,

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Mar. 5.

Editors Herald:—I am here without a friend, but I console myself by preparing my Sabbath school lessons, reading in the Herald and Bible. This banishes all loneliness from my mind. I will relate a dream I had some time ago: I dreamed I was fighting with some man, and I had fought so long that I became thoroughly tired out, and was about to give up, when a voice from above whispered, "Pray for strength." I did so, and immediately I regained my strength, and won the battle. I have pondered over this a great deal, and would like some one to interpret it. My sole comfort here is found in reading the Bible but I feel my weakness in the understanding of it. Pray for me that I may be enlightened.

I am here for my health, but if it is not in harmony with God's will to permit me to again reach home and friends, I pray you, dear Saints, to pray earnestly for my mother and brother who have not yet given their souls to Christ; for when I am called from this world I want the assurance of meeting again without the loss of one. I desire your prayers that I may be benefited both spiritually and physically. Your sister,

THERESIA SCHAFFER.

AMADORE, Mich., March 3.

Editors Herald:—I have returned to our new field of labor to continue meetings according to previous arrangements. It is really laughable to hear the people tell what the ministers have been doing since I went away. No sooner had I taken my departure than these two Saint eaters started out to tell the people what a dangerous doctrine I had preached. They came with all the nasty, dirty tales told about Brigham Young while at Salt Lake, and tried to tell the people that the Reorganized Church was the same thing. They said we got a dollar a day and a hundred dollars an organization for all the work done. They continued their discourse by using such nasty language that the women took offense and went home, leaving the two pious frauds to dispose of their dirt as best they could to a small congregation of men and boys. Poor fellows! They have labored hard only to disgrace themselves.

The people seem anxious to hear more of the gospel, so I expect to continue the following week if roads and weather permit. Some have expressed their desire to be baptized; the prospects are that a large ingathering will be had in the near future. The work seems to be onward in all parts of our district. I have never seen the time during my experience when there existed the desire to hear the word preached as now. Calls come from every quarter, "Come and preach for us, or send some one." The general appointees are doing good work throughout our district, while the demands of the work would say, "Double them for the coming year if possible;" but we shall feel satisfied with the portion assigned us by those whose business it is to appoint and send them forth.

I notice that some of the elders of this church hold out the idea through their correspondence to the Herald that the probability is that all factions of Latter Day Saints will unite in the future. Why is this done? or what is meant by such sayings? Brethren, I wish you would explain yourselves more fully when mentioning such things, as we have those things to fight here in Michigan. Our opponents tell the people that the Reorganized Church and the church at Salt Lake are about to unite, and then take our church paper to prove their statements, and say our elders say so. If my conception of this work is true, I understand that it is impossible for such a thing to take place; for the simple reason that the Reorganized Church stands on the merits of truth and will not amalgamate or compromise with any ite or ism; but that her door stands open to all people who will surrender to the truth and come in through the door, which is baptism for the remission of sins; and when Utah Saints want to be acknowledged by this the Reorganized Church they must come in through the door the same as any other foreigners and strangers. When we remember the shame and disgrace that Brigham Young brought on the truth by his false and corrupt teachings, we ought to be careful how we connect ourselves in any way with them. It may be said that those people are not to blame for what Brigham has done; but they are to blame for remaining under the cover of such a doctrine, when they have the privilege of knowing the truth. I have not written this to criticise, but to express my views on that matter. If I am wrong, I am willing to be corrected.

In gospel bonds,

R. E. GRANT.

CUTLER, Maine, March, 10.

Editors Herald:—The inquiry having been made of late whether I am still within the bounds of time and space, has stirred me up to the performance of possible duty in reporting whereabouts and doings. It is cheering to read of battles fought and won for the truth; of numbers being added, of great interests and oppositions being awakened; and of the zeal of my brethren who are valiantly defending the faith and opening doors for the gospel; but in comparison my own winter's campaign has seemed uneventful and without much visible fruit, therefore hardly worth writing up. I prefer to be at the front and in the thickest of the fight; that is making new openings and stirring things up generally, but owing to surrounding conditions, lack of railroads and winter facilities for moving about, also the seeming needs of the work, I have of late moved mostly in the beaten tracks and among old waste places, where faith can hardly discern a revival or restoration. Deaths, removals, and apostasy have depleted numbers of the branches in this Eastern Maine district, and there is no immigration as in the West, and a sparse population to recruit from. But I have been at work, trying to "strengthen the things that remain" and add new material when and where possible.

While I rejoice over new accessions everywhere being made to the church, I am often burdened over the neglect or lack of pastors and teachers to nourish and watch over those who are converted to the a, b, c, of salvation by the traveling ministry. It seems to me at times that many (not all) of the standing officers do not feel the responsibility that is upon them to feed the flock of God; to see that the law is kept, that order prevails and that no iniquity exists, in the same proportion that the traveling ministry feel the responsibility of their work on the outposts. They do not magnify their offices sufficiently. Paul says of the lowest in the priesthood: "They that have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."—1 Tim. 3:13.

If the priests of branches were to continually (not spasmodically) visit the house of each member "exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties, themselves praying without ceasing, and understanding the nature of prayer, what a lift it would give the church! To my mind, Alma's instruction, Book of Mormon, pages 297, 298, is the best we have in the books on prayer.

I rejoice more and more in the perfection of God's law. Truly the righteousness of God is revealed continuously therein. The horizon of truth is ever expanding. The power of the gospel to develop character, strengthening weakness, or subduing strength, as is needed, I appreciate, and feel thankful to have ever so small a part in God's crowning work of latter days. I am anxious to do my whole duty, and arouse every Saint to the same necessity. Who that reads the Herald, and is in touch with the work, cannot feel that there is indeed a coming up higher on the part of many at least, and that there is a growing disposition to live by every word of God. I rejoice in this more than in large numbers added, for if our lamps are well trimmed the light of our gospel cannot be hid, and will shine forth with more potential results ere long. I believe the same Spirit that has said "Come up higher" has inspired the Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion movements; and I regard them as "helps" equal in importance to the Sunday school organization.

Last Sunday Bro. J. N. Ames, of Jonesport, and myself, opened up the work here in the Baptist church. Bro. J. W. Burns, of Machias, was instrumental in securing it for us. "May his shadow never grow less." Bro. Ezra Ackley has also been at our right hand. Have held eight meetings in the last six days. The audiences have indeed been surprising, considering the very bad roads; I have not seen in my short experience a better disposed people. Have heard of none but favorable comments and appreciative of having the Bible explained so it can be understood. I do not know what to make of it that there has been no opposition aroused. I account for it to some extent on the ground that the old hardshells have died off. The generation left are comparatively free from bias, or any well defined theological views. Truly I feel for them in their innocence, and that they are as sheep without a shepherd.

The work at Indian River is prosperous. Bro. U. W. Greene baptized three there before Christmas. The Bible class which meets Friday evening with Sr. Ada Kelley as teacher is interesting outsiders. Perhaps more of such classes for the the study of God's word on week day evenings, when and where there is freedom and lack of church formality, would interest and help many. I have baptized four during the year. May our Father bless his work everywhere.

Your brother,

M. F. GOWELL.

OSCAR, I. T., March 4.

Edalors Herald:—Those who have been gathered into the fold in this section of country the past year are not many in number but are of the very best material. Among them are several intelligent young men, who are willing and competent to take part in the front ranks in defense of truth. We have a flourishing Sunday school here at present, of over fifty scholars, mostly Saints and their children. May the Lord bless the labors of his servants.

Yours for truth,

WORK FOR THE DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

HOW ANYONE having this latter-day work at heart can oppose the Daughters of Zion in the work aimed to be done by them is a mystery to the writer. If I understand the nature of their work it is to aid each other in the training of children, and for mutual improvement. Is there need of such a work being done? is one of the first questions that should be asked; and has any effort been made by any other means to do this work? The raising and training of children is one of the most responsible works we have to do in this life. In bringing a child into the world a life is brought into existence that will never die; something that shall live eternally is born into the world. Then how carefully should it be guarded that right principles may be taught in its youth, that as it grows to manhood or womanhood it may fill the place and do the work designed by the Creator, our heavenly Father.

The writer is in favor of the movement, and in full sympathy with the organization. In my experience as a traveling elder I have seen the need of some one taking this work in hand.

My heart has been pained many times, and that too in the homes of the Saints, or those professing to be such, by the language used by mothers to their children. I have heard mothers when speaking to their children say, "You little devils, if you do that again I'll break your heads!" or, "You little brute, I'll slap your mouth if you say that again." Now when hearing such language from mothers I have thought, If the child was a little devil, how about the parentage of the child? It is a law of nature that like begets like. Then what is the mother if the child is a devil or a brute?

But it may be urged that the mother did not mean as she said. Then why did she say it? "She was vexed, and impatient," it may be said. Then is there not work for the "Daughters of Zion" to give counsel and instruction to such a one as this? It may be urged that this is an isolated case. Well, as long as there is one such there is work to be done. Most children are inquisitive and like to ask questions. They should never be told, "Now, shut your mouth;" but if they ask questions that it would not be prudent to answer they should be told kindly and given a reason why; they will be satisfied then. O, the art of training children, who has it?

While writing this my mind goes back to my childhood days, and it is with gladness of heart that I think of my mother. The last time I saw her I was thirty-nine years of age. I spent much of that time with and near her, and as I recall all those years I cannot now think of a harsh or cross word that she ever gave me; neither did I ever hear her call a child of hers by any other name than the one given in love as a life name. The sacred name of "mother," how many are worthy of it! Parents, to love your children, and to provoke them not to wrath, are some of the commandments. I feel to say to the organization, Continue in the good work until you have accomplished the work aimed at and until there shall be no little devils in any of the households of Zion.

A TRAVELING ELDER.

A WORD OF DEFENSE.—No. 2.

BY J. R. LAMBERT.

IN Herald for February 28 appears Bro. Blair's "No. 2." It occupies about eleven and one half columns, and is mostly devoted to an expression of individual opinion on the meaning of the revelation of 1861; but, fortunately, that revelation reads just as it did before he wrote his article. First, however, we are furnished with a quotation from my article which was published in Herald for August 26, concerning an evident opinion that prevailed with the Twelve and Seventy last spring; their right to express that opinion, demand for such expression, etc., etc. Commenting on this quotation, Elder Blair says:—

As to "the right" of the Twelve and the Seventy "to express their opinion in quorum capacity" on the merits and propriety of the said editorials and the use of church history made therein, any other quorum or council in the church has an equal right with them. Would it not have been fair, and charitable, to have waited in this matter until all the other quorums and councils could have carefully considered the matters in question and joined in rendering a decision? Why should the Twelve and Seventy lead in this matter against the editors and the Board of Publication? Where in the law, or the ruling precedents of the church, do they find authority for their action in the premises? Have not the rules of the church limited editorial control to the Board of Publication? Why should these quorums take "snap judgment" on the editors' supposed errors and hold them up officially and publicly in open condemnation? Why not first labor in a gospel way with the offending editors? Why adopt a method of dealing with the editors utterly unknown to the law of God and the history of the church? Why not wait until these quorums were certain they had divine authority to call the editors to an account for their editorial conduct, and then be sure that they had just cause for exposing assumed errors to public question and public obloquy? Had the editors (who are the First Presidents of the church) no rights which these two quorums should respect? Should not these editors have been questioned and intelligently investigated before being openly condemned? Is it just to condemn a man without first hearing him? In conclusion on this point it may be truthfully said that there is no law of the church, no rule of the church, neither is there any precedent in the history of the church, justifying such a course of procedure.

Who has denied that "any other quorum or council in the church" possessed the same right to express its views and report them to the conference? Not I. Why does the brother not say that they had the right, or they did not have it? If the editors of the Herald had the right to express themselves concerning the authority and application to be made of church history, did the quorums of Twelve and Seventy have the right to express themselves on the same subject and report their action thereon to the body? The law makes the decisions of either one of these quorums equal to the decision of the First Presidency. (D. C. 104:11.) The law says, in this same paragraph, speaking of the Twelve:—

And they form a quorum equal in authority and power to the three presidents previously mentioned.

Of the Seventy it says:—

And they form a quorum equal in authority to that of the twelve especial witnesses, or apostles, just named.

In view of these plain facts of law, it is clear that these quorums have the right to take up, at their own option, consider, and decide upon any matter which affects the work at large. They believed that the time had come to act; that it would be unsafe and, if you please, uncharitable to the body, to wait any longer. And in all this they were evidently right as is proved by a cloud of witnesses.

The Board of Publication is but a creature of the church. No part of the body is greater than the body itself. More than this, if the Twelve and Seventy cannot express themselves in opposition to what the Board may say or do, or in advance of any expression from the Board, then how can they fulfill the duties of their calling as defined in Doctrine and Covenants 104: 12, 13? In the accomplishment of this work, I understand they are to act individually and in quorum capacity, being governed always by the law. The Twelve and Seventy made no effort to oust the editors of the Herald, or have anyone else placed in their stead, hence did not interfere with the legitimate work of the Board. Talk about laboring with these "offending editors," in a gospel way! It is a fact that one of these editors was using church history, that published by the Brighamites as well as that published in the days of the Seer, in a manner which we deemed wrong and dangerous. He had taken the liberty to write, repeatedly, not only in opposition to decisions of the Quorum of the Twelve, but in opposition to the action of the general body, using history as his leading evidence and support. Articles of this kind have been making their appearance in the Herald, just before the sittings of the General Conferences, for years. Why did he not labor with the Quorum of Twelve "in a gospel way," before writing these articles? Why did he not labor with the whole church, "in a gospel way," before publicly opposing her action?

Our "divine authority" for the action had is found in the law. We had waited and waited, until we were plainly given to understand that the time had come to move, and hence we moved forward, as we believe.

Had the editors . . . no rights which these two quorums should respect?

Yes, sir. They had the same rights that we had. They had been exercising these rights, at will, and I am not aware that anybody either desired or attempted to proscribe them. They were not on trial, at all, no charges having been preferred against them. They had the same privileges as the other quorums, the same privileges as other members of the Conference. Neither the Twelve, the Seventy, nor the church, made any effort to condemn anybody, but we were simply examining and seeking light upon an important question of church polity; and "there is no law of the church, no rule of the church, neither is there any [proper] precedent in the history of the church," condemning "such a course of procedure."

Let it be remembered that Elder Blair when treating upon the duties of the leading quorums of the church, and their proper relation to the law of temporalities, neither mentioned nor quoted the revelation of 1861; but he relied mainly upon history, and especially upon that part of the history published by the Brighamites. He now gives his reasons for not quoting the revelation, which are as follows:—

For I had learned by rumor, and by Bro. Lambert's article in the Herald for February 13, 1892, pages 103-4, that the Twelve held strange views as to their rights and duties in respect to the temporal affairs of the church.

Strange reason this. "The Twelve held strange views," erroneous ones, of course, so an attempt is made to set them right on this question by using the history referred to above and letting the plain statements of the revelation alone! And yet the brother denies having used the history for anything more than a collateral witness.

Referring to my statement of the practice of the Twelve and Bishopric, "acting under the supposed authority of the revelation of 1861," Elder Blair says:—

Replying to the above I have to say, that the council of the First Presidency was never officially notified of the system mentioned by Bro. Lambert, neither was counsel and direction in favor of it ever sought of that council that I ever knew of.

Do the First Presidency have to be officially notified of every matter before they can take any cognizance of it? Has this been their rule in the past? Is it not true that both members of the First Presidency have been present in our quorum meetings, more than once, when this very practice was going on? Why should the Twelve "seek counsel and direction in favor of it," when they supposed they had a perfect right to so act under the revelation of 1861, and when the Bishopric conceded this right without a word of opposition, even requesting us to go right along and pass upon each case coming before us, when they could not be present, submitting our work to them for final decision?

There has been no conflict between the Twelve, as a quorum, and the Bishopric, since 1878, that I know of, the statements of the brother to the contrary notwithstanding. This statement applies to the three Bishops, viz., Rogers, Blakeslee, and Kelley, with their respective counsels. The brother claims that from 1875 till now there has been,

A large amount of hurtful friction and hindrance going on over matters pertaining to "temporal means" of the church, notably in and since 1876. (See Herald, vol. 23, pages 596-7-8 and 710-11; vol. 25, pages 142-3; vol. 35, pages 318-19, etc.) As one harmful result of this, the presiding Bishop, I. L. Rogers, and his counselors—David Dancer and H. A. Stebbins—peremptorily resigned in the spring conference of 1882.

We have some strange work here, surely; such work as a good case never demands. Looking up the brother's first reference, I find the "Views of the Bishop," published in October, 1876. In this article the Twelve were so greatly misrepresented that in the succeeding Spring Conference they required the Bishopric to make public confession of the injustice done them, which they did, and in connection with the "Epistle of the Twelve and the Bishopric," it was published to the church. (See Herald for May 1, 1878, p. 142.) In this confession the Bishopric acknowledged that they had "unwittingly misrepresented" our intentions; they asked our forgiveness, and confessed that the publishing of the article was wrong. Now Elder Blair refers to this very article more than once, in order to make out his case against the Twelve! Is this the way to bring about unity and peace in the Church of God? Ah me! I sicken at the sight. May the good Lord help us.

The next reference is to a short article from the pen of Z. H. Gurley, published in December, 1876, in which he shows that the publication of "Views of the Bishopric" was premature, and that they were in a large degree fighting an imaginary foe. But why refer to this, as the whole matter was amicably settled in April, 1878, and so far as I know, has remained settled ever since? If there has been this "hurtful friction" all along the line, as the brother affirms, it is because somebody has been opposing the settled policy of the Twelve and Bishopric, which was reached by the "Basis of Adjustment" presented by the First Presidency. What the brother calls the "strange views of the Twelve" have been right on this basis from that day till this.

Referring to the Herald for May 1, 1882, page 130, we have the resignation of Bro. I. L. Rogers. However, it is far from being "peremptory," as the brother puts it. In his printed resignation he offers no complaint against the Twelve nor against the church. The reasons assigned by him for his resignation are: First, "The Bishop's office should be near the printing press." Second, he was in his sixty-fourth year, and was not willing to break up and begin anew. These reasons were prefaced by a statement of the growth and prosperity of the work, with the increasing demand for an energetic and active man to fill the place; and at the close of all this he says:—

I therefore [that is, for these reasons] offer this my resignation as Bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ.

The resignation was offered on Friday and was not accepted till the next Monday, which would hardly have been the case had it been "peremptory."

In the resignation of Brethren Steb-

bins and Dancer, pages 30, 31, the word "peremptory" is not found, though it seems to be a little more decided in its character. No complaint is made against the Twelve nor the church; but the chief reasons for their resignation appear to have been, first, a failure on the part of the Bishop to step forth and fill his position as they thought he should; and, second, a hope that by this means it would be God's opportunity to designate such men as he saw could best serve the interests of the work. I hope the reader will carefully look up all of Bro. Blair's references, for they are frequently altogether out of harmony with his statements and assertions.

The last reference given by the brother in favor of this "hurtful friction" which he claims existed, is vol. 35, pages 318, 319; that is, in the Herald for May 19, 1888. It is simply a reaffirmation of the "Basis of Adjustment" and "Principles and Rules of Action" agreed upon by the Twelve and Bishopric in 1878. A new Bishopric had come into office, and four new members into the Quorum of the Twelve; it was therefore thought to be proper and right that we reexamine the rules by which we had been governed. We got along without a jar, nor was this effort, in any sense, the result of previous division. The introduction to the whole matter reads as follows:—

To the Church of Christ, Greeting:—

The Quorum of the Twelve and Bishopric, feeling that a perfect understanding should obtain between us in order to properly discharge the responsibility placed jointly upon us by the revelation of October 7, 1861, which reads as follows:—[I omit the revelation.]

We met at the residence of C. A. Bishop, Independence, Missouri, April 10, 1888, to agree upon Rules of Action. There having been important changes in each quorum since an understanding was had, it was deemed best to reconsider the joint epistle of April, 1878, signed by William H. Kelley, Thomas W. Smith, James Caffall, John H. Lake, Alexander H. Smith, Zenas H. Gurley, and Joseph R. Lambert of the Quorum of the Twelve, and Israel L. Rogers, Henry A. Stebbins, and David Dancer, the Bishopric of the church. It was therefore carefully considered, and after a few unimportant changes unanimously reaffirmed, and is now placed before the church as containing the "Basis of Adjustment and Principles and Rules of Action" upon which these quorums agree to execute the important duties resting upon them. It is as follows.

How much evidence is there in all this of division, strife, and "hurtful friction" between the Twelve and Bishopric? Will not such an effort tend to scatter the seeds of suspicion and distrust, and thus create and confirm false impressions where there are no proper grounds for them?

Elder Blair was a member of the Quorum of Twelve for fifteen years, and it was at a time when the Reorganization was just beginning to do her work. System, order, and plain requirements of the law, were not revealed all at once. Does it follow, as a matter of course, that because the Twelve from 1858 to 1873 did not claim what the Twelve now claims, that our present claims are necessarily false? Here is another effort to make precedent (history) the standard instead of the law of God. Upon the same grounds we might say that as Bishops Blakeslee and Kelley have taught and done that which Bishop Rogers did not teach and do, therefore they have gone contrary to the law of God! Let such a course be adopted and we thereby block the wheels of progress at once; but it is the legitimate result of taking history for more than it is worth.

I have been a member of the Quorum of Twelve for twenty years. At the time I came into the quorum there was, so far as my observation extended, much more division of sentiment, among the Saints, concerning the law of tithing than there is now. In some regions this division was not manifest, it is true, but the reason was because the question was but little agitated or investigated. I have had missionary charge in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Indiana, Minnesota, and a large number of the Southern States; and while I believe it will be conceded that I have never been guilty of making extravagant claims for the Saints, I have witnessed with pleasure a slow, but steady and general growth among the Saints, in spirituality, morality, knowledge of the law of God, and a willingness to comply with its requirements. More than this, Elder Blair has testified, publicly, to thousands, at reunions, conferences, and branch meetings, that the Saints were progressing finely, and "the work never was so prosperous as now."

How are we to know how much money was expended by the ministry from 1858 till 1873, when but a small portion of the money used by them was ever reported or made a matter of record? The truth is, there was a manifest lack of system in the work of the church, and all other things being equal, the minister possessing the most suavity and "blarney" got the most money. Now I am not finding fault with the men of those times. All honor to them for the good work done. But when these odious comparisons are made, I may be permitted to defend. One of the grandest spiritual manifestations that I ever witnessed in a prayer meeting, was given through Sr. S. V. Bailey, of Lamoni, some five or six years ago. The whole congregation seemed to melt under the influences of the divine Spirit, while she sung:—

It is even now as daybreak,
And the night not fully gone,
When the sky is tinged with crimson,
Ere the coming of the morn.
* * * * *

Yes, the clouds are fast dispersing,
And the darkness well nigh spent;
Then, go forth, ye faithful workers,
Saying unto all repent.

Last April the same Spirit spoke to us through Bro. Henry Kemp, saying:—

A brighter day has dawned.

Elder Blair, when speaking of how the Twelve strictly attended to their own work and nothing more, when he was a member of that quorum, says:—

The then Twelve knew that the apostles after Christ said, "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables" (Acts 6: 2), and they also knew that Joseph the Prophet said, at the time of the endowment in Kirtland, when he set the quorums in order,—"The Twelve also are not to serve tables, but to bear the keys of the kingdom to all nations, and unlock them, and call upon the Seventies to follow after them and assist them."—Mill. Star, 15: 727.

Thanks, brother, for the knowledge possessed by the "then Twelve." And taking it for granted that the now Twelve have not known of this scripture and history, you ought not to be too hard on them.

The following claim is also made:—

The history of the Reorganized Church shows that the ministrations of its Twelve from 1858 to 1873 is the same in a general way as the ministrations of the Twelve under Joseph the Prophet as seen in the history of the church from 1835 to 1844. We claim to be the succession of the church founded and builded by Joseph the Seer and his helpers, and it is therefore needful that there should be consistency, identity, and uniformity in the teaching and practices of the faithful ministers under the presidency of the "choice seer" and his lawful successor.

This being true, we are compelled to believe that the ministrations of the Twelve, "in a general way," from 1835 till 1844, were all right; or that the ministrations of the Twelve from 1858 till 1873, were not all right. Which is it? Is the brother willing to accept the ministrations of the Twelve from 1835 till 1844? This of course would include their epistles, official decisions, and general manner of building up the work.

Elder Blair certainly pursues a strange course. After quoting the revelation of 1861, he proceeds to tell us what it does and does not teach. When he states what it does not teach, he says, by implication, that that is just what the present Twelve claim that it does teach; while at the same time, a number of the things stated are not what the Twelve teach, or have ever taught since 1873. This peculiar policy runs through much of the article, thus rendering it unreliable. We have not been working in the dark. Our views have been published to the whole church, and on this question, republished. Why not attack these rules by which we have been and are now governed? We stand on these rules as a proper interpretation of the revelation, although, taken as a whole, they conflict with the interpretation placed upon the commandment by Elder Blair. The "Basis of Adjustment" submitted by the First Presidency, in 1878, and adopted by the Twelve and Bishopric, is not a statement of what the Twelve would be permitted to do until the High Council was organized, but was "designed mainly as an explanation of the scope and meaning of the commandment referred to." It will hardly do to have one interpretation for the law when there is no High Council, and a different one when there is. It is true that the meaning and proper application of church history is quite different when there is a complete organization from what it is when there is not; but this principle is not true when applied to the meaning of the revelations of God.

Speaking of what the Twelve did when he was a member of that quorum, Elder Blair says:—

It is true that the Twelve, acting jointly with the Bishop, at times instructed the financial agents in regard to financial matters such as teaching tithing, reporting to the Bishop, and ministering to the wants of needy traveling ministers and the poor, but at no time up to 1873 did they seek to dictate, decide, nor attempt as a quorum to control, or to use, or appoint the use of the temporal means placed in the hands of the Bishop, but acted as his agents in disbursing temporal means. What has taken place between the Twelve and Bishopric since, I know only from church records, personal observation, and common report.

Have the present Twelve as a quorum, done any more than that? If so, where is the record to show it? Again; If the brother has had no certain knowledge of anything that has taken place between the Twelve and Bishopric, since 1873, which fastens guilt upon the former, why does he say so many ugly things about them, by implication?

But there is another thing which the Twelve did when Elder Blair was with them which indicates that they claimed just as much jurisdiction over the temporalities of the church as we do. Indeed it is a requirement which the present Twelve have never made: When seven members of the quorum were present, Bro. Blair being one of the number, at the house of President Joseph Smith, in Nauvoo, Illinois, in April, 1867, the following resolutions were passed:—

Resolved, That it is the duty of the quorum of Twelve to inquire into the financial condition of the Office of Publication, and request a statement of such condition from the one having charge of the same, from time to time.

By resolution the president, or editor, was requested to give a statement of the condition of the Herald Office.

Resolved, That a full report of the financial condition of the office of the Herald be submitted to the president of the Quorum of the Twelve at an early day.

At the time these resolutions were passed the church had a Bishop and a First Presidency, and was holding her Annual and Semiannual Conferences; and I am not sure but what there was a High Council likewise. From Elder Blair's present point of view, where was the demand for such interference upon the part of the Twelve?

In a quorum council of the Twelve, held April 12, 1866, the following was adopted:—

Resolved, That A. H. Smith be ordained a High Priest.

In May, 1865, the Quorum of Twelve, the First Presidency being also present with them, adopted the following:—

Resolved, That any member of the Quorum of the Twelve is authorized, by the law, to ordain men into the Quorums of the Seventies, when the necessity of the work demands it.

In harmony with this last resolution Elder Blair expressed his opinion on the same question at the conference of April, 1873, presenting, no doubt, what then seemed to be his settled conviction with reference to rights and prerogatives of the Twelve. It reads as follows:—

Elder W. W. Blair stated, as his opinion, that the Quorum of Twelve were the proper ones to attend to filling the Quorum of Seventy.—Herald for May 1, 1873, p. 295.

From the foregoing resolutions we learn: First, that the "then Twelve" were just as much disposed to "serve tables" as the Twelve now are; though I do not claim that the members of the quorum either then or now had any disposition to "leave the word of God, and serve tables." There is quite a difference between "leaving the word of God, and serving tables," and acting in harmony with, and by the authority of the word of God, and thus seeing that the tables are properly served.

Second. If the official acts of the quorum then are to be regarded as "ruling precedents" now, then it is the privilege of the Twelve now to fill up the quorums of the Seventies as they may see fit. Here is another evidence that however much information we may derive from church history, it will not do to use it as authority in matters pertaining to the government of the church.

Elder Blair says:—

It will not do to take one portion of church law touching a given matter and so construe it as to make it conflict with other portions of the law pertaining to the same matter, etc.

This is true, I believe. Neither will it do to place doubtful inferences in opposition to the plain and definite statements of the law, a thing which is sometimes done. Again: Is it not true that we often interpret older revelations in the light of later ones? Is not this one leading purpose of present revelation? To illustrate: In Doctrine and Covenants 104: 5, we are informed that high priests are to "officiate in their own standing, under the direction of the presidency;" while in section 120: 8, it is stated that,—

The High Priests and Elders holding the same priesthood are standing ministers of the church having the watchcare of the membership and nurturing and sustaining them, under the direction and instruction of the Presidency and the Twelve.

Now suppose we say, as some have said, that the high priests are solely under the "instruction" and "direction" of the First Presidency; then what becomes of this later statement, given by the same Lord? But interpreting the former in the light of the latter, all is plain, and the statements are made to harmonize.

If there had been a sufficiency written on the law pertaining to temporalities, the revelation of 1861 would not have been given when it was. It is the last, and one of the plainest revelations of God's will to his servants concerning the execution of the law of tithing; and I am not aware that this last revelation on this subject, as interpreted by the Twelve and Bishopric in 1878, through the assistance of the First Presidency, is in conflict with any former revelation touching the same subject.

Elder Blair closes his second reply with a quotation from the agreement reached in April, 1878, introducing it with these words:—

In concluding upon this point, I herewith present, as is fitting, the "Principles and Rules of Action" agreed upon by the Twelve and Bishopric in April, 1878, and published in the Herald for May 1. This was at a time—mark it well—when "the high council of the church" was not in an organized and operative condition, and therefore a strict compliance with the letter of the law in Doctrine and Covenants 42:10, etc., was seemingly somewhat impracticable.

These statements are misleading to those who are not acquainted with all the facts in the case. The first sentence would lead one to suppose that the "Principles and Rules of Action" quoted, constitutes the entire agreement reached at that time; while the truth is that the "Basis of Adjustment," which Elder Blair does not quote, except article 5, constitutes the more important part of that agreement, inasmuch as it is largely a definition of the scope and meaning of the revelation of 1861. However, I presented this "Basis" a short time ago in an article on the "Revelation of 1861." (See Herald for February 21, 1894.) We are referred to the Herald for May 1, 1878, and yet instead of giving us the names of the Twelve and Bishopric who were then in office, and who signed the document at that time, he appends to his quotation the names of the Twelve and Bishopric who were in office in April, 1888, and who signed the same agreement at Independence, Missouri. Why Bro. Blair does this, I do not pretend to say, but simply call attention to facts as they exist.

A FEW THOUGHTS.

WHEN one says "worthy poor," is he capable of judging them? Whether he can say any man, woman, or child, belongs to this class, or the other?

It is well known that at social gatherings it is quite common to circulate the latest news, but the Saints should be certain that such news is reliable.

Gossips and tattlers sometimes inflict a serious injury on the subjects of their gossip. Although the tongue is an unruly member, good sense and sound judgment can regulate it.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.

Convention met at Clear Lake, Indiana, October 20, 1893, at 2:30 p.m.; chairman of district in the chair. Remarks by Bro. A. J. Smith on the object of Sunday school work. Coldwater and Clear Lake schools reported. Discussion on the helps, led by W. J. Smith. He advised the use of helps, followed by Sr. Mate Corless in favor of helps not superseding the Bible, but a help to understand the Bible. The suitability of object lessons as given therein she cited the continued lessons of parables. D. B. Teeters opposed the Quarterlies, or had been opposed on the ground of superseding the Bible. He thought the Quarterlies were superior to any he ever had seen. He had been brought up a Bible student and from this point was opposed, or was prejudiced against them. Sr. Ella Housman has contended for the use of Quarterlies in school, but majority rules. She has had to stand back. As we have them from our own church she thought we ought to have them in our school. S. W. L. Scott favored the Quarterlies. In them we obtain the leading thoughts and methods of the church in this work. Every word that reflects light we should favor.

Elder Duran favored the Quarterlies. He asked where would have been the development of the priesthood now if they had rejected the helps that came to them. Discussion closed. Bro. There he remained with his family till after the rejection of the church, when he went to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, following the theories of Sidney Rigdon, where he remained till 1857, when he became associated with C. B. Thomson at Preparation, Iowa. Afterwards he united with the Reorganized Church, in the faith of which church he died, being rebaptized in 1886. He was very steadfast in his love for the latter-day work, and a year ago, at the erection of the Lone Rock chapel, he was one of the main movers and workers in its accomplishment. In his dealings with his fellow men he was honest, keeping his obligations and agreements to the letter, which is worthy of all praise in any man. By his request his funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, in the chapel which he so faithfully labored to build.

He contracted la grippe while in his field of labor in West Virginia; after preaching one evening he took cold in walking to his stopping place, where he lay since the 26th of December. He was kindly cared for by Bro. and Sr. J. B.

Russell, who took care of him until his son-in-law went after him and took him home with him. He was home but one week when he passed away. His desire was to recover and return to his field of labor, but when he knew his time had come, he gave up and said he was in the hands of the Almighty, and rested easy and passed away without pain. Ellison near same place, and from time of their marriage have kept abreast of immigration, having spent nearly their entire life on the frontier, having lived as early pioneers in six different states. Came to Pottawattamie county, Iowa, in June, 1850. Moved to Six Mile Grove, Harrison county, Iowa, December, 1851, buying the claim, and later when land came into market, entering the home where they have since lived. They both belonged to the old church. Went with it to Far West, Missouri. Were there when the Saints were driven out. Some of their neighbors were killed and thrown in the old well near Haun's Mill. Went from there to Illinois, and after Joseph and Hyrum were assassinated started West, but like many others never crossed the Missouri River. Sister Ellison was baptized into the Reorganization by Bro. C. Derry about ten years ago, and proved a faithful and consistent member until death, always ready to give a reason for her hope of eternal life which she has now gone to receive. Loved by all who knew her. Ready to aid the needy, to comfort the broken hearted and to give shelter to the homeless although the day was stormy and cold, the number that came to pay the last sad rite showed how she was loved in her neighborhood. Funeral services by Elder Joseph Seddon, assisted by Bro. J. A. Donaldson.

Mother, thou hast gone to rest,
In the paradise of God,
May we each, while sore distressed,
Seek the path that thou hast trod.

NELSON.—At Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, February 21, 1894, Mr. C. W. Nelson. A little less than one month before, the mother was taken from this family very suddenly, which double loss almost overwhelms the remaining brothers and sisters with grief. Mr. Nelson was born June 12, 1847; was once married, but his wife and three children passed on to the land of spirits before him. He was an honest, upright, peaceable man. The funeral was largely attended; sermon by Elder Charles E. Willey, from John 14:1-3.

FIELD.—At Erwin, Shelby county, Iowa, January 7, 1894, Fay Newton, son of Bro. F. and Sr. Almira Field, aged 10 years and 18 days. He was blessed while the family lived at Deloit, Iowa, some nine years ago. On the account of other members of the family being ill, the preaching of the funeral discourse was indefinitely postponed.

THATCHER.—Minerva Alice, infant daughter of Bro. Watson B. and Sr. Sarah A. Thatcher, died at Effingham, Kansas, March 3, 1894, aged 2 months and 2 days. Blessed February 25, by Elder David Williams.

One more little Rose-bud has gone
To rest with the Savior above.
It is only waiting
To meet its parents with love.

It is twenty years since Dr. Mackay of Canada, missionary of the Presbyterian Church, began to work in North Formosa. The result is that in that part of the island there are at this day 2,605 baptized Christians, fifty native preachers, two ordained pastors, and many others workers.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

PARIS, March 10.—Recent events in France and the foreign policy of the republic have drawn the attention of the public to President Carnot. His term of office expires in November, and it is probable that the election for the next President will take place in October. The present indications are that M. Casimir-Perier will be elected if he can hold on to the Premiership until October.

MCCOOK, Neb., March 10.—One of the most severe sandstorms ever experienced in Nebraska swept over the central and western part of the State to-day. Considerable damage was done to outbuildings and fences. The city hall at Imperial was badly damaged.

HUGO, Colo., March 10.—There was a furious windstorm here this afternoon. The United States land office and Foster's opera house were blown from their foundations and many small buildings were overturned. At Holyoke the unfinished Catholic church was blown from its foundations and considerable damage was done to other buildings.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 10.—Surveyor Low of the Dominion Government Geological Survey, who left here last June with an exploring party for the interior of Labrador, in a report to the government says the vast interior between the north of Lake St. John and Ungava Bay is thickly wooded with spruce trees, mixed here and there with poplar. There are thousands of square miles of spruce, sufficient to last for many years, the majority of the trees being large enough to make timber eighteen inches square. Here and there over the country are indications of vast deposits of the richest iron ore.

BATHURST, March 10.—The British warships under the command of Admiral Bedford yesterday shelled the bush in the vicinity of Gonjur, and when the enemy was supposed to have been driven out two hundred bluejackets and marines were landed and marched upon the town, which was found to be deserted. Gonjur was then set fire to and burned to the ground. Chief Fodisilah is supposed to be at Sarnvang, upon which place the soldiers of the West India regiment are marching. The war against Chief Fodisilah is practically ended.

LONDON, March 12.—Parliament resumed its sitting to-day, entering upon a period that is full of the greatest importance to the empire and marking what may prove to be the beginning of a complete reorganization of parties. Lord Rosebery, the new Premier, was loudly cheered and a warm welcome was also extended to the other distinguished Liberal leaders. Lord Rosebery said:—

"It was thought that in the high office to which I have been called there should be a declaration of policy. That is not necessary, as we stand where we did. There will be no change of measures, . . . the same measures remain as they are—the programme of the Liberal party—and it is not intended to recede from any one of them. The honor of England and the peace of Europe are safe in the hands of the present government. The Welsh Church question will be pressed to a definite and successful conclusion.

"In regard to the Irish question, we are bound to it by ties of honor and affection. . . . The policy of home rule will not be less definitely pursued. If there is any doubt on the subject, one pledge which the government has given in this connection is the continuance in his present office of the Rt. Hon. John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland. Mr. Morley has been offered a higher office, but he thought it his duty not to sever his career from the cause of Ireland.

"Our late illustrious leader, in his last speech delivered in the House of Commons, made a declaration with which the present government has entirely identified itself. The conviction has long been forcing itself upon us that with the democratic suffrage which we now enjoy a second chamber, constituted like the House of Lords, is an anomaly. This conviction has been strengthened by the unhappy chapter of accidents which has turned the House of Lords from a body of hereditary lawgivers, more or less equally divided, into one great Tory organization entirely at the beck and call of a single party leader. When the Tories were in office the power of veto was not exercised, but when the Liberals are in power the veto is exercised at the dictates of the Tory leader. That is a danger to the Constitution to which the Liberal Government is not blind, and it will not lose sight of any measure which is constitutionally presented to the country."

NEW YORK, March 10.—The Maasdam, which sailed to-day for Rotterdam, carried eleven members of the Mormon Church, who arrived here yesterday from Salt Lake City. The Mormon Church is sending 1,000 missionaries to Europe in search of converts. Five parties, about sixty persons in all, have passed through New York on their way to Europe. Another party of twelve leave Salt Lake City to-day, and at intervals of ten days a like number will start.

MADRID, March 10.—A dynamite cartridge was exploded to-day at Funte-Rebollo, province of Segovial, Old Castile, killing the Alcalde, or local Judge, and also killing the sacristan of the local church. The explosion is believed to be the work of Anarchists.

YOKOHAMA, March 10.—Advices received here from Corea say that a plot has been discovered to kill Prince Li Tchok, the heir to the throne, as well as all the Ministers. A thousand arrests, it is added, have been made in connection with the conspiracy.

CALCUTTA, March 11.—The anxiety felt regarding the safety of the British column under command of Capt. Maxwell, which is operating in Assam against the Abor tribesmen, has been dispelled by the receipt of news of the safety of the expedition. Advices received here to-day from the expedition show that everything had gone well with the troops up to the 8th inst. The column had attacked and destroyed the Abor stronghold. The Abors made a strong defense before they retreated and a number of them were killed.

DUBUQUE, Ia., March 12.—Navigation on the Mississippi was opened to-day by the arrival of a steamer from the mouth. This is several weeks in advance of other seasons.

CINCINNATI, O., March 12.—A rumor prevails here in Knights of Labor circles and has been semi-officially corroborated that in Quebec, Montreal, and parts of Ontario 10,000 Knights of Labor will secede from the order because of dissatisfaction with Grand Master Sovereign and start an independent branch of the Knights of Labor.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 13.—G. D. Coburn, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, issued a statement to-day showing that Kansas counties paid in 1893 for wolf scalps $17,600, and during the last four years had paid in these bounties $60,000. It is significant that the counties have paid more each year covered by the report. This raises the interesting question, Are some farmers in the western part of the State raising wolves in place of sheep?

MONTREAL, Que., March 11.—At the conclusion of a lecture last evening before the Club Papineau ex-Premier Mercier delivered an extempore address in which he declared that if the French-Canadians failed to obtain the liberty that was their right, to teach their own schools and pray to God as they wished, after exhausting every constitutional means, they would be anything, even revolutionists, rather than submit to tyranny. He is also reported as saying that he would himself become a revolutionist, and broadly hinted that a resort to civil war might be necessary to obtain what he considered the lawful rights of the French-Canadian people.

□ RIO JANEIRO, March 14.—The naval revolution is at an end, the rebel officers having surrendered, and thousands of Rio citizens, standing on the hill tops surrounding the bay, Tuesday afternoon, cheered long and loud as the insurgent flag was hauled down. Refusing Admiral da Gama's conditional terms of surrender, President Peixoto at noon yesterday ordered Forts Santa Cruz, Lage, Sao Joas, and the Nictheroy batteries to open fire upon Fort Villegaignon. This they did, and kept up the cannonade vigorously until 1 o'clock. Then at 3 o'clock the city forts took up the work, and all the other forts joining in again this was continued for another hour and then closed.

Soon afterward a government launch carried orders to Admiral Goncalves, commander of the loyal squadron, that the Nictheroy, the America, the Itapura, and five torpedo boats, which had been waiting down the bay, should come farther up. This was done, and soon thereafter, at five minutes to 6 o'clock, the rebel's white flag on Fort Villegaignon was hauled down. This was quickly followed by that on Cobras Island and then by those on all the rebel ships in the harbor. A government launch had landed officers of Peixoto's Government at Fort Villegaignon five minutes afterward, and the victory was complete without either the rebel ships or forts having fired a single shot.

The insurgents offered to surrender Monday, but the government refused to promise that amnesty would be granted. Some sixty rebel privates gave themselves up. All the insurgent officers with the exception of the surgeon have fled. By order of President Peixoto 500 rebel prisoners have been liberated from the jails. The rejoicing among the people that the war has proved a fizzle is general. Salutes were fired at constant intervals this morning. The streets are crowded and everyone is keeping a holiday.

Yellow fever is increasing to an enormous extent in the city.

□ WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—Ambassador Bayard will ask an explanation from the British Government of the landing of marines at Bluefields. A cablegram from the United States Consul announces that the sailors have returned on board the Cleopatra, and the inference is that their landing will be credited to the purpose of preserving order and not to any intention of extending a British protectorate over the Mosquito coast. Nevertheless, it is desirable to have the subject brought officially to the attention of the British Government, so that some explanation will go on record from it. The request will be made with the usual diplomatic courtesy, and there will be no suggestion that the United States thinks a protectorate was contemplated. Probably Ambassador Bayard, in calling the attention of the English Foreign Office to the circumstances, will define the attitude of the United States.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 14.—At a meeting of the Central Board of Education the nuns who were elected teachers of the thirty-fourth ward school were ordered dismissed. The matter was brought up by Col. McCandless, ex-sheriff of Allegheny county. He presented a resolution that the wearing of a religious habit is distinctly sectarian and a violation of the Constitution of Pennsylvania. In view of this he moved that warrants for the salaries of the nuns be withheld. The Sisters of Charity who have been employed as teachers in the thirty-fourth ward public school gave up the fight to-night and retired. They will not go back to the school to-morrow morning, but will take their old places in the parochial school connected with St. James' Church.

LONDON, March 13.—In the House of Commons to-day Mr. Henry Labouchere proposed as an amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech the abolition of the House of Lords. After some discussion and considerable excitement the amendment was put to a vote and was passed, 147 to 145, in spite of the opposition of the government. When the figures were announced they caused an outburst of prolonged cheering, which was renewed when the Deputy Speaker read the address in reply to the Queen's speech with Mr. Labouchere's amendment attached to it.

The division on the amendment occurred earlier than was expected, and many of the canvassers were at dinner.

LONDON, March 14.—When the House of Commons met to-day Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that the government had decided to move the rejection of the amended address in reply to the Queen's speech when it is put from the chair and to substitute another short address in reply.

Henry Labouchere said the amendment to abolish the veto power of the House of Lords, which was passed yesterday, was not intended as a vote of want of confidence in the government, but it was intended to quicken action in the execution of what the majority of its supporters in the country demanded. Labouchere added that the Radicals were satisfied the majority of yesterday was the best they were likely to get and, therefore, they would not oppose a substitute for the address.

The House then rejected the amended address to the Queen's speech, and passed the address substituted by Sir William Vernon Harcourt.

DENVER, Colo., March 15.—Governor Waite got himself into trouble to-day and nearly precipitated a riot that would have caused much loss of life. He marched two hundred militia with Gatlings and twelve pounders to the City Hall and demanded the surrender of two members of the Police Board who refused to be removed. The police and large crowd present were well armed, and his order was not obeyed. Three times he threatened to open fire. The critical situation was finally changed by the arrival of United States regulars, who are now in possession of the municipal building.

The Canadian Parliament was opened by Lord Aberdeen March 15.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, March 15.—A reservoir broke at Indian Creek. The country between Bysuka and Caldwell is all under water. Railroad bridges were washed out and many miles of track submerged. Messengers on horseback warned the people, who fled to higher ground. The town of Nampa is under water from five to twenty feet. The damage is estimated at $100,000.

United States Admiral Benham has been ordered from Rio Janeiro to Bluefield, Nicaragua, to look after United States interests.

The Hawaiian Provisional Government will control proceedings for the erection of a republic. Martial law may be declared to prevent an uprising pending the assembling of a constitutional convention.

The situation of affairs at Denver, Colorado, was still critical on the 16th inst. Governor Waite and his advisers are said to have agreed to submit the questions involved to the decision of the State Supreme Court. The trouble is an outgrowth of political maneuvers in State politics.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, March 15.—President Cleveland has cabled his congratulations to President Peixoto upon the termination of the insurrection. There will be a big demonstration soon in honor of the United States in general and those Americans in particular who have manifested a friendly spirit towards the Brazilian Government. Admiral Benham's fleet, or at least the greater part of it, probably will sail from here Saturday. All on board the American ships are reported well.

LONDON, March 16.—The Daily News says: "At Wednesday's council a section of the Ministers asked Rosebery to resign, declaring it was impossible to continue the government with the chances of a repetition of the Labouchere incident. After a great deal of persuasion they were induced to remain on the understanding that the government would either resign or dissolve if it should suffer another such defeat."

WHAT SOME GREAT MEN HAVE SAID OF THE BIBLE.

THE grand old book of God still stands, and this old earth, the more its leaves are turned over and pondered, the more it will sustain and illustrate the Sacred Word.—Prof. Dana.

In my investigation of natural science, I have always found that whenever I can meet with anything in the Bible, on any subject, it always affords me a fine platform on which to stand.—Lieut. Maury.

There is a book worth all other books which were ever printed.—Patrick Henry.

The Bible is the best book in the world.—John Adams.

So great is my veneration for the Bible, that the earlier my children begin to read it the more confident will be my hopes that they will prove useful citizens to their country and respectable members of society.—John Quincy Adams.

It is impossible to govern the world without God. He must be worse than an infidel that lacks faith, and more than wicked that has not gratitude enough to acknowledge his obligation.—Gen. George Washington.

Pointing to the family Bible on the stand, during his last illness, Andrew Jackson said to his friend: "That book, sir, is the rock on which our Republic rests."

I deem the present occasion sufficiently important and solemn to justify me in expressing to my fellow-citizens a profound reverence for the Christian religion, and a thorough conviction that sound morals, religious liberty, and a just sense of religious responsibility, are essentially connected with all true and lasting happiness.—Gen. Harrison's Inaugural Address.

As to Jesus of Nazareth, my opinion of whom you particularly desire, I think the system of morals, and his religion, as he left them to us, is the best the world ever saw, or is likely to see.—Benjamin Franklin.

Do you think that your pen, or the pen of any other man, can unchristianize the mass of our citizens? Or have you hopes of corrupting a few of them to assist you in so bad a cause?—Samuel Adams' Letter to Thomas Paine.

When that illustrious man, Chief-Justice Jay, was dying, he was asked if he had any farewell address to leave his children. He replied, "They have the Bible."

I always have had, and always shall have, a profound regard for Christianity, the religion of my fathers, and for its rites, its usages, and observances.—Henry Clay.

A few days before his death, "the foremost man of all his times"—Daniel Webster—drew up and signed this declaration of his religious faith: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. Philosophical argument, especially that drawn from the vastness of the universe, in comparison with the significance of this globe, has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith that is in me, but my heart has always assured and reassured me that the Gospel of Jesus Christ must be a divine reality. The Sermon on the Mount cannot be a merely human production. This belief enters into the very depth of my conscience."

It is a belief in the Bible which has served me as a guide of my moral and literary life.—Goethe.

I account the Scriptures of God to be the most sublime philosophy.—Sir Isaac Newton.

To give a man a full knowledge of true morality, I should need to send him to no other book than the New Testament.—John Locke.

I know the Bible is inspired, because it finds me at greater depths of my being than any other book.—Cole-ridge.

I must confess, the majesty of the Scriptures strikes me with astonishment.—Rousseau.

There is not a boy nor a girl, all Christendom through, but their lot is made better by this great book.—Theodore Parker.

There is not space to quote from Agassiz, Hugh Miller, Prof. Airey, Sir William Thompson, Faraday, Siliman, et al., who not only loved, read, and revered the Bible, but, great scientists as they were, spoke brave, true, and glowing words in praise of the Books of Books.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

LITERARY NOTE.

THE EASTER NUMBER OF "THE LITERARY DIGEST."

The whole world has been traversed to find material for the Easter Number of The Literary Digest. Almost every civilized language will be represented. It will be superbly illustrated, full of information; treating all questions of present interest, and all sides of those questions; presenting the leading articles in the foremost Magazines and Journals of the world. This number of The Literary Digest will probably excel any other attempt to give the literature of the work in one issue. The Easter Number will be ready on Thursday, March 22.

The Chicago Inter Ocean, that great Republican newspaper has not suffered by the recent era of financial depression but has gone right along adding to its foundation stones—a large and substantial circulation—with a stride that under the circumstances is truly wonderful. At one time additions to the subscription list were coming in at the rate of 800 to 1,100 per day for the daily issue, and as high as 1,500 per day for the weekly Inter Ocean.

The result of this is to place it easily at the head of the list of great Chicago newspapers. It is certainly a good, clean, family newspaper of the highest order.

TOOLS OF THE PYRAMID-BUILDERS.

A two years' study at Gizeh has convinced Mr. Flinders Petrie that the Egyptian stone-workers of four thousand years ago had a surprising acquaintance with what have been considered modern tools. Among the many tools used by the pyramid-builders were both solid and tubular drills and straight and circular saws. The drills, like those of today, were set with jewels (probably corundum, as the diamond was very scarce), and even lathe-tools had such cutting edges. So remarkable was the quality of the tubular drills and the skill of the workmen, that the cutting-marks in hard granite give no indication of wear of the tool, while a cut of a tenth of an inch was made in the hardest rock at each revolution, and a hole through both the hardest and softest material was bored perfectly smooth and uniform throughout.—American Analyst, New York.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and re-cross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

CONTROVERSY.

THERE has been running in the HERALD for some time a controversy between two or three of the brethren on Church History. So far as the HERALD is concerned under present editorial control this controversy will cease with Elder Lambert's, "A Word of Defense, No. 3."

We regret the form that this controversy has taken; and, while conceding the possible right of either and all the parties to it, believe that much that has been written has been of little avail, except to give possible color to the supposition of some that there was a striving for the mastery.

In an editorial in HERALD for June 10, 1893, "Books of Reference," we publicly and openly stated the object, intent, purpose, and design of the editors of the HERALD in using and quoting from the standard books of reference of the church, and also other books. That statement is as follows:—

BOOKS OF AUTHORITY.

In quoting from the histories of God's dealings with man, and man's dealings with man, as the same are set forth in the Bible, the editors of the HERALD have done so for what the things quoted "were worth," and what they purported to be; neither more nor less. And the same is true with regard to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. These, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, have ever been considered as the standard works of the church, the books of final reference in regard to what was written, and the end of dispute in questions of controversy—the "Scripture, the word of the Lord, the will of the Lord." Nor has there been on the part of the editors of the HERALD, any desire, or intention to set aside the law of the Lord, the provisions of the gospel of Christ, the things of the kingdom of God as the same have been written by the command and will of God, to give place for the opinions of men, nor the interpretations, rulings, or decisions of men, whether those men have been ancient or modern philosophers, heroes, or holy men, as men regard holiness.

AS BOOKS OF REFERENCE.

They have, however, used the histories of the past, secular and religious, ancient and modern, written by both friends and foes to the Christian idea as the Reorganization holds that idea in theory, principle, faith, and practice; as books of reference, auxiliaries by aid of which to comprehend the Christ idea, religion, faith, doctrine, and church government and practice more thoroughly. To find out how men connected with the same work as that in which they are engaged held and practiced; and gave what was discovered for what it was worth, and not to set aside law.

The editor in this statement did not attack the action of the last April session, nor the position of any speaker, or writer on the subject of church history, and it seemed to us at the time, and since, that the statement was not out of harmony, in sentiment, in regard to our duty as editor, respect to the action of conference, and the rule of amity and co-responsibility which ought to prevail between men engaged in a common cause; and that it should have been received in good faith and secured for us immunity from animadversion. And, until we should have violated the comity of church action by disregarding the opinion expressed by the conference, our positive statement should have been respected.

We have no wish now, so near to the coming session of conference to express an opinion, or make an argument upon the merit or demerit of the resolution on church history passed at last session; as to do so, would be in our opinion not proper, either as to time or place. But we may call attention to the fact that while the resolution declares that some portions of history, found in the histories, as given in certain publications, is of doubtful character and not to be relied upon; there is nothing stated by which one is to determine which portions of such histories are reliable, and which unreliable; neither is there anything stated as to who is qualified and authorized to determine and decide as to which portions are faulty, and which correct. So that, the wise and the unlearned, if there be any of either class in the church, are alike left without any criterion, or rule of selection; hence, the only apparently safe way for any man, officer or layman, to avoid nagging and rasping criticism, is to keep silent on the histories referred to, and teach his pen to run in other directions.

We had supposed that when the church by its duly accredited agents placed a man in the editorial chair, it was done because he possessed some of the qualities which fitted him for that position, among which would be a decent fairness toward others, his compeers in the work of the church, and a degree of honesty of intention, purpose, and word, sufficient to enable him to speak and write the truth, as he saw it at least.

The statement made by us regarding the purpose for which quotations from history and books of reference, and citations to them were made has been ignored, in a sense, and discredit thrown upon it; and an effort made to avoid the effect that the opinion of the editor of the HERALD might have with the Saints upon the matter in dispute, in the following terms:—

Moreover, the expressed judgment of about fifty men, representing two of the leading quorums in the church, is entitled to some consideration from the church as opposed to the opinion of the editor of the Herald. We do not blame the Herald for saying that it did not intend to use the history for such and such purposes, as it has the right to affirm the integrity of its own motive, and define the purpose had in view; but notwithstanding the declared purpose, and purity of motive, the brethren referred to above took the matter as it manifestly appears upon its face. We have been taught (and we have believed it) that God's word and law are superior to any priesthood authority.

If, as conceded, the HERALD had the right to state its own intention and define its purpose, there was no necessity to cite the opinion of one, or fifty, though the fifty may have been of the leading quorums of the church, as opposed to the opinion of the editor. If there was any assumption of priesthood authority here, it was not on the editor's part.

There was no necessity for the implication in the closing sentence, that there had been, or was an effort to make priesthood authority superior to God's word and law. Priesthood is delegated right to act in divine things and can never rise superior to the power conferring the right to act, or the law within the limits of which the right to act is conferred. He who should claim right to disregard, or set aside the word and law of God, by virtue of priesthood authority given of God, assumes in human weakness to withstand his Creator and can only end in confusion and abasement. This the editor of HERALD has always known, and always conceded, and indeed, when occasion demanded, contended for; and hence feels that to be charged otherwise, in effect, by implication, is not to be borne without remonstrance.

We have taken no part in the controversy upon church history, neither in the HERALD, nor out of it. To do so would have been to us neither timely nor profitable. In our judgment much of what has been said and written, has been from mutual misconception and consequent misassumption as to what others have said and written; hence the premises having been mistaken, the arguments and conclusions could not be wholly correct, or do justice to the disputants. It is claimed by all that the law of God and his word are to be supreme, and that neither can be set aside, nor overrode by fact, or precedent in history of the acts and opinions of men, and we think this conclusion is a safe resting place for all. Contention about what men have written and said in statement and controversy, while it may sharpen the faculties of disputants, and in a sense throw light on questions in dispute, too often darkens counsel with words not chosen in wisdom; and makes and perpetuates strife where peace should prevail. We think it time to stop and give each other the merit of good intention, honesty of purpose, and a desire for the general good, rather than to hold and charge designs upon the liberties of the people, or any portion thereof.

"THE GOAL OF THE ROMAN CHURCH."

THE following under the above caption is sent us by a brother with the statement that if we choose to print we may. It is certainly a terse arrangement from Catholic writers; and may mean all that some fear regarding the aim of this old and aggressive church; that the clergy of the Catholic Church has always taken ground against the American public school system is well known; but the ulterior reason for it perhaps has not been so frankly stated by them.

There is in many places sore friction between the American Protective Association, anti-Catholic and Catholic citizens, and it is quite probable that from this friction collision may occur on some public occasions and at elections. Whether this will result in widespread conflict between Catholics and Protestants remains to be seen.

If the Catholics had the power they would, no doubt, also enforce the platform printed below. It is very plain, and leaves nobody in the dark as to its real meaning. It is made up of quotations from Catholic authors, and consequently must be accepted by Catholics. It is not a collection of opinions expressed by unreliable men or papers. The sentiments expressed are those of men of high standing within the Roman Church, and the Catholic Church as such is responsible for them, especially as they have not been disavowed. Here is the platform:—

1. To give the Bible to the lay people is to throw pearls before swine.—Cardinal Hosius.
2. There is no other help against the evil than to kill the heretics.—Bellarmin.
3. Let the public school system go to where it comes from: to the devil.—Freeman's Journal.
4. We hate Protestantism, we despise it from all our heart and soul.—Catholic Visitor.
5. It is evidently wrong to distribute the Holy Scriptures in the language of the country.—Archbishop Ximenes.
6. We are no defenders of religious liberty; we repeat it, we are not.—Shepherd of the Valley.
7. Religious liberty is only tolerated till the opposite can be enforced.—Bishop O'Connor.

8. God's tribunal and the pope's tribunal are the same: all other powers are subject to it.—Muscovius.

9. There will some day before long be a state church in this country (the United States), and that will be the Roman Catholic Church.—Father Hecker.

10. We will conquer this land and build our institutions on the grave of Protestantism.—The Same.

11. No religion can be without inquisition, which surely is destined to propagate the true faith.—Boston Pilot.

12. I would sooner give the sacrament to a dog than give it to a Catholic who sends his children to the public schools.—Father Walker.

13. We hold that the public instruction belongs to the church, not to the state; therefore we do not admit that the state has a right to provide for our instruction.—New York Tablet.

14. We declare, hold, and maintain that it is necessary to salvation that all Christians be subject to the pope.—Cardinal Manning.

15. Cursed be those cunning and nefarious societies which call themselves "Bible Societies," and which give the Bible to the inexperienced youth.—Pius IX.

16. The people has the right to depose any ruler, when it is done in the interests of the church.—Brownson's Review.

17. All those who, from the church of Rome and the followers of Peter, take one of the swords, leaving them only the spiritual one, are to be branded as heretics.—Baronius.

18. When the Catholics once, which surely will happen some time, obtain the majority of votes, then there will be no religious liberty.—Archbishop of St. Louis.

19. Heretics, schismatics, and rebels against the said lords, the pope and his followers, I will to the utmost persecute and fight.—Roman bishops' oath.

20. I do renounce and disown any allegiance as due to any Protestant king, prince, or state, or obedience to any of their inferior magistrates and officers.—Jesuit oath.

21. We do assert and renew the former decrees which by apostolic authority earlier has been published against the publication, distribution, reading, and possession of the Holy Bible in the language of the country.—Gregory VI.

22. He (the pope) alone has the right to assume empire. All nations must kiss his feet. His name is the only one to be uttered in the churches. It is the only name in the world. He has the right to depose emperors. No council can call itself general without the consent of the pope. No one can invalidate his sentence; he can abrogate those of all others. He cannot be judged by any. All persons whatsoever are forbidden to condemn him who is called to the apostolic chair. The Church of Rome is never wrong and will never fall into error. Every Roman pontiff, when ordained, becomes holy.—Bull of Gregory VII.

GLADSTONE'S REPLY.

LONDON, March 21.—Mr. Gladstone recently received an address from his constituents in Midlothian, in which he was requested to continue to represent that parliamentary borough in the House of Commons. Replying to this address Mr. Gladstone has written a letter declaring that his chief desire will be to follow the wishes of the constituents he represents. He adds:—

"There will naturally be a change in my attendance at Parliament. I cannot yet judge how far my sight and hearing will disable me from performing parliamentary duties. Whatever the merits or demerits of my career, and certainly I have been chargeable with many errors of judgment, I hope it at least has been governed by uprightness of intention and a desire to learn."

Proceeding to review his public life of sixty years, lasting from Lord Derby's reform act, which he describes as the political birth of Scotland and the beginning of a duty which has been solemnly recognized, Mr. Gladstone says that his career has been a history of political, economical, social, moral, and intellectual emancipation. He adds that in all the numberless causes that had been brought forward in this time Scotland has battled for the right.

Another period has opened, possibly of greater moral dangers, and certainly as great an ordeal for those masses who are now becoming conscious of their power and who have never heretofore been subjected to its deteriorating influences. Now is the time for true friends of the country to remind the masses that they owe their political elevation to broad, noble principles, love of liberty for all, without distinction of class, creed, or country, and a resolute preference for the interests of the whole to any interest of narrower scope. He continues: "I am sanguine that Scotland will continue to cherish a lively and enlightened sense of duty, and that undoubtedly it will be able to obtain without difficulty every satisfaction of its own special wants. For myself, I carry out of office the same political opinions I professed while in it. It is indeed a satisfaction to me, after more than sixty years of a highly contentious life, that I can honorably be relieved from some active participation in political conflict; but I recognize the great and growing demands of these countries for the satisfaction of their legislative wants, and I lament that the discrepancy of sentiment between the two Houses of Parliament has received during the last year such development as to raise a question between the Chamber in the main responsible and the Chamber totally irresponsible to the nation, in such form as to necessitate a conclusive judgment from the country. I am deeply convinced that until the just demands of Ireland are satisfied, as the House of Commons tried to satisfy them, neither the legislative wants of any portion of the United Kingdom can be adequately met nor will the empire attain its maximum union or power nor its dishonor effectively cleared of the deepest historic stain ever attached to it."

Replying to-day to an address presented to him by the progressive members of the London County Council, Prime Minister Rosebery said there were signs of a new spirit passing from municipal into imperial politics which aimed more to improve the lot of workers than at those great constitutional changes of the past. He was certain there was a party in the country not connected with any political organization, which was inclined to demand that more be done for the people. Lord Rosebery asked the presenters of the address to rob no class, but he declared that unless effective means were taken to deal with the incalculable population which is growing up half noticed and half ignored, there would be a danger for England such as no war had ever given.

We have republished the above reply of Mr. Gladstone, not from a desire to write up English politics, but because of the exalted character of the political principles it sets forth. Mr. Gladstone's address is an honor to himself, to the English people, and to the world of mankind. Its statement of principles is so broad and grand in spirit that it needs no special commendation; it speaks for itself. His statement of "rightness of intention with a desire to learn," with his reminder to the masses "that they owe their political elevation to broad, noble principles, love of liberty for all, without distinction of class, creed, or country, and a resolute preference for the interests of the whole to any interest of narrower scope," is a combination of modesty in statement coupled with a considerate judgment of the situation based upon a comprehensive appreciation of the underlying principles that should govern society. The spirit of this reply is similar to that of Washington's Farewell Address. The spirit of the Grand Old Man is progressive to the end. His undimmed star shines out as an inspiration to younger men. We publish the reference to Prime Minister Roseberry's reply as interesting in this connection.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. T. W. WILLIAMS, writing of the work at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and vicinity, says:—

The work is moving on here. There will be from eight to twelve baptized here tomorrow. I have been having a warm reception in a suburban schoolhouse the past week. Some of the Christian members of the community thought they would down "Mormonism" by submitting a number of questions for me to answer. One night was enough for them, however. The questions involve the doctrine and history of the church and the replies continue through the week. So powerfully was the Spirit present on last evening in defending the character and claims of your father and the church proper and showing the treatment received at the hands of professed Christian ministers and members that one, the questioner before-mentioned came to me and said, "Mr. Williams, your remarks to-night have caused me to look with a great deal more favor upon Joseph Smith than ever before." These questions vanquished the enemy and played into our hands; for all the week standing room has been at a premium. Every effort made by the Devil or his emissaries for the downfall of this work always results in its favor. My heart rejoices in this work. Thank God that he ever saw proper in his wisdom to choose my crude being as an instrument in the furtherance of his work.

We have advices from Bro. Gomer Wells, dated at Tuncurry, New South Wales, February 10, from which we quote:—

Hard times impede our progress, and we cannot make the movements we want to, oft-times. For this reason there is little doing at present, and gospel matters move very slowly. Do not intend to get discouraged. Think I am learning that lesson, if no other.

Bro. J. M. Terry wrote March 19 from St. Joseph, Missouri:—

Four were led into the waters of baptism last evening; two other names were given but circumstances prevented their being there. One baptized and one name given are the fruits of our new mission; others are near the kingdom. Saints feeling well; some sickness, but they are blessed through the ordinances. Am feeling excellent in the work.

Bro. Henry Kemp, Thurman, Iowa, March 19:—

Last Sunday I baptized four at Shenandoah. There is a good interest manifested in that place. Bro. Heide has quite an interest in Hamburg. He baptized four and others are near the kingdom. I was with him a few nights last week. He is doing a good work and feeling encouraged to continue in the good cause.

Bro. F. C. Smith, Kingsley, Michigan, March 21:—

Two more baptized at South Boardman and two more at Fife Lake, making nine there in one week. Others are nearly ready. I expect to go to Wexford again soon, also to Lake Ann. Will baptize some there I expect. So the kingdom moves and is rolling on.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE price of the pamphlet "Temple Lot Suit Decision," has been reduced to 15 cents each, two for 25 cents. The Abstract of Evidence Temple Lot Suit, is issued in two styles of binding; Sheep or library $3.00. Cloth $2.50. See advertisements.

Bro. J. W. Wight and family would leave Australia, by steamer Mariposa, February 19, expecting to reach San Francisco, March 15.

Three were baptized at Fife Lake and one at South Boardman, on March 11 by Bro. F. C. Smith and two by Bro. G. W. Washburn, at South Boardman. A better interest was being manifested at that point than for some time, so writes Bro. F. C. Smith.

Bro. E. C. Briggs reached home on Saturday the 17th inst.

Bro. P. Pement sends for tracts for distribution at Rushford, Minnesota. Being unable to secure a public hall for preaching he intends that his fellow townsmen shall be reached by the printed word.

Bro. G. S. Niles, living at Purcell, Indian Territory, desires elders in that field to call on him. He asks prayer in behalf of his wife, who is greatly afflicted.

Bro. J. S. Oman writes from Winters, California, reporting himself and wife as the only Saints at that point.

Sixty of the total of sixty-three Bishop's agents have already forwarded reports to the Bishop, and all are remarkably free from errors, so the Bishop reports. A much larger proportion of the elders have also made financial reports than in former years. This is encouraging as showing improvement in system and practice, and is in keeping with the forward movement and improvement being made by the church in general. The kingdom of God is destined to be the only perfect organization among men. It is fitting therefore that strict, businesslike improvement be made in every phase and department of its work. This is the spirit of the hour—the spirit of improvement. Considerate study and close observation with thoroughness in practice will make the church a light to the world and a power for good. We must all move to keep pace with the developments of the work, "according to the effectual working in the measure of every part."

Bro. S. B. Kibler writes from Woodbine, Iowa, that he is trying to induce each member of the branch there to take the HERALD for three months, after which time he thinks none will do without it. To others in position to give the HERALD interests and the Saints similar attention we say, "Go thou and do likewise."

Erratum: In HERALD for March 21, article, "A Word of Defense, No. 2," the top line of middle column, page 188, should read: "were not reached all at once."

Bro. James Anderson of Kansas City, Missouri, made us a call at the Herald Office during a late visit to Lamoni.

Brn. J. W. Gillen, C. Scott, C. H. Jones, and F. A. Smith of the missionary force and part of the General Conference advance guard have arrived.

Brn. A. B. and A. J. Moore, of the Southwestern mission, accompanied by Sr. A. B. Moore, arrived from Texas on the 21st inst.

Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, died March 20, at Turin, Italy, where he had been in exile since 1862; in his ninety-second year. With him passes another historic figure who, baptized with the spirit of liberty, has proclaimed, and labored, and suffered for the rights of his fellows. Austria, backed by Russian autocracy prevented for a time the freedom of Hungary, but the principles disseminated by Kossuth yet live and will be operative when the rule of kings is a thing of the past. Louis Kossuth is a heroic figure. History will preserve and enshrine his memory while those who resisted his patriotism will be chronicled with the oppressors.

Bro. M. H. Bond reports church interests looking up at Jeannette, Pennsylvania, whence he wrote March 19. He has been lecturing at the opera house to large gatherings. Three handbills announcing discourses on patriotic and religious subjects indicate that he is stimulating the people to think.

Bro. I. N. Roberts began a series of meetings at Davis City, Iowa, shortly after arriving home from Minnesota, continuing over the week of the 18th inst., to continue during the week following.

A letter from Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California, March 15, announces the arrival of Bro. J. W. Wight and family from Australia, and Bro. M. H. Forscutt from Tahiti, whose health he reports as greatly improved.

Latest advices from Bro. Peter Anderson dated March 6, give his permanent foreign address as Dame, Moen, Denmark. He is in good health and is prosecuting the work of the mission.

Spring has paid Lamoni an early visit this year and vegetation is further advanced than usual for the time.

We think residents of the sunnier sections need not fear to venture a trip to General Conference because of liability to encounter another blizzard. Lamoni is favorably situated. The ozone of its atmosphere is bracing and substantial.

Patrons of the Herald Office in attendance at General Conference will find a choice stock of nicely bound church publications—Bibles, Books of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Harmonys, hymn books, pamphlets, etc., etc., ready for their inspection. The bindery force is busy anticipating the demand, preparing to supply it.

Sr. Florence M. Starlifer, of Stanton, Nebraska, desires the prayers of the Saints for herself and for her husband's spiritual welfare.

Brn. J. H. Lake, James Caffall, and R. J. Anthony and daughters, arrived at Lamoni Saturday the 24th inst.

COLLEGE.

THE College Committee it is expected will be called together during the session of conference. The names are I. L. Rogers, E. L. Kelley, D. Dancer, J. A. Robinson, F. G. Pitt, R. Winning, and Joseph Smith. There may be some changes in the composition of the committee, and at the meeting the question of ways and means will be considered. Come prepared for action.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Better to stem with heart and hand,
The roaring tide of life, than lie
Unmindful, on its flowery strand,
Of God's occasions drifting by."

BEING sure that each mother who feels the sacredness of the trust which came to her with the coming of her children, is earnestly seeking to understand the best means of filling that trust, we have selected for the monthly reading of the Daughters of Zion the first chapter of a recent work by Elizabeth Harrison, an eminent teacher in the Kindergarten College of Chicago. The mother who carefully reads will obtain many valuable hints therefrom, and will be enabled to more fully appreciate the "God's occasions drifting by" her with the early years of her child's life.

THE INSTINCT OF ACTIVITY, OR THE TRAINING OF THE MUSCLES.

ALL little children are active; constant activity is nature's way of securing physical development. A seemingly superfluous amount of nervous force is generated in each growing child. The organs of respiration, circulation, and digestion use their needful share. The rest of this nervous power is expended by the infant, in tossing his limbs about, in creeping and crawling; by the growing boy, in climbing and running; by the young girl—who must not climb or run, as such conduct is not ladylike—in twisting, squirming, and giggling; thus gaining for her muscles, in spite of prohibition, some of the needed exercise. Making a restless child "keep still" is a repression of this nervous energy, which irritates the whole nervous system, causing ill-temper, moroseness, and general uncomfortableness. If this force could be properly expended, the child would be always sunny-tempered. The mother's instinctive feeling that the restlessness of her child is necessary to its well-being, gives her strength to endure what would be unendurable confusion and noise to anyone who has not this maternal instinct. But the wise mother who has changed this dim instinct into luminous insight, turns the riot into joyous, happy play or other wholesome activity. By this course not only does she lessen the strain upon her own nerves, but what is of more importance, often avoids a clash of will power between herself and her child; such clashing of wills being always fraught with harm to both.

In order that this activity, generally first noticed in the use of the hands, might be trained into right and ennobling habits rather than be allowed to degenerate into wrong and often degrading ones, Froebel arranged his charming set of finger games for the mother to teach her babe while he is yet in her arms; thus establishing the right activity before the wrong one can assert itself.

In such little songs as the following:—

"This is the mother, good and dear,
This is the father, with hearty cheer,
This is the brother, stout and tall,
This is the sister who plays with her doll,
And this is the baby, the pet of all, the child is led to personify his fingers and to regard them as a small but united family over which he has control. Of course, this song can be varied to suit the phase of family-life with which he is surrounded. For instance:—
Behold the good family, great and small!"

"This is the auntie, who wears a bright shawl,
This is the brother, who plays with his ball."

or like rhythmical description. The little fingers may be put to sleep, one by one, with some such words as these:—

"Go to sleep, little thumb, that's one,
Go to sleep, pointing finger, two,
Go to sleep, middle finger, three,
Go to sleep, ring finger, four,
Go to sleep, little finger, five.

I take them and tuck them snugly all in bed, sound asleep.
Let naught disturb them."

To the little fingers thus quietly closed against the palm of the hand can be sung some soft lullaby, and the quieting effect upon the babe is magical.

Once while traveling upon a railway train, I watched for a time the vain endeavors of a young mother to persuade her restless boy of two years to be undressed for bed. Finally I went to the rescue, and began to talk to the little fellow about the queer finger family that lived on his hand. I gave him a name for each member of this family, and in a few minutes suggested that they were sleepy and that we had better put them to bed. He was delighted. Singing softly the ditty just mentioned, I showed him how to fold first one, then another of the chubby fingers in seeming sleep. When we had finished he was very still; the pleasing activity had called his thoughts away from his capricious, willful little self; he had something to do. "Now," said I, "do you think you can undress without waking these babies?" He nodded a pleased assent. The mother took him off and in a short time came back and thanked me, saying, that while he was being undressed his thoughts had been concentrated upon keeping his fingers undisturbed, and that he had dropped asleep with his hand tightly closed. She was astonished at this power of the game, yet the device was simple; the nervous, restless activity of the child was turned from a wrong channel into a right one. By many such means, Froebel would have the baby's fingers seem to him tiny people of whom he has charge.

When these games are emphasized with an older child who can work with his hands, there is danger of his separating, in thought, himself from his fingers, making them alone responsible for their deeds, and of his setting entirely aside his own obligation in the matter. For example: In my Kindergarten there was a boy who had a very bad habit with his hands, a fault not uncommon with children of all classes. At once I laid more stress upon the finger families and his care of them. After a day or two had passed, I noticed that he was not following directions in sewing his card. "O, dear!" I said, "how came these crooked lines here?"

"Well, those fingers, they did it. They don't care how they work," was his reply. I saw that I had brought out too much of their individuality, and too little his accountability for them. "Ah," I answered, "but who has charge of this family? You must help the fingers take out these wrong stitches and show them how to put in the right ones."

To some these incidents may seem childish, yet underlying them is one of the world's greatest principles of development, viz: cultivate right tendencies in humanity and the wrong ones must die out. Build up the positive side of your child's nature and the negative side will not need to be unbuild.

Let me illustrate more fully this important thought. At the age of two or three years, according to the immaturity or maturity of the child, the instinct of investigation begins to show itself, developing in various ways an appalling power of destruction; such as tearing to pieces his doll, smashing his toy bank, cutting holes in his apron, and many other indications of seeming depravity. It is a critical period. Without this important instinct, man would have made but little progress in civilization; it is the basis of scientific and mathematical research, of study in all fields. This legitimate and natural investigative activity needs only to be led from the negative path of destruction, into the positive one of construction. Instead of vainly attempting to suppress the new-born power of the young pioneer, or searcher after truth, guide it aright. Give him playthings which can be taken to pieces and put together again without injury to the material; dolls which can be dressed and undressed; horses which can be harnessed and unharnessed; carts to which horses may be fastened at will, or any like toys. Blocks which can be built into various new forms are admirable playthings for children; the more of their own ideas they can put into the rearrangement, the better. It is the divine right of each human being to reconstruct in his own way, when that way does not interfere with the care of property, or the rights of others. The glorious instinct of creativity—one of the best evidences that man is made in the image of God—also is cultivated.

Froebel's system of child-culture is based upon laws that are supported by the three-fold testimony of nature, history, and revelation. We see these positive and negative possibilities of which I have just been speaking, in all creation. In the physical world they appeal to our senses for recognition. Look at any wayside field with its luxuriant crop of weeds; one may plow and harrow, may prepare the soil with diligence, but unless the right kind of seeds are planted, the weeds will again have full possession. I was told by a leading physician in the Engadine Valley in Switzerland, who had made a lifetime study of diseases of the lungs, that if a person inheriting consumptive tendencies were placed in the right climate, his constitution could so be built up that the dread tendency would die out, or remain dormant and not develop, even though the inheritance had been continuous through many generations. This statement was confirmed by a prominent London physician, and I believe is now the accepted theory.

The same principle is shown in the world of history, that our reason may assent to it. As we thoughtfully turn its pages, what is the record we find? Is it not as soon as a nation has arrived at a period when pioneer work ceases, when conquest over surrounding nature, or adjacent nations, is no longer a necessity, when wealth has brought leisure, that then, and not until then, self-indulging vice and destroying corruption creep in? The positive activity of the nation has ceased, and its negative activity at once begins.

With equal clearness is this proclaimed in the world of revelation that we may know it to be the truth of God. What lesson is taught in the Scripture parable of the man who drove out the Devil, then swept and garnished his house and left it empty, when seven other demons came and dwelt therein?

This thought was well understood by the mother whose boy of fourteen was coming home alone for a summer vacation, a journey of a day and a half. Knowing that he had once before fallen into the habit of reading bad books, and fearing that his will-power was not yet strong enough to resist the temptation to read the trash sold upon the train, she bought new copies of the St. Nicholas and Youths' Companion and sent them to him with the loving message that he would probably wish something to read on the way. When he reached home he began at once to tell her of an article in the St. Nicholas which had attracted him, and of a "boss story" he had found in the Youths' Companion. No thought had entered his mind of buying other reading matter, nor had there been any chafing sense of prohibition. The success of our Young Men's Christian Associations is to be attributed to this same positive upbuilding principle. When they wish to close a saloon, they start a coffee house near by; to draw idle and listless young men from the attractions of gambling hells, they open lecture halls and free reading rooms; the exhilaration of healthful exercise in the gymnasium counteracts the excitement of the low dance hall. They say to the young men of our cities, not simply, "Don't go there," but "Do come here." To all thinking observers, such facts as these must bring more or less conviction that it is by supplying positive right activities for our children that we suppress the wrong ones.

More than this, a negative method trains a child inevitably into a critical, pessimistic character very depressing to us all. For instance: a mother came to me in utter discouragement, saying: "What shall I do with my five year old boy? He is simply the personification of the word won't." After the lesson was over, I walked home with her. A beautiful child, with golden curls and great dancing black eyes, came running out to meet us and with all the impulsive joy of childhood, threw his arms around her. What were her first words? "Don't do that, James, you will muss mamma's dress." I had already suspected where the trouble lay; now I knew that I was right. In a moment it was: "Don't twist so, my son." "Don't make that noise." In the four or five minutes we stood at her steps, she had said don't five times. Can you wonder that when she said, "Run in the house now, mamma is coming in a minute," he replied: "No, I don't want to." Such training develops unduly the critical faculty and criticism leads to separation from our fellow-beings. Therefore, care must be taken, not only that the child himself be not over-criticised, but also that other people shall not be criticised in his presence; he is injured far more than they are helped. Unless some principle is involved, let the people about him pass for heroes and heroines.

Again, a year or two ago, I was visiting at a friend's house, when in the course of conversation, she said: "I do not know what is the difficulty in my sister's family. She tries to train her children aright, and yet they are almost unmanageable." The difficulty was revealed to me in a call made soon after. The mother sat with her two year old babe on her lap. She told me that the child could say only a few words; that he was not yet able to talk. Two of her children were playing in another part of the room. In a short time they became rather boisterous. The mother did not notice it, but the two year old turned around and in an impatient tone called out: "Boys 'top." Here was the trouble. Babies, like parrots, learn to say first the words which they most frequently hear. Consequently this little one must have repeatedly heard the words, "Boys, stop!" which was merely the suppression of some annoying or wrong thing, and not a substitution of a right one in its place. It had not been: "Boys, run out in the yard and gather some flowers for the tea-table," or, "Boys, go up stairs and finish your sawing," or some like directing of their energy, but merely, "Boys, stop!" So they had undoubtedly "stopped" one prohibited thing and gone to another.

The positive method of training builds up the cheering, optimistic character which is so much needed. Who are the men and women that are lifting the world upward and onward? Are they not those who encourage more than they criticise? who do more than they undo? The strongest, most beautiful characters are those who see the good that is in each person, who think the best that is possible of everyone, who as soon as they form a new acquaintance see his finest characteristics. The Kindergarten world gives innumerable illustrations of how this type of character may be developed.

A small child was brought to me who was the most complete embodiment of the result of negative training with which I have ever come in contact. It was, "No, I don't want to play;" "No, I won't sit by that boy;" "No, I don't like the blocks." It was one continual "No." No one pleased him; nothing satisfied him. Though not yet five years old, he was already an isolated character, unhappy himself and constantly making others uncomfortable. I saw that the child needed more than anything else positive encouragement, to be led into a spirit of participation with others. The third day after his arrival another child chanced to bring a small pewter soldier to the Kindergarten. As is usual with each little treasure brought from home, it was examined and admired and at play-time it was allowed to choose a game. This last privilege brought to the new boy's face a look of contempt, which sharply contrasted with the happy, sympathetic faces of the other children. Soon after we had taken our places at the work-tables with the toy soldier standing erect in front of little Paul, his proud owner, I heard a whizzing sound and Paul's voice crying out: "Joseph has knocked my soldier off the table and he did it on purpose, too!" I turned to the scene of disaster; the soldier lay on the other side of the room, and Joseph, the iconoclastic invader into our realm of peace, with defiance in his face, sat looking at me. The first impulse was to say: "Why did you do that? It was naughty; go and pick up the soldier." That, however, would have been another negation added to the number which had already been daily heaped upon him, so, indeed, I said, "O well, Paul, never mind. Joseph does not know that we try to make each other happy in kindergarten."

"Come here, Joseph, I want you to be my messenger boy." The role of messenger boy, or helper to distribute the work, is always a much-coveted office; partly, from an inborn delight in children to assist in the work of older people; partly, from the distinction which arises in the imaginary wearing of the brass buttons and gilt band. As if expecting some hidden censure Joseph came a little reluctantly to where I was sitting. In a few minutes he was busy running back and forth giving to each child the envelope containing the work of the next half hour. As soon as the joy of service had melted him into a mood of comradeship, I whispered: "Run over now and get Paul's soldier." Instantly he ran across the room, picked up the toy and placing it on the table before its rightful owner, quietly slipped into his own place and began his work. His whole nature for the time being was changed into good-humored fellowship with all mankind.

Similar opportunities for like transformations may be found in the home life. A friend came to me and said: "What shall I do with my Willie? He dallies so about everything that he has to do. If I send him upstairs after my thimble or thread, it may be a half hour or even an hour before he returns. I have scolded him and scolded him, but it seems to do no good."

"By scolding," I replied, "you have emphasized the fault you wished to cure and have separated yourself from your boy. Now, try to emphasize the opposite virtue, promptness, by praising him for it when you have the opportunity."

"O, there's no use in talking of that," she answered, "he is never prompt."

"Then," said I, "if he is never so, voluntarily, make an occasion. Ask him to go to the kitchen, or some other part of the house on an errand for you; tell him that you will count while he is gone. When he gets back, praise him for having returned more quickly than usual. At dinner tell his father as if it were a fine bit of news. This will make it a meritorious achievement in your son's eyes."

The next week she came to me with her face fairly radiant and said: "I have been counting and Willie has been trotting ever since last week." I laughed and told her that her mother-wit would soon have to hunt up some new device.

In Harriet Martineau's "Household Education" is a chapter on "Reverence." She shows how a child, lacking this virtue, should not be constantly criticised for his disrespect or irreverence, but instead needs to have his eyes opened to the wonders of creation, that the majesty and power of God displayed in his works may fill his heart with awe and hush it into the needed reverence. On the other hand, the child who is fearful and timid, over-reverent, really superstitious, ought not to be laughed at and ridiculed, but to have the power which is within himself developed, until courage and self-reliance restore the lacking balance to his character. This method of treatment bears at once practical results.

Many a mother says earnestly to herself: "What shall I do with my half-grown boy, his tone and manner are so lacking in respect? Or, the troublesome girl who almost defies authority." Reproof but calls forth a pert reply, perhaps long argument which establishes something of equality between parent and child. The real question is not how to suppress this lack of respect for authority, but how to develop the opposite virtue. One of the favorite sayings of Dr. William T. Harris, the well-know educator, is this: that every man has two selves, the great self of humanity and the institutional world, and the little self of individuality. Such a child should learn to compare his great self with his individual self, then egotism and self-assertion will cease. What has he done, compared with the achievements of mankind? What are his rights, when the rights of the State at large are examined? All true patriotism, which demands the glad laying down of life for country, arises from the realization of this larger self.

With this principle in mind, let the mother study the line of thought which most attracts her child, that he may perceive that she has a deeper, stronger grasp of the subject than he can at present hope to have. As a rule, children worship skill of brain or hand. To illustrate: a mother completely cured her eight year old daughter of a spirit of contradiction by reading ahead of the child some books on Natural History, and telling the contents to her in their daily walks. The girl soon learned to look up to the mother as a marvel of wisdom and authority on all Natural History subjects, and the feeling of respect in this realm was easily transferred to others. Over and over again have I seen similar changes brought about in a child's attitude towards older people, by like training.

Mothers, so cultivate the rational element in yourselves, that you can see that every fault in your child is simply the lack of some virtue. In the inner chamber of your own souls study your children; confess their faults to yourselves, not to your neighbors, and ask what is lacking that these defects exist. Like Nehemiah of old, build up the wall where it is the weakest; if your child is selfish, it is unselfishness he needs; if he is untruthful, it is accuracy which is lacking; perhaps he is tyrannical to the younger brother or sister; it is the element of nurture or tenderness which should be developed.

There is one caution which must be given in regard to the matter of approval. One should be sure the effort is a genuine one, else commendation will foster a species of hypocrisy which is worse than the fault sought to be eradicated.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, April 12.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Proverbs 29: 15; Ephesians 6: 1-4.

Thursday, April 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Isaiah 55: 10, 11; Proverbs 28: 3.

Thursday, April 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 107: 1-8; Joel 2: 32.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Mary E. Chappelow, of New Trenton, Indiana, asks your earnest faith and prayers in her behalf that if it be God's will her health may be restored and she be spared to those who love her. For herself she is perfectly resigned to God's will. Because of her children she desires to be spared, even if she suffer.

Bro. G. S. Niles, of Purcell, Indian Territory, asks the prayers of the Saints in behalf of his wife. She is afflicted with catarrh to the extent that it is feared she will lose her eyesight unless relief is obtained.

SOUTH BUTTE, Mont., March 12.

Editors Herald:—Elder R. J. Anthony has been with us just a week, leaving us to-day. He expected to stop at Idaho Falls, and at Salt Lake City, then on to the Lamoni conference. We enjoyed Bro. Anthony's visit, and I feel that I have been helped and strengthened by his presence. He and I went to visit Sr. Bowen and daughter (Mrs. Ferrile), also Sr. Sund, and I know all were benefited. I have been doing all I could in this neighborhood to get my friends to read our church literature. Several families seemed quite interested and expressed a desire to hear an elder preach.

When I knew Elder Anthony was coming to Butte I tried to get a church for him, but without success. At last I secured a hall in South Butte for Sunday evening. Our neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Mr. Benedict and myself, with the help of a young lady to play the organ, prepared some music for the occasion and everything passed off nicely. I had the meeting announced in three daily papers, and quite a good-sized audience greeted Elder Anthony. The Anaconda Standard is a daily paper that is published in Anaconda, but they have a branch office in Butte, and the Standard is more widely circulated and read than any other paper in the county. At the close of Elder Anthony's sermon a Standard reporter came to him and asked for more information regarding the church he represented. Mr. Benedict invited the reporter (Mr. Smith) home with us and we answered all the questions he asked and gave him several things to read. The inclosed marked article is the result of said conversation.

Since hearing Elder Anthony and reading the article in the Standard quite an interest seems to have been awakened, and I have been kept busy to-day answering questions and explaining the gospel. I believe if it could be arranged that Elder Anthony (or any other good elder) could be sent here in the near future, much good might be accomplished. I feel sure I shall have no trouble in securing a place in which we could hold meetings hereafter.

A very correct and good report of the Temple Lot decision by Judge Phillips was given in the Standard for March 5, and has given the Reorganized Church some prestige in Butte, which would help an elder here. I hope and pray that I may do my little part in helping to advance the cause of Christ.

Your sister,
EFFIE ADAMS BENEDICT.

TEMPLE, Ohio, March 15.

Editors Herald:—The West Virginia district conference, held at Goose Creek on the 24th and 25th ultimo was quite well attended and a deep interest manifest in the meetings. A good spirit prevailed in the business sessions and there were large and attentive audiences at the preaching services. Some of the hearers are about convinced that they too should engage in the good work. The district is new and it needs time to shape up in as good practical order as could be desired, but there are zealous men at work and it is easy to see that a growth is being made; the leaven is working. It is only a work of time and diligence when an increase of members, prestige, and strength will be given to the work there. Bro. D. L. Shinn was continued as district president and Bro. G. H. Godby was appointed vice president. Bro. Godby is a new man in the ministerial ranks and bids fair to be very useful. He was unfortunate in being on the wrong side during the late unpleasantness between the North and the South, but he is shooting in the right direction now. May success crown his efforts. Bro. Russell was sustained as district secretary and Bro. B. Beall Bishop's agent. Ample arrangements were made and a good social time had all through the conference. March 3 I attended the Pittsburg and Kirtland district conference at Sharon, Ohio. A good representation was in attendance from the district including Bro. G. T. Griffiths, late from England. The Sharon Saints acquitted themselves well in the way of preparations, securing a large and convenient hall in the center of the town, which was well filled and excellent attention paid at all of the preaching services. The business was transacted with commendable unity and satisfaction. The weather was fine, congregations orderly, the Saints cheerful, and thus passed, it is said, one of the best conferences yet held in the district. Let the good work go on. The old officers of the district were continued. At home on the 5th to find all well and enjoying springlike weather in the midst of winter.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 14.

Editors Herald:—The work in this part is moving slowly. The efforts made in grove meetings last summer and early fall demonstrated what can be done by a little pluck and energy in the country in sowing the good seed of the kingdom. The dampness of this Eastern atmosphere is hard on the speaker standing exposed to the dew and cool night air while speaking. The people in those parts where the greatest interest was manifested are anxiously waiting for spring to come, when a tent may be at the service of the ministry. They are willing to aid in this matter and have already donated seventeen dollars at New Park, and the brethren and sisters there assure me of enough to make it twenty-five dollars. If the Saints will respond as liberally as possible, that tent is sure. Let us not fail, brethren and sisters, but put our mites together, and a tent we will have.

A compliment for the Herald I do not think amiss: I think it improved its appearance in the last change of dress; and if you will allow me to say what I think about it, I would say as perfection is being sought after, I only see one thing lacking for the Herald. And for fear some one might not guess right as to what that "one thing" was I will here tell you. Some good reader to accompany it to many homes where they have not time to peruse it. I thought it a feast when I had to take time to cut the leaves before reading, but now this is all done before leaving the office, making it the leading church paper right up to the times in its mechanical work, while furnishing the best and clearest exposition of gospel facts ever introduced to an intelligent people. May the upward tendency continue in all the departments of the work until we are worthy to enter into the marriage feast.

A. H. PARSONS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 13.

Editors Herald:—I am once more in the land of sunshine and flowers. I left Nevada on the 4th inst. My sojourn among the Nevada people was pleasant to me and I hope profitable to them, and if I succeeded in making as good a record as did Bro. Daley, I shall be satisfied, fully assured that good was done. One cannot help feeling a tinge of pride when hearing his brethren so highly spoken of by those of the church and out of it; such records are an honor to the church and to those making them.

I preached fifty-three times while in Nevada, and baptized eight. Others were ready for baptism but the weather prevented. I was much hindered by the weather in holding meetings. There are some fine Saints in Nevada, and timber for more. I shall return next summer if I remain in this field. My address will be No. 2910 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, California, care of C. Parkin.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

OKARCHE, O. T., March 17.

Editors Herald:—The letters always come to us with encouraging news, and help us to grow in knowledge. There are only five of us here now, as Bro. Alex. Lambert and wife went back to Illinois over a year ago. Bro. J. R. Lambert first sowed the gospel seed in this part of the country, which I can see took root and is still growing. Some that were opposed to it then are now defending our faith every chance they get, and I believe it won't be long until they become members. One of them said he would give twenty-five dollars toward building a Latter Day Saint church.

I thank God that I have accepted this gospel, and for Bro. Lambert's visit to this part of the country, and for the good it has done for me. I formed nearly all the popular habits that boys generally come in contact with, and have had them all to contend with, but have succeeded in getting away with them as fast as I came to them. The hardest one was the use of tobacco, which I used from the time I was six years old; but it is gone never to return: nothing but the gospel would have ever helped me to quit it.

How I do want every honest soul to hear the gospel in its fullness. It does seem to me that if every Saint (or would-be if he lived his religion) would do his or her duty, and hold nothing back, there would't be any cause for some of the ministers to be taken out of the field, but double the number would be in the field next year. Now I am going to tell what little we have done since we have come into the church, and am not going to tell it to boast or put it before the public for a show, or anything of the kind; but perhaps it will serve to awaken some to their duty. God knows I am not doing it for any other purpose: Since we came into the church a little over two years ago we have given one hundred and four dollars and eighty cents. Fifty dollars of this is our tithing, twenty-five was given extra, the rest for books and tracts, and some of the books were for free distribution. Now this is not very much, but when you consider that we live in a sod house and in a new country and have not very much to start with, I think it will bear our faith out by our works that far anyway. I think I am just as well off financially as I was before I gave it, and I know I am better off spiritually. All I hope is that every one that gets it will be worthy. I expect to do all I can in every way I can to help to promote the cause, and I hope and pray that every member will awake to duty and not keep putting off paying tithing until they get better off. That time will never come until it is too late and your reward delinquent. The gospel is surely worth living all our life, so let us try and not come short in anything.

Yours truly,

W. M. AYLOR.

HAMBURG, Iowa, Mar. 16.

Editors Herald:—I am still holding aloft the banner of the cross. I came here three weeks ago and began meetings in the G. A. R. hall. The South, North, and Free Methodists were each holding protracted (distracted) efforts, and when I opened fire it did not seem as though I would get much of a congregation; but a lecture on Sunday afternoon on "Mormonism Exposed" brought out a large congregation, and I am happy to say the result was beneficial. A mountain of prejudice was removed and as a result of labors in the past, four have united with the church. Before a week had passed two of the other churches were compelled to close. And one man said, "If that young man keeps on, all the preachers in Hamburg will have to go to work."

We have organized a Sunday school, with Sr. Vanderpool as superintendent. One brother said he did not believe in "sensational advertising." I do. I believe in telling people what we have got and why we have it. I find a good many would heed if we could only attract their attention. I propose to give the people to understand that we don't believe in Salt Lake Mormonism at least.

Bro. Kemp was with us a few days and cheered our hearts with his words of instruction. Bro. T. A. Hougas is expected here next Sunday to help the Saints out with the Sunday school. May this grand work roll on.

J. B. HEIDE.

BUTLER, Mo., Mar. 18.

Editors Herald:—I held a joint discussion four miles south of Butler, with a minister of the Church of God, and by request of friends have moved here. I opened the work here in November last. Had lots of prejudice to contend with, but have baptized four and will baptize again to-day. I have to labor for the bread that perisheth, therefore cannot work in the vineyard of the Lord as I would like. I have more calls for preaching than I can fill; have but little education, but the Lord of the harvest has stood by me. By the discussion more prejudice was removed than a year's labor would have done; some who were bitter enemies are now friends to the church, and a former infidel is ready for baptism. So the work rolls on; to God be all the glory.

In bonds,

J. I. YOUNG.

SHERIDAN, Nev., March 10.

Editors Herald:—Nevada is in a poor financial condition; the silver mines have nearly all suspended operations, and hundreds of men are out of employment and do not know what to do, looking for something in regard to the silver question.

Elder H. L. Holt has been laboring here for the past three months with some success; some additions have been made to the church. He preached at a number of places with good liberty and attention. The people like his manner of teaching and expounding very much, and we believe much good has been done. The work is finding more favor with the majority of the liberal-minded class of thinkers. Bro. Holt, accompanied by the writer, made an opening at Gardnerville, a new town on the other side of the valley. When we arrived the people were holding an inquest over the body of a man who died from drunkenness and exposure. What a lesson to the living! Perhaps the man was raised by a good mother, but was led away, perhaps through taking one drink and another till he lost all power and hope. What a pity! We found friends in the town and secured a fine hall, where good congregations heard the word.

The work here looks more favorable, and with labor and perseverance will advance. Its progress will depend a great deal upon the conduct of the members of the church. We look over the past and see how we have failed in not being faithful in standing for the right. The Saints in Nevada have many obstacles to contend against. One is, that so many different nationalities live in one neighborhood that they differ widely in religious belief. Many of the older Saints have passed away to their heavenly home, and their children as a general thing are carried away by the flood of the wicked world, but some of them are thinking seriously of the religion of their fathers, and will eventually retrace their steps and walk in the ways of the Lord.

As we live and labor in the work we see the hand of God with his people. While at prayer a short time ago I was impressed with the consciousness that a brother living near was sick. The next night a messenger came, asking me to go and administer to the brother referred to. He was administered to and obtained relief but only part of the family being present and not receiving the blessing desired, the rest were sent for and came, as did also Bro. Hawkins, of Dayton, and Bro. H. L. Holt. In the administration the Spirit declared that the brother should live and be a comfort to his children, and admonish them to keep the commandments of the Lord; that inasmuch as he had been faithful he should be blessed; that inasmuch as his children would keep the commandments they should be blessed with peace, joy, and eternal life. The brother was soon on his feet and went to California with one of his daughters. This is cheering news to the faithful Saint of God. I could relate many instances of the like. Let us press on in the work.

In the faith,

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo.

Editors Herald:—With a thankful heart I received the tracts sent me, and as soon as the weather permitted took them and started on my mission, seeking to do the will of our heavenly Father in bringing others to Zion, that we all may be partakers of the heavenly gift; for my soul delights in this glorious latter-day work. I rejoice to tell you that the Lord was with me and prepared the way before me, for in every house I entered, except one, they met me with a welcome and seemed desirous to hear. I told them I was working for Jesus in trying to spread the gospel in its purity; that I had brought some tracts for them to read and compare with the Scriptures, to see if it was not according to what Jesus commanded his disciples to teach the people, observing all his laws and commandments. They would reply, "We need more workers for Jesus, and not so many for the money." The general cry was, "I read my Bible at home and trust that God will help me understand, for when I go to church some of the rich sisters pass me by to shake hands with another rich one because she is well dressed. That makes me feel bad, to think they profess to have the love of Jesus and turn away from the poor, and we have lost confidence in all denominations that we have heard."

To my surprise I found but one in thirty-nine families visited that had even heard of Latter Day Saints. They gladly received the tracts and sermon. Everyone, except the one mentioned, desired me to come back and stay longer and talk with them, for they desired to know more about the doctrine, and which I intended to do, had I not been called away. I was glad to receive the Ensign and sermons. When I received them my heart bounded with joy; I felt that God had put it into the heart of some one that sent them as a testimony of his approval of my desire to work in his vineyard, and sent something to work with. Praise his holy name for his goodness and mercy to me, and to all the poor that trust in him. I know he will never leave his handmaiden alone. Though I am so far from the fold, yet my Shepherd is near to direct me when I am pleading for the faith that was delivered to the saints.

I am striving to live as becometh a Saint that others may join in giving glory to my heavenly Father. Dear Saints, pray for me that I may ever be faithful to my trust. My prayer is that we may all walk nearer to God each day, that we may keep in the light; for if our light be darkness how great will that darkness be! Pass not the poorly clad person that comes in your way, for it will turn them away from the truth and gives them a burdened heart to carry about. Thinking there is no truth in religion, they go on in sin. Ever praying that the Lord will send more laborers into his vineyard, and for the welfare of Zion,

Your sister,

M. T. TAYLOR.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 20.

Editors Herald:—The problem "How to reach the masses of this great city with the gospel message," remains, in a great measure, unsolved. Environed as the people are here with the contaminating influences consequent upon city life, especially those of such an immense city as this, with a large foreign element who have no use for churches and who regard the Sunday merely as a play-day, in which they can give greater freedom to their baser passions in drinking, gambling, dancing, and theater going, etc.; this, together with the various forms of spiritualism, skepticism, and the many other schisms, too numerous to mention, render it very difficult to obtain the attention of any, save the few who chance to come within our reach. No doubt some have thought that the problem could be easily solved by God working wonders among the people in the form of miracles, and we confess that the thought has suggested itself to us that it would be comparatively an easy matter to attract the people's attention and convince them, if the elders could be endowed with that power to work miracles the same as Christ wrought in his day; but, upon more mature reflection, we feel that we have no more reason to believe that this power would convert Chicago any more than it converted Jerusalem anciently, but might result in bringing upon us, as it brought upon the early disciples, persecution with all its terrible consequences; and if it did not, it would be most apt to attract the very class we do not want; that corrupt class, known as sign-seekers, whom Jesus called "A wicked and adulterous generation," who work mischief enough outside the church, but nothing to be compared to the evil they would accomplish if permitted to enter the fold. It seems, therefore, that it is best that God should still hold this power in his own control, only permitting its exercise as he directs.

We have thought sometimes that the problem would be worked out in some such way as even now seems to be beginning to be made manifest: First, by the Saints themselves coming up to a condition of unity and love whereby may plainly be seen the fruits of the Spirit, rather than the mere outward manifestations alone, forming a kind of nucleus of righteousness and purity which must attract the honest in heart and become a sort of spiritual home for those who love righteousness; second, by the operation of the Spirit of God in answering the prayers of his children, who are yet in Babylon, but who are crying to him for deliverance and for a knowledge of the truth. It is as easy for God to now direct these to some street in Chicago as when anciently he directed his children to Joppa, or "the street called Straight" in Damascus; third, by the ministry being exercised by the Spirit of wisdom, of deep devotion, and of self-sacrifice, that shall secure for them the aid of God's Spirit in delivering the gospel message, and in setting an example worthy of imitation; fourth, by opening up places for preaching in different portions of the city, as opportunity offers, if only in private houses, as well as having some good central hall where all can assemble on Sundays. It would seem to be in harmony with the gospel that the work here should meet with success in some such way as this.

We now have the advantage of a good commodious hall, centrally located, where it can be reached from all three sides of the city for one car fare. A hall well known and respected, where none need feel ashamed to invite their friends; where every Sunday are gathered together a company of devoted, warm-hearted Saints, their friends, and a number who are investigating. No stranger ever comes into our midst without being welcomed by a warm grasp of the hand and an invitation to come again. We are not troubled with that disturbing element known as cranks, for which we feel especially thankful. We seldom have a spiritualist in our congregation. These who attend our services and those embracing the gospel are of a good class of people.

Last Sunday Bro. Strange led three more precious souls into the waters of baptism. Elder Strange is acting as priest of the branch, and is doing a good work. He is in the life insurance business, which brings him in contact with a good many people, and he is not slow in sowing the gospel seed, in connection with his business, and is meeting with excellent success in private preaching and bringing those who want to learn out to meeting. Prayer meeting is held every week on the south side, where several strangers are becoming interested. We also hold prayer meeting every week on the north or west side in private houses.

Indications now are that during the coming summer doors will be opened for preaching in different portions of the city. We therefore need the assistance of some good speakers; such men as Elders W. W. Blair, Joseph Luff, R. C. Evans, C. Scott, J. F. McDowell, and others of like talent. Even if they cannot stay, they should come occasionally, as there is excellent opportunity to put their talent to good use.

The work in our district is making progress in some portions, in other portions it is not doing so well. The young branch in DeKalb, over which Dr. Carter presides, is doing fine. Sandwich also is doing well. There is plenty of opportunity for work in the district. It is difficult to do justice to the city and district as well. Our conference held in the city was a success, and has resulted in good. Sufficient money is raised for a tent, and its purchase has been ordered for next summer's work. We feel well in the work.

In gospel bonds,
F. G. PITT.

PLEASANT GROVE, Utah, March 19.

Editors Herald:—In the Herald of March 14, in a letter, Bro. R. Etzenhouser says: "I read in Herald that R. J. Anthony was orator of the day on July 4. I was told, at Pleasant Grove, that he spoke after several others. Some one had evidently made a partial report."

Now the facts are that Bro. Anthony was orator of the day on July 4, 1893: It was so stated on the programme and so published in the local papers, and it was so announced from the platform on that day in the following language by the chairman: "The Hon. R. J. Anthony will now deliver the oration;" although there were one or two others who made short speeches before he delivered the oration. Inclosed please find the statement of D. H. Robinson, chairman of the Fourth of July committee. I make this reply to place Bro. R. J. Anthony right before the public on this point. He is held in high esteem by the general public here. He arrived home yesterday morning and gave us some good and timely instruction at two and at 7:30 p. m., and he is to speak here again at 7:30 this evening. Bro. H. N. Hansen is to speak here to-morrow evening, and longer if the interest will justify it. Bro. J. S. Lee, Sr., has done some excellent work here, and although none have joined yet, some are much nearer the kingdom than before he came: the Saints were also strengthened by his labor.

The work is gaining here; we expect to build a church-house this year. We rejoice over the decision in the Temple Lot suit.

Your brother in the gospel of peace and love,
H. B. STERRETT.

To whom it may concern:—This is to certify that on July 4, 1893, Rev. R. J. Anthony, by special request of the Citizens Committee acted as "orator of the day" at the celebration held in this city in commemoration of Independence Day.

D. H. ROBINSON,
Chairman of Committee.

STAFFORD, Kan., Mar. 10.

Editors Herald:—Since I have been in this part of Kansas I have preached twenty-five public discourses and a great many private ones, and to-morrow I am billed for two more at Rose Valley. I have just returned from Salt Marsh, where I labored nearly a week and administered the ordinance of baptism to three precious souls in a beautiful running stream. All are heads of families; and one was an active minister in the Bickerton Church, who will, without a doubt, in time become a standard bearer in the Reorganized Church. The Spirit of the Master was with us at the water, and at the confirmation meeting the Spirit was poured out without measure. Those confirmed testified that they received the Spirit of promise while my hands were on their heads. Some who came out of curiosity were melted to tears and shook with emotion when the new converts testified of the power of God and of receiving the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost.

The wall of prejudice is now giving way; three more gave their names for baptism, saying they would be baptized the next time I was there.

I have just received a letter from a sister thirty miles from here, who has not heard a gospel sermon for nine years. I will not have time to call on her this time, but if I come into this field after returning home I shall surely call. Bro. Hall says that if I come to this field of labor he will furnish me with a horse and buggy free of charge to be used in ministerial work. I find a host of friends wherever I go; I receive dozens of invitations from prominent citizens to call and see them, that I cannot comply with. Although I am alone here,—with no other official to assist or to counsel with,—yet God is with me and leads me through every discourse, and is my counsel, my comfort, and my all.

March 12. Two more baptized to-day at Rose Valley; both heads of families.

In bonds,
J. M. BROWN.

Original Articles.

A WORD OF DEFENSE.—No. 3.

BY J. R. LAMBERT.

ELDER BLAIR'S reply, "No 3," is before me. After furnishing a quotation taken from different pages of my published article, he undertakes to reply. This quotation is taken from my first reply of last summer, as published in Herald for August 26. The first part is found on page 155, while the second parts are found in two different columns on page 156. It is true that the brother indicates where portions are left out, but as presented by him in connection with his comments thereon, the connection, which is the key to the force and pertinency of my statements, is largely lost.

In reply to the comments made on these quotations, it is only necessary to say that the superior qualifications of the first and second elders in the church, have not been denied. So far as I am concerned this is not a question of "who shall be greatest," but, rather, What is true? and, What is right? What I objected to was the brother referring to position and supposed superior qualifications as an argument in support of his views. I object to it now; and it seems to me that everyone ought to be able to see the impropriety of such a course. If the argument is worth anything, then the Twelve may apply it with equal propriety to all the other ministers of the church except the First Presidency, and so on down till we reach the deacon. Who is prepared to admit the correctness of such a policy? One statement found in my article explains my position on this point, but the brother did not make the mistake of quoting it. It reads as follows:—

Should not superior knowledge, inspiration, and general qualifications, leave their results in their work done, so that the people of God who are honestly seeking for truth and light, may recognize the merit found therein, and for this reason, be prepared to support the doers of the work, intelligently and with confidence, in the high positions to which God has called them? Have not all others, though subordinate to the First Presidency, the same claim upon God for the Spirit of truth to enable them to properly receive that which is of God, as the superior officer has claim upon that same God for the same Spirit, in order that he may properly instruct? If not, how shall we render our account to God in the day of judgment?

Bro. Blair says:—

What I had to say on these matters related almost entirely to the "Choice Seer" and his successor. And when the brother insinuates that I did anything of the kind "again and again" concerning myself, he is uncharitable, unjust, and grossly exaggerates, as those papers show.

Elder Blair's position as set forth in "Counsel," numbers 1 and 2, is that all subordinate ministers should accept the interpretations of their superior officers in preference to accepting their own judgment, or their own understanding of the laws and revelations of God. President Joseph Smith is at the head of the church, that is, in the sense of an organization on the earth. W. W. Blair stands next, being his counselor. No one is over him except Joseph. Now it is made to appear in these articles (which we hope the Saints will reread) that any quorum decision, or any interpretation of the word, or any resolution of General Conference, that conflicts with the views of the Presidency, are dangerous and wrong. Here, then, are abundant grounds for the statement I made. My position is that every man should be honored in the place where God has placed him, but that we should receive nothing in opposition to our convictions of right, or our convictions of what God's word and Spirit enjoin, or approve; that is, when there is a moral principle at stake; otherwise, we should submit to superiors until the "common consent" of the body can be had.

Were these editors competent and qualified for their work? Were they sufficiently well acquainted with church history by thorough and long continued study to understand, interpret, and apply it correctly? Did they occupy such positions and callings in the church as entitled them to the enlightenment and guidance of the Spirit of God in such matters? Were they not far more likely to be right and correct in their work than those who oppose and criticise them, especially when those critics have been neither called of God nor appointed by the church to be censors of the press? Did not these editors, being the presidents of the church, have as deep, as active, as honest, as ardent, and as responsible interests in presenting "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," as those who question and condemn their use of church history in their editorials?

Here, then, is the justification of my statements, and it is not all the evidence by any means.

Elder Blair denies that "the highest type of controversy requires a man to consider his opponent as his equal, in talent, knowledge of the subject matter in dispute, desire for truth," etc. Then he proceeds to say that if they were "equal in talent, knowledge of the subject matter in dispute," etc., there would be no grounds for controversy. I answer there may be grounds for controversy when both parties to it are wrong, and when their talents, knowledge, etc., are equal in degree, but not in kind; however, the question is not whether disputants are equal or not, but, Is it their privilege to use supposed superiority as an argument in debate? In support of my position I quote from Hedge's Rules of Logic as found in the preface to the Braden and Kelley Debate, also the Shinn and Forscutt Debate:—

Rule 2d. The parties shall mutually consider each other as standing on a footing of equality in respect to the subject in debate, each should regard the other as possessing equal talents, knowledge, and desire for truth, with himself, and that it is possible therefore that he may be in the wrong and his adversary in the right.

I am willing to risk my side of this controversy on its own merits; why does Elder Blair struggle so hard to prevent, if possible, a decision being reached in that way?

The following quotation is presented from my article with three words italicised, which is his work not mine. This is taking undue liberty with another's composition, as it may change the meaning of it. Here is the quotation:—

The good brother has repeatedly informed us that it was his good fortune to come in possession of the church history at an early day; how studiously and diligently he has applied himself to its pages, all of which we do not deny. But he goes a little further and undertakes to tell us how little others know about this same history.

The proofs of the first allegation are found in Elder Blair's articles, published in the Herald, within the last ten years, and I herewith submit them in evidence. By direct and indirect statements my position is fully sustained. I will, however, furnish a portion of the evidence. First, I select from a quotation recently made, as follows:—

Were they [the editors of the Herald] sufficiently well acquainted with church history by thorough and long continued study to understand, interpret, and apply it correctly?

In Herald for March 11, 1893, in an article written by Bro. Blair, occurs the following:—

It was our good fortune to procure at an early time, say from 1851 to 1860, and read thoroughly the history of the church as recorded in the Evening and Morning Star, Messenger and Advocate, Elders' Journal, Times and Seasons, Millennial Star, and many miscellaneous works of the church, so that we speak advisedly when we testify to the great importance of that history when seeking a proper understanding of the revelations, commandments, and laws of God given for the government, enlightenment, and edifying the church.

But the brother says this was not boasting, and introduces a long string of evidences to prove that it was not. Who said it was boasting? Not I.

Concerning my second allegation his own quotation from his own article proves that I was right. He states that one fourth of the voting members of the conference "had never read that history," "many of whom never saw one half, if any, of the Times and Seasons and Millennial Stars," and candidly questions "whether thirty men or women in that conference ever read the history in question." Is not this going a little farther and undertaking "to tell us how little others know about that same history?" I think so.

Why did not Bro. Blair attempt to meet my argument on the vote of that conference on the church history resolution? He has carefully avoided this, and why has he done so?

Elder Blair says that:—

President Joseph Smith and myself quoted copiously from the church history when exposing and refuting the errors of Whitmerism, Hedrickism, Brighamism, etc., etc. For this we were commended freely and highly.

I am not in controversy with President Joseph Smith, nor am I finding any fault with his use of church history. I am standing for and with the action of the General Conference; and in doing so, have committed the unpardonable sin of criticising some of the positions and statements of Bro. Blair, who stands on the other side. There is a vast difference between using the history of the church to refute personal statements as to what has been said and done by the church, and using it as an "authority" in the government of the church. But Bro. Blair says if we cannot use the history in "matters affecting the government of the church," then we cannot use it at all; for whenever used and credited, the church is more or less affected thereby. Yes, this is true in a certain sense, but the brother fails to consider that the conference resolution simply and only forbids the use of this history as "an authority in matters affecting the government of the church." Were I to use freely extracts from Wesley's sermons, in my preaching, it would affect the government of the church in a sense, but it would by no means constitute those sermons a proper standard of authority. I heard the brother quote from C. Wesley's hymn, a short time ago, these words:—

Almighty God of love,

Set up th' attracting sign, etc.,

but this does not constitute the hymn book a proper standard of authority to be used in matters affecting the government of the church.

Elder Blair presents the following:—

The editorials containing church history seemed to please many of the readers very much, for in 1887 commendations of the Herald had poured in from correspondents to such a degree that Elder Lambert took alarm and protested twice, using about four columns of space, against their publication. And to this I may add, that during the times President Smith and myself used church history freely in our work in the Herald, its circulation increased from 3,800 copies in January, 1885, to 4,525 in January, 1893, notwithstanding three other papers having been started during that time; viz., Autumn Leaves, Glad Tidings, and Zion's Ensign, either and all of which hindered a greater increase in circulation, notably the Ensign and Autumn Leaves. These are facts by which may be properly estimated the popular esteem in which the Herald was held from 1885 to 1893. To this may be added the fact that the circulation has fallen off over one hundred the last year.

This so-called protest was nothing more than a plain but friendly criticism on a matter which I then thought, and do now think, was, for a time, carried to a great extreme. I was certainly not hasty, for I waited for more than a year in silence. Previously it had not been the practice of the Herald to publish these commendations in such a wholesale manner. My criticism, which appears in the Herald for January 8, 1887, p. 23, is just one paragraph, or about one third of a column. The balance of my letter was devoted to other matter. Had I cared nothing for the good of the cause, or the reputation of the editors, I should not have written as I did. Bro. Blair makes it to appear, or tries to, that I "took alarm" because of the great prosperity of the Herald and the extraordinary reputation being secured by its editors. I do not say the brother intended it, but this is a gross misrepresentation of my purpose and motive. The greater the success of the Herald, and of any and all the servants of God, while they are engaged in doing his work, the better it suits me. I am sorry the brother should so misunderstand me.

In the same Herald containing my letter appeared an editorial reply to myself and others. In this reply I was so misrepresented that I wrote again under the editorial caption of "Commending the Herald," which article appeared in the Herald for February 26, 1887, page 140. It occupies a little less than three columns, altogether about three and one fourth instead of "four." In this reply you will find these words:—

I believe that we should labor together in love, encourage one another in all that is wise and right; that we should be thankful (especially to God), and strive to appreciate the labors of others as we wish others to appreciate our own work. Nor am I opposed to the publication of the words of appreciation from subscribers for and contributions to the Herald. All this is conceded to be proper, and is not in conflict with the objectionable paragraph of my letter. Please read the following statement found in my published letter: "There are some things, or [not "on"] some lines of policy, which require special care lest they be carried 'too far.' When considerable of valuable space is occupied in nearly every number of the Herald, with these commendations, some of which are very extravagant, in my judgment, it is carrying the matter too far. The final effect is bad. It is one of the follies of Babylon which we are required to renounce. 'Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.' (Rev. 18: 4.)"

For a time the Herald continued to use these commendations as it was using them at the time I wrote my criticism; but after this it gradually returned to its former policy, in this respect, and has continued it up to the present time. Did the Herald do this just because Elder Lambert had become "alarmed" and made one of his "captious" efforts? or did it do this because the policy he advocated is the correct one, hence for the general good? It is said that "actions speak louder than words;" but we have some of the words also, which makes the case doubly strong. Here they are:—

The mail from the Herald Office Wednesday, June 15, weighed over 1,400 pounds, and on Wednesday, June 22, over 1,300; good solid work that. Boom the HERALD and Hope. We are not constantly praising the HERALD and its work indirectly, by publishing the good things said of that journal and its work; and our reason for not so doing is this, principally, it smacks of self-praise and we dislike that; and it also takes space, that in our judgment is better devoted to something more interesting to the general reader. We cannot please everybody; and therefore do not diverge very far to the right or left to try to do it.—Herald for July 2, 1892.

We dislike to enter in the columns of the Herald, to any marked degree, the favorable comments and words of praise often sent by subscribers, to us, from time to time, pleasing as encouraging words are, and grateful as we are for them; but to us it has always borne the appearance of self-praise; and hence we have hesitated to insert such praise when it came. Besides this, every few lines of the HERALD taken up praising itself, is so much space that might be filled with more profitable matter; so at least we have thought. And unless we shall change in feeling in regard to it, the readers of the HERALD need not look for much praise of itself in its columns.—Herald for Nov. 25, 1893.

Here is the vindication of my position, full and strong, from the Herald itself. Just a few "good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone me?"—John 10: 32.

Concerning the prosperity of the Herald while Elder Blair was its associate editor, I should have said nothing had he not attempted to find here a vindication of his editorial policy in the use of church history, etc. Nor will I now present but a portion of what I am prepared to present on the other side. There is nothing extraordinary in the addition of 725 new subscribers within a period of ten years, from January, 1885, to January, 1893, when we take into consideration, as we should, the general progress of the work, increase of membership, and the further fact, that for the greater part of one year Bro. R. M. Elvin was hired by the Board and worked for the Herald. The brother did not tell us that from January, 1893, till the April Conference, the Herald lost ground rapidly, and that just before the conference the subscription list was smaller than it has been since that time, notwithstanding the extreme financial depression; but I learn this from the President of the Board of publication. I also subjoin the following from the same source, which is official:—

LAMONI, Iowa, March 8, 1894.

Elder Joseph R. Lambert:—Replying to yours citing me to claim made against Herald management in late article of W. W. Blair, I refer you for answer to the statement of Bro. David Dancer, Business Manager, found in Heralds of December 17 and December 24, 1892, under the caption of "At the Head." The delinquent list and those in arrears more than one year, amount to from 1,500 to 2,000 names. In collecting and placing subscription lists on business basis a number were necessarily dropped from the list; but since March, 1893, the subscription list has gradually increased until the paying subscribers at the present, notwithstanding the close times the past year, number one hundred and twenty-five more than at that time. This is all that is deemed necessary to satisfactorily answer any charge made.

Respectfully yours,

E. L. KELLEY, Pres. Pub. Board.

Elder Blair attempts to reply to my virtual charge of inconsistency in his use of the church history; but he seems to misapprehend the real points at issue. He says he was not one of the revising committee on Tullidge history, but does not tell us who they were. I supposed he was one of them, but not being positive I said, "I believe." Will Bro. Blair tell us that he did not help on the revision of that book? The main point is that it was revised. When first put on sale, the Herald said, "It is E. W. Tullidge's work, thoroughly revised and corrected." Now here is a history "thoroughly revised and corrected," and published by the Reorganized Church; but Elder Blair, in order to show that he is right and, per consequence, the statement of this history wrong, finds it necessary to appeal to the Times and Seasons, published by the Brighamites, and which he has acknowledged to be of "doubtful character!" Also to the Messenger and Advocate, which was the organ of the Rigdonite faction, and in which he finds the testimony of William E. McLellan, as published in 1845! In quoting largely from this paper to support his use of the word "no," in brackets, Elder Blair goes clear outside of his own stated definition of what should be received as authentic church history! The reader will please notice that I did not take a position on the passage referred to. I did not say whether the word "no" should or should not be there. My criticism is this: After condemning that part of the history published by the Brighamites as faulty, changed, corrupted, and therefore of "doubtful character," Elder Blair proceeded to deal out to us this same corrupted history, in large doses; but in doing so found it necessary to change the meaning of some statements by the introduction of words in brackets, thus leaving the Saints to depend upon the opinions of Elder Blair as the standard of authority to be used in matters affecting the church. Should Elder Blair succeed in showing that he was right in the use of the word "no," it would not injure my position in the least, for sometimes he may be right and sometimes wrong. Such a course does, in reality, substitute the wisdom of man for the wisdom of God.

But let me ask: What kind of churches are these "among the Gentiles where there is no presidency established?" Can we have churches where there is no presidency? The Twelve stand next to the First Presidency. They are a "traveling, presiding high council," and wherever they are laboring they preside over everything except the First Presidency. They do this in their apostolic office, but not as district or branch officers. This does not invade anybody's office, any more than President Joseph Smith invades other presiding officers in the church by presiding over the whole body; nor any more than a district president invades all the branch presidents when he presides over the whole district. The Twelve have never claimed that it was their right to invade any other office in the church; but a determined and persistent effort in putting this and other matters before the body very different from what we hold them, has done much to keep up the conflict. But as to the motive which has made this strange course possible, I have nothing to say.

Bro. Blair himself cannot stand by the statements and positions of this "Old man of Israel," though they are found in the same article from which he gets his evidence. After quoting Doctrine and Covenants 104: 11; 99: 6; 104: 31, this man proceeds to claim that there are three distinct kinds of presidency. First, the first presidency which form a quorum, "and can never act separately—though two may form a quorum when circumstances render it impossible to be otherwise." Second, the presidency over the high council of a stake. He says this "has no more relevancy to the presidency over the whole church, than a county judge has to the president of the United States." Third, "the presidency over the quorum of the high-priesthood. It has nothing to do with the First Presidency over the whole church, more than to send out high priests to preside over branches, stakes, etc., in any part of the vineyard, under the direction of the Twelve." This article was published nearly five months after the death of the Seer. But, says Elder Blair, it was indorsed by John Taylor, the editor, who was in a position to know. So, likewise, was the Tullidge history indorsed by President Joseph Smith, when it was put on sale, who was and is the Editor of the Herald. We will put his indorsement against that of John Taylor.

As to the testimony of William E. McLellin, published in Rigdon's Advocate, he was cut off the church in May, 1838. As early as March, 1845, he begins to champion the claims of Elder Rigdon. A bitter fight took place between the Twelve on the one hand, and the Rigdonites on the other. No doubt many, very many, wrong things were said and done on both sides. McLellin took part in this fight and did his best to down the claims of the Twelve. In the early part of 1847 we find this same McLellin publishing the Ensign of Liberty, in Kirtland, Ohio. In this same year he, Whitmer & Co. went to work to build up a church. He received revelation for Whitmer, and Whitmer received revelation for him. Indeed he has been a kind of "wandering star" the greater part of his life. But he always knew. He knew too much to ever come into the Reorganized Church; but his testimony as found in Rigdon's Advocate in March, 1845, happens to be first class. Well, we will let this all go now for what it may be worth.

Doctrine and Covenants 120: 3, is quoted. The cases are not parallel. One refers to the Twelve, the other to the Seventy. One refers to presiding over "meetings" "where no organization exists," the other, to presiding "over all the churches of the Saints among the Gentiles," etc.

Elder Blair quotes the following from my article:—

Paul nowhere instructed the Saints to receive his teachings because of the position he held in the church which enabled him to know what the word meant.

Here are nine words italicized where there is not one as it stands in my article. This is misleading. I presume the brother's intention was to call special attention to that part of my statement; but it is exercising too much liberty with another's composition. After making the quotation Bro. Blair says:—

Wrong again: for Paul in almost every epistle asserts his ministerial "position" and authority thus:—

He then proceeds to furnish texts in supposed proof of his position. Not one of these texts proves anything contrary to what I affirmed. Galatians 1: 8 is quoted:—

But though we or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

Here Paul makes the doctrine taught, the standard of evidence, and not his official position in the church. The idea that if an angel brought any other gospel than the one which Paul taught, he would be accursed, and they would come under condemnation for receiving it, and yet they were required to receive whatever Paul might be inclined to teach, "because of the position he held in the church," is rather absurd. Paul refers to the gospel which he taught as the proper standard by which to try men and angels, because it was the gospel of Christ, and not because he taught it. "Follow me even as I follow Christ," is what the apostle asked them to do:—

I speak as unto wise men, judge ye what I say.

John and Jesus made the doctrine the test, as I plainly showed in my former article. In the above quotation Elder Blair cuts my sentence right in two, presenting only the first half of it, and all th's after accusing me of garbling from his writings. My position is neither fully nor fairly presented without the other part of the sentence. It reads thus:—

But being assured that he had the truth, he commended it to the judgment and consciences of those who also had claim upon God for the "Spirit of truth."

My position on this point is the only safe one, hence the only one that is true; and I can see no reason why any true servant of the true and living God should want to lead in any other way.

Elder Blair has not told us in this "reply," why he condemned in the Saints' Advocate, certain history from the Millennial Star, but in a later Herald article presents the same history as valid and authentic. There are many other things which he has not done, in this reply, which I would like to enumerate were it not for occupying so much space.

The brother makes repeated claims of inspirational direction in this matter, even going so far as to write a commandment to the whole church. (See D. C. 27: 2.) Now it looks to me like this: If we have God, truth, and fact on our side, there is no need of incorporating inspirational claims with our argument. It is an evidence of weakness. More than this, the brother could not stand the application of what he says about hearing and heeding "my servant Joseph," one bit better than the Twelve, if as well; and this is putting it mildly too.

I close by stating that the work which he thinks peculiarly belongs to the High Council and cannot properly be done by the Twelve because it belongs to the regulating of stakes in Zion, was done by the Twelve when they were present, and with the stated approbation of the Seer. In proof of this I call attention to the minutes of a Special Conference, as follows:—

A Special Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held in the city of Nauvoo, August 16, 1841. Elder Brigham Young was unanimously appointed to preside over the conference, and Elias Smith and Lorenzo Barnes were appointed clerks.

After singing by the choir, the conference opened by prayer by the President.

The object of the conference was then presented by the President, who stated that President Joseph Smith (who was then absent on account of the death of his child) had called a Special Conference to transact certain items of business necessary to be done previous to the October conference, such as to select men of experience to send forth into the vineyard, take measures to assist emigrants who may arrive at the places of gathering, and prevent imposition being practiced upon them by unprincipled speculators, etc., etc.; and he hoped that no one could view him and his brethren as aspiring because they had come forward to take part in the proceedings before them; for he could assure the brethren that nothing could be further from his wishes and that of his Quorum than to interpose with church affairs at Zion and her stakes, for he had been in the vineyard so long he had become attached to foreign missions, and nothing could induce him to retire therefrom, and attend the affairs of the church at home but a sense of duty, the requirements of heaven, or the revelations of God, to which he would always submit, be the consequence what it might; and the brethren of the quorum responded, Amen.

A list of names of the elders and cities were read by the President, and a few were selected by nomination and designated as follows:—

Voted that elders, H. G. Sherwood, go to New Orleans, La. A. O. Smoot, go to Charleston, S. C. B. Winchester, go to Salem, Mass. Erastus Snow, go to Salem, Mass. John Murdock, go to Baltimore, Md. Samuel James, go to Washington, D. C. On motion of V. Knight, seconded by Samuel Bent:—

Resolved, that the Quorum of the Twelve select the individuals to go and preach in such places as they may deem expedient, and present the same to the conference, with a view of expediting the business of the day.

The situation of the poor of Nauvoo City, was then presented to the conference by Bishops Knight and Miller, and a collection taken for their benefit.

After singing, conference adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m.

Conference assembled at 2 p. m., and was addressed by Elders L. Barnes and H. G. Sherwood, concerning the spread of the gospel and the building up of the kingdom of God in these last days.

President Joseph Smith now arriving proceeded to state to the conference at considerable length, the object of their present meeting, and in addition to what President Young had stated in the morning, said that the time had come when the Twelve should be called upon to stand in their place next to the First Presidency, and attend to the settling of emigrants and the business of the church at the stakes, and assist to bear off the kingdom victorious to the nations; and as they had been faithful and had borne the burden in the heat of the day that it was right that they should have an opportunity of providing something for themselves and families, and at the same time relieve him so that he might attend to the business of translating.

Motioned, seconded, and carried that the conference approve of the instructions of President Smith, in relation to the Twelve, and that they proceed accordingly to attend to the duties of their office.

Motioned, seconded, and carried unanimously, that every individual who shall hereafter be found trying to influence any emigrants belonging to the church, either to buy of them (except provisions) or sell to them (except the church agents) shall be immediately tried for fellowship and dealt with as offenders, and unless they repent shall be cut off from the church.

President Rigdon then made some appropriate remarks on speculation.

It was moved that the conference accept the doings of the Twelve, in designating certain individuals to certain cities, etc., when President Joseph Smith remarked that the conference had already sanctioned the doings of the Twelve, and it belonged to their office to transact such business with the approbation of the First Presidency, and he would then state what cities should now be built up; viz.: Nauvoo, Zarahemla, Warren, Nashville, and Ramus.

Resolved, That this conference adjourn to the time of the General Conference in October next. Closed with prayer by President Young.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, President,
ELIAS SMITH,
LORENZO BARNES, } Clerks.

—Times and Seasons, vol. 2, pp. 521, 522.

From the above we learn that the President of the Quorum of the Twelve presided over a Special Conference of the Church, although Sidney Rigdon, one of the first Presidency, was present; that the proper place for the Twelve is "next to the First Presidency," both in the stakes of Zion and abroad; that under the First Presidency, they (the Twelve) had charge of the missionary force, excepting, of course, themselves only; that part of the business which they might properly transact, as properly belonging to their office, was the settling of emigrants in the stakes of Zion, etc., etc. The history shows that in harmony with these decisions of Joseph the Seer, the Twelve continued to officiate through the succeeding year.

1. The Twelve were called to stand next to the First Presidency in the Temple building, etc. (See Epistle of the Twelve, Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 600.)

2. The Twelve gave instructions concerning tithing. (Page 627.)

3. The President and Clerk of the Quorum made a call for funds. (Pages 715, 716.)

4. Willard Richards, (Clerk,) in behalf of the Quorum of the Twelve, purchased the Times and Seasons. It then became a church organ with Joseph Smith as its editor. (Page 728.)

5. The Twelve wrote an epistle concerning finances, to the Saints in Europe, in which they say:—

Brethren, we wish not to control you or your means, it is not for our peace or interest; nay, rather, it is a source of labor, trouble, and anxiety to have aught to do with the pecuniary business of the church, which we would gladly avoid, could we do it and the things desired be accomplished, and we stand guiltless where God hath placed us, etc.—Page 736.

This last epistle was written in accordance with revelation through Joseph the Seer. (Page 737.)

All the above references are to the third volume of the Times and Seasons, running from November 15, 1841 to April 1, 1842.

Original Poetry.

EXULTATION.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

The snow king from the north came down
From out the frozen regions,
And marching through the silent town
Upon the meadows bare and brown
Encamped his countless legions.

His tent walls gleaming in the sun
From every hill and hollow,
Give warning of the siege begun;
And from the black clouds, low and dun,
I judge there's more to follow.

But even now the wind has heard,
Despite the winter's warning,
The music of the spring that stirred
Our souls to sing as sings the bird
In summer's brightest morning.

And if perchance death some day come,
From out the frozen regions,
And marching through our sad hearts dumb,
With hollow step and muffled drum
Encamps his silent legions,

Ah! even then we know that soon
The days of death are numbered;
The spring of life, the morn, the noon,
The warm sun of a day in June
Awakes the soul that slumbered.

Ah! vainly shrieks the hollow blast,
And sounds his fateful warning,
Because we hear as he goes past
A voice that says, "There comes at last Joy's hoped-for, prayed-for morning."

Great Judge of men, thy greatest gift,
We crave that of discerning
Those truths that shall our spirits lift
Unto thy sure returning.

A million hearts are lifted high
And countless eyes are turning,
To draw pure wisdom from the sky
Whose fountains never shall run dry,
As have the schools of learning.

O, raise your hearts, O, sing aloud;
Push back the winter hoary!
O, cast aside the pall, the shroud,
And gather, gather like a cloud,
To meet the Son of Glory!

COUNCIL.

At last April session of conference there was a meeting for counsel between members of the Presidency, the Twelve, and Quorum of High Priests, held at Bro. David Dancer's house. At the close of this council, there was an agreement that each of the quorums would severally and collectively prepare a paper, each quorum for itself; and that these papers should be placed before a similar council to be held at the session of April, 1894, for consideration and examination, for purpose of reaching an agreement upon certain duties of church officers then considered.

It is thought that this council will require the presence of the members of the quorums named, at the coming April session to perfect the agreement; or so many of those members as may find it practicable to come to conference.

We have not at present writing (March 19) any matters of great importance, on appeal, to lay before the High Council; and therefore do not for that purpose call the council together.

JOSEPH SMITH,

For the Presidency.

NOTICES.

Let the tent committee of the Philadelphia district take notice that the following names constitute said committee: H. H. Bacon, John Zimmerman, Martha Christy, Mame Copeland, Sallie Lewis, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Joseph R. Nelson, of Nottingham, Pennsylvania; Mollie Matthews, New Park, Pennsylvania; J. V. Carter, Banks, Maryland; Geo. Potts, Annie Box, Thomas Lester, of Brooklyn, New York.

The said committee elected H. H. Bacon clerk; address, 2146 Ridge avenue, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; John Zimmerman treasurer; address, 520 Summerset street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. As the members of this committee collect money for the said purpose they should send it direct to the treasurer, John Zimmerman, 520 Summerset street, Philadelphia, who will receipt them for the same. Philadelphia has raised about $12; New Park, Pennsylvania, $17. As we love this cause (latter-day work) let each one make an extra effort to raise the necessary amount to purchase a tent by the first of May. Let each one take notice and work as you never have in the past for the object in view. Let each one of this committee report to the clerk and treasurer by April 25 so they may be able to report to the chairman; then we will know just what we can do. Believing success will attend our effort if we will work, I remain, yours in gospel bonds,

A. H. PARSONS, Chairman.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

BANGKOK, March 17.—Phrayot, the Siamese Mandarin charged with the murder of the French Inspector, Grosgrin, and his Annamese escort, has been acquitted on all the charges made against him. The decision is likely to lead to complications, as the murder of Inspector Grosgrin was one of the incidents which led to the Franco-Siamese imbroglio. France refuses to evacuate Chantabon until the culprits are brought to justice.

SHANGHAI, March 17.—The first petroleum tank steamer has arrived here, but the custom-house authorities will not allow the landing of petroleum in bulk. The British, Russian, and German Consuls have been instructed to support the landing of the petroleum, which is fixed for March 20. Trouble is expected.

PARIS, March 17.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day voted the creation of a special ministry of the colonies. The Senate postponed a vote of credit for it in spite of the appeal of Premier Casimir-Perier, who declared the Cabinet would not remain in power without a vote of confidence. Premier Casimir-Perier has ordered a special meeting of the Senate for Monday.

EDINBURG, March 17.—Lord Rosebery arrived here at 6:30 p. m. to make his expected address to the delegations from the Liberal associations from all parts of Scotland. The Premier was received at the railroad station by the Liberal committees, and drove to the Corn Exchange in an open carriage, being heartily cheered by the crowds gathered along the route between that building and the railroad station.

The Corn Exchange, which is capable of holding 5,000 people, was packed an hour previous to the arrival. The interval was occupied by singing political songs in which the Premier was described as the "Scottish Grand Young Man."

Referring to his famous House of Lords speech, Lord Rosebery said that on the first night of the session "no man in my position could have avoided the subject of home rule." "I thought I had dealt with it in absolute frankness and absolute perspicuity" he resumed. "My critics admit that, but unfortunately the interpretation they place upon my words is not that which I put upon them myself. What I said was that if we wanted to carry home rule we must carry conviction to the heart of England; and by those words I stand. They were a truism, a platitude in the sense I uttered them. But, in the sense in which they have been interpreted, they bear a meaning which as a Scotchman I should be the first to repudiate."

There was one curious circumstance in connection with this incident, continued Lord Rosebery; he did not for a moment believe that the Irish or Liberal parties misinterpreted his remarks; therefore he sagaciously concluded that the misinterpretation emanated from the Unionist party.

He attached the greatest importance to the close and intimate union of the Irish and Liberal parties and believed it was a real union. The speaker made no secret of the fact that he did not approach the Irish question on historical or sentimental grounds; he approached it as a great question of policy which must be dealt with as an imperial question and which concerned other populations as much as Ireland. He believed that when they received the fast-ripening demand for Scotch home rule, if he was a Minister he would not stand in the breach to oppose it, and if he was not a Minister he hoped as a man to be in the storming party.

The remainder of Lord Rosebery's speech was devoted to the support of Liberal measures, including the Welsh and Scotch disestablishment propositions.

In conclusion Lord Rosebery said the recent resolution of the House of Commons showed how strong was the feeling against the House of Lords. This question, however, would only be dealt with on the backing, summons, and inspiration of a great popular force. Without that the government was absolutely impotent. It awaited the people's voice, and when it had it it would be prepared to take the measurement thus inspired. But while the House of Commons talked of ending or mending the House of Lords the House of Commons might look to its own mending by revising the procedure of defeat by obstructions.

After the meeting had passed a resolution of confidence in the government the large audience dispersed with loud cheers.

John Dillon, M. P., speaking at a St. Patrick's day celebration in this city, said in brief: "I have just heard Lord Rosebery speak upon the home rule question, and in regard to the substance in that speech I congratulate Scotland upon the position occupied by her illustrious son. More importance will be attached to that speech than to any other delivered within the last fifteen years. In Lord Rosebery Ireland has an honest and honorable champion."

LONGVIEW, Tex., March 18.—A destructive storm passed over this place this morning. Hailstones fell weighing fourteen to eighteen ounces. Chickens and turkeys roosting in trees were killed, while ducks, geese, and hogs were pelted to death.

At Lansing switch the cyclone struck the house of John Cains, occupied by a family of negroes. The house was destroyed and six persons were killed, three mortally wounded, and five seriously hurt. Old man Alex. Lester was found entirely nude, fifty yards from the house, dead. The list of wounded and of houses destroyed is large.

At Emery, the county seat of Rains county, the entire western portion of the town was ruined on Saturday evening. Miss Easter Alexander, Eras Henry, George Walker, and the four year old son of Henry Murray, colored, are the known dead. Three unidentified bodies were found north of Emery to-day. The postoffice was used as a hospital and morgue.

LONDON, March 18.—An impressive demonstration to protest against the action of the House of Lords in rejecting the employers' liability bill was held to-day in Hyde Park. It is estimated that 80,000 persons were in attendance. There were twelve platforms in the park from which the speakers addressed the throng.

Shortly before three o'clock enormous processions from all parts of the city began to arrive in the park. Among those who took part in the processions were representatives from every trade union in London. The chief speakers were Messrs. Burns, Woods, Arch, and Cremer, all of whom are labor members of the House of Commons.

Resolutions were read from all the platforms calling upon the government to introduce again the employers' liability bill immediately upon the reassembling of the House of Commons, and also demanding that the government take steps to bring about the entire abolition of the House of Lords. At the sound of a bugle the resolutions were adopted simultaneously at all the platforms, the crowds signifying their approval by a mighty shout.

There was no trouble of any kind reported, and after the adoption of the resolutions the crowds quietly dispersed.

GUATEMALA, March 18.—There is much uneasiness here. President Barrios' house is closely guarded, and Barrios himself never appears in public without escort. The military is kept constantly in motion and there are frequent changes of commanders. The antipathy to Americans increases. The feeling is especially manifested towards Mrs. Barrios, who is an American. She is a woman of great ability and cultivation. The opposition charges her with being unduly ambitious, but the unprejudiced people believe her only ambition is to elevate the masses of the people and liberalize existing institutions. The reactionary party would like to bring about Barrios' downfall.

THE HAGUE, March 18.—The Second Chamber has dissolved on account of the defeat of the government's electoral bill. There is no change in the Cabinet except that the Minister of Foreign Affairs, G. van Tienhoven, has resigned.

LONDON, March 18.—The Commercial Cable company announces that it is advised the new direct communication between Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso will be opened March 19.

The serious condition of affairs at Denver, Colorado, reported last week, was improved because of trouble among the miners at Cripple Creek, Colorado, who struck for an eight hour day and proceeded to arm themselves to carry their point, rendering it necessary for Governor Waite to order the militia from Denver to the mines. After some acts of violence the situation among the miners became more quiet and civic authorities are now in control.

Bear Lake, Michigan, was inundated and damaged by a cloudburst on the 19th inst. No lives were lost.

Later reports from Longview, Texas, increase the death list and extent of damage done by the late cyclone.

The British Government has purchased for $1,000,000 from the Duke of Bedford five and a half acres of ground adjoining the British Museum for the purpose of extending that institution.

Great Britain has explained to the United States Government that the landing of marines at Bluefields, Nicaragua, was solely for the protection of British interests.

The Belgian ministry has resigned.

Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, died at Turin, Italy, March 20, in his ninety-second year.

MADRID, March 20.—Advices received here from Mindanao, capital of the island of that name, in the Malay Archipelago, show that a large body of Mohammedan natives made an attack on the Spaniards on the Island of Pantar. In the fighting that ensued one Spaniard was killed and many wounded. The Spaniards inflicted severe losses upon the natives, 200 of them being killed.

BERLIN, March 20.—The Russo-German commercial treaty ratifications were exchanged to-day at the Foreign Office between Baron Marshall von Bieberstein, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador.

VIENNA, March 20.—All the royal Italian palaces and domains outside of Rome, with the exception of the palaces at Turin, Venice, Florence, Naples, and Palermo and a few hunting grounds, will be sold. King Humbert desires to reduce his civil list.

BUFFALO, Wyo., March 21.—The storm in this section has assumed the proportions of one of the worst blizzards in the history of this State. It is feared that the ranges will be covered with cattle succumbing to the exposure of the blizzard, and the sheep owners are in despair. Telegraph wires have been useless for hours. A cowboy belonging to a ranch eleven miles north of Douglas rode into that town last night and reported having been separated from a companion in the blizzard, and the horse of the other man was exhausted. The property loss will be great.

BUENOS AYRES, March 21.—A dispatch received here to-day from Rio Janeiro says it is rumored that Peixoto intends to establish a dictatorship; that Admiral De Mello has captured off Panagua a vessel from Buenos Ayres with a cargo of arms intended for Peixoto, and that the State of Parana proposes to raise a loan to aid the revolution.

TURIN, March 20.—Louis Kossuth died at 10:55 o'clock this evening. His end was extremely painful. He showed signs of consciousness until the last. He expired in the arms of his son and died pressing the hand of the Hungarian Deputy Karolyi. The remains, with those of his wife and daughter, who were buried in England, will be taken to Hungary.

LONDON, March 21.—A dispatch to the Standard from Buda-Pesth says that the Hungarian Government and the members of the National party in the Diet have arrived at an agreement regarding the honors that will be shown Louis Kossuth now that he is dead. By reaching this agreement the fall of the ministry is averted.

BUDA-PESTH, March 21.—The greatest grief is expressed here at the death of Kossuth. Mourning emblems are being displayed on all sides and every newspaper in the two cities appeared to-day with black borders. Mourning flags are flying on many houses and the city is in black with crêpe and emblems of sorrow. The Lower House of the Hungarian Diet, which had adjourned, has been summoned to meet in special session Friday next in order to take action upon Kossuth's death.

Commander Coxe's army of unemployed, organized with a view to marching to Washington for the purpose of demanding from Congress the issue of $5,000,000 in scrip to be paid as wages for national road improvement, is recruiting at Massillon, Ohio. Delegations from California and other sections are en route to the rendezvous. Governor Matthews of Indiana says that if necessary he will use the State Militia to prevent the army from invading or crossing the State.

TUCSON, Ari., March 22.—The industrial army, 700 strong, arrived here yesterday and left this evening. The men were given all they wanted to eat by the city. They are orderly, and the reports to the effect that they have been pilfering at different points along the road in Arizona are believed here to be without foundation.

WINAMAC, Ind., March 22.—Coxey's movement is finding favor here, and a company has been organized to join the army. It is called the "Pink Mink Marshmallows."

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 22.—Gov. Pattison to-night received a telegram from W. Astor Evans of Hazelton demanding 2,400 tents for those who propose to join Coxey's march. The telegram was signed by W. Astor Evans as "Lieutenant of the Army of Commonweal." The Governor paid no attention to it.

Brazilian insurgents are said to still be active in remote portions of Brazil. Admiral Mello is reported to have captured extensive government supplies. The insurgent ships Aquidaban and Republica are cruising off Montevideo.

New York City is to try the underground trolley system of electric railway on some of its lines of street travel.

Representative Morse (Mass.) introduced in the House to-day a bill to punish seduction in the District of Columbia. He says the Pollard-Breckinridge suit has developed the fact that there was no law in the District on the subject.

LARAMIE, Wyo., March 23.—Robert Baker, a sheep-herder, was found frozen to death on the plains five miles from this place to-day. Baker and a man named Small were in charge of 3,000 sheep. Last night the storm became so severe they decided to abandon the sheep and endeavor to reach town. Small reached the railroad and followed it in. His hands and feet were badly frozed.

Massillon, Ohio, advices of the 23d report that the forces under "Jacob Sechler Coxey, Commander in Chief and Constructive Statesman," is receiving bogus checks and drafts for large sums. The advance guard of the "army of the commonweal" is hopeful. Large additions to the forces are promised from the West and from points along the line of march.

LONDON, March 23.—Dr. Nettleship, the oculist, believes an operation will fully restore Mr. Gladstone's normal powers of vision.

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, March 23.—A delegation of Mormons has arrived in the Degolado district, situated in the northern part of this State, and is making the preliminary arrangements to establish there another colony of several thousand polygamous Mormons. The new settlers will come from Salt Lake and other parts of Utah. The concession which the Mormon leaders have obtained from the government is a liberal one and embraces 2,745,600 acres of rich agricultural lands in one body. If the plans now under way are completed in time there will be a great exodus of Mormons from the United States to Mexico this fall.

It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

BREATHING MOVEMENTS AS A CURE.

Century Magazine, New York, August.

BREATHING being such a common, and apparently such a normal, process, it seems strange that it should have any share in the production of disease, and that anyone should advise people how to perform this function properly. Yet there is sufficient proof to show that imperfect breathing or lack of knowledge how fully to expand the chest and lungs is a most fruitful source of disease.

The lungs are conical in form, and are inclosed in a beehive-shaped cavity called the chest. At the summit of the chest the lungs are inclosed in a long casement (the ribs), which is more or less rigid, while at the base they are free and unrestricted in their movements. It must not be overlooked, however, that the bony wall of the chest is sufficiently yielding to adapt itself to almost any size of the lungs, no matter whether large or small. This is well shown in the chests of those who, like singers or gymnasts, expand their lungs by systematic training, or in those whose lungs are augmented by breathing the attenuated atmosphere of elevated regions. On the other hand, disuse of parts of the lungs results in flatness of the chest, while disease of these organs is liable to be followed by a more pronounced depression and deformity of the chest walls. The arrangement of the air-tubes also plays an important part in the production of diseases of the lungs. These are divided in such a way as to conduct the air principally downward toward the base of the lungs, and therefore the lower part of the chest is filled first with air, and the upper part last or not at all, excepting during a full inspiration. This partial filling of the lungs is also due to another cause. We possess one-fourth more breathing space in our lungs than is actually needed to carry on the processes of life. This facilitates our adaptation to conditions of varied atmospheric pressure, and meets such exigencies as impairment of a portion of the lungs, but under ordinary conditions, near the sea-level, this lavish supply of lung-surface becomes a source of great danger. The least readily inflated part of the lungs, the apex, has no exercise, and consequently becomes weaker. The savage has a larger lung-surface than civilized man, and is comparatively free from pulmonary affections; but as soon as he is confined to reservations, his idle life renders him liable to this disease.

Notwithstanding the greater flexibility of the lower part of the lungs it is a well-known fact that the breathing movements of the civilized female differ markedly from those of the male. She breathes chiefly with the upper, and he with the lower part of the lungs. The former is called the costal, the latter the abdominal type of breathing. By some authorities the prevalence of the costal type among women was attributed to tight lacing while others regard it as distinctive simply of the female structure. I found, however, by observation of the respiratory movements of eighty-one Indian and mixed-breed girls at the Lincoln Institution, Philadelphia, that seventy-five showed a decidedly abdominal type of breathing, while the six who showed a divergence from the type were either half or three fourths white. I think, then, it is obvious, that, so far as the Indian is concerned, the abdominal is the original type of respiration in both male and female, and that the costal type of the civilized woman has been developed by abdominal constriction. Now this suggests the very interesting inquiry whether civilized woman with the costal type of breathing, that is with the apex of her lungs in constant exercise is as liable to pulmonary disease as civilized man whose lungs are for the most part inactive in their upper portion or imperfectly exercised. It is popularly supposed that females are most liable to consumption; but from a large mass of statistics pertaining to all the chief cities of Europe and America. I found that, with very few exceptions, the male is far more liable to this disease than the female sex.

Now the question arises: Does the expansion of the apex of the chest which is brought about through the influence of dress incidentally protect the female against the ravages of consumption, or is there a causal connection between the two? Whichever may be true their association is so intimate and so constant, that if they do not stand together as cause and effect, they point out to us that the expansion of the apex of the lung is one of the important means of averting pulmonary consumption.

I think it is, hence, evident that proper development and expansion of the lungs, by means of well-regulated breathing, must be regarded as of the greatest value in the prevention and in the treatment of the inactive stages of pulmonary consumption. The lung-apex is habitually inactive in those who have a tendency to consumption, and a highly rarefied atmosphere affords relief, not because of its greater purity, but by its calling every part of the lung into active exercise to furnish the necessary amount of oxygen. Much, too, may be achieved in this direction by artificial measures to promote the proper inflation of the chest, and arouse the activity of that portion of the lungs which naturally tends to become idle. Many and various modes of exercise are recommended, but, as a rule, it may be said that the more simple the method, the more effective and practical will be the results which flow from it.

The breathing of compressed and rarefied air is attracting much attention at the present time in connection with the prevention and treatment of pulmonary consumption, and is another method whereby the chest capacity can be decidedly improved. Waldenburg, to whom we owe this system of chest-ventilation, states that in this way from fifty to two hundred and fifty cubic inches more air can be inhaled than during ordinary breathing.—Condensed for Literary Digest.

EVOLUTION, SUBJECT TO LAW.

The trend of evolution, says H. F. Osborn (American Journal of Science, December), is not the happy resultant of many trials, but is heralded in structures of the same form all the world over and age after age by similar minute changes advancing from inutility to utility. There is an absolutely definite and lawful progress. The infinite number of contemporaneous developments of degenerating and stationary characters preclude fortuity. Some law introduces and regulates each variation. These variations seem to be potential in the race, waiting only for the proper stimuli to appear; and the author inclines to think that these stimuli are due to inheritance.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
 TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

R. S. SALYARDS - - ASSISTANT EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 4, 1894.

BRO. F. M. SLOVER wrote from Bungay, Illinois, March 26, that he had closed a protracted effort at that place, baptizing seven; which gives thirteen there; seventeen baptized by Bro. Slover since December 24, 1893.

* *

Bro. M. H. Forscutt arrived at San Francisco, March 13, with his health improved by the sea voyage from Tahiti. He writes that he received a hearty California welcome; and will as soon as recuperated begin missionary work in connection with the missionaries on the slope.

Bro. Forscutt's address will be No. 2080 Market street, San Francisco, California.

From a clipping taken from the Los Angeles, California, Times, of March 19, sent us by Bro. R. M. Dungan, of Santa Ana, we learn that Benjamin F. Grouard, who with Charles W. Wandell, — Lincoln and Addison Pratt, opened the Society Islands mission in the days of Joseph the Seer, was dead; having fallen by paralysis, while standing in his dooryard talking with his daughter, Mrs. Harry Stafford, who was visiting at his home. Of Elder Grouard the dispatch to the Times says:—

Mr. Grouard was a man of varied experience in life, having left his home when but fourteen years of age and going to sea. Later he visited the South Sea Islands, where, with the assistance of the natives, he built a vessel which he commanded for several years in the southern waters. He has traveled around the world several times and has often spoken of having helped construct the boiler that was placed in the first ironclad vessel ever turned out by the United States. Mr. Grouard was born in Portsmouth, N. H., January 3, 1819. He came to California in 1852 and settled in the gold fields of Northern California. Yet in the '50's he moved to Los Angeles, where he resided until he moved to the Santa Ana Valley fifteen years ago. He died at the ripe old age of 75 years, leaving one son and four daughters.

The links connecting the dispensation from 1820 to 1844, to the one under the Reorganized Church, are fast breaking and passing away. This man, B. F. Grouard, with his companions in ministry, did a good work in those far off islands, the influences of which remain. Bro. D. S. Mills used to have hopes that Elder Grouard would in due time return to his former faith; but Bro. Heman C. Smith, who visited him once, had no such hope, for what seemed to him to be good reasons. We believe that Bro. Mills' confidence in his hope arose from the consideration that in one conversation had with Elder Grouard, the latter expressed the idea that he had no wish to undo the work he did among the Islanders; he had taken interest and pleasure in the work at the time; and, though changed in belief, he preferred having it as it was to be judged hereafter. He had lived past the allotted threescore and ten, and was taken by the reaper who gathers all.

Bro J. S. Lee closed his labors in Utah, for the season and reached his home at Carbon, Wyoming, to gather renewed sinews; like Antæus of old, who, when overthrown in battle, and felled to the ground, was revived and renewed his strength by contact with the earth. Bro. Lee held a discussion with Elder James J. Chandler, of the Utah Church, at Willard, above Ogden, before closing his efforts there. Bro. R. J. Anthony expresses the opinion that the work of Bro. Lee has been effective for good.

We are flooded with a great number of letters asking questions, to which answers in the HERALD are requested; which questions will have to remain unanswered to a time yet future, more or less indefinite, because we have not time to spend in so replying. We make no promises in regard to replying to these questions, either now or at any other time, for obvious reasons.

Many of these questions are upon matters affecting church government, in personal and local cases, in which it would be improper for the editor to decide; also for obvious reasons. We see no reasons why contending parties should refer their questions of difference to the HERALD editor, rather than to the officers in charge, branch, district, or missionary. Such course may be productive of conflict between local authorities in charge, and the editor, a conflict not necessary, nor conducive to unity of ruling and action.

The opinion of the editor upon a one-sided statement of question from an interested person, is liable to be one-sided, and hence objectionable; and may be erroneous, as a consideration of all the circumstances connected with the cases referred to in the questions may show.

Again, answers to questions in HERALD by the editor are sometimes cited by the questioners to refute and condemn the opinions of opponents; and not always in the best of feeling, if we are to credit the reports we sometimes hear of them.

HEROISM.

WE sometimes find our own thoughts more forcibly and eloquently expressed in the words of another than it would be in our power to express them. We have written and spoken upon the subject of heroism, and heroic action, and often been moved to tears of appreciation at the witnessing, or reading of acts of patient forbearance and the silent martyrdom of the cruelty in things suffered, by men and women, of whom the world took no recognition, or account as heroes, or heroines; but we have never yet seen a more telling description of what it is to be heroic than is given in the following; which we know will be read with delight by many if not all the Herald readers.

DAILY HEROISM.

The article that passes current as heroism, according to the weights and measures of the world, is a rare, signal, and exceptional thing, conspicuous mainly, as angel visits are, by their far-betweenness. But the eyes above us that look through dress and shams judge differently. In their view that is heroism which, minted in the everyday fires of common life, rings on the counter of daily experience with the gleam of genuine courage and patience. A soldier flings himself down on a bed of waiting bayonets, and dies with a cry of patriotism on his lips. It is the one act of his life that stands up lonely and awful like a storm-washed rock on a level coast. Men write him down as a hero. And if it be sincerely and truly done so he is. For even in such a singular case the world's acclaim waits for the sincerity of the act. But at home that soldier's mother, through well-nigh endless days and nights, keeps her hands folded, how meekly, over her waiting heart. And we who call the momentary passion great, what crowns have we for the year-long patience?

Three elements enter into heroism. They are courage, patience, and opportunity. We often fancy ourselves possessed of the first two and lacking in the last, when in fact we have the chances standing thick around us, and lack either the courage to do, or the patience to wait and suffer. Opportunities for dying grandly, it is true, come but rarely. But every morning light brings its possibilities of grand living. We have wrongly associated heroism with battles and shipwrecks of death. Great conjunctions of circumstances come but rarely. Like conjunctions of tide waves they may lift to great elevation, but the sailor who should wait for them would be a fool. Every day brings tides enough to send us on some great errand.

They, then, who wait for great occasions may see them only as Crusoe saw sails at sea—all beyond hail, and going by. Occasions become great, somewhat as words do, by the thoughts we put into them. The Mayflower is a historic vessel. Yet could she compare with any one of a thousand that daily fleck the Atlantic? She was a very common craft but she carried the seeds of a nation. So any day, any occasion that is the vehicle of great purposes or deeds is a great day, a great occasion.

Heroism scorns opportunities made to hand. It has the supreme art of making them. It can take the commonest hour that ever the sun flung down to us, and make it as signal as the hour of death. It can take the commonest road of daily travel, and set it with monuments as brilliant as the tablets of Westminster Abbey. Therefore, no man who would lift his life from the commonplace to the heroic need wait on the caprice of events. He need not tarry for the play of chance, for heroism plays with loaded dice.

Any day is the good man's opportunity. Every morning is that sunlit coast where ships wait idly with canvas spread that will sail eternal seas.

But courage, patience—whence shall they come? It is not the universe that conditions heroic conduct. It is only our own selves. And if in ourselves that is cowardice which should be courage, and that is impulse which should be patience, how then? Must noble conduct be impossible?

If the opportunities of heroism come, as in novels, but once in a lifetime, then, indeed, there would be no school in which to learn. But if it be true that every day is our school-house, then conduct may be learned, and the elements in which we are deficient may, by continual exercise, grow into strength. Courage, so feeble it acts like cowardice, may be put to school, and experience if every day and every event be the teachers, may at last be learned. We cannot, by repeated experiment and endeavor, learn to die grandly. It is just one rush of darkness. But living is an art that may be learned, and conduct is a lesson that may be learned.

So he will be a hero at last who puts to daily practice those elements that in their combination make a noble life. Courage to do right will strengthen by exercise. Patience will learn the lesson that is often repeated. And as daily come the occasions for unselfish doing and meek enduring, so daily fly the threads that at last will weave for us the robe of a noble life.

Are there few heroes in the world? Few who live under the sovereignty of courage and patience? Then let it be said it is not because Providence holds away from us the chances of heroic living, nor because the grace of God is withheld from those who strive for the mastery. Heroism is not genius. It is only living duty. Therefore it may be learned. It does not descend on us, like our names, an inheritance, in the choosing of which we have no part. It comes to us as physical strength comes, through the exercise of gifts which the Lord has given us all. "Grow in grace" means growth in courage and humility and patience. It means increase of all elements that enter into a high and grand life. If we are poltroons at the end of life's disciplines, we may not charge it to coy and inaccessible opportunities, but rather to indolence and selfishness. Heroism is the flower of manhood. To live grandly in whatever lowly place is possible to us all. Like Little Dorrit, to whom the Marshalsea was field enough for nobility of nature, so into any life the angels of courage and faith may come and transfigure it by their presence.—Interior.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

THE Literary Digest for February, gives the salient points of an article in The Engineering Magazine for the same month, by Alfred H. Peters. The writer of the article joins issue with some who hold that the existence of capital is the chief obstacle to the advancement of the working man; he writes thus:—

He contends, on the contrary, that the only office that capital performs is to increase human activity and productiveness. It is easy, he says, to prove that capital is the least of the forces against which labor has to contend. It is not capital, but forces infinitely more powerful that take advantage of labor: forces that take advantage of capital no less than of labor—the forces of Intellect and of Will. Suppose, he argues, that all capital, all money, all wealth were to be turned into ashes or destroyed, what would be the result? Simply that industrial society would reorganize itself afresh on the same general lines, and give its highest rewards to the men of highest ability, and the lowest to those who could contribute only muscular force to the creation of fresh capital. Intellect and Will would assert their supremacy; more especially, Will, for intellect is oftentimes spendthrift, but Will, when bent only on fortune, lives only in the future, and is as merciless to others as to itself. Little by little, with indefatigable resolution and self-denial, would this hard but conquering force make itself a social power. Out of this genius for accumulation, capital is for the most part created, and no laws, no institutions avail against it. He who lives for the future, will survive; and he who lives only for the present, shall perish. Ninety-nine hundredths of the intellect and will, as well as of the muscle that come into the world, come into it with no other capital. Wherever there is capital, there will be found the greatest number of those desiring to use capital, and wherever capital finds most employment, there also will labor be found.

Labor, continues our author, is a tax paid either by ignorance to intelligence, or by self-indulgence to self-restraint. Consider, he says, the constant exactions and degradations to which, from both these forces, capital is obliged to submit—the thousand devices whereby astuteness or intellect frightens or befools or forces capital into gratifying its desires. Consider, also, the habitual toil and frugality whereby self-restraint or will constantly increases the stock of capital. Labor cannot be long taxed to its destruction, nor to a point whereby it ceases to be productive, but capital is often forced to risk annihilation in order to be productive. Labor does often lose much through the devices of intellect; but capital, through the same devices, often loses all. Moreover, the men who are the greatest users of capital, the men in whom superior intellect and will are united, come from labor's own ranks. Capital is thus forever changing hands. The present holders are men whose fathers or grandfathers accumulated it; and who are themselves perhaps unable to hold it against the raids of superior intellect and will. If labor would escape subjection to these master faculties, and at the same time preserve its freedom, it must acquire them itself. And labor is acquiring these faculties, and has advanced just far enough to be conscious of its strength; then finding that some force is operating against it, it charges the offence upon capital, which is the mere instrument of the offending powers.

We give the article without comment.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

FROM a letter to Bro. G. T. Griffiths from Sr. Annie Edwards, dated Llanelly, South Wales, March 3, we learn that the Llanelly sisters have organized a mite society for the purpose of assisting to pay off the amount due on their chapel. The young people's society is flourishing. Both these movements are aiding the cause at Llanelly. The branch is in a prosperous condition. We bid the Welsh sisters and brethren Godspeed in the good cause. Their progress is ours and ours is theirs.

Conference arrivals during the week of the 25th inst. include Bro. Joseph Luff, Bro. and Sr. G. H. Hilliard and two sons, and Bro. and Sr. D. M. Rudd.

Brn. D. M. Rudd and F. A. Smith are preaching at Davis City, Iowa, continuing the effort begun by Bro. I. N. Roberts.

With this issue of the HERALD its readers are furnished the ministerial reports of those appointed by the last General Conference, also a summary of the Bishop's annual report; this by action of last conference which provided for the publication of said reports before the conference assembled. The general spirit of the reports is more than encouraging—it is inspiring. Increased power in preaching and other ministrations, waning prejudice, and opening doors for the reception of the word, speak, with certainty, of the brightening prospects before the church. Better opportunities for reaching the people in most of the fields could not reasonably be expected.

Conference arrivals of Saturday the 31st ult. include Brn. F. M. Sheehy, M. H. Bond, D. E. Tucker, F. J. Chatburn, Brn. Case of Western Iowa, and Srs. Wilcox, Staples, and Chase, of Massachusetts, and Srs. Young and Gaylord of Western Iowa.

Bro. J. H. Lake addressed the Lamoni Saints in the morning and Bro. G. H. Hilliard in the evening of Sunday the 1st inst.

Beginning with next issue the HERALD will contain a brief report of the proceedings of Zion's Religio-Literary Society, the Sunday School Convention, General Conference, and the mothers' meetings, together with such other conference items as may prove of interest to its readers.

The Herald columns are open to announcements of meetings and reports of proceedings of all organizations connected with church work. It expects to supply every legitimate want of the Saints in this respect. It is the servant of the people of God and is at their disposal. It only asks that unnecessary details be omitted from notices, reports, etc., that as much information as possible may be compacted in its columns. Let us know the wants of the various organizations for good and the HERALD in its line of work will supply them so far as possible.

Mr. John F. McLaughlin writes from Panora, Guthrie county, Iowa, earnestly asking prayer in behalf of his afflicted father and sister. He is a friend to the cause, and believes the faith, because of reading the printed word. He invites elders to visit him at Pandora and preach.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

CARD from Bro. J. W. Wight, dated Gilroy, California, March 20:—

Please say to the Australian Saints and friends that we landed in San Francisco on the 15th inst., after a fairly smooth voyage. Sr. Wight proved a poor sailor. We are now enjoying the hospitality of the California Saints, and the scenery. Expect to reach Lamoni the 3d prox.

Bro. W. W. Wetherbee, of Macomb, Illinois, March 25:—

I am doing all I can in upholding the cause whenever opportunity offers. I am distributing Heralds and sermons in Macomb and Clayton, where I make my home with my children, and am trying to get an opening for an elder to come here and preach. There are a few interested. I am praying that the Lord may be with you in conference and that to bless. I intend to do all the good I can for the cause while here, for I love this work; I know it is of God.

BRO. W. E. Messenger, of Prescott, Iowa, sends us the following clipping from the Chicago Record of March 27. It may be of value as evidence of the Hebrew origin and customs of some of the Book of Mormon people:—

Pope Leo XIII. has received lately a curious and valuable gift from the government of the United States of Colombia. It consists of three objects in gold, the intrinsic and material value of which is little when compared to their scientific and historic value. These objects are three plaques of massive and fine gold, which must have served as a breast covering for some Indian cacique. They have almost the form and dimensions of the ornaments carried upon the breasts of the Hebrew pontiffs and the Assyrian high priests. They were discovered in a "guaca" or Indian cemetery in the village of Macheta, about fifty miles from Bogota.

CARDINAL VAUGHAN WASHES FEET.

Cardinal Vaughan improved the opportunity of Holy Thursday to introduce in London a ceremony which is more or less known on the continent, but was never seen in England before, at least since the Reformation—that of the public washing of feet. The rite was varied from continental usage in that he washed not old men, but young boys robed in long white serge gowns.

The Cardinal performed the function, attended by two priests, with ewers and towels, and two acolytes, with tall lighted candles. He gave each boy a new half dollar after his feet had been washed. Bishop Butt of Southwark had a similar ceremony across the Thames. These performances, which Manning would never have permitted, are felt to be only the precursors of radical changes toward ornate, decorative ecclesiasticism which the English Church will undergo.

Congregationalism has its greatest strength in Massachusetts, where it has 579 churches. Its total ministerial strength is 5,003; number of churches, 5,140; members, 542,725. Valuation of all church property, $43,335,437.

The Presbyterian Church is agitating the establishment of a "temperance Sabbath." The third Sabbath in September is suggested.

The area of the earth is 197,000,000 square miles.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"When gathering clouds around I view,
And days are dark, and friends are few,
On Him I lean who not in vain
Experienced every human pain.
He sees my wants, allays my fears,
And counts and treasures up my tears."

IF ONLY.

HOW LITTLE the words. Six letters in all, and yet how freighted with meaning they often come to us. Sometimes they well up from our own hearts, and again they fall upon our ears from the lips of others while the voice is tense with pain and the eyes have in them a weary, despairing look, indicating most plainly that the spirit is worn and weary with the conflict life has brought. It is a wail as old as our earth. A dirge for the thing which is done and for that which is left undone.

"If only my mother had warned me in time, had spoken just a word to put me on my guard, how much of pain and unavailing regret might have been spared me!" And we thought as we heard the words, that could the mother know and realize the mistake she had made, even a more bitter wail would arise from her heart.

But why, we ask, why should we ever desire to conceal from others the loving sympathy we have for them? Why not say the pleasant, loving, helpful, encouraging words which lie dormant in our thoughts, before the ears which would drink them in as the parched earth drinks in the dew are heavy and closed forever in the silence of death? And the little helpful acts of kindness—why should we ever forget the need of our brother—our sister—and turn aside from doing that which it is in our power to do?

All which we possess of this world's goods, of talent, of ability of any kind is given us in trust from God. Each one of his children—the workmanship of his hands—is just as dear to him as we are. This thought may be hard for us to grasp, hard to realize in its length and breadth, but it is true. Why then should we fail to share with our brother the blessings we hold in trust and by doing so lay up treasures in heaven, which will be our own. Men do not act in this way in the ordinary business of life. When capital is borrowed a wise business man seeks to use it in such a way that when the principal is returned he will have something left which he has gained by the use of it. The time is surely coming for each of us, when we will leave behind us not only all our possessions, but the results of our labors. "They rest from their labors and their works do follow them," is the declaration of the word. Our possessions will remain for others to inherit, but our work will follow us. How blessed, then, if at the end of the race it can truthfully be said of us, "They have done what they could," and we shall not have to say, "If only I had been wise in time." The present is all we have any assurance of. Let us then in the present say the kind words and do the kind acts in our power to do.

HELPING HAND.

SYNOPSIS OF READING, CHAPTER ELEVEN.

HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

TRAINING A CHILD'S APPETITE.

It is largely true that grown persons like those things which they were trained to eat and drink while children. A child can be trained to take almost any kind of food or drink, good or bad. Therefore the one who trains a child's appetite bears a great responsibility both as to the health and enjoyment of that child.

That a child inherits certain appetites cannot be questioned, but while considering this fact, the child's tastes can be trained away from its inborn tendencies. In the tropics children like the luscious fruits which are given them freely; in the arctic regions they learn as quickly to like fish and oil. In one region the main diet of the people is roots and berries; in another it is milk or honey; while others devour raw flesh or drink fresh blood, and still others eat dried locusts or grasshoppers. Children everywhere are easily trained to enjoy that which they have to eat; and if a young child is taken from one region to another he quickly adapts himself to his new conditions and learns to like such food as is given him. All this goes to show that no special kind of food is demanded by the natural appetite to such an extent that a child may not be trained to enjoy that which he can have and which he ought to use.

As a rule little attention is paid to the training of a child's appetite. The child is given such food as is easiest obtained and which the child most readily takes. Thoughtless parents simply give their children such food as they themselves eat without considering whether or not it is best suited to their needs. Tender-hearted and lovingly indulgent parents are quite likely to give their child the things that please his palate or of which they themselves are specially fond. A child likes sugar; he is not ready to take anything else at mealtime, and so the parent is tempted to give him a bit of sugar, even though it may destroy his appetite for the hour or disturb his stomach for all day. Again, a child likes to try any food which his parent enjoys, so the parent gives from his own plate that which he deems a delicacy, although it be of all things least suitable for him. And thus children are trained in wrong ways of eating at the very time when they most need training in the right way.

Kind parents are tempted to indulge freaks and fancies to appetite instead of checking them. The more they are indulged the stronger becomes their hold on the child. The more they are checked the weaker their power becomes. Yet most parents accept such peculiarities as inevitable instead of realizing that they can control them and are responsible for whether or not they do so.

A doctor orders less of one kind of food and more of another for a child. His mother answers that Johnny is a great hand for the one kind and cannot take the other; and in her answer she shows that the blame rests on herself and not on Johnny. He ought to have been trained to eat what was good for him instead of indulging his whims in the eating line. When a mother says, "My boy won't eat this, or that," she simply confesses to her failure of duty in training his appetite. Should she say that she did not approve of this or of that, and therefore would not give it to him, it would be very different from saying that he will not take it even though she thinks it best for him.

Of course, there are some familiar articles of food, which here and there a child cannot eat with safety. The clam, for instance, which most persons can eat freely, seems to be as poison to certain individuals. And it is the same with strawberries. But these are abnormal cases. They do not affect the rule that a child can be trained to like what he ought to eat and not to eat what is not best for him.

A prominent educator, having a family of four boys and four girls, put this rule in practice. His means were limited and he felt the necessity of training his children to eat such food as he deemed proper and could supply. He bought as good food as he could afford, making wise choice of it. If his children thought a dish distasteful they were allowed to wait until they were willing to eat it. They were not forced to eat it; they could eat it or let it alone. If they went without it that meal, the same dish or a similar one was before them at the next, and so on until they were hungry enough to eat it heartily. In this way those children learned to eat what they ought to eat; and when grown they realized the value of the training which made them rulers of their appetite instead of being its slaves. On every hand we see illustrations of the opposite course, in persons who are subject to the whims and caprices of their appetite because it was not trained to be subject to them. In one of these two directions the upbringing of every child is tending.

In the use of candy and of condiments a child's appetite is peculiarly liable to be untrained or trained amiss. Neither of these is suited to a child's needs, but both are allowed him, regardless of what is best. The child fancies the candy, the parents fancy the condiments, and both are given to him though neither one is supposed to be beneficial. There are parents (wiser than the average), who train their children not to eat candy between meals and not to eat condiments at meals, and the children are healthier and happier for it. There ought to be more of such parents and children.

Shetland ponies accustomed to eating fish, at first refused to eat hay, but were trained until finally they enjoyed it as well as other ponies. Children have been trained to like cod liver oil as well as they like syrup; and so with other things at first distasteful. Parents should learn from the best sources what their children ought to eat, and then train them to like it. It is not an easy matter to train a child's appetite, but nothing is easy that is worth doing. It is possible to train a child's appetite and it ought to be done. The parent who holds himself responsible for what a child wears and shirks his responsibility as to what he shall eat would seem to care more for the child's appearance than for his upbuilding from within, and this could hardly be counted a sign of parental wisdom or love. C. B. S.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. ALLIE THORBURN, writing from Higbee, Missouri, says: "In regard to the Daughters of Zion, we have changed our time of meeting to the second Thursday in the month. Our last two meetings have been the best of any and we rejoice that we were led to organize, and think much good will be accomplished. For one, I have learned many valuable lessons, and I pray earnestly for the onward spread of the work. May God hasten the time when all his handmaidens will have their names enrolled on this list, that the coming generation may be a purer and nobler people. God will never acknowledge any people as his who are not pure and only such can ever bring about the redemption of Zion. Let us then unitedly and earnestly seek to God for his blessing and for the spirit of wisdom that we may in all things be guided aright."

Sr. Euphemia Jack writes from Hopeville, Ontario, desiring to bear her testimony to the truth of the work and to thank God for his great goodness to her. She earnestly desires to bear the trials of life with patience to keep the faith and be prepared to meet the Savior at his coming.

Sr. Eva Denio, of Leon, Iowa, writes expressing a most earnest desire to be active and faithful in the work. She says: "While looking over the Herald last evening my eyes fell upon a letter from Sr. Devore, and my whole soul was filled with the Spirit of God. I thought if I could give a word of cheer to one so lonely as she I would do so, and I pray God that I may ever suffer and do that which he requires at my hands, with the same faith and patience manifested by Sr. Ella."

[THE following letter was written in connection with the request for the prayers of the Union for Sr. Mary E. Chappelow, published some time since.—ED.]

Dear Sisters:—In writing the above letter for my suffering mother I felt a desire to say a few words in appreciation of the means devised, as I believe, by the infinite wisdom of God by which we may help each other on to him and bring up a future generation that will be a glory to God and an honor to man. I refer to the Prayer Union and the Daughters of Zion. I believe that by your united faith and prayers my mother may be restored to health. Her life has been one of pain and suffering, and therefore we cannot wonder that she longs for rest. Pray that she may have faith to be healed, for we do indeed feel that we yet have need of her. She has done all in her power to help spread the gospel in the past, and we feel that there is still a great deal she can do. But God's ways are not our ways, and if it is his will to call her hence, may we be reconciled as she is, and say with her, "God's will, not ours, be done." I have often thought of writing to the Home Column, but in my extreme weakness felt that I could say nothing to benefit anyone. I have very little time to read, as my two babies occupy so much of my time and attention. Your sister, MINNIE WERNER.

BYRNVILLE, Indiana.

Dear Sisters:—This morning as I sit in a country schoolroom, my mind has been drawn to reflections upon a higher life which shall continue throughout eternity, for those who shall be so blessed as to prove faithful to the end. I am glad that I have been made to understand the fundamental principles of the plan of salvation. If my understanding be limited only to this, I would have occasion to be glad. We as Latter Day Saints do not appreciate our privileges as we should. No, we do not place upon them near as high an estimate as we should. It is not until we are separated from those of our faith (if only for a short time) that we realize this. How many of us can go among those who are strangers to the household of Zion and feel free and at home as if in the presence of those who have been "born of water and of the [same] Spirit"? There is a great difference between the association with the world and with the church.

From my dot of experience I learn that we may go out among those of various creeds (and of good hearts, as we say) and be hospitably entertained by them, and still we feel a lack of something more. Their ears have not heard, their eyes have not been opened to the truth. How different their thoughts are from those who have been awakened to this.

While writing these lines I am made to think of an expression I have lately heard from an elderly school-teacher: "Why should people discard the commandments of the Old Testament? If God is unchangeable why not offer burnt offerings," etc. This to me sounds like fanaticism. Is it a wonder that Saints when placed under such conditions long for home, where they are deaf to such doctrines? How the minds of people are darkened can only be observed when one undertakes to tell these simple truths to them. How different are their man made creeds from the pure gospel preached by divine inspiration!

The work here has recently been revived. There have been four additions to the branch by baptism; two brothers, one sister, (all middle aged people, and well versed in the doctrine,) and my husband, for which I am truly thankful, as we are all the Saints at this place. May we all prove faithful and have sufficient strength to "stem the flood."

EDNA MOSIER

BROKEN BOW, Neb.

Dear Sisters:—The Herald is a great comfort and blessing to me. I do not see how I could do without it, as it is the only preacher we have here. It is nine years since we came out here, and we have heard very little preaching of our faith. I do hope the time is not far hence when an elder can be sent into this part of the Lord's vineyard. I ask your faith and prayers in behalf of our little boy, who has been suffering with lung fever for the past three weeks. He has been very sick. I have three little ones intrusted to my care and I desire to bring them up in the fear of the Lord. Your sister,

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer:
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, April 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Isaiah 55:10, 11; Proverbs 28:3.

Thursday, April 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 107:1-8; Joel 2:32.

CORRECTION.

In the Herald for March 28, page 203, the following statement appears: "And the further fact, that for the greater part of one year Bro. R. M. Elvin was hired by the Board and worked for the Herald."

I acted as the agent for the Herald, but received no hire, no not even one "senine." More than that, the Board of Publication did not grant me the usual ten per cent commission on the books I sold.

I have worked for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, and not for hire.

For truth,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CANTON, Iowa, Mar. 20.

Editors Herald:—Since leaving my field of labor in Northern Illinois, March 1, I have been dividing my time between the sugar camp and visiting with friends and relatives, but quite careful to have the line between and spend the major part of my time this side of the line of the sugar camp. From the general appearance of things in nature one would think spring had surely come in this latitude with wild geese flying northward through a sunlit, cloudless sky, the blue birds and robins holding joint morning concerts, the golden-eyed dandelions peeping timidly from the hillsides, the plodding plowman in the furrow and the wanton small boy dividing the fleeting hours between fishing and marbles in these mid-March days, and—the ground-hog very judiciously remains in his burrow and sucks his toe.

Our district conference of the 17th and 18th passed off very pleasantly. Notwithstanding the rain and mud on Sunday, the crowds were quite large and the attention good.

Brn. O. B. Thomas, of Des Moines district, and John W. Peterson, of Wisconsin, were with us and each delivered an excellent sermon. Bro. Thomas will hold a few meetings at Center Junction and Bro. Peterson and the writer will hold forth here. Bro. Roth is at Nashville.

The reports from the ministry were encouraging, showing steady gains in the different localities and the Saints feeling encouraged in that God is moving for their salvation. There have been two branches organized in the district during the year and considering the limited number of laborers in the district we are pleased to see the progress made.

During the latter part of the year this district had but two General Conference appointees, and one of them being engaged with other duties, and Bro. Roth being sick, the district was left without a traveling elder. This is a large field and ought to have several men actively engaged all the time.

I am feeling strong in the work and determined to do all in my power to advance the interests of Zion. My testimony is that the way is growing brighter. I am rejoiced that the sound of the restored gospel saluted my ears. I expect to start about April 1 for Lamoni for the Sunday School Convention and General Conference.

Yours fraternally,

JOHN B. ROUSH.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 30.

Editors Herald:—Since writing you from Pipestone, Minnesota, I have labored at Powersville, Iowa, with the best of liberty, good interest, and a large crowd from beginning to end. I baptized two and left a goodly number convinced of the truth, many of whom will obey in time. The Methodist friends let me have the use of their church, for which I was very thankful.

The work in my mission field is spreading fast, and demands a stronger force to make the work now begun bear fruit. I have a number of new places opened up and it will take more than one man to supply the demands of these places. North Dakota has become a field that calls for continuous workers who can spend all their time in that State. South Dakota also demands attention. Laborers are wanted, but who can go? I have labored alone this year, therefore cannot say as to the work in Minneapolis and Eastern Minnesota.

I have been greatly blessed this year. The Lord has been with me in all my duties as a minister of Christ. He has sent his angels to administer unto me, when in my darkest hours. I cannot frame words to express my thanks to my heavenly Father for his goodness to me. I have with others of my brethren worked hard to bring the Lake mission to fully compare in spiritual matters with others, and can truly say the prospect is encouraging. After leaving Northeastern Iowa I came to St. Joseph, Missouri, where I met all my family and many other Saints whom I love. We had a good conference, especially Sunday afternoon. The testimonies were good, the Spirit bearing witness to the truth. I spoke three times while in the city.

On Thursday, the 15th of March, in company with my wife and Daughter Hattie, we came to our home in Lamoni. We were glad to meet the Saints at home. I remained at home until Sunday, the 18th, when by request of Bro. J. R. Lambert I went to Davis City, Iowa, and held meetings over Sunday, and on during the week, and once the next Sunday, being assisted during the latter part by Bro. C. Scott, who then took charge and kept the meetings going on for several nights, at which time Brn. Fred. A. Smith and D. M. Rudd took charge and are still holding forth with good interest and good attendance. God bless the effort, I pray. I am still in the faith and hope to ever remain so. Hoping and praying for a good spiritual conference, I am, as ever,

In bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

CARLISLE, Ind., March 23.

Editors Herald:—The Daniel-Denney debate is a thing of the past. From the 13th to the 16th instant Elder Leonard F. Daniel, the neophyte, or beginner, met and successfully coped with the Rev. E. G. Denney, the veteran disputant and champion debater of the "Church of Christ"! The contest was held in a large rural chapel, about six miles from the above-named railroad depot. The attendance was simply immense, the attention eager and good, and the order could hardly be duplicated anywhere. Scholastic divines of the Alexander Campbell order and type were present from within a radius of one hundred miles.

Bethany chapel, the seat of war, is in a large local organization, although, thank goodness, there are many honorable exceptions to that dogmatic order in their midst and surrounding vicinity. The citizens seemed quite willing to care for and cheerfully entertain all who came from a distance, and the many well-trained singers did illustrious service. The minister had his brother for his moderator, while I acted in that capacity for our man. A Mr. James Anderson, of Pleasantville, was the chairman; and for the dignified, honorable, honest, fair way that he ruled and conducted the affair I cannot thank him enough, either by word or pen. His gentlemanly bearing and just ruling secured him the green laurels of merited praise. I called the brazen belligerent to order about a score of times; and the chair sustained my point of order every time, save a bare once, when he partially did so. He instructed the people to avoid applause or any marks of demonstration whatever. He also advised the litigants to refrain from witticisms, sarcastic flings, harsh invectives, and the like uncalled for, uncharitable, unkind reflections, and to stick close to their text and work. We felt happy beyond measure to behold our side so ably represented. Such humility, longsuffering, gentleness, meekness, patience, and tender forbearance was even an unlooked for surprise to myself. Bro. James Knox, of Mecca, Parke county, and William Brickley, of Washington, Indiana, and Sr. Alsman, of Bicknell, Knox county, were in attendance, and we five had to face a thousand, which is a ratio of one to two hundred; and now I am left here all alone.

Mr. Denney affirmed for two days that the "Church of Christ" to which he belonged was all right in organization, doctrine, and practice. He lustily averred that it was set up and established on the day of Pentecost A. D. 33. He denied that Alexander Campbell and coworkers organized or built a church, but claimed withal that he gave us the Bible alone for the fullness of the gospel, or their infallible creed, and in the above manner gave us the church. This Hoosier philosopher sought to maintain that "the doctrine of baptisms," referred to in Hebrews 6:2, had reference to the washings in the old Mosaic economy; howbeit he stoutly thought and loudly proclaimed that faith and repentance, as also confession (?) and baptism belonged to their institution. The laying on of hands to heal and impart the miraculous power of the Holy Spirit he admitted freely; but, like his benighted kind, confined all signs, spiritual gifts, and miracles to the apostolic age. After reading from Hebrews 6:1, 2; James 5:14, 15; Mark 16:15, 16; he told us that all those rich provisions of the law were confined to "that age." He called the preaching of that ancient order of things "nonsense," "stuff," etc., and quizzed about the kind of oil to use. He tried, as they invariably do, to obliterate all the ancient landmarks and cover up the good old paths, by a farfetched interpretation of 1 Corinthians 13, assuming that no prophet, king, or priest could lay on hands nowadays and confer sense, or anything else. Their clergy are installed and set apart by the laying on of hands, and according to his own admission they get nothing from nothing through their miserable farce. "Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him."

The "one baptism" of Ephesians 4:5, was water; "for," saith he, "the baptism of the Holy Ghost does not belong to this age of the world." Joel second chapter was all fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, all because Peter used the word "that," and of course Denney believed all was accomplished there and then. John's, that of the Holy Ghost, the one in fire, and Christian baptism were all duly admitted; but there are save it be but one now, and that too in water (1 Cor. 12:13).

The baptism of the Spirit was a promise, and not a command, and does not make an individual better saith Denney. The eleventh of Isaiah fulfilled in "that age," that is, the apostles' times, or zounds! this reverend (?) gentleman might meet up with a "yellow dog" in heaven, or in the heavenly estate. The resurrections of all, both the just and the unjust, take place, and occur at the same time according to this eely Christian quibbler. "Christian" is the new name of prophecy, but Isaiah has it "Hephzibah," and "Beulah," delightful, and union, for thee (Israel), "and thy land shall be married." This man had prayed often at the sick's request, and some had obtained relief, as also himself had been strangely and suddenly cured of toothache in preaching; but for all that he clamored loud and long for one authenticated miracle of healing. He wanted his opponent to demonstrate, or leave the debate in everlasting disgrace. If he had that power none should suffer, or die; so you see he is much more merciful than the ancient worthies, or even God. He wanted us to heal an old consumptive lady that lies at death's door, and then forsooth, he would become a disciple of what he had called an accursed thing! See?

He made the unique discovery that there were twelve apostles of Christ, and several more that were only apostles to the church. See? He made considerable fuss about "confessing," which, by the way, is not a "principle of the doctrine of Christ." The Lord's supper he extolled, but what of that? He dragged into the account the Danite Band, cattle and sheep stealing, polygamy, and the likes; but only to his own hurt. Scandal, vituperation, misrepresentation, bombast, buncombe, braggadocia, and downright lies were largely his stock in trade. Such heartless disregard of the truth; such vain and unfair persistence, such bent and determination to ensnare and defeat, at all hazards, rendered him odious in the eyes of all save the Campbellites; and some of them saw that he was utterly at fault.

Were it not that our brother's weakness is to think a little too much of praise and honor I surely would lionize the champion of the fray. Perhaps his growing experience and observation will not allow him to think of himself more highly than he ought to, but soberly. It is but right and proper to acknowledge that it was a most glorious victory in every sense. The brother was just recovering from a recent attack of lagrippe, and the Lord stood by him, while he in turn maintained and defended his good work. His mind was clear, his soul was tranquil, his heart was full of love and happiness, his voice was good. His kindly spirit captivated, his refutations were pointed, powerful, and plain; and his arguments were logical, convincing, and altogether overwhelming.

The opposing controversialist wished to "try the spirits." He produced a bottle of deadly poison, as he claimed, and actually wanted L. F. to drink it down. Bro. Leonard, on getting the stuff in his care, pocketed the treasure, and said, "If I drink it it will not hurt me," to the amusement of all. A Reverend (?) Williams, from Parke county, brought this delectable dose; so you see there is more than one of that school that wants to return good for evil over the left shoulder. It is passing strange that these occidental savants can find naught but fraud, villainy, and hypocrisy in our holy religion, and, lo and behold, if we would only work a miracle to satiate and satisfy their morbid curiosity, then all scalawags, vagabonds, and truckling knaves would bow and worship at our feet! "Signs and spiritual gifts," say they, "were wrought to convert sinners in days of old;" howbeit they profess to believe without them. I realize that Old Nick will never get his full quota till he runs in all that have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof, therefore beware and from all such turn hastily away.

I asked for the chapel to hold forth in at times when not in use, but it was denied me, whereupon I told them most publicly and before about a dozen preachers that we would challenge anyone between the two oceans, or in any or all zones. The gauntlet is cast, but this tournament is the alpha and omega in Sullivan county, Indiana. The brother has gone into a settlement of Saints of the Utah kind to fill appointments of a series. They are investigating and may come over. I am in the immediate vicinity, preaching to large audiences in schoolhouses. It is pleasing to see how the feeling of the people is turning in our favor, and effectual doors are ajar on all sides, to preach the word. The friends chipped in four dollars, out of scanty purses, for Bro. Daniel's benefit. He left in high hopes and with a cheerful spirit. Bro. Knox will write up the debate for the Ensign. He was a willing counselor, and rendered much timely aid by his presence, prayers, etc. The Saints throughout, I trust, will rejoice with us in this good fortune and outlook. It ought to be followed up to reap a harvest. I enjoyed myself much in the extreme southern part of the State, and think there is a grand work to be accomplished in the counties along the Ohio River, as elsewhere.

Hoping to meet many of the household of faith at the Annual Conference, I am in line and under marching orders,

M. T. SHORT.

Editors Herald:—I have not invaded your columns for a long time, but this evening I feel a desire to do so. I have been reading one of last month's Heralds and my heart swells with gratitude to my heavenly Father when I see the progress that is being made in this glorious work and that his people and ministers are beginning to find favor in the sight of men. I see by Sr. Jennie Randolph's letter that another victory is gained in Illinois. It all seems to me to say, "The set time to favor Zion has come." O that the people in this country would throw aside their prejudice and investigate the principles of this latter-day work! But we are so isolated here that scarcely anyone knows anything of us. I have felt grieved when Bro. G. T. Griffiths was here to think there were so few to hear the gospel preached in the able manner in which he preached it, and I felt too how discouraging it must be to the servant of God who has made sacrifice to deliver the gospel message to mankind to see so few come to hear it. Nevertheless we as a branch are hopeful for the future. We are having good meetings with much of the Holy Spirit in our midst, and the Lord is moving upon the hearts of some who have been slack to come again with renewed determination to help roll on the work of the Lord. May they be blessed in their efforts and have grace to stand firm.

There are thousands in this great city who have heard the gospel preached in the open air by our brethren, and many too who have belonged to the Old Church, so we think by advertising in some of the papers, and keeping our meeting place well posted before the people they will be able to find us. It seems that to publish our faith and whereabouts in the newspapers is really the only way to get at the masses. May the blessing of God attend the means used. Then we have another hope for the future; that is, the hope of having a building of our own here. There was a building fund started nearly four years ago, to which the Saints have contributed according to their means, but there is an agreement that if it broke through or there failed to be enough money to raise a house in five years, we should each have our contributions returned, so we are trying by every means in our power to raise enough. Pray for us, dear brethren and sister; that we may have the desire of our hearts in seeing a house raised in this great city. There is only one more year before the time will be up. May the Lord bring in some with means to swell the funds, or move upon the hearts of others to help us, is my earnest desire. God bless Bro. Griffiths in all his labors. If it is God's will I trust he will be returned to this mission, for I think there would be more good to be done than when he was here before.

Your humble sister,

ESTHER FURNESS.

HEARNE, Texas, March 20.

Editors Herald:—Please publish my address plainly in the Herald, as I have had my house and everything in it burned up, and I have a wife and six children, and need a little help. If any of the Saints has any little mite to put in it will be thankfully received. I was advised by some of the brethren to send my address out so that they would know how and where to direct it to. My address is, W. B. Dotson, Hearne, Robertson county, Texas.

I will be thankful of any little mite that can be spared. Your brother,

W. B. DOTSON.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 19.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Northern California district closed last night. It was largely attended; Elders Wight and Forscutt were present. It was the most enjoyable meeting of the kind that this district had for years; there was nothing extraordinary in either the preaching or testimony meetings, nor in the administrations to the afflicted; but a feeling of love and general good-will seemed to pervade all the meetings to an extent seldom witnessed. All seemed full and running over with the Spirit of the Master. This may to a great extent be accounted for by or credited to the Oakland branch in the manner they received and cared for visiting members. All, or nearly all, so far as they could, were cheerfully and well cared for, and we appreciate their hospitality. More good results from such generosity than some might suppose; those thus cared for cannot help feeling that they are among brethren indeed, and a feeling of love and gratitude is engendered which passes from one to the other, a leaven that leavens the whole congregation; and the word says that those who give are more blessed than those who receive; so if those who receive the hospitality of the Saints are made to feel happy, more so are those extending it; and so there are none left to feel otherwise.

Friendship and love are what help us over all the rough places in life's journey.

Arrangements were made to commence tent work as soon as we can hear from General Conference. If appointed to this mission Elder Daley and the writer will conduct the same. We look for a hearty and willing cooperation of the Saints, without which we cannot succeed. By request of district president, Bro. Putney, I shall attend the Central California district conference. I never felt better in body or in spirit.

Yours in the latter-day work,

HIRAM L. HOLT.

HIBBERT, Ont., March 5.

Editors Herald:—I have been laboring here and fourteen miles north, in the township of McKillop, for some time. When I came I intended to spend but one month here, but opposition ran so high and some worked so hard to drive us out, that we concluded to stay, feeling there was some good to be done. We continued to blow the gospel trumpet all around wherever we could get an opening. At one schoolhouse the baser sort threw a piece of slate at me while I was engaged in prayer, and threw clubs at me while getting my horse out of the stable; but we kept right along, feeling that God was our protector and that we were about our Father's business, until they closed the schoolhouse on us: but we found another door open about three miles farther on, another schoolhouse, where we continued preaching every night for a week. The weather being stormy, we gave over, as not many came out. We then concluded to preach a few times in the house of Bro. James Bell, and also in Bro. R. Gray's house, and on the 4th inst. we had the pleasure of burying one precious soul in the waters of baptism. This was a young man of eighteen years, the son of a well-to-do farmer. He bids fair to become a polished shaft in the kingdom of God's dear Son. His mother is also in favor of the work, and will no doubt obey ere long.

While there I felt to take a run back where I opened a new field this summer, to learn how the interest was there; so Bro. James H. Bell hitched up his horse and we drove over. We found some quite interested; we stopped at George Parker's, where I had stayed quite a lot last summer, and had the pleasure of blessing their infant babe. Those people are near the kingdom, and will make good Saints, and are well-to-do. While there last summer I labored very hard and traveled a great deal on foot to sow the seed by the wayside, but saw no signs of any then obeying the message. I felt almost discouraged, thinking the fault surely lay with me; but one night I made it a matter of prayer, asking my heavenly Father to reveal my faults if I had any. I dropped off to sleep and dreamed I was in a large field which was plowed, and harrowed, and sowed with wheat, and I thought I had sowed it. I looked to see if it was growing, but could not see any signs of it coming up. So I began to complain at myself that I had surely sowed it too deep, and I got down on my knees and began to examine it. I removed some soil and saw a nice sprout, so I looked over the field again, and to my surprise there were beautiful sprouts about an inch high all over the field. When I awoke I surely felt to thank God for his goodness to me, for I assure you it took a great load off my mind, as I felt that my labors were not in vain. Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God gives the increase.

From here I intended to go to Holstein and Proton, but suffering from la grippe, I have to lay up and recruit; so go home to-morrow. The Saints here get but little preaching, but are striving to live their religion. I labored some with them last April and baptized two. They have had no preaching since, so I thought best to give them all the time I possibly could. I hope the president of the mission and of the district will bear with me in this matter. My heart is in God's work, and I have no other desire but to labor on for his glorious cause. Your coworker,

S. W. TOMLINSON.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Mar. 23.

Editors Herald:—On the 28th of February I went to Beatrice. On my arrival there I met our young brother, Frank J. Chatburn, at the depot, and we went together that same evening ten miles northeast of Beatrice to Freeman. We held meeting in the large schoolhouse, and continued to hold meetings there nightly, and twice on Sunday until after the second Sunday, making in all fourteen meetings. On the last Sunday night the house could scarcely accommodate the congregation, the interest having increased from the first. Some here promised to obey by baptism, having agreed to meet with us on the following Sunday, but were hindered by rain. This was in the same neighborhood where I held some seventeen meetings in the latter part of January and the first of February and preached the sermon at the funeral of our brother, John T. Pethoud, an old and respected citizen. From here we went west about three miles northeast of Hoag, in Gaze county, where we held eight meetings with an increased interest, and baptized one man, the head of a large family, on Saturday the 17th.

The outlook in this part of the country for preaching was never better than now, a great amount of prejudice having been removed and an interest created for the hearing of the gospel. Bro. Chatburn is an agreeable companion, and whose future in this great work looks fair indeed. Respectfully,

J. W. WALDSMITH.

CARLSBAD, Cal. Mar. 21.

Editors Herald:—I came here last October and have not met any Saints yet. If an elder should come this way would be pleased to have him call on us. I know of no Saints closer than Santa Ana. The people here seem to be ignorant in regard to the Reorganization. I have distributed what few tracts I brought with me and herewith order more. We attend Sunday school here, which gives us a chance to exchange views with our neighbors. In bonds,

P. C. NELSON.

HEPPNER, Oreg., Mar. 3.

Editors Herald:—Our little town has been aroused as to religion since Bro. Dailey was here. This place has never in its history, been so excited over religion as at the present time. The Methodists have been holding meetings for eleven weeks, converting one hundred and twenty-five to their faith. The Christians are now holding meetings, sending for a new minister, and have gathered twelve souls into their faith. A great many are going here and there, acting like sheep without a shepherd. One, while at the mourner's bench, fell into a trance, which lasted three hours, and while in that state claimed to have seen heaven and hell, recognizing people there. Two or three have claimed to have visions, which all go to show the latter days are here.

While this is going on we are trying to sow the good seed, giving them papers to read, and teaching them what little we can. Some are becoming interested and seem to rejoice that they can see some light. O, that we could have an elder here, now that they are thinking on the subject, to explain the true way of life! Our little prayer union still continues; there are six of us, and one or two strangers most always come. Sr. Mae's husband is being interested, and as his business is in the store, he not only has the religious to fight against, but infidels as well, one infidel telling him that the Book of Mormon is nothing but the Spalding Romance. O Saints, pray for him that he may not be deceived, but may be brought into the light of the everlasting gospel, and that God may direct our every way that we may do nothing but what is right, and be the means of bringing others into the fold. Your sister, MRS. CELESTINE RUSH.

BEAVER, Texas, Mar. 23.

Editors Herald:—As it has been some time since I noticed anything in your columns from this portion of the great State I write to inform you that we are not sitting here like Egyptian mummies. It is true that our trials the past year have been hard, as it has been our lot to make but a scant living, and prospects are still discouraging; yet as weak members we are using every effort to promote the cause by handing out our tracts, papers, and supplements; and as we are surrounded by a prejudiced people, such supplements as "The Perfect Law," and articles in the Herald such as the decision of Judge Philips are too good to throw on a side table to remain.

A petition has gone in for the return of Bro. A. J. Moore to this mission, and it made us feel sad to notice neither a word of praise or gratitude for his services when they have been performed under such difficulties as none but a Latter Day Saint elder would undergo. He spent the better part of the winter in this portion of the State. He preached some in a neighborhood near here, which has been a great help towards allaying a prejudice that was caused by elders in the past preaching two or three sermons and leaving the community for other ministers to warn the people against the doctrine. In this as in many other places he has made friends both for himself and the cause. Father A. B. Moore joined his wife here, and after a few days' stay, preaching in different places, has, with his worthy companion, left for Lamoni. This separation is one grand evidence of the work which I guess most of Saints have realized. Sr. Moore has spent the year with us and has been of great consolation to us young in the cause. At different times she has told us of the trials of the early Saints, which made us feel thankful to our heavenly Father that it is a matter of the past and that all will receive a just reward for their deeds.

As conference is nearing we look forward with hope of grand promises being made to strengthen and cause the Saints to rejoice. With love for all workers for the cause,

Your brother,

J. M. TEAGARDEN.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal.

Editors Herald:—We have eighteen resident Saints in this place, who meet together twice a week and greatly enjoy worshiping the true and the living God; a just, impartial, and merciful God, or Father, whom all true Saints love to praise and glorify. We are truly grateful for the privilege of peacefully carrying on our devotions to him who knows our every want. Elder A. Haws is now with us, and has been doing a good work, having been the means of adding two more precious souls to our little band. They were baptized and confirmed last Sunday.

Elder Haws and Elder W. P. Pickering were here last summer, preaching the gospel in its purity and fullness, and at the same time the Seventh-day Adventists were conducting meetings in Santa Cruz. One evening T. D. Wallar, one of the Adventist preachers, came to hear Elder Haws preach on the Seventh-day Sabbath. After service Mr. Wallar challenged Elder Haws to a debate on the above question, which Elder Haws accepted, and the Adventist was to come and sign articles of agreement at a certain time, but he failed to materialize. Elder Pickering went to see Mr. Wallar to learn the cause of the trouble, and ascertained that an Adventist elder named Hunter was higher in authority in their church than Wallar, and the said Hunter declared that in his opinion the Latter Day Saints were not a Christian people, consequently he would not consent to Mr. Wallar's entering into a discussion with Elder Haws. Here the matter dropped. Since that time Mr. Wallar, who is a resident here now, told one of the Saints that he was sorry he did not discuss the question at that time on his own responsibility, for he was satisfied that we were Christians. Mr. Lawn told Wallar that he would have an opportunity to discuss the question, as Elder Haws would arrive here from San Francisco in a few days. Wallar said he would debate the question. When Elder Haws arrived Wallar and he came together and placed their signatures to the following document: "Resolved, that it is and ever has been the duty of man to observe the fourth commandment of the decalogue, known as the Seventh-day Sabbath, King James' translation of the Bible to be the standard of evidence; T. D. Wallar of the Seventh-day Adventist Church to affirm, and Elder A. Haws of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ to deny."

The said discussion began Tuesday evening, January 16, and continued twelve evenings of one hour and a half each session, alternate speeches of thirty minutes each, at Blunis Hall, Lincoln street. Notwithstanding the fact that all the other churches were holding union services, the discussion drew very nearly a full house every evening. It was generally admitted by unprejudiced outsiders that Elder Haws was altogether too much for the Adventist, although the latter was intelligent and a well posted man on that to them very important question. Elder Haws proved beyond the question of a doubt that the ten commandments, including the fourth, were given as a local law to the Israelites who had been brought out of the land of Egypt in order to bring them back to Christ, they having been a very rebellious and idolatrous people. He also proved that the seventh-day Sabbath was not applicable to Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden and, in fact, that but three or four of the ten commandments would apply to them. He also proved that the seventh day could not be kept without also keeping the sixth or preparation day. (Exodus 16:22, 23.) God rested on the seventh day. (Genesis 2:2—B. C. 4003.) "So the people rested on the seventh day."—Ex. 16:30. (B. C. 1491.) The Elder proved that between those last two passages of Scripture, a lapse of 2,513 years, there was not one word in the Bible commanding man to keep the seventh day. He also proved that the ten commandments were not given to the Jews' forefathers: "The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day."—Deut. 5:3. The elder proved that Adam and Eve could not have rested on the seventh day, for Adam was not made until the sixth day, and had done no work as yet. They could not have broken the fifth commandment, for who was Adam and Eve's mother? The seventh commandment could not have been broken, nor the eighth, for everything was given to them in the garden; neither the ninth commandment, because they had no neighbor; nor the tenth commandment, for there was no neighbor's house, nor man nor maid-servant in the garden. The elder would not permit the Adventist to get a foothold for the seventh day anywhere except where it belonged with the rebellious Jews, and the penalty for breaking the Sabbath day was death. Many passages of Scripture were brought to bear by the elder to prove his position. He is to be congratulated on the victory he has won. He is capable of producing the very strongest argument against the keeping of the seventh day by people other than Jews.

I thank God that through his restored gospel we can understand and are able (differently from other church people) to distinguish between the historical and inspirational portions of the word of God. Although I am not six months old in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, I can begin to see the beauty and plainness of the Bible, and I truly enjoy hearing the restored gospel preached in its purity and without adulteration, for I had become tired of hearing the doctrines and teachings of men in other churches who have no authority from God whatever, and who rest upon their own power and knowledge against the Creator's. Why do not people accept the true gospel?

I ask the prayers of all, and pray for all in return.

Your brother in Christ,
FRED A. SEVERY.

TRUTH'S "HERALD."

Speed forth on thy mission,
Thou Herald of truth,
Enlight'ning and blessing
Both aged and youth;
Redemption thy story,
Salvation thy song;
The world is before thee,
Thy Captain is strong.

Forth conq'ring and fighting
The million-voiced wrong,
Base falsehood still righting,
The weak 'gainst the strong;
Sure! Sure! the horizon Shows victory near;
The dawn is fast breaking
And soon will appear.

Fast rip'ning around thee
The fair golden grain
In profusion surrounds thee;
With might and with main.
Go, reaper, thy guerdon
The Master's "Well done"
Shall be thy reward on Millennium's morn.

See! See! for the battle
The enemy brings Foul falsehood and slander
'Gainst thee on his wings;
But remember, remember
Jehovah's decree,
"No weapon shall prosper That's formed against thee."

"Be strong and courageous,"
Said Joshua of old,
Addressing the captains
Of Israel bold,
Though he knew they were fighting
'Gainst desperate odds,
"The battle, O Israel, Is not yours, but God's."

Let Zion's true daughters
In virtue arise,
And share in the conflict,
The toil, and the prize;
Their work is well pleasing
To Zion's kind Lord,
And eternal, unfading,
Shall be their reward!

To the poor and the tempted,
The tried and the faint,
He listens with love
To thy feeble complaint,
"Not long, O ye weary,
Not long, O ye sad,
Ere the voice of my weak ones
Shall be joyful and glad."

Then speed on thy mission,
Bright Herald of truth
Enlight'ning and cheering
Both aged and youth;
Speed forth to the world's Inaccessible bound,
Till the mighty Archangel
His trumpet shall sound.

STUMBLING-BLOCKS REMOVED.

A SHORT ESSAY.

COMPARATIVELY but a brief experience in this work will generally be found to convince the man of reflective tendencies that the stumbling-stones in the path of the would-be recipient of the eternal gospel, are both many and multifarious. Observation has further induced me to accentuate the fact that only in comparatively rare instances is the hearer deterred from obedience to the gospel, by inherent inability to perceive its principles, or to reflect upon or acknowledge their truth and justice and adaptability to all mankind. Upon endeavoring earnestly and affectionately to press home upon some individuals the claims of the everlasting gospel of the kingdom, I have almost invariably found that objections were raised, not upon the score of inherent defect or inharmony of the gospel principles, but upon some almost irrelevant and extraneous side issue.

The inconsistencies or imperfections of some is a topic seized upon, for instance, with remarkable avidity; particularly when said delinquents happen to hold any grade of office in the priesthood. My reply to such is that I have never professed that the people were perfect, only the principles taught and believed by these people (see Psalms 19:7); yet I am in candor and honesty bound to admit that were the people nearer perfect (and I include myself), the principles would have greater weight with thinking minds.

Then, again, there seems to be in the human mind,—to a great extent at least,—a strong bias toward error, rather than in the direction of truth. Apropos of this I may here quote the opening sentences of the Rev. A. F. Simpson, M. A., of Dalkeith, Scotland, in a stirring and most eloquent sermon upon "The Witch of Endor, and Modern Spiritualism," "or spiritism" to employ a more exact definition:—

Every attentive student of history will frequently be struck with surprise at the credulity of mankind, and the enormous and extraordinary facility with which they accept false beliefs. The countless delusions which have prevailed in every age, and among so many peoples, afford convincing proof that the human mind contains a natural bias to error, by which it becomes the easy victim of deception and lies. The acquisition of true knowledge and enlightened belief is always a difficult task, and the successful preservation of the mind from error and prejudice comparatively rare. Not only is there much in opinion baseless or uncertain, but there is much in what is called knowledge, of altogether doubtful validity.

The language of St. Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2:11, 12, discloses to us the principle which seems to regulate the growth and development of falsehood in the world. Man's liability to deception is greatly intensified by his rejection of the truth. A large number of the delusions under which the world has labored, are to be viewed as the result of a natural and eternal law, by which the rejection of the truth, or the not "receiving it in the love of truth" in order to salvation, is the ground of a judicial appointment on the part of Almighty God.

The learned and venerable apostle, in stating that the "man of sin" is, "after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders," explains that the "power" of "deceivableness in those that perish," lies in this, that they "received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." And he proceeds to say, "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion [Greek—the working of delusion], that they should believe a lie; that all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

Thus far the Rev. Dr. Simpson. Although it is not what I originally set out to say, there is a thought in connection with this subject so strongly impressed upon my mind that, even at the risk of irrelevancy, I will give it utterance. That thought is this: It is a most singular and important fact that at such times as the gospel and power of God are upon the earth, are to be found the marvelous powers and agencies of Satan, too, and only at such times. This explains what has long seemed paradoxical to me; viz., the fact that even in remote ages, as before Pharaoh and Moses and Aaron, and even during the actual presence of Christ the Son on earth in the meridian of time, God should permit and allow his mighty and marvelous manifestations to be closely imitated by Satanic powers. (See Exodus 7: 11, 22; 8: 7, 18; Job 2: 3; Luke 11: 19; Acts 8: 9-11.)

Bearing in mind the apostle's solemn and scathing words anent "strong delusions," that they should believe a lie, that all might be damned who believed not the truth, it is impossible to escape the conviction that a terrible and infallible law of retribution will thus overtake them who willfully and deliberately prefer the kingdom of darkness and damnation to that of salvation and light. (2 Thessalonians 1: 11, 12; 1 Corinthians 16: 22; Matthew 24: 24.)

But to return to other of the reasons which actuate men in their rejection of the gospel message, and which are stumbling-blocks in the way of men and women really anxious to obey the truth. One gentleman of my acquaintance urged to me, as an objection, that La Place's theory of the solar system, which he at that time believed in, was inconsistent with the idea of a constantly superintending ruler, and opposed to certain dogmatic statements in the Bible. I at once showed him, by the contrary motions of Saturn's satellites, that La Place's theory was untenable and had in fact been abandoned by leading astronomers of our day and age.

Another one wants "more light" upon the seventh-day Sabbath question; another upon the divinity of Christ; another upon his preëxistence with the Father, before he can honestly accept and embrace the gospel. Others again, honest and well-meaning people, cannot see the necessity of baptism; while a second class, who do see its necessity, are skeptical as to its mode, etc., etc., while, in this country a very large class who are willing to admit the veracity of the gospel in the abstract, are wholly incredulous as to the divine mission of Joseph Smith, or the Book of Mormon; or, particularly, the fact of Zion being located upon the American continent, and not at Jerusalem in Palestine.

Casting my eye upon a book on the table at one of the Saints' houses in London, I found it to be Bro. Griffiths' "Instructor," and that most, if not all of the above subjects were explained in a most lucid, concise, and exemplary manner. Not only in the hands of the elders preparing for debate ought this book to be, but in the homes of every Saint; for who can tell if the timely and tender removal of the doubts from some neighbor's mind, upon one or other of the points I have already enumerated, may not lead to their immediate embracing of the truth, and their ultimate salvation thereby, with all the "ransomed of the Lord." (Isaiah 61: 10, 11.) My soul was stirred to deep sympathy by the reading of the following extract from the letter of a lady, (Mrs. O. B. Kessler,) in Zion's Ensign for February 3, 1894. She says:—

We read over the Bible, and try to understand, but can't find the right places.

Who that has hunted up and down the Bible from Genesis to Revelation, to find some passage, familiar enough to the mind, but required to be shown to some doubting Thomas or inquirer, but can heartily sympathize with the plaintive cry of this sister?

Those possessed of a copy of "Cruden's Concordance," for reference, and Griffiths' "Instructor," for teaching outsiders and the young, upon the eternal verities of the true religion of antiquity, are blessed indeed, and should be thankful for such valuable and effective "helps."

SHALL WE ANOINT?

AS THE church established by Joseph Smith has been foremost in its advocacy of the gospel formula for treating disease, it serves our purpose to secure and compile any information that tends to confirm or strengthen this position. James says:—

Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.—James 5: 13.

Here we discover that the anointing of oil was a necessary adjunct in the eradication of disease and the securement of health. The Lord never instituted the anointing of oil merely as a matter of form; for in all his provisions each was for a practical and useful end. In Mark 6: 13 we read that they anointed with oil many that were sick and healed them. We need offer no proof from Scripture as to the character of the oil used, for it is a universally known fact that Palestine was the home of the olive, and olive oil was a household commodity in common use by many of them. While I have, with regret, noticed a general tendency in the church among many to urge the use of different methods in the treatment of disease, I am more and more convinced that the Lord knows best and that the plan devised by him is the most specific and trustworthy. In reading the comments of some of our brethren in laudation of earthly innovations, claiming that they are specific for cholera, consumption, and a host of other ailments, I have arrived at the following conclusion: If the prophetic character of Joseph Smith remains unquestioned, then cholera is a scourge which was to follow from time to time so long as men would reject the gospel. If A. Wilford Hall or any other man has found an antidote for every ill, and especially for cholera, then we have very little use for the provisions of the gospel for the eradication of and exemption from disease; for assuredly the gospel is not a cure-all but only promises relief when we comply with its specifications, and when it is compatible with the will of God. But according to the theory of the water curists they have a panacea that will go farther than that. I do not believe it, and the experience of many who have trusted in this to the exclusion of the gospel plan confirms me in it. I wish to state, however, that I do not repudiate the claims made by water curists in behalf of cold or warm water applied either externally or internally, but it does not possess that intrinsic power that we can safely and at all times rely upon it. All things being favorable, it undoubtedly can augment a cure, but living in a day, as we believe and teach, when scourges and pestilences are upon the increase, and are to fall heavily upon the heads of the wicked, it shows conclusively that we must have a more effectual weapon to combat disease than merely a human one.

And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy. And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for, and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die, they shall die unto me, and if they live, they shall live unto me. . . . And again, it shall come to pass, that he that hath faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed.—D. C. 42: 12, 13.

Here the Lord specifically places the ordinance of the gospel first, and all earthly agencies second. In case one has not the requisite faith to secure the blessing, provision is made that they shall be nourished, and the manner of their nourishment is specifically stated. Now, what policy should God's people pursue? If the water treatment as portrayed by A. Wilford Hall and some others is a reliable specific and cure-all, then we do not have to trust in God or his plans at all for health. If it is not, and facts so warrant, it becomes of secondary consideration and only a makeshift, when that which is better cannot be secured. I think some of our brethren make a grave mistake (not intentionally however) when they urge Saints to adopt certain kinds of treatment and plans of cure. The Saints of to-day have not any too much faith as it is, and it becomes us as ministers to increase that faith. This we cannot do if we are constantly urging upon them something else as an antidote to their ills other than the gospel plan. There is no warrant in the law for the ministry to teach or advise any other course of treatment than that specified in the law. "To the law and the testimony," is an infallible guide in this as in all other matters. I am also assured that the patent medicine advertisements sometimes appearing in the papers do not strengthen faith, not in God's plan at least.

A query is often made, "Why does the Lord require the sick to be anointed?" There may be several reasons adduced. One, at least, we will present; that is, it is efficacious. Among the Jews the practice of anointing the body was a time-honored custom, for they realized that the oil in itself possessed considerable healing properties. As to the quality and nature of the oil used, it passes without question that Christ and the apostles used olive oil. This was demanded under the Mosaic administration. The ointment which was used in the tabernacle for anointing its contents as well as for the priests contained olive oil. (See Exodus 27: 20; 30: 24-33; Leviticus 24: 2.)

A question which has been controverted locally, if not generally, is the part of the body to be anointed. Some invariably contend that the top of the head is the place to anoint, and adhere solely to this plan without regard to the location and nature of the disease. If I had a sore hand and would call the elders to administer to me I would prefer that they anoint the hand rather than the head. Cases are recorded in this church where no relief was found after repeated anointings upon the head, but when upon anointing the particular part affected immediate relief followed. If it is an internal pain or affection the oil should be given internally in connection with the external application. To prove my position I cite you to the case of the blind man where Christ took clay and anointed the eyes, not the head. I venture the opinion (for what it is worth) that the reason Christ used clay was because he did not have the oil. I do not, however, disparage the anointing of the head.

Olive oil has many remedial properties in itself and this should be much enhanced when the blessing of God is invoked upon it. Some Latter Day Saints pay no attention to the quality of the oil, just so it purports to be olive oil, and some try to get the cheapest in the market, and when one remonstrates with them about it they say, "O well, when it is consecrated it will be pure!" While I do not question God's power to cleanse anything, I do question the policy of knowingly taking an impure oil to the Lord and asking him to make it pure when we have it within our power to get the pure in the start.

If Latter Day Saints would use more olive oil, and herbs, and mild food, as nourishing elements, and not eat gross and unwholesome food and follow with a dose of gross rank weeds, or poisonous minerals, as an antidote to the gross feeding, it would be much better for them.

The medical fraternity are awakening to the medicinal virtues of olive oil. We append a few statements from leading writers. Senor Barzelotte says:—

Olive oil is used in Italy as follows:—

1. The anointing of babies' bodies in Italy with oil is a very extensive and common practice, as through it they get an impermeable condition which can fortify the epidermis and make it not too susceptible to the weather.
2. It is also prescribed to cure all burns, especially when caused by scalding water.
3. It is also adopted to cure wounds produced from some friction when the epidermis is not broken.
4. In all irritations of the skin when overheated, from the sun, fire, or blood, the prescription of pure olive oil is also common.
5. In cases of erythema, erysipelas, and other diseases of this kind, oil is used to soften the skin ache.
6. Considerable use is also made of oil with tumors and diseases of the glands of the throat.
7. For friction in rheumatic diseases.
8. Oil is also used for swelling about the ears.

He further says:—

Olive oil is considered the best medicament for colics of the stomach and intestines, and it acts as an operative and lenitive. Formerly castor oil was used for these diseases, but now the very pure olive oil is substituted entirely for these other oils. It is always prescribed for inflammation of the mucous membranes, and it softens these irritations better than any other.

D. E. Osborne, M. D. Ph. D.,

Superintendent of Home for Care and Training of Feeble-minded Children, Santa Clara, California, says:—

The use of the oil [olive] in medicine has scarcely yet become formulated. Notwithstanding that it has been known for years to possess nutrient, emollient, demulcent, and laxative properties . . . nature has long held out the olive branch, not alone as the symbol of peace, but significantly also as the symbol of healing. Nearly all our patients come to us sickly in body and impoverished in tissue as well as feeble in mind. To begin any treatment we must necessarily adopt the motto "Mens sana in corpore sana" (or a sound mind in a sound body), and direct our attention quite as much to the physical condition as to the mental. All sources of nervous irritation must be removed if possible to do so. Faulty digestion must be corrected; anæmic conditions overcome; defective circulation, especially of the cutaneous capillaries stimulated to healthier action, local congestion dispersed, errors of the emunctories righted, and the hungry tissues of body and brain steadily and rationally fed. With enriched pabulum we may look for awakening mentality, but not without. There is no other one article that will so well subserve all these conditions as pure olive oil. In the wide range of its application it might well be called a panacea. In its prompt and reliable upbuilding of tissue and the correction of some intestinal affections it approaches a specific. To the properties already ascribed to it by others I would add still another: that of being a reconstructive.

The following cases taken at random, will show our use of the oil in this institution. I assure you the results are not overdrawn. I could not afford to exaggerate them, even if I possessed the inclination to do so:—

No. 1. Two years ago measles swept through the institution. Over sixty patients were down at the same time. As a rule in this disease there is considerable nausea, and a sense of dryness and of pain until the eruption is fully "out." Then during the eruption, unless special measures be taken to prevent it, a draught may produce a chill, causing the eruption to "go in," and followed perhaps by congestion of the lungs, or of the kidneys, or of both. Most of the fatal cases terminate in this way. The thirst is always severe, and the danger to the eyesight and hearing following continued congestion very considerable and annoying. Lacking the proper hospital facilities, I recognized that my patients were most unfavorably situated, as we were obliged to treat them in their regular sleeping dormitories just as they happened to be taken. My invariable treatment was to take them as fast as they showed signs of the disease, give them a thorough hot water sponging from head to foot, followed immediately, and repeated at intervals of every few hours, with copious inunctions of warm olive oil, well rubbed in. Mucilaginous drinks and a generous diet completed the treatment. According to the amount of oil used there was absence of the persistent thirst, the eruption "came out" several hours earlier than is usual, afforded no particular sense of pain, and was attended with no undue congestion; all recovered nicely, notwithstanding the extreme delicate condition of many previously. The mainstay of the treatment was the oil (no drugs being used), and its application was repeated ad libitum day and night. Whenever the skin became dry and hot the oil relieved it, and brought to the patient a sense of relief, usually followed by sleep, from which they awoke refreshed. In scarlet fever the frequent inunctions of hot olive oil are peculiarly effective in sustaining the patient, and obviating many dangerous complications. From personal trials, details of which would be tedious here, I am convinced that of any single remedy in this disease olive oil is the most valuable and potent, which, I am aware, is saying a great deal, and more than I expect will be believed by anyone unfamiliar with its virtues.

No. 2. Case of an idio-imbecile boy, six years old; contracted pneumonia; both lungs involved, and disease stubborn from onset. Previous history bad, a strong syphilitic taint being well rooted in a scrofulous constitution. Owing to individual indiosyncracies, diet previously had been limited to bread and milk and a little of well-cooked potato. Digestion always weak, and power of assimilation correspondingly poor. In addition to usual treatment gave olive oil internally (on bread and well salted), and externally to body and limbs by hand rubbing, afterwards followed by wrapping in oiled cloths. He recovered from the pneumonia, but soon broke down with consumption, which steadily progressed to a fatal termination. All other forms failing, he was sustained for over seven months on olive oil alone—excepting, if you please, a few tablespoonfuls now and then of milk and of broths. The last few months the oil alone kept him alive, and that was applied externally. Little or no nutrient matter could be retained in the stomach, but the application of the oil always revived, allayed the sense of hunger, and restored vitality to the tissues not already infested with tubercles. So marked were the features of this case, that those who were not aware of the destructive process his lungs were undergoing easily imagined he would recover. This case will be recalled by Mr. E. E. Goodrich, of the Quito olive farm, to whom I exhibited the boy, and reported the progress of the case. Other tests have demonstrated the superiority of olive over cod liver oil in consumption, which, again, I am aware, is saying a great deal with a few strokes of the pen. But cod liver oil must not be mistaken for a medicine. Whenever or wherever it is of value, it is so as a food—as a nutrient to wasted or wasting tissues. It disgusts the palate, clogs the stomach, overtaxes the digestive juices to emulsify it, and lastly, is again an animal product, generally of filthy manufacture, and so adulterated with chemical "what nots," under various sophistries, that we say with a meaning: "God help the wretch who takes the ordinary article as it is found in the market."

No. 3. High grade imbecile youth of eighteen years of age. Had a malarious history, and for some years has shown signs of passive hyperæmia of the liver. Appetite very capricious, and diet correspondingly self-limited. Under no circumstances whatever can he be prevailed upon to take fruit in any form. Two months ago he began to walk stiffly; complexion rapidly assumed a dirty, coffee-ground color, particularly in patches. Complained of pain in the limbs, particularly the knee joints. On examination, hard, nodulous swellings were discovered on knees and on shin bones, afterward appearing erratically on back, arms, and ankles. In a short time almost any movement caused him distress, and I detected hallucinations of sight and hearing. Altogether, it made a remarkably interesting case, with recovery doubtful. Emaciation was rapid and pronounced. Medication with medicines proper was of little avail, so I fell back upon the use of olive oil, hoping that if only as a nutrient it would afford some relief—I did not expect a cure. I had the fellow oil-massaged from head to foot twice or more a day, and then rolled in blankets literally reeking in oil, and kept warm. Long and refreshing sleeps followed; then came increased movements of the limbs. All medicines were finally withheld, and the oil alone persevered in. The nodules slowly disappeared; the skin began to clear; in a week or so he could wriggle out of bed, became gradually more and more cheerful in mind, and at the expiration of a week he could stand on his feet sufficiently long for the attendant to rub him down; then his appetite improved, and considerable nourishment was taken with apparent relish. All pain left him; he began to take on flesh, steadily improved, and is now preparing to take a trip home to the southern part of the State. Although practically fully recovered, he has a slight oil massage every night on retiring. The most significant fact about the case is that the biliary secretions seemed to be immediately influenced by the oil, and that the urine, which in the beginning indicated kidney complication, cleared up at once.

No. 4. A poor, little, misshapen, and horribly neglected idio-imbecile boy of probably seven years of age, found existing (it could hardly be termed living) in the Mojave Desert, with a partially demented father alone. Charitable people took him, clothed him, and sent him up to the institution, and placed the father, an ex-soldier, in the Home at Santa Monica, where he recently died of brain trouble. The boy, in the two years that he has been with us, has progressed remarkably well, but is very delicate. His is a failure to assimilate the imperfectly digested food, and to make good, rich, red blood corpuscles. Like so many of our patients he, too, possesses a capricious appetite; only a certain few articles of light diet can be retained, and lately these have failed to give him strength or check the progress of the general atrophy that threatens him. A short time ago he began to sink rapidly, and recourse was had as a last resort to olive oil. It was supplied and continued much as in the preceding case. The results have been most favorable, so that now I confidently expect him to again get about, at least for awhile. I do not look for a permanent cure, as the nature of his affliction precludes the possibility of that. I wish that I could portray to you the absolute relief and comfort that the oil has given by absorption to this poor little sufferer.

Leaving out of consideration its emollient, demulcent, and laxative properties as before enumerated, our experience warrants us in giving it precedence as a reconstructive and to assume the following conclusions:—

First. It stands unrivaled as an element of natural food.

Second. It is unsurpassed as a remedy in most, and probably in all wasting diseases, where it relieves the stomach, rests overtaxed digestive organs, lubricates inflamed alimentary tracts and arrests their further congestion, satisfies most all demands of the system for a concentrated heat-producing food, and restores to a worn out or broken-down tissue just such elements of repair as its reconstruction demands.

Third. It possesses a direct alterative effect in constitutional diseases.

Fourth. It exerts a distinctive influence upon the liver, and apparently, also, upon the kidneys. The benefits to be derived from olive oil in liver derangements are not at all chimerical.

Fifth. Its reconstructive properties follow its external application quite as readily as when given internally, and in some cases the former seems to be preferred.

P. C. Remondino, M. D., of San Diego, says:—

There is no doubt but that that disease known as American nervousness, so graphically described by Beard, as well as the great prevalence of what might also be termed our American consumption, and the still wider spread condition known as American dyspepsia, would all be greatly lessened by a proper use of olive oil and a proper appreciation of the facts set out by Brakenridge. The writer has no doubt that had the old round-headed, broad-brimmed-hatted, long-visaged, and blunder-buss-carrying Puritans used more olive oil and less unnutritious slapsacks and apple dumplings, America would to-day be less affected with that leaven of pessimism which is such a prolific source of ill health, moral and mental, as well as physical.

Olive oil inunctions will relieve an infant of its exasperating peevishness and liken him to one of Raphael's Holy Family in countenance or disposition. Olive oil has the same effects upon adults.

Children are often affected by a persistent, harrassing, debilitating diarrhoea, due to the agglutination of some shred of tomato, grape, or other fruit skin to the mucus lining of the intestines. The cause is here a simple mechanical irritation alone, to be removed by the judicious but persistent use of olive oil.

AS A VERMIFUGE.

Olive oil is one of our safest vermifuges in the cases of children. It should be given in ounce doses, and frequently repeated. It is harmless, as it does not provoke active purging, and if the child's stomach does not reject it, it will often do its work without any additional drug. In cases of tapeworm, it has often carried away the head, tail, and body, simply by its weight and volume.

IN BLADDER AND KIDNEY AFFECTIONS.

In case of severe pains located in the region of the kidneys, olive oil taken internally, in medium doses, has often proved beneficial in granting prompt relief. It has also been used with success in cases of painful urination, strangury, and in cases of what is popularly termed gravelly urine.

IN INTESTINAL AFFECTIONS.

Simple diarrhoea, dysentery, colicky pains, flatulence, or constipation, have all been relieved by the prompt and generous use of olive oil. These diseases in children are peculiarly manageable with olive oil. There is nothing that will act more energetically in a case of imprisoned intestinal gases, accumulation of feces, or in some cases of hernia or rupture, than a large dose of olive oil mixed with a small portion of glycerine and a few drops of turpentine; if the latter are not obtainable, then the oil should be given singly.

IN GENERAL DISEASES OF CHILDREN.

Teething children should always be oiled, the oil being applied at least twice daily. Nervous, fretful, peevish children obtain great relief by a warm water sponging and an oiling. Rickety children, suffering from poor assimilation, will improve wonderfully on sweet oil inunction. Children suffering with fever and a high degree of temperature can be relieved by a tepid sponge bath and an oiling. Cases of scarlet fever I always oil, and keep on oiling from first to last; especially during convalescence is this oiling a great safeguard. Olive oil, taken both internally and by inunction, has often given great results in cases of dropsy, either abdominal or general. In Europe it has been used with signal benefit in epidemics of yellow fever, and in Asia and Africa it has been used with equal benefit in the plague. In cases of neuralgia, rheumatism, gout, chronic skin diseases, in fact with diseases in general which are liable to result or originate in malassimilation, malnutrition, or imperfect blood depuration, olive oil has often afforded signal relief. In the fevers of adults it is equally of great value, being useful in reducing the temperature and nervous excitement.

LOCAL USES.

Olive oil, in connection with an equal part of lime water, makes an excellent application to burned surfaces; it relieves pain and promotes repair. I have used it so mixed in burns, scalds, powder wounds, and in skin abrasions. In powder accidents involving the eyes, this makes a soothing and protective application. I have used the same mixture repeatedly in cases of smallpox, both in America and in France. In the epidemic that swept over the north of France during the Franco-Prussian war, I used it with great benefit, both in army and in civil practice. In conjunction with turpentine, it is an unequalled application to the tense and tender abdomen that at times accompanies typhoid fever.

AS AN ANTIDOTE TO POISONS.

Olive oil has been given with success in cases of mushroom poisoning, being liberally mixed with powdered charcoal. In general, it may be said that olive oil is a safe and efficacious antidote in most cases of poisoning, with the exception of phosphorus, where it should not be used.

Dr. Osburn further says:—

In malarial fever a vegetable diet in which the oil can be freely used . . . and the inunctions of the oil are followed in due time by relief because of the relief that this treatment brings to the jaded liver. In typhoid fever thorough rubbing in of as much oil as the skin will take at periods properly preceding the diurnal rises of temperature, will do more good, is more grateful, less troublesome to apply, and rationally more scientific than the treatment by cold water packs or the immersion of the whole body in a bath tub filled with water.

We might continue to adduce proof of the virtues of olive oil, but let the foregoing suffice. It is passing strange that the world who do not believe Christ and his word are seeking and finding out the efficacy of one of the means in his plan for securing health, and that many Saints do not appreciate, but are seeking for some other method. I believe in the anointing of the sick and the laying on of hands for the securement of health, and feel that the time is not far distant when none will be safe who do not rely thereon.

Yours for truth,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

A STRANGE RUIN.

A TEXAS correspondent writes to one of the scientific departments of the government of a strangely interesting prehistoric wall discovered on the frontier of the Lone Star State. This marvelous ruin surpasses in interest all the other wonderful remains hitherto found of the people who once inhabited the whole Mexican plateau and attained a high state of civilization. It passes through Milano, and has a total length of about twenty miles. It is built of solid masonry, ten to fifteen feet high, and as many feet thick. Its height and thickness are thus almost as great as the famous Chinese wall on the north of China. The direction is northeast and southwest.

It is for the most part under ground, and this is one of the curious things that puzzle those wise men who are supposed to know all about prehistoric remains. It is undoubtedly very old. One might suppose it to be the sure foundation of a gigantic fortress which rose above the ground many feet. The towers and other means of defense with which it might have been provided have had time to crumble away in the years that have passed. The long fortress may have been pulled down by the conquering invaders. As the people died out from the land the debris of the old wall would in either case cover its foundation.

The Aztecs probably built this wall. They have left some inscriptions on it, but since their language is entirely lost no scholar can ever hope to decipher them. One covers a space of eight feet square. The characters are kindred to Indian inscriptions, but not so closely allied that their mystery can be penetrated. There was undoubtedly a populous village or city in the vicinity, for on a high hill near Milano the remains of a mighty temple of worship are found. This was supported by more than two hundred lofty pillars. Some of them are still standing. They were made of clay which was well burned. This gave them the appearance of stone. In this temple were placed many idols, broken parts of which are preserved. One shaped like an owl is preserved entire. Human sacrifices were made to these, as well as sacrifices of birds, beasts, and reptiles. Skulls and bones have been preserved in the clay. Some of these belonged to large animals. Some are petrified, and it is thought that these early Aztecs may have understood the art of assisting petrification and thus preserved the bones of their sacrifices. The idols are all curiously marked. Around each pillar small stones are piled up in circles or squares, and inside each circle underneath the pillar there is a center or foundation stone fashioned to represent the godhead. Near the wall there are also furnaces in which the natives smelted iron.

The locality and direction of the wall are not easily accounted for. Perhaps it marks the boundary of certain tribal territory which was exposed to the attacks of the enemy. An enormous amount of labor and material must have been required for its construction if built above the ground on the same gigantic plan as the foundation. Although there were toward a million people then living in that vicinity, the work must have extended over a considerable period of time. Unless this was some strategic point it is difficult to understand how but a few thousands could be interested in its construction.

An old tradition says that the Aztecs were one of the seven powerful tribes that emerged from the seven caverns in a region called Aztlan, or place of the heron. They wandered away from their fellows after a great confusion of tongues and settled in the region they are made known to have inhabited. This tradition may be partly fabulous, but it is sure that the Aztecs settled the country before the eleventh or twelfth century. All the tribes lived in peace for a considerable time, until the strong began to encroach upon the territory of the weak. Then a fierce war for supremacy over the whole territory ensued and lasted many years. Under the leadership of their military chiefs the Aztecs obtained control of the territory and established a very enlightened form of government. This was consummated in 1324 or 1325. It is likely that the wall was built during this period of war.—Household Guest, Chicago.

CAUSE OF GRAVITATION IS UNKNOWN.

“THE offer of a prize in the January number of the Cosmopolitan for something new and scientifically valuable in regard to gravitation forcibly suggests the limits of our knowledge in this direction. There are not effects in nature with which we are more familiar than those of gravitation, but the cause of gravitation is entirely unknown to us. The general attraction between masses which we designate as gravitation is universally recognized, the laws under which it acts are well known, but we are entirely ignorant of the means of its action. We do not even know whether the attraction is resident in the masses themselves or in some medium which surrounds them,” writes Col. S. E. Tillman.

“We know that Newton himself pronounced as absurd the idea that matter could act at a distance, through vacuous space, upon other matter. He looked to a universally diffused medium for the mechanism of gravitation. He showed that if the pressure of this medium increased as we recede from dense bodies according to a certain rate the law of gravitation would result. He was unable to suggest an explanation for the supposed variation in pressure of the medium, and accordingly left the cause of gravitation untouched. Le Sage, the Swiss philosopher, attempted to fix a cause for gravitation by assuming space to be filled with innumerable atoms flying in all directions. These atoms he called ultra-mundane, because he supposed them to come from the outer universe. A single body would be bombarded by these atoms equally on all sides, but two or more bodies would partially screen each other so that the bombardment would be less on the sides of each body next to the other and greater on the sides farther away; consequently the bodies would be forced toward each other by the excess of bombardment on their outer sides. Under this hypothesis the corpuscular pounding necessary to produce the gravitation effects of matter is so great that the entire planetary system would be melted from the excessive heat produced. Hooke, the contemporary of Newton, attempted to assign the cause of gravitation to waves propagated in the surrounding medium. It has since been shown that in fluid motion the average pressure is least where the average motion is greatest, so that bodies immersed in the fluid would be drawn towards the center of gravitation. Sir William Thomson, by making certain assumptions in regard to the medium of space, and some very highly improbable suppositions in regard to matter, was enabled to deduce from them one of the laws of gravitation.

"The above may be said to be the only hypotheses which make any advance toward the explanation of gravitation. Of these that of Le Sage is the only one sufficiently developed to be even discussed. We have the high authority of the late Prof. J. Clerk Maxwell for the statement that the progress toward solution of the problem has been almost imperceptible since the time of Newton. He also says that the science-producing value of the efforts made to answer the question is not to be measured by the prospect they afford of ultimately yielding a solution, but by the effect in stimulating investigations of nature."

SOUTHWESTERN IOWA REUNION.

The committee of arrangements for the Southwestern Iowa reunion (Fremont, Pottawattamie, and adjoining districts) met at Wheeler, Iowa, March 17, 1894, and completed arrangements for the forthcoming reunion as far as is practicable at the present time.

The reunion will be held in the grove of Bro. S. Wood, at Wheeler's Grove, Pottawattamie county, Iowa, September 1 to 9 inclusive. No pains will be spared to make the accommodations all that could be desired. The grove is one of the finest to be found anywhere; large shade trees; a solid blue grass sod, and located on top of a hill in an airy place and easy of access. The brethren of the reunion committee at Logan, Iowa, have kindly consented to our using the large church tent, which will increase our seating capacity considerable. Further notice will be given in due time, giving details of arrangements.

This is to be a general reunion hereafter and therefore we desire all that can to come and help make and enjoy a good and profitable time.

T. A. HUGAS, Sec. pro tem.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23.—The Senate Committee on Public Lands will probably soon take up Senator Carey's bill granting to each of the arid-land States and Territories a million acres of the public lands, to be sold to settlers in lots of 160 acres each. The Secretary of the Interior indorses the bill, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office has written a letter in which he takes advanced ground in favor of the improvement of the arid regions by placing the work under the control of the various States. He says: "The bill is clear and guarded in its terms. It is in the interest of small settlers. The United States holds the title until the lands reserved are actually reclaimed and settled. This, if successful, is the great object to be attained." The States and Territories to which the bill would apply if it should become a law are: Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming.

LONDON, March 24.—A dispatch to Lloyd's from Santander, Spain, fixes the number killed by the recent explosion of dynamite, which was being removed from the sunken steamer Cabo Machichaco, at thirty.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., March 25.—Prince Beselow, the African Prince in the class of '97, Williams College, has received a call from his people to return to his native land and take possession of the kingdom which has heretofore been under the control of his uncle. Beselow is said to be an intelligent young man and is the son of the late King Armah of Bendoov, the western portion of Africa.

MONTREAL, Que., March 25.—A sensation is likely to be produced in political circles in Canada at an early date by a concerted move which will be made by the Roman Catholic bishops of Quebec in connection with the Manitoba school question. The Bishops have been studying the whole matter for some time and have finally decided to issue a joint pastoral letter dealing with the Manitoba and Northwest school question and with the neglect of Catholic education. The pastoral has been completed, but its delivery has been delayed owing to a slight difference of opinion. The pastoral has been signed by all the bishops of the province with the exception of the bishops of St. Hyacinthe, Rimouski, and Valleyfield. The hierarchy will, it is understood, sharply condemn the government's policy on the school question.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 25.—The Democratic General committee adopted resolutions protesting against the adoption of the new treaty with China, and requesting the Congressional delegation from this State to prevent its ratification.

VIENNA, March 25.—A congress of Austrian Socialists was held in this city to-day. One hundred delegates were present. Among the speakers were Babel and Singer, members of the German Reichstag, who dwelt upon the international character and the common object of the whole labor movement.

BRUSSELS, March 26.—M. Burlet, Minister of the Interior, will become Prime Minister in place of M. Beernaert and will be charged by the King to reconstruct the ministry.

LONDON, March 26.—A special dispatch to the Times from Paris, referring to Caprivi's recent utterances, which are interpreted as indicating that the Emperor is preoccupied with the problem of reducing the military burdens of Europe, says: "At a recent meeting of the Italian finance committee, one of the members, Sig. Capelli, declared that he had learned from an absolutely certain source that the Emperor was pleased to see that Italy was reducing its army and that Count Kalnoky, the Austro-Hungarian Prime Minister, had advised King Humbert that Emperor Francis Joseph was also pleased because of the lessening of Italy's military expenditures."

The correspondent of the Times adds that the King of Denmark in conversation with a Spanish statesman a few days ago said he hoped to live long enough to see Europe commence making military retrenchments. The King added: "The Czar, my son-in-law, whose mission is one of peace, is quite ready to cooperate, and Emperor Francis Joseph is equally disposed to do his utmost to bring about this end. I have not ventured to speak to Emperor William on this subject, because a new sovereign always dreams of winning new laurels, but I am sure that King Humbert is willing to discuss the question of a reduction of military burdens, while the Queen Regent of Spain has shown a desire for prolonged peace. I am sure, therefore, that Russia, Spain, Austria, and even Italy are equally eager for an unbroken period of peace."

A dispatch to the Times from Berlin says the Germania gives Chancellor von Caprivi's words a meaning that several of the nations of Europe are willing to take part in a movement to bring about a general reduction in military expenditures. The paper declares that Emperor William is foremost among the rulers who are eager for the establishment of a long period of peace.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 26.—Fifty men who were fishing on the ice here Saturday evening were blown out to sea by the high wind. It is feared that many of them have perished. Several steamers have gone in search of the men. Two bodies have been picked up on shore, where they had drifted. It is feared this may prove as serious as the disaster in Trinity Bay two years ago.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 27.—Representative Dunphy of New York to-day introduced in the House a modified form of the bill heretofore reported from the Committee on Commerce to authorize the New York and New Jersey bridge companies to construct a bridge across the Hudson River not below Fifty-ninth street nor above Sixty-ninth street, New York City. The bill reported from the committee, Mr. Dunphy says, authorizes the president to appoint a commission of five persons, whose decision as to the length of the span shall be final. That introduced by him to-day differs only in the respect that the commission's decision is to be advisory merely, and its recommendation as to the length of the span shall be approved by the Secretary of War before having any force.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 27.—Gen. P. M. B. Young, Minister from this country to Honduras and Guatemala, who has been on leave of absence, left to-night for his post of duty. He has been compelled to cut short his stay here because of the recent revolution in Honduras and the feeling on the part of the State Department that a crisis may arise requiring the presence of the Minister. He goes from Washington to Atlanta and will probably proceed from that point to New Orleans, thence direct to Guatemala City.

BOSTON, Mass., March 26.—At the meeting of the Woman's Rescue League resolutions were adopted condemning Congressman Breckinridge, and in the somewhat lengthy preamble the members take occasion to emphatically denounce the Congressman and brand him a menace to society and public morals. The resolutions were to the effect that "The Woman's Rescue League of Boston requests the chivalrous people of Kentucky to retire W. C. P. Breckinridge to a private life of obscurity and oblivion; that we extend to Madeline Pollard our sympathy while her whole life is like an open book and laid bare for public criticism; that this league believes Madeline Pollard more sinned against than sinning." It was voted to send copies of the resolutions to the Congressman, Miss Pollard, and to all the newspapers of Kentucky.

NEW YORK, March 24.—The National

Christian League for the Promotion of Social Purity decided to-day to send a memorial to Congress protesting against allowing Col. Breckinridge to retain his seat. They also decided to send a communication to Mrs. Breckinridge formerly Mrs. Wing, calling upon her in the name of womanhood to renounce her husband. In addition to this they voted to call upon the presbytery with which Col. Breckinridge is connected, asking to have him expelled. This action was taken upon the motion of Mrs. Clark Bell, who is President of the Woman's Health Protective Association.

PANAMA, March 27.—There is unusual activity in Colon. The canal palace and the residences are being brightened with paint and upholstery and many barges and launches are arriving. M. Bartissol, the French engineer, and other important personages are expected. There is much surmise in the meaning of it all. Whether it is preliminary to resumption of work on the canal cannot be ascertained. There is continued activity in preparing the plant.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The British steamer State of Georgia, which sailed from Glasgow March 4, only made this port to-day, having experienced heavy gales for the most of the passage and being five days imprisoned by pack ice and surrounded by icebergs. March 15 two of its bow plates were stove in by ice, and the damage was repaired with much difficulty. The ice encountered by the State of Georgia was solid, and with the frequent fogs made it difficult to see any distance ahead of the vessel. The reports of three steamships, the Kansas City, the Venetia, and the Gallert, and the American clipper Gen. Knox, all of which have just arrived, show that the procession of bergs that navigators in high latitudes may reasonably expect to pass will be larger perhaps than has been seen in many years.

LONDON, March 27.—There is a rumor that important War Office secrets have been obtained on behalf of the French Government at White Hall. It is said the War Office officials fear agents of the French Government have been able to procure details of the plans, etc., of the new works projected at Gibraltar. These works are said to be of a most important strategic character and as a result of the discovery that the French Government has obtained the plans a most stringent inquiry has been ordered into all the circumstances of the case.

The correspondent at Berlin of the Standard says confidential communications have recently been exchanged between the leading European powers on the question of joint action for the suppression of anarchism. It is known that several governments that have heretofore opposed the taking of concerted action against the Anarchists have now expressed themselves as favorable to the holding of a conference.

Emperor Francis Joseph will arrive at Abbazia next week, and will accompany Emperor William upon several of the latter's contemplated sea trips. Emperor William will meet Emperor Francis Joseph on board the yacht Christabel at Fiume.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 27.—B. Nagarkar, a distinguished religious student of Bombay, arrived here this morning. He will remain for a time to study Mormonism and learn from the people themselves all he can concerning their religious faith.

ST. JOHN, N. F., March 23.—Preparations are being made here for three arctic explorations this summer, one consisting of three or four persons, probably under the leadership of Professor Hollprin of Philadelphia. They will go to Bowerden Bay, in West Greenland, in the steamer Falcon, and will bring back Lieutenant Peary and party. During the winter another expedition under Mr. Stein, consisting of eight persons, proposes going to Smith's Sound to conduct geological investigations. They will remain three years.

One of its objects is to find the Swedish explorers, Bjorling and Waistennins who went north in 1892 on the schooner Ripple and were supposed to be lost as the vessel's wreck was found last year. The third expedition projected will be the largest in many years. The American Consul has signed a treaty for a steamer to take a party of sixteen scientists north to a place on Lady Franklin Bay. The expedition is under the auspices of the American Government, and an appropriation by Congress is awaited before completing arrangements. The purposes of the expedition are geographical, geological, and meteorological investigations. The party will remain north four years. A steamer is likely to visit them with fresh supplies two years after starting.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23.—Careful inquiry among the Scientific Bureau of the government fails to disclose any project for an Arctic expedition under governmental auspices such as is reported from St. Johns to be under way.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 27.—Reports received from various points in Mississippi; Monroe, Gibbsland, Alexandria, Clinton, and Bayou, Louisiana; Pensacola, Florida; and Dallas, Texas, are to the effect that a severe frost visited those sections yesterday forming ice half an inch thick, destroying early vegetables, strawberries, the fruit crop, and in some places early corn and oats and peas. The cold weather continues to-night.

DENISON, Tex., March 27.—A killing frost visited this section Sunday. The fruit crop is believed to be entirely ruined. Crops and gardens are severely injured. Ice formed to the thickness of half an inch.

ANNA, Ill., March 27.—The freeze did great damage to the fruit and vegetables in this section. The buds of the peaches, cherries, and early apples are thought to be killed. Pieplant, asparagus, and other early vegetables suffered. Strawberries are injured some. There will be no peach crop whatever, this freeze having finished the ruin which the January cold snap begun.

LINCOLN, Ill., March 27.—The weather has been intensely cold here since Saturday afternoon, when the maximum was 50° above zero. At sunrise yesterday the mercury had fallen 43°, standing at 7° above, and it is growing colder to-night. Ice formed to the thickness of several inches. Grass and wheat are withered, cherries and peach buds blighted, and early garden truck undoubtedly destroyed. The damage to the fall wheat crop is believed to be serious.

CAIRO, Ill., March 27.—It is thought the cold weather of the last three days has killed the strawberries in this section. Peaches were nearly all killed by the extreme cold of January. The berries were well advanced by last week's warm sunshine, but the weather is now freezing cold.

DEXTER, Mo., March 27.—The thermometer fell to 15° above zero Sunday night and the entire fruit crop, with the exception, probably, of late apples, is thought to be killed. Much wheat is supposed to be ruined.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 27.—The principal fruit growers of this section, after careful examination, say that the cold snap has only killed peaches, other fruits not being harmed. The reason given is that the buds were not far enough along to be injured.

CINCINNATI, O., March 27.—The thermometer Sunday fell to 16° above zero. Fruit and berries are killed, but the damage to wheat and other crops was not serious, although they are further advanced than usual.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23.—Some surprise is manifested in administration circles at the opposition that has already developed to the new Chinese treaty. The treaty, said one who spoke for the State Department to-day, is the outcome of months of patient work and skillful negotiation, and it was hoped the State Department had succeeded at last in settling in a manner that would be entirely satisfactory the question of regulating Chinese immigration.

RIO JANERIO, March 25.—Affairs here are rapidly resuming their normal aspect, and aside from the damage done to the forts and along the water-front by the fire from the insurgent warships, all traces of warfare have disappeared.

The government entertains no fear of much further trouble in the South. The insurgent sympathizers claim that the placing of Admiral De Mello at the head of the provisional government will attract many persons to the rebel standard, but the government here believes the insurgent forces will gradually melt away until nothing remains. The government has 12,000 men at Itarare and more at San Paulo, and these forces are believed to be more than sufficient to meet any that the insurgents can bring against them. It is reported here that the rebels are retreating from Rio Grande do Sul.

Business in Rio Janerio is rapidly reviving. This is especially true in the case of houses dealing with American merchants. It is the general opinion here that the attitude of the United States during the trouble here will result in a material increase of the business done with that country.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 27.—A leading member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, who is also a personal friend of Admiral Walker, discussing the mission of the Admiral to the Pacific, said to-day that while he had no authority to speak for either Admiral Walker or the State Department he believed that his mission had far more to do with the Bering Sea question than with Hawaii.

LONDON, March 28.—The Daily News this morning says the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, American Ambassador, yesterday had an interview lasting two hours with Prime Minister Rosebery on the subject of the Bering Sea seal fisheries and the action to be taken by the British Government in carrying out the decision of the Bering Sea Tribunal of Arbitration. A large number of telegrams were exchanged between the Foreign Office and Sir Julian Pauncefote, British Ambassador at Washington. It is expected that a settlement of the question will be effected by the end of the week.

Violent earthquakes have occurred in various parts of Greece.

The question of a general strike in Austria and Hungary was discussed by the Socialist Congress at Vienna. A majority of the speakers opposed the proposition.

President Cleveland has vetoed the Bland seignorage bill.

Coxey's army, about one hundred strong, has reached Columbiana, Ohio. The public press ridicules the movement.

A dispatch from Vienna to the Daily News says it is learned from the Russian Embassy there that the Czar desires to meet Emperor William on German territory to thank him for the successful issue of the negotiations for the Russian-German commercial treaty. The two sovereigns will probably meet at Stettin or Konigsberg in September. The Czar desires that Chancellor von Caprivi be present.

ABOUT CERTIFIED CHECKS.

The head of a leading banking house has had his counsel investigate the law in regard to certified checks, and finds that if the drawer of a check has taken it to the bank and had it certified he is still jointly with the bank responsible to the payee if the bank fails. If the payee, however, has taken the check to the bank and had it certified the drawer of the check is no longer responsible to the payee, because the payee accepts, by that action, the responsibility of the bank.—Wall Street News.

DARLINGTON, S. C., March 30.—In a street fight to-day between the militia and whisky constables on the one side, and citizens on the other, four persons were killed, two on each side. The citizens then got the upper hand and drove the State police force, which numbered thirty, into the swamps. The incensed people pursued, and it is now reported that after another conflict with loss on both sides the constables were captured and at once lynched.

The fight was the result of an attempt of the constables to search a private house. This was the object of the calling together here of the entire State force of whisky spies and the militia from Sumpter to back them up in their attempt to fight the people who were armed and determined. For two days the citizens had followed the spies and prevented an attempt to enter a dwelling, though several stores were searched for liquor.

The militia refuse to go out against the citizens. The latter are armed and determined and the situation is serious. The trouble grew out of the efforts of Governor Tillman to enforce the dispensary law.

WALLACE, Idaho, March 30.—Three families, consisting altogether of twelve to fourteen persons, were mangled beneath thousands of tons of snow in the snowslides yesterday, and any possibility of their being rescued alive is out of the question. Snow accumulated on mountains to depth fully sixty feet, and late rains caused the huge mass to move at several places.

COLON, March 30.—It is reported here that the Nicaraguans threaten to make a second seizure of the Mosquito Reservation. The British warship Canada is awaiting for a reasonable time at Bluefields in anticipation of the arrival of the United States flagship San Francisco with Rear Admiral Benham on board. The situation of affairs at Bluefields is said to be most critical.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 30.—The government has decided that henceforth all American insurance companies doing business in the empire must divide their profits with the insured after the policies have been in effect four years. Policies already issued are exempt from the provisions of this regulation.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages. Cloth bound, each 20 Paper covers, each 10c., per dozen1 00

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844. Muslin binding 70

THE MAKING OF A WOMAN.

THE education of a girl resolves itself to a single basis. Woman's progress may, in the minds of some, have seemed to make it more complex, and confusion can enter into the question if a mother allows herself to listen to the proclaimers of so-called "advanced ideas." We will be led into the mistake of cultivating the mind at the expense of the heart, if we allow ourselves to be so led. But the error is a cruel one—painfully so to the girl who is led, unknowingly, into it. But if we permit our common sense to rule, the problem solves itself. We do not want our daughters to be encyclopædias, but true, womanly women. The first we can buy, the latter we cannot. Let us first look after the physical development of our girls, teaching them that good health outweighs all things. Let them understand the human mechanism, hiding nothing. Let them know what God requires of a woman, and why it is essential that she shall be as perfect in health, and as well developed in body as possible. Teach, by example as well as by precept, the value of outdoor exercise. Then begin mental development, giving her the benefit of the largest educational advantages within your powers, insisting, however, that her studies shall be those likely to be of greatest usefulness in after life. Let her study not up to her fullest capacity, but just a little this side of it. A margin of unspent power is a tremendous force to a woman. Then, if our schools and colleges shall continue to neglect the teaching of household economics, keep your daughter close to you at home for a year at least, or longer if necessary. With her mind free from mental studies, teach her the rudiments of the home, hiding not the kitchen utensils as you show her the dainty chira. Make of her an all-around good home-builder and house-keeper, holding up ever before her the one great truth that a woman is always most satisfactory to herself when she is a woman, and most beautiful to others when she is womanly. Let her know what it means to be a wife and a mother. Make her not dependent, but likewise not independent in the modern interpretation of that word. Between the two lies the truest type of womanhood. Let her aim be womanly, her thought of others tender, living her life so that the world may be better because she passed through it.—E. W. Bok in Ladies' Home Journal.

REMEDIAL USE OF APPLES.

CHEMICALLY the apple is composed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, gum chlorophyl, malic acid, gallic acid, lime, and much water. Furthermore, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. The phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter—lecithin—of the brain and spinal cord. It is, perhaps, for the same reason, rudely understood, that old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of gods, who when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit, renewing their powers of mind and body. Also, the acids of the apple are of singular use for individuals, whose livers are sluggish in action, those acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters, which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull, or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. Some such experience must have led to the custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose, and like dishes. The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also the fact that such ripe fruits as the apple, the pear, and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach, rather than provoke it. Their vegetable sauces and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity.—North American Practitioner.

JEWISH MOVEMENT FROM EUROPE.

FROM a report of Commissioner Senner we learn that very nearly 10,000 Russian Jewish immigrants arrived at this port in the months of July and August, or enough to run up the number for the eight months of the year to about 40,000. To these Jewish newcomers from Russia we must add those from Poland, and to the number landed at this port we must add those landed at other ports, or perhaps in all about 60,000. After examining the statistics of the arrivals of steerage passengers at New York and other ports for the last three years, we believe it to be a proper estimate that there have come to this country within that time as many as 200,000 Jewish immigrants, the greater part of them from Russia.

The Jewish movement from Europe to America, which has reached such large proportions in recent times, is likely to continue for yet many years. The Russian Government is still bearing hard upon its five or six millions of Jewish subjects, a large proportion of whom are desirous of leaving that country in order to join their brethren in the United States, who at this time number not far from a million. It might be supposed that the news of the hard times in this country would have put a stop to their coming, but it has not had any such effect thus far, as we know by the September reports from Ellis Island, which show a marked decrease in the immigration of other races.—New York Sun.

"The Progress of the World" of the April Review of Reviews contains a timely discussion of the question why the English game of politics is more exciting than the American game. This question is suggested anew by the resignation of Mr. Gladstone and the intense interest aroused by that episode among Americans, to the partial neglect of Washington politics. Other topics covered in "Progress of the World" are, the Seigniorage bill, filibustering bill in Congress, the outlook for bimetalism, the Wilson bill in the Senate, Louisiana and free sugar, the Senate report on Hawaii, the triumph of the Brazilian republic, the Bluefields incident, the prosecution of election crimes, the present positions of the Democratic and Republican parties, the fight against the House of Lords, the Russo-German commercial treaty, the services of the late Dr. Poole of Chicago, the death of Louis Kossuth, and many matters of international interest.

"Rome," says a writer in the Contemporary Review, "is now a mere provincial town in an out-of-the-way corner of a small inland sea. The headquarters of the church in the days when she was a living reality gravitated by a natural law to the center of empire. If she is still to be a living reality, presiding over the development of our civilization and mothering the children of men, then she will be true to the law of her being and establish the seat of her sovereign pontiff in the center where sovereignty resides. Rome is of the old world, archaic, moribund, and passing away. The center, the capital, and the mother city of the new world which Catholicism must conquer or perish is not to be found on the banks of the Tiber, but on the Thames."

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 11, 1894.

ZION'S RELIGIO-LITERARY SOCIETY.

A GOODLY number of delegates to the annual general meeting of Zion's Religio-Literary Society of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met in convention in the Saints' church, Lamoni, Iowa, on Monday evening, April 2. President E. Etzenhouser, of Independence, Missouri, being absent, Sr. Fannie Jones, of Webster, Nebraska, the vice president, presided; Bro. John Hitchcock of St. Louis, Missouri, secretary.

A hymn from Winnowed Songs was sung; prayer was offered by Bro. F. M. Sheehy. The minutes of the session of 1893 were read and approved. This was followed by reading of the report of President Etzenhouser. The report outlined the development and growth of the organization, giving a succinct statement of its inception, its growth, and prospects for good. He called especial attention to the difficulties that had confronted the executive officers during the year. They had gone from the meeting of 1893 with the understanding that means had been devised and rules adopted that fully provided for the work to be done by anticipating all general contingencies; but upon making an effort to carry out the purposes contemplated by the organization it was discovered that the constitution and by-laws failed to fully provide for some features of work; that the instrument was defective. It had been adopted hastily, without sufficient time for its perfection, hence many essential features had been overlooked or omitted; all this consequent upon the limited time at the disposal of the meeting and general conditions governing it, in work then comparatively new to all.

To meet the emergency and prosecute the work of organization, the officers had met at St. Joseph, Missouri, during the year and had resolved to act upon their judgment as the situation seemed to demand. They appointed a committee to revise and perfect the constitution and by-laws, and issued a call for the assembling of delegates from the various local organizations to meet at Lamoni, April 2, 1894, to perfect the organization. The officers had acted according to their conception of the necessities of the occasion in meeting the exigency, and it remained for the society to act upon their work. The report of the president was approved by a unanimous vote.

The report of the secretary showed that thirty societies had been organized with a membership of one thousand; sixteen commissions had been issued from which other organizations would result. These societies were distributed throughout the United States from Maine to California. This was the result of about six months' work. Prospects for organizations in foreign missions were good.

Report of Sr. May Cooper, of Lamoni, treasurer: Receipts $70.61, expenditures $32.11; balance $38.50. Report received, referred to an auditing committee, and ordered spread upon the minutes.

Brn. G. J. Whitehead, Russell Archibald, and Sr. Ruby Stedman were appointed a committee on credentials. Under the circumstances before-mentioned it was decided to admit all delegates who affirmed their appointment as such. Pending the retirement of the credentials committee short addresses were made by various delegates. The committee reported the basis of representation to be one delegate for every five members. Delegates were present from various portions of the country too numerous for mention here; others from many points arrived later.

The new constitution was then presented for action. After reading and comparing with the former one, the constitution, and by-laws for local organizations, were discussed and adopted. The session then adjourned.

Business was resumed at eight a. m. of the 3d inst. The new constitution, with some amendments, was adopted. An agreement from the Herald Office to publish the weekly or monthly programmes in the HERALD free of charge, as it publishes other notices of legitimate church work, was accepted; the Herald Office further agreeing to mail copies of said programmes to each local organization, if so desired, at the cost of mailing, etc.

At the afternoon meeting the following named officers were elected: H. E. Jarvis, of Burlington, Iowa, president; J. A. Gunsolley, of Lamoni, Iowa, vice president; J. C. Hitchcock, of St. Louis, Missouri, secretary; Russell Archibald, of St. Louis, Missouri, treasurer. The society made an excellent choice of officers. The brethren appointed are competent and devoted to the work of the Religio. An energetic administration and a rapid and substantial growth during the coming year may reasonably be looked for as the results of their appointment.

Following the election of officers the programme for the year's meetings of local societies was discussed, after which Elder Rudolph Etzenhouser, of Independence, Missouri, delivered an address on American Archæology. He was followed by Sr. Fannie Jones, who addressed the delegates on some features of the society's work, in which especial attention was given to the subjects of Social Purity and Temperance.

The afternoon train brought large additions to the assembly; as a result the attendance of delegates at the evening exercises was largely increased. The programme consisted of addresses, music, declamations, essays, etc., as heretofore announced. Each number was well rendered; the audience was pleased, and gratified by the talent displayed. The society is to be congratulated upon the results so far attained and the promising outlook for continued success in its laudable work. It is supplying a needed want and doing much helpful work in the interests of the church. In proof of the commendable and necessary character of the objects it designs to accomplish we quote the first clause of its by-laws:—

Feeling the need of a systematic and united effort to do good to others, as well as to mutually improve ourselves in the principles and practice of morality and Christianity, and also to secure for ourselves social and intellectual development; we adopt the following, etc.

If church work does not comprehend the entire development of individuals, it must lack one prominent feature of the divine—comprehensiveness, completeness. Religious education in its complete sense comprehends the education of the whole man. It would be difficult to conceive of a divine organization lacking any essential feature. Zion's Religio-Literary Society designs to furnish for all, additional and systematic opportunities for the development of the social and moral powers combined with the spiritual development peculiar to and chief among the objects of church work. It has already brought many into the church; many have learned the truth and been baptized through their interest in the work of the society. At some points where branches are small outsiders compose the majority of the membership of the Religio. Young people, and indeed, some of the adults have sought unto the world for amusement and social enjoyment and, almost without exception, to their detriment. Zion's Religio-Literary Society supplies features hitherto denied many of the young of the church, rightly directing them in the cultivation of some of their powers for good. Good results to the church in general can therefore be expected from this movement. It is under the direction of young people who love God and his work.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

THE fourth annual convention of the General Sunday School Association of the Reorganized Church began its sessions at nine o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, April 4, 1894, in the lower auditorium of the Saints' chapel, at Lamoni. Superintendent E. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Michigan, presiding, W. N. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, secretary. Hymn No. 28, Winnowed Songs, was sung; prayer being offered by Elder M. H. Bond. The chair appointed Bro. F. M. Sheehy and Srs. C. B. Stebbins and L. L. Resseguie a committee on credentials. During the retirement of the committee addresses were made by several delegates. The committee presented a lengthy report naming the various districts and schools and their delegate lists. Bro. T. A. Hougas was chosen chorister, Sr. Dora Young organist; the Lamoni school superintendent to supply ushers. The organization now being complete, the minutes of last convention were read and approved. This was followed by the reports of officers. We present said reports herewith.

E. A. Blakeslee, superintendent:—

In accordance with the requirements of the position I hold it is at this time my pleasure to present to this body a partial review of the work of the association during the year just past, and in a general survey of the field give you a limited summary of the conditions that influence for progress or act as a hindrance in Sunday school work. The General Sunday School Association was organized at an opportune and fruitful hour, and the history of the three years just past speaks plainly that its foundation was not placed upon sand to be washed away by the ebb and flow of the tides of adversity; and its structure is daily proving that it is made of a texture sufficiently strong to withstand the various tests of opposition.

The reforms it set out to accomplish have brought to its support many of the best men and women of the church, who realize that through and by means of the Sunday school great and lasting good can be accomplished in the building up and solidifying of the church as a body, at the same time making strong the individual members, and especially the fitting of the young minds for the nobler duties of life.

The first two years of the life of this association it moved along like the little babe taking its first tottering and uncertain steps. Those in whose hands its destinies were intrusted were unfamiliar with the rules and methods to be adopted in the successful building up of such an important work, and while the church seemed to realize the necessity of an organization of this character among its young, yet in its general assembly it was unwilling to do more than adopt a resolution recognizing the association. Conditions have changed, and we find to-day that many in the church are desirous that the church should take charge of this association now that it has fully demonstrated its usefulness and that it is here to stay. If by the working out of its own rules of development it has grown into a permanency and demonstrated its usefulness in building up the kingdom of God here upon earth, why should it not be allowed to move along in its magnificent work, aiding the cause of truth while at the same time the association is from the inward workings of its own organization growing and developing into greater usefulness and grander possibilities, unhindered by outward influences and restrictions? It is sincerely my belief that the association as it is now will accomplish a greater good in the line of the object for which it was organized than could be gained by the placing of the selection of its officers in the hands of those who feel a very little interest in Sunday school work. Also those for whose good this work was placed in motion and is being carried to successful results should have those influences thrown around them by which they are made to feel a real responsibility and interest in the building up of the work. This has been one of the underlying principles governing the minds of those having this work in charge.

I am pleased to report that the Saints in nearly all parts are rallying to the support of this work where at first there was a feeling of timidity and reserve on the part of many good Saints, fearing that this was a temporary move only and would soon dwindle out, are to-day among the most ardent supporters of the Sunday school work and are ably assisting in pushing it on to grand successes, so that now we find only a comparatively small influence which is not directly centralizing its forces in the General Association.

From the many bright and encouraging reports received from the district associations, not only in America, but from foreign lands, it is shown conclusively that the work of the General Association is bringing harmony out of chaos and that a general unity and oneness of spirit and purpose is growing in the direction of building up one grand organization. One of the most prominent hindrances to the work has been a suspicion (which seemed to control the minds of many of the Saints) that the association would require a good deal of money to carry it on, while but little benefit would accrue to the schools; also that the tendency might be to use helps and aids outside of the Bible, which would hinder the direct teaching of the word of God.

Experience shows that the very opposite has been the result, and the student is wonderfully assisted in his investigation of God's word by use of the helps published by the association. They are such clear and forcible instructors that they are now being chosen by many for studying the word of God. I am pleased to report that the helps are daily proving themselves to be of incalculable aid to the Sunday school teacher in preparing her work and selecting just those prominent truths that are to be brought clearly to the minds of the children. It seems to me like folly to spend the time in this report to answer the charge brought against the use of the helps,—that they are worldly and not conducive to the proper understanding of the Bible. It is a narrow view for any man or woman that they have all the good there is and all the methods that can be adopted as aids in the study of the Bible or the unfolding of divine truths. Personally, I feel the need of all the assistance and all the helps from whatever source that will give me aid in unfolding the true principles of life here and hereafter.

I am glad to feel that I can recommend the helps of this association as the very best of the kind that I have ever examined. They are of a character easily understood, and yet they unfold to the student a perfect and continuous history of God and his laws in so clear and simple a style that the investigator is brought to a perfect understanding of their teachings.

Another element of weakness I have discovered in some of the local schools and associations is the strife for position and prominence. The work of our heavenly Father here on earth is not a school of politics, and surely should be free from all semblance of lobbying and conniving; and I believe this should apply to all departments. The one controlling idea in the selection of teachers and officers should be fitness and love of the work; and I am convinced that the man or woman who will connive and pull wires for any position in this work demonstrates by that act his total unfitness for such position. Stand ready to occupy when you are called upon, and do not push yourself forward. Such conduct will inevitably result in loss to the mover in such unwise proceedings and in great injury to the work.

Your committee, intrusted with the duty of putting a Sunday school missionary in the field the past year found that owing to the great depression in the finances of the country and scarcity of money in circulation it was impracticable to do so. We did, however, after securing permission from the missionaries in charge, through Bro. Robinson, the secretary, send a circular letter to each of the missionaries under General Conference appointment, requesting them to use their influence in forwarding the work, both by assisting the organization of schools throughout their missions and by their personal attendance at the sessions of the schools at all times when it was practicable for them to do so. The good results have been far beyond our expectations and more permanent good has been accomplished than it would have been possible for a single missionary to accomplish. We wish to extend to the noble band of missionaries the good hand of fellowship for the cordial and earnest support they gave us.

I attended the Annual Reunion at Logan, Iowa, in October last, where much permanent and lasting good was accomplished. The efforts put forth at these reunions for the past few years in this line of work have proven helpful to the workers who attended those meetings; they seem to grasp the true meaning of the work and are now pushing the cause to a splendid and permanent success. Respectfully submitted,

E. A. BLAKESLEE, Supt.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 4, 1894.

W. N. Robinson, secretary:—

Bro. Gomer Wells turned over the books of this association to me during the month of June last, since which time I have written upwards of five hundred letters, being greatly assisted by my wife first, and then by my sister, Belle, who with their typewriters were able to get out a large quantity of correspondence.

During August I met our superintendent by appointment at Chicago and agreed with him upon a line of action. He had gotten consent of the missionaries in charge of the various fields to urge each of the General Conference appointees to labor as they could in the Sunday school work, and to each of these was sent a personal appeal accompanied by the one from the committee on field labor about which you have heard in Bro. Blakeslee's report of the committee's work. In answer to these we received many encouraging reports, and although some of the missionaries could not see clearly that one of their duties was to help the Sunday school movement, yet nearly all were willing to be of as much benefit as they could. Some of the letters were cheering indeed, and will probably be read in your hearing, while only one carried the semblance of disgust with it that we should even ask for the cooperation of elders in such a sectarian move as Sunday schools.

I found that the blank statistical reports of district associations did not have space provided for the addresses of either the superintendent or secretary, and some correspondence was required to ascertain these.

I am also indebted to Bro. H. A. Stebbins for about two whole days' work in furnishing me with the names and addresses of all the presidents of districts throughout the world. I wanted to enlist their cooperation in this work and thought best to get the boundaries of each of the districts from them so as to know where to place any single school that might report or ask for information; also to see what prospect there was for the forming of additional association districts where there were no association districts organized. The names of superintendents of Sunday schools were furnished by the different presidents, it being our intention to get into closer relations with these superintendents so as to have them work with the missionaries and presiding officers. This last was only begun recently, so that much progress cannot be reported as yet.

Our association is gaining in numbers steadily, and in strength very greatly. New associations are being organized, and while we have had notice of but two organizations being perfected (the Spring River district, and the Southern Nebraska district), yet there are prospects for a number more in the near future.

The reports of districts already received by me are as follows:—

field; the prevailing financial depression had prevented the committee from making such appointment. The committee appointed at last session to compile a song book of original and selected music and words reported. Action on the report was deferred until the afternoon session.

The remainder of the morning hour was spent in reading reports from traveling ministers with whom the officers had corresponded concerning Sunday school field labor, referred to in the reports of the president and secretary. We insert a sample of said reports as showing the spirit of them:—

NEW CANTON, Ill., Jan. 5, 1894.

Bro. W. N. Robinson:—Your letter of September 20, on Sunday school work, is before me, received on last night. In the Nauvoo and String Prairie district they have district organization for Sunday school work, Bro. Benjamin Herrick superintendent. In this part of my field there is neither branch nor district organization, nor but little if any material to take hold of Sunday school work.

I think that there is nothing better in any community, than a well-organized Sunday school, and therefore stand ready to help in such work when I can. I have seen nothing so far, in the progress of Sunday school work that I consider subject to unfavorable criticism, unless it be that there has been (at least on the part of some) a disposition to make Sunday school work a work for the children to be engaged in only. When to my mind one ought not to think him or herself too old to attend Sunday school just so long as he can attend any service. There may be too many Sunday school "preachers," and not enough Sunday school teachers, in the schools. The scholars should be developed, in place of the teacher being expected to ask all the questions and answering the same.

Truly,
J. C. CRABB.

Adjourned till afternoon; benediction by Bro. Israel L. Rogers.

The afternoon session was opened by singing hymn number 106 Winnowed Songs, prayer being offered by Bro. C. E. Butterworth. Another hymn was sung, and the minutes of the morning session were read and approved. The credentials committee made an additional report. The report of the song book committee was approved and the amount due for postage was allowed. This committee had reported progress in its work, had called attention to the fact that while there was good musical talent in the church it was largely undeveloped, and had asked for an expression of the association concerning the amount of original and selected matter it desired in the compilation of the song book. The following resolution was adopted for its instruction:—

Resolved that in the opinion of this convention the Sunday school song book should contain as large a percentage of original matter as may be found practicable, but that selected matter should not be entirely excluded.

An appeal from some members of the Pleasanton, Iowa, school, asking that certain actions of that school and of the Decatur, Iowa, district association be annulled, was read and referred to a committee.

The report was referred to an auditing committee, Brn. Pitt, Mintun, and McDowell. Superintendent Blakeslee reported for the committee appointed to place a Sunday school missionary in the

A motion prevailed authorizing the officers of the association to prepare and publish blank forms for delegate credentials to the General Association. The officers were also authorized to revise and issue blank report forms for the use of Sunday schools and districts.

A resolution was presented providing that when practicable the Gospel Quarterlies be so changed in date that they begin with the new year, January 1, and thereafter conform in date to the regular quarterly divisions of the year. An amendment to this was offered. This was followed by the following substitute, which prevailed:—

Resolved that the Quarterlies be dated and issued according to the regular divisions of the year and that the time and manner of such change be arranged by the editor.

A request from the Southern California district association asking certain action with a view to providing for some special lines of teaching, etc., was presented. It was referred to a committee of three with instructions to report to the afternoon session of the 5th inst.

A report was read from the Pottawattamie, Iowa, district, showing that an association had been formed consisting of three schools: Crescent City, Council Bluffs, and Underwood, with a respective membership of 58, 90, and 40. A report was also read from the Pioneer Sunday school of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania—enrollment 113.

The secretary presented an itemized statement of expenses for postage amounting to $12.83. It was allowed and an order on the treasurer for the amount was authorized.

The credentials committee made an additional report.

Brn. Henry Kemp, John Shields, and J. D. Erwin made reports of their missionary labor in behalf of the Sunday school work.

A motion prevailed requesting the HERALD to publish the reports of the officers in full.

The evening session of the association was devoted to an illustration and discussion of methods of teaching. The lesson was taken from Dr. Trumbull's "Teaching and Teachers," pages 138-198 inclusive. It was in charge of Bro. J. F. Mintun, who was assisted by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley. It concluded with a chalk talk by Bro. T. A. Hougas.

This work of special study of and training in the science of teaching is of great importance and worthy of fuller mention than we are able to give it here. To those interested in becoming workmen approved of God—competent and effective—in Sunday school class and in pulpit teaching, we commend a study of the exposition of the art of teaching as presented by

Dr. Trumbull, in which it is stated and expounded, plainly and briefly. "Whatsoever is worth doing at all is worth doing well," is a trite saying, to which "ought to be done well," may consistently be added. It has become apparent that the successful workers for God are those who "seek learning by study" combined with their "faith," that both individual study and the prayer of faith—an essential to fitness for the performance of the duties of the teacher. "God helps those who help themselves,"—who thus give substantial evidence of earnestness in their labors. It is evident that the Lord can do little or nothing for individuals until they learn to exercise their individual powers, according to the agency given them, in harmony with the laws of their being,—the laws of spiritual and general development,—the laws of God.

Thursday, April 5.—The morning session was opened in the usual manner, prayer being offered by Bro. O. B. Thomas. Srs. L. L. Resseguie and Viola Blair, of the Lamoni school, illustrated "a specimen of a contemplated special primary series of lessons." The work was commended by those who witnessed it.

Bro. W. N. Robinson of the Independence, Missouri, school gave a chalk talk. It was a decided feature of the convention. Bro. Robinson throws life and animation into his work and interests and enlivens his scholars. He is well adapted to Sunday school work.

Sr. Dora Young, of Dow City, Iowa, followed with a class in the intermediate department. She had met the scholars but once, a short time previous to the session, but succeeded in obtaining their interest and coöperation, and received correct answers and statements, showing that they comprehended the lesson—"The Vine and the Branches." Sr. Young invited criticism, which brought out discussion of methods, especial attention being given to "preparation" and the "use of manuscript;" the general verdict being, that studious preparation and prayer were essential to success in teaching; that while manuscript notes were permissible when necessary, it was the better plan to so store and discipline the mind as to readily acquire, retain, recall, and present the subject matter of the lesson.

The afternoon session opened at 1:30. Hymn 186 Winnowed Songs was sung; prayer was offered by Bro. Columbus Scott. The minutes of the previous sessions were read, approved, when an additional report was read from the committee on credentials.

The following report was presented and adopted:—

LAMONI, Iowa, April 4, 1894.

We the undersigned, a committee appointed to investigate concerning the appeal of certain members of the Pleasanton, Iowa, branch, Sunday school, beg leave to report that in the opinion of the committee the action of the Pleasanton Sunday school and district association should be sustained.

The report of committee appointed to audit the treasurer's account was read. It reported the account correct, and asked explanation concerning some arrangements made in earlier years for certain work authorized by a committee of the association. The auditing committee's report was adopted and the committee discharged. This was followed by the appointment of a committee to audit the Herald Office account of publication of the Quarterlies. The committee obtained an itemized statement of the account, showing the balance due as reported in the treasurer's account. It was explained that the Herald Office had issued the Quarterlies when the association was entirely without funds, and that it had done so at about the actual cost of publication, and had kept the mailing list of subscribers, rendering to the association an account of the profits derived from their sale as a balance due the association, which account agreed with the report of the treasurer. The report was adopted and the committee discharged.

The following paper from the Southern California district association, together with the accompanying majority and minority reports from the committee appointed to consider the matter, were presented:—

To Elder J. F. Burton, Delegate of the Southern California District Sunday school association; greeting:—The following resolution was adopted at the November meeting of the Southern California district Sunday school association, in 1893:—

"Resolved, that the delegates from this district association be instructed to request the consideration by the General Association of the following preambles and resolutions; to wit:—

"Whereas there is a necessity existing for a more complete work in our Sunday schools in instructing the members of the schools in their privileges and duties as Saints, and—

"Whereas the older members of the church do not at present take such interest in the Sunday school work as would be profitable to them and the church, and—

"Whereas the newer members of the church cannot be expected to fully understand their duties and privileges relative to the church, its officers, and its government, be it—

"Resolved that in all schools where practicable, classes shall be formed for the purpose of instructing church members in their privileges, powers, and duties relative to church work, its officers, and government (especially of branch and district), and that the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Rules of Order, and the resolutions of General Conference, be the standard works of reference in teaching these principles.

"Resolved, that the General Association invite the First Presidency and the traveling ministry to aid this special department of the Sunday school work by their counsel and instruction to the schools and their officers, and in whatever way seems best by them to qualify the members of the church for the responsible work which devolves upon them.

"Resolved, that a proper system of examination be devised by which classes may be graded, and pupils advanced to the higher studies as they become qualified."

VINA H. GOFF, Sec.

SANTA ANA, California, Feb. 25, 1894.

We of your committee to whom was referred a paper sent from Southern California district and presented by Delegate J. F. Burton, have examined the matter and report that we find it contains matters of importance worthy of our attention. The limited time now at our disposal is unfavorable for a proper discussion at this session; we therefore recommend that it be deferred until the next convention.

F. M. SHEEHY,

DORA YOUNG,

Of the Committee.

MINORITY REPORT.

While recognizing the laudable character of the object sought—the better instruction of members of the church in their duties as Saints and in understanding of the rights, duties, and powers of officers, of church government, etc., it is apparent to the minority that the special affirmative teaching of those lines belongs to the general church through its general and local ministry, each according to office and calling, as provided for in the law of God.

Further, that in the Sunday school work all have privilege of studying the information contained in the three books, and of calling to their aid in schools and associations those of the ministry, general and local, who may be available, under the provision of the constitution that asks the fostering care of the church over the Sunday school work.

The member of the committee reporting here believes that in that present development of the church and the growing understanding of duty by the ministry, general and local, and through their teaching to the membership, such objects and teaching as asked for and desired in the request of the Southern California district association will be obtained and supplied.

It is further believed that the question of grading schools has been largely provided for, and can be understood and further developed by correspondence with the association officers.

R. S. SALYARDS, of the committee.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 5, 1894.

The original paper, the majority and the minority reports were discussed, and the matter was deferred until the next convention.

The following resolution, which is self-explanatory, was adopted:—

Resolved that the officers of the association be authorized to employ the lesson committee and fix the amount of its compensation.

Resolved further that they be authorized to provide all necessary arrangements for further development of primary work, as in their judgment shall be considered necessary and judicious.

The assembly next proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. The present officers were re-elected by acclamation as follows: E. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Michigan, superintendent; Sr. M. Walker, of Lamoni, Iowa, assistant superintendent; W. N. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, secretary; Sr. C. B. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, treasurer.

The following named brethren were appointed a committee to revise the lessons for the coming year: E. L. Kelley, J. R. Lambert, and Duncan Campbell. The officers were authorized to fill vacancies on the committee should such occur.

A general discussion of missionary and general work in the interest of the Sunday school cause then ensued. The delegates of the laity and ministry took a keen interest in the arguments and statements presented, as they had done in all the work of the association. The ministry expressed themselves as pleased to have the opportunity of obtaining the valuable information concerning general and specific features of Sunday school work, and of receiving and comprehending the spirit of the movement, with a view to laboring for its extension and establishment throughout the world. It is evident that this line of service in behalf of the church will be heartily supported by the energetic efforts of the ministry general and local.

Bro. C. P. Faul and Sr. — Hinderks presented a statement of work being done in the Far West, Missouri, district in behalf of the German scholars, the need of German Sunday school literature, with a plea for consideration of the interests of the German and other peoples who speak other tongues. This caused the adoption of the following resolution:—

Resolved that we approve of the efforts of the German school in the perpetuation of the language and extend to them the hand of encouragement till we can do more.

The association officers were authorized to appoint the committee to arrange a programme for the next annual session. The business session then adjourned to the evening hour.

The evening session was in charge of the superintendent. The programme as published included addresses and vocal and instrumental music. The Lamoni orchestra enlivened the occasion with a good rendition of excellent music. Bro. T. A. Hougas and J. W. Wight, the latter from Australia, delivered the addresses. The exercises pleased and edified the large audience present. Bro. J. H. Lake pronounced the benediction and the Sunday school convention was adjourned.

The general and statistical reports and the business done present a sufficient statement of the work done by the General Sunday School Association, the objects it is striving to accomplish, and its prospects for future usefulness as an auxiliary to the church, or rather, as a "regular department of church work and care." The hearts of God's people are with it, and they rejoice in its good work and substantial growth as a power for good.

The Presbyterian Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of New York has twenty-five women missionaries in Brazil, Chile, and Colombia stationed in half a dozen different places and doing effective work in all.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THE sessions of the forty-second General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were opened in the Saints' church at Lamoni, Iowa, on Friday morning, April 6, 1894, at ten o'clock. President Joserh Smith called the assembly to order. The sessions of the auxiliary church organizations had brought a large number of delegates and visitors, so that the attendance at the opening of the conference was good and most of the delegates were rested from the weariness of travel and in good condition for the transaction of the business before them. A permanent organization was completed by the choice of President Joseph Smith as President, Pres. W. W. Blair as Assistant President, and at the suggestion of President Smith, Bro. A. H. Smith of the Twelve as Associate President; Bro. H. A. Stebbins Secretary, with authority to choose assistants.

Hymn No. 720 was sung followed by prayer by the President. The assembly authorized the President to appoint a committee on credentials. Bro. C. H. Porter, Henry Kemp, H. E. Moler, Hubert Case, and J. B. Roush were appointed as such. Delegates were instructed to present their credentials and the committee permitted to retire.

The chair announced that five minute speeches would complete the unexpired time of the session. A number of addresses were made by various members of the ministry and Mrs. William Leeka and Gideon Hawley. We publish some of them, lack of space compelling the omission of others.

President Joseph Smith:—

I presume it will be just as well that I make the first effort and try at least to set a good example so far as the time is concerned, whether I do as to subject and matter or not. I enter into the business of this conference with perhaps as much diffidence as to what may be its features as any that I have ever attended, and I see full well that the unfortunate fulfillment of prophecy uttered some fifteen to twenty years ago in reference to the next effort that the adversary would make in order to overthrow the church has been proceeding, and if I am not proved to be a true prophet in any other thing, I am sure that the discerning ones among the elders must needs confess that I uttered a true prophecy when I told the Saints that the next effort would be to sow division and dissension and create trouble between the eldership and the brethren. And now while I have no fear of the ultimate accomplishment of the design that God may have had in view in instituting the church and its reorganization, (for I have implicit confidence in both,) I can but deplore the untoward consequences if they ensue; and I may only say as an individual that I propose to do what in my conscience I believe to be right, and leave the consequences with God. I cannot do his work nor the work of Christ; I may, however, by virtue of blessings from them, be able to be a co-worker with them, but in this I may sadly err by allowing human aspiration and human weakness to intervene, and especially human willfulness; for while I may be blind; mentally, morally blind, sometimes I recognize the fact that there is no blindness that happens to mankind that is so destructive as that which is willful.

An inability may be pardoned, but a willful, perverse diversion—an unwillingness to see, is the most unfortunate blindness that can happen to man. Now I desire to be kept from that, and I congratulate you—especially you that have been missionaries—I congratulate you, and I do it sincerely that while you may have seen things that you did not altogether like, you have manfully pressed forward in the things which your conscience commended; and you have done a good work, and its influence is being felt, and with the concatenation of circumstances that are holding you, there is to be a wiser usefulness and a greater progress than ever before.

President W. W. Blair:—

Beloved Saints and Friends:—I became associated with this work in 1851, and in answer to urgent, fervent prayer, I received evidence from God that it was his work; that it was what it claimed to be—divine. I had my trials afterwards, possessed with a peculiar temperament in some respects: days, months, and years witnessed very severe trials in some directions, but I found that these conditions were fruitful of great good, giving experience that I otherwise could not have attained.

I became acquainted with the Reorganized Church in the month of November, 1856, and it came to me in power and in the revelation of God's Holy Spirit; but I did not formally unite with it until the spring of 1857; since then my interests have been strictly and fully identified with what is known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We have witnessed, as a matter of course, peculiar conditions, peculiar times, all the way along, outside and inside the church; but in the midst of it all I have recognized the hand of God over and above all. We have seen his watchful care, his kindly providence, and this inspires us with unflinching hope that such will be the conditions hereafter, whatever may occur, that the overruling hand of God will be with and upon his church; and that he will bring it off to final victory, to final glory and dominion, and that he will have a people prepared for the coming of Jesus Christ our Lord. I haven't the least hesitancy in regard to this, and therefore I intend to be united with the work of God, with gospel work and with his church and kingdom, as I have proven it to be true and of divine origin.

Of course we cannot expect perfection in this present world; we look to Jesus Christ as the only perfect one that earth has ever known, but we press forward, and I deem it the duty of every missionary and every member to press forward, looking unto Jesus Christ our Lord in the spirit of forbearance, diligently, faithfully, and prayerfully, that we may bless humanity, bless the Church of God in particular, and glorify the name of our Father which is in heaven.

But for my own part I am glad I am a Latter Day Saint; and let come what may come, why still I hope to abide in the faith and abide in the work of the Lord; and to this end I ask the prayers of the Saints, as I always pray for them either by name or collectively; and I understand this to be the bounden duty of all who compose the church of the living God, that they should bear one another up before the throne of grace, that wisdom and guidance may be given to all; and when we continue on this way we will finally reach at one common point, whatever divergences there may be, whatever differences there may be among the Latter Day Saints to-day, they have continued on to know the Lord; they will know him; Christ will lead them, the Holy Spirit will lead them, the word of God will lead them; and finally and ultimately, though they pass through a great deal of trial and are encompassed about with imperfections, they will finally be brought to salvation and glory. This is my hope, and has been for many years. I trust it ever will be.

I can bear testimony to-day as I have in times past that I know this latter-day work is of God, and therein do I rejoice. That is the sheet anchor with me, that God is the author of this work and that he will watch over it to defend it; that the reins are in the hands of the Lord and he will guide the destinies of his church according to the counsels of his own mind and bring it off to the glorious victory. What we need is to keep our eye upon the mark of the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus, and continue on and on until the Lord shall have said, "It is enough," and shall receive us into our everlasting reward. And that this may be the happy lot of all who are before me, ministers and members, and of all the Church of God everywhere, is my prayer and shall be my effort by the grace of God. Amen.

Bro. A. H. Smith, President of the Quorum of Twelve:—

Brethren in conference assembled:—It has been said in the past that the ministry representing this church was something like a train of cars, that they followed each other along in line of thought. That has been said this morning that has directed our line of thought to the consideration of the nature of the work as it appears and has appeared. As I look back over the past I remember that my conceptions of this work when presented to me were of the character that at first it was represented in an effort of God to establish his kingdom among men, and that in the restoration of the work it was still the effort of God to establish his kingdom among men. The purpose was that his will should be done on earth as his will is done in heaven; and still again the Reorganization as we represent it, it has to my mind been for that purpose; and when I was convinced of the nature of the work and accepted it, I did it with the full conviction that the warfare waged would be with the flesh, the world, and the Devil; and it has been intimated to-day that the efforts of the adversary whom we recognize to be the Devil would be within.

Now it is possible we may hear mutterings of the storm, we may see the dust of the flying clouds; but if we do, that is no reason that we should feel shaky and seek to desert, because we of the Reorganization have been fighting the world, the flesh, and the Devil; and we think we have been fighting a successful warfare when we contemplate the appearance and the representation of the church before us to-day with what it was thirty to thirty-five years ago. And now while the news comes from every quarter of the success of the work, (and there never has been a time when this Reorganization stood in so fair a position to meet the enemies from without as she stands to-day,) need we fear and tremble if perchance we hear something that would indicate that there is something wrong somewhere in the machinery? Wise men would seek to regulate that which is wrong; and if anything of that kind develops, it becomes our duty to regulate it, not allowing the adversary to destroy the work that has been so well begun and so far so well carried out; and if there be such effort being made it becomes our duty to unite shoulder to shoulder where we find the enemy: to stand for the law of God, stand for it in defense.

I never felt stronger in the work that I feel now; I never felt more determined to continue in the great warfare than I do now; I have never seen so great reason for standing by the work that we have so long contended for, and standing firm. I see the necessity of being humble, of listening to the instructions of God, of obeying the commandments and keeping strictly in line with the law of God; I feel it more necessary now perhaps than ever before. Hence to me,—though there may be that that will cause fear, not for the consequences of the work that it shall be overthrown, but fear that the consequences may bring heartburnings and trouble to those whom we love, and cause us to feel that we have been chastened,—I have no fear that the work of God will be overthrown and destroyed. I see the evidences that God is moving and establishing his work, and that he will have a people that will be a tried people, and a people that will heed his commandments and be led of him. The purposes of this great work will be accomplished and his kingdom will come, and we may come to this conclusion that where God's kingdom is established among men on earth there will be men of God and lovers of righteousness; men that will cling to the right, let come what may come; they will stand by the right and the law of God. I feel that this is my intent. May God bless you.

Bishop E. L. Kelley:—

The year that has passed has been one of the most eventful in the church's history, to my mind. While there may not have been so much noise heard, yet the silent forces that have been at work moving us up to a place that we might profitably occupy to the interest of the kingdom that we all love have been such as have not been before in the Reorganization. We stand better to-day than we ever have stood so far as having a prospect of work before us, unhindered and untrammelled with the cloud of evil that has followed the Reorganization from 1850 to the present time.

The cloud of shame that has hung over this people has been lifted, and this year, if we will but do our duty here, the eldership may go into the world and preach the word as those who are moving in an offensive warfare, instead of being compelled to stand and defend themselves from the actions of false brethren hitherto. This to my mind is one of the brightest things that is just before us. We have opportunities; whether we will be able to occupy, is another question. God has been willing all the time, I believe, in the past number of years, to place us here; but we have not been ready to stand. Just as surely as we get ready to stand and occupy there will be plenty of ground for us to stand upon, and so it is we have come to the position that every one should stand as it is recorded of a certain line in the Scriptures, that every man should show himself a king if necessary; that is, that we have an individual responsibility to God; we have to answer to him; we are in his work; he has called us to that, and while we answer to each other, we must not forget that when the judgment shall sit and the answer over there delivered be the final one, then we must give that that has been in accordance with truth and his direction to us as a people.

I have no fears with reference to the work, I have no fears with reference to the result of the contest, if there should be any, in this conference. I believe in God, I believe in the direction of the divine hand. If it was not for that I should not be with the organization at all. He has followed in the past. I have not felt in the year that has been past but what I could rely upon him. I don't believe I will be compelled to move forward without his sanction and guidance in the future; neither do I believe that a single one of his children here is so compelled to move forward. If they will place themselves before him it is written in his law, every man shall be "taught of God;" and he is ready to perform whatever he has promised to his children. The idea of fear and distrust and darkness comes not from God, but from the evil one, and to banish the evil one it is written in the law that we must resist him: "Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you," is just as great a truth as any other that is recorded; and I believe in the great body that is gathered here of the eldership who have been fighting for the work of the kingdom of the Messiah, the past number of years, about a score and a half, that it still relies upon him; for he has guided them thus far, and they rely upon his promises that have been made that he will reveal himself when necessary to the President of the society; that God will direct us aright; and we have no fear when that revelation comes. That we may so do is my prayer in Jesus' name.

Bro. Charles Derry, President of the High Priests' Quorum:—

I am glad to meet with you. My hope is in the gospel of Jesus Christ to-day. It has been nearly a half century since I first became acquainted with it—forty-six years since I obeyed it. And the secret why I am with you to-day is because in my obedience then I received the blessings which God promised to his believing and obedient children; and, still further, because that when he called me into his work to labor for him he fulfilled his promise that he would stand by me and make me a power for good; and when I met with the Reorganized Church after the hour, the years of darkness that were past—led thereunto by the Spirit of the living God, I again received that same abiding testimony which has been with me. It has aided me and has been to me a rock, a witness that I could not doubt of the divinity of this work.

My heart is sometimes pained to hear things transpire; but my hope is not in humanity. My trust was not placed there when I obeyed this gospel; it has never been placed there. My hope and trust are in the Lord God Almighty and in his Son Jesus Christ. I look forward to the accomplishment of his purpose on earth. I expect to see that accomplishment as much as I expect to meet the face of my God at the judgment bar. I expect to see all of these purposes accomplished, his work go forth, and the kingdom of God triumphant. This is my hope and still continued desire that it may be my hope through life in Christ. Amen.

Bro. J. F. Burton, of the Seventy:—

I cannot say as some have that I am old in the latter-day work; for I am but a child in it. When the elders first came to the mountains on the western coasts of Joseph's land they found me surrounded with the darkness produced by the traditions of my fathers. They brought with them the law of light; and in them was a great desire for me,—after presenting to me the first principles of the gospel,—to induce me to believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet. I told them I could not see; the light was not enough for that; but still they urged it upon me. I said, "You must not ask me to say that I see that which I do not. Just leave that alone, and when the good Lord has opened the door wide enough to let the light in, I will see it if it is his." They then presented the Book of Mormon to me, and I told them that just the same: "How can I understand that? I have known nothing of that in my life; I can't see it." "But" they said, "you must; we cannot baptize you without you can see that." Then I said, "I must abide my time and wait until the good Lord gives me light to see it. I am not ready to say I see it when I do not see it." "But," I said, "I see this much: I have always believed there was something in the Bible that I did not have. I have believed in my past life that Jesus is the Savior of men, and, of more importance, he has a rule by which he will save us. You have come to me with greater light on that, and I see that much. Why not let me go that far?" "Go down to the river with me, baptize me, let me receive the laying on of hands by which I will receive the Spirit from on high, and then perhaps light enough will come to my mind to see, and when I see I will say I see; until then I cannot." Brethren, I obeyed the gospel of the Son of God without believing one iota that Joseph Smith was a prophet, or that the Book of Mormon was true. I believed the gospel because in it was the power of salvation to me and in it were the elements of life that would enlighten my mind, and I believed it then. I believed it would lead me onward, higher and higher, until I could say that I saw all God would let me see: all that was necessary he would let me see. I obeyed, and in a little while I saw. Immediately I saw, I was glad that I saw, and from that time until the present time the light that dawned then has been enlarged—my mind has been enlightened. But I stand to-day in the same place, finding myself in a great deal of the darkness produced by the superstitions and the errors of our fathers and the education of former times, and in the present time; and I cannot step to-day only as I see; I don't wish to be asked to step only as I see; and if I refuse to step, brethren, don't attribute it to stubbornness upon my part, if you please; but only because of my darkness, because I am not willing to step unless I see.

I commenced this work on the thought that the gospel was the power, and by the law of the Lord I should be saved. Every step I have taken since, I have gone in accord with that principle that I will follow wherever the law of the Lord leads me; and by the light from on high that I see that law, immediately I see it, I will step by it. I have step by step gone higher and higher as I believe,—not boasting I say it,—and now I stand there. Thus far I have gone I am immovable, I believe; the rock of ages is beneath my feet because every step that I have taken has been in accord with the law of the Lord; and I have been willing to accredit this thought also to my brethren throughout the church.

I believe that in the integrity of the hearts of my brethren the same principle is implanted, and all of us in this room to-day are determined with the help of our Master to step out upon the law of the Lord and there only walk as far as the light is given. And we will not say we see when we don't, and when we do see we will walk as broadly and as widely as we may, under the Divine Spirit of the Almighty, which is working upon the integrity of the hearts of our brethren; and that will lead this conference out of the difficulty that it is in, and into the brightness of the liberty of the sons of God, because we shall all walk in harmony with the will of God because it is his word; and his word shall be our guide, our direction.

The assembly was seated in this order: The First Presidency, the Twelve, the presidents of Seventy, and the Bishopric on the pulpit platform; the quorums of Seventy in front of the stand, in the center aisle; the quorum of High Priests to the left of the stand; the elders next in north aisle; the elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and lay delegates immediately after in their respective order; the remaining portions of the house being reserved for visitors; the present method of seating being arranged so that participants in the conference might readily see all who took part in the business.

Bro. John McMullin, a blind brother from Independence, was announced as having specialties for sale in the entrance hall.

The afternoon session was opened promptly at half past one; prayer being offered by Bishop E. L. Kelley.

The committee on credentials reported. The report included a statement of district and branch representation, the names of delegates with the number of votes to which each was entitled. Brethren present appointed to represent districts not included in the report were authorized to act on furnishing evidence of appointment, etc.

The report of the First Presidency was read and received, and ordered inserted in the minutes. It is as follows:—

The Presidency, to The Elders and Brethren in Conference Assembled; Greeting:—

1. There being now no rule by which any specified number or majority is required in ordering the "previous question," we recommend, that for and during the present session, at the earliest practicable moment, a rule be adopted to the effect that a majority of two-thirds of those present and voting shall be requisite to the ordering of the "previous question."

2. That localities where branches or any considerable number of members exist, the organization of them into districts or conferences, and the placing of high priests to preside over them be ordered and provided for.

3. We take pleasure in stating that, so far as known to us, other than issues now pending and likely to be settled at this session, there now exists no division of sentiment or interest on the public policy, doctrine, church law, and procedure, of such magnitude or importance as to prevent, on the part of the Presidency, the best of sympathy and cooperation in the work of the church, with the active forces of the missionary quorums, and those in the field, or likely to be placed there this session.

The Presidency has tried to avoid any improper interference in the labor, or charge of either quorum, or individuals of the force; and if any friction has occurred, it was not sought, or purposely provoked by us; nor do we hold ourselves responsible for any misapprehension, and consequent misapplication of what we have done or said in this regard, if any has occurred.

4. The decision of the cause, The Queen vs. Dickhout, in the courts of Canada, in which the identity and Christian character of the Reorganized Church, and its right to legal existence and to do business in the Queen's American dominions, were fully considered and determined in our favor; and the opinion and decision of Judge J. F. Philips, in the pending suit, The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints vs. "The Church of Christ," in the United States Circuit Court, at Kansas City, Missouri, have been of incalculable benefit in strengthening the eldership at home and abroad, and in giving heightened force to the moral tone of both the elders and the members, in their attitude towards the outside world.

The effect of the opinion of the court of the last named case, on the Utah people, remains to be disclosed; however, developments seem to warrant the conclusion that one result may be that at some time not far removed there will be discussion of the claims of the respective bodies, for which every member of the ministerial force, local and in the field, should seek to be prepared. If upon a proper showing theirs proves to be the better cause, we should be honest enough to accept the situation; but of that we have not the faintest fear.

So far the present condition of the suit does not put the church in possession of the Temple Lot. Notice has been given by "the Church of Christ," the Defendants, that the cause would be taken to the Court of Appeals; and it is expected to come on for trial at Minneapolis, in June next. The decision awarding the lot to the Reorganized Church may be reversed in that court, in which case it will be for us to either appeal to the Supreme Court, or accept the situation and acquiesce in such reversal.

Under these considerations, we deem it to be the better part of wisdom for the elders and members to acquaint themselves with the situation in all its bearings so far as they can, and avoid any ostentatious boasting, or display, leaving the matter to run its course in quiet, respectful submission to the will of God, as becometh those who have hope in him as Saints

5. The events of the conference year just past, as the same are shown in the report of the elders of the missionary and local force, justify the assurance that, with unity of faith, and concert of effort, there will be such development and progress the year now beginning, as have not been witnessed since the Reorganization began. And for this, we, as your fellow servants and coworkers, most earnestly pray.

JOSEPH SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 6, 1894.

A report of the Quorum of the Twelve was read, received, and placed in the minutes, as follows:—

To the General Conference, Greeting:—The Quorum of the Twelve convened at Lamoni, Iowa, at the call of the President on March 26, and have been in session each day since. We have held twenty sessions for business, and one devoted exclusively to prayer. We have our business well in hand, so that though we have much more to do, we think we will be at liberty to give due attention to the business of the conference.

The following items we hereby submit to the body:—

1. Whereas charges embodying unbecoming and undignified deportment and the use of tobacco have been preferred against Bro. J. W. Gillen by the President of the Manchester district of the British mission, and,

Whereas, the evidence before us (embracing admissions of the brother) have convinced us of his guilt.

Resolved that we express our disapproval of his course in these matters by withdrawing from him our support, thus suspending him from official privilege with this quorum until by upright and holy deportment he shall have warranted us in restoring him.

2. Upon the petition of a building committee chosen by the Saints of London, England, for aid in building a suitable chapel in London for meetings, it is our judgment, after consideration of the matter, that it would be to the interests of the work in England to erect such chapel as is proposed by the Saints as soon as practicable; and that we recommend that the Bishop furnish the loan on the terms proposed to the amount of £200 as soon as this amount can be spared from the treasury for this purpose. We also advise that no work of building be entered upon until they are notified by the Bishop that the money is ready.

3. Whereas, high priests, elders, and priests are local or standing ministers to the church (D. C. 107:42; 120:3; 17:10, 25; 83:22,) and,

Whereas, the local ministry are not under the law subject to appointment as general missionaries, and,

Whereas, the law says that "it is the duty of the traveling high council to call upon the Seventy, when they need assistance to fill the several calls for preaching and administering the gospel, instead of any others" (D. C. 104:16), and,

Whereas, the law provides for as many traveling ministers as "the labor in the vineyard of necessity requires" (D. C. 104:43; 120:3), and,

Whereas, we deem it unwise that the Twelve should be burdened with anything more than that which is necessary in order to fulfill the duties of their calling, and,

Whereas, we believe that the church has reached that juncture in the progress of the work which will enable us now, or very soon, to more fully harmonize with and carry out these provisions of divine law, Therefore be it,

Resolved by this council that we take this method of notifying the conference and the whole church, that at the next convening of the General Conference we shall expect to appoint in harmony with the above statements and the law cited therein.

Respectfully submitted,

HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec. of Quorum.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 6, 1894.

The recommendation of the Presidency concerning a two thirds vote on the taking of the previous question was adopted.

The publication and distribution of missionary reports before the convening of conference had given opportunity for their examination, facilitating the business of the assembly by saving time hitherto occupied in reading said reports. The conference therefore proceeded at once to the consideration of further business.

The report of Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Secretary and Recorder, was read, and will appear in full in the published minutes. We are obliged to omit it here because of its length. We summarize some of its most important features: There were 2,427 names of baptized persons placed on the record during the year, the largest number of baptisms ever recorded in one year; 1,136 were received in branches; a total gain of 3,563, the largest yearly gain in the Reorganized Church. There had been a large number of removals and a large number of names of scattered members gathered up; 1,114 had been given letters of removal, most of whom were included in the number "received" in branches. This showed the migrations of the Saints to chief places and large branches, also to smaller ones. Losses: by expulsion 117; by death 369; total 486. Net gain 1,963. Total membership of church 30,489; number at last report 28,526. The Secretary recommended the general practice of holding district conferences in the months of February, June, and October; stating that three were better than four; those seasons were better adapted to the convenience of the people than others; the lesser number of sessions and their regularity would facilitate more systematic and correct keeping of records, and general preparation of business to come before the General Conference. The holding of district conferences in March had prevented him from doing much work before conference that would have to be done afterward. The report included a detailed statistical statement of district and branch membership, ordinations, marriages, etc., etc.

The report of the committee appointed at last conference to audit the accounts of the Bishop and the Herald Office was read. Their summary of the Bishop's accounts has been published with the reports of missionaries; it is therefore omitted here. The Herald Office account will be published with the minutes.

The report on Herald Office account while showing a net loss of $2,301.30, was followed with this explanatory statement by the committee:—

We congratulate the church that the Herald Office has withstood the financial strain that has prevailed during the past fiscal year. Shortly after the invoice of 1893 the leading books of the church . . . were reduced in cost about twenty-five per cent.

The receipts were $4,422.71 less than for the year ending February 28, 1893, while the wages paid to employees are $1,158.67 more than paid for the year ending February 28, 1893.

The intrinsic value of the Herald Office plant is more than equal to what it was a year ago, etc., etc.

The report of the Board of Publication was read and spread upon the minutes. It is as follows:—

The Board of Publication would respectfully report that at a meeting of the Board held April 17, 1893, the following was adopted: "Resolved that we accept and respect the instructions of the General Conference as embodied in the resolution relating to the payment of general church ministers in the employ of the Board." The employees who could in any sense be termed general church ministers were requested to appear before us, which they did, as well as those who could not be so classed. The former expressed themselves as being willing to engage with us for the year and work in harmony with the resolution, and others consented to a small reduction in their wages, by which arrangement the office has been saved the sum of one hundred dollars per month, from May 1 to the close of the fiscal year, March 1 last.

The following was also moved and adopted: "Resolved that the President and Business Manager be authorized to reduce the price of publications if found practicable. Acting upon this resolution and the oft-repeated statement from the patrons of the office that if the price of the publications was reduced the sale would be increased in quantity, they ordered that a reduction of twenty-five cents per copy be made on all of the leading books, such as Holy Scriptures, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Harmony, and Harp, and even more than that on the Harmony which has the music and words combined; also a liberal reduction on price of Rules of Order, Christian Sabbath, and tracts. This reduction would undoubtedly have produced the results anticipated had it not been for the financial crisis that has so materially affected the business interests of the country generally. The result has been that the sale of books and tracts has been $6,023.57 against $7,446.92 for the previous year. The practice of issuing a supplement containing a sermon with the Herald every other week, adopted in October, 1892, has been continued the year just past, and much additional matter has been crowded into the Herald and cover. As a result the cost of type setting, paper, and press work amounts to $316.96 more the last year than for the previous one. And while the number of subscribers to whom the Herald has been sent has not materially changed, the actual receipts for subscriptions have been $1,176.36 less than the previous year, and by actual count we find that subscription is due from 310 more persons at the present time than there was a year ago, and many from whom money was due last year now owe an additional year's subscription. None of the unpaid and overdue subscriptions for either Herald or Hope have ever been counted as assets of the office until received. We submit the foregoing facts for the purpose of showing why the office is not enabled to show a gain as heretofore.

We would also report that during the year we have purchased the plates for the book, "What is Man," written by Elder J. R. Lambert; and also published a work written by him, entitled, "Objections to the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants Answered and Refuted," and Elder G. T. Griffiths' book, "The Instructor," and have published "Abstract of Evidence in the Temple Lot Suit," with the briefs of attorneys, and Opinion of the Court, for the church, in addition to the usual work of the office.

We are pleased to report that the bindery department has paid its way, and in addition thereto has paid a discount of five per cent on investment for machinery and has a balance of gain of $81.15. The character of work can scarcely be excelled, and has saved the office quite an amount by way of freight, which we would have been obliged to have paid if the work had been sent to Chicago or elsewhere.

Read before, and adopted as, the report of the Board, April 5, 1894.

ASA S. COCHRAN, Sec.

A petition asking action with a view to limit the use of the word "Mormon" or exclude it from being used in connection with the name of the church, was referred to a committee.

A matter involving boundary lines of the St. Louis district was also referred to a committee.

The following committee resignation was presented and accepted:—

To the Conference Assembled:—In 1877 the Board of Publication reported that there was a need of the History of Joseph Smith, the Seer, in revised form, and Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, and H. A. Stebbins were appointed by conference to prepare such a history. That committee reported in 1891, and was continued. In 1892 the Board again reported the need of an "authentic history," and a committee of examination and revision was ordered, and J. Smith, W. H. Kelley, C. Derry, J. R. Lambert, and Board of Publication were so appointed. In 1893, by action of conference, a resolution of distrust was thrown upon the church history open to the research of the committee.

For the foregoing reasons we, of the committee of 1877 and 1891, resign from our positions thereon, and desire to be released.

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR,
H. A. STEBBINS.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 26, 1894.

A communication from Elder J. C. Clapp, of the Hawaiian mission, was referred to the Quorum of the Twelve.

A communication from the Youngstown, Ohio, branch asking repeal of the action of last General Conference concerning history contained in the Millennial Star and Times and Seasons, was tabled by a unanimous vote.

The Independence, Missouri, branch presented a request that next General Conference be held there. Consideration was deferred till time of adjournment was fixed.

Petitions for missionary appointments were referred to the Twelve; one for the return of J. H. Lake, of the Twelve, to Canada, being referred to the First Presidency.

A statement or appeal from Bro. E. C. Mayhew, of Lamoni, was referred to a committee.

The Secretary represented thirteen ministry reports,—those of Brn. A. Haws, W. S. Macrae, A. L. Whiteaker, S. W. Tomlinson, G. M. L. Whitman, J. W. Gilbert, William Dowker, M. R. Scott, C. J. Hunt, H. E. Moler, H. R. Harder, J. A. Grant, and R. E. Grant,—that had been mislaid after having been handed in by him for publication. They had therefore not been published with the others. They were ordered published with the conference minutes.

The recommendation of the Twelve concerning the granting of a loan to the Saints in London, England, for the purpose of building a chapel, was entertained and discussed, and action deferred until next session.

President Smith made appointments for preaching and prayer services, at the same time exhorting those in charge to be prompt in opening and dismissing services; and those taking part in social meetings to be reasonably brief that time be not monopolized by a few, and that sermonizing in prayer meetings be avoided. He appointed the brethren named as ushers: F. M. Weld, J. M. Baggerly, Israel A. Smith, Charles F. Church, Oscar Case, A. C. Gear, Elbert A. Smith, and Oscar Ferguson; and Brn. F. G. Pitt and J. A. Gunsolley assistant choristers. A hymn was sung, and the session was dismissed by Pres. W. W. Blair.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith was the speaker in the evening. He was assisted by Brn. J. F. Burton and W. W. Blair. The sermon was reported and will be published in due time.

Saturday, the 7th.—The morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. Israel L. Rogers and J. W. Wald-Smith. It was reported as a season of profit. The prayer service was dismissed at 10:30. Fifteen minutes was allowed between services to permit changes in the assemblies, and at 10:45 the preaching service was opened, in charge of Bro. William Waterman. Elder J. W. Wight delivered the sermon. It was logical in its subject matter, and was clearly and forcefully presented. The audience gave close attention. The sermon was reported and will be published in the HERALD in due time.

These sermons, with others reported of late for the HERALD, are being reported by Bro. Frank E. Cochran, assistant in the editorial department, by means of an Edison phonograph. A speaking tube, with large opening placed near the pulpit, runs to the lower room, where the operator hears the speaker and repeats his words into the instrument, which records his words on revolving wax cylinders, the sounds causing a plate to vibrate, the jewelled point attached to it causing the channels to be cut. The operator's words are reproduced when desired by another jewelled point which traverses the cylinder channels, the operator writing out the reproductions on a type writer for the printer. Bro. Israel A. Smith assists in this work during the conference.

The Chariton, Iowa, Herald having expressed a wish for a report of the conference, Bro. T. W. Williams was requested to furnish such.

The committee appointed to consider and report upon the matter involving the use of the word "Mormon" reported as follows:—

We your committee appointed to examine the resolution of the Eastern Iowa district relating to the term "Mormon," beg to report: That in view of the fact that the church has already officially placed itself on record as to name, designation, or title, and by incorporation in the States of both Illinois and Iowa has the stamp of legality affixed thereto, we see no necessity for this conference to take other action than to discourage the use of such term in both writing and speaking.

The annual report of the Bishopric was read as follows:—

To the Conference:—1. The Bishopric, the last year, have had to contend in their work against the press of the close times, meet an increased foreign missionary expense, an increased home expense in prosecuting the Church case, and defending in two other cases. By the goodness and blessing of the Lord, the increased faithfulness and sacrifice of the Saints, all the emergencies have been fairly met, however; and although most or nearly all have felt the pressure of the times, none have been called from the field for want of the necessaries demanded in the law. The credit belongs to the Master, who promised that his ministry should not lack, and to the faithful Saints who have been watchful of their duties and have striven to perform them as directed in the law of Christ.

2. The work of the Bishopric has also been burdened the last year just past by reason of the prosecution of the Temple Lot suit, according to the appointment of the church in 1891. In this work we have been greatly aided by the advice and counsel of the Presidency, and President Smith made two trips to Illinois, two to Kansas City, and one to Western Iowa, in the interest of the church in this connection. We are glad to be able to report to the body that the rights and equities in the case have been decided by the Federal Court to be with the Reorganized Church, and although notice of appeal has been given by the Defendants, we are confident of the rightful claims of the Reorganized Church in the premises and have little fear of the results when it shall have reached the Court of Appeals.

3. The work of locating and establishing a Saints' Home for the comfort and care of those needing such of the church, we have proceeded with as directed by the General Conference of 1892 and as outlined in our report of one year ago.

Having met with such propositions as we deemed fair and reasonable, we made choice of the site just north and adjoining the town of Lamoni, after examination and counsel with the First Presidency, and the President of the Quorum of the Twelve and others. As has been shown by former reports, the church has sixty acres of land set apart for the purposes of this home; a portion of the building material has also been placed upon the ground with the expectation of pushing the work to completion during the present spring and summer.

4. Pursuant to the direction of the General Conference of 1889 authorizing the Bishopric to take such measures as might be deemed proper to aid the church at Independence, Missouri, with its building indebtedness, and finding that the local church there must lose the building unless aided, we made the effort and raised during the year, by solicitation of donations and otherwise, sufficient to take up the note the most pressing, and arranged for an extension of the remaining $5,000 to such time as we think may be readily met without loss or injury. The Saints generally, and the Independence Saints particularly, have readily and faithfully aided in this work. The Saints at Oakland and San Francisco, California, have also specially aided by a loan of their funds without interest, and we trust their good motives and kindly deeds in this will not be forgotten by the Saints.

5. In the early part of the year the Bishopric, after advising with the Presidency, selected from plans and specifications supplied by Bro. G. J. Waller, Bishop's agent at Honolulu, and Elder J. C. Clapp, missionary there, a boat for the Society Islands mission and made a $500 payment upon the same. We also submitted the letters and plans to Bro. Forscutt, in charge of that mission, and Brn. Wm. Newton and J. W. Gilbert, missionaries. Bro. Forscutt, after thinking over the matter, doubtless concluded the boat too small and frail for their work and sent a letter to this effect, to Bro. Waller. Upon this Bro. Waller refused to send the vessel unless ordered to do so by the Bishop; this we did not feel proper to do in the face of objections made by those who were expected to use the boat, until further correspondence with them, and by the time we got satisfactory returns from Bro. Forscutt and direction from him to send on the vessel from Honolulu, it was February of the present year.

In the meantime the money advanced on the Honolulu boat we had been permitted to withdraw, and in consultation with the Presidency and Bro. Dancer it was decided that the Bishop should go to the coast and procure or have built a suitable vessel and send at once to the Islands. It was impossible to do this, however, in March, on account of other pressing work and so was postponed till the close of the conference session. Unless the conference shall decide otherwise, it is hoped that the vessel may be forwarded at a very early date and placed at the disposal of the missionaries on the islands.

We simply give the facts touching the securing of the boat without attaching blame or credit to anyone, as doubtless all have done their duty according to their best judgment in the matter.

6. During the year Bro. George H. Hilliard, as counselor, has traveled almost constantly, working in Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, California, Utah, and Iowa, teaching particularly in this and generally in the spiritual department of church work. Counselor Blakeslee has been engaged in work, when at liberty to do so, that was more local and also in the general Sunday school work. We make this reference to special work because under the change of rules in ministerial reporting no individual report has been sent in by us, except the financial report of the Bishop.

7. The work of the year has been a close and trying one upon the department in some ways, but we have not lost faith or confidence in the work, neither the brethren with whom we have been called to work and deal, nor the body of the Saints of the household of faith. Very respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY,
G. H. HILLIARD,
E. A. BLAKESLEE.

The Encyclopedia committee appointed at last session presented its report:—

We your committee appointed at last conference to make correction of errors concerning us as a church in Encyclopedias, histories, and other publications, offer the following:—

We have examined many of such works, especially the Encyclopedias, and have arranged for completing work on the lines leading to the end contemplated in our appointment. Much of our work is in an incomplete state, as time and opportunity have not been sufficient for us to complete it as per our plans. We have, however, succeeded in getting an article into the annual edition of Appleton's American Encyclopedia, which will be published this month, the proof sheet of which is in our possession, together with a letter from the editor assuring us of the publication of our article. Our report therefore is one of progress.

Respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY,
F. M. SHEEHY,
U. W. GREENE.

The committee verbally furnished much other information concerning their work—prospects were good for obtaining correct representation in numerous publications.

A petition from nonmembers of the church at Salem, South Dakota, asking that a minister be sent to minister to them, was referred to those having charge of missionary work. Some of them were thought to be of the early Zarahemla, Wisconsin, Saints.

The Advisory Committee of the Daughters of Zion was granted an evening's service for the purpose of having one of the ministry present the leading features of their work.

The matter of a loan to the Saints of London, England, was considered. A motion was made to refer the matter to the Bishopric and the Standing High Council. This brought on a general discussion of the functions of the Twelve Apostles, the High Council, etc., etc., after which the motion to refer was defeated and the statement presented by the Twelve was affirmed by an almost unanimous vote.

Announcements were made and the assembly stood adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Bro. A. H. Smith.

The sermon in the evening was preached by Bro. G. T. Griffiths, who was assisted by Bro. F. M. Sheehy. A large audience welcomed Bro. Gomer from his foreign field of labor. He was blessed in his effort and his hearers edified. The sermon will be published.

Sunday, the 8th.—A large number gathered at the prayer service at nine o'clock. It was in charge of Brn. J. H. Wells and J. M. Brown.

The Lamoni Sunday school held its regular session at half past nine, in charge of Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, superintendent; Bro. W. N. Robinson "doing" the chalk talk.

Bro. J. F. McDowell spoke in the upper room, being assisted by Bro. J. B. Roush. Bro. R. C. Evans spoke in the lower room; assisted by Bro. James Moler. Bro. McDowell discoursed on the resurrection. The effort was worthy of the theme, and was well received. The speaker gave evidence of having given clear thought to the religious problems of the day. He is qualified to teach the higher branches of religious education as well as to proselyte. We did not hear Bro. Evans' effort.

Bro. W. H. Kelley discoursed at 2:30 p. m., Bro. J. F. Burton having charge of the services. We scarcely know how to do justice to this effort. It was a characteristic statement of the broad principles represented in the work—a plea for truth; for unhampered, untrammelled, individual investigation of all phases of every problem; of unsparing, searching criticism in the interests of human liberty and progress and religious development. The sermon will be published.

President Joseph Smith followed with a fifteen minutes speech, supplementing his statements with others that illustrated the growing liberal sentiment in favor of the work. He cited the growth of the church in those portions of Missouri from which the early Saints were driven out, etc. He also called attention to the late decisions of a United States and a Canadian Court in which the rights of the church were recognized by the common law.

The prayer service in the lower room was in charge of Brn. R. J. Anthony and I. N. Roberts.

The speeches made in the opening session were reported by Sr. Belle Robinson. Sr. Robinson and Bro. E. C. Lindsey were appointed stenographers for the conference. This we failed to note in the minutes of business transacted.

The spirit of peace and light attends the business sessions, the preaching of the word, etc. The brethren and sisters have come together in good condition of heart and mind. Results that will tell for the permanent advancement of the general interests of the church have been reached, and further development for good will doubtless be realized ere the conference closes.

MORAL COURAGE.

It is and always has been considered a fine thing to be brave, in the sense of being able to face danger where injury to the flesh and the probable loss of life were likely to occur; to be brave was and is commendable, to be afraid is to be a coward, which is condemnable.

There is a sense in which men may or may not be brave, in which the consequences to the man are possibly quite as serious in the final summing up of human affairs as can be involved in the facing of possible physical injury; for in the latter the consequences are physical, confined to the realm of the things earthly and transitory, but in the former the consequences belong on the other side, the spiritual and the eternal; and are of such nature that a mistake here may be fatal over there.

Take the question of obedience to the gospel of Christ, as the Saint sees it, as an instance in point. The choice to serve God as that service is portrayed in the New Testament, seen and read in the light of revelation, and the surest and steadiest of moral courage is required; especially on the part of one fostered in religious faith by any of the prevalent systems of the time. The reason for this is apparent. All of these systems, having had common parentage have many things in common; among these, the gloss of respectability, the assurance of numbers and the prestige of continued years of growth and crystallization of development and organization. Once entrenched in these the devoted believer is in fancied security. To change, to him means loss of caste, departure from time honored and long worn ways of both thought and procedure, an uprooting of cherished heritages of belief and a sundering of associations which are revered, if not absolutely sacred. He feels that to lose anchorage where his fathers moored is to set his spiritual bark afloat unhappily and to adverse winds and waves. No wonder he hesitates, and little less wonder that any are found who dare to be so brave.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. LUKE STORY, from Latah, Washington:—

The work is progressing nicely here. Elder John Davis preached two weeks three miles from Fairfield, and baptized three. This is ten miles from Latah. He preached here seven times; gave opportunity to others to object or criticise, but no one did so; one baptized, my granddaughter. I will help all I can this summer.

Bro. John H. Tibbles, North Platte, Nebraska, under date March 27th:—

I was ordained by Bro. James Caffall, June, 1893. I have preached about fifty sermons since; and while not baptizing any, I hope my efforts have not been barren of fruit; for having been invited to preach at a given point, I was told that I would not dare to mention Joseph Smith; but after preaching a few times on doctrine, I presented some of the things attributed to the prophet, even mentioning his name repeatedly, without serious ill results.

BRO. H. J. HUDSON, of Columbus, Nebraska has been serving as a police judge in his city and has received warm commendation in the Columbus Journal, from the March 28th, issue of which paper we clip:—

A vote for Hon. Henry J. Judson for police judge will be given to a man who well deserves to be reelected to that important office; during his last term he had many disagreeable duties to perform, but like every conscientious man who takes an oath of office, he did his duty without fear or favor. We have no doubt of his reelection, but it is best to take no chances. The office is non-political, and no one, be he ever so partisan in his feelings, could have any remorse of conscience in voting for Mr. Hudson.

This is strong praise for a man who is of such ardent a temperament as Bro. Hudson's, and so a man of so strong political preferences; and indicates that Judge Hudson has put into his practice on the bench the rule "judge righteously," according to law.

Bro. Hudson is running for the same office again and we hope will be elected. "Seek good men for office," is a wise injunction, and the citizens of Columbus seem to heed it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE omit the Items of Interest this week, and may omit them next week, in order to furnish the Saints a fuller report of General Conference.

Bro. E. F. Shupe reports the work in Denver as onward.

The branch at Jonesport, Maine, formerly called the Jonesport branch has changed its name and is hereafter to be known as the Olive branch. The name is pleasant and significant, and we hope the Saints at Jonesport will be indeed, what the name signifies.

"Never give up! there are chances and changes
Helping the hopeful a hundred to one;
And, through the chaos High Wisdom arranges,
Every success,—if you'll only hope on."

Dear Sisters:—After a long absence, I come again to join your circle, to try to help some mother who may have children between the ages of eight and twelve years that have never been instructed by father or mother on subjects of interest to them. I hope none of the sisters will make the mistake I made in putting off the time (against my better judgment, too) until schoolmates gave them the information I would have given them in such a way that it is doubtful if the impression made upon their minds can ever be erased.

They did not tell me of it until vile talk and rude behavior had been carried on for some time at school and scarcely a child in school was free from it. Upon questioning them about something I chanced to hear from other children I found to my horror the children I thought I was keeping so innocent by keeping them in ignorance knew as much and could talk as bad as any; and I had no one to blame more than myself for neglecting to do my duty. But I am thankful I did not close my eyes to the wrong-doing of my children, but set to work to remedy as best I could the wrong done them by instructing them fully, advising, and encouraging their confidence, and insisting on the girls allowing no familiarities with any boy nor the least rudeness of speech. I teach them that in this way they gain the respect of all good people, and perhaps help their associates, for even children soon find out whether those they like are pleased with coarseness or that which is elevating, and act accordingly.

It seemed hard at first to speak to my boy on things I felt I ought to, but I have felt thankful more than once that I did when I did, for if I had waited much longer it might have caused his ruin. Sisters, gain the confidence of your children and hear what the instruments of the evil one are instilling into the minds of your boys and girls; and then by careful and prayerful instruction keep them from being dragged into the maelstrom of vice. Keep your children busy working at something useful a good share of the time. Active boys or girls must have something to do. You no doubt have all heard the old saying many times, "Satan finds employment for idle hands," and he does not overlook the children. Do not allow them to be continually going some place to play, or to look about town to see what is going on. It is more apt to do harm than good. If boys, they may become loafers; if girls, women who are never contented to stay at home. Do not expect them to be perfect all at once, but let us each do our best and God will surely bless us by giving us the victory at last.

Yours in hope,

Sister Frances:—I am prompted to relate a dream which I had more than a year since, and do so hoping that it may help some other discouraged sister as it has helped me. I must first tell you something of the circumstances surrounding me at the time. I am the wife of a farmer in moderate circumstances, am thirty-two years of age, and the mother of nine children, eight now living. The eldest is now twelve years old and the youngest one year. One day, when baby was but four weeks old, I had no help, and did a large washing. When evening came, I was all tired out. The children were cross, and supper to get. Before I had my work completed some of the children laid down on the floor and went to sleep. I am not naturally very patient, and punished one of them in getting them awake, after having told them to go to bed properly. My husband is not a member of the church. He began talking to me about my conduct and said he thought I was a nice Christian. It made me very angry, and I did not use the language to him that was becoming to a Christian. When I retired I was in despair, almost ready to give up the struggle. I went to bed without my usual prayer, weeping and thinking it was no use to try any longer.

Finally I went to sleep and this is my dream:—

I dreamed I was living at my old home. It was Sunday, and having company, I went to my garden to get vegetables for dinner. It seemed to be quite late in the season and I had such a beautiful garden planted. It was arranged just as my father used to have it, with a border of flowers on two sides. The paths were clean and straight and the rows were straight as they could be, but the plants were very small. There was not a weed to be seen except a few large ones which I thought could be easily removed. I thought to myself, "To-morrow I will clean them out." Some of the larger vegetables were doing nicely, and it was among these the weeds were growing.

This dream always seemed to me to mean that I was to cultivate the small virtues, such as patience and kindness, or the larger ones would become choked with weeds and die also.

It has been a great comfort to me, when I would get out of patience, to have something whisper to me, "Cultivate your garden." I am sorry I have not always heeded it, but with God's help I expect to keep on trying. Ever praying for the cause we love, I remain,

Your sister,

BELLE SMITH.

Dear Sisters:—I presume Sr. Sarah has, by this time, something to read to those children, and something good and suitable, too, but as the wise man has said, "Of making many books there is no end." I wish to call the attention of those similarly interested to still another book which every mother with young children which she wishes to interest and instruct in the gospel, will find a treasure indeed. It is written purposely for the wee ones, say from three to six years of age, and in words they can well understand, and interests them deeply. It is called "First steps for little feet in gospel paths," and is written by Charles Foster, the author of "the story of the Bible,"—a work familiar to many. It is said when "First Steps" was written the author placed a little child before him, and addressed himself to it, and whatever failed to interest, or it failed to comprehend, was omitted, and thus what was retained is clear, and easily understood by the little ones. I hear naught but words of praise from all who have examined this little volume. It is divided into short chapters with easy questions after each, contains 328 pages, and 148 illustrations, and is nicely bound in cloth and gilt. Send $1.25 to the Charles Foster Publishing Co., 716 Sansom St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and you will receive an early reply, and the book all right.

Speaking of books, I have been reading the book so much spoken of, Hints on Child-Training. I read awhile and did not feel specially interested, but as I read more, new ideas and thoughts were suggested to my mind, and now ere I am half way through it I am well pleased, and wish I had long ago had such a work to profit by. Yet above all we must seek to Him that is higher than we for wisdom and guidance in training our little ones in the way they should go.

And now a word in regard to the work at large. I am cheered oftentimes, and brought more in touch with it, by reading the Herald and other church publications, and enjoying the many good things they contain, and this reminds me of a most excellent letter in late Autumn Leaves from one of our young missionaries. It has no uncertain sound, and surely such sentiments can only endear the writer of them to all lovers of the good, the true, and pure. God bless all his toilers in the great harvest field, wherever they may be, and we rejoice in the signs of the times, and are assured, through various happenings, that God is still at the helm, and will guard and guide the affairs of his church. Our captain goes before us, and his people have heard the command, "come up higher," and are marching onward, grandly onward, and though,

"Were beaten back in many a fray,
While fighting sin and sorrow
Yet where the vanguard fights to-day,
Our rearguard camps to-morrow."

Ever your sister,

VIOLA V. SHORT.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—When Christ sent out his apostles with the great commission he said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." He compared them to fishers and hunters. In the beautiful parable of the lost sheep, of the Lord and his servants likened unto the kingdom of heaven, he said, "Go into the mountains and seek that which is gone astray. Go into the wilderness after that which is lost."

When we consider the vastness of the field, which spreads out world-wide, the immense work that lies before the laborers, why not show forth our loving kindness by a willingness to aid the toilers who are reaping the golden grain? Right here is where the different organizations in the church can extend a helping hand. After his servants have gathered them into the fold, after they have been born of water and the Spirit, the warfare has but just begun. Then they "need mothering." To be nourished and fed on food convenient for them—the sincere milk of the word—that they may grow spiritually, even as a child born of the flesh needs nourishment to grow physically. Gather the children into the Sunday school, the young people into Zion's Religious-Literary, and the mothers into the Daughters of Zion. Each one needs educating in their particular line of duty.

Methinks I hear one say, These are steps too far. The gospel covers the whole ground. We admit it's the gospel that purifies and perfects us. That is what it is doing for a few that diligently search the Scriptures, but for the many, the societies stimulate to greater effort, deeper research, and more earnest endeavor. Set the mark high and strive to attain to it. Grow in wisdom, knowledge, and understanding of God's holy word, for by so doing we obey the injunction to "come up higher." Let us mount up as it were on eagle's wings to the topmost heights of the mountains and through our faith and works become justified by his blood or through obedience to the gospel become sanctified, and eventually through intelligence become glorified. "Then said he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." May we one and all pray to that end, and that God will bless us in basket and store, and with a willingness to support those in the field. And may we live in touch with the divine mind, in harmony with gospel law, that we may have the assurance our prayers will be answered. In covenant bonds,

LOU BERRY.

SYDNEY N. S. W., Jan. 20.

Dear Sisters:—I am much pleased to learn of the Daughters of Zion organizing themselves to accomplish the good that lies in their power; to instruct each other in reference to the high and holy calling which they occupy as mothers, sisters, and helpers in the church of God. There are no organizations among the sisters here to my knowledge. I wish there were but they seem to be scattered too much to meet. I am willing to do anything in my power to assist in the good work that the sisters at home have undertaken to do.

This Australian mission is nearly as large (in territory) as the United States and only three elders to do missionary work at present. No wonder they don't know what to do first. O what room there is for all to work! No need of getting in each other's way. There is room and work for all, fathers, mothers, daughters, and sons can go to the work with all their might and labor while the day lasts and still there will be plenty left undone. There are eight branches in this mission and some dear mothers among them who have little darlings to care for and need such encouragement as the Daughters of Zion can give, and the time may come when organized societies for good can be effected among them. What can I do? Can you send me tracts, pamphlets, or books to introduce among the sisters? Some have already expressed themselves as willing to learn and assist to benefit others. I am glad that Bro. Kaler takes an interest in the sisters' work and will assist me all in his power. There is very much infidelity and all manner of evil in this part of the world. People are slow to obey the gospel, but when we meet the few Saints here and see their love for the truth I think, "Surely the result more than pays for the labor bestowed," and then we feel to labor on and on, by the help of the Lord who bought us, that other like precious souls may be added to the fold. Your sister, MARY KALER.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, April 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

RIDGEWAY, Mo., March 31.

Editors Herald:—After an absence from my brother and family of about fifteen years, and from my sister of over thirty-five years, we are having a happy reunion at my Brother L. L. Wight's house, having met here last week. I am made to rejoice in finding them spiritually alive; since last Sunday we have been holding night meetings, notwithstanding cold weather. We have had an excellent attendance; I spoke last night to a crowded house on the subject of the Book of Mormon. Bro. D. W. Wight will preach to-night, and our meetings will continue over Sunday, and then go to Lamoni to attend conference. We had thought to have had Bro. T. J. Sheppard, of Indian Territory, with us, but were sadly disappointed; unavoidable trouble delayed him. Yours for the victory,

L. L. WIGHT.

SCRANTON, Kan., Mar. 14.

Editors Herald:—I hope you will find space for a few words from this part of God's vineyard, as it is two years since I wrote; when I did it was the means of making us rejoice afterwards, because it was answered from Scotland, by a brother whose name still stands good on our records here in Scranton. He is a member of this branch, and the letter he wrote us was full of spiritual food, with a prayer that a minister of the gospel would soon be sent there, as there were many thirsting for the truth, even in that little country. Well, I sent the letter to Bro. Griffiths in good time, before he left for Europe, as he requested such from any brother who had friends there. I have been sending the printed word there for about three years, the Herald, the Hope, and the Ensign; and I am glad to say, not in vain, because through the efforts of Bro. Robert Miller, my nephew, and the printed word, my niece, going from Hamilton, Scotland, to Leeds, England, was baptized by Bro. Gillen. But is this the end of it? We pray not. My sister-in-law gave her name for baptism, and Bro. Griffiths expected to go there; but I have heard that he did not get there. This surely is proof that there are souls thirsting for spiritual food in Scotland.

The good work is started and a home provided for an elder for sometime, with Bro. Robert Miller and Bro. William McMillen. The latter has prayed for such for years, that some work be done in that country; and he is dropping a word in season. Now, brethren, it is near General Conference; is it wisdom that something should be done? I believe the time is far spent and little remaining, but still Scotland does remain silent, without a preacher; and how can they preach except they be sent?

I know this is the work of God. If we live our religion we shall be blessed. God has blessed me in all efforts to do good, and he is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him, in Scotland also.

O, how I do pray for the spread of the gospel over land from sea to sea! I hope you will not think me selfish because I speak this way; I do it in the spirit of love, which is the Spirit of God, and I pray that God will bless and prosper all who try to do his holy will.

Yours for the spread of the truth,

JAMES BAILLIE.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Mar. 6.

Editors Herald:—God has blessed me with good health, for which I am thankful. I am now in what is called the Black River Swamps, but God is able to cleanse the water I drink and purify the air I breathe; and I fear no evil so long as I continue in the faith. I am still striving to do my Father's will. I desire an interest in your prayers that I may have a more perfect knowledge and understanding of the Scriptures, that I may be able to answer with perfect soundness all questions asked me concerning this precious latter-day work. It is the joy and comfort of my old age.

I do earnestly pray that God will send laborers into this part of his vineyard. There are several creeds of Baptists here, and whose leaders are very much opposed to our church, but when the people hear the pure gospel preached they will begin to see the difference between the apostles' doctrine and what they have received.

Your sister,

M. T. TAYLOR.

SARGENT, Mo., March 10.

Editors Herald:—We are living at Sargent, Missouri, where Bro. Spurlock came and preached on the fourth Sunday in January, also every night till Thursday night of that week. He made a very good effort, setting forth the plan of salvation plainly enough for any Bible reader to understand it; but one of our neighbors, a high-toned Baptist preacher, attended a few nights, and about the first called for a sign, saying that the gifts were not for this day and time, but were done away. During his attendance he asked about twenty-one questions, and Bro. Spurlock gave him very appropriate answers. I don't think the truth suffered any. I believe the Lord has a people here who will yet enter the fold. On Monday night, the first night this Baptist preacher attended, after we came home and had retired for our rest I was studying about this man, a student of the Bible as he professed to be, and a fine scholar, that he would call for a sign; and I thought of the many souls he was leading astray; when the following open vision came before me:—

I was standing in the middle of a clean, gravelly wagon road. The gravel or little pebbles looked very clean, and I raised my head and looked along the road some distance and saw a flock of sheep coming. They seemed to be in a hurry to get where I was, and when they came up to me they stopped. They came six or eight abreast; it seemed that they almost pushed each other out on each side, and after they stopped I looked out over the flock and saw one larger than the others, and he had the largest and longest crooked horns I ever saw on a sheep, and he kept throwing his head around to the right as if he did not want the sheep behind him to get in ahead. He did not seem to be angry, only he seemed to want them to stand back and not get in ahead of him; he had such great, large, clear, brown eyes. I don't know what it means; I have thought maybe it meant that the Lord had a people here to be gathered into the fold, as the sheep were all white; but this is only what I think. If anyone can give the interpretation, I will be thankful, for I am anxious to know.

In hope of eternal life,

SR. M. E. TUCKER.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ill., Mar. 21.

Editors Herald:—I think all the elders have forgotten us; the missionaries to this county never come to this part of the land, or if they do they keep silent—all but I. P. Baggerly; he came two years ago, and his was the last sermon I have heard. We would like to have him come again. The Herald and Ensign furnish all the preaching we get here. Your sister,

M. A. ASA.

Editors Herald:—The Herald is a welcome messenger to me. I find many words of comfort and cheer in its pages, and feel to say, "What a friend we have in Jesus"! Can those words be more truly spoken? Yet sometimes we find ourselves trusting in the arm of flesh too strongly. We have a commandment that we are cursed if we put our trust in the arm of flesh, and we sometimes learn the lesson by sad experience—that the arm of flesh will fail us. It teaches us to look to him who has said in his word that though all earthly friends forsake, yet he will never leave nor forsake.

I have received many blessings since I united with the church. I know it teaches the true gospel, and I never felt stronger in the faith than at present: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." We are promised the Spirit that shall lead and guide into all truth, when we accept the gospel; yet the hymn says,—

"Beware how you receive it,
Do not yourselves deceive."

By the fruits we shall know the Spirit of truth from the spirit of error. Can a fountain bring forth both bitter and sweet water?

I have heard some say they knew they had the Spirit of truth; they knew God was leading them aright; and yet they accepted the path that led to error, which reminded the writer of the passage in the Bible which states that darkness covers the earth and grose darkness the minds of the people.

Reading a letter in the Herald, the writer, a sister, said: "I have thought that when Satan has lost his hold on anyone that he works harder than ever to get it back again; and he generally works in the dark, for he knows that if we could see where he was leading we would not be so apt to follow." I felt the truth of the words, as we have seen some led into the path that will not guide them into all truth; and we know that sooner or later they will see the fatal mistake they have made.

Wait and Hope; how much is contained in these words! How many wait when one by one their hopes are destroyed and false friends turn indifferently away from them in the hour of need. Still with unconquerable spirits they wait for better days, trusting with unflinching hope that those days will come; and they will. O poor pilgrims in life's dreary waste, have courage; fight life's battle with brave, strong hearts, and when the end comes you will find peace. Is it not better when we are nearing the shadowy vale, waiting for the reaper to close our eyes for our last long sleep, to feel that we tried to be true, and that if there was sin committed it was not our sin? This side of the hill we must climb; it is dark and rough, and as we look about us our dimmed eyes can see no glimmer of light, no smooth place for our weary feet; yet if we will trust God a little longer and only have faith to tread the path before us, with patience and endurance, on the other side we shall find rest; we shall know as we are known, "in the dawning of the morning when the mists have cleared away."

A SISTER.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., Mar. 31.

Editors Herald:—I have leased a church on State street pike, leading into town from the country, and have been holding preaching services for about five weeks. We had Bro. Short with us. Had small crowds at times, but they increased some. It is a hard place; it looks as if the people are getting harder and more wicked than ever. I am doing all I can in the service of my Master. Times are hard here. If any of the ministry pass this way give us a call; Brn. Blair or C. Scott. A new broom sweeps clean.

I would like to go to conference, but times are hard. I have places to preach in this city every time except one in the last twenty years. Some few are investigating. We need the prayers of all for the aid of the work in this quarter of the vineyard of the Lord.

Your brother,

DAVID SCOTT.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 4.

Editors Herald:—I have spent eleven months in the Southwestern mission, and I wish to say that the Lord is blessing the Saints with spiritual light. I organized a branch of thirty-seven members at Oscar, Indian Territory. The Lord has blessed the Saints at Beaver during their sickness, and all were raised to health. In my ministerial report it should read, baptized twenty, instead of two. We hope for a good conference.

MAN'S FUTURE CONDITION.

THERE has lately come into my hands a valuable work entitled, "That Unknown Country" and published by the C. A. Nichols Co., of Springfield, Massachusetts. It is a work that all of our brethren will appreciate, as it contains the teachings of the church upon this important theme from the days of Christ to the present. As there is some matter contained therein that would be especially interesting to the Saints, we herewith present extracts copied from the work.

Irenæus, who lived between the years 120 A. D. and 202 A. D., among other things, says:—

And to as many as continue in their love toward God, does he grant communion with him. But communion with God is life and light, and the enjoyments of all the benefits which he has in store. But on as many as according to their own choice depart from God, he inflicts that separation from himself which they have chosen of their own accord. But separation from God is death, and separation from light is darkness; and separation from God consists in the loss of all the benefits which he has in store. . . . God however does not punish them immediately of himself, but that punishment falls upon them because they are destitute of all that is good. Now good things are eternal and without end with God, and therefore the loss of these is also eternal and never ending. It is in this matter just as occurs in the case of a flood of light; those who have blinded themselves or have been blinded by others, are forever deprived of the enjoyment of light. It is not (however) that the light has inflicted upon them the penalty of blindness, but it is that the blindness itself has brought calamity upon them.—Adv. Hæc. V., 27, 2.

Tertullian A. D. circ. 150-216:—

In short inasmuch as we understand the prison pointed out in the gospel to be Hades and as we also interpret the uttermost farthing to mean the very smallest offense which has to be atoned for there before the resurrection (Matthew 5:25, 26), no one will hesitate to believe that the soul undergoes in Hades some compensatory discipline without prejudice to the full process of the resurrection when the recompense will be administered through the flesh besides.—De Anima 58.

Lactantius—d. A. D. circ. 312:—

If the soul which has its origin from God, gains the mastery, it is immortal and lives in perpetual light; if, on the other hand, the body shall overpower the soul and subject it to its dominion, it is in everlasting darkness and death, and the force of this is not that it altogether annihilates the souls of the unrighteous, but subjects them to everlasting punishment. We term that punishment the second death which is itself also perpetual, as also is immortality. . . . We thus define the second death; Death is the suffering of eternal pain; or thus: Death is the condemnation of souls for their deserts to eternal punishments.—Instit. 2:13.

Clement of Alexandria, circ. A. D. 200:—

(Punishment aims at the sinner's own good.) The general of an army by inflicting fines and corporal punishments with chains and the extremest disgrace on offenders, and sometimes even punishing individuals with death aims at good, doing so for the admonition of the officers under him. Thus also he who is our great General, the Word, the Commander-in-chief of the universe, by admonishing those who throw off the restraint of his law, that he may effect their release from the slavery, error, and captivity of the adversary brings them peacefully to the sacred concord of citizenship. Plato says beautifully, "For all who suffer punishment are in reality treated well, for they are benefited since the spirit of those who are justly punished is improved." . . . Now hatred of evil attends the good man, in virtue of his being in nature good. Wherefore I will grant that he punishes the disobedient (for punishment is for the good advantage of him who is punished, for it is the correction of a refractory subject), but I will not grant that he wishes to take vengeance. Revenge is retribution for evil, imposed for the advantage of him who takes the revenge. He will not desire us to take revenge who teaches us to "pray for those that despitefully use us." . . . But it is not inconsistent with the saving word to administer rebuke dictated by solicitude for this is the medicine of the divine love to man by which the blush of modesty breaks forth and shame at sin supervenes.—Paed. i. 9. On the other hand, he (God) is in no respect whatever the cause of evil. For all things are arranged with a view to the salvation of the universe by the Lord of the universe both generally and particularly. . . . Now everything that is virtuous changes for the better. . . . But necessary corrections through the goodness of the great overseeing Judge, both by the attendant angels, and by various acts of anticipative judgment, and by the perfect judgment, compel egregious sinners to repent.—Stromata 7, 2.

Origin, circ. A. D. 185—circ. 254 says:—

But in the meantime, both in those temporal worlds which are seen as well as in those eternal worlds which are invisible, all those beings are arranged according to a regular plan in the order and degree of their merits; so that some of them in the first, others in the second, some even in the last times, after having undergone heavier and severer punishments, endured for a lengthened period, and for many ages so to speak, improved by this stern method of training and restored at first by the instruction of angels, and subsequently by the powers of a higher grade, and thus advancing through each stage to a better condition, reach even to that which is invisible and eternal, having traveled through by a kind of training every single office of the heavenly powers. From which I think this will appear to follow as an inference, that every rational nature may, in passing from one order to another, go through each to all, and advance from all to each, while made the subject of various degrees of proficiency and failure according to its own actions and endeavors put forth in the enjoyment of its powers of freedom of will.—De Princip. 1, 6, 1 ff.

We find in the prophet Isaiah that the fire with which each one is punished is described as his own, for he says: "Walk in the light of your own fire, and in the flame which ye have kindled." By these words it seems to be indicated that every sinner kindled for himself the flame of his own fire, and is not plunged into some fire which has been already kindled by another, or was in existence before himself. Of this fire the fuel and food are our sins, which are called by the Apostle Paul wood, hay, and stubble. (1 Cor. 3:12.) And I think that as abundance of food and provisions of a contrary kind and amount breed fevers in the body, and fevers too of a different sort and duration, according to the proportion in which the collected poison supplies material and fuel for disease. . . . so when the soul has gathered together a multitude of evil works, and an abundance of sins against itself, at a suitable time all that assembly of evils boils up to punishment, and is set on fire to chastisements. . . . To understand now that in the same way in which physicians apply remedies to the sick, in order that by careful treatment they may recover their health, God so deals towards those who have lapsed and fallen into sin, is proved by this that the cup of God's fury is ordered through the agency of the prophet Jeremiah (cf. 25:15, 16) to be offered to all nations that they may drink it, and be in a state of madness and vomit it forth. In doing which he threatens them, saying that if anyone refuse to drink he shall not be cleansed. (cf. Jer. 25:28, 29.) By which certainly it is understood that the fury of God's vengeance is profitable for the purgation of souls.—De Princip. 2, 10, 4:

Gregory of Nyssa, circ. A. D. 331-370, says:—

Let there be granted that a certain vase was made of clay; that this however was filled by fraud and on the sly with molten lead; that the leak moreover had hardened after it had been poured in and so remained that it could not be poured out; that the master however desired to preserve the vase; since however he had the skill of the potter he broke the vase with the lead and then formed the vase over again into its former shape for his own use, emptied of the matter which had been put into it. So then when a sin has been introduced into that part of us which is endowed with sensation (for I call that so which is in the body), the potter of our vase, having broken up the material which had received the sin, will make up the vase again through the resurrection, unmixed with its opposite, and will restore it to the beauty which it had in the beginning. Since in truth it is necessary that the stains which have taken seat in him, being begotten in him by sin, should be removed by some medium; therefore in the present life the remedy of virtue must be applied for curing these wounds. But if this cannot be, the cure is reserved to the future life. But just as in the body there are certain different kinds of diseases of which some indeed more easily, but some only with difficulty, admit of cure, in which both cuttings and cauterizings and bitter medicines are applied for removing the disease which is seated in the body; some such thing also judgment declares will be in the future for curing the disease of the mind, which indeed threatens the wicked and foolish and portends heavy and severe sufferings, that by the fear of harsh and bitter things which are to be visited upon us, we are to be chastized and instructed to the fleeing from sin. . . . For just as those who remove nails and warts, which are born upon the body contrary to nature, by cutting and burning, apply the remedy to him whom they treat in kindness, yet not without pain, but not however to the harm of him who suffers it, so also whatever superfluous callous growths have been nourished in our minds which have been rendered carnal through contact with disturbing influences, are cut off at the time of judgment, and rubbed away by the unspeakable wisdom and virtue of that one who heals those who are sick.—Oratio Catech., ch. 8.

Diodore of Tarsus, d. A. D. 394, says:—

A perpetual reward is prepared for the good on account of their labors and the right, justice, and equity of the Rewarder; but the punishment of the unjust is nevertheless not perpetual, nor shall the immortality prepared for them be made useless to them, but they may be tortured for a short time according to the merit and measure of their sin and impiety, and according to the amount of malice in their works. They shall then suffer pain and torment for a short time, but the happiness of immortality which shall have no end shall remain for them. Indeed, if the rewards of good works are so surpassing, how much could the length of eternity prepared for them exceed the length of time of the limited strifes in the career of the present age; the punishments indeed which are to be inflicted for the many and weighty crimes shall be far exceeded by the greatness of compassion. It is not then for the good, so far as this is concerned, that the grace of the resurrection is reckoned, but even for the wicked. For the grace of God honors the good indeed munificently and freely; but pitifully and mercifully does he determine the torments of the wicked.—In Asseman Bibl. Orient., Vol. 3, p. 323.

Theodore of Mopsuestia circ. A. D. 350-428, says:—

In the world to come those who have chosen good things shall with praise receive the fruit of their good works; but the wicked who have done wrong throughout their life, after great and fearful punishments, shall come to their senses, and choosing the good, not among the good, but among the wicked, since they have sinned, shall learn to hold themselves steadfast and in this way shall obtain a knowledge of the blessed doctrine of the fear of God, having learned to believe in it with a good will. Then at last they shall merit the enjoyment of the divine liberality. For he would never have said, "Until thou shalt return the last farthing," unless it had been possible that it should be done; that removing the punishment of sin we should be set free from them. Neither would he have said, "He shall be beaten with many stripes and he shall be beaten with few stripes," if there was no end to the infliction when men had suffered a punishment commensurate with their sin.—In Asseman Bibl. Orient. 3, 323.

Augustine, A. D. 353-450, says:—

For our part we recognize that even in this life some punishments are purgatorial. . . . But temporary punishments are suffered by some in this life only, by others after death, by others both now and then; but all of them before that last and strictest judgment. But of those who suffer temporary punishment after death, all are not doomed to those everlasting pains which are to follow that judgment; for to some as we have already said, what is not remitted in this world, is remitted in the next, that is they are not punished with the eternal punishment of the world to come.—Civit. Dei. 21, 13.

Ambrose, A. D. 340-397, says:—

No one ascends into the kingdom of heaven, except by means of the sacrament of baptism. . . . For unless a man has been born again of water, and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God.—De Abrah. 2, 11.

Cæsarius of Arles, circ. A. D. 480-543, says:—

All the good who serve God faithfully who seek to apply themselves to reading and prayer, and to persevere in good works, building up (cf. 1 Cor. 3:12)—neither capital crimes, nor small sins—but good works, shall pass through that fire of which the apostle speaks. But those who are apt to commit small sins, and are negligent to make amends, shall come unto eternal life, because they believed in Christ and committed no capital crimes, but before that, they shall be purified either in this age by the justice of God by means of the bitterest tribulation, or by their own acts; by many charities, and especially when they are mercifully kind to their enemies, and shall be freed by the mercy of God; or else certainly they shall be tortured for a long time by that fire of which the apostle speaks; that they may attain to the future life, without spot or wrinkle.—Homil., 8, 8.

Pope Gregory The Great, A. D. 540-604, says:—

Some faults may be forgiven in this age and some in the age to come, for since it is denied concerning one thing, the logical consequence is evident that it is conceded of certain others.—Dial. 4, 39.

Master Eckhart, A. D. 1260-1329, says:—

The question has been raised, What is it that burns in hell? The masters generally say it is self-will. But I say in truth it is not having which constitutes the burning of hell. Learn this from a parable: If you were to take a burning coal and put it on my hand, and I were to assert that the coal is burning my hand, I should be wrong. But if I be asked, what it is that burns me, I say it is the not having, that is the coal has something which my hand has not. You perceive then that it is the not having which burns me. But if my hand had all that which the coal has, it would possess the nature of fire. In that case you might take all the fire that burns and put it on my hand without tormenting me. In the same manner I say, if God and those who stand before his face enjoy that perfect happiness which those who are separated from him possess not, it is the not having which torments the soul in hell, more than self-will or fire.—Predigt auf den ersten Sonnt nach Trin. Stud. u. Krit. 1839.

Thomas Erskine of Linlathen, A. D. 1788-1870, says:—

I have a hope which I would not willingly think contrary to the revelation of mercy, of the ultimate salvation of all. I trust that he who came to bruise the serpent's head will not cease his work of compassion until he has expelled the fatal poison from every individual of our race. I humbly think the promise bears this wide interpretation. You believe not, I know. Well, the judge of all the earth will do right. . . . I hope for the departed. I hope in that unmeasured love which gave the Savior; in fact my soul refuses to believe in final ruin, when it contemplates the blood of Christ. . . . I hope that he who came to bruise the serpent's head, and to destroy the works of the Devil, will not cease his labors of love till every particle of evil introduced into this world has been converted into good.—Letters, pp. 92, 105.

Charles Chauncy, A. D. 1705-1787, says:—

Upon the whole therefore, what I mean to prove, in the following essay, is that the scheme of revelation has the happiness of all mankind lying at bottom, as its great and ultimate end; that it gradually tends to this end; and will not fail of its accomplishment when fully completed. . . . [Those] who have proved incurable under the means which have been used with them in this state, instead of being happy in the next will be awfully miserable; not to continue so finally, but that they may be convinced of their folly, and recover to a virtuous frame of mind. . . . And there may be yet other states before the scheme of God may be perfected, and mankind universally cured of their moral disorders, and in this way qualified for, and finally instated in, eternal happiness.—Sensible Thoughts on the State of Religion in New England. Pref.

Julius Miller, A. D. 1801-1878, says:—

Awful as is our Lord's statement, exceeding great and precious hopes lie hid within it. The words "all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men" . . . inspire the glorious hope—not in the unbelieving, for they despise Christ's word, but in the Christian—that in the world to come in far distant aeons, they who here harden their hearts against God's revelation, and can expect only a verdict of condemnation in the day of judgment, shall find forgiveness and salvation. But while Christ's words thus favor the doctrine of final restoration up to a certain point, they explicitly deny the universality of restoration. Divine love draws all to itself who do not resist its holy influence; but the stiffnecked and disobedient . . . are cast away like dross.—Christian Doctrine of Sin, Vol. 2, p. 525 et. seq. Edinburgh Edition.

Isaac August Domer, A. D. 1809-1884:—

[Possibility of growth and training and of the presentation of the gospel in the future life. Psychological nature of punishment. Persistent freedom of will. Hypothesis of extinction.] Even the departed righteous are not entirely perfected before the resurrection. . . . But those not as yet believers, so far as they are not incorrigible remain at first under training which aims at decision for Christ. (Romans 8:35-39.) But in regard to those who die unbelieving or not yet believing, to them also the ground of their souls is laid bare; hence also their impurity, their discord, and alienation from God is unveiled. These must become conscious of discord in themselves. If they were subject to evil inclinations and passions, they will busy themselves with corresponding objects of desire, and yet have their longing unappeased, and will be given over in a sense to their thoughts and desires as torments. . . . But in nowise will the divine government be to blame for this result. The gospel will be decisively presented to all who had not come to a final decision in this life and all who do not shut themselves against it will be saved.—The Future State, 104 ff, 126 ff.

I have copied the foregoing from a compilation made by Theodore Davenport Bacon under the supervision of Professor George Park Fisher of Yale University and presented in "That Unknown County."

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

HOW TO CULTIVATE THE BODY.

THE ancient Greeks gave the important subject of physical culture very careful attention, and were rigid in exacting for their youth a gymnastic training. Even the girls of Sparta were expected to be good gymnasts, and no young woman could marry unless she was proficient in various exercises. Consequently the bodies of both sexes were healthy and beautifully developed. Their minds were also highly developed, but not at the expense of the body, as is generally the case nowadays. Grecian philosophers and physicians believed that the mind could not possibly be in a healthy state unless the body was in perfect health, and acted accordingly. It would be well if with us it was compulsory for parents to give their offspring a course of physical training.

General physical exercise is the kind required for boys and girls, and it is essential that judicious, systematic training be pursued. This can be had only at public or private schools where physical culture is obligatory, or at well conducted gymnasiums, where there is a system for training the body in a rational way. Many people think that a gymnasium is a place for sporting men. This is a mistake. Clergymen, doctors, students, clerks, governesses, and society people frequent respectable gymnasiums. The gymnasium of to-day is a very different place from that of fifty years ago. Formerly the aim of the gymnast was to turn out men who could lift heavy weights and court death on the flying trapeze. Nowadays all this is changed; physical training is carried on in a scientific manner; men of ability have made physical culture a profession, and their object is to make pupils healthy, strong, and graceful. Most modern gymnasiums have appliances for the cultivation of every part of the body, and able instructors and physicians in attendance.

I advise all young and middle aged men and women to spend an hour daily in earnest, systematic physical exercise. The best plan is to enter a gymnasium where some system is employed. There are several systems of physical training—the Swedish, the German, the English, and the so-called American. The Swedish and the German are considered by competent judges to be the best. The teachers of the German system claim that it is the best because it aims at general physical culture, and that it keeps the mind as well as the body in a wholesome activity. This system was founded by Jahn in 1810. It embraces three departments, school gymnastics, popular gymnastics, and military gymnastics. The founder's aim was to make the youth of Prussia strong and courageous; to defend their country when needed, and from his idea the present German system of gymnastics has grown. The Swedish system was devised by Ling at the commencement of this century, and has been improved by his followers, who assert that it aims at a harmonious relation of body to mind, and that it is the best for the development of the fundamental functions. It is a system of voluntary movements arranged and executed with care. The movements comprise leg movements, which increase circulation and regulate the action of the heart; back and chest movements, which strengthen and expand the lower part of the chest; heave movements, which strengthen the arms and the upper part of the chest; shoulder movements, to pull the shoulder back; respiratory movements, balance movements, abdominal exercises, etc. The English system of free athletic exercises has been tried with great success in France. No doubt it has a wonderful influence on the moral and social qualities of the young. The so-called American system is a mixture of the German and Swedish systems. Our teachers of physical culture take the best ideas from all systems, and find that the combination works well.

I do not advocate any particular system. My aim is to suggest practical means whereby the body can be cultivated. The Swedish, German, English, and American systems are all good, and either, judiciously followed, will bring about the desired result. Gymnastics should be directed toward promoting the healthy activity of the organs that make blood, to correcting defects, and to the perfection of the human figure. The most helpful movements are also the most beautiful. The Greeks cultivated the body as no other nation has done, with this result. In training, one should begin slowly and build up the weak parts first; then exercise should be taken so as to bring nearly all the muscles into action at the same time. This stimulates the action of the heart and lungs, besides increasing the circulation and respiration. Many muscles of the body, from lack of use, waste away. The technical term for this wasting is atrophy, and to avoid it every muscle in the body should be exercised regularly. Light, quick exercise is the best. Heavy dumb-bells or pulley-weights should not be used. One hour's vigorous exercise daily is all that is needed, and should always be followed by a tepid bath. Avoid everything that throws extra strain upon the heart, and aim at the correction of errors of nutrition.

All who can possibly enter a gymnasium should do so, for public gymnasiums are now so conducted that by following the directions of the instructors it is almost impossible to exercise in such a way as will be detrimental to health; but those who are unable or unwilling to do this can by simple means build up and improve the body at home. For strengthening and developing the legs nothing can be better than walking. A simple but most useful exercise, which all can practice, is that of breathing. When the breathing capacity is increased, the general health is improved. For the breathing exercise, throw the head up, the shoulders back, and the chest out; inflate the lungs through the nose until full; then exhale quickly until the lungs are empty, and finish with long-drawn inspirations. This should be done, if possible, out of doors. For strengthening and developing the upper part of the body a pair of light dumb-bells is all that is needed. Physical exercise should be taken regularly and continued through life. It is a remedy against many of the diseases prevalent at the present time. I urge all who desire strength, health, and beauty to take plenty of outdoor exercise in addition to the home or gymnasium exercises. Outdoor exercises help to the development of the respiratory organs. — Wilton Tournier in Lippincott's Magazine.

The decision of Judge Philips, of the United States Circuit Court, Western District of Missouri, Kansas City, awarding title and possession of the Temple Lot to the Reorganized Church as the true successor of the original Church of Latter Day Saints organized April 6, 1830, and setting forth the position of the Utah Church and other factions as departures from the true faith, and without right to the name or property of the Original Church.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 18, 1894.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

MONDAY, April 9.—Prayer service was held at nine o'clock, in charge of Brn. Henry Kemp and Henry Southwick. The weather was stormy and cool, but the attendance was large nevertheless.

At 10:45 Bro. W. S. Pender preached on the subjects of "punishment," "death," etc. He was assisted by Bro. John Shields.

The business session was opened at 1:30; Bro. J. Hawley offering prayer. The Secretary read the minutes. They were slightly corrected and approved.

The committee appointed to consider and report upon the boundaries of the St. Louis district reported, recommending that certain counties named be included; that the lines conform to their outlines. It was moved to amend by striking Pike county from the list. The matter was referred back to the committee for further examination.

A resolution was presented requesting the Board of Publication to publish the acts of General Conferences compiled by order of conference. A substitute prevailed, appointing a committee to "prepare the enactments of the church in their conferences for publication and report to this body."

A resolution providing for a committee to obtain railroad rates for the next General Conference was deferred until the place of adjournment was decided upon.

A communication was read from the Hope branch of the Southern Indiana district asking that Bro. James Baggerly be ordained to the office of a priest.

A request was presented from the Independence district asking that the General Conference of 1895 be held at Independence, Missouri. The matter was deferred until Friday, the 13th inst.

A motion to take up the request of the Youngstown, Ohio, branch, on the subject of history contained in Times and Seasons and Millennial Star was defeated by a vote of 107 to 30.

The remainder of the First Presidency that arrangements be made for the placing of high priests to preside over districts and branches, as provided for in the revelation of 1890, was read. The matter was discussed, and a motion calling the previous question was denied. Pending further consideration, the Presidents were authorized to adjourn the sessions, announce those in charge, etc. The assembly was then adjourned; the benediction being pronounced by President Joseph Smith.

Bro. I. N. White preached in the evening, assisted by Bro. Orlin B. Thomas. He traced the history of God's dealings with man from the beginning, explaining his discourse by blackboard illustrations. The apostasy from primitive Christianity, the supremacy of Roman Catholicism, the work of the Reformers, and the merits and demerits of various prominent phases of Christianity, so-called, were presented, the speaker concluding with proofs of the divine institution of the "dispensation of the fullness of times."

Tuesday, the 10th.—The usual prayer service at nine o'clock was well attended. It was in charge of Brn. E. Barrows and G. E. Deuel.

At 10:45 Bro. J. T. Davies delivered a characteristic discourse on the nature, agency, and destiny of man. Bro. Davies is a cogent reasoner and makes good, clear-cut points, illustrating and explaining them by quiet telling humor. The discourse was carefully listened to. Bro. C. D. Carter, a grandson of Jared Carter, one of the early elders of the church, assisted him.

The business session in the afternoon was opened by singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name," Bro. J. C. Foss offering the opening prayer. The minutes were read, corrected, and approved.

The reminder from the First Presidency, deferred from yesterday's session, was read, when the following was adopted:—

Whereas the duties and prerogatives of high priests in connection with other officers are under consideration by a joint council, Resolved that the matter now pending be deferred until the joint council conclude their work.

The committee to which was referred the question of boundary lines of the St. Louis district reported. The report was adopted.

A resolution requesting President Joseph Smith to define the duties of various officers of the church, etc., was presented, but was deferred until after the sessions of the joint council being held by some of the leading officers of the church be concluded.

The printed reports of General Conference appointees were approved.

The matter concerning the High Council, referred from last conference to this session, was taken up and discussed, when a motion was adopted requesting the High Council to present a definition of its functions to this session of conference.

A motion prevailed requesting that the joint council being held by the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the High Priests make a report to the conference.

A request from the Western Wisconsin district asking that the State be divided into two districts, etc., was referred to a committee.

A resolution providing for the holding of the next General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, was deferred for later consideration.

The young people were granted the privilege of holding prayer meeting in the lower auditorium at half past seven o'clock in the morning. Bro. T. W. Williams was appointed to take charge.

The audience sang the hymn, "My times are in thy hand," and President Joseph Smith pronounced the benediction.

The evening service had been allotted to the Daughters of Zion and so announced. The church was filled by an audience intent upon learning the character and purposes of the home and general work the sisters are doing in the interests of Zion, "the pure in heart." Bro. Joseph F. Burton presented its leading features in a clear, cogent discourse. The audience listened closely, and evidently obtained an understanding of the movement. A good spirit was present and the efforts of the sisters in behalf of their department of church work was evidently furthered by the effort. Bro. F. M. Sheehy had charge of the services, and, very appropriately too; for he has been energetic in lending his aid to a number of the leading organizations for good developed in late years. Bro. Burton's address was reported for the advisory committee of the organization, and will doubtless be published in the Home Column or as a "leaflet." Success to the sisters in their timely work for good. It is of very great importance, but of that and its general features we leave them to speak in detail.

Wednesday, the 11th.—The morning prayer service was in charge of Brn. Henry Kemp and Roderick May. The writer has not been permitted to attend the prayer services thus far, except for a few moments, so cannot particularize them. They are well attended and evidently enjoyed.

Bro. W. A. McDowell preached the morning discourse. He was assisted by Bro. C. J. Hunt. The sermon was spoken of as a good one.

The business session was opened in the usual manner, Bro. G. H. Hilliard petitioning the divine favor. The minutes were read and approved.

The committee appointed to consider the appeal of E. C. Mayhew reported, stating that the case had already been decided by courts of the land; that the Presidency had decided against consideration of the appeal by the High Council; it therefore regarded it as a matter finally disposed of and not properly within the jurisdiction of the conference. The report was adopted.

The committee to which was referred the request of the Western Wisconsin district recommended that such be granted. It was so ordered.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported, presenting nineteen names of elders selected by the Presidents of Seventy for ordination into that quorum. The quorum had approved those named, and asked provision for their ordination. On motion the names were considered separately. Bro. John Davis' name was approved. The name of Bro. V. D. Baggerly was referred to the Presidents of Seventy. The following named were then approved: Edward Delong, H. E. Moler, Samuel Brown, L. F. Daniel, John Shields, C. H. Burr, F. C. Keck, J. W. Jackson, E. A. Stedman. S. W. Simmons, referred back to Presidents of Seventy. William Thompson; A. M. Fyrando, referred back to Presidents of Seventy. Henry Sparling, James M. Scott, C. J. Hunt, F. J. Chatburn, F. A. Smith; R. E. Grant, approved and referred to missionary in charge of Michigan in order to give Bro. Grant time to consider it. J. B. Roush. The report as adopted with the referring of names, was adopted as a whole.

The Second Quorum of Priests asked that Bro. W. T. Shakespeare be ordained as its president, and Brn J. A. Gunsolley and F. E. Cochran as his counselors.

A number of the deacons had met and taken steps to complete the organization of the Second Quorum of Deacons. They asked the ordination of Brn. C. F. Church, Edward Weedmark, and G. V. Brown to the respective positions of president and counselors.

Action was taken providing for a committee on American Archaeology as follows:—

Resolved that a committee on American Archaeology be appointed who shall report their labors to the General Conference, and as they deem necessary through the Herald, so that the church can have the benefit of their labors. That said committee be composed of five, three of whom shall be appointed by this conference, the remaining two to be selected by the committee at their discretion.

It was adopted, and Brn. F. M. Sheehy, William Woodhead, and W. H. Kelley of the Twelve, were so appointed and their selection made unanimous.

A rule was adopted providing that no new business be introduced after Thursday the 12th, at three p. m., unless notice thereof be given by that time.

A resolution asking that priests, teachers, and deacons be made ex officio members of conference was mentioned by the President, who ruled it out of order for the reason that amendments to the Rules of Representation required previous specific notice.

The following document was read that thought might be given it:—

Whereas there exists in the church no definite and positive understanding on the law governing marital relations, therefore be it—

Resolved, that there be a committee of three appointed to draft a statement of the law together with an explanation thereof governing the relationship of man and wife touching the following features:—

1. Justifiable causes for separation of husband and wife.
2. On what conditions can husband and wife whose companions are still living be privileged to marry again.
3. The lawfulness or unlawfulness of receiving individuals into the church when having one or more companions living from whom they have been separated.
4. The lawfulness or unlawfulness of expelling members from the church for separating from companions.
5. As to whether we as a church should recognize that the divorce law of the land separates and frees in a gospel sense.

Said committee to report to the next conference.

Bro. E. L. Kelley gave notice that he would move to strike out certain words.

Bro. James McKiernan preached at half past seven o'clock in the evening on the fulfillment of prophecy. He was assisted by Bro. John Chisnall.

Thursday, the 12th. — The young people met in prayer service at half past seven in the morning. It was reported as an enjoyable and profitable meeting.

The regular prayer service at nine o'clock was in charge of Brn. Daniel Hougas and Marcus Shaw.

Bro. W. E. Peak preached the morning sermon. He was assisted by Bro. J. Arthur Davis. Not being present at the last two preaching and prayer services, we do not state more concerning them.

The afternoon business session was opened by singing hymn No. 52, Bro. C. E. Butterworth offering prayer. Hymn No. 8 was sung and the minutes were read.

The report of the General Sunday

School Association was read and inserted in the minutes.

The Quorum of the Twelve presented the following notice:—

*To the General Conference assembled:—*The Quorum of the Twelve hereby gives notice that it will present for the consideration of the Conference, the questions involved in the subjects now before the joint council, unless such action on its part is made unnecessary by general agreement on the part of said joint council.

A. H. SMITH, Pres. of Quorum.

Some items of new business were read by the President. The resolution passed at yesterday's session that fixed the time limit for the introduction of new business at Thursday at three o'clock was reconsidered. A resolution prevailed extending said limit until Monday, the 16th inst., at three o'clock.

A resolution providing that General Conference appoint the speakers at the reunions was laid on the table.

The following resolution was presented:—

Whereas the following language as found in section 101, paragraph 2, page 280, Doctrine and Covenants: "Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment," has been used in teaching the law of tithing,

Resolved, as the sense of this conference, that said section in its entirety was given for the establishment and direction of the Order of Enoch, and pertains to that order, and not necessarily to the body of the church; promising as it does a "multiplicity of blessings" to those faithful to their covenants in the order, and cursings if not faithful; and hence should not be used in teaching the law of tithing.

It was moved to refer the matter to the Twelve and the Bishopric. A substitute was offered that the question be referred to the Standing High Council. The question was discussed. The motion to refer to the Standing High Council was lost. The substitute to refer to the Twelve and Bishopric was also lost. The resolution itself, which involved a definition of the meaning of the statement of the law cited was then placed upon its passage and lost.

The following resolution was presented:—

1. Resolved, that hereafter all financial agents of the church in whatever capacity employed shall give bond for the faithful execution of their respective trusts, in such amounts as may be appointed by the High Council of the Church, said bond to be obtained from some responsible security company, to be approved by said council.

2. Resolved, that to each financial agent of the church a salary allowance shall be made sufficient at least to cover the expense of his bond.

3. Resolved, that each financial agent of the church be required to deposit all moneys received by him, in some bank to his credit as such financial agent and that the amounts disbursed by him, shall be altogether by check on said bank account.

The clauses were separately considered. The word "Traveling" was inserted before the words "High Council;" the second clause was stricken out. Some further amendments were proposed and discussed. The document was then placed upon its passage and lost.

The report of the joint council was read. It is as follows:—

To the Conference:—The joint council, in compliance with your request, present the following report which embraces what has been agreed upon:—

1. Office in the Church of Christ is not conferred to distinguish, or glorify, or increase the importance of the person on whom it is conferred.

2. Office in the church is conferred for the purpose of accomplishing certain results designed in the instituting and establishing the church.

3. All offices in the church come properly under the head of the priesthood. Under this general head all the officers are arranged; there being two orders of priesthood, the Melchisedec and the Aaronic.

4. The scope of the present council is confined to an inquiry into the calling, duties, and prerogatives of the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Quorum of High Priests.

5. The President of the church is primarily appointed by revelation.

6. This appointment is confirmed by vote of the church properly taken.

7. That the Presidency is the leading quorum in the church. That the duty of presiding over the church devolves on that quorum. That it is the prerogative of the President to preside over the whole church, to bear the responsibility of the care and oversight of the work of the church, in all its different departments, and through the constituted officers of the church in their various callings, according to the laws, rules, and regulations in force and recognized by the church.

8. That it is the prerogative of the President to receive revelations from God and give them to the church for the direction and government of the affairs of the church.

9. That the members of the Presidency are leading interpreters and teachers of the laws and revelations of God, and are of right presidents of the General Assemblies of the church.

10. That the members of the Presidency are to preside over the High Council, and in the exercise of this duty to render decisions on important causes submitted to that council.

11. That is the prerogative of the Presidency to receive revelations from God through the President and present them to the church.

12. That the Presidency are the counselors of the Twelve and exercise the right of presidency by direction and counsel to that quorum.

13. That the calling and duties of the High Priests are those of standing or local presidency of branches, districts, conferences or stakes, to the presidency of which they may be called, or appointed by the constituted authorities of the church, in accordance to the law.

14. That "The Twelve" are the second quorum in authority and importance in the general work of the church, and is the leading missionary body of laborers, under the direction and counsel of the Presidency, whose duty it is to preach the gospel, win souls to Christ, administer in the rites of the gospel, carry the gospel to this and every other nation, take charge of and direct other missionaries; and to do any work within their calling, which the necessities of the work and general welfare of the church may demand.

JOSEPH SMITH,

President of Council,

HEMAN C. SMITH,

HENRY A. STEBBINS,

Secretaries of Council.

It was adopted.

A resolution asking that a committee be appointed to prepare a series of blank forms was adopted, and the committee appointed.

President Joseph Smith expressed himself as pleased with the temper of the body. He announced a meeting of the college committee.

Bro. F. G. Pitt asked that those interested in gospel tent work meet to advise concerning prices, kind of tents to be used, general experience in such work, etc.

Bro. J. S. Roth was the speaker in the evening hour. He was assisted by Bro. Henry Kemp. The sermon was reported.

Friday, the 13th.—The young people held a prayer service at half past seven o'clock. At nine o'clock Bro. Henry Southwick and John Hawley had charge of the regular prayer meeting.

Bro. G. E. Deuel preached at 10:45, assisted by Bro. J. S. Kier. We did not hear the effort, therefore cannot enumerate its leading points.

A number of persons have been baptized at various times during conference, Brn. H. A. Stebbins, R. J. Anthony, and Roderick May officiating.

At half past one o'clock the business session was opened in the usual manner. Prayer was offered by Bro. Henry C. Smith, and the minutes were read and approved.

The First Quorum of Priests reported, embodying a request for the ordination of Bro. D. J. Krahl as its president. It was provided for.

A resolution from the Daughters of Zion was read. It requested the ministry to present and assist in establishing and extending their department of church work. It was inserted in the minutes.

A report was read from the Third Quorum of Elders. It reported 1,922 sermons and 159 baptisms, and recommended Bro. John Hawley for missionary appointment. It also asked that a map of Book of Mormon lands be provided for general use. The recommendation was referred to the Quorum of the Twelve, and the provision for a map to the committee on American Archæology.

The Standing High Council reported as follows:—

To the General Conference now in session Greeting:—We herewith report that at the meeting of the High Council this forenoon the resignation of Councilor Winthrop H. Blair, on account of poor health, advanced age, and deafness, was accepted; and we further report that the Presidency nominated High Priest John Chisnall to fill vacancy caused by such resignation.

Respectfully submitted,

ROBT. M. ELVIN,

Secretary of High Council.

The report was received and the selection of Bro. John Chisnall was ratified by a unanimous vote.

An invitation to hold a reunion near Warrensburg, Missouri, was read.

The document referring to the question of divorce was presented. The enacting clause was amended by striking out the words "marital relations" and inserting the word "divorce." The matter was then referred to a committee of the First Presidency and Bishop, with request to report when they can.

The First Presidency presented the following named brethren, nominated by them for ordination into the High Priests' quorum: James Moler, A. M. Fyrando, H. N. Hansen, J. P. Carlisle, E. W. Nunley, A. J. Moore, J. M. Baker, Temme Hinderks, William Lewis, Robert Winning, J. M. Terry, J. R. Evans, George Greene, R. C. Longhurst, Roderick May, George Montague, W. C. Nirk, J. T. Davies, R. J. Anthony, I. N. White, C. H. Porter, J. F. Burton, Joseph Dewsnup, J. H. Wells, C. H. Jones, Wentworth Vickery, F. M. Sheehy, J. S. Snively. The names will be considered at a later session.

The standing High Council presented a definition of its functions and duties.

It was received, provision being made to print it with each line numbered, to furnish copies to members of the conference, and its consideration made the special order for the day following.

President Joseph Smith read a personal letter from David Evans, of Ogden, Utah, a prominent man and ex-member of the Utah Church, in which he congratulated him upon the decision in the late Temple Lot suit as right and just and morally correct.

The request of the Independence, Missouri, branch that next General Conference be held there, also a request that it be held at Kirtland, Ohio, were considered.

Bro. W. H. Kelley was authorized to cast the vote of the West Virginia district.

Both requests were discussed and the yea and nay vote was called for. The poll resulted as follows:—

Delegate vote: Independence 538, Kirtland 293. Ex officio vote: Independence 114, Kirtland 48. Totals: For Independence, 652; for Kirtland, 341. The choice of Independence was made unanimous.

The Second Quorum of Elders reported 1,935 sermons and 142 baptisms, also a resolution that they would select no one for membership who used tobacco and would drop any member who used it, etc., etc.

Announcements were made, hymn 225 was sung, and Bro. G. T. Griffiths pronounced the benediction.

During the morning Brn. F. J. Chatburn and C. H. Burr were ordained to the office of Seventy, as members in the Second Quorum of Seventy by Brn. E. C. Briggs and G. T. Griffiths of the Twelve.

At half past seven o'clock President Joseph Smith delivered an excellent discourse on the subject of "authority." It was reported and will be published. At the conclusion of his sermon President Smith declared these words with a force and fervor that was felt by his hearers:—

This is God's work; it has God's power behind it, and Christ has delegated authority to man to represent it; and he has delegated this authority within the association of this body. Jesus said touching this, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away." It is no longer of any worth, and shall be "trodden under foot of man," "and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

Let your labors then be within the vine. See to it that your ministry is within the pale of your delegated authority. Do not transcend it, and so long as you remain within its lines of action—I could almost call it repression. But then will say, Of liberty so great, it can hardly be called repression; but if you keep within the lines of this authority that is delegated to you, you will find plenty of scope for the exercise of all that is within your heart and brain, and you will find always acceptance with men and acceptance with God.

Unto you for this coming year shall be fulfilled and let me predict it in the name of that Spirit that shall move us for you: Angels shall go before you and prepare the paths for your coming; doors shall be opened for you; you will be received by them within and without, and you will be enabled to enter in and occupy and accomplish good in his name. Amen.

Bro. Roderick May had charge of the services.

Saturday, the 14th.—The young people held a prayer meeting at half past seven o'clock.

Brn. J. M. Terry and William Thompson conducted the morning prayer service. It was reported as an enjoyable season.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn addressed the congregation at the 10:45 service. He was assisted by Bro. A. B. Moore. The speaker discoursed from the words, "Beware of false prophets." We were not permitted to hear the sermon, but heard it commended.

The afternoon session was opened by singing hymn No. 182, Bro. W. W. Blair offering prayer. Hymn No. 900 was then sung, followed by reading of the minutes, which were approved.

The following provision for obtaining reduced railroad rates to next General Conference was presented and adopted, the name of Bro. H. A. Stebbins being substituted for that of Bro. E. L. Kelley at the request of the latter:—

Resolved that a committee of five be appointed consisting of H. A. Stebbins of Lamoni, Calvin Beebe of Omaha, John Burlington and William Lewis of St. Joseph, and W. N. Robinson of Kansas City to procure railroad rates to the next General Conference.

President Joseph Smith read the following request from the Quorum of the Twelve:—

Whereas all our efforts, thus far, looking to a general agreement upon the matters involved in the papers before the joint council, have failed, and

Whereas, a continuation of the conditions of doubt and division that at present exist in the church, is calculated to injure the confidence of the Saints and prove very hurtful to the cause in general, and

Whereas, it is the first desire of all interested to do what may be the will of God in all the matters involved, and

Whereas, we believe that our heavenly Father will give good things to those who need and ask of him in humility,

Resolved, that we request President Joseph Smith to present the matter before the Lord and ask for further revelation in explanation of the authority and duties of the several quorums and their members, also for instruction providing for filling the vacancies in the leading quorums, including also a designation of the Patriarch, if it shall be the pleasure of our heavenly Father to so enlighten us.

Resolved further, that we humble ourselves before the Lord and unitedly engage in fasting and prayer on such day as the President shall advise, for this purpose, making earnest supplication that God will favor his church with the revelation necessary.

Resolved further, that we invite the quorums of Seventy and the Bishopric to join with the quorums of the joint council in this service of sacrifice and devotion.

Adopted by unanimous vote of Quorum of Twelve.

The President stated that by agreement the invitation was extended to all the quorums, delegates, and members present. He recommended that the season of fasting and prayer be observed on the day following, the 15th inst., until the evening meal.

A motion then prevailed deferring consideration of the Standing High Council's definition of its functions, until Monday the 16th inst.

The committee on credentials was discharged.

The committee on blank forms reported that in the opinion of its members there was no necessity for complaint or appeal blanks, but thought it advisable that the present ministry report blank be revised to read as the committee designated, presenting a blank form, which will appear in the regular minutes. The report was adopted. In reply to a question, President Smith expressed the opinion that the use of said blank forms for report was not compulsory.

Reports were read from the Second Quorum of Teachers and the Second Quorum of Elders. A report was also presented by the Fourth Quorum of Elders. Its members had preached 1643 sermons and baptized 150. The Third Quorum of Priests reported, showing 679 sermons preached and 80 baptisms. They had decided to license no member using tobacco, and to drop members who persisted in its use after due notice. One member had been dropped for using it.

The names presented by the First Presidency, of persons nominated for ordination to the office of high priest, were presented. It was resolved that the nominations be referred to the Twelve, the Seventy, and the High Priests; those quorums to act separately and report to the conference. It was understood that other quorums directly affected by nomination of any of the parties named would have the privilege of being heard.

President Smith reported for the College committee. They proposed to take such active measures as time might permit. They had received an offer of forty acres of land from three parties. It had been so far accepted that contracts had been entered into, the parties agreeing to make a deed of the land on a contingency. Brn. I. L. Rogers and D. Dancer wished to resign; the former because of his age, the latter because busily engaged in other duties. Bro. Rogers' resignation was accepted; Bro. Dancer consented to continue. The names of Brn. Henry C. Smith, Daniel Anderson, William Anderson, Ellis Short, and J. H. Peters were placed in nomination, resulting in the choice of Bro. Ellis Short to fill the vacancy. The choice was made unanimous. The following named now constitute the committee: Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, David Dancer, Robert Winning, John A. Robinson, F. G. Pitt, and Ellis Short. Brn. Pitt and Short would receive subscriptions to the college fund during conference.

The committee appointed to consider the matter of publishing the compilation of General Conference acts made by former committees, stated its inability to report until a later time.

Secretary Stebbins was authorized to telegraph the General Passenger Agent of the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad requesting an extension of time on reduced rate certificates in the hands of conference members and visitors.

The following paper on doctrinal teaching was considered:—

Whereas, there is a disposition on the part of some to go beyond the beaten tracks of the church in doctrine and precept and thus advocating speculative theories which may or may not be true, and,

Whereas, the Lord demands that his ministry shall "say nothing but repentance" (the gospel) to this generation (see Doctrine and Covenants 5: 4; 10: 4; 18: 2) and to teach the gospel as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants; and as Paul exhorted those under him to "teach no other doctrine" and not to "give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions [engender controversy], rather than godly edifying;" and, "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to Godliness; he is proud, knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness: from such withdraw thyself," and,

Whereas, we believe it detrimental to the progress of this church for any of her representatives to advocate doctrines and ideas which are in direct opposition to the doctrine advocated by the church since its inception, and, further we do not believe it is for the best interests of the church for men to take positions upon questions which the church has not decided, and advocate them as doctrine, and preaching the same, therefore be it,

Resolved, that we discountenance the presentation of anything by the ministry as doctrine upon which there is not an agreement; and while we grant them the privilege of entertaining private views, they are not warranted in teaching them while acting as representatives of this church.

It was discussed at length. The following substitute was then offered and adopted:—

Resolved that it is the sense of this conference that our ministry should confine themselves to the preaching of the gospel; and that they desist from preaching that which cannot be fully sustained in the standard works of the church.

The Presidents were authorized to provide for the ordination of those present who were passed upon for ordination.

Hymn No. 900 was sung and President Joseph Smith dismissed the assembly.

Bro. T. A. Hougas was appointed chorister. This we failed to note in report of first day's proceedings.

The young people's service at half past seven in the evening was in charge of Bro. T. W. Williams. We regret that we are unable to make a fuller report of its important features, not being present. We insert the following brief report furnished us:—

Services in charge of T. W. Williams; prayer by R. E. Grant. After stating the object of the meeting the chairman called upon Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, who spoke for about ten minutes; subject, "How to do; what to do? when?" He was followed by Sr. Anna Stedman who spoke on "Dress and extravagance." Bro. J. B. Roush followed on "Cause and effect." Sr. Viola Blair spoke on "Lack of devotion." Dr. C. H. Carter spoke on "Physical cultivation." Sr. Ruby Stedman spoke on "Girls and their companions." Sr. C. B. Stebbins spoke on "Example of the young." T. W. Williams followed, dwelling on the folly of false modesty and the necessity of parents taking their children into their confidence and informing them of the laws of their being, the evils to be avoided and the good to adopt. The girls were urged to demand that their betrothed shall bring the same purity to the marriage altar that they expect upon their part: to have nothing to do with a young man who uses tobacco or has bad habits that would be loathsome in a husband: "Shun the appearance of evil," should be our motto.

Sunday, the 15th.—Prayer service was held by the young people at half past seven. At half past nine the Star of Bethlehem Sunday school held its usual session.

At nine o'clock Brn. A. S. Cochran and William Anderson were in charge of the regular meeting.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy preached in the morning hour, assisted by Bro. A. H. Parsons. It was an excellent effort. It was reported by Sr. Belle Robinson and will be published.

Bro. Charles Derry preached in the lower auditorium. He was assisted by Bro. E. E. Wheeler. We did not hear Bro. Derry's sermon.

At half past two o'clock an ordination and confirmation service was held in the lower auditorium in charge of Bro. A. H. Smith, Brn. E. C. Briggs and G. H. Hilliard assisting him. Hymn "Sweet hour of prayer" was sung; prayer was offered by Bro. Briggs.

Brn. C. F. Church, Edward Weedmark, and G. V. Brown were ordained to the positions heretofore designated in the Second Quorum of Priests; and Brn. W. T. Shakespeare, J. A. Gunsolley, and F. E. Cochran to positions designated in the Third Quorum of Priests, by Brn. A. H. Smith, E. L. Kelley, and G. H. Hilliard. Bro. John Chisnall was ordained a Councilor in the Standing High Council by Brn. A. H. Smith, E. C. Briggs, and Charles Derry. Brn. F. A. Smith H. E. Moler, J. B. Roush, E. A. Stedman, John Shields, William Thompson, and C. J. Hunt were ordained to the office of Seventy by Brn. A. H. Smith and E. C. Briggs, James Caffall and James McKiernan, R. Anthony and J. H. Lake; the brethren named acting conjointly in ordaining. Bro. J. M. Baggerly was ordained to the office of priest by Brn. A. H. Smith and E. C. Briggs. Following the ordinations a number were confirmed by Brn. A. S. Cochran and R. M. Elvin.

The sermon at half past two o'clock was preached by Bro. Heman C. Smith. His subject was "prayer;" appropriate to the day of fasting and prayer observed. He was assisted by Bro. H. O. Smith.

The two sermons in the evening hour were by Brn. R. C. Evans and J. J. Cornish. Both spoke on the redemption work of Christ. Bro. Evans was assisted by Bro. Thomas Bell; Bro. Cornish by Bro. J. W. Peterson. The Saints had a day of rejoicing throughout.

THE DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

DURING the General Conference of 1893, held at Lamoni, Iowa, a number of the sisters met and proceeded to organize a society for the purpose of developing and perfecting the work of the sisters of the church, etc. An "advisory committee" was chosen to formulate articles setting forth the object and providing rules for the government of the organization. The committee presented a constitution and by-laws, which was adopted. It provided for an "advisory committee" and two secretaries. The name "United Daughters of Zion" was adopted, also the motto: "Our aim, mankind to bless." The following named were chosen as officers for the ensuing year: "Sr. C. B. Kelley chairman, Sr. C. B. Stebbins recording secretary, Sr. M. Walker corresponding secretary." A list of names was then enrolled, and the work immediately entered upon. We omit publication of the first constitution, as the revised instrument adopted during the present conference contains its essential features. The work accomplished by the organization to the present time has been presented through the Home Column of the HERALD and in the various "leaflets" published by the sisters; it is therefore unnecessary to restate it in detail.

The second annual meeting of the Daughters of Zion assembled in the Saints' church, Lamoni, Iowa, April 11, 1894, at nine a. m. Sr. C. B. Kelley being absent because of sickness among her family, Bro. F. M. Sheehy was requested to preside, Sr. C. B. Stebbins secretary. Hymn No. 75 was sung, and Bro. J. F. Mintun offered prayer.

The report of the chairman of the advisory committee was read, and approved; as follows:—

The requirements of the position I have held the past year make it necessary that I make at least a partial review of the work done by the committee.

Our work, as the name indicates, has been of a general nature, that of advising the local societies, and has consisted chiefly of selecting suitable reading matter and of arranging programmes to be used at the meeting of the local societies.

Believing that the work of the Prayer Union and the work contemplated by the Daughters of Zion can well be combined, the advisory committee offer the suggestion for consideration by this body.

The committee calls attention also to the necessity for the provision for the publication of leaflets.

Since the organization of this society, classes composed of young ladies have been formed in some places and it is to be hoped soon will be formed in many more, their object being to study subjects in line with the work of this society. It is necessary for this body to decide what relation these classes shall bear to the society and what their rules of government shall be.

Since our constitution makes no provision for the handling of funds, and since it is necessary that the government of the classes already mentioned and their relation to this society be defined, the committee recommends that the constitution be revised so as to create the office of treasurer and to make all necessary changes.

Respectfully submitted,

C. B. KELLEY,

Chairman of Advisory Com.

The secretary's report, also reports from seven local societies, were read and approved. Twenty-three local societies had been organized; total membership 329; said local organizations were located at San Francisco, Long Valley, and Hollister, California; Denver and Fairview, Colorado; Lamoni, Harlan, Burlington, and Keb, Iowa; Kewanee and Piper City, Illinois; Fall River, Massachusetts; Clarksdale, Higbee, and Independence, Missouri; Fremont, Omaha, Platte Valley, and Waterloo, Nebraska; Sand Run, Ohio; Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and Providence, Rhode Island. A scattered membership of 70 was also reported.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

Resolved, that this convention favors the idea of uniting the work of Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion where it is found practicable.

Whereas Sr. Walker stands responsible to the Board of Publication for the publication of the leaflets for the past year, therefore be it, Resolved that at this meeting we take steps to refund the amount; also that means be provided for the free distribution of leaflets during the ensuing year.

A committee was appointed to devise means to continue the publication of leaflets and to liquidate present indebtedness.

The following resolution was discussed, explained, and adopted:—

Resolved, that the classes formed among the young sisters and known as the "Young Daughters of Zion" shall be considered members of the local branches of this society and be so enrolled, that they shall have a voice in the business meetings of the societies; that their leader shall be elected from among the Daughters of Zion.

This was also adopted:—

Resolved that during this session of conference the elders of the church be requested to help in introducing the work of the Daughters of Zion wherever their labors may call them.

A motion prevailed providing for a committee to revise the constitution, to report at next meeting.

Short addresses were then made by Srs. M. Walker, Anna Stedman, Viola Blair, Mary Robinson, Kate Ward, Jennie Murphy, C. B. Stebbins, Minnie Nicholson, Margaret Head, and Bro. F. M. Sheehy.

It was not the privilege of the writer to be present at this meeting. However, he was informed by one of the ministry that the addresses were excellent presentations of the leading objects and methods of the organization. Breadth of sentiment, intelligent comprehension, and depth of thought were manifest in what was said. The sisters were not a whit behind the brethren, in their understanding of and ability to perform their specific work. An intellectual spirituality was directing their forces in the development of a high order of domestic economy, prominent among which were the very important features of child training and teaching. They were developing an ideal, practical home life domestically and socially. The problems and methods discussed were designed to prevent or correct many if not all causes of existing incompatibilities and other social disorders. It is probably sufficient to say that the refined nature of woman inspired by the infinite wisdom of divine light and power is to place its potent touch and hallowed impress upon the church, the family of God; that her rich gifts and powers of heart and mind are to bear their legitimate and important part in the great work of redeeming the generations of Zion, "the pure in heart;" "that . . . glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; . . . holy and without blemish;" "complete" in Jesus Christ; "perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Her endowments adapt her to a realm none else can occupy, as man fills his own sphere. Her work is divinely appointed and she prepared therefor in "the eternal fitness of things." True companionship, including its attendant, accompanying happiness and development and realizations and possibilities for good—that comprehended by too few in the great world, are also features of life that the sisters are also giving attention. We make but a hasty statement of their work in outline, leaving it to them and others to delineate it; suggesting, however, that the brethren give thought and action to their part, inasmuch as all the opportunities and duties of life are mutual, requiring coöperation. It has been suggested that the "Sons of Zion" organize with that object in view.

Consideration of business was resumed on the morning of the 12th inst. at nine o'clock, Bro. F. M. Sheehy presiding, Sr. C. B. Stebbins secretary. The minutes of the former session were read and approved.

The following report from the ways and means committee was read:—

We, your committee appointed to devise a plan for raising means, recommend that for the meeting of obligations now due, and for present necessities, a musical and literary entertainment be given at the close of conference now assembled. We suggest that a committee of three on entertainment be appointed by this body, and that Bro. F. G. Pitt be requested to act as one of that committee.

For future expenses we recommend that a general fund be established in each local society, in any way that they may find practicable; and that each member be assessed, and the assessment be paid out of the general fund of each local organization; also that the scattered members be assessed the same as those in local societies.

ALPHA DEAM, }

The report and its suggestions and recommendations were adopted, and Bro. F. G. Pitt and Srs. L. L. Resseguie, Viola Blair, and Minnie Nicholson were selected as said committee.

MINNIE NICHOLSON, }
ANNA STEDMAN, } Com.
MARY ROBINSON, }

The following officers were elected by acclamation: Srs. M. Walker, Emma Burton, Anna Stedman, Audie Anderson, and C. B. Kelley, advisory committee; Sr. Callie B. Stebbins secretary; Sr. Viola Blair treasurer." "A resolution prevailed which provided that the assessment for each local society shall be at the rate of five cents per month for each member."

The first evening after the close of conference was appointed for giving the entertainment provided for; the admission was fixed at ten cents.

The session adjourned to meet at next General Conference or at the call of the chairman, and was dismissed by prayer.

At a meeting of the Advisory Committee Sr. C. B. Kelley was elected chairman and Sr. Audie Anderson corresponding secretary.

The sisters are now better prepared to renew their efforts for good. Their organization has come to stay. Its beneficent character,—the noble purposes it has in view, and the increasing demand for the prevention and correction of many existing evils; above all, the development of true homes, "the abiding places of the affections," all emphasize the permanent character of the organization or work of the Daughters of Zion. May the love and light of God be its constant inspiration.

JESUS, FROM A JEWISH STAND-POINT.

THE Overland Monthly Review, in a late issue has the following excellent article from the pen of Jacob Voorsanger. It may do the Saints good to read how a Jew of this century looks at Jesus:—

The following is a condensation of an interesting article by Jacob Voorsanger, in the Overland Monthly Review. If Jesus of Nazareth has himself uttered the wise maxim that man shall be known by his fruits, his followers in the long days of the dark past, produced fruit that was not of their teacher's planting. That, to a Jew, is the unimpeachable testimony of history. Happily that dark past is behind us, and no matter through what potent agencies, the attitude of the church is less intolerant, if still too dogmatic to insure great sympathy. Whether I am mistaken or not, I attribute the modern attitude of ecclesiastical authority to the powerful revolution of the centuries, by which it became to a mere agency for the dissemination of religious teachings.

When the church instead of holding the scepter of power, simply ascends the cathedral and gives utterance to the wise words of its illustrious founder, Hebrews begin to understand its purposes. And so it has come to pass, not only that the Jew with hearty good will turns to his Christian brother, believing firmly that as Nathan the Wise says so nobly and so sagely, What makes the Christian a Jew makes the Jew a Christian, but that the character of the Nazarene gains in strength and luster in exactly the same proportion that his followers make themselves beloved and respected.

This, I profess, without fear of criticism or contradiction, is the modern Jewish standpoint. The dogmas of Christianity are still unintelligible to us. We cannot understand the intricate scheme of salvation that places God so far without the reach of his creatures that mediation must be resorted to. We do not understand that to reach the heavenly Father in simple, childlike prayer a string of metaphysical propositions must be purchased or acquired. We understand and feel God, our Father, the God of all his children. We have never taken very kindly to metaphysics. When Isocrates, the Greek, witnessed the Osirian rites on the shores of the lower Nile he wondered much. "If Osiris is God, why do ye lament his death as a man; and if he be a man, why do you worship him as God?" The illustrious Greek's objections regarding Osiris are ours with respect to the metaphysical Christ.

But shorn of all theological attributes, divested of his Greek garments, disrobed and appearing in the strong light of history, the majestic character and figure of the Nazarene are intelligible enough to a Hebrew. A son of his people, his heart aflame with great intents. His ambition wholly to restore the law, his dream that of the prophets, to bring the kingdom of heaven to the children of earth, he preached a millennium to men engaged in quarrels and contentions. If he failed, if his life paid the forfeit, it was the sorrowful consequence of troubled times. But his teachings, as they appear upon the face of his book, not as they are interpreted by hair-splitting metaphysicians, his teachings are the genuine echoes of the holy things propounded by old prophets. A life led in harmony with such teachings, the same teachings given to Israel, in the law and the prophets, must needs be pure and holy. This much we understand. Why cannot all the world thus read these teachings, and thus, to quote the great words of Sir Moses Montefiore, remove the title page between the old and the New Testaments.

BRO. HOLMES J. DAVISON sends us this from the Amherst, Nova Scotia, Press, with the statement that "Sr. Quigley is the only Latter Day Saint in the town":—

SERMON TO THE PRISONERS.—Mrs. D. F. Quigley visited the county jail last Sunday p. m. and read a sermon to the prisoners. At present Mr. Acorn has twelve boarders, and it is certainly very thoughtful and kind on Mrs. Quigley's part to interest herself in these men. No doubt much good will be done by her efforts in this direction.

In connection with a call for a reception to General Neal Dow, in honor of his ninetieth birthday, and for an International Temperance Congress to be held at Prohibition Park, Staten Island, New York, June 3-5, etc., we publish the following, by request:—

167 Chambers St., NEW YORK CITY,
March 19, 1894.

Dear Sir: We enclose you a copy of a call for a grand reception to General Neal Dow in honor of his nintieth birthday, and accompanying International Temperance Congress. Would you be so kind as to give this call a prominent notice in your paper, saying that the basis of representation in the congress is as follows:—

Local organizations are entitled to one delegate to every twenty members; organizations representing less than State (or province in Canada), five delegates each; State (or province) organizations, ten each; national organizations, twenty each. Each delegate will be expected to present credentials, signed by the proper officer of the society or organization that he represents.

You will observe by an examination of the signatures the representative character of the call. It is thought to be of great importance that the unusual interest in "The Grand Old Man of Temperance,"—as Miss Willard styles him—should be turned to emphasize in the minds of the public the reasons for and importance of the temperance agitation, which commenced almost with the public life of General Dow. The General writes us that this object of the meeting is one most acceptable to him. He desires to address once more the vast army of temperance advocates in the United States and Canada, and thus publicly deliver to them his farewell. The occasion will also give him the opportunity to take by the hand these representatives, and through them the temperance world.

Also be so kind as to urge the importance of every society or organization that stands for temperance to appoint promptly delegates who will attend the congress, and to forward the names of such delegates to the secretary. All inquiries should be addressed to,

Yours very respectfully,
JOSEPH A. BOGARDUS, Secretary.
167 Chambers Street, NEW YORK CITY.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

WE have but few large and full Protestant congregations, either in city or country.

The usual estimates made by pastors are about double the count, especially in the evening service.

Counts in our cities have repeatedly revealed that the morning attendance, of saints and sinners, is less than one half the enrolled membership, and that in our boasted "Christian country," with nearly one half the adults on church rolls, only from one tenth to one twentieth of our Protestant population is usually found at church, and men are especially sparse.

Attendance in the country is about the same everywhere. Yet we are employing a great and changing variety of worldly devices to attract the world—architecture, painting, music, eloquence, sensationalism, and sometimes even methods borrowed from the variety theater.

It is true that when an extraordinary entertainment is advertised, a crowd is drawn, but this does not increase the permanent congregations.

To this general fact of thin Protestant congregations there are a few exceptions:—

1. Mr. Talmage draws a crowd by extraordinary popular descriptive talent, secular themes, and much of entertaining sensationalism.

2. John Hall has a large congregation to hear the true gospel by legitimate influences and "a fortuitous concurrence of circumstances."

3. Sam Jones draws a crowd by the wit of a mountebank in cap and bells.

Such cases are exceptional. Now we mark a contrast. The Romish churches are usually full, even sometimes as early as five o'clock in the morning, rain or shine.

It is conspicuous in all our cities, that "Catholics go to church and Protestants do not."

In Providence, Rhode Island, I entered a Romish church at eight a. m., and found every seat of the nine hundred filled. They told me that this was repeated four times each Lord's day.

At 10:30, I found in a united mid-summer congregation of a large Congregational and Baptist church, but two hundred and fifty people.

Yet few special devices are employed to attract, and nothing like our juvenile exhibitions or variety shows are ever presented in their churches.

They advertise but little, make little of "the social element," seldom present artistic music, or eloquence, and never the sensationalism of a mountebank.

Their paintings, altar decorations, and services are monotonous, and even their holiday celebrations are serious, reverent, and religious, quite in contrast with the worldly variety shows of Protestant holidays.

In short the crowd comes without any such extra strain of worldly devices as we often employ. Indeed we sometimes see crowds habitually throng our foreign churches, like that of Holland, where architecture, music, and services are of the most plain, bald, and unattractive character.

Now why this contrast? Most of the same obstacles exist among Catholics as among Protestants,—dress, caste, Sunday weariness and Sunday papers, Sunday excursions, and in some cases, pew rentals.

But none of these obstacles keep Romanists away from church; why do they keep away the lapsed Protestant masses! The question is of deep and vital moment, but the remedy is far more difficult.

We are compelled to answer in brief that the masses have abandoned our Protestant churches, chiefly because they have partially or wholly abandoned faith in the fundamental principles of the gospel and in the church. We may truthfully say that Romanists are drawn in part by superstition and ignorance, but this does not alter our serious case. We cannot draw our ignorant masses nor our learned masses by the true faith. They are not sufficiently under its influence. The shallowest optimist can see this.

This condition is prophetic, (Luke 18: 8; 1 Tim. 4: 1-3; 2 Tim. 3: 1-5,) poisonous rationalism and infidelity, issuing from theological seminaries, colleges, and the press, have leavened society from rabbi to rabble, from palace to slum. We cannot and need not here unfold the cause of this general decay of vital and influential faith, but we may briefly state the only remedy. Let us throw away all mere human expedients and worldly devices and bring the mighty and old gospel to the front, and by some means make the masses hear it.

"Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Let dilettantes, preachers with their rose water sermons retire, and let apostolic men filled with the Holy Ghost and faith, come forward and preach the Word, and give the people something to believe that is true and worth believing. (2 Tim. 4: 1-5.)—Herald and Presbyterian.

The foregoing is both true and pitiful. But, whence shall the remedy, so staunchly stated to be the only one, really come. The entire community of churches is affected to a greater or lesser extent with the same sort of ecclesiastical inattention and spiritual decay; and it is not to be supposed that from them all combined, or any one of them the "apostolic men" needed can be solved by "human means;" and is it reasonable to suppose that God has any less regard for his own ways of doing business now than he had when he chose twelve men and seventy, and sent them on an apostolic mission with apostolic power and clothed them with the Holy Ghost, and sent the same life-giving force to testify of their work to disciples won to Christ by their preaching. Verily we believe not; but let the world wake up, it is time, high time.

OLIVE OIL.

INTERESTING to Saints is this from a California paper:—

Accounts have come from California of the great impetus given to the planting of olives in that State. The argument in favor of it is that the demand for olive oil is practically unlimited, and the need of it is shown in the fact that the Department of Agriculture at Washington obtained sixty-six samples of "strictly pure olive oil" (all imported, representing as many different brands) as a test. On analysis it was found out that not one of the sixty-six was pure. Several of them did not contain a single drop of olive oil, while others were adulterated with articles that were nauseous and harmful." That being the case, most people would hope that all encouragement would be given to the cultivation of olives in California.

A LATE Chicago Tribune editorial has this to say of George Jacob Schweinfurth:—

THE people of Rockford and vicinity, who long have watched the career of George Jacob Schweinfurth, the bogus "Messiah," will not be surprised at the claim that he had an attack of insanity several years ago, during which he passed himself off on a railroad train as the long lost Charlie Ross. The allegation is made by Dr. Landon Carter Gray, professor of nervous and mental diseases of the New York Polyclinic in a lecture recently read by him before the Society of Medical Jurisprudence of New York City. His statement is that ten or twelve years ago he was requested to examine into the sanity of a Methodist minister who, because of his diminutive size, was called "the sparrow." Dr. Gray took steps to have the man placed in an asylum, but the supposed insane person escaped next day and all trace of him was lost till a short time since, when the doctor discovered his former patient in the person of the alleged Savior of Rockford.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. C. SMITH recently wrote from South Boardman, Michigan, as follows:—

Bro. John Hanson has baptized five more at South Boardman. Others are nearly ready, and will obey soon.

Sr. W. C. Hidy, Boone, Iowa, April 4:—

We have some preaching here at present; Bro. W. C. Nirk is here and the preaching is grand. He has the largest congregation I have seen since we have lived here. There is good attention and I hope great good may be done.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

AFTER consulting Sr. Walker, editor of the Home Column, we concluded to present the HERALD readers a report of the business transacted by the Daughters of Zion, with some statements concerning their work. We have felt well in calling attention to it, and therefore have additional reasons for believing it will prove of interest to others. We are indebted to Sr. C. B. Stebbins, secretary of the organization, for access to the minutes.

The folks at Osterdock, Iowa, tried to shut the schoolhouse against the elders, but were signally beaten by friends, and the trouble settled, so writes Bro. W. H. Ksphart, March 13.

A missionary in Chin-Choo, China, recently received a letter from a banker asking him to recommend ten or more Christians to be employed in his bank, "because," he said, "the Christians are the only trustworthy men in the city."

Afghanistan has 6,000,000 of population and no missionary, India one missionary to 275,000, Persia one to 200,000, Thibet one to 2,000,000. If 40,000 missionaries were sent to India there would still be one to every 50,000.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Miss not the occasion; by the forelock take
That subtle power, the never-halting time,
Lest a mere moment's putting off should make Mischance almost as heavy as a crime."

IN THE HASTENING TIME.

TO THE thoughtful observer it cannot pass unnoticed that many things both in the realm of nature, science, and religion point to the fact that this period of time for which the Saints of God have long been looking and waiting is rapidly approaching, if indeed we are not already in the midst of it. It is a day of wonderful advancement all along the line of that which is calculated to develop and perfect the arts, sciences, and mechanical ingenuity; a day when the hand of philanthropy is stretched out and with a strong grasp is drawing thousands from the abyss of woe and despair; a day when charity is casting her mantle over the fallen that the festering sores may be washed in that blood which cleanses from all sin; when in short man is learning that Christianity cannot be separated from this vital principle of the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

Might we not then be prepared for, in fact be looking for and expecting a corresponding degree of activity and advancement upon the part of God's people? We certainly think the expectation both reasonable and proper, and yet we realize that so rapidly and unexpectedly has one organization within the church followed another that some have not been able to take in the full bearings of these movements, some have doubted, others opposed and yet others have hailed them with joy. Of the latter class were many who assembled themselves together on the night of April 10, to hear an address from Elder Joseph Burton, upon the work contemplated by the "Daughters of Zion." This was an occasion not soon to be forgotten and a crowded house listened with eager attention while this faithful servant of the Master brought forth from the storehouse of God's word things both new and old. We are more than pleased to say to his many friends and admirers as well as to the Daughters of Zion that through the kindness of Sr. Belle Robinson, a full report of this excellent address will be furnished the readers of the Herald in the near future.

As was to be anticipated this address was both timely and encouraging, proving but a foretaste and prophecy of that which was to follow in our regular meeting. One cause of regret was the unavoidable absence of our presiding officer, Sr. C. B. Kelley, who was detained by the sickness of her little daughter, Laura. In this emergency it was thought best that we invite one of the ministry to preside and accordingly Bro. Frank Sheehy was called upon and cheerfully responded to the invitation.

The meeting was opened by singing hymn No. 75 from Saints' Harp, followed with prayer by Bro. Mintun, after which the minutes of the session held last April were read and approved. Report was then read from Sr. C. B. Kelley, chairman of the advisory committee, in which various suggestions were made in regard to such things as seemed needful to receive the careful consideration of the meeting. The report presented by the secretary, Sr. C. B. Stebbins, shows the total number of membership to be 329. This may seem small to some, but when it is remembered how recently the organization was brought into existence and what an amount of prejudice it has been necessary to overcome, it will be seen that it is by no means discouraging. The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong, and courage must come to all with the thought, "If God be for us who can be against us." As no provision was made in the constitution for the office of treasurer, the secretary also reported the amount on hand, received from contributions and otherwise as being $5.50.

Miscellaneous business being in order, the desirability of combining the work of the Daughters of Zion with the Prayer Union was discussed. It was found that in many places the two were working harmoniously together and in the judgment of many the latter was simply the natural and legitimate outgrowth of the former. Reference was made by one of the sisters to various articles in the HERALD which appeared at the time the Union was first organized and which seemingly outlined the very work now undertaken. Reference was made to one especially in which the sisters were requested to pray that "We may be blessed with a spiritual endowment that will prepare our hearts and our minds for the proper accomplishment of woman's work in the home, the Sunday school, the press—wherever our help is needed in Zion's redemption and prepare us to enter when further doors of usefulness are opened to us." After being fully discussed it was unanimously decided that in such places as it be found practicable the two be combined.

Next the matter of publishing leaflets was taken up and discussed resulting in a unanimous decision to continue the same and a committee of three was appointed by the chair consisting of Srs. Murphy, Deam, and Rudd for the purpose of devising ways and means of meeting the expense of those already published and continuing the publication of others for free distribution.

The subject of the classes formed for instructing the Young Daughters of Zion, then came up for attention and it was decided that they be considered members of the local as well as general society and so enrolled; that they shall have a voice in the business meetings of the societies and their leader shall be elected from the Daughters of Zion.

A resolution was then offered to the effect that we present a request to the traveling ministry now assembled in conference to the effect that they aid in the establishing of this work throughout the church where their labors call them, by bringing it to the notice of the members, and helping the sisters to organize.

A committee of three consisting of Srs. Minnie Nicholson, Anna Stedman, and Mary Robinson, were appointed by the chair to revise the constitution and report to the meeting.

Short speeches were then made by several of the sisters, all of which were both cheering and encouraging. The meeting then adjourned to nine o'clock the following day.

The HERALD editorial "The Daughters of Zion" will include all items of business transacted at later meetings of the organization during conference.

KIBBIE, Ill., Mar. 26.

Editors Herald:—I came here on the 3d inst. in company with Bro. Emsley Curtis and held meetings for two weeks. During this time Bro. Curtis arranged with Elder W. A. Inman of the Campbellite Church to commence a six days' discussion at Oblong, six miles southeast of Kibbie, beginning March 19; two sessions a day. This grew out of a discussion held between Bro. Curtis and W. A. Inman at Kibbie last November. The propositions were as follows: "Resolved that the Reorganized Church of which I, E. Curtis, am a member, is identical in faith, organization, and practice with the apostolic church; E. Curtis affirms."

"Resolved that the church of Christ of which I, W. A. Inman, am a member, is identical in faith, organization, and practice with the apostolic church; W. A. Inman affirms."

Three days were to be given to each proposition, each session of two hours.

During our meeting here at Kibbie the Lord blessed us to a marked degree, both in preaching and in the prayer service, through the gift of prophecy, to the joy and comfort of the Saints, the Saints rejoicing as never before. At the close one was baptized.

On Monday, the 19th, we went to Oblong, and at ten a.m. met in the Universalist church, Reverend Gray acting as moderator for Elder Inman, I acting for Bro. Curtis. We could not get anyone to act as chairman, hence we proceeded without. Elder Inman opened up by introducing the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, declaring that they contradicted each other, while Bro. Curtis declared that the books harmonized with each other and with the Bible, in morality and in the doctrine of Christ, and that they had been given by the inspiration of God. Elder Inman has thought the books did not agree, but Paul had said that spiritual things were spiritually discerned; therefore Elder Inman was like Paul before he was converted; hence he needed a direct revelation from heaven to open his eyes. Elder Inman proceeded by villifying Mormonism, calling us frauds, liars, hypocrites, and deceivers; and that now he proposed to show up the Mormon fraud, stating that the laying on of hands was all stuff, and that Bro. Curtis had laid his hands on a whole family and killed them. After repeating it several times Bro. Curtis stated that it was a falsehood, and asked for his authority; he said he had forgotten the names; finally, by Bro. Curtis pressing him, he asked Elder Tracy of the New Light church what family he was talking about. Tracy answered, "Goodin." Bro. Curtis stated that Bro. and Sr. Goodin died about a year apart, and that he was in Missouri at the time, and that they had five or six children yet living. The next statement was that Curtis had said that he would eat Inman up in this discussion. Bro. Curtis stated that that also was a falsehood and asked for the man's name, but he could not give it. Bro. Curtis stated that Inman had acknowledged at Kibbie that the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants taught as high standards of morality as the Bible; this Inman denied. Bro. Curtis told him that he would and could prove it by twelve or more responsible persons.

The next thing was that John the Revelator had tried some who said they were apostles but found them liars, because they could not give a sign; therefore anyone who claimed to be an apostle and would not give a sign when asked for it was a liar and a deceiver. Bro. Curtis showed that Christ was an Apostle and high priest, and that when a sign was demanded by the Pharisees, said: "A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas." Here he got warm and came down out of the stand and putting his fingers under Bro. Curtis' nose asked him for one sign only, as Christ had given one; to therefore give one and he would be satisfied. Finally Bro. Curtis sprang to his feet and lifting his hand answered saying, "Yes, I will give you one." "O," said Inman, "you are not going to hit me are you?" This raised a laugh. "O, no," said Bro. Curtis. Then he said: "Ladies and gentlemen, Jesus Christ said 'A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign;' therefore this man in asking has showed himself as a sign of this generation. Henceforth when you want to see a sign, look on this man." At this juncture he said: "Well, let us shake hands and quit this slang," at the same time offering Bro. Curtis his hand. They shook hands and proceeded to business.

On reaching his proposition he spent two and a half days showing when and where the apostolic church was organized, showing it up in all its beauty and grandeur. During this time Bro. Curtis was lifting the veil from Campbellism, showing that there had been 1260 years of apostasy, and that about the beginning of the nineteenth century a few reformers made an attempt to restore primitive Christianity, which resulted in Alexander Campbell organizing a church in 1828, without the direction of God, angels, or the Holy Spirit. And further; he showed that while they claimed the Bible alone, they had a book called "The Christian System," on page 91 of which was the "Christian Discipline." This made a flutter. However, Campbellism was never before shown up so completely.

We preached every night during the discussion. On the opening we found prejudice high, but it melted away like snow before an April sun. This discussion has made us many friends, and I never witnessed more complete victory for the truth we love so dearly. Our opponent propounded twenty-three questions in writing to Bro. Curtis in the first proposition, all of which he answered readily. On the last proposition Bro. Curtis handed him twenty-five written questions. Some he refused to answer. One was, "When can you meet me at Hunt City, Illinois, in discussion after June 1, 1894." Bro. Curtis further stated that he would spend one year with him in discussing the above propositions in every Campbellite and Latter Day Saints church in Southern Illinois. In one of the questions Bro. Curtis asked him if Christ would reign on the earth a thousand years, or during the millennium, as stated in Revelation 20. At this he made sport, and all the Campbellite elders laughed, while Inman said, "If you will find where Christ will ever put his foot on the earth again I will join your church; yes, I will be baptized before morning." Bro. Curtis read a part of Zechariah 13 and 14, showing that Christ would put his foot upon the Mount of Olives. "Now," said Bro. Curtis, "I am ready to baptize you when you bring forth fruits meet for repentance."

The discussion was well attended, also the preaching service. I never saw better order than prevailed throughout the discussion. At the close all parties shook hands and departed. We returned to Kibbie and held meetings over Sunday, and to-day we leave for home. From there I go to Alma branch, while Bro. Curtis goes to General Conference. I never felt better in the work than now. I hope Bro. Curtis will be returned to this field, as it is a pleasure to labor with him. In bonds,

PALOUSE, Wash., March 28.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from a five-days' trip in Idaho, about forty miles from home. I was called there to administer to a Mr. Thornton Reeves, who is badly afflicted with an ulcer on his left foot. Some two years ago he lost his right leg with a similar ulcer, and when I got there I found him in a bad condition. He first demanded baptism, which was attended to on the 23d inst. Then we administered to him for his afflictions. I think if faithful he will be blessed, but I ask the prayers of the church and the Prayer Union immediately in his behalf. Please ask the brethren together, and inform the sisters' union, and let prayer be made especially for him.

While in that region I preached twice at a schoolhouse, and at the close of my second discourse a noble and intelligent young man by the name of Percy R. Sullivan, came forward and demanded baptism, which was attended to that evening in the presence of quite a number of earnest spectators. There seemed to be quite an interest stirred up, but the roads were so bad that it seemed to be almost impossible to continue the effort at that time; so I left with the promise to return as soon as soon as the roads were good.

The young man that was baptized, if faithful will become useful to the church in days to come. There are quite a number here enquiring after truth, and a work will be done.

In bonds,

WILLIAMSDALE, N. S., April 3.

Editors Herald:—Among the many things I have to be thankful for are the encouraging words that come to me occasionally from those among whom I labor. How it cheers one at times to hear some one say, "You have helped me;" "You have made the Scriptures plain;" and "May God bless you wherever you go;" and like expressions. I feel very grateful for having friends raised up to care for my temporal wants, and to help me in getting the gospel before the people. Perhaps few like home more than I do. And I am alive to the appreciation of home comforts when they are thrown around me by the Saints and friends where I travel. Space will not allow me to mention all who minister to my comfort in this direction or who would if they had the opportunity, though I would like to.

I have spent the greater portion of this cold winter, since writing in January, in Cumberland county, with the exception of a few days in Hants and some two weeks in Halifax counties, at Oldham, where I was cared for at the home of Bro. Cameron Robinson, the only family of Saints there. I had good liberty and fair, attentive audiences, and several times heard of this remark: "If there is anything right the Latter Day Saints have it," as though it was doubtful as to anything being right. I have held a number of meetings in this place to fair audiences. I think the interest is deeper than ever manifested before. The attention has been excellent, and there are a number of young people of sterling worth; some older ones too that are beginning to regard this "restoration" as something that they don't think safe to trifle long with. May they have the courage of their convictions and take a stand in the right direction.

Although this is a good, moral neighborhood, comparatively, and full of kind-hearted people, yet the carelessness of the older ones concerning their children's spiritual welfare is terrible, and it seems there is a crisis at hand. O, that they could only see it! The hope is in the young. May the Spirit so operate upon them that they will make the fight and plant a standard of morality and spirituality to which may gather all the honest in heart and those who would be saved. I am sorry they will not be able to get the support and encouragement from the fathers and mothers that they should. God forbid that all the prayer and preaching of the gospel should be to their condemnation. It seems a shame for such bright, talented, kind-hearted people to be trifling away their lives and leading others in ways that end in desolation and hell.

The interest I have in this place is intense. Their kindness to me is remarkable, but how to reach them to do them the good I would, does not seem so manifest. Perhaps it is for somebody else to do it. If so, I hope he will be sent along. I have been helped and sustained in a splendid manner concerning song service by those of other faiths. May the good Master bless them with all the light that is for them if they only will. I also opened up two new places; one in which I look for fruits because of the gladness which was manifested in hearing the word. I leave to-morrow for Amherst.

I pray the blessing of God upon the conference, and that we as Saints may all awake to that which is required of us, and that none will have the kingdom shut against us because we kept back part of the price; and that we remember that just as surely as there is a gathering into the kingdom, there is also a gathering out time.

Yours, striving for the mastery,

H. J. DAVISON.

HITCHCOCK, S. D., April 10.

Editors Herald:—This will inform you that I am one of the scattered ones. I used to be a reader of the Herald, but have not been for a year or more. I take the Autumn Leaves and Zion's Ensign. Would gladly exchange them with a sister for the Herald. I did not get the conference notes last year; hope I can make the exchange so that I can get them this year. I see by the Ensign that the elders are assembling for conference, as I see the names of those I have met years ago. I felt as though I would go too, but circumstances will not permit it.

It is fourteen years this spring since I first heard the gospel in its purity, and in the fall I obeyed it, which step I have never for one moment regretted. Many times while reading the church papers the spirit has made known to me its truth and that there was no other way for me. I have only met one Saint in over thirteen years. I do not feel discouraged; I have the comfort of the silent preacher. I am made to rejoice many times while reading the letters from the sisters. They are so encouraging to the scattered ones. In hope of eternal life,

MARY A. KING.

BUTLER, Mo., April 9.

Editors Herald:—The writer had the privilege of leading a noble young lady into the water yesterday, and last night some more made request to be baptized, and Bro. Robert Oehring officiating. One was the father of the young lady who was baptized yesterday. This makes eight that have obeyed since the first of March; so the good work goes on. We have preaching the second and fourth Sundays in each month, prayer meetings every Thursday night, Sunday school every Sunday.

We would be pleased to see some of the traveling ministry come and help us out as we only hold the Aaronic priesthood. If the traveling elders will notify us about a week beforehand we will meet them at the depot and convey them to our place of residence, which is six miles south of Butler. We hold our meetings in what is known as the Star schoolhouse. The writer and Bro. Oehring will go next Saturday night to open a new place by request of some; thus the little stone that was cut out of the mountain without hands is rolling forth to fill the whole earth. Surely that old Hebrew prophet knew what he was talking about when he spoke of that little stone becoming a great mountain.

There are more calls for preaching than we can fill. I hope and pray that the General Conference will send more laborers into the vineyard of the Lord, as the harvest is great and the laborers few. I feel strong in this great latter-day work. It is like a gold dollar, the more you rub it the brighter it gets.

There are many almost persuaded to obey, but for some reasons best known to themselves they fail to yield obedience to the gospel. My desire is that I may so live that I may not become a stumbling-stone to any. I ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers that we may become all that God desires of his servants.

My post office address is Box 388, Butler, Bates county, Missouri. Your brother,
J. I. YOUNG.

ROGERSVILLE, Mo., April 10.

Editors Herald:—Thinking that the readers of your valuable Herald of truth may be glad to learn something regarding how God's word reaches people in these southwestern wilds, I thought I would write a few lines concerning the present outlook, as the dark clouds have vanished and the day is dawning on this community and we are so thankful to God we can hardly express our gratitude to the giver of all good, our heavenly Father. We have been nearly famished for want of spiritual food for about seven years, but since we came here three years ago, we were favored with a few sermons from Brn. Henry Sparling and Peter Crane, and a few sermons from B. A. Atwell and Joseph Ward, the result of which has been Joseph Ward has recently baptized four bright souls, last Sunday, and Henry Sparling baptized two here nearly two years ago, when the prejudice was still greater than now. But it still is great at present.

There are eight good Saints here and we are looking for more who are investigating; and we thank the Lord for the good work done by the elders who have labored here; but there ought to be more work done here, as there has been a good foothold secured and it should not be neglected but be pushed till a great foundation be laid. Elder Joseph Ward is with us and will preach here tonight and to-morrow night; then we expect to have to bid him good-bye to let him visit other fields of labor, probably as precious as this, but we hope this place will not be forgotten or neglected.

Your brother,
GEO. W. OMANS.

KEIGHLEY, Kan., Mar. 28.

Bro. I. N. White:—I thought I would write and let you know how things are at Keighley. It appears now that the victory was complete in every sense, in which we still rejoice. The Campbellites continued their meetings just two nights after you went away and closed with seven in attendance, the preacher counted in. The highest number in attendance was twelve with one or two "Mormons" among them. But, nothing daunted, they tried it again last week, but with still less in attendance, and closed last Sunday evening. Rev. Popplewell's driver and right hand man, Rev. Walters, was the preacher this time. I understand that some of the Campbellite brethren claimed that Bro. Walters was crippled somewhere under his hatband, so they did not go out to hear him, although he brought another chart with him and also gave the Book of Mormon a rap or two; but it did not work this time. It is also said that they tried to get Popplewell but could not. It seems now that the Campbellite Church has been completely knocked out of time.

The people west of here where you preached are very much interested, especially Mr. Johnson and wife, as in conversation with them the other day they stated that if you had continued a night or two longer you would have got them; and, in fact, all of those people out there that attended our meetings there are more or less interested; and I try to keep them so by furnishing them reading matter, such as I have, and get in the Herald and Ensign. I have also subscribed for those most interested five copies of the Ensign on account of the lectures on the Book of Mormon.

We would like to keep these people interested and investigating, until something better can be done for them, and we hope you will not forget us if you are again appointed to this field or happen to come this way. I have also written to Bro. M. M. Turpen to come this way in the spring if he can, but have not heard from him as yet.

Your brother in Christ,
N. ABRAHAM.

[Bro. I. N. White handed us the above as containing news from the the field.—ED.]

KINGSLEY, Mich., April 3.

Editors Herald:—It is with pleasure that I write to you again. The work is gaining ground here in these northern parts. Bro. F. C. Smith was here and preached a few able sermons, and the people are getting interested. This gospel of the kingdom is going fast to the nations of the earth, and it causes my heart to rejoice to see people investigating this doctrine. There are calls all over this part of the country for preaching, and our elders cannot fill them. I wish Bro. Briggs could get up here and give us Saints some teaching; we need it very much.

Your brother,
CURTIS C. LAMBKIN.

SELIGMAN, Mo., April 7.

Editors Herald:—While a great majority of brethren are assembled in conference, others are out in the field breaking the bread of life to the starving souls. The doors of the Union church here were opened last Sunday morning and have been opened every evening since, with a prospect of continuing another week. The house accommodates all who come, but there are those here that are studying the word and taking the good advice "Be not deceived."

Our views upon the gospel plan are quite strenuous regarding "baptism." We make lots of noise talking about baptism being absolutely essential unto salvation; and there are violent attacks made upon the creeds and opinions of the world, because they are not "firm" upon this point. Our views are just as vigorously taught in regard to "faith," and in presenting the gospel to the world the six fundamental principles are held up in glowing terms to them, and because they sometimes leave out baptism, or the "laying on of hands," they are scored most unmercifully. We teach "faith" as the first principle of the doctrine of Christ; what do we do with the "second" principle? "O, certainly, it is quite necessary to repent!" but the very fact of their being kind enough to leave some other church or come out from other ranks is taken as evidence of their repentance. Not so with John the Baptist. He demanded evidence of their repentance; and I am one who believes that modern Israel should be just as wise. The great drawback to the church in the first century, and also in our day, is that there is too much iniquity in the church. There is too much of "man's ambition;" there are too many that are ready to baptize people just because they ask for baptism, thinking it will add to their credit to baptize a whole lot.

I want to make a record in the ranks of God's work for being successful in "converting" souls to Christ if I do not baptize anyone. When I conduct a man into the waters of baptism and lay my hands upon his head for the gift of God's Holy Spirit—turn him over to the church and to God as one of his newly born children, I do not want to find his pockets filled with tobacco and his breath contaminated by the filthy weed. I do not believe that Jesus Christ would baptize a man of that kind (unless the man had repented), and I don't intend to do it, not saying that I will not, but I earnestly hope I may not. It is not only my "hope," but my "determination" to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. God's word is our guide, and if we are not guided by it, who is to blame? God has spoken in regard to this evil directly and named it "tobacco;" so we cannot be deceived: It "is not good for man." And he also instructs us, to "come up higher."

Many might make it appear that he meant for us to climb a ladder or get on the housetop, or climb a tree. He did not; he meant for us to purify ourselves from all unrighteousness and filthiness; he meant for us to robe ourselves in pure and white linen, which is the righteousness of Saints, so we could have a place at the marriage supper of the Lamb. And, our robe must not be spotted.

I will run the risk of being criticized for this position when I stand before God; and my excuse will be that "repentance was mentioned and to be observed before baptism, and I found a man who was so in love with his 'tobacco' that he would not repent of it, and you said it was not good for man, so I did not baptize him." As for me, I want to be with "the law and the testimony;" I want to abide in the doctrine of Christ. I read that we shall be rewarded according to our "works" and not our faith or good intentions, nor the amount of policy we use while in the world. If it takes obedience to get into the presence of God, let us as ministers of Christ teach obedience and ourselves be obedient. My prayer is for the conference now in session, and for the onward march of this glorious latter-day work.

The work in our part of the field is growing brighter; I mean the calls for preaching and the interest manifested by the world. There is room for much improvement among the Saints. And it is hoped that a brighter day is dawning for our own people when they will awaken to the call to "come up higher," and manifest to the world by their "works" that they are indeed the people of God.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS FROM A MISSIONARY.

BEFORE answering, I wish to preface my remarks by a few quotations:—

And this is the gospel, the glad tidings which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us, that he came into the world, even Jesus to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness; that through him all might be saved, . . . except those sons of perdition who deny the Son after the Father hath revealed him; therefore he saves all except them.—D. C. 76: 4.

Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain.—Acts 2: 25.

Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed by corruptible things, as silver and gold, . . . but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish or spot: who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, etc.—1 Pet. 1: 18-20.

Whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world.—Rev. 13: 8.

And I looked and beheld the Lamb of God, that he was taken by the people; yea, the Son of the everlasting God was judged of the world; and I saw and bear record. And I, Nephi, saw that he was lifted up upon the cross, and slain for the sins of the world.—1 Nephi 3: 19.

This was written fully six hundred years before the Savior was slain. It matters not whether God decreed it, or simply foreknew and foretold it. Being predicted it was foreseen that it would occur. And it did occur, whether ordained of God or not. But, as seen from the Book of Covenants, he came into the world "to be crucified," and he said:—

I came not of myself, but my Father sent me.

So, if he came into the world to be crucified, God sent him for that purpose, and so he was predestined to be crucified, and came as he said, "To do the will of him that sent me."

Ques. 1. Was it absolutely necessary that Christ should die a violent death; that is, the death of the cross?

Ans. Yes, to fulfill the purposes of God as revealed by prophets and by the Son himself.

2. What created the necessity? Did God create the necessity by decree, predetermining, predestinating, fore-ordaining from before the foundation of the world? Did he prepare the necessity in the same manner?

4. Yes, it was necessary to fulfill his word of prophecy to that effect. He foreknew, and hence foretold, and his word cannot fail.

3. Did God use instruments to fulfill his decrees?

4. He may have permitted the Devil to use them, and not himself directly, or personally employing them.

4. Would the responsibility of the murder of the most innocent and perfect personage the world has ever seen rest upon God who decreed it, or the instruments God used to carry out the decree?

4. The death of Jesus was not murder on the part of God, but a sacrifice for the remission of the sins of the world. On the part of the Jews it was murder, for they killed Jesus out of pure hatred, or malice. They were not instruments inspired of God; but were inspired of the Devil. God did not afflict Job personally, but permitted the Devil to do it; allowing him free agency in the matter.

5. Are not men doing the will of God, when they are carrying out his decrees and therefore entitled to the blessing of God?

4. They would not have killed Jesus except in hatred. They were murderers at heart, because they hated him. They did not know that they were carrying out God's purpose in crucifying Jesus, which was permitted of God for a sacrifice. Paul calls the death of Jesus, a part of the "mystery of godliness."

6. Why did not God bless the Jews for killing Christ?

4. Because they committed revengeful, malicious murder. They took Jesus with maliciousness and hatred, bitter and revengeful.

7. Why did God curse the Jewish nation and declare that they should become a hiss and byword and be scattered among all nations, seeing they were only carrying out God's decrees and doing his will when they murdered the Son of God?

4. They did not know they were doing God's will. They murdered the Son because they hated him; and because they believed he was an imposter. They were threatened with the evils that fell on them because they rejected his teachings and leadership. They would not have him to reign over them. They rejected him from the first, and he predicted their overthrow long before they crucified him. His crucifixion was the culmination of their wickedness. They would probably have been afflicted had they not crucified him; for these evils were predicted by Moses in Deuteronomy 28 long before they came to pass, and other reasons were given than the crucifixion of Jesus why these evils were to come upon them.

8. If God foreordained or decreed the death of his Son wherein would the agency of Christ obtain?

4. In that he said, "No man taketh it [my life] from me." "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again;" and in that he said, "I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me;" and, "Not my will, but thine, be done." And in that he "became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross;" and in that he "gave himself a ransom for all." Power to not die, and a disposition to yield to death are two distinct things. God could have sent legions of angels that Christ need not be delivered into the hands of the Jews, but his purpose was to sacrifice his Son. And Christ was a willing sacrifice; he did not choose to rebel, yet he could have done so.

9. If God ordered the death of his Son, would he not be a murderer?

4. Not when he gave him as a sacrifice any more than the high priests were brutal in slaying innocent lambs for sacrifice; no more than Abraham would have been a murderer had he killed Isaac by command of God.

10. Why was God angry when Christ was crucified, manifesting his displeasure by rending the veil of the temple, convulsing the earth with terrible earthquakes, and covering the world with darkness? Why did all nature revolt, seeing that the crucifixion was the fulfillment of God's decree?

4. I have never heard that God was angry on that occasion. Those things occurred in fulfillment of prophecy; and were signs of the accomplishment of this momentous event, that it had been predicted should be seen; not only on the eastern, but on the western continent also.

11. If Christ was foreordained to be crucified where would the agency of the instruments he used obtain?

4. I do not admit that they were instruments, used by God; except indirectly as he permitted the Devil to use them. In this sense they were instruments, but not of God.

12. Is the salvation of the world dependent upon blood or obedience to law? If upon blood where is the necessity of the law? If upon obedience to law, where is the necessity of blood, only as the conditions make it necessary to perpetuate the law?

4. We are saved by both blood and the law. By blood as the procuring cause, and by obedience as the direct, or immediate cause. Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. Nor is there except by obedience to law.

13. Is it not barely possible that God did not decree or foreordain the crucifixion of Christ, but foreknew or foretold it?

4. He foreknew, foreordained, and foretold it.

14. Is it not barely possible that the necessity for the violent death of Christ was created by the terribly wicked condition the world was in when he came, therefore ordained of God?

4. The condition of the world could not create a necessity for the death of Jesus, or any other innocent person. No, Christ was crucified because foreordained.

15. Did God have the power to save from violent death Peter, Paul, John, and Joseph Smith? From the fact that God did not see fit to exercise that power, does that prove that they also were ordained to die by violence?

4. It does not prove that they were or were not foreordained to die by violence; because God does not hinder every evil that occurs, does not prove that the evil was foreordained; and yet it might have been.

16. Is it any proof that Christ was foreordained to die because God had power to save him and did not?

4. No, our proof is in the written word and not in any such omission to save.

17. If Christ need not have died had he so chosen, as you say in paragraph 4 of your article, what would have become of the decree of foreordination of God had he chosen not to die?

4. The power to refuse to die, and the disposition to so refuse are two different things. That he had the power to refrain from giving up his life cannot be denied; but as he came into the world for that purpose, he made no effort to save his life. Had he refused the decree of foreordination would have failed of course.

18. Are you aware that the church has determined what theory of the atonement is correct? Would it not be wise for some elder to style himself defender of the faith, write up a creed containing his interpretations of the law and declare everybody heretic who does not subscribe to it.

4. Do not you claim to be a defender of the faith? The church has a creed in the shape of "Epitome of faith and doctrine." I could write a creed if needbe. Do not you consider everybody heretic who does not subscribe to your definition of the faith, seeing that you believe that you present "the faith." You were sent on your mission because you were considered a "defender of the faith." But you hardly represent the faith on the atonement question.

Whether God decrees the death of the Devil it matters not. There is a place "prepared" for him (Matt. 25: 41), and it is supposed to be the "lake of fire and brimstone" and is "the second death," whether it is death or not. The Devil asked Christ, Hast thou come to torment us before the time? Christ obtained power to destroy him sometime who had power over death which is the Devil. Whether God has decreed the death of the Devil judge ye; when he has declared his final casting into the lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death. As early as A. D. 96 the destruction of the Devil and others was predicted because decreed.

It would not be in harmony with the fundamental principles on which the church is established, that of individual responsibility to God, and Jesus Christ the only law giver, for a man to assume the title Defender of the Faith, write a creed and declare unbelievers in that creed to be heretic. The question is not a proper one. What is obviously plainly written and accepted by the mass of the eldership is the accepted faith, until modified, or changed.

Yours in Christ,
T. W. SMITH.

MORONI'S BOGUS (?) PLATES.

As our elders have been compelled to meet the argument offered by our opponents, that the claim made by Joseph Smith relative to the finding of gold plates containing a record of an extinct race is preposterous and unheard of, hence not worthy of credence, we herewith append matter which should forever settle the question so far as this objection is concerned. The "Century Magazine" for January, 1894, contains an article from the pen of Morris Jastrow, Jr., entitled, "The Bible and the Assyrian Monuments," from which we make the following extract. (P. E. Botta in 1842 commenced excavations at Mosul on the bank of the Tigris.)

Botta succeeded in striking the remains of a stone wall under a mound at Khorsabad some miles to the north of Mosul and before he closed his labors he had unearthed the greater portion of an Assyrian palace of vast dimensions which, as was subsequently ascertained, was erected by King Sargon about seven hundred years before our era. Botta was followed by Sir Austen Henry Layard whose works at the mounds, extending over a period of five years, far outstripped that of his French colleague. In the mound of Konyunjik directly opposite Mosul the royal palace of Sennacherib and Sardanapalus, containing an endless succession of halls and chambers, were laid bare. In the buildings thus brought to light there were found . . . tablets of gold, silver, copper, and antimony, all covered with writing in the strange-looking cuneiform characters. The walls of the palace chambers were generally found to be lined with slabs of marble, limestone, and alabaster on which were sculptured scenes illustrative of life and events in ancient Assyria and Babylonia and accompanied by explanatory inscriptions. A large number of closely inscribed clay barrels and prism-shaped cylinders were also found which generally proved to be the annals of the king.

Plato, in speaking of the Atlantians, as quoted by Donnelly, says:—

And, when they had given judgment, at daybreak they wrote down their sentences on a golden tablet, and deposited them as memorials. (Critias.)—Atlantis p. 20.

Here are two statements in confirmation of the claim made by Joseph Smith that the ancients wrote on tablets or plates of gold. The custom of writing on metal plates was practiced by many of the nations with whom the Jews came in contact, hence it was but natural for Nephi to use the same means for preserving a record of his people. We have more testimony of a confirmative nature, which we will submit for the benefit of Herald readers as soon as we can compile it.

PROVIDENCE IN ORIENTAL HISTORY.

BY PROFESSOR DR. J. F. M'CURDY.

WE are accustomed to look, and not in vain, for indications of the Divine plan and forethought in what is commonly spoken of as Bible history. By this term, however, has been understood in general usage the history of Israel as a nation, while the great environment of peoples and states whose character and movements had so much to do with the making and unmaking of the Hebrew community, have commonly been left out of sight. To ignore them is contrary both to biblical theory and practice; and the gradual but steady and sure reconstruction of ancient Oriental history, inclusive of the external fortunes of Israel, which is now going on under our eyes, is entirely in harmony with the prophetic conception that the world at large, especially the kindred Semitic world, had a part in God's providential administration. (Amos 9:6-9.) Even the remote part of Western Asia, which was being prepared through long ages for the establishment of a nation of righteousness, and of religion divorced from superstition and idolatry, is not without indications of divine intervention and prearrangement. It may not be without profit to us if we look at the history of ancient hither Asia in broad outline, and by getting a view of its more salient features, observe in what ways it ministered to the progress and development of Israel.

Let us look, in the first instance, at what we might call the main political motive in the history of the leading states of this territory, a region which we are justified in calling "biblical" in a special sense. Without question it was Babylonia and Assyria that wielded the controlling forces in this long and slow process of internal growth and decay. The interest of Bible students is drawn out in a certain measure towards anything which illustrates the fortunes of these countries on account of their influence in a large way upon the fate of Israel as one of the nationalities affected by their predominance. But we are specially concerned in learning all we can about the relations sustained directly between these powerful communities and the peoples on the Mediterranean coast-land, since in these relations was involved the political fate of Israel with all its mighty consequences to the race. Now the most striking part of the whole story is, at the same time, the most persistent motive in the great action. It may be stated simply thus,—that the attitude of Babylonia towards the Westland in the earliest recorded times was maintained steadily until the destruction of the former by a new eastern power; that a complete mundane era of over thirty centuries has a unity given to it by the undeviating policy of the empires of the Euphrates and Tigris towards the Westland, which worked itself out with a seemingly inexhaustible energy and vitality, until at last its complete success turned into a surfeit of self-indulgence, ending in decrepitude, paralysis, and national extinction.

The earliest kings of North Babylonia (our knowledge of whom has been materially extended by the late publication of their cuneiform inscriptions by Professor Hilprecht) not only had an eye on the maritime lands of Syria and Palestine, but actually sent expeditions there for military and political as well as mercantile purposes. They even seem to have exercised some authority over Cyprus; and it is not too much to assume that about six thousand years ago the cedars and cypresses of Lebanon, the olives of Palestine, the spices of Gilead, the shipping and fisheries of Phœnicia, were utilized by the people of Lower Mesopotamia much in the same way as they were in the days of Sennacherib and Nebuchadrezzar. When North Babylonia lost its predominance, and the kings of one city after another of South Babylonia attained to supreme power, they too, according to unmistakable indications, held certain portions of the Westland in fee. When again, in the twenty-third century B. C., the Elamites obtained control of divided Babylonia, it was a matter of course, as it now seems, that, according to Genesis 14, they should exercise sovereignty over a large region in Palestine, and, with the celerity and efficiency due to familiarity with the business, should be found quelling an insurrection in the same region.

Seven or eight centuries later, when Babylonia was beginning to play a role subordinate to its colony Assyria, and its political influence in Syria and Palestine had given way to the temporary occupation of those countries by the Egyptians, it is again nothing out of course that the whole of Western Asia below the Taurus—not merely the states of the Euphrates and Tigris, but Western Mesopotamia, Northern and Southern Syria, Phœnicia, and the Canaanitic cities of Palestine—should be using the Babylonian language and writing in diplomatic and business intercourse, and that not merely with one another, but with the court of Egypt, hundreds of miles away up the Nile in another continent. The El-Amarna tablets, in giving this information, simply establish the conclusions with regard to the Babylonian domination of the Westland which are based upon such scattered information as we have so far gained about the preceding ages.

Such a complete intellectual supremacy as was wielded by Babylonia in the fifteenth century B. C., directing all the essentials of education and literature, and the means of international communication, and influencing all classes of the population from the Mediterranean to the Tigris, can only be explained on the hypothesis that political control had been exercised throughout that region for many centuries before. There is, indeed, no similar instance in Oriental history of such uniformity of usage, until the conquests of Alexander introduced the Greek language and literature. Of the subsequent emergence of Assyria to occupy the place so long held by Babylonia, of its gradual and more thorough subjugation of the Western lands, of its decline and disappearance from the community of nations, of the revival of Babylonian influence under the new regime of the Chaldeans, and the final extinction of national autonomy in Palestine under Nebuchadrezzar, it is needless to make special mention, since these are events and phenomena within the more familiar regions of historical inquiry.

It is only necessary to point out the steady and constant pursuit of one aim on the part of the Eastern empires, through all changes of dynasties and through all revolutions, surviving social transformations and even national obliteration. Only one thing remained essentially unchanged along with this policy of absorption of the Western country,—the religion of Babylonia, Assyria, and Chaldea. That the permanence of the one phenomenon explains the persistence of the other can admit of no manner of doubt; and it will be the duty of the philosophical Oriental historian of the future to trace the growth of the consuming zeal of the votaries of Bel, Asshur, and Nebo in connection with the inherent character of their worship, and their despotic authority over the will and ambition of their worshipers, paralleled only among those other world-conquerors, the Romans of the Republic.

What we can fairly do now as Bible students is to point out how this inordinate lust of empire, growing by what it fed on during thousands of years, and prompted by devotion to the rivals of the one true God among the Semitic peoples, conducted so signally to the advantage, the glory, and the reign of Jehovah. This is a theme upon which the Hebrew prophets are never weary of dwelling; and it is no wonder that the great prophet of the Exile, which formed the last chapter in the long story of Babylonian aggression and dominion, should point this moral for his own and all-coming ages. Only, as it would seem, by the subjection of Israel, and the environment of kindred communities, which formed its cradle, if not its grave, to the irresistible despoiler of the nations; only by national extinction and effacement,—could the true Israel, purified, humbled, and disenchanting, reclaim its dishonored but ever-living and victorious God in its own land, and so prepare for the coming of the universal King, the Savior of the world. Do not the new rays of light, which one after another come flashing upon us from the darkness of a forgotten and unimagined past, illumine the pages of the second half of Isaiah, and give a meaning, unsuspected until these later days, to the whole story of Israel's unique and divine vocation among the peoples and nations of the ancient East?

The Hebrew occupation of Canaan is another theme which deserves to be invested with the highest interest by virtue of its consequences to Israel itself and the world. From one point of view it meant everything to the Hebrews; for, without the land and its resources, the nation itself would have been either not at all, or something without significance beyond the narrow circle of the obscure clans and tribes that ventured upon the first precarious settlements in Palestine. The importance of the possession of Canaan is a thoroughly biblical idea. It, more than almost anything else outside of the Covenant and its sanctions, gave coherence, impulsion, and direction to the national life. The thought of Jehovah's land, the Land of Promise, gave motive, form, and color to history, prophecy, and poetry, and its recollection in foreign captivity, to adopt Dante's memorable phrase, winged "the first shaft that is shot from the bow of Exile." It is therefore both natural and instructive to trace the providential shaping of Israel's fortunes in connection with the possession of Canaan, the struggles that were waged to maintain it, its gradual retrenchment, its forced abandonment, its subsequent recovery and reoccupation under the new era, its final forfeiture, and the exile from which there has been no returning. But not less reasonable and profitable in its measure must be the search for providential movements that antedated the occupation in the disposing of the fortunes of the peoples who claimed Canaan for themselves, and out of whose historical adjustments came Israel's opportunity.

Obviously, Canaan could never have been occupied by the Hebrews as a nation or corporate community if it were perpetually held by a people stronger and more enduring than they. It may be assumed with little argument that the Canaanites themselves were not such a people. Possessors though they were of some of the most serviceable elements of Babylonian culture, with the opportunities for extensive foreign trade through their Phœnician connections, and following, as they did, agricultural and industrial pursuits with skill and success, they yet lacked the essential element of political stability and permanence, and were thereby forced to surrender their settlements to a succession of more powerful intruders. They were divided up into a large number of petty principalities, each independent of the others, with none exercising a general control over the rest in any matter affecting the whole community of Canaanites, with no capacity of governmental extension or expansion beyond the rudimentary type of city-kingdom, which was but one essential degree removed from the primitive patriarchal system. Hence they were unprepared to meet as a united whole a powerful enemy, or combination of enemies, that threatened to rob them of their possessions. The most they ever accomplished was to form local and temporary leagues, which, being without inherent solidarity and vitality, offered a diminished resisting power to each successive attack.

How, then, did it happen that some other nationality, more powerful than the tribes of Israel, did not seize Palestine, and forever exclude the Hebrews from all opportunity of successful invasion? Let us look over the Oriental world, and see what were the possible alternatives to Hebrew predominance. Before the era of the Israelitish immigration, four nationalities were in a position to assert themselves as would-be rulers of the country.

There were, first, the Phœnicians, themselves a Canaanitic people, whose wealth and resources, any time after 2000 B. C., would have enabled them to extend themselves eastward and southeastward, from the seashore over the highlands and beyond. But the Sidonians (to use their biblical appellation) had their own business to attend to on the sea, and their own mission to fulfill among the nations of the earth; and they were so keen in their quest for maritime adventure and the spoils of commerce that they deliberately and of set purpose kept themselves free from continental entanglements, preferring to pay tribute to the powerful empires—Babylonian, Assyrian, Chaldæan, Persian—which in turn dominated the Westland, rather than involve themselves in expensive and unprofitable wars, only taking up arms when their very existence or their commercial supremacy was at stake, as in rare critical times in Tyre, and later in the memorable world struggle between Carthage and the Romans. They did not even interfere to prevent the Hebrews from expelling their brethren from their ancestral homes; and they were, on the whole, very friendly neighbors to the successful invaders.

Then there were the Babylonians, of whom we have already spoken. They did hold Palestine, but not in Hebrew days. Their rule was, in fact, exercised so long before the time of Israel's intervention, that it was the withdrawal of the pressure of Babylonia, when it was compelled, through domestic disorders and the rivalry of Assyria, to confine its activity and authority to its proper domain on the Lower Euphrates, which gave the native Canaanitic communities the opportunity to develop according to their peculiar genius. Babylonia did indeed continue to dominate the Westland; but it was in another fashion, through the perpetual influence for her immemorial culture, through the inalienable gifts of her long intellectual sovereignty.

Next there were the Egyptians. These Semitized Africans were never really at home in Asia, not even in the Sinaitic Peninsula, which is even yet claimed and held by Egypt, as it was five thousand years ago. It has been the cardinal mistake of Oriental and biblical historians to ascribe to Egypt too large and important a share in shaping the fortunes and molding the thought of the peoples of Palestine. Just as the culture of the Egyptians, wonderfully vast and varied as was its development, had little permanent influence on the progressive peoples, their ancient contemporaries, and therefore little lasting significance for the human race, as compared with the germinal and potential genius of Babylonian civilization; so, in the sphere of political activity, Egypt, with all her ambition and craving for foreign domination, was only exceptionally and rarely admitted to a share in the sovereignty of Asia. Yet on several occasions during long epochs the way seemed open for the extension of the empire of the Nile as far as, and even beyond, the Euphrates. After the expulsion of the Shepherds, and especially in the sixteenth century B. C., under Thothmes III., the most powerful monarch that ever sat on the throne of the Pharaohs, the authority of Egypt was actually acknowledged as far as Mesopotamia; and it was under his dynasty that the foundation was really laid for the occupation of Palestine and Syria, that lasted, after a fashion, for nearly two centuries. How slight was the influence of Egyptian civilization upon Western Asia during this its most favorable time, may be inferred from the fact above mentioned, that at the end of this period the language and writing of the Babylonians, who had been deprived for several preceding centuries of political control in the West, were universally employed throughout this nominally Egyptian territory, and even cultivated in the Egyptian capital. The same fact indicates plainly that permanent political control by Egypt was out of the question; and indeed, the history of the occupation, so far as we know it in detail, shows that the ruling power was represented only by officials with a very precarious tenure of office, and by soldiers perpetually employed in suppressing insurrections. With the decline of the eighteenth dynasty at home, and the internal disorders that hastened its fall, the fabric of Egyptian government in Western Asia crumbled to pieces.

Yet there was still a possibility—nay, it might have seemed a strong probability—that the revived power and energy of the famous nineteenth dynasty might, if only through persistence and the weight of military force, accomplish the long-cherished aim of making Palestine a dependency of Egypt. But just at this time the Egyptians found an equal rival in the last of the nationalities, more powerful than the Hebrews that successively laid claim to the Mediterranean coastland. The Hittites had contributed in a small degree to the undermining of the Egyptian power during the closing half century of the eighteenth dynasty; in the interval they had founded for themselves a strong dominion in Syria, and now they seemed ready to annex Palestine also. Egypt alone, or the Hittites alone, might easily, one would suppose, absorb the little strip of country lying along the open highway of international traffic, and hold it in perpetuity. Here again we may mark the marvelous working of a palpable Providence in history. The two powers came into conflict. As a result of the stubborn and prolonged struggle in Northern and Southern Syria, and in Palestine itself, the Hittites were prevented from acquiring possessions farther to the south of Lebanon, and the Egyptians were so weakened that the authority conceded to them in Palestine was even less strongly maintained than that wielded by the great rulers of the preceding dynasty. When finally the great invasions from the northern shores of the Mediterranean made an end of the empire of the Hittites in Syria, the Egyptians also were so seriously damaged by their onset, that, in spite of victories over the barbarians, they succeeded in holding only the southern part of Palestine; and this was soon lost to them, by reason of the inability of the crippled empire to maintain a military force on foreign soil. Thus a twofold advantage was given to the young Hebrew community just growing into national self-consciousness. Their escape from Egyptian bondage was favored by the growing weakness of their rulers; and, what was of equal consequence for the accomplishment of their newly apprehended mission, the country of Canaan was left open to their immigration.*

These are some of the ways in which place and scope were given to the Hebrew race, and by which its larger historical environment was created. Our thoughts turn again to the inner development of the chosen people and its significance to the world; and if we find a meaning and purpose at all in history, in the forward outlook of the earliest events as well as in the retrospect of completed epochs, we shall not fail to see a Divine predisposal in the movements and policies of the nations and people that outwardly controlled the fortunes of Israel.—University College, Toronto.

*This consideration is of cardinal importance for the determination of the date of the Exodus, which could not have taken place under Merneptah, the successor of Ramesses II., for in his reign Egyptian garrisons still held Southern Palestine, and at that date the second great invasion from the north of the Mediterranean had not yet taken place. The Exodus must, therefore, be put later, contrary to the current opinion.

Our beloved sister was a faithful and earnest member of the church, a loving, tender, and dutiful daughter and sister, and a friend to all. Deeply as we mourn our loss we feel that—

"She is not dead; she is but sleeping;
The cold, cold grave is only keeping
The dust, to dust returning.
Death could not claim the soul immortal
For angels from the heavenly portal
Bent o'er with eager yearning.
And, though the grave her form is keeping,
She is not dead; she is but sleeping
To wake to joys supernal.
One angel more in heaven is dwelling,
One more redeemed the chorus swelling
To praise the Great Eternal."

BURCH.—At St. Louis, March 3, 1894, Alfred Burch. He was born in London, England, May 24, 1851. He had been a member of the church, but had requested his name dropped, and it is understood that it was granted. A wife, six sons, and one daughter mourn their loss. His funeral was well attended, which says he had many friends. He was well liked as a business man and was honorable in his transactions.

TRYON.—At the home of her son, Lewis Tryon, Huntsville, Randolph county, Missouri, March 19, 1894, Sr. Sarah Ann Tryon. She was born at Greenville, Green county, New York, May 6, 1818. She united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in June, 1835, and was a consistent member to the last. She leaves seven children, four sons and three daughters to mourn their loss.

ARD.—At her home, near Mulhall, Oklahoma, March 27, 1894, Sr. Emily, wife of Bro. John Ard, aged 52 years, 3 months, 5 days. Deceased was born in Ripley county, Indiana; was baptized by Elder James Gillen at Buffalo Prairie, Illinois, in 1867; she was the mother of thirteen children. Her husband, eight sons, and three daughters survive her and mourn the loss of a faithful wife and kind mother. She remained in the faith till the end of her days. Funeral services conducted by a Methodist minister, there being no elder near.

ROICE.—Eva Miona Roice was born November 19, 1893; died March 12, 1894. She was the daughter of Bro. and Sr. B. Roice. Funeral services conducted at the home of the parents by Brn. Wm. and R. O. Self at Bennett, Nebraska.

Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Young spirit rest thee now.
E'en while with us thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow.

MONEYMAKER.—Sister Mary E. Money-maker was born December 23, 1874; died March 28, 1894. She was a patient sufferer for some time, and was never heard to say a murmuring word, longing for the time to come that she would leave the world and go to that home in heaven. She was baptized November 30, 1888, by Elder James Moler. She led a still, quiet, model life, and died firm in the faith.

ANTHONY.—Vera Allane, daughter of Bro. and Sr. L. Anthony, was born December 13, 1892; died March 25, 1894. Funeral services conducted at the home of the parents at Bennet, Nebraska, by Brn. Wm. and R. O. Self.

CHAPPELOW.—Sr. Mary E. Chappelow was born near Harrison, Ohio, February 9, 1838; departed this life at her home near New Trenton, Indiana, March 31, 1894. Funeral services were held in the M. E. church at New Trenton, Monday, April 2, at two p. m., conducted by Elder L. F. Daniel, of Whites-town, Indiana; text, Job 14:14, Psalms 8:4. The remains were interred at the New Trenton cemetery. Sr. Chappelow was united in marriage to James R. Chappelow November 13, 1860; to this union were born nine children, eight of whom are still living, four sons and four daughters. She united with the church February 9, 1873, lived a faithful Christian, and died in hope of a glorious resurrection.

Farewell, dear mother, thou art gone
But soon we too will follow on;
Watch o'er us, mother, while you wait
Our coming at the pearly gate,
And may in life our purpose be
To life beyond with God and thee.

A NEW RECIPE FOR LONGEVITY.

A physician who has just died at the age of 107 made known before his death the secret of his longevity. All he did in order to attain that age was to place his bed so that it stood north and south, in the direction of the great magnetic currents. It has been remarked that the flow of the electric currents is more intense in a northerly direction during the night than during the day. In considering the favorable effect of the currents so often experimented on, it has become evident that turning the head toward the north, or rather slightly toward the east, you are under the best conditions for having sound sleep. The influence of the magnetic current on the human body was proved long ago, and, in 1765, a Dr. Claromont at Gottingen used to cure the toothache by turning to the north the face of the person on whom he operated and touching the aching tooth with the south pole of a magnetic bar. If, in order to live to old age, it is sufficient to sleep from north to south, it is worth while taking the trouble to change the position of one's bed.—Journal des Debats.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.
Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

ALCOHOL AS A MEDICINE.

THE promiscuous plan of giving alcoholic stimulants is really, in a large degree, the force of habit and has no foundation in modern science or in good practice. It has survived from those days in which people took rum and applejack to keep out the cold; to keep out the heat; to help the appetite; to take the place of food; to wish health to a friend; to keep up the spirits; in fact to do anything that anyone who liked its pleasant taste wished to imagine.

We do not mean by this to say that alcohol is not available as a medicine. We believe as such it has a very important although a narrow sphere in the hands of the skillful and conscientious practitioner. It may also be of service in other hands to meet sudden shock, where nothing else is at hand. But what we insist upon is that it is very rarely useful for sudden illness or pain in the hands of the public to a degree that should give it preference over other remedies. Take, for instance, this matter of stimulation. It is as distinguished an authority as Professor Lauder Brunton, of London who tried the following experiment: He had a person who sipped a cup of hot water and afterward, at a proper interval, tried also the effect of a tablespoonful of brandy. In each case the sphygmograph was applied to the pulse at the wrist. It was found that the hot water increased the wave and rhythm of the pulse and so affected the heart beat as much as the brandy. The reviving effect of a teacupful of hot water, with a teaspoonful of sugar and six or eight drops of peppermint to give flavor, is very preceptible. This is really much of the value of catnip or other herb teas.

A good prescription, either in case of faintness or of pain, is ten drops of spirits of camphor, ten drops of paregoric, ten drops of sweet spirits of niter and a half teaspoonful of baking soda in a tablespoonful of warm water. Ginger tea made by putting a half teaspoonful of ordinary powdered ginger in a half teacupful of warm water is a good stimulant. We doubt whether anything is gained in the interest of persons taken suddenly ill by suggesting a longer list of remedies. Position, cold to the head, stimulants to the nostrils, a mustard plaster, warmth to the feet, looseness of garments and one of the stimulants we have named, followed by a drink of warm peppermint water, will do less harm and relieve more cases than will dependence on the liquor flask. We persist in not expelling it from the physicians' list of remedies, but as a medicine, as well as a drink, it has great abuse in the hands of promiscuous prescribers. While fully recognizing all that is necessary as to it, it surely behooves us to guard against excuses for its employment. All the more because in some of these cases of sudden illness the person and his habits are not known to us. —New York Independent.

DOMESTIC SERVICE IN ENGLAND.

I'VE kept a sharp eye on the young women in domestic service over here, having a fellow-feeling for them, as you can well understand, madam, and since I have been in the country I've watched the poor folks and seen how they live, and it's just as plain to me as can be that the young women who are maids and waitresses over here are the kind who would have tried to be shopgirls and dressmakers and even school-teachers in America, and many of the servants we have would be working in the fields if they lived over here, writes "Pomona," under the guiding hand of Frank R. Stockton in the February Ladies' Home Journal. The fact is the English people don't go to other countries to get their servants. Their way is like a factory consuming its own smoke. The surplus young women, and there must always be a lot of them, are used up in domestic service.

Now if an American poor girl is good enough to be a first-class servant she wants to be something else. Sooner than go out to service she will work twice as hard in a shop, or even go into a factory.

I have talked a good deal about this to Jone, and he says I'm getting to be a philosopher, but I don't think it takes much philosophizing to find out how this case stands. If house service could be looked upon in the proper way it wouldn't take long for American girls who have to work for their living to find out that it's a lot better to live with nice people, and cook and wait on the table, and do all those things which come natural to women the world over, than to stand all day behind a counter under the thumb of a floor-walker, or grind their lives out like slaves among a lot of steam engines and machinery. The only reason the English have better house servants than we have is that here any girl who has to work is willing to be a house servant, and very good house servants they are, too.

WHY WOMEN BREAK DOWN.

WOMEN, says a well-known physician, are breaking down more rapidly than men. The reason of this is that they allow themselves to take less real rest. When a man drops business he drops it. When a woman lets go of any work she may have in mind she ties it to her apron strings, as it were. She has been taught through long years of training that it is high crime and misdemeanor to let anything escape her mind. So, when she is supposed to be at rest, she is constantly pinching herself to see if she hasn't forgotten something. In this way she carries her burden into her resting hours and sits down among the roses of relaxation with her foot on the treadle that turns the grindstone of drudgery.

If men kept their noses to the grindstone as persistently as women they would be nervous and irritable "beyond compare." If women would get their own consent to rest they would have better complexions, better stomachs, and a happier life.

IS THE CHURCH A TEMPERANCE SOCIETY?

INCREASE OF INTEMPERANCE.—The Independent of New York City sorrowfully, but truthfully, admits that the heroic efforts put forth by multitudes of devoted men and women to arrest the evils of intemperance, have not been successful. This is shown not only by the rapidly extending drinking habit of what is called "society," not only by the increased number of saloons in all our cities and larger towns, but in the largely increased revenue derived from the sale of intoxicants. A few years ago Christians were startled to find the drink bill of the United States amounting to $900,000,000; now it is $1,200,000,000. They hoped that something might be accomplished by prohibitory laws, but the futility of these has been thoroughly demonstrated, and acknowledged by all except the few who seem determined to shut their eyes to facts that are plain enough to others. Surely it is time for the children of God to consider whether it is not best to cut loose from the world in its schemes of reform, and to address themselves with great humility and importunity to the throne of grace, and then to go forth with the gospel of Jesus Christ as the only hope of reaching the rum-seller and his victim.—Truth.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT DECISION.

The decision of Judge Philips, of the United States Circuit Court, Western District of Missouri, Kansas City, awarding title and possession of the Temple Lot to the Reorganized Church as the true successor of the original Church of Latter Day Saints organized April 6, 1830, and setting forth the position of the Utah Church and other factions as departures from the true faith, and without right to the name or property of the Original Church.

Published by the Reorganized Church. Valuable for reference, and general distribution.

In pamphlet form complete; price 15 cents each; two for 25 cents. Special prices on orders for ten or more.

Address orders to David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preëxistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 25, 1894.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Concluded.

MONDAY, April 16.—The young people, unwearied in well-doing, held prayer service at half past seven o'clock. The usual prayer service at nine o'clock was in charge of Brn. Southwick, Stedman, and Durfey.

Bro. J. A. Robinson addressed the congregation at 10:45, on the subject of the college. He was assisted by Bro. J. T. Kinnaman. We were unable to secure a report of the sermon, but learned that it was a timely plea for an educational institution under the influences of our own people.

The business session was opened in the usual manner at half past one o'clock, Bro. C. E. Butterworth offering prayer. The minutes were read and approved. By motion the time for introducing new business was extended twenty-four hours.

The Third Quorum of Elders reported, nominating John Hawley for first counselor to its president. The Second Quorum of Priests reported. Pres. Joseph Smith announced that in answer to prayer a communication for the church had been received. Adjournment was then had to consider the revelation. The quorums retired. Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair addressed the congregation remaining.

At half past seven President Joseph Smith was the speaker, assisted by Bro. John Chisnall. We did not learn the nature of the last two sermons.

Tuesday, the 17th.—Prayer service was held by the young people. Brn. R. M. Elvin and I. L. Rogers were in charge of the prayer meeting at nine o'clock.

Bro. F. G. Pitt occupied the pulpit in the morning hour. He was assisted by Bro. C. E. Butterworth.

The business session was opened by singing hymn No. 1031, President Joseph Smith offering prayer. The minutes were read and approved.

The High Priests Quorum reported. They had defined their duties to the joint council and had approved the nominations of the Presidency of those presented for ordination into that quorum. The report included a synopsis of labor done by the members.

The First, Second, and Third Quorums of Priests presented notice that they would ask admission as ex officios at next General Conference.

The nomination of Bro. John Hawley as counselor in the Third Quorum of Elders was provided for.

All the quorums present except the First Quorum of Seventy had concluded their examination of the revelation. That quorum was permitted to retire and complete its work.

Brn. R. M. Elvin, W. W. Scott, and J. H. Peters were appointed to compose the auditing committee on Herald Office and Bishop's accounts, etc.

Provision was made for the ordination of those whose nominations for ordination had been approved by the conference; Bro. J. F. Burton to arrange for ordination of Bro. John Davis of Washington, the missionaries in charge to ordain others nominated for ordination as seventies. Bro. J. M. Terry to ordain Bro. D. J. Krahl as president of the First Quorum of Priests.

President Joseph Smith announced a meeting of the college committee. He reported encouragingly.

The First Quorum of Seventy completed its examination about four o'clock, when the revelation was presented to the body, Bishop E. L. Kelley presiding.

The First Presidency reported its action, approving the communication.

The Quorum of the Twelve presented the following report:—

Resolved, that while we have no special testimony from God as a quorum, upon the revelation, we cheerfully accept it as a law to govern the church, under the conditions that at present obtain.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported as follows:—

The First Quorum of Seventy has examined the revelation presented to this conference and adopted it, believing it to be from God.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported thus:—

We, the members of the Second Quorum of Seventy after prayerful and as careful examination of the revelation presented to us on the 16th inst. by the President of the church as we were able to unanimously receive and adopted it as a revelation from God and as law to govern the church.

The High Priests reported their indorsement, and the testimony they had received of the revelation.

The First, Second, and Fourth Quorums of Elders acting conjointly had indorsed the revelation; the Third and the Fifth Quorums of Elders also approved it; as did the First, Second, and Third Quorums of Priests, in joint session; the teachers and deacons likewise approved it. The Bishopric also approved it. The laity present then adopted it by a rising vote. The revelation was then indorsed by a rising vote of the entire audience. The first and last verses of hymn No. 70 were then sung and President Smith pronounced the benediction.

The revelation is as follows:—

I was, on the fifteenth day of the fourth month, of the year 1894, in fasting and prayer before the Lord, and being commanded of the Spirit I arose from my praying and wrote:—

Thus saith the Spirit unto the Elders and the Church:—

1. My servants have been harsh one with another; and some have not been sufficiently willing to hear those whose duty it is to teach the revelations which my church has already received. Until my people shall hear and heed those who are set in the church to teach the revelations there will be misunderstanding and confusion among the members.

2. The burden of the care of the church is laid on him who is called to preside over the high priesthood of the church, and on those who are called to be his counselors; and they shall teach according to the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and as they shall be directed by revelation, from time to time.

3. It is the duty of the Twelve to preach the gospel, and administer in the ordinances thereof, as is directed in the Scriptures which ye have received. They are called and set apart to this duty; and are to travel and preach, under the direction and counsel of the Presidency.

4. It is not yet expedient in me that the Quorum of the Presidency, and the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles shall be filled, for reasons which will be seen and known unto you in due time. My servant David H. Smith is yet in my hand and I will do my will in the time for its accomplishment. Be not troubled or fearful in this matter for it shall be well for my work in the end.

5. When I said unto mine apostles "The Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the purposes of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others, or for purposes of self-aggrandizement by anyone, be he whomsoever he may be;" the one whom I had called to preside over the church, had not yet approved himself unto the scattered flock; and I gave this command unto the quorum next in authority in spiritual things that the scattered ones, and those who had been made to suffer might have assurance that I would not suffer that he whom I had called should betray the confidence of the faithful, nor squander the moneys of the treasury for the purposes of self. And for the reason that the law of tithing was but little understood, and would not be observed, unless it should be taught, and enforced by the precepts of the chief missionaries of the church. It was not then intended, nor is it now, to burden them with the duty of looking after the disbursements of the moneys in the treasury, or the management of the properties of the church; except as it may be at times necessary to do so in council with the Presidency, the High Council in case of exigency, the Bishopric, Bishops, or Bishops's agents abroad, or the conferences; and in accordance with the agreement hitherto made. Whatever burden the quorum may have felt rested upon them in this regard, they are now absolved from, the end designed by it having been reached; except that should it become apparent to the quorum that there was abuse in the administration of the temporal affairs of the church, they shall at once make such inquiry and examination through the proper officers of the church as will correct the evil and save the church from injury.

6. And further the Spirit saith unto you, that "with the Lord one day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day;" therefore, the law given to the church in section forty-two, over the meaning of some parts of which there has been so much controversy is as if it were given to-day; and the bishop and his counselors, and the High Council, and the Bishop and his council, and the storehouse and the temple and the salvation of my people, are the same to me now that they were in that day when I gave the revelation; nevertheless, that portion of that commandment which made it the duty of the High Council to assist in looking after the poor and needy of the church, was not intended to put the High Council over the Bishop in the administration of the affairs of his office and calling, except as they might do so in an advisory manner, and in such way that no one of the poor and the needy should be neglected; nor was it designed that the High Council should dictate in the matter of purchasing lands, building houses of worship, building up the New Jerusalem, and the gathering of the people, these last named being within the province of the Presidency, the Twelve as a quorum, the councils or other officers of the branches or stakes where houses of worship are to be built, the conferences and the General Assembly of the church, and the direction of the Lord by revelation. The High Council could not in justice dictate to the Bishop in direction in any of these matters and then try and condemn and punish him if he did not obey.

7. The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past.

8. That part of the law which says: "It is the duty of the Twelve, also, to ordain and set in order all the other officers of the church," is to be understood by the revelation which went before and in accordance with which it was written; and which follows after it in the book; and when those officers are ordained and set in their order, in the church, they should be left to administer in the things unto which they were ordained, having charge of the affairs over which they are called and set apart to preside; the Twelve and Seventy administering as those prosecuting the work of preaching with the warning voice, baptizing, organizing and setting in order, then pushing their ministry into other fields until the world is warned. It is the will of God that they do this; yea, verily, thus saith the Spirit, if they will now enter upon this work, leaving the burden of care in organized districts, or conferences to the standing ministry, under the Presidency of the church; observing the law already given to ordain and set high priests or elders to preside in large branches and in districts, and also evangelical ministers, then will those officers set in the church be useful and he who gave the law be honored; the differences between the quorums be healed, confidence be restored and good will and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain.

9. The quorums in respect to authority are designed to take precedence in office as follows: The Presidency, the Twelve, the Seventy in all meetings and gatherings of the membership, where no previous organization has been effected. Where organization has been arranged and the officers have been ordained and set in order; the standing ministry in their order; high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons; the parallels are; in the Presidency, the President and his counselors; in the second presidency, the Twelve; in the missionary work, first the Twelve; second, the Seventy; in the standing ministry, the Presidency; second, the high priests; third, the elders, then priests, teachers, and deacons in their order.

10. Should the church fall into disorder, or any portion of it, it is the duty of the several quorums of the church, or any one of them to take measures to correct such disorder; through the advice and direction of the Presidency, the Twelve, the Seventy, or a council of High Priests, in case of emergency; and in case the Presidency is in transgression, the Bishop and his council of High Priests, as provided in the law; and the Presidency and High Council if the Bishop, or his counselors, if high priests, are in transgression. The Scriptures and the church articles and covenants, with the rules adopted by the church, shall govern in procedure.

11. The Spirit saith further: That it is wisdom that the Presidency and Twelve in council together make such appointments as may be necessary to provide for the fields not named in the appointments made by the Presidency and recommended to the Twelve, as may be agreed by them.

12. The Spirit saith further: That Lamoni, Iowa, having been made by the agreement of the church under the law of the land the principal place of business of the church, it is wise and expedient that it should be considered and declared by the conference to be the seat of the Presidency of the church, and in due time be made a stake. In the meantime the district may be left to the care of its district organization subject to the direction of the Presidency, no one of the missionary force being appointed to the charge thereof for the conference year, or longer if it shall be found advisable.

13. The Spirit saith further: The Twelve should remain at Lamoni, and continue in council with the Presidency and the Bishop, and his counselors if practicable, a sufficient time after the adjournment of conference to counsel together, and agree on the things of the law and the general affairs of the church, so that when the traveling council shall separate for their several fields, there may be no longer reason for distrust, suspicion, or dissension; and if these officers will so counsel together in the spirit of moderation and mutual forbearance and concession, my law will be more perfectly understood by them and a unity of sentiment and purpose will be reached by them. It is the will of your Lord and your God that this should be done. It should have been done before, but the adversary hath hindered, desiring to prevent the success of my work in the earth.

14. For the same reasons in me that it is not expedient to fill the quorums of the First Presidency and the Twelve, who are apostles and high priests, it is not expedient that a Patriarch for the church should be indicated and appointed.

15. My servant Thomas W. Smith is in my hand; and his bishopric shall be continued for a season; if he fully recover he will enter again into the work; if I take him unto myself, another will be appointed in his stead when the quorum is filled.

16. And now I say unto you mine elders, apostles and high priests of my church, continue ye in the ministry unto which you have been called; and if ye cannot fully agree on all the points of the law, be patient and be not contentious; so far as you can agree work together without heat, confusion, or malice. Ye are equal in worth of position and place in the work of the church; and if in honor ye shall prefer one another, ye will not strive for precedence or place in duty or privilege, and shall be blessed of me.

17. Yea, verily, thus saith the Lord, unto the elders of the church; continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called; and I will be with you by my Spirit and presence of power unto the end. Amen.

JOSEPH SMITH.

The foregoing was received by the First Presidency, read, and accepted as a revelation from God through the Spirit in answer to prayer.

JOSEPH SMITH,
W. W. BLAIR.

Done at LAMONI, Iowa, April 16, 1894.

Bro. Columbus Scott preached at half past seven o'clock in the evening. He was assisted by Bro. David Chambers.

Wednesday, the 18th. — Prayer meetings were held at half past seven and at nine o'clock. The nine o'clock meeting was in charge of Brn. David Chambers and D. M. Rudd.

Bro. J. B. Roush preached in the morning hour. He was assisted by Bro. I. N. Roberts.

The afternoon session was opened by singing hymn 378, Bro. Charles Derry offering prayer. The minutes were read. The secretary was requested to insert the written reports of actions of quorums on the revelation.

The following preamble and resolution from the Quorum of Twelve was presented:—

Whereas, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants teach that the resurrection of the dead is brought to pass without any act of obedience upon our part, and

Whereas, the ministry of the church are sent out to teach the faith and doctrine of the church, and not their own ideas in opposition thereto, therefore be it

Resolved, as the opinion of this council that any minister who teaches that the resurrection is dependent upon our individual obedience to the gospel, is guilty of teaching contrary to the well-established faith and doctrine of the church and is therefore censurable.

Respectfully submitted,
HEMAN C. SMITH, Sec.

It was moved to defer action until the next General Conference.

A motion prevailed referring the matter to the Presidency for report to this or to the conference of 1895.

An appeal case asking action by the Standing High Council, received too late for determination by the Presidency, was presented by the latter, who asked that no action be taken by the body.

The First Presidency made the following report of missions, subject to the agreement to be made between them and the Twelve, as follows:—

*To the Conference, in session; Greeting:—*The missions agreed upon by the Presidency, for the Twelve, are as follows:—

1. A. H. Smith, Iowa, (exclusive of Decatur district,) Eastern Nebraska, Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

2. James Caffall, European mission, in charge.

3. J. H. Lake, the Canadas.

4. J. R. Lambert. In view of the uncertain state of Bro. Lambert's health we think it advisable that no field in charge be assigned; but that he be left free to occupy such time and in such places as he may feel able and at liberty to do, from time to time, as may be arranged between himself, the Presidency, and those in charge where he may elect to labor; and would recommend Denver, Colorado, as a suitable field, should he choose to occupy there.

5. Joseph Luff, Missouri, Kansas.

6. E. C. Briggs, Michigan, Northern Indiana.

7. Heman C. Smith, the Southern and Southwestern States and territories, including Indian Territory, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.

8. T. W. Smith. In consideration of the continued disability of Bro. T. W. Smith, we deem it unwise to appoint further than that he labor in Missouri and adjoining States as may be agreed upon between himself and those in charge.

9. W. H. Kelley, the Eastern States, including Eastern Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick.

10. G. T. Griffiths, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The report was adopted.

The Presidents of Seventy presented the following report:—

The Presidents of the Seventy have held five sessions, during which the Spirit of peace and light was enjoyed while transacting the business before us.

We desire to express our regret that Bro. J. T. Davis, one of our number, was suddenly called home at an early stage of the conference, because of the serious illness of his wife, and, thereby we were deprived of his aid and counsel.

A number of names of elders were considered, and recommended by us for ordination to the office of Seventy to be numbered with the Second Quorum of Seventy.

They have been reported to the body, their calling concurred in, and their ordination provided for except three, whose names were referred back to us for recommendation.

Those selected, who are or have been present have been ordained, except one, Elder R. E. Grant, who desired to defer his ordination for reasons by him assigned.

Of the names referred back to us for reconsideration, we recommend that the ordination of Elder S. W. Simmons be deferred for one year.

We hereby renew the recommendation for the ordination of Elder V. D. Baggerly.

We also recommend anew, the ordination of Bro. A. M. Fyrando; provided he is willing to accept of it.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL, Pres.,
C. SCOTT, Sec.

The recommendations were adopted. Missionaries in charge were authorized to attend to the ordinations of Brn. V. D. Baggerly and A. M. Fyrando, provided the brethren named accepted the office of seventy.

A report was read from the Fifth Quorum of Elders. It reported 4,047 sermons and 218 baptisms, including the nomination of Bro. T. J. Bell as first counselor and Bro. F. M. Weld as second counselor. Action on the nominations was deferred until the nomination of Bro. J. H. Wells for the office of high priest had been acted upon; this by request of the quorum. The Second Quorum of Priests also reported.

The High Council's definition of its functions was referred back to that quorum with a request to report to next General Conference.

Bro. David Dancer renewed his request for release from the college committee, and it was granted. Bro. E. A. Blakeslee was selected to fill the vacancy. The choice was made unanimous.

The following resolution of instruction to the Bishopric was adopted:—

Whereas in the prosecution of the Temple Lot suit questions and settlement of title and property interests are likely to further arise requiring attention, therefore be it resolved that the Bishopric be authorized and instructed to look after the same, if found necessary, and to take such steps as shall be deemed necessary for the good of the body and in justice to all parties concerned.

The nominations for ordinations to the office of high priest were taken up, and considered, and discussed. The time of adjournment was reached without a vote being taken.

Bro. M. H. Bond occupied the pulpit at the evening service. He was assisted by Bro. L. L. Wight.

Thursday, the 19th.—Prayer service was held by the young people early in the morning. At nine o'clock the usual prayer service was held in charge of Brn. J. T. Kinnaman and William Summerfield.

Bro. Frederick A. Smith preached in the morning hour, assisted by Bro. J. S. Kier.

Consideration of business was resumed at half past one o'clock; prayer was offered by Bro. W. H. Kelley, when the minutes were read and approved.

The Presidency presented the following report on the matter referred to them:—

To the Conference, Greeting:—The Presidency to whom the resolution on the subject of the resurrection was referred, report:—

That, while we are of the opinion that the standard books of the church clearly teach the unconditional resurrection of man, we believe it to be of doubtful propriety for the church to put unnecessary restrictions upon the ministry as to the manner of their teaching those doctrines and matters of faith which are of secondary importance; for, while possible injury may accrue to individuals, here and there, who may be inquiring for the word, from the advocacy of individual views held by some of the laborers in the field; we think such injury less hurtful to the general work than that which would result from the creation of a creed, or the putting of restrictions upon the ministry in the form of resolutions restraining the liberty of inquiry and investigation, and censuring those who may venture into such investigation, upon what seems to them to be fair grounds.

We therefore recommend that the conference go no further than to say that it is the belief of the church that the doctrine of the resurrection provides for the rising from the dead, of all men, each in his own order, through the atonement wrought by Jesus Christ.

We cite from the Scriptures such passages as may be aids to understanding upon the subject: Doctrine and Covenants, 28:7, 8; 43:5; 45:10; 63:13; 76:3, 4, 7; 85:6, 29. Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 6:4, 6; Mosiah 8:9; 11:16; Alma 8:10; 9:3; 19:4; Book of Nephi 11:7; Book of Mormon 4:7; Bible, John 5:28; Acts 24:15; 1 Cor. 15:21, 22, 23, 25, 26; Rev. 20:5, 12, 13; 21:8; 22:15.

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH SMITH, } Presidency.
W. W. BLAIR, }

The First Quorum of Seventy presented the following additional report:—

To the General Conference.—The First Quorum of Seventy presents the following additional report:—

We have held seventeen sessions, at which matters of importance concerning the general duties and work of the quorum were acted upon.

Reports have been received from sixty-eight of our number; forty-two of them have been present.

The number of baptisms reported for the conference year is 806. Incomplete reports of other items show the following: Sermons preached, 6,434; confirmations, 681; ordinations, 75; children blessed, 436; administrations to the sick, 1,900; marriages, 49.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

“Resolved that as a quorum we are in harmony with and fully indorse the organizations known as the General Sunday School Association, The Daughters of Zion, and Zion’s Religio-Literary Society.”

“Resolved that we request President Joseph Smith to insert in section 121 Doctrine and Covenants a statement of the instruction given to the Seventy in 1885—that directing them to choose presidents of Seventy and instructing the presidents thus chosen to choose other Seventy—that it may be preserved with other important instruction given to the church and published in that section.”

Respectfully submitted on behalf of quorum.
DUNCAN CAMPBELL, Pres.
RICHARD S. SALYARDS, Sec.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 19, 1894.

President Smith was authorized to insert it as requested, under the same conditions that other matter in section 121 was published.

The Second Quorum of Seventy presented an additional report:—

To the Presidency and brethren in conference assembled; greeting:—

The Second Quorum of Seventy have held several sessions alone in which the Spirit of God has been markedly felt, especially in the consideration and acceptance of the revelation. We have met in joint sessions with the First Quorum of Seventy. Have also issued licenses to the brethren ordained at this conference. The summary of work done by the fifteen members during the year is as follows: Sermons preached 2,214, baptized 208, confirmed 147, ordained 12, blessed 65 children; making an average of 148 sermons preached, 14 baptized, 10 confirmations, 1 ordination, and 4 children blessed.

We express our gratitude to God for his kind and gracious acknowledgment in answer to our petitions, and are resolved to manifest our appreciation by seeking to comply with the instruction so imparted.

C. SCOTT, President,
T. W. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

The following resolution was adopted:—

Resolved that Lamoni, Iowa, be declared the seat of the Presidency of the church.

Brn. F. G. Pitt and Ellis Short asked release from the college committee. The conference declined to accept their resignations.

The First Quorum of Elders reported: Sermons 1,966; baptisms 117.

An explanation was made by Bro. Blair concerning the release of Bro. R. M. Elvin: Sickness in his family prevented his appointment. Being in the Decatur district over which the First Presidency had charge, he was subject to their direction.

The Twelve called attention to an item omitted in their report; the release of Bro. John Wahlstrom.

It was moved that the late revelation be inserted in the next edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

At the request of some this was deferred. The President of the Board of Publication stated that the Herald Office would publish it in such form that it could be inserted in the Book of Covenants.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported on the nominations of sevens referred to them:—

Resolved that we disapprove of the selection of active Sevens for ordination to the office of high priest as interfering with the discharge of the important responsibilities and duties of the quorums of Seventy and detrimental to the general interests of the work; however, we are willing to indorse the nomination of any of this quorum who may be designated by the Spirit of revelation for ordination to the office of high priest.

The Twelve reported disapproving of selections from the quorums of Seventy, but approving the nominations of the following named brethren for ordination to the office of high priest: J. P. Carlisle, J. M. Baker, Temme Hinderks, William Lewis, John M. Terry, George Green, R. C. Longhurst, Roderick May, W. C. Nirk, Joseph Dewsnup, Sr., Wentworth Vickery, J. S. Snively. The conference approved the nominations. Brn. G. H. Hilliard and G. H. Hulmes were also nominated and approved for ordination to the office of high priest. A. M. Fyrando was nominated and approved for ordination as a high priest conditioned upon his willingness to accept. Brn. James Moler, J. F. Burton, Robert Winning, R. J. Anthony, George Montague, I. N. White, C. H. Porter, and F. M. Sheehy declined to accept such ordination. Action on the nominations of Brn. J. H. Wells, J. T. Davis, H. N. Hansen, and E. W. Nunley was deferred one year; and those of Brn. A. J. Moore and C. H. Jones were lost. Provision was made for the ordination of those approved, by the missionaries in charge.

By separate motions the First Presidency, the Twelve, the High Priests, the First and Second quorums of Seventy, the High Council, the Bishopric, the quorums of elders, and the priests, teachers, and deacons were sustained; the Secretary and Recorder; the Church Librarian; also the Daughters of Zion, the General Sunday School Association, and Zion's Religio-Literary Society; also the college committee. A vote of thanks was extended to the conference stenographers and reporters: Sr. Belle Robinson, and Brn. E. C. Lindsey, J. S. Parrish, and D. F. Lambert; also to the Lamoni Saints for their hospitality.

Two meetings were held in the evening—an ordination and prayer and preaching services. Brethren W. W. Blair and A. H. Smith had charge of the former, in which Brn. George H. Hilliard, Roderick May, and Joseph S. Snively were ordained high priests; and Brn. T. J. Bell and F. M. Weld as counselors in the Fifth Quorum of Elders; Brn. A. H. Smith and Charles Derry, J. H. Lake and William Anderson, and W. H. Kelley and C. E. Butterworth officiating, in the order named; the brethren of the Twelve being the spokesmen. The Holy Spirit's presence was realized, bearing witness of the acceptance of the brethren named in the offices to which they were appointed.

President Joseph Smith preached at half past seven o'clock, assisted by Bro. J. F. Burton. At the close of the discourse an additional appointment was presented by the Twelve: J. M. Brown, to labor in Central Kansas as circumstances permit. On motion the Presidency were authorized to audit the minutes of the last business session.

The conference then adjourned to meet April 6, 1895, at Independence, Missouri, and President Joseph Smith pronounced the benediction.

On Friday morning some of the ministry remaining met at nine o'clock when a number of five minute speeches were made by several of the brethren. The session was in charge of Brn. F. G. Pitt and R. J. Anthony.

COLLEGE MEETING.

THE college committee called a general meeting of citizens and visitors at Lamoni on Friday evening of the 20th inst., at Rabidou's hall. Bro. W. W. Blair was chosen chairman, and Bro. D. F. Lambert secretary. Bro. Joseph Smith, president of the college committee, made a statement of progress to date: Sr. M. Walker had donated twenty acres of land, Bro. Alexander Hopkins thirteen and one third acres, and Sr. Minnie Wickes six and two thirds acres; in all forty acres, situated in the southeastern portion of Lamoni. This land had been donated on condition that a college be erected within a prescribed time. Some subscriptions had been made in 1889 when the first effort was made towards erecting a college. The committee desired to see what the citizens of Lamoni would do, to learn if the subscriptions of 1889 or what portion of them remained good, etc., stating that they desired to then proceed to solicit subscriptions from others interested, and break ground and commence work on the college buildings during the spring. The committee wished it to be understood that the institution was designed to be strictly nonsectarian; that it was to be conducted upon broad, liberal principles.

Speeches were then made by Brn. E. L. Kelley, F. M. Sheehy, E. A. Blakeslee, D. F. Lambert, F. G. Pitt, Mr. B. D. Fleet and others. This was followed by a call for subscriptions, which was fairly responded to.

Upon further consideration it was decided to adjourn the meeting to Monday of the 23d inst. at half past seven o'clock. A soliciting committee was appointed to interview the citizens of the town and surrounding country to obtain subscriptions. Another committee was appointed to advertise the meeting for Monday evening, with a view to securing a large attendance, etc.

From present indications it is believed that the college will be built. However, the erection of it—its size, etc., depends upon liberal subscriptions from both residents of Lamoni and those at other points who are interested in seeing such an institution erected. The college is not yet an assured fact, but with anything like a liberal response from those interested in the project there should be no trouble in securing it.

This is the second effort that has been made, and it ought not to fail. If it does, it is not probable that the project will be revived again very soon. Those who will to do and can assist it can therefore see the need of prompt and substantial aid being tendered to the committee. The advantages of such an institution both to Lamoni and to our people in general can hardly be overestimated. It is therefore hoped that those who can aid will at once notify the college committee what they will subscribe to the funds. The terms of subscription are one third payable when ground is broken, one third when the corner stone is laid, and the balance when the building is inclosed.

The committee can work to better advantage and erect a better building if in the start they have a liberal subscription list, otherwise they must necessarily be hampered or limited in their operations.

What can our readers do for the erection of a liberal educational institution? The response can be made by subscriptions to either one of the college committee. The members are: Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa; F. G. Pitt, Chicago, Illinois; J. A. Robinson, Independence, Missouri; Robert Winning, St. Joseph, Missouri; E. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Michigan; Ellis Short, Standley, Indian Territory.

We may state in conclusion that the joint council of the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric, now in session, adopted a resolution favoring the college project and pledging it the active individual support of its members.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric resumed their sessions in joint council on Monday, the 23d inst. Bro. G. T. Griffiths was obliged to return to Kirtland on the 23d, because of the serious illness of Sr. Griffiths.

Brn. Joseph Luff and I. M. Smith preached for the Lamoni Saints on Sunday, the 22d inst. Both discourses were edifying.

The Pleasanton, Iowa, branch held its annual election of officers on Saturday, the 21st inst. Bro. Duncan Campbell was chosen president, Bro. Lyman Little priest, Bro. A. W. Moffet teacher and secretary, Bro. A. S. Parker deacon, Sr. B. A. Greer treasurer and chorister, and Peter Castner janitor. The branch Sunday school elected officers under the auspices of the district Sunday school association on Sunday the 22d inst., making choice of the following named as its officers: Bro. Duncan Campbell superintendent, Bro. T. J. Burch assistant superintendent, Bro. Macy Campbell secretary, Sr. B. A. Greer treasurer and chorister, Sr. Clara Turpen organist. The branch building committee reported, showing sufficient funds at hand to pay almost all indebtedness remaining on the new chapel. Prospects for growth in the branch and consequent extension of the work into the surrounding country are good. The regions round about Pleasanton are inviting fields for labor. Unity and life in that branch will bring additions and strength to the Saints at Pleasanton and to the entire district.

A report of adjourned college meeting will appear next week.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith's permanent address is Lamoni, Iowa. Mail so addressed will be promptly forwarded to him in his field of labor.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

[BELIEVING that no more encouraging words than the following address of Bro. Joseph Burton could occupy our space, we cheerfully give place to it.]

ADDRESS BY ELDER J. F. BURTON.

Delivered before the General Conference at Lamoni, Iowa, in the interests of the Daughters of Zion, Tuesday evening, April 11, 1894.

WE are this evening somewhat like the ancient mariners striking out on a new voyage, in search of some of the jewels which will be of benefit to us. We elders think we are somewhat qualified to present the principles of the gospel to men, and when we have the divine aid are very much gratified in doing so, and it would seem that this evening with such a large audience before us, we would like to present them; but there is this other consideration, that that is pretty strong meat and we have been feeding on these food things for several days and evenings, and now in the midst of the week it is proposed that we have a little—recreation shall it be? We hope so, in the sense that it will be advantageous as well as restful.

I stand before you in the interests of the Daughters of Zion, an institution lately organized by some of the members of the church, whose motto is, "Our aim mankind to bless." And believing that it is and is to be a part of what is known to us as the great latter-day movement and that it is of vastly more importance than it has hitherto been considered, we offer no apology in their behalf for requesting of the brethren and sisters of the General Conference the privilege of using this hour. And if there are not presented to you thoughts bright and clear from the fountains of knowledge or the depths of truth, it will only be because your speaker lacks the ability, not because there are not grand heights and depths in the subject. In fact, it is embraced in the principles appertaining to the redemption of the race of man, and I fully believe, by the inspiration of that God who is the guide and director of this latter-day work the Daughters of Zion have inaugurated this movement which in its development shall result in such wondrous blessings to the race of man as have not yet been dreamed of.

I wish to present to you a statement made by our Savior to the church as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants, page 288, section 102: 9:—

"Let my army become very great, and let it be sanctified before me, that it may become fair as the sun, and clear as the moon, and that her banners may be terrible unto all nations; that the kingdoms of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws."

The thoughts contained in this may perhaps seem strange to very many, even Latter Day Saints, that before the kingdom of our God and Christ shall be established, it is to become very great. To-day it is but a handful in comparison with those of the earth, but by and by it is to become an army very great, and while it is to be great it also must be sanctified before God. It must be as "fair as the sun," as "clear as the moon," and terrible unto all nations so that the kingdoms of this world shall be constrained to acknowledge that it is in very deed the kingdom of our God and of his Christ. Therefore, to this end, for this purpose, "let us become subject unto her laws,"—the laws by which Zion may be sanctified.

Zion is the pure in heart, the pure in heart are to be sanctified, the dwellers in Zion are to be sanctified before God by keeping the laws of God. Let me read on page 251 also, some things concerning what is known to us as the "old church" and some of the leading members of that church. I refer to the reproof which they received from the Lord concerning the subject in hand. Commencing with the sixth paragraph we read: "The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth." Before this the statement is made that, "Truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come. . . . And the glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth," is the glory of God, and that glory is to rest upon Zion and her inhabitants; in fact she is to be sanctified by the truth and sanctified before God until all Zion shall stand before him "fair as the sun, and clear as the moon," because of the light and truth which is the glory of God, and this is knowledge of things as they are, as they were and as they are to come.

"Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, men became again in their infant state, innocent before God. And that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth, through disobedience, from the children of men, and because of the tradition of their fathers. But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth; but verily I say unto you, my servant Frederick G. Williams, you have continued under this condemnation; you have not taught your children light and truth, according to the commandments, and that wicked one hath power, as yet, over you, and this is the cause of your affliction. And now a commandment I give unto you, if you will be delivered: you shall set in order your own house, for there are many things that are not right in your house."

"Verily, I say unto my servant Sidney Rigdon, that in some things he hath not kept the commandments, concerning his children; therefore, firstly set in order thy house."

Frederick G. Williams and Sidney Rigdon were here reprov'd of the Lord because there were things not right in their homes.

"Verily I say unto you, my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., or in other words, I will call you friends, for you are my friends, and ye shall have an inheritance with me. I call you servants for the world's sake and ye are their servants for my sake; and now verily I say unto Joseph Smith, Jr., you have not kept the commandments, and must needs stand rebuked before the Lord. Your family must needs repent and forsake some things, and give more earnest heed unto your sayings, or be removed out of their place. What I say unto one I say unto all."

This reproof if applicable is applicable to all, and the Saints everywhere who have not properly instructed their families are reprov'd of the Lord in this revelation to the church.

"Pray always, lest that wicked one have power in you; and remove you out of your place."

These instructions of the Lord to the elders of the church, applicable as he says to all, were because there were wrongs in the houses, in the families of the Saints in Zion, and while this was so their children were in danger of being removed out of their places as they themselves were. They themselves were afflicted, and until these wrongs should be remedied they must bear with or suffer from their afflictions and sorrows.

In the New Testament Scriptures statements are made that the older sisters should instruct the younger ones to be just, keepers at home, lovers of their husbands, directing the affairs of their household in righteousness and truth. This also is in accordance with the thoughts before expressed.

And now we wish to go back a little farther in the world's history that we may see somewhat of the dealings of the Almighty through the ages of the past. In the Garden of Eden, from ought we know by the record, man and woman stood side by side, were equal every way. The woman being deceived, or beguiled by the serpent, partook of the fruit and fell. She handed the fruit to her husband who also fell, but he, it seems, comprehended better what he was doing. The woman did not understand. She saw that it was good as food to be eaten and she ate it. One of the brethren was telling me very lately that he thought if the serpent had been a mouse the fall would not have occurred, but let me say that if the woman was afraid of a mouse, she was not afraid to stand before the grieved Creator in his wrath and when she was asked what she had done and why, say to him: "The serpent beguiled me, sir, and I ate it." That was exactly the truth, but the man who was courageous enough to stand and face a mouse, even if it was angry, could shrug his shoulders at the grieved and angry Creator and say, "Father, the woman over there whom you gave me, was the one who gave me the food and I ate it." From that day until the present there has been an intuitive—what shall I call it?—attribute of moral integrity in woman superior to that of the opposite sex. Sorrow came to her because of her transgression, as it did also come to Adam because of his. They were thrust from the garden and from thence the edict went forth that the woman should be subject to her husband. The record says, "He shall rule over thee," and man has from that day until this used that as an argument for the oppression, in greater or lesser degree, of the sisterhood.

When Jesus came he said the gospel was the power of God unto salvation which should redeem the race from the power and curse of the fall and that under its sway there should be "neither male nor female, bond nor free," and under the influence of the divine inspiration of the Almighty in the restoration of the gospel in our day that curse was so far lifted from the race that in our generation God himself has spoken and lifted an Eve so high as to place her side by side with her companion in caring for the church. But I have got away ahead now already. What a wondrous broad field there is in this subject! Who can compass it? Years to come, when this room will not hold the people that shall listen to an address upon this subject, thoughts will be presented, grand and glorious concerning this matter and it has not yet entered into the heart of man to conceive of them all.

I am not going to argue to-night, if I can help myself, the part that woman shall have in the church work proper, neither in favor of nor against it, but I may just say this much by the way, that the good record tells us that at one time when Israel had been wandering and the book of the law of the Lord which had been lost was found, Hilkiyah, the high priest, sent word to King Josiah. Josiah appointed a committee of five high priests and scribes, with Hilkiyah as the chairman to inquire of the Lord concerning that book. The record does not tell us very much concerning this affair, only that they called upon Sister Huldah, the prophetess, and she inquired of the Lord and said, "Thus saith the Lord," and pronounced a prediction of evils that should come upon Jerusalem because of their transgressions, and then, womanlike, gave the word of the Lord just as tenderly as it was possible to be clothed in language. Those who are very careful and are quite intelligent in discernment can almost tell you what prophet you are quoting from by the manner in which the words are put together and sentences constructed. Let me read you just a little of this message of Huldah that I may illustrate this thought: After she had told him, "Thus saith the Lord I will bring evil upon this place," she sent in addition this word to the king of Judah:—

"Because thine heart was tender, and thou hast humbled thyself before the Lord, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes and wept before me; I also have heard thee, saith the Lord. Behold, therefore, I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place. And they brought the king word again."

Just as gentle, kind, and tender as only a Sister Huldah could, did she repeat this severe message of the Lord unto the king. She was apparently the only prophet or prophetess at that time, to give the word of the Lord to Israel. The king paid heed to the counsel thus received, put away evil from Israel, appointed a passover which they held, the like of which was never known in all the days of the kings of Israel or of Judah. But as I stated, this is not the side of the question which I wish this evening to present to you.

There is enough in the thought that woman's mission and place is the home, and from the fireside shall spring the power that shall assist in conquering the world and sanctifying the inhabitants of Zion that they may be redeemed, and I feel strong enough in the thought this evening to say that unless the sisters will begin the work in their homes and carry it on as the Lord shall direct them that the inhabitants of Zion never will be sanctified and Zion will never be redeemed. It requires the work there, that God designed they should do, and for which they were qualified from the beginning, as God said when he made woman, "She shall be a help fit for man." I don't like to use the word meet here, because sometimes persons misuse it thus placed. She was a help fitted for man in every way and while he should toil in the affairs of business in the world around about, she would take care of the tender plants, nursing and rearing them until she should pass them from under her care to the bosom of the church, and from thence on through all the schools they should pass, until the highest school, the school of the prophets, (which I believe will be a class in the Sunday school of the future,) shall be reached, and there be prepared to receive the endowment from on high which shall qualify them to stand before the Master when he shall come to a pure generation. Let me repeat the declaration made in the paragraph which I read, that the army of Israel is to become very great as well as to be sanctified. Whatever the time may be of the coming of the Master or of the end of this dispensation, whether it be two, five, ten, fifty, or a hundred years, it matters not to me, the declaration is made by the divine Master that the armies of Israel shall become very great and sanctified, before he comes, and therefore I wish to state as a bases for my thought this evening that the work of the Daughters of Zion will be to rear a righteous generation to meet the Savior at his coming. That instead of a generation being converted to meet him, a righteous generation will be raised up, raised under the influence of the divine Spirit of God in Zion through the operations of this organization as a starting point.

The declaration tells us in this word that when the Lord would redeem Israel in former times he chose a Moses and an Aaron and sent them to lead Israel out of bondage across the wilderness into the promised land. With them he says, "I sent Miriam." The sister was sent with the brothers. Six hundred thousand men of Israel left Egypt, and went into the wilderness on their way to the promised land. I have not read it very carefully lately and I don't remember reading much about the women. It speaks of the children but doubtless there must have been nearly if not as many, as six hundred thousand women. It took these two men, Moses and Aaron, with all the power of their intelligence to take care of these six hundred thousand men, and then they could not do it thoroughly. To Miriam was left the task of instructing the six hundred thousand women that a righteous generation qualified to enter the promised land might be raised up. The men laid their bones in the wilderness, but the little ones who they said would die in the wilderness were permitted to go into the promised land and receive the fruits and good thereof.

Let us go a little farther back than this. Moses was a man of God, was he not? Yes. Did the Lord ever have anything to do with raising him up? Every child knows that he did—every child in this village knows that. There was not a man in Israel fit to be a leader of that people. Why? Because they were steeped, their bodies and their spirits, in paganism and tradition of the nation by whom they were held as slaves. It was necessary that this child should be born under the influence and protecting care of the providence of God, cared for in the bulrush basket, as directed by the hand of God and kept until he was sent by the Divine Master and his power, into the desert there to learn and receive the divine message from the burning bush as Christ the God of Israel called him and directed him, authorizing him to perform his work.

Come down a little further in the history of time; come with the glorious Master himself who came to earth. There must be a man prepared to go before him. The angel came and said to the woman, "The child that shall be born of thee shall be he who shall go before the Master." Prenatal influences were to work there to prepare a John who should be fitted to meet the Savior and prepare the way before him. There was not a man on earth fit to be used by the Divine hand, to baptize Christ the Son of God and to prepare his way before him, and God the Eternal Father had to raise one up and he raised up John, a man sent of God for these purposes.

However, come on down later than that, when the angel came to the virgin Mary saying, "The child that shall be born of thee shall be the righteous one, the anointed, and blessed is she to be above all women." No man on earth fit to be the father of that being; sin and iniquity were too prevalent everywhere in the world. More than prenatal influences were to work there and the virgin Mary in that immaculate conception gave to the world a Christ, a Redeemer. An Eve lost it without man's aid, and without man's aid gave the Savior, the Redeemer to man, for the race of man. Then we come to this thought; that Jesus was raised up also of the father to work the salvation and redemption of man, and think you, brothers, sisters, and friends, that in that glorious and grand day yet to come when the kingdoms of this world must acknowledge that the kingdom is the kingdom of God and of Christ, when Christ himself shall come, that he can come to any other than a raised-up righteous generation thus prepared to meet him?

There are declarations made in the New Testament Scriptures that a Priscilla and Aquila, her husband, were helpers together of the Apostle Paul, who is supposed to have been not very friendly towards the sisters in some things; and he commended Phœbe as a servant of the church at Cenchrea; he commended also Priscilla and Aquila, and asked the Saints to greet her and the church which was in her house. The thought I wish to draw from this is that the apostle recognized the helping hand of those sisters as servants of the church that was in their house, and that consisted of their children, their servants, and as was the case sometimes in those days, their relatives. The church in their houses, then, should be instructed by these as helpers of the apostle and he recommended these sisters as such daughters and helpers of his.

Undoubtedly woman's work is at home in the house; there is however another thought that I may be permitted to notice just here—that she should be allowed to use her privileges, her powers in the development of that work as she deems best, so long as she does not infringe upon the rights, privileges, and powers of us the lords of creation. And if, in the carrying on of that work, of instructing her children in the house, she should choose to call her sister who is doing the selfsame work, to her house, and they thus confer, as to the best measures to be used in the development of that work, who shall say them nay, and if two may meet together why not two hundred, or two thousand, or ten times two thousand? If in the progress of that work they shall deem it requisite thus to meet together as "Daughters of Zion" that they may receive the instruction that each can give to the other in the edifying and building up of the church which is in their houses, they may thus convene and communicate one with another to this end, for this purpose, who is there in the church or in the world that should say them nay?

But there is another phase of this question naturally growing out of that thought: that if two or more of them shall assemble together it would require organization. It naturally drifts to that. Organization means officers, officers means some persons exercising some kind of authority, and is it possible that in the great scope of the latter-day work there is room for such authority to be given to the sisters in the church and of the church? One of the brethren in speaking to us in reference to the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began, that in the eleventh hour, this hour, these things were taking place and that there was and should be a restoration of all things needful for the work of God in this last generation. I am not so sure that we ought to confine ourselves in this dispensation alone to the precedents that we might find in other generations or dispensations. I believe there are peculiarities in the development of this work that did not attach to any of the others and that is voiced in the thought by the servant of the Lord to this body, that "the hastening time" is come, which did not in any other dispensation obtain. There is that peculiarity about it, that the dispensation which now is in force on the earth is to develop into a righteous generation being raised up—or converted, if you don't like the thought of being raised up—and that that generation shall be sanctified before God and it shall be as fair as the sun in purity, as clear as the moon, and that they shall be continually subject to the laws of God in Zion. This did not obtain in any of the dispensations prior to this; instead of that the others dwindled into darkness; but this is not like the evening star that goes down behind the darkening west, but this dispensation, like the morning star, instead of sinking into darkness, shall melt away into the brightness and glory of the risen Redeemer, of the Redeemer to come again into the glory of the sanctified and redeemed world. Therefore, I feel we have not altogether allowed ourselves to be confined to the revelations that might have been given to govern and direct the body of the people of God in other directions. I do not know that I need have offered this by way of apology for what I might introduce, but I thought I might perhaps make the statement that it would allow us to broaden our minds and allow them to be developed a little by the Spirit which permeates the great latter-day movement.

That there were women workers in the church in former days must certainly be accepted. In whatever position or condition it was, it has not been clearly revealed in any word that I know of, but in latter times we cannot be very much at a loss concerning the thought. When God called the young boy, the young man in 1827, he did not choose from the learned world. Why? Because they were so full there was no room for aught else. Full of traditions, superstitions, and of evils that govern in the world. He chose this lad unlearned, untutored, a mind free to be developed, and more than all, I believe, prepared of God, that he was able, and capable of development as God would have him. He chose him and virtually raised him up from an ignorant boy, to be the instrument in his hands to give to the inhabitants of the world most wondrous instruction that the world has not yet comprehended. He gave revelations in this Book of Doctrine and Covenants that men yet have not begun to teach with all their science and knowledge.

It is yet for the generations unborn to fully develop the principles of light, intelligence, knowledge, and truth contained in some of the revelations of this book—not that he comprehended it either—the more to his credit as a person.

Then we may also state that early in the history of this work, in 1830, the year in which the church was organized, the Lord, in the method that he had adopted of giving to this unlearned boy while yet unlearned, revelations beyond his natural knowledge and comprehension for the government and direction of the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints, not as it then was, but as it should be in its development and unfolding on unto the end; not that thereafter it should not be necessary to receive line upon line, and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, but that the outlines were portrayed clearly in his work, that in the development of the work, as time and circumstances would permit and the genius of the work would allow, these others should be brought into effect, and in harmony with that was the revelation given to his wife, Emma, as found on page 110 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and I don't think it out of place here to read it this evening in behalf of the sisters, the Daughters of Zion:—

"Hearken unto the voice of the Lord your God, while I speak unto you, Emma Smith, my daughter, for verily I say unto you, all those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom."

I am glad he put that in, because he makes no particular distinction there between one and another.

"A revelation I give unto you concerning my will, and if thou art faithful and walk in the paths of virtue before me, I will preserve thy life and thou shalt receive an inheritance in Zion. Behold thy sins are forgiven thee, and thou art an elect lady, whom I have called. Murmur not because of the things which thou hast not seen, for they are withheld from thee, and from the world which is wisdom in me in a time to come.

"And the office of thy calling shall be for a comfort unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., thy husband, in his afflictions, with consoling words, in the spirit of meekness."

Now I wish to say to any of the strong-minded women's rights sisters, if there are any present, that they do not find in this revelation any warrant whatever for exercising undue influence or power over their husbands, neither in that which is given in any of the revelations of God to his people, but rather that the office of her calling was for "a comfort unto her husband." The old edict from the beginning was, "Thou shalt be subject to thy husband." Not yet reversed, the gospel came for the purpose of reversing that as well as all other denunciations against the race, but it certainly will not be until the righteous generation is raised up and the spirit and genius of the latter-day work permeates the minds and the hearts of men, removing from them all jealousy, official and otherwise, that they may accord unto woman all the privileges due her and ordained of God as her right and privilege.

"And thou shall be ordained under his hand to expound scriptures, and to exhort the church, according as it shall be given thee by my Spirit."

The Spirit of the Lord, like God himself, evidently, is unchangeable, does not vary, will be the same to-day that it was in 1830, be the same in 1830 that it was in the year 60, A. D., will be the same then that it was two thousand, three thousand, or four thousand years prior to that time. The works of God are one eternal round; that is, they do not vary nor change, and the instruction given to the sister here is certainly in accord and must be interpreted as being in accord with that which was given in the previous revelations in the New Testament Scriptures as well as the old.

"For he shall lay his hands upon thee, and thou shalt receive the Holy Ghost, and thy time shall be given to writing, and to learning much. And thou needest not fear, for thy husband will support thee in the church; for unto them is his calling, that all things might be revealed unto them, whatsoever I will, according to their faith.

"And verily I say unto thee that thou shalt lay aside the things of this world, and seek for the things of a better."

Home shall be the place for this woman's instruction, the church in the house shall be the place where she shall instruct, but in doing this she shall lay aside the things of the world and devote her time entirely to the purposes of instruction that the children may be instructed and in the development of that work she shall not teach only at her own hearthstone, but at the hearthstone of every one of the sisterhood that might need her counsel and instruction for unto this was she ordained and for this purpose did this man receive instruction to lay his hands upon her and ordain her and bestow upon her the gift of the Holy Ghost that by this she should be qualified to instruct the Church of God in her house and lead them higher and higher in the development of knowledge, and wisdom, and truth.

"And it shall be given thee also to make a selection of sacred hymns, as it shall be given thee, which is pleasing unto me, to be had in my church; for my soul delighteth in the song of the heart; yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me. And it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads. Wherefore, lift up thy heart and rejoice, and cleave unto the covenants which thou hast made. Continue in the spirit of meekness and beware of pride."

That is the declaration of the Master to her, "Continue in the spirit of meekness." You sisters who think it necessary to unfeminine yourselves and masculine yourselves that you might receive what you think your rights, the beautiful revelation of these words of God to our sister is the type of what you ought to be and what you will be by the grace of God; that in meekness you are to instruct and direct and in that spirit alone can even the "Lords of creation" instruct. And now this other declaration so grand:—

"Let thy soul delight in thy husband, and the glory which shall come upon him."

What glory? The glory of God. What is the glory of God? Light and truth is the glory of God and the power of redemption, and this woman commanded of God, "Let thy soul delight in thy husband, and the glory which shall come upon him." When I read that as I did awhile ago in connection with the former reading, my soul melted within me with joy and gladness and gratitude to God that in this latter day a generation had become righteous enough at any rate that they might receive this from the master, as a most beautiful rendering of that edict of long ago. "Thou shalt be subject to thy husband, he shall rule over thee." Harsh and severe. Behold the goodness and the severity of God, the severity of God when in a day of transgression he says, "Thy husband shall rule over thee," but in the day of God's reckoning with man, the day of redemption, he says to the sisters now, "Let thy soul delight in thy husband, and the glory which shall come upon him." And when the Eve that was in the garden of Eden in her purity before the fall, shall come to this earth again and strike hands with the Eve that has been raised up a righteous woman, then the edict will be reversed again, or rather glory will be added to it, and undoubtedly the declaration will be, "Let thy soul delight in each other and in the glory which now rests upon thee;" then shall the woman stand where she ought to have stood and would have stood but for transgression through all the ages of the past, side by side with man, equal at last in glory, in honor, in power, and in privileges.

"Keep my commandments continually, and a crown of righteousness thou shalt receive. And except thou do this, where I am you cannot come."

In harmony exactly with the argument we are trying to make.

"And verily, verily I say unto you, that this is my voice unto all"—you sisters. "Amen," is the end of that chapter.

Let me say this again in reference to the thought that there is to be a righteous generation raised up: The Daughters of Zion has been organized. It is but in its inception, just starting out. Even the breadth and the length and the height and the depth of it have not yet been discovered. Just starting out upon this, the declaration is that they shall instruct each other in those things pertaining to a righteous generation, that the generation which shall be raised up in Zion shall have such prenatal influences and powers as shall cause them to be free in a very great measure from the influences that have surrounded the present generation in their rearing.

Away out west on the western coasts of Joseph's land, away out "to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills" one of the Daughters of Zion said a short while ago to one of the elders when speaking concerning the young men that were paying their addresses to her, "We have determined in our society that the young men who shall receive our hands in marriage shall be superior to us in intelligence, pure in character, upright, just, and true. We have determined that we will not associate with nor marry any young man contaminated with such evil habits as shall cause us to blush with shame. That their thoughts when voiced must be pure and chaste and that their bodies must be free from diseases contracted by evil habits." I felt like throwing my hat in the air, and I am sure if I had been a Salvation Army man, I would have shouted "Hallelujah, glory to God!" for in that I see the brightness of the glory of Zion, and that shall be the opening wedge. And I say to the young men who may look upon the faces around you, prepare yourselves by a righteous life and living, and if needs be, organize yourselves into the Sons of Zion, prepare yourselves for a righteous life, or you may be like the young man whose letter we heard read this afternoon, who so very plaintively confessed that it was not possible for him to get a bride from among the daughters of Zion, for Zion in her brightness is arising and the daughters in Zion are determined that their companions shall be pure in thought and word; their conversation and actions shall be chaste and pure, upright and just. All hail to the Daughters of Zion! May God's mercy and blessing rest upon them, the Spirit and meekness from the Almighty rest upon them, and every one that labors among them, for the institution will develop and go on, brighter and grander until from among them shall elect ladies be called as was Emma and ordained with authority to teach the churches in the houses of the Saints of God. That a righteous generation may be raised up, that they may have the authority (which will be the recognition of the Church of Christ) in the work that shall be assigned them, without in the least degree infringing upon the work of the ministry or eldership of the Church of Christ.

There is one thought I wish to speak of in reference to the Religio-Literary. Besides the Daughters of Zion there has also been established the Zion's Religio-Literary Society and one of the elders on the Pacific slope when addressing that society, believing himself to have been inspired by the Spirit that guides in the great latter-day movement, counseled that society to make themselves acquainted with the records which the church holds and from every other source attainable by them with that which worked injury to the race of man and to their degradation, and that they also should learn everything that might be learned from all these of that which had hitherto assisted in the exaltation of the race of man, and that when they had thus learned, they should cleave to the one and avoid the other and that they should immediately put the good in practice. And if there is to be anything whatever of value in this movement of Zion's Religio-Literary Society and the Daughters of Zion, it must be that that which they learn shall be immediately practiced, for sin of a raging kind is prevalent in the world to day to the destruction of the race of man. The tide must be stemmed by practice immediately and the Daughters of Zion must be at work and the Master among them must work with them to assist them.

Again do I, with all my soul, ask the benediction of our great Master upon every effort for good, "The aim, mankind to bless."

SOMERVILLE, Victoria, March 15.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Wight has taken his departure for home, and is nearing the American shores by this time. I can assure you that it leaves a vacancy in our ranks that I am afraid will not be filled with such a worthy and fearless defender of the cause.

He, like all others, holds his own views on matters where the law is not plainly set forth; but different from many he never preaches them. The instructions are to preach the word; and I have noticed by observation, that those who are found advancing and preaching far fetched ideas and fine spun notions, are soon into difficulties and trouble with the brethren. His labors both far and near have been appreciated by people both in and out of the church, who speak highly of his abilities as a teacher of the Scriptures. I think all his actions relative to church matters were prompted by his own convictions, with a sense of responsibility resting upon him, and not by the opinions of others. His presence and labor will be greatly missed by those with whom he labored most. However we bid him Godspeed in the great work assigned him of the Lord, wherever his path may lead or his lot be cast.

The young brethren who are left behind will with trembling limbs and fluttering hearts try to face the frowning world with this glorious message of truth, which is everywhere evil spoken of.

We occasionally find some good honest soul who is willing to cast his lot with us and strive to gain a better home, a world "wherein dwelleth righteousness." I baptized a man a few days ago who is a credit to this neighborhood for his uprightness and integrity of purpose. Others are believing, but we patiently wait for the Father to draw them. Brn. Wells and Kaler are doing their best under present circumstances, but like myself, are considerably hindered because of the hard times in this country.

Rejoicing in the growth and progress of the work everywhere, I am still in hope of Zion's redemption, In bonds, THAYER, Mo., April 10.

Editors Herald:—Though not permitted to be with you at General Conference I have not been idle; I have been trying both by precept and example to teach the Saints in my field of labor to live pure lives. Have held services lately at Sargeant, also near Cabool, at the excellent home of Sr. Johnson, at West Plains and near Thayer, Missouri.

A short time ago I became acquainted with a reverend gentleman of the Congregationalist faith, who sometimes gives lectures on "Indian tradition." Being anxious to know if his theory of the origin of the Indians harmonized with that of the Book of Mormon I visited him and found him to be quite a fine man and I believe almost free from prejudice. During my interview I discovered some things that will doubtless be interesting to the Saints. Rev. Currier was raised in Canada, where he was with the Indians in his younger days and learned their language. He was missionary among them for some time, making their tradition an especial study. He has two large maps containing hieroglyphics which were copied from stones that he has found in Arkansas, Missouri, Indian Territory, Oregon, Lake Superior, and many other places; the hieroglyphics on one stone referring him to some similar stone somewhere else, and the next one to another, and so on till he has found a goodly number. He has written a book about the aborigines of America, which he would like to publish, but is too poor to furnish the necessary means. He said the Indians were of Hebrew origin; that there were two distinct civilized nations who anciently inhabited this continent; that the ancients had horses and sheep in abundance. He stated that from the tradition he had discovered that very large animals twenty-five and thirty feet long formerly inhabited this continent. He further stated that the names "Nephi" and "Laman" were familiar to him. I showed him the characters sent by the Palmyra Seer to Professor Anthon of New York, which interested him very much. He then showed me some very much like those presented to Professor Anthon, and stating that those in my possession were more perfect characters than the ones found by himself. The people where he lectures sometimes complain saying that his lectures are too much like Mormonism. The reverend gentleman has not read the Book of Mormon but would like to do so. His address is, C. S. Currier, Myrtle, Missouri. In bonds, Editors Herald:—On the 2d of this month I went to Copenhagen to have some tracts printed, also went to Malmo, Sweden, twice and spoke a few times. The last evening Bro. Wahlstrom rented a hall in one of the hotels and about sixty persons came out. No doubt more would have attended had it not been such a rainy day.

During my absence the minister here did what he could to prejudice the minds of the people against us, calling me a wolf in sheep's clothing, a real "Mormon" etc. This I expected. When I returned on the 13th I announced through the paper that I would speak on "false prophets" the following Monday evening, which I did to a fair turnout, showing them that our doctrine was in harmony with the New Testament and that the false prophets, wolves in sheep's clothing, etc., must be those who taught differently. At the close of the meeting I told the people that on the following Thursday evening I would speak on baptism and would invite the minister, and that he would have a chance to defend himself. I accordingly went to invite him. He did not treat me very respectfully and promised to not come. I found him in his room studying his sermon for next day at the same time smoking his pipe as faithfully as any man could. In this country it is a rare thing to find a man who does not smoke or drink, and the ministers are no exception to the rule; the majority of them are actually opposed to the temperance movement. Well, Thursday evening came, and about one hundred listeners, some expecting to see the minister at the meeting, but he kept his promise, and at the close of the meeting somebody remarked that he knew he could not defend himself and for that reason he staid at home. He has succeeded in scaring some, but others declare that it is none of his business whether or not they attend my meetings.

The Devil is using the same means here as elsewhere in opposing the work, but the opposition may help to give us a start. Yesterday I baptized a man who has been a believer in the Latter Day work for a number of years; others are believing, and many are reading the tracts I have distributed, but whether they have courage to obey the truth, time must tell. So far the people have paid for the hall. I am making an effort to get places to preach, in different parts of the island, but cannot tell as yet whether I will succeed.

The brethren are well bodily, and I think spiritually too; but there is everything to discourage and but very little so far to encourage them. Faith, hope, and charity are surely needed here, if anywhere, and besides that a good portion of the "patience of Job."

Yours in hope of success,

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 17.

Editors Herald:—Expecting to see Bro. Wight and family embark for America, I took sailing vessel from Tuncurry. Head winds and rough seas were encountered, and I arrived too late, after having been four days on the sea. If all went well, you have had the privilege of extending the hand of welcome ere you receive this.

Being district president I have been visiting and instructing branches. From here I visited Hamilton and Wallsend last week. I found them desirous of advancing according to the same Spirit that moves the church at home. It is natural to hold onto old ideas and errors in church practice, but I trust they will not be too tenacious. Perhaps, if I were an older man, my advice would carry more weight to some. "Old men for counsel," you know.

Two noble souls, man and wife, came through inclement weather last Sunday and applied for baptism here. Bro. Kaler officiated. Sydney now numbers twenty-seven, and one or two others are in view. This is the result of past labor. We have no hall here at present, owing to unfavorable conditions. The burden falls on a few who are not prepared to bear it. We are thinking of trying the country for awhile, which we may do soon.

It has required over a month's correspondence and delay to become qualified to celebrate marriages in New South Wales. Have succeeded at last. This week, my name, with that of church, appears in the government Gazette as a registered minister. Hard times do not seem to decrease Cupid's business. I have two or three matrimonial knots to tie.

A PLEA FOR THE ELDERS.

There are now two representative bodies in session in Sydney: The Presbyterian General assembly of Australia, and the Wesleyan Conference. The latter is dealing with the question of the unemployed. The ex-president, Rev. J. E. Moulton, maintains that "it is not for the church collectively to attempt to deal with the unemployed question. It is dangerous to touch it, for the church does not understand sociology, and more harm than good might be done." Rev. Maddern wondered why, as a church they had been charged with "other worldliness." Their hymn books certainly gave color to the accusation, for only one or two hymns in the book referred to this world. Another minister thought it would be "a cold day for Methodism when the church says she has nothing to do with the unemployed question." Another thought it their duty as ministers not only to save souls, but the men also who have souls. Another asked, could they reasonably think that it was their duty to initiate some experiment in sociology, when experts in social science are at their wits' end?

To me this last is a sorry admission; the church is not even on a par, in wisdom, with the world; in matters vital, too. But the cause of all this discussion by the churches is the demand everywhere made that the church and its ministers take up the matter and exhibit a little more practical Christianity by relieving the prevailing distress. They threaten to desert if Christians do not bring about better legislation. On the other hand when "Christian electoral leagues" are formed and some minister "runs" for Parliament, all sorts of fun is made of him and them by the worldly-minded. The Wesleyan Church has inaugurated village settlements in Victoria for the unemployed.

The query has presented itself to me. What is the position of the Reorganized Church on this matter? Have we anything better to offer than they? As far as our past record is concerned, no one can charge us with other worldliness, for we teach a literal second advent and literal heaven to be upon earth. Since in America, as well as in all the world, this unemployed question is the "question of the hour" and we must take a position in accordance with truth and revelation, it may be well to think upon it and be prepared to take a tenable and divinely authorized position before the world.

A bomb exploded—a theological bomb—in the Presbyterian Assembly when Moderator McInnes in his opening address advocated some of the views of the higher criticism. The plenary inspiration of the Scriptures is very strongly adhered to in this country, and to have their moderator say there are verbal errors in the good old book is blasphemy. It has caused quite a flutter in the assembly, and a subsequent discussion through the daily papers.

Zion's light "bursting from afar" is sending a ray or two over to this distant country; but from observation, so far, I believe it has not all dawned here yet, either in the true fold or in the minds of men outside. I shall be glad to see the midday. Hopefully,

EDITORS HERALD:—I noticed an article in your issue of December 16, 1893, over the signature of T. F. Stafford, under the title or caption of "Laying on of hands," that I think should be replied to. I do not enter this examination of the brother's article as a controversialist, nor for the sake of argument, but to see if the brother's numerous quotations and proof texts will bear the forced application, the unqualified interpretation that the article under examination would imply. The first text cited is Mark 16: 18:—

They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

The brother then adds, "It does not read, may recover, but shall recover." Now while I truly believe just what the text says, yet I need not necessarily believe that all shall or will recover unto whom God's elders shall administer.

But who is it that shall lay their hands on the sick? Is it the elders? The text does not say so. The ruling of the church, with which I agree, says that it is the elders, but the text says that it is those who believe and obey the gospel.

Now why I do not necessarily believe that all are, or were, in the days of Christ and the apostles healed unto whom they administered, is from the promise couched in the text quoted:—

They shall lay hands on the sick.

And the injunction or permit in James 5:14:—

Call for the elders of the church.

Then certainly it was the privilege if not the duty of every saint when sick to call for the elders; and if the elders never made a failure in that day those saints would many of them be alive to-day, if not suddenly cut off. Need I tell you why the Saints in Peter and Paul's time would not have died when life is so desirable, and death such an unwelcome visitor to the most of us, if all that was necessary was to call for the elders? Were I to criticise the administrators of this ordinance because failures (as the brother calls it) do occur, I should want to be sure of two things; first, that I had never made any failures; and second, that I had the promise of the Master that no failures should occur as long as I walked in harmony with the gospel.

The brother, after quoting James 5: 14 and commenting on the same, then adds, "One matter of importance comes to my mind just now, in the case of Achan and his plunder hid in his tent, how God punished the entire camp of Israel till the sin of Achan was found out and he punished." I fail to see the application here, or what bearing Achan's case has to the failures of the elders to heal the sick with his quotation from James 5: 14-16 as the promise there was (the conditions of course being complied with), that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up;" also that their sins should be forgiven them, while Achan (with his entire family) after his confession had to suffer death.

Here the children's teeth were set on edge because of the grapes that Achan ate; while in the gospel economy the soul that sins reaps the punishment. He next refers to Peter and John's healing the lame man when going into the temple, and then asks the question, "What did he (Peter) have to enable him to work this miracle? He had the Spirit of God and faith sufficient for the blessing on the lame man." I read in Acts 3: 12, that Peter denies its being by their (Peter and John's) power (faith) or holiness that they healed the lame man; but he says in verse 16 that it was the faith that was resident in the lame man, that brought the blessing. It was the same with the lame man that Paul healed. Paul perceived that the lame man had faith to be healed. (Acts 14:9.)

But have there not been equally as great miracles wrought by the elders in the name and power (authority) of Jesus in this dispensation as there was eighteen hundred years ago? Witness Jared Carter commanding that lame man, old Father Tanner, who had been a cripple so many years, in the name of Jesus Christ to throw down his crutches and to walk; and blessed be God, that command was not uttered in vain. Witness again his coming home from a mission, where he had been engaged in the service of the Master, and taking up the corpse of his dead boy and pleading with the Lord to give him back his boy. That boy is now an old man living in De Kalb, Illinois. There are to-day living witnesses of that transaction.

Again, the brother writes, "We cannot deny that we are doing our share towards filling the graveyards. Every Herald announces the death of some. Is it possible the Lord wills the death of these?" Unfortunately for us, in this investigation concerning the failure of our elders to always heal the sick, we have no account that there was a weekly journal published by the saints (or church) eighteen hundred years ago in which there was a column consecrated to those who were called to mourn the departure of those who were near and dear to them by the ties of kindred, or of the gospel; as we have.

But we are forced to believe from the reading of 1 Cor. 11:30, also 1 Tim. 5:23 that there were failures in apostolic times; for why drink wine if there was no failure to heal the sick in that day? Then there was Paul's companion and laborer in the ministry, Epaphroditus, who was sick, and who came so near dying that Paul charged the Saints to be very careful of him as he was still, as it appears, very feeble. See Philippians 2:25-30. But, unfortunately for us, in the above references we have no proof that they complied with the injunction given in James 5:14. So that while the brother, impliedly at least, asserts there were no failures in that day, we have nothing to prove to the contrary. Neither can we for the same reason prove that there might not have been failures in Jesus' day, where it says that he could do no mighty works save to heal a few sick folks; and this on account of their unbelief. See Mark 6:5. Query: Did anybody in those days have faith enough to call on Jesus, but not faith enough to be healed, as some have in our day to call for the elders and still remain sick? and if so was the fault or failure in Jesus or in the sick?

It would seem that such might have been the case from the question that he asked the two blind men. See Matthew 9:28. For this reason the Lord gave his servants power over diseases of every kind through faith in his name, so that Satan could not laugh at the failures of his servants to heal the sick and then gloat over his conquests.

Is not this tantamount to saying that there were no failures of God's servants—those whom he had given power over disease of every kind to heal the sick? The brother in his closing paragraph acknowledges that the former day Saints are all dead. Query: Does Satan gloat over the conquests of those Saints?

Now, as to what the brother says in connection with "laying on of hands," concerning long prayers, and repetition of words, and calling over the name of Jesus so often, I will only refer the reader to the prayer of King David, 2 Sam. 7:18-29; also the prayer of King Solomon, 1 Kings, 8:22-54. See how often the name of God or other appellation referring to him is called over. For the same purpose read Alma's prayer, Book of Mormon, page 256:98-110; the prayer of the prophet Zenas, page 260:168-170; then Nephi's prayer, 360:13-19. I quote from the large edition of the Book of Mormon.

The brother's application of Amos 3:7, making it apply where, and, as he tries to, we think is rather a forced application of that text, and for want of space, we will let it pass. What we have written on this subject has been with the best of feelings to all and not for the purpose of finding fault, nor to controvert the brother's article in a spirit of unfriendly criticism. I know that the gospel is true; I know that the gifts of the gospel are with the Saints; and that God is at the helm of this latter-day work.

As ever, in hopes of eternal life,

ON THE LABOR QUESTION.

MUCH has been said and written on the labor question, and more especially so when there have been labor troubles in some part of the land; but with all that has been said and written, there is yet much that can be said and written, and as a laborer I have thought to write and state that side of the case as I have seen and heard.

Ever since the exile from Eden man has had to labor, and nothing can be obtained for the use of mankind without care and labor. We may have fertile fields and many broad acres for our possessions, but they must be ploughed, seed sown, weeds destroyed, and crops harvested before we can receive any benefits from them. We may be in possession of great banks of clay or great fields of coal, but they are useless to us until subdued by labor; the clay must be dug, tempered, moulded, dried, and burned before we can have brick; the brick must be hauled and laid together in lime before we can have church, house, or other brick buildings; the rock must be quarried, and coal dug, or wood cut, before we can have lime to make mortar; and thus we may reason and write whole pages to show the plain fact—that all we have and own of things that come by human industry are ours because we ourselves or some one else have made them so by labor. There is an idea abroad in the land that the capitalist is the man who sets the wheels of labor in motion, and that labor could do nothing without money; so that the man with the money is considered the great one, and the question is often asked, What would workmen do without the capitalist? but the question, What would the capitalist do without the workmen? is just as worthy of consideration.

The old song sings:—

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Where was the blood of the gentleman.

Where was the capitalist when Noah built the ark? where was he when Jared and his brother with their friends left the tower of Babel for the promised land? where was he when Lehi and his family left Jerusalem for America? Perhaps he came with the pilgrim fathers, and finding he could not make slaves of the red men, and that there were few white slaves, he had to import black ones; and since then he has had great success, for now he owns all the coal, iron, and mineral fields, mines, mills, and factories, the houses the workmen live in; and in many places supplies him with his bread at the price he pleases, and pays him what wages he thinks proper. The laws are all in his favor; if the laborer works peaceably on the conditions named all is well, but if not he may be turned out of his rented house in three days, at best in six weeks except in extreme cases of sickness, in short, what rights has the workman that an employer is bound to respect? Capitalists claim the right to combine; they have been doing so for the last twenty years, so that to-day they are able to dictate to laborers their wages, and to consumers the price they must pay. To listen to the talk of capital and his friends, he is always law-abiding, and the laborer is the law-breaking, rebellious one. I once lived in a State where the powers that be made a law for weekly pays to workmen, and that coal diggers should have pay for coal dug before it passed over a screen; the papers of both parties stated the law had passed, it was to take effect the following August, and the editors praised it up as a good law for workmen. That was seven years ago, but so far the law never has been obeyed. This is but a sample of many I could show up.

It has been said on good authority that the capitalist has such a strong hold in the lawmaking of our land that all law is in his favor. I do know that after years of striving workmen have few laws to assist them, and much law has been so fixed by capital and his friends that it has been fought out for years in the courts and then declared unconstitutional; and as law now is no poor man can take advantage of it as it requires too much money. The rich man can wear and does wear him out and makes him glad to give up. Even if his cause is just he must compromise as the rich man says.

There is considerable said about arbitration, and of late of compulsory arbitration. This would be interesting; supposing it was so, what then? For how long would the decisions of the courts last? and on what plan would the disputants be compelled to arbitrate? On the old plan of profit and loss arbitration has failed because the employer could always show by his books he was making no profit, but oftentimes at prevailing prices was working at a loss; so labor must submit. I know of one State where the coal miners doubted the books of the company and sent a committee of investigation to learn the rate of prices along the railroad wherever the company sold coal, but that committee was never permitted to make a public statement as they were always bought by the head manager of the company. This was done so repeatedly that the workmen gave up the investigation though it had been tried time and again for years, and enough leaked out privately to show that the company's statements of their books were not correct; and the worst thing about it all was that the men sent were those of good moral character, some of them religious men, pillars in the churches, strong temperance men, some of them prohibitionists. The result of the whole thing was a good deal of cursing about religious men and religion in general, and the question is often asked, If such men as these will betray us, whom shall we trust? As the thing now stands the companies, as a rule, have it all their own way; at some time of the year most convenient to themselves they present the workmen with a scale of prices as a rule for one year; they tell them they must accept and put their names to this scale, if not they will shut down the works. If the men accept the conditions offered all goes ahead as before; if not the men are said to be on a strike, the work is stopped, and the men starved into subjection.

The present troubles between capital and labor are not so much against the rate of wages as against united labor; they know too well that they are never safe if men are united in a combination to stand together in resistance to the tyranny and oppression of capital. It is easy to deal with the individual, needy and without friends. Who can blame workmen for so uniting? since it can be proven that companies have time and again broken to the individual the promises they made to the body, and that they will not respect their own promises unless compelled to do so by the body. It is indeed an unfortunate fact that since it pleases capital to combine against labor, there seems to be nothing left for labor but to combine against capital. Among all the plans that have been proposed to better the present condition of things I have yet to see or hear advocated the plan of "put yourself in his place." Yes, why not try it, ye friends of capital! Just try and carry the burdens that capital has laid on the back of labor for one year, and I will vouch for it that many of you will sing a new song that will have no uncertain sound. Begin in the lowest grades among the low, rough, ignorant miners, descend to the hell of the deep sunk mines, and wield the ringing tempered steel amidst powder smoke, fiery gases, and other bad airs, sometimes with water pouring down on your back all day long, at other times be in peril from a bad roof and other dangers for days, weeks, and months together; always remembering that your task each day must be done else your wages are cut, and if you dare to grumble you will be told, "If you don't like it you can quit; plenty men for your place." If anything goes amiss, whether through your fault or not, just listen to the cursing, but don't speak back; the chances are if you do so, you are dismissed right then. Nay, do not seek to defend yourself, the boss is always right, you are always wrong, he knows it all, is wise and intelligent, you are low, stupid, ignorant, and know nothing; so just act like as do the mules, be humble, patient, submissive, take all the beatings you get in hard language; but never speak back. You would not like it. Well, I never knew anyone who did; but I have known many fellowmen who have endured such things, and are doing so to-day.

Much has been said about ironworkers who would not work at the wages offered, but we have yet to learn of any of the professors who have talked so much about it making any attempt to do such work even for such good wages. What about the poor fellow who works hard all day for one dollar and twenty-five or fifty cents? Try their place for awhile, buy yourself clothes and shoes for such rough work, take sickness and enforced idleness into account, go buy where the company oftentimes compels their workmen to spend their earnings, and learn what it is to keep a wife and family on such wages. Yes, try the real practical part, ye wiseheads, and please tell workmen the results. I am satisfied that the greatest sins against workmen to-day are overwork and long hours; and that capital has laid on the back of labor burdens that itself could not bear and would die of starvation if compelled to bear them. There is no doubt that many of the rich have obtained their money honestly, and some are rich through their own labor and skill; and yet after twenty-five years of observation I can hardly tell of a rich man to-day who was not helped to become such by the aid of some monied friend who came to his assistance just at the right moment, when he saw his opportunity and was able to take advantage of things for his good; while many have failed who were just as skilled and knowing, saw the chance, but had not the wherewith to take the advantage. Years ago I knew of a man who went into corn dealing, built corn cribs at many stations on a railroad, bought corn and stored it, borrowed money from friends and banks—corn was cheap, fifteen to eighteen cents a bushel, for two years, third year corn crop failed, he sold out at such a good price he became rich; and this is like many others who have been able to take advantage of other men's necessities and so are rich by honest and lawful means because the condition and usages of the present civilization have made it so.

I knew of another man who owned a section of good farming land underlaid with a four feet vein of good coal, he had a mine opened in good working order, and there was a railroad built through the land. Two men persuaded the owner that it would be good for him for them to go into partnership with him, he consented and in a year's time he had nothing; his partners had legally and lawfully cheated him out of all he had. The history of many of the rich men of the land to-day is that the foundation of their riches was laid in just such cheating acts as this; yet with all that can be told of how men became rich it is not the individual rich man, but the combinations of rich men that labor has the most to complain against. The rich who own a line of railroad through two or more States to some seaport and who through their servants dictate rates, prices, and wages, and rule and control all they can along that line of road, making a monopoly of everything to their own advantage no matter what means may be used to that end. Or it may be a combination of millers who have agreed to pay just so much for wheat and sell flour at rates to please themselves, or, to use a common saying, all the trade will bear. Wheat goes up when it gets into the grain buyers' hands. I have known flour to advance fifty cents a hundred pounds because the millers agreed to raise the price; and once to go up two dollars a hundred pounds in a week and remain at such prices till next harvest because there was going to be a war in Russia that has yet to be. Much is said about the sufferings of the poor when there are labor troubles, but never a word when things like this are done.

It is said that the government of the United States is a government of the people, by the people, for the people; it would be nearer the truth to say that it is a government of the strong, by the strong, for the strong. Why so? Because they alone are protected; government says by law what the wages of its president, senators, congressmen, soldiers, sailors, and others of its employees shall be; the States say what rates the money lenders can claim as interest on that money, and manufacturing companies are protected by tariff laws; but when it comes to protection for workmen and their wages we are told that government must not, cannot do anything by law to fix their wages. They must be free to sell their labor when and wheresoever they choose which simply means, "Take what employers please to give you for your labor. You are poor and needy, why should you have rights?" And this is just how it is to-day, let the rich and strong disguise it as they may. It is true a good many well meaning men think all such acts right and just, and don't believe half they hear about the wrongs of labor, and this is more so with preachers, ministers, editors, professors, and reporters, for the simple reason that human nature is as a rule deceptive; and when such men are around the bosses, superiors, managers, and their friends are on their good behavior and to such are kind, obliging, and polite, telling their side of the story in a very plausible way. Besides they sometimes give freely to the minister and help the church with much financial aid. Why, then, should they be considered anything but good men? To the poor, low, degraded laborer from whom they have nothing to fear they are far different men; and as a rule those that make a profession of religion are the most oppressive, unkind, and abusive, and can curse as loud and long, and take the name of God and Christ in vain as often as the best of them that do and say such things. It is true the church people won't believe it, but how true it is—a little money covereth a multitude of sins.

Working men should never strike, it is the greatest of foolishness, and is almost always the result of anger, and men when angry lose their reason and workmen have so little of this they can't afford to lose any. Through an experience and observation of twenty-five years I have known but few strikes that were not commenced in anger, the employer desired to make some change in prices or the present order of things, the workmen concluded they would not consent, it was a grievous outrage, they were now suffering all they could bear, they cursed and swore they would not stand it; so they stopped work by rule of the majority, the minority must obey even if club force and threatenings of vengeance must be used. Sometimes strikes are of the most foolish kind. I have known a difference of forty cents a week between employer and employed cause a strike for six months; and even after a strike had been commenced and the cooler heads would try to reason with their leaders, they would admit they had done wrong to strike; but would reply, "Now we are in it we mean to fight it out to the bitter end," which meant as long as they could hold all the men together; for as it almost always happens there is soon much discontent made manifest in the ranks, some loud grumbling, a meeting called, and in spite of many disputes a majority agrees to go to work.

As a rule the losses from strikes are reckoned in dollars, but this is the least of the reckoning. I have known the good relations existing for years between a company and its workmen to be destroyed by a strike and nothing remain but bitterness of feeling, and kindness and good fellowship give way to tyranny and oppression. They were no longer friends, but the most bitter of enemies to each other and so remain in fact. The worst side of human nature is always seen in a strike; for even after the foolishness of the strike has been admitted and the men suffering from the results, they oftentimes take delight in the grim satisfaction that if they are suffering the employer's works are all going to wreck and his business to ruin. Workmen should never strike no matter what the trouble or provocation may be; they are too dependent, the employer has too many resources, besides, if workmen would act on the principal of agitation, or in other words keep talking and asking ever in a good-natured way, they would be far more successful; but this is a way that needs reason, wisdom, and good judgment, a something which workmen seem to be losing more and more every day.

There is one thing that cannot be disputed: capital has the right to employ or dismiss as it pleases. This is the law and usage of the present civilization. Then, why should laboring men dispute or contend with capital since it has all the advantages in the right of possession and dictation? Whether men may labor in mill, mine, factory, printing room, or the many other arts of labor, they must all live by the produce of the soil. Then, why not combine and raise the means that would make many idle workmen tillers of the fields? There are millions of acres of land yet to be reclaimed from the wilds of nature that could be made to produce in abundance. Some of it can be had free as homesteads, much of it can be had very cheap, companies could be formed and land bought up and converted into smiling fields and beautiful homes; and what workmen spend in labor agitations would do it, even if they understood nothing of farming men could be hired to teach them, they could become grain raisers, fruit growers, or flock masters just as the nature of the land would admit and soon be able not only to help themselves to honest independence through industrious labor, but could help many of their fellow beings to like conditions. Neither need they fear the lack of each other's society; twenty acres skillfully managed would be all they would want, and so live near enough for good fellowship.

If workmen would act together to such ends, in five years time there would be a labor question of a different kind; the employer would be seeking the workman and have some better understanding about the price of his labor; as it is to-day there is far too often two men looking for the one place, so they are glad to take what the employer may be pleased to give. Agriculture is the most healthful, peaceful, and independent occupation of man, and all men who desire to live such a life should be helped with the means to begin and encouraged to become successful, and so be helped to independence and usefulness. Workmen, why not consider this plan, form colonies, help yourselves by helping each other? Years ago I knew of some poor Scotch coal diggers who formed a company and sent four of their number out to Manitoba and sustained them there till they were able to raise a crop. This was saved to help sustain the rest and by working together, they each and all have obtained a home of their own, not only benefiting themselves but also their children. Workmen, everywhere, stop contending with your employers, go and do likewise. Here also is the opportunity of the rich who would wish to be truly benefactors of humanity and leave for themselves a name for good among their fellow mortals. And why not government lend a hand, it has lent its millions to railroads, and not so long ago, either, it donated millions to build a world's fair; but when has it ever lent to the poor? Why not try this and help them to subdue the land and beautify the earth with smiling, happy homes? What if it did lose some of the investment? there would be gains in the increase of taxes and the produce of the land. Words fail us to tell what could be done, what might be done, if men were wise and loved each other; and this is the keynote to the whole question. The employers are the responsible parties; for they are in possession, and all their plans and schemes will fall to the ground till they learn the golden rule—not only to say but to obey its teachings—and remember the declaration of the founders of the republic, "that all men are created equal," and that on these simple rules hang the safety of this great nation; for obedience to them will bring peace on earth, good will to men.

"MR. HAWEIS AMONG THE MORMONS."

BEING interested in everything that tends to confirm our faith, I herewith present the following extract taken from the London edition of the Review of Reviews for January. It is as follows:—

In the course of his American tour last autumn Rev. H. R. Haweis has visited Utah and conversed with leading members of the Mormon community. Fresh from these experiences, he generously essays in the Contemporary Review to vindicate the real character of the Latter Day Saints, their founder and their faith, against the resolute prejudices of popular ignorance. As he says, "No people have been more belied and less understood."

PLURAL MARRIAGE.

He points out that plural marriage "was no part of original Mormonism, nor any inseparable adjunct of it." The Mormons "believed they had a mission to found a nation of righteousness unto the Lord. They were driven into the wilderness a mere handful of exiles surrounded by wild Indians. There seemed no way of protecting the numbers of poor women who joined their ranks except by marrying them and providing for their children. . . . They believed that under these circumstances plural marriage had been revived by divine revelation in their favor."

WHY MORMONS WERE HATED.

After telling the story of Joseph Smith with characteristic vividness Mr. Haweis asks, "Was he an imposter?" He answers, "The phenomenal foundations of Mormonism, in fact, differ, if at all, only in eccentricity and degree from the psychic phenomena which accompany all religions revivals from the days of the apostles to the Anabaptists of Munster and the Irvingite tongues. If a religion is to be known by its fruits it would be difficult to ascribe the faith and works of the Mormon to a totally impure source or a grossly immortal prophet." The Mormons "may have been ridiculed for their superstitions, but they were chiefly persecuted for their virtues." They were, he points out, "the earliest openly avowed abolitionists;" they were "advanced Spiritualists;" they refused to place corrupt men in political office—three sins then unpardonable amongst a people who tolerated prostitution but could not abide polygamy.

Yours for truth,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

[MR. HAWEIS might have been aided in his conclusions from his study of Mormonism, had he taken cognizance of the fact that the men of marriageable age were in excess of the marriageable women from the start of the settlement in Utah; and there was no surplus of "poor women" to marry into plurality.—ED.]

DIED.

BADHAM.—At the family residence in Los Angeles, California, April 2, 1894, Frank C. Badham, aged 24 years, 2 months, and 10 days. He was the eldest son of Elder James Badham; was born in Shenandoah, Iowa, and some eleven years ago came to this State with his parents. He was a young man of sterling integrity, a man in the fullest sense of the word, despising everything that was not pure and noble. He had by his life made many friends and died honestly mourned and respected by all who had known him. In July of '93 he united with the church and died firm in the faith. It can truly be said of him that his end was peace, for he fell asleep in Jesus. Funeral services at the house by Elders Harris and Baly.

LOCKLING.—At the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. L. Merchant, Thurza, wife of the late A. W. Lockling, aged 85 years, 5 months, 17 days. She lost her eyesight during the winter, but her mind was as active as when she was young. She was born in Hinsdale, Cheshire county, New Hampshire; married to A. W. Lockling in Lindon, Vermont, August 12, 1827; moved to Harrison county, Iowa, in the fall of 1851. Four children mourn her departure. She was followed to the grave by many of her friends and neighbors, among whom were many old settlers of the fifties, who endured with her the hardships of frontier life. She was baptized into the Latter Day Saints Church in the fall of 1835.

Far down life's path, and full of years,
God called her from this vale of tears.
To meet with those who've gone before,
And rest upon the shining shore.

Yes, rest has come to her at last,
This life with all its trials past,
To rest in that eternal home
Where pain and death can never come.

We would not wish her back again,
To live life o'er and suffer pain;
But on that fair and peaceful shore
We hope to meet when life is o'er.

Funeral sermon at the home by Elder A. M. Fyrando, April 9, 1894.

PAWNBROKING IN CHINA.

A financial contemporary gives, under some reserve, the following description of the appearance of trade unionism among the pawnbrokers of China. One of that body began to charge his customers 16 per cent instead of the usual 24. Naturally he did a roaring trade, to the dismay of his colleagues, who carried him before the Mandarin of the province, with bitter complaints of unfair competition. The Mandarin, however, commended the pawnbroker for his charity and good feeling in only charging 16 per cent, but pointed out that the charge was quite illegal. He therefore directed that in future he should charge the customary 24 per cent, of which he was only to keep 16 for himself, while the other 8 was to be distributed in charity, in consonance with the pawnbroker's benevolent idea.—London Globe.

THAT $50,000 color press of the Chicago INTER OCEAN is being utilized in a unique and instructive manner by that great newspaper. It is being used to print a "Little Paper for Little People" with four full pages in colors, and beginning with Sunday, April 29th, this paper will contain the first installment of a Children's story, written especially for it by a Chicago newspaper man, Sam Clover. A unique feature of this story is that it is to be named by Chicago school children after reading.

This with the "Musical Supplement," a new art feature, makes THE SUNDAY INTER OCEAN a most interesting and welcome visitor for every member of the family.

It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844. Muslin binding 70

THE USE AND COST OF STIMULATING BEVERAGES.

UNDER this head, the American Grocer, New York, April 4, publishes a paper by the editor, Mr. F. N. Barnett, in which he tabulates the costs and consumption of wines, spirits, beer, tea, and coffee, in the United States, and shows, by his figures, that while the consumption of tea and coffee and light wines is practically at a standstill, the per capita consumption of alcoholic and malt liquors is a steadily growing one.

The following simple table places in forcible array comparative figures showing the per capita use of stimulating beverages:—

Year.	PER CAPITA CONSUMPTION.
	Spirits. Gals.	Wines. Gals.	Beer. Gals.	Tea. Gals.	Coffee. Gals.
1893.....	1.51	.45	16.08	10.56	14.00
1892.....	1.50	.44	15.10	10.96	16.34
1891.....	1.42	.45	15.28	10.32	13.60
1890.....	1.40	.46	13.67	10.64	13.32
1889.....	1.32	.56	12.72	10.32	15.58
1888.....	1.26	.61	12.80	11.20	11.58
1887.....	1.21	.55	11.23	11.92	14.50

In the above table the per capita quantity of tea and coffee consumed is reduced to its equivalent in infusion, on the basis that one pound of roasted coffee-bean makes two gallons of infusion, and one pound of tea eight gallons. An allowance of fifteen per cent is made from the quantity of green coffee used for the loss in weight which results from the process of roasting.

It is estimated that twelve per cent of the quantity of spirits withdrawn for consumption is used in the arts, deducting which we have the following table representing the quantity of all liquors drunk as a beverage, and which, figured at the retail cost, makes the nation's drink bill as follows:—

	Gallons.	Per Gal.
Spirits, domestic.....	86,418,465	$4.50	$388,883,048
Spirits, imported, (including brandy, cordials, etc.).....	1,307,422	*10,912,154
Wines, domestic.....	26,391,235	2.00	52,782,470
Wines, imported.....	5,596,584	4.00	22,386,336
Beer, domestic.....	1,071,183,327	.50	535,591,913
Beer, imported.....	3,362,509	1.25	4,203,136
			$1,014,759,057

* Import cost, $5,082,515. † Import cost, $14,831,988.
‡ Import cost, $2,782,630.

Last year the total consumption of tea was 88,131,088 pounds. At a fair average retail price, forty cents per pound, we have $35,252,435 as the cost of tea.

Coffee was the popular beverage until distanced by beer in 1890. The consumption based on net imports of the raw bean has been as follows:—

COFFEE CONSUMPTION.
	Per Capita. Pounds.		Per Capita. Pounds.
1887.....	8.53	1891.....	7.99
1888.....	6.81	1892.....	9.61
1889.....	9.16	1893.....	8.24

or about 560,000,000 pounds, which, at an average price of twenty-five cents per pound, gives $140,000,000 as the cost of coffee.

During the year ending June 30, 1893, the inhabitants of the United States spent for stimulating beverages, including tea and coffee, the sum of $1,190,617,281, or an average of $17.77 per capita. The entire expense of the United States Government per capita was $6.69, of which liquor paid $2.5.

Last year the United States Government collected a revenue from domestic spirits of $94,720,261; from beer, $32,548,893; from imported liquors, $9,256,617; total revenue from alcoholic stimulants, $136,525,861, or nearly 30 per cent of the total revenue. These figures explain the enormous leverage wielded by the liquor interests in national affairs.

The character of a people, says Mr. Barrett, is greatly influenced by the sort of beverages used. In the growing use of alcoholic stimulants there is undoubtedly a partial solution for many of the evils which have become so pronounced within recent years, most prominent of which is the influence of the saloon in politics and the liquor interest in legislation. The problem of to-day is how to check the drift toward alcohol, and its steady displacement by such mild stimulants as tea and coffee.—Literary Digest.

France is the only European country which has to-day fewer able-bodied men than it had 30 years ago.

HOW OLD IS THE EARTH?

THIS is a subject of very general interest to speculative minds, and one that has engaged the especial attention both of physicists and geologists. Sir William Thomson, now Lord Kelvin, was among the earliest to approach the problem, and he based his calculations on the rate of the earth's loss of heat by radiation, and concluded that the time which has elapsed since the consolidation of the surface of the globe, ranges somewhere between twenty million and four hundred million years. Another eminent physicist, Prof. Geo. H. Darwin, computes from the influence of tidal friction in retarding the earth's rotation that probably fifty-seven million years have elapsed since the moon's mass was shed from the revolving molten earth, long before the formation of its crust. Prof. Guthrie Tait affirms that approximately ten million years are as much as the physicist can allow to the geologist. Geologists generally have been disposed to assume a far longer period, basing their calculation on the present rate of denudation of river beds, the erosion of land surfaces, and the thickness of the sedimentary rocks. The figures thus reached range from twenty-eight millions to several hundred million years for the earth's age. But while the estimates for the whole period vary so greatly, there is a fairly general agreement as to the relative ages of the several geologic periods. The ratios reached allow to the recent or quaternary period one sixty-fourth part of all time since the beginning of the Cambrian period. In the current number of The Popular Science Monthly, Prof. Warren Upham weighs the evidence on both sides, and assuming one hundred thousand years for the whole quaternary, and basing his calculations of the duration of preceding ages on the changes of fauna and flora, he reaches from two to four million years for the probable duration of the tertiary period, and about a hundred millions for the deposition of the stratified rocks. These calculations may be open to very important revision in the future, but as Professor Upham remarks, this limit of probable geologic duration seems fully worthy to take the place of the once almost unlimited assumptions of geologists and writers on the evolution of life.

The number of stars visible to the naked eye on a clear night is about 7,000. By the use of the Lick telescope 100,000,000 may be seen.

The decision of Judge Philips, of the United States Circuit Court, Western District of Missouri, Kansas City, awarding title and possession of the Temple Lot to the Reorganized Church as the true successor of the original Church of Latter Day Saints organized April 6, 1830, and setting forth the position of the Utah Church and other factions as departures from the true faith, and without right to the name or property of the Original Church.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preëxistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

THE COUNCIL.

IN compliance with the late commandment the Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Bishopric met in council on the 20th of April, after the adjournment of conference, and continued until the 25th, taking into consideration many things of more or less importance, upon which it was thought differences of opinion existed, and examining them carefully with the desire manifested by all to reach just conclusions, the result of which counselling is given elsewhere; and will, we believe, be productive of much good among the Saints everywhere.

The idea has obtained in some places and with many excellent Saints, that there were great differences of opinion existing between the leading quorums, such differences it was thought amounting to grave dissensions; and apprehensions were felt that serious disturbances, if not division must ensue. We are gratified to be able to write that the most serious difficulties were met and patiently considered and overcome, one by one, until great unanimity of understanding was reached in the "spirit of mutual forbearance and concession," as had been so opportunely advised.

We trust that no other, or more serious cause for the disturbance of confidence and esteem may ever again occur; though so long as men are fallible, and human wisdom is exercised in human weakness and subject to the bias of human will and fear, it is probable that troubles will occur; indeed it is said that "it must needs be that offenses shall come; but woe to them by whom they come;" which must be understood, evidently, as meaning woe to him who causes trouble without a just cause.

We bespeak for all the ministry a better reception, if such can be possible, than they have had for some time; and hope the Saints will put aside their fears and anxieties, entertained because of what may have foreboded injury, and turning to God with thankful hearts, give him praise for his watchful care over the church. Human wisdom at fault may rely on divine help, if the heart is right, the soul's desire being that the will of God should prevail. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

COLLEGE TALK.

THE late session of conference gave an opportunity for a renewal of effort to secure a college to be under the control of members of the church. The committee reported progress; that some forty acres of land lying near and adjacent to the town of Lamoni had been offered by Sisters M. Walker and M. Wickes and Bro. W. A. Hopkins; and that the committee had secured contracts for this land as a donation for the purpose of a building site. In this respect it is very sightly and lies quite near enough the business part of town to make it accessible. The site is high, and must be as healthy as any strictly inland site can be. It is high enough that there will be no stagnant water pools near the buildings; and to allow the sweeping winds to blow malarial exhalations away.

Thirty-five hundred dollars were subscribed in the last week of the conference, and a committee of the citizens of Lamoni appointed to circulate other lists.

It was thought that if there was a strong and united purpose manifested on the part of the citizens of Lamoni and vicinity, who must necessarily receive some benefit from the carrying on of an educational institution in the town, it would be taken as a token of good will toward the project, and rightfully encourage those living abroad from that place.

It is clear that there is need for an institution of the kind at some place where the moral influences exerted by the church are in the ascendancy; and where parents belonging to the church could feel a degree of confidence in sending their children, with the idea that they would be surrounded by an atmosphere of orderly sobriety and moral worth. Such is attainable at Lamoni, and at other places where the Saints have the balance of power in their hands.

The citizens of the town realize this moralizing element, and are willing to trust it. So if our brethren abroad who are able will put some dollars into such a movement, it will not be long now until we shall have a school that will be a credit to the people most largely represented at Lamoni.

It has been considered that it will be safest to begin with even a small number of students in a comparatively small building, paid for, than to build largely and be in debt for it.

What say you of the church away from this central seat of the Presidency, as Lamoni is now designated?

It has also been considered by the committee that it can be managed to a better advantage if the buildings can be secured by direct donations rather than by the stock plan; for the reason that if it can be done this way the administration of affairs can be safely kept in the control of a Board of Management chosen by the church from time to time, and thus provide against the possibility of such management falling into other hands. It is worth the trial, and the committee will make it.

The college subscriptions had reached the sum of $5,100.00, April 23, and lists were still being circulated. The Saints abroad should be ready to aid the movement.

TRACTS WANTED.

WE call the attention of all interested in the spread of gospel tidings by the means of tract distribution to the following:—

We want a fresh supply of well-written tracts on the following subjects; The Book of Mormon; Consciousness of the Spirit, or soul of man; Tithing; Apostasy; The Restoration; Baptism; The Angel's Message; The Kingdom of God; The Resurrection; The Laying on of Hands; What shall We Preach? The Two Covenants; The Judgment; The Millennium; and other kindred subjects connected with the work of the church.

It is provided that these tracts are to be submitted in manuscript to a committee of examination, and from the number written and sent to the committee for such examination, those deemed the best and most suitable will be selected and published. The committee will, of course, exercise their proper privilege to accept, or reject all or any of them; as it is intended to secure what shall be deemed best adapted to the work had in view, the dissemination of Gospel Truth through the printed word.

We invite all, especially the ministry who have some conception of what is needed in their fields, to put to their hands in this laudable effort. It cannot matter if a man does what lies in his power to do, making an honest endeavor in what he does, whether that effort should be better or worse than another's when examined by those whose duty it may be; so brethren, as Bro. Paul said,—

Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain.

Let all run, some will be crowned.

Send your manuscripts to President Joseph Smith, care of Herald Office, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa.

MISSIONARY WORK.

THE returns from the missionaries in the field the past year are very cheering. A net gain of some twenty-four hundred during the year, by baptisms, shows a commendable degree of activity on the part of the laborers, and a fostering care on the part of the Master, that are very satisfying to all.

As the elders turn their faces to their fields afresh, after the care and anxiety of the conference labors, the natural question, What of the harvest this year? occurs; and all must feel not only an additional degree of responsibility, but an increased fervor of desire that no helpful agency shall be overlooked, or neglected this year.

The list of active ministers is small compared with the great need for their labors, but it is large compared with the body which as a people is represented by them. It is but a handful sown among the struggling mass of people in the world. And though representing a hope that is magnificent, working in the interests of a Master who is wondrously munificent in resources and rewards, worshipping a God overshadowingly resplendent in power and glory, all can but feel the poverty of the effort we can make, even at the best we can do. Who then will withhold his labor, his care, his talents—whatever they may be, great or small. The hastening time is upon us; let us be up and be doing.

ADOPTION.

It is a day of some surprises; and none are more agreeable than those events taking place which indicate a disposition on the part of many to return to right ways of thought, and consequently right ways of living and doing.

Our religious contemporaries of the Utah faith seem to have found out of late that some of the ways followed by them in the past have been ways of error. For instance; President Wilford Woodruff and George Q. Cannon, in the late conference at Salt Lake City instructed their people in regard to the laws of adoption, referring to the practice of what has been called the patriarchal adoption of children and families, and the building up of the individual kingdom of men. The theory seems to have been so taught, traditionally, that every man gathered the idea that he had not only the privilege, but had the duty resting upon him to gather unto himself by adoption so many of his own and his neighbors' families, near and remote, as would constitute him a patriarch and establish his kingdom, or increase his personal importance as a ruler, to become, finally, a Savior; making a world, peopling it, redeeming it, and ruling over it as a God.

The theory is a pretty one, as some would portray it; but it lacks Scriptural sanction, except upon inferences finely drawn; and rests mainly upon traditional teaching more or less mythical, so far as we have searched for its proofs.

It now appears that the force of passing events, possibly the hand of the Lord in them, has compelled the recognition of some of the old time truths with which the church was at one time familiar, and should have remained so.

President Wilford Woodruff in his opening remarks at the late conference in Salt Lake City, said:—

After reading from the Doctrine and Covenants, he spoke upon the powers and responsibilities of the priesthood, and the salvation of the dead. We live in an important dispensation, in which the work of saving not only the living but the dead devolves upon us. There has been misunderstandings in reference to the law of adoption; children should be adopted by their parents rather than by others. The Lord had revealed his will on this subject, and it was required that sons should be adopted to their fathers, and they to their fathers, and so on, back as far as the chain could be carried. By living according to the revelations and laws of God the Latter Day Saints need not have any misunderstanding of the principles of the gospel; all could have revelations for their own guidance.

Following him, President George Q. Cannon discoursed thus on the same topic:—

President George Q. Cannon said: Every Latter Day Saint should feel thankful for the revelations imparted through President Woodruff. There was no binding eternal marriage except by his priesthood, and hence the marriages contracted by the world would end with death. The latter marriages could not extend to eternity, and men and women so united would after this life stand separate unless they were married by God's authority and for eternity as well as for this life. When the principle of adoption had been revealed, men sought without a proper understanding of it, to build up kingdoms to themselves by irregular means. Disunion resulted from this course, whereas a correct observance of all true principles would be signalized by union and harmony. God had ordained that each man should come through the lineage through which he had come, and this being so, who could slip and break the connections so ordained? If men should say: "I would rather be adopted by some great man in the church than to my father," those men are dishonoring the arrangements ordained of the Almighty. The Prophet Joseph highly honored his parents. All would in some way be connected with the prophet, and through him with the Son of God and so on back to Adam.

It is well that at so late a day there should be an earnest turning away from the errors of nearly half a century, and a return to those steadfast principles so urgently taught and insisted upon when the angel's message was new, and present inspiration not vitiated by the lusts of the flesh, and the desires for self-exaltation in material realms.

The church declared in 1835, some fifty nine years ago, that marriage contracts entered into before persons were baptized into the church, should be held sacred, and the bond be kept inviolate; but the carrying into effect of the perverted laws of patriarchal adoption, brought discontent and disunion, as now admitted by President Cannon. This admission comes late, but will have its weight in what may follow.

DISCUSSION.

By copies of the Tilbury, Ontario, Times, for April 13 and 20 we learn that a discussion is being held at this writing, (April 24,) between Bro. Arthur Leverton, and Rev. W. H. Cooper, of the Methodist Church.

Of this discussion the Times has the following:—

LATTER-DAYISM VS. METHODISM.

THE SUBJECTS SELECTED FOR THE LEVERTON-COOPER DEBATE.

Great interest is being manifested in the coming debate between Elder Leverton, of the Latter Day Saints, and Rev. W. H. Cooper, of the Methodist Church, which will begin on Wednesday next, 18th inst., and will be held in Anderson hall, commencing each evening at eight. After the opening prayer, each debater will speak twice each evening, the first speech of each to occupy forty-five minutes, and the second thirty minutes, thus giving each speaker one and one-fourth hours each evening, making a session of two and one half hours.

The propositions will be discussed in the order given below, and will occupy two evenings each:—

1.—The mode of Christian baptism is by immersion only. Elder Leverton affirms; Rev. Cooper denies.

2.—Infant baptism is of Bible authority. Rev. Cooper affirms; Elder Leverton denies.

3.—The immersion of the body in water is essential to salvation. Elder Leverton affirms; Rev. Cooper denies.

4.—The Book of Mormon is of divine origin and of equal authority with the Bible. Elder Leverton affirms; Rev. Cooper denies.

All are invited to attend, especially ladies. To defray the expense of hall rent, a small fee of five cents will be charged at the door.

At the close of the debate on the last evening, the audience will have the privilege of deciding by vote the merits of the debate.

The Leverton-Cooper debate commenced in Anderson hall on Wednesday evening to a crowded audience. The subject was the mode of baptism, and the general impression of the audience is that Mr. Cooper had the better of it, but then, of course, audiences are often prejudiced, and besides the debate is young yet. Both disputants ably handled their subject. The mode of baptism was to be concluded last night, and infant baptism is to be discussed to-night and to-morrow night. The audience was deeply interested and the meetings promise to be largely attended throughout. The discussion is worthy the attendance of anyone, and considerable light is thrown upon scriptural passages, Mr. Cooper especially going exhaustively into his subject. Lawyer Mills made an efficient chairman.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

It is a pitiable showing that follows; but who can look for better things under the rule of sensationalism in the large metropolitan cities and villages. Anything that will draw is tried; until nearly every device to fill the pews is exhausted, and the pews are empty.

It is now conceded, even by the brightest optimist, whose "face is always toward the rising sun," that church attendance is falling off not only in our cities, but in our rural population. Dr. Josiah Strong, in the New Era, informs us "that less than thirty per cent of our population are regular attendants upon church, that perhaps twenty per cent are irregular attendants, while fully one-half of the people of the United States, or more than 32,000,000, never attend any church, Protestant or Roman Catholic." He also states, as the result of careful investigation, "that church neglect among the poorer classes is rapidly increasing," while diligent inquiry among the leading churches of a number of cities elicited the fact that not one known as "a laboring man" was in attendance. The same appalling and ominous condition is found in the mother country where, according to Canon Farrar, "not three per cent of the working classes, who represent the great mass of the people, are regular or even occasional communicants." Then comes a census of church attendance in London proper, taken under circumstances that make the figures absolutely trustworthy:—

	Attendance.	Sittings.
St. Dunstan-in-the-East.....	17.....	700
St. Margaret Pattens.....	36.....	450
St. Swithin, Cannon street.....	15.....	300
St. Catherine Coleman.....	13.....	240
St. Edmund-the-King.....	31.....	200
St. Mary Woolnoth.....	10.....	650
St. Mary Abchurch.....	12.....	200
St. Stephen's, Walbrook.....	13.....	400
St. Andrew Undershaft.....	45.....	500
St. Catherine Cree.....	36.....	500
St. Helen, Bishopsgate.....	24.....	750
St. Peter-le-Poer.....	28.....	650

That is, there were 280 persons present in buildings that had 5,540 sittings, and the editor adds: "It is to be feared that there are churches and chapels, outside the boundaries of the city, which could tell nearly as woeful a tale."—Truth.

THE MOUND BUILDERS.

RESPECTFULLY referred to the committee on American Archæology:—

The Bureau of Ethnology, under the direction of Major Powell and Dr. Cyrus Thomas, has been for five years making special study of the mounds in the Mississippi Valley. Their elaborate report, soon to be published, will show that the evidence they have found leads the investigators to the belief that the mound builders were the progenitors of the modern Indians.—Scientific American, March 31, 1894.

ERRATUM.

IN HERALD for April 25, page 259, middle column, near the center of column, in that portion referring to the appeal presented by the Presidency for action of the High Council, it should read:—

An appeal from the action of the Little Sioux district, in the case of the Logan branch, had been received at two o'clock on April 6, the day conference convened, too late for the examination provided for in the law; the Presidency, therefore, reported the appeal making the statement that no action would be had by the High Council at this session, for the reason given, the lateness of its being placed in the hands of the Presidency.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. JULIA HUDLESON, Fox, Arapahoe county, Colorado, April:—

I have not heard a sermon for two years, but I still hold to the faith and trust in God to bear me up in all trials. I would like some of the ministry to call this way.

Sr. Nellie J. Bowker, Union, Oregon, April:—

We have been here two years and have not once seen the face of a Saint; and O, how we miss the Saints! The gospel has never been preached here. There was a revival here last winter and seventy-five converts were made to the churches. If there are any Saints in Seattle, Washington, I would be very glad if they would write to me, as I am thinking of locating there.

Sr. Rhoda Provost, Deckerville, Michigan, April:—

Elder David Smith is to debate with a prominent representative of the Disciple Church on the 8th of May. Bro. Smith has been preaching in this neighborhood to audiences of interested people.

Sr. Mary A. Asa, Jeffersonville, Illinois:—

The Herald and Ensign furnish all the preaching we get here.

Sr. Theresa Taddicken, secretary of Riverside Sunday school, St. Joseph, Missouri, April 16:—

Our school was organized April 1, 1894, by Bro. J. M. Terry, at Aspey mission, with Bro. P. Martin as superintendent. Our first session was held April 8. We feel confident that a good work will be done in it. Great interest is being taken by officers, teachers, and scholars. The room is kindly loaned us by Bro. Aspey.

Bro. R. M. Maloney was at Seligman, Missouri, in the middle of April, whence he wrote:—

I will be here one month longer, I then go to Cassville. I have good interest in Seligman. The work looks brighter in this field than it did last year and we look for an ingathering.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JAMES CAFFALL, appointed to look after the work in the European field, will labor for a time in portions of his former field, to finish up some work begun and necessary to be completed, before starting to England; and will endeavor to reach his new field in time for the mission conference in August.

We continue to receive notices to scattered members informing them that their names will be stricken from branch records unless they report. This is contrary to the ruling of General Conference, which requires scattered members to be recorded and retained as such on branch records. The HERALD cannot publish notices of actions contrary to conference rulings.

Bro. J. C. Hitchcock has sent us a deed found in the St. Louis chapel, with the suggestion that we advertise it. It is a conveyance of Jackson county, Missouri, property from J. D. Hearne and wife of Covington, Kentucky, to Robert Sutton, and dated September 25, 1884. The owner can obtain the deed by writing to the Herald office.

Bro. R. S. Salyards, of Lamoni, would like to obtain numbers 7 and 10 of the first volume of the HERALD—July and October 1860—to complete his files; also volumes 1, 2, or 3 of Times and Seasons. Anyone having those publications for sale will favor him by so stating, naming prices.

So far as heard from all General Conference delegates have arrived home in safety. Bro. David Chambers and wife were detained at Council Bluffs and Omaha by General Kelly's army, but arrived safely in due time.

Brn. G. H. Hilliard, Joseph Luff, A. H. Parsons, Alma Kent, H. R. Harder; and Srs. Catharine Salisbury and Fannie and Maggie Jones departed on the 27th. Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley left the same date for Glenwood, Iowa.

Bro. J. F. Simmons reports the organization of a Sunday school at Pin Oak, Wayne county, Illinois, April 8.

Sunday school work in the rural districts is reviving since the passing of winter. Workers in the Decatur district have reorganized a number of schools and will continue their work.

A SEVENTY FOOT DRAGON.—The elasmosarus, a giant serpent which lived in one of the latest of the geological ages, frequently attained a length of seventy feet. Its chief habit seems to have been the shallow seas that formerly lashed their waves over the prairies of Nebraska, Kansas, and Indian Territory. A skeleton of one of the creatures found in a West Kansas canyon a few years ago proves that thirty feet of the beast was neck, the remainder body, tail, and flippers.—St. Louis Republic.

NIGHT THE TIME OF GROWTH.—A scientific writer says that night is the time which nature utilizes for the growth of plants and animals; children grow more rapidly during the night. In the daytime the system is kept busy disposing of the wastes consequent on activity, but while asleep the system is free to extend its operations beyond the mere replacing of worn-out particles, hence the rapid growth. This is why invalids need so much rest and sleep.

ALASKA INDIANS.—The Thliviit tribe of Alaska numbers 4,800 persons. For generations they have spent the greater part of their time in caves.

An hour of solitude, passed in sincere and earnest prayer, will teach us more of thought, will more effectually awaken the faculty and form the habit of reflection, than a year's study in the schools without it.—Coleridge.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Not all who seem to fail have failed indeed;
Not all who fail have therefore worked in vain,
For all our acts to many issues lead;
And out of earnest purpose pure and plain,
Enforced by honest toil of hand or brain,
The Lord will fashion in his own good time—
(Be this the laborer's proudly humble creed)—
Such ends as to his wisdom fittest chime
With his vast love's eternal harmonies.

There is no failure for the good and wise;
What though thy seed should fall by the wayside
And the birds snatch it—yet the birds are fed;
Or they may bear it far across the tide,
To give rich harvest after thou art dead."

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—Our lives as mothers are very busy, but is it not better so? It is not meant that we should be idle, and I believe that the busier we are, striving with our might to do our whole duty, the happier we will be. I think we get discouraged sometimes with the thought of the almost endless round of duties before us, while if we take each duty singly, in the order it comes, everything will come out right in the end.

I am acquainted with a lady in a neighboring town who is a dressmaker, a patient worker, and hers is indeed a busy life. One day a young college girl for whom she had worked, and whom she had not seen for two years, came running across the grass to the window where she sat sewing, to speak to her.

"Why Mrs. K.," she said, "are you here still? Have you been sitting here ever since I went away?"

"Yes," she answered quietly, "and longer than that. I have been sewing by this window for twelve years."

"Twelve years!" exclaimed the young lady. "To sit in the same place, and do the same work, for twelve years!"

"Yes, for twelve years," answered Mrs. K. But remember, my dear, it was only a minute at a time."

I thought that a lesson well worth heeding—to take each minute as it comes. And precious minutes they are, too, to be improved every one. When our hands are busy, our minds can be busy as well, and what a blessing it is. There are so many good things in our Home Column and Autumn Leaves which make food for thought for many hours. When the papers come I must take just one peep to see what there is, if I am too busy to sit down and read. They are indeed very welcome.

I have made use of very many good things given as the experience of mothers in the training of their children, and am so glad of these "helps" by the way. I have tried the good and bad marks with good success. I let three good marks cancel one bad one, and I think the children are more anxious to try when they think they can make up for some little naughtiness by good deeds and kindness. Saturday night I copy the record, on the "Record of Behavior" page, in our "Memory Book." I think it is nice to keep a book about the children; and you will find that they, too, will be very much interested in it. It is like a story book to read the cute things they said and did when they were little.

We must feel that our duties as wives and mothers are as "acceptable service" to the Lord.

"With good will doing service,
A simple little phrase,
And yet we often find it
A help in weary days.
No work so dull and irksome,
But brightens at the word,
'With good will doing service
As unto Christ, the Lord.'

"God loves a cheerful giver,
Not one who grudgingly
Yields up a scanty service,
For all his bounties free.
Let hearts, and hand, and brain, then
Each its best work afford,
'With good will doing service,
As unto Christ, the Lord.'"

How blessed are we to be permitted to serve him in spirit and in truth. What joy in the thought that he died for us, and is risen, that he has sent the Comforter to cheer us; and that we can pray to him.

I heard an elderly lady say that she thought she had made a mistake in not praying more about little things. I said to her, "If such a thing were possible, I would think I had prayed too much, for I pray about everything."

Our prayers are not always answered just as we desire, but I am sure the dear Lord knows best, and will grant only what is right and good for us. And I am sure, too, that we come to a truer, deeper love for him by the things we are called upon to bear.

The little ones intrusted to our care are to be trained for good and useful lives, and how careful must we be, in our "daily walk and conversation." The secret of one mother's success is this, that she "always does what she wishes her children to do."

The Lord help us to live near to him, that we may set a good example for them to follow; and that we may have wisdom to train them aright. Your sister,

ISADORE H. CRAMER.

CLOUDS AND SUNSHINE VICE VERSA.

I HAD the privilege of attending the Northern California district conference held at Oakland, March 16, 17, and 18, and had reason to feel thankful for the privilege. The good Spirit of the Lord was present during the entire session. Not so much in the manifestation of the gifts, though a degree of power accompanied those who were exercised thereby,—but in love, harmony, and peace. And in a realizing sense that the aim and desire of those assembled were not self-aggrandizement, nor for strife or contention, neither for carrying out selfish motives. But for the advancement of the work of the Lord, and the thorough establishing of the Church of Christ on earth. And also a realizing sense of being in divine presence, that for the time, only a veil intervened between the church militant and the church triumphant, and the pursuits of this world, from a worldly point of view, appeared very trivial compared with the great things of the future that were dawning upon us, calling for the exercise of all the God-given talent and energy of his people.

On this and on other occasions I have been made aware that the "keys of the kingdom" are not only used by those of the priesthood in their official acts, but when standing before the people as God's ambassadors, they unlock and throw open a door as it were, of the Father's storehouse of knowledge. Else why is it that while the speaker is pointing out some special treasure (since he cannot call attention to all at the same time) the hearer views other treasures as well; perhaps loses sight of the one held up to view and feasts the soul upon other portions of the "riches of the kingdom" never beheld before. But when he to whom those "keys" are delegated, closes and sits down, the vividness of the view is lost. Mentally, the door is shut.

How glorious to comprehend, even in a measure, that men in our day are made ambassadors for God, and to behold them when clothed upon with the power of the Holy Spirit; breaking the bread of life; giving from the fountain of living waters; unfolding the principles of eternal life, and the great plan of salvation. Yea, standing as mediators between Christ and misguided, erring humanity. O, sacred calling! How great its responsibilities.

It is due to the young people of Oakland that mention be made of their meeting held on Sunday evening, one hour before preaching service, and conducted similar to that of the Religio Society. Those who took part acquitted themselves nobly, prominent among whom were Sisters Essie Cockerton and Pearl Price. I hope Sr. Pearl will favor the readers of Autumn Leaves with the essay she read upon that occasion. The summing up of the conference is, all were strengthened and blessed, some to return to their homes and others to remain and "keep the camp-fires blazing."

Bro. and Sr. Wight, with their three little ones, accompanied Mr. Burton and I by rail to Gilroy (where we had left our horse and buggy). After spending the night with the Saints there, Bro. Ross kindly provided horse and surrey for Bro. and Sr. Wight in which they came with us to "Mount Olivet," a most beautiful drive of one day and a half. The roads were smooth and were free of dust just at this season of the year when the hills and vales are clad in their emerald robes, looking their very prettiest. It was like a drive between two huge oil paintings, ever varying in scenery, but hard to tell which of the many was the most beautiful.

At the close of the first day's drive, we drew rein at the hospitable habitation of Bro. J. H. Lawn. Mr. Burton and I remained with them for the night, Bro. and Sr. Wight going a few steps farther on, to Bro. Lytle's, in whose house was held an excellent testimony meeting that evening.

On account of the near approach of General Conference, and the distance to be traveled in order to reach it, the long anticipated visit from our esteemed Australian friends was rendered very short indeed. Only a few days, and all had gone again. When Mr. Burton and I bade each other good-bye at the railroad station at Hollister and I saw the train move off with a most precious freight, leaving me standing alone among strangers, the sunshine suddenly lost its luster and something akin to an April shower pattered down my face as I wended my way home over the now lonely road which only a few days before was a delightful picture. But the beauty was not all gone, nor was I all alone only outwardly. The parting words of my husband so quietly spoken, "The Lord will bless you and his angels will be round about you to guard you," came back to me with all their comforting influence. And though the house did seem all empty and so quiet as I entered it all alone, and the location so isolated where no one passes here, a sense of perfect security is ever with me. The belief that the angels are hovering near to guard, together with the lingering rays of the happy past and present, as well as future duties, leaves no room for dreary, wretched loneliness, though I may not see an individual for a week at a time.

SISTER EMMA.

MOUNT OLIVET, April 2.

WHITLOCK, Tenn.

Dear Sisters:—Seeing so little from this part of the vineyard makes me anxious to write. The work here has been very dull in the past, the Saints appear to have been sleeping; but since our reunion last fall, the work seems to be much more encouraging, and I think the Saints as well as outsiders are beginning to awake. The Saints here have had much persecution, for all the creeds unite against us, nevertheless, the Lord is remembering us, for the way is opening and I think there is a good work to be done here yet. We have had some good seed sown, and I am satisfied it will come forth ere long. We have organized a little Sabbath school. School begins at ten o'clock and prayer service at eleven. We are in hopes of having a better school than we had last year. There is so much to be done and there seems to be so few that have willing hands, for they are striving to do something great and fail to do it for the simple reason of leaving so many smaller things (?) undone along the pathway of life, and at each failure of the small things they are a step farther behind, and instead of coming up higher they are going lower.

We hear some say, "I go to church every time; that's all I can do." I know any of us can speak a kind word.

"Kind words can never die,
Even though they fade."

Dear Saints, is not the first place to do good at home? Until we learn to do good at home I fear our good works will fall through. There are so many who speak so kindly to visitors and when they are absent speak so carelessly to father, mother, brothers, and sisters when they are the ones they love best. We ought to be good to them while we have the opportunity, for it often happens we are separated by death, and the pain is hard enough to bear without also having regret for the careless words spoken and the slack attentions we may have given them.

I find much comfort in reading the sisters' letters and have gained much information from them. I have been reading the Doctrine and Covenants a good deal lately and am trying to keep the Word of Wisdom.

I am satisfied when we learn our duty and fail to do it we will fall short of the blessings. The Lord is under no obligations to bless us when we fail to keep his commandments. My heart does rejoice in this latter-day work. I want to do all the good I can for life is short at best. I beg you all to pray for my dear mother, that her health may be restored if it is the Lord's will. With faith in this work,

I remain, your sister,

ANNA ROBERTS.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—About six months ago I wrote as I felt impressed to do concerning my own trials, hopes, and fears as a mother. The intervening months have been spent in trying to do better each day what I have seen to be my duty, often with failure as the result, because I neglected to ask God's help before beginning the day's work.

Most of you will wonder that a Saint should ever forget or neglect to commune with our heavenly Father on rising in the morning. However it may be with others, it has been the case with me; sometimes forgetfulness, at other times voluntary neglect. Perhaps the baby wakened and cried just as I was ready to kneel, and my attention was thus distracted; or, perhaps I was late rising and hurried to get breakfast and go on with the day's work, so fearful of not getting along fast enough that prayer was dismissed for the time, and not until some disaster or crowning blunder brought me to realize my neglect, did I feel humbled, and glad to fall to my knees and pray for pardon and help.

I have noticed that it is when things are running along quite smoothly that we, who should be constantly watching and praying, fall into bad habits as Saints. God surely hears all our prayers, and in these past few months I, for one, have proven him to be a God who answers prayer. I prayed for light and wisdom to guide me in the training of my children, and for strength to endure when sorely tried. As I look back I can see that a perfect flood of light has been poured upon my pathway, and the wisdom of many minds has been freely offered to me in regard to the treatment of and right training of my children, mentally, morally, and physically. And I have been sustained through what have seemed most trying ordeals. As I sum up the result of this retrospective view, I can plainly see that God brought me into these certain conditions and relations that I might have these various persons' direct sympathy and advice, and thus be convinced that it was his own design, that I might know he had heard me, knew my special needs, and was ready to minister to them.

I can realize, too, the good of my humble desire for help. Though I am often impatient with my children, and they are often trying to my patience, yet the pure and elevating influence of God's Holy Spirit crowns my and their efforts to be good if put forth in God's strength. I have felt this to be true when observing happy changes in them and watching the daily conduct of their young lives, and have seen that he is answering in them my earnest prayers for them. And this is as it should be. I praise his holy name that I can realize we have taken a few steps forward. This onward progress has not been made without some suffering, many mistakes, and oft-renewed effort on my part as well as theirs. What we ignorantly or willfully allow to become our child's temperament before birth we must strive heroically to bear with, direct aright, and correct after its advent into this world if we would do the child even tardy justice.

If there is any mother in Zion who has nothing to regret concerning her own part in the prenatal development of her children's minds, she is surely deserving of honor. Most of us, however, have not had that perfect self-control, and hence must now reap the mistakes we have sown, often in bitterness of spirit, as we feel ourselves powerless to eradicate from their natures certain unhappy traits. And were it not that our heavenly Father is ever merciful and ready to forgive us for our sins even after we are baptized, we might be in despair over our many shortcomings in these regards. But the Lord has been "favorable to Zion," and has called his people to "come up higher," evidently that they might have a broader range of vision than they had ever before enjoyed.

What better sign that the command is being heeded than to see the awakening interest among young and old in the study of the Scriptures first, in holy desires for right living, and in the classifying and orderly arranging of all these subjects, and treating them with the reverence and dignity befitting to God's work by organized effort to understand his word and study how to become the sort of mothers, wives, daughters, and sons he would have us to be. This, I think is the aim and design of the young people's societies, The Daughters of Zion, the Prayer Union; and the various classes of Sunday school work. Some of these have the approval of all good Saints, while one at least has not, though they do not show why God condemns them, if he does; only, they do not interpret the command—Come up higher—to mean "Come up to Mothers' Meetings!" "Come up to Young People's meetings!" "Daughters of Zion, 'come up' to pray and to beseech the throne of grace apart from the regular prayer meetings—unite as a Prayer League and call upon my name for those blessings you as women who have hitherto had little voice in my church's deliberations see you have need of to purify and bless my people."

And yet there are prejudices that will continue in the minds of some. With Latter Day Saints prejudices should never get into the heart. I believe if our hearts were right in the sight of God, we should love each other as Jesus desired the early saints to do, and then it would never take years—not even months—for us to come into harmony upon all these subjects. God's Holy Spirit melts the heart—never hardens it.

I sat in one mothers' meeting here in Lamoni. Out of a membership of hundreds in the church there were about twenty-five evidently earnest and interested women met together. To my mind it was as necessary an adjunct to Sunday school and home work as is the teachers' institutes to the work of day school teaching. And you who have been teachers, know that nowadays no live teacher can at all afford to miss an institute she is able to attend. I gathered ideas in that one hour's meeting that I have been thinking over ever since and received material help by attending. The pioneer work that these sisters, headed by Sister Walker, are doing will prove a blessing to the church and not a curse, depend upon it. There may have been some mistakes made in details, but the plan of the work surely no Saint can long condemn, for it is designed to bring the Saints into harmony with God's natural laws or laws of nature, hence must lead us away from the world with its artificial and harmful ways, and nearer to himself, which is keeping our covenant.

MOORHEAD, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—I so much enjoy reading the letters of my brethren and sisters from almost all parts of the world. I love to know how the good work is rolling on. I am young in the cause. I can truly say that the Lord has blessed me so I enjoy the work much more than words can express. I am sure that God has a work for every one of us, and if we will only ask him he will show it to us; and let us remember that our reward does not depend upon the kind of work we do, but upon the manner in which we do it. We have a nice Sunday school here in our branch. So many little workers. We have prayer meeting Sunday evenings, in which I know we are blessed. My prayer is that the Lord will call more laborers into the field.

Your sister,

JESSIE BLACKMUN.

OSTERDOCK, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—I love to read the kind letters in your pages coming from all over the country and bearing such glad news. I was baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth, June 11, 1893, and have found that this doctrine is true. I am young in the cause but I can truly say that the Lord has blessed me so that I greatly enjoy the work. Bro. Roth and Sutton are holding a series of meetings in this vicinity. We have real good attention but the roads are quite rough, and it makes it unhandy for the people to come out. However, we have quite a congregation. We have Sunday school here every Sunday and are going to have prayer meeting. Although there are but few of us in number God's promises are for us. Yours in gospel bonds,

PAULINA SCHRUNK.

ELGIN, Illinois.

Dear Sisters:—Feeling lonely this afternoon I take up my pen. How comforting it is to have the assurance that Jesus knows all things. Our Elder Brother, and therefore our friend. Earthly friends may misjudge our purest motives, they cannot see how good our intentions have been, nor can they know how many times we have withstood temptations. They only see our mistakes. How good it is to realize that Jesus knows just how hard we have tried to be faithful when shadows obscured the pathway, and our feet grew weary, and the way seemed toilsome and long. His love never fails and never grows cold. None can whisper words so tenderly as he. Jesus can bestow the gift of faith and trust. If we would open our hearts to receive the love, and joy, and sunshine, he is waiting to pour into them, and our souls be filled with rapturous songs, and resting on his promises, we would find sweet peace in the knowledge that we have a friend and brother, whose power is omnipotent, and whose love is unbounded. My prayers are for all God's children. Your sister, EMMA R. CARNEGIE.

OSTERDOCK, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—I am young in the cause of God, but I can truly say that I am blessed in the work. I know it is hard for us to give up the world, especially for the young. There have been times when I thought that I must yield to the temptation of Satan, and those who have felt like that know nothing can save them but the pure love of God. I was baptized the eleventh of June by Elder J. S. Roth, and know that this gospel is true.

We have a large Sabbath school, and I pray that God may call more laborers into the field, that his kingdom may soon come.

Your sister,

BERTHA LOPER.

FORSYTH, Missouri.

Dear Sisters:—In reading in Herald of February 21 your editorial under head of "A suggested contrast," our soul was so stirred we feel to yield to the prompting, to so express our thoughts: I used to read the letters of Bro. and Sr. T. W. Smith when they were on that far off mission to the Islands and think what a great sacrifice they were making, and how much they needed the sympathy of the American Saints. In one letter one of them stated they had just received their mail from across the sea; said they received it only once a month, and when it came they were so glad to see the cheerful face of the Herald and to read all the good tidings their mail brought, that they sat up until one o'clock at night to read. It is often painful to me to witness the little interest so many of the Saints manifest in such great sacrifices. To one who will stop to consider the sad separating of these foreign missionaries from their own country and kin people, it surely must appear they need the deepest sympathy and the earnest prayers of the church. It was my privilege while in Independence to visit at the home of the above-named brother, and while there he showed us many pictures of those people whom he had labored among on the islands. The sight of their strange-looking faces brought this thought back to our mind with force: What a sacrifice to go there, stay for years, labor, work, and pray for the redemption of such a strange-looking race. But God requires it of somebody, and the ones who have the faith and courage to go are surely undertaking much. I too think the time is fully at hand, when as a people we should arouse from our slumbering condition, read and deeply consider the good things written to benefit us. It affords me much pleasure to hand the pure, deep, far-reaching thoughts of our people out to be used by any who will read. I know it cannot help but benefit whoever reads, if they ever think upon it afterwards. These are times in which God seems to be working wonderfully among the inhabitants of the earth. May God sustain, as I feel sure he will, the Daughters of Zion organization. We are again isolated from a branch of the church, and we very much miss the hallowed hour of worshiping our heavenly Father with those of like precious faith.

Ever praying for the success of Zion everywhere I remain, your sister, MRS. C. H. DERRY.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, May 3.—The church, its ministers, and membership. STANDLEY, I. T., April 19.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well and rejoicing in the marvelous work. I have returned from a trip in Arkansas this morning. According to previous arrangements I met Bro. J. W. Jackson on the 5th of April at Comb's schoolhouse, near Ultimathule, Sevier county, Arkansas, and commenced a series of meetings. We preached thirteen sermons, baptized eight, and left others near the kingdom. Indeed, we had a fine meeting; the whole country seemed stirred up. Bro. J. W. Jackson baptized John W. Gilcoats, a Methodist minister. Bro. Gilcoats had preached the Methodist doctrine fourteen years. He was an influential man among the people. He was baptized by Bro. Jackson in the winter. We ordained him an elder during the meeting. He says he is going to preach the restored gospel, the better way, the remainder of his days. May God bless him to accomplish much and lasting good in proclaiming the everlasting gospel to old Arkansas. Bro. Jackson, our young Arkansas elder, does not wait for money to ride on palace cars or for people to carry him around, but picks up his grip and uses the means that God has blessed him with—foots it for miles, preaching repentance. He is trying to spread the gospel, and the Lord is blessing him in his effort.

I have baptized ten since I reported to General Conference. When I look over my labor since I embraced the work I can see that I have made many mistakes and how unworthily I have lived; but God has blessed me beyond my expectations: I have baptized about one hundred and forty people into the church, including some who are preaching the gospel, accomplishing much good. We now have fourteen members at Comb's schoolhouse, near Ultimathule. We left Bro. Gilcoats to preach for them, and left them in working condition. A branch should be organized at that place soon. The work is opening up now in the State; two elders now live in Arkansas. I expect to labor with Bro. J. W. Jackson in the southern part of the State this summer, if the Lord permits.

In bonds,

Editors Herald:—I love to hear of the progress of the work. Last September we were informed through the gift of tongues among other things that a good work was to be done northwest of here, which is certainly being fulfilled. On last Sunday I baptized Bro. William Stull. I also blessed his daughter and "buried with Christ in baptism" Uriah F. Lake and his wife, Mina B., and blessed all their children; being five in number. This occurred four miles northwest of Fort Robinson. They are alive in the work, although they have been instructed but a short time in it. The prospects are good for others.

We held a prayer meeting to-day in the town of Crawford at the residence of Bro. Wright. I think considerable good was done. I understood the aged brother to say that he had not been at our social meetings for twenty years. He joyfully bore his testimony. A Sr. Stephenson and her Son Charles were also present, who it seems have been quite indifferent to the cause for some few years. The sister felt inclined of late to join one of the sects, but has lately been warned by dream or vision to retrace her steps.

Considering everything I think the prospects are fair; plenty of openings with fair or good liberty of speech. We seek to labor cheerfully and diligently in the great work, and leave the result with God.

Editors Herald:—A word spoken in due season, how good it is! It being several years since I wrote a line for the Herald, 'dear brothers and sisters, I wish to say that there are so many sinful habits that tradition and influence have caused us to fall in line with,—habits by practice,—that they seem to become dear as the eye or any one member of the body. Of the many I will only mention the use of tobacco in this little article. Peter says, "Grow in grace and knowledge of our Lord;" and as time has given me some experience and a more perfect knowledge of the truth, I desire to impart the same to all the honest in heart.

The counsels given me and that I have given to others are too numerous to mention; suffice to say, the promises of the Bible and, of course, the same the church teach that whosoever obeys God's commands shall receive the Spirit to lead into all truth. Now those who have submitted to the teaching or influence of the Spirit and gotten the victory over one evil should not only rejoice in that, but also in the influence attained for good. "Quench not the Spirit." If the Spirit teach it is wrong, ask God for strength; but be sure of this one thing: be honest and determined by the help of God to quit this evil.

I wish to express my belief that I don't believe there is a member of the church that has been trying to live their religion, but has been convinced that it is a sin to use tobacco. In all things give God thanks; then let us give this one serious thought. If wrong, How can you continue in the use of the sin?

Now if your minds have been taught wrong, when you go to take a chew of tobacco or a dip of snuff, your better judgment says "Wrong." Throw it down; you asked God to give you strength, so help yourself some, and rejoice with those that rejoice, being victor over one evil.

Now to those who have not received the Spirit under the gospel law, you surely have a mind to reason. The medical world agrees that tobacco is unwholesome, unhealthy, and it is also filthy and expensive; then why not quit the stuff, the sin of its use. I ask in the name of reason, would it not be far better for the money spent for such to be put for the use of something good; the family, if you are of one. O yes, friend, it would even be better to put it in the flames than to spend it for something to bring sickness, pain, and suffering. Then let me say in all candor and love, quit all such.

One word more, on influence. The first bottle of snuff my wife ever used I furnished for her in 1856, in the time of the rebellion while I was in the war. She had taken cold from exposure, contracted a severe cough, and gradually grew worse. Eight years ago last May while struggling with death, her last enemy, I could see the truth as never before. Her head was lying on my breast to relieve her suffering. Too late to call the past wrongs, I asked God to forgive the past and give me power to overcome that sin and I would quit the use of it; then we engaged in prayer to God to give her ease and quiet of mind, and all was well.

In conclusion brothers and sisters, let us grow in grace and knowledge of the truth. The only way we can do this is when the truth is made known to us, then obey and do the truth, then we may expect to receive more; but if we don't obey the teaching of the Spirit, how can we expect to advance in the knowledge of the truth? I hope and pray that God will bless all the honest in heart, both Saints and sinners, in a knowledge of the truth.

Your brother in Christ,

BURNHAM, Mich., April 13.

Editors Herald:—I came here to listen to Elder Broodie lecture on "One hundred days in Mormondom" but for some reason or other the lecturer did not appear on the scene. I cannot tell whether I scared the reverend gentleman away or not, but I guess he got wind of it, that I was coming, and made up his mind he had better stay away. I understand someone sent him word not to come. How strange that people who claim to have the truth should be afraid to meet one of us people. If I am wrong, and some one will show me where I am wrong, I will give up and work for their faith, but I will have to be convinced before I do. And if I belonged to a faith I could not nor dare not face the world on and defend, I would get with something I could. I understand that truth is like gold; you may put all the tests to gold, pure gold, and it is gold still, and wherever found. So in regard to the truth; it is eternal—everlasting as God himself, and though the heavens and earth will pass away, God says, "My word shall not pass;" and you can test the truth, God's word, and it will be truth where found whether in heathen land or Christian ground. Now if all who claim to be sent of God have got the truth why do they not defend it, stand by what they say, and meet the issue. A man going to war would be counted as a coward if when he saw the enemy advancing, he turned and ran away. I claim that if God has chosen us or anyone else to labor in his vineyard we must stand still, face the enemy, and the one who is right will come out victorious. God is able, and will defend his work; all he requires of his servants is to be wise and brave, and that also his Saints—and labor in their callings and continue on to the end, until he shall say, "Well done."

Jealousies, envying one another, strife, tattling, and exalting one's self are all unbecoming a Saint, and the sooner Saints learn to keep a secret or something they have heard to themselves, so much the sooner will a good deal of strife cease. The idea of a brother or a sister meeting another and the first thing you hear, "Did you hear so and so about this brother, or that sister?" or maybe of some one who does not belong to the faith. Is that according to the instructions given us in God's word? The wise man Solomon says, "Where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth."—Prov. 26:20. One of the most essential things I know of for Saints is to put a bridle on their tongues and and if they cannot let them read the twenty-sixth verse of the first chapter of James and see what kind of Saints they are, or what kind of religion they have.

Four more were baptized at Lake Ann on the 8th and 9th inst. The work is still onward; numbers are coming into the church.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a protracted meeting here, and have baptized nine precious souls. More are to follow in the near future. The work in this mission is on the move. I am having large crowds and excellent interest, with good liberty in preaching the word. God is blessing me wonderfully with his Holy Spirit, directing me in my labors. A brighter day has dawned on this district and mission. Causes that have heretofore stood in the way of the work are fast moving out of the way.

THE COMING OF CHRIST, IS IT NEAR?

THERE are some things which seem to indicate that the long looked for and greatly desired event is near at hand. It is an event so wonderful that we can scarcely make ourselves believe it will be in our day. It seems incredible, almost impossible that his coming should be in our day. It is easier to think he will come to another people, but why not to us? Some people will witness the grand and glorious event, and some will be looking and praying, "Lord, come quickly, and do not tarry." We know a people who would hail him with joy, and to such he will come. Fear not, brethren; fresh courage take; the tokens of his coming are increasing. Let us briefly glance at some of them, that our burdens may grow lighter, as we journey on the weary way. A look at some of the signs of his coming that he told us to observe may brighten the path somewhat. We do not presume to say that all have been fulfilled, or that the most notable ones have; but that enough have to make it certain that we are living in the generation that will witness his appearing. I know it is often said, "Well, now suppose he don't come as you think," etc. I shall suppose nothing of the kind. He has advertised that he is coming in this generation, and I believe him:—

And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken.—Luke 21: 25, 26.

Passing the first part of the twenty-fifth verse, which is not yet fulfilled, we readily see that the latter part has been fulfilled. No objection should be raised on the ground that these signs must be fulfilled in the order in which they are recorded, for all biblical students know that events do not always occur in the order stated. Since the year 1830 the stars have fallen, or what are called stars, a fact known the world over. The sea has roared, has been unusually disturbed; it has heaved itself beyond its bounds, as the Prophet Joseph said it would, which had to be; for as long as it roared within the bounds there was nothing remarkable to be seen—no sign.

It may be asked how these events prove that this is the generation: How are we to know that this generation will not pass and another come and like signs appear in it? If so, they would not be signs; they would indicate nothing, would be events without any special significance. A sign is an indication, signifying something; and if that which it signifies does not come to pass, it ceases to be a true sign. Jesus told his followers, when they asked him for a sign or token by which they might know of his coming, that the above-mentioned events would denote or herald his approach; that the generation that should witness these things should see him as a ruler of the earth. Now these have come, and if he does not come, would another generation believe in them or regard them as tokens of his coming? Not unless they have less sense than we have. If these signs had occurred in the seventeenth century, could we use them as proofs of his coming in this one?

If Christ does not come in this generation, the falling stars and the unusual commotions in the sea must be stricken from the list of signs as failures. If it be said that more stars must fall, and the sea rise higher than it has yet done, who will decide when they have reached the magnitude of signs? They have attracted the attention of the world, and that is sufficient.

"Distress of nations" was to be another evidence of his coming, which is being awfully fulfilled. Our hearts are pained with the tidings received from all parts of the world: it is one universal cry of distress; not only from individuals here and there, but nations herald the cry of woe and want, just as the Master said.

Another feature of the prediction was "perplexity." This also is having a striking fulfillment in more ways than one. The nations are perplexed and know not what to do with their armies. To disband them they dare not; to keep them much longer they cannot; and times are growing harder while the taxpayer struggles harder and groans louder. But his burden must be increased; the existence of the nation depends upon it; Every new invention of war increases the expenses; as one nation increases its power to conquer, so must the others or become its victims. What shall be done? Who can tell? The Saints know what will be done.

Much speculation is being indulged in as to the cause of the present hard times. It is not because of a lack of food, for the world is full of food, many claim too full. A glance at the Savior's words ought to convince any Saint that it is not altogether due to silver or tariff, but more because of a fulfillment of the Master's words, "Men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth." Men have become fearful of coming trouble; they instinctively feel it is coming. Confidence in each other is destroyed; the banker dare not trust the depositor, nor the depositor the banker; so each holds and hides his money, and starvation walks the streets with none to heed its plaintive cry. In the midst of plenty and in the light of increasing wisdom, what has caused this widespread alarm? Revelation answers, in effect, "A fearful looking forward to that which is to come; a fear born of man's trying to live independently of his Maker; a sad result of man's trusting in his own strength."

Anarchy is another source of perplexity and terror; a sort of a parasite, peculiar to advanced civilization, that is hard to get rid of. To allow anarchists to ply their nefarious trade unmolested cannot be; to punish seems to add fuel to the flame already burning in all civilized governments. Anarchists are a dreaded curse to society; with the newly invented explosives their power is dreadful. All France was recently horrified at the explosion in the Chamber of Deputies; thousands were kept away from the World's Fair through fear of something of the kind.

Another sign of the end is the rapid accumulation of property in the hands of the few. It is doubtful if ever before it was amassed so rapidly as in the past fifty years. James says:—

Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. . . . Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth, etc.

Recently C. P. Huntington disposed of his railroad interests east of the Missouri River for five millions of dollars, and he owns perhaps five times as much more. This immense property has been amassed in the brief period of, say forty years, which is heaping it together pretty lively; and he is only one among the many that might be mentioned. This is largely obtained from the tillers of the soil; is extorted from them by railroad, and other monopolies, against whose cruel oppression there is no protection. But the cry of the poor is heard by the God of heaven, and judgment is reserved. The Prophet Micah says:—

The good man is perished out of the earth; . . . The prince asketh, and the judge asketh for a reward; and the great man, he uttereth his mischievous desireth: so they wrap it up.

In this is foretold the wickedness in official circles, the corruption of those in authority. Many supposed that much of the present distress in this land, was due to the improper desires of the great men of our nation, carried out secretly, wrapped up, as the prophet puts it. These latter proofs are not conclusive as to this being the generation, but now comes one that is:—

And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound; and when the time of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fullness of my gospel; but they receive it not, for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men; and in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, etc.

The above should settle the question (if there is one) as to the generation; for it is as plain as if I had it made to order. It plainly says that the generation in which the "fullness of the Gentiles" shall come in is the same one in which the gospel is to break forth; so if we know the generation the gospel came forth in we know the other. The two events were to be in the same generation; one was to characterize the other.

The only possible question that could be raised would be, Was Christ's coming to be one of the events of that generation? or, Would the signs be in one, and he come in the next?

Why in the next more than in some other? If those signs do not signify his immediate coming, they are worthless as signs. Jesus says in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew that his coming will be one of the events of that generation; that the signs are witnesses of that fact. These witnesses have already testified: the gospel, the falling stars, the sea heaving itself beyond its bounds; the fear of nations, and rumors of wars; in the mouth of three witnesses the truth may be established.

Another wonderful event that must transpire soon is the building of a temple, "which temple shall be reared in this generation," says God; "and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house." It may be said that in this there is nothing said about Christ's coming. No, not directly; but it does say that Saints now living will witness a marvelous display of the power of God. Brethren, when we see this we will see things moving in a manner that will cause our hearts to leap with joy. We will see a day of power; a day of strange and marvelous events.

As to the length of this generation, see Book of Mormon pages 97, 174, from which it will be seen that it is not more than one hundred years since the generation began. The beginning of this was the year 1830. Of course it will commence with the first sign that denotes it.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

DAYTON, Nevada, January 28, 1894.

FAITH AS A PERFECT PRINCIPLE CONSIDERED.

THE law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul.

These are the words of the Psalmist David as recorded in the Scriptures; and according to that "perfect law" mankind must have faith in order to obtain the crown or prize which is offered as a reward for keeping the law; therefore, we shall throughout this article urge upon the reader, not only the necessity of having faith as a means ordained of God by which he blesses us in this life, but that it is indispensable if we would have eternal life. This is so because it is the principle devised by God by which salvation comes; and unless we be in possession of it salvation cannot be secured by us. We shall also try to point out the way in which this faith that we are considering can be obtained.

The reward of eternal life comes to us by reason of merit, and is of that character and marked by such a high standard of excellence that it corresponds with the dignity and exalted character of God and his "perfect law." Faith then being a part of or a principle in the "perfect law," we must, either abstractly or in connection with other principles of the law, consider it perfect; or, in other words, faith is a perfect part or principle of a perfect whole. Whenever this principle is applied or put into operation, by reason of its being perfect in its character, certain purposes and results will always obtain.

We believe, and think ourselves safe in saying so, that more has been said and written with reference to this principle of faith than any other principle of this "perfect law;" hence we conclude that it has been considered of much importance and highly necessary that man should understand it as a means ordained by God for his well-being in this life, and for his eternal redemption and exaltation in time to come, and without which man cannot be saved. Taking this view of the matter we can readily see why so much has been said by God and his authorized servants with reference to this principle; for without an understanding and actual possession of it salvation cannot result. According to the foregoing we may well conclude that faith is the basic principle upon which the whole superstructure or system of life and salvation rests.

We do not consider it necessary to cite chapter and verse referring to what has been done through this principle and the promises made by God to all those who shall be in possession of faith; because we believe the greater number of those who may read this production to be conversant with the facts as set forth in God's word, and, in addition, a great many are knowing to the power of faith by reason of their own experience. Our purpose, then, shall be to show how we believe men may, if they will, enjoy greater blessings than they are now receiving, through the exercise of faith; not but what we think there are individuals who are being wonderfully blessed by God through faith, but we believe that all God's people do not fully comprehend the principle of faith, and consequently are not enjoying the blessings of God to the extent that they otherwise might. There are but few persons who would not like to receive some special blessing at God's hand; and this condition of things will, in all probability, continue to exist as long as man is dependent upon God to supply his ever recurring wants and needs.

Those wants that are not provided for and supplied in a general way are supplied to us in the way God has ordained; and that way is through the operation of faith as provided for in God's "perfect law." So, if we do not have faith we are not entitled to the blessings in a special manner or to any marked degree.

To illustrate: God blesses the world of mankind in a general way, irrespective of race or color, good or evil; both the righteous and the wicked receive the sunshine and rain that conduce to the happiness and well-being of the entire race. God permits them one and all to be and remain upon the earth, and in a general way, so far as their common wants are concerned, blesses them and perpetuates their existence in the earth by and through the laws that he has ordained that those general blessings shall come to man. But in addition to all this he has ordained that man by and through the principle of faith may receive special favors and divine blessings from his hand. We can readily see, then, the necessity of our being in possession of the principle of faith, that we may be able to use it as a means to bless ourselves and our fellow men that may be in need of aid and succor other than that which God is supplying us with in common with all the rest of mankind.

First, we should have a full and complete understanding of the word "faith," what the full meaning of the word is when properly defined, and especially with reference to its meaning as used in the Scriptures. In the first verse of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews Paul defines faith thus:—

Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

We see from this definition that if we have no assurance or evidence of that which we desire, need, or hope for, we have no faith.

Let us see if this conclusion is logical and proper when tested by other definitions of the word. In the Book of Mormon, page 292, we read this:—

If ye have faith, ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true.

This definition of faith not only harmonizes with Paul's, but it goes a little farther and justifies the idea that if our belief is founded upon a false premise; that is, upon something that is not true; it is not faith.

Paul says faith is the assurance or "evidence" we have of things hoped for, and from this we can see that without some knowledge in order to give "assurance" or "evidence" we cannot have faith; and while according to the Scriptures faith is not perfect knowledge, to our mind, faith and knowledge are so near akin as to make them inseparably connected; and we further believe that without a knowledge of things our faith in that which we hope for cannot become very strong. According to this way of reasoning we can see why it is that the greater knowledge a man has, especially with reference to the principles of life and salvation, the greater faith he can have. And why? Because his confidence and assurance in that which he hopes for is fortified and strengthened by what he knows.

Again, the religion of Jesus Christ differs from the various religious systems of men in that it is true or the truth; consequently it has the power to save while the others do not. No matter how much seeming faith we may have in those systems, inasmuch as they are not true, our faith in them cannot be of that kind or degree that will insure us eternal life; and when our faith in this regard is tested it will be shown that in reality we had no faith because we had no knowledge; and that what we thought to be faith was simply the result of a blind credulity upon our part in following after error, a something that was not true; consequently we had no faith at all because we were hoping for or had a belief in what was not true,—and (as we have before reasoned) according to the Prophet Alma this is not faith.

The Scriptures abound with promises both general and special made by God and his authorized servants to his people to be given collectively and individually. All the promises of God are made conditionally, although they are positive and certain after the conditions are complied with.

It is just as essential to understand and know the office work of that principle, in order to make the proper application of it to the obtaining of desired results, as it is to perfectly understand the principles of the science of mathematics in order to obtain a proper solution of any given problem through the rules governing in that science; hence we reason that as by an application of the rules governing in the science of mathematics, we can solve any genuine problem which might be given, so also by making a proper application of the principles of the "perfect law" we can obtain any and all blessings and desired results that are consistent with the law itself, and made obtainable by the promises of God. But, as in the science of mathematics, the principle must be understood and applied intelligently, and when so done the results are sure to follow.

Question: What would be your faith in obtaining a correct solution of a given mathematical problem if you did not thoroughly understand the principles of that science? Would it not be little or much according as you had a knowledge of the rules governing in the matter? Most assuredly it would; and just so we believe with reference to applying the principles of the perfect law of God. Faith, as we before stated, is a perfect principle; and when an individual is in possession of it, has it understandingly, and knows by what way and manner he obtained it, he can then make an application of it for the accomplishment of any and all lawful purposes.

Inasmuch as God desires to bless us at all times we may obtain from him through the operation of the principle of faith whatever conduces to our well-being either for time or eternity; and as this gift of faith from God is the evidence and assurance of our acceptance with him, as well as the power by and through which desired blessings come to us, who cannot see the need of our being in possession of it? As God is no respecter of persons, it is evident that he will not withhold the gift from any, who will comply with the conditions.

As we are subjects of circumstances it may be very difficult for us to obtain faith, but those who have the law of God before them ought not to consider it an impossibility to get a knowledge and full comprehension of it; especially the people of God's church, whose attention should be continually directed to the law with all of its principles.

Right here is the key by which we may unlock the door which opens that we may enter and partake of the blessings of God; namely, an understanding of the "perfect law" and an application of it to everyday life. When a perfect understanding of the law comes to us and we are able to apply it in the way and manner described above, then and not till then, will it be possible for us to exercise that faith that insures eternal life. So then, a correct understanding of the perfect law is of first importance, and next to this is to live in accordance with its precepts and demands; God, then, in order to be true to his word, must and will give every promised blessing.

God is bound or responsible only as far as his promises are made. We understand that his promises are all made to his children conditionally; and not until all the conditions are complied with can we reasonably expect anything from him.

We have said that all are subjects of circumstances. Individually we may not be responsible for our condition as to circumstances, and neither is God; and if he blesses us in a general way with the rest of mankind, even when we do not fully keep his law by reason of being so circumstanced in life that we are not able to gain a knowledge of it, we ought to be satisfied and consider him a just rewarder so far as that goes. The point we wish to make is this: God not being responsible for our condition in life, we cannot justly demand anything of him in the way of special favor when either through ignorance or by reason of willfulness we fail to comply with the conditions on which those blessings and favors are to come as God never goes out of his established order.

Salvation either for time or eternity is the result of obedience to God and his law, and those who have not a knowledge of the principles of the perfect law are not in a condition to be saved, nor can they be until they obtain this knowledge. Christ says:—

This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.

This language is comprehensive in its character, and means more than to know that God and Christ simply exist as individuals; it implies that we must have a correct understanding and knowledge of their characters with reference to their various attributes, and also as to what is required of us.

Since God requires us to have faith in order to be saved in eternity and to receive special blessings and favors in this life, then we had better look about and see if there is not some provision made in the perfect law whereby we can obtain this faith. We think, most decidedly, that there is; and the Scriptures furnish ample proof to justify us in this conclusion.

Let us examine the record of those who have had great faith and find out, if we can, how they obtained their faith; possibly we too may be fortunate enough to secure it. Indeed, if faith comes from God and is a free gift to his children here below, we may be sure that as God is no respecter of persons and desires to bless humanity one and all alike, he will bestow like blessings upon us as upon any who may have preceded us in the race for life and salvation.

We wish the reader to bear in mind that the faith of which we are talking is that kind that the possessor can use for special and extraordinary benefits; and, finally, for the obtaining of eternal life, the greatest gift of God. The fact that some have greater faith than others argues one of two things, either God has been partial in the bestowal of the gift, or else some have rendered more perfect obedience to the requirements of God than others and consequently are entitled to it. We choose to believe the latter.

Paul was a person who had great faith; he had a good understanding of the law; and not only this, but he made every needful sacrifice to live according to the law. Paul would not have manifested nor maintained such great faith without a knowledge of the law, and living according to its precepts.

Another person who had great faith was Alma of whom we read in the Book of Mormon. Being a great expounder of the law, and of the necessity of sacrifice for the purpose of living according to it we must suppose that he had the necessary knowledge, and made all sacrifice required of him; consequently had great faith which was the legitimate result of his knowledge of and obedience to the perfect law.

In Jesus Christ we have a perfect example. He had the greatest faith of any who ever lived; and when we compare his faith with that of others of whom we read, we find it so far out-measures theirs and is so transcendent in its character, that their faith is comparatively eclipsed. Whence, we ask, comes this great and perfect faith of Christ? Our answer to this question must be, if we would be consistent with our reasoning throughout this article, Because of his superior knowledge, having, as he did, a perfect understanding of the law of God.

The history of his life also shows that he made greater sacrifice than any other of whom we have any record. This point is worthy the consideration of all who wish to become like him that they may be able to dwell in his presence. We think it just as necessary for men to possess great faith in our day, as in any day or age of the past. And we believe further, that God wills that men should have as great faith now as in any past age, and the only reason we can assign for their not having it is because they do not live for it and seek it in the way God has ordained.

Many times we are in need of aid and assistance from God in this life, and the question arises, Why cannot we ask God for those things and receive them? It does not make any difference what assistance or blessing we may need in this life, God has promised to grant it if we but ask him for it in faith; and whenever man makes a request of God in faith for anything which he may be in need of, God is bound to grant it. In proof of this we cite the words of Moroni on page 537 of the Book of Mormon, as follows:—

And as sure as Christ liveth, he spake these words unto our fathers, saying, Whatsoever things ye shall ask the Father in my name which is good, in faith believing that ye shall receive, behold it shall be done unto you.

The reason why we fail so many times to receive needed blessings, is because we do not ask in faith, and not because God prefers to withhold them from us. For instance, James says:—

The prayer of faith shall save the sick.

We cannot think that the saving of the sick, here, has reference to saving in eternity; we cannot think this, because it is written in God's word and stands as a requirement made upon man by his perfect law, to live according to said law, and then comes his eternal salvation, or he is saved in eternity. To think that man can be saved eternally by the prayer of faith, is inconsistent in the extreme and does violence to the teachings of Christ and the word of God throughout. We prefer to believe that the apostle meant that the prayer of faith would heal the sick and raise them up from the bed of affliction. But notice this point, in the saying of James, and don't overlook it:—

The prayer of faith shall save the sick.

He does not say the prayer that is not of faith "shall save the sick." This thought agrees with the teachings of Christ all through the word of God:—

Whatsoever ye ask the Father in my name he shall give it you.

Jesus was continually rebuking the people because of their lack of faith, and does it seem Godlike for Christ to be reproving his disciples repeatedly for not having faith if they were not to blame for it? No, it does not; and to our way of thinking it was equal to saying, The way to obtain faith is marked out in my law, and the reason you do not have it is because you do not live according to its requirements, and not because God chooses to withhold the gift from you. In fact, the whole tenor of God's word goes to show that God wishes his people to have faith, and to have it to a greater degree than is ordinarily enjoyed among his people.

When the apostles asked Christ why they could not cast out an evil spirit, he said, it was because of their unbelief, and this unbelief was nothing more nor less than a lack of faith. After giving the apostles to understand that it was because of their lack of faith that the evil spirit could not be cast out, Christ tells them that if they had faith as a grain of mustard seed great things could be done by them, such as to remove mountains, and nothing should be impossible unto them. He also said:—

Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

What "goeth not out but by prayer and fasting?" "Why," says one, "that kind of a spirit that possessed the child of course." This seems to be the way in which this saying of Christ is generally interpreted; but, why not say Christ had reference to that kind of faith that he had just been talking about, the kind necessary to have in order to remove mountains?

"Hold!" says one, "are you going to have two or more kinds of faith?" No, but there are different degrees of faith; and the lesson taught by Christ in his explanation why the apostles could not cast out the evil spirit, together with what was subsequently said to them upon the subject, is that one may have a certain amount of faith (and most persons have some faith), and yet not enough to be able to do all things or even great things such as casting out devils, healing the sick, etc. It also teaches me that if I would obtain this kind of faith, this great faith, I must fast and pray for it. This is in harmony with our reasoning, that if man would have faith to any considerable degree he must get it by making sacrifice. Nephi says that in order that he might understand great things, mysteries, etc., he "fasted and prayed much." Reader, who is there of whom we have any record as receiving great blessings and favors from God, except by reason of faithfulness in keeping the "perfect law" governing in the matter? First let us understand the "perfect law" and then do it; for there is nothing that will give us more assurance or evidence (and this is faith according to Paul and Alma) that we will obtain a favorable answer to our petitions to God than a realizing sense that every duty upon our part has been faithfully and diligently performed. Faith, then, is a gift from God, and can be obtained by all who are fortunate enough to have a knowledge of his "perfect law," if they will only seek in the way the law requires.

It is God's gift, remember, and he is no respecter of persons; and the promise, "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened," will apply to you, reader, as well as to the greatest apostle that has ever lived. So, if we are not in possession of this faith of which we have been talking, after becoming acquainted with God's "perfect law" no one should be blamed but ourselves; because, if the Scriptures be true, God desires you and me to have faith and great faith, too, such as would enable us to commune with angels, and call down needed blessings from God out of heaven at any and all times.

In concluding this article we wish to say to the reader that the thoughts herein presented are according to our belief, being the conclusions we have formed by thinking upon the subject. We invite your criticism upon them, and should you feel led to make a reply to any thought presented, you need not fear offending the writer by being too personal, realizing as we do that if the conclusion we have reached is not in harmony with the word of God it will not stand, and the sooner we are made aware of the fact the better it will be for us. The writer has not become a servant of the church of Christ by reason of having been ordained to the priesthood, yet he is a firm believer in this, that it is just as necessary for him (as well as every other person) to have a correct understanding and knowledge of the "perfect law," as it is for any of God's authorized ministers, the chiefest apostle not excepted, if he would reap the reward promised and provided for in that "perfect law."

THE CHIEF RABBI OF GREAT BRITAIN ON THE CHRISTIAN FAITH.

CHRISTIAN Literature and Review of the Churches, which is welcome as a new venture in American journalism, has as account of an interview with Dr. Hermann Adler, of London, the chief Rabbi and head of the Jewish religion in the British Empire. In reply to certain questions the learned Rabbi gave answers which are of special interest as showing the views of the modern Jew regarding Christianity. The Rabbi was asked "What is the present belief of the Jews as to the Messiah?" to which he replied:—

"We hold that the Messiah has not yet appeared; that the Messiah foretold in the Scriptures is not to be a divine being, because we hold strongly to the belief in one God; but that he is to be a gifted man, a man who is consecrated with the gift of prophecy. We hold that the Messiah has not yet come, because the prophecies in connection with him in Isaiah and the other prophets have not yet been fulfilled. Universal peace does not prevail. Nor has the ingathering of Israel as yet taken place, which is distinctly taught as an accompaniment of his appearance. You must remember the wonderful pathos that gathers around our history. We look to the past, and we think it glorious in our successes, and sad in its teaching on our sins and error. But we look to the future as containing the golden age, the true fruition of Israel's mission. It was from us you got your idea of a Millennium. Basnage says that the theory of a Millennium was propounded with the purpose of inducing Jews to embrace Christianity. Our Messianic ideal is that of a lofty prophet. By him all nations will come to the knowledge of the unity of God. Our land will be restored to us. The whole of Palestine will be a temple for the whole earth. As to when it will be, we do not pretend to know."

To the question, "How far do you recognize Jesus of Nazareth as a religious teacher?" the Rabbi replied:—

"We consider that undoubtedly he was a teacher of great power and virtue, who had sat at the feet of his Hebrew masters, and taught the lessons of holiness and righteousness which he had learned from them, such for instance as the great maxim which he learned from Hillel, 'Do not unto others what thou dost not wish to be done unto thee.' The prophets and Talmud contain many of the sublimest teachings which are found in the New Testament, as shown by the late Dr. Deutsch in his article on the Talmud."

The interviewer asked, "Is it true that the sentences of the Lord's Prayer can be gleaned from the Talmud?" and Dr. Adler said: "That has often been done, not from the Talmud only, but from the words of the Hebrew Scriptures and prayer book. Lightfoot showed this in his 'Horæ Hebraicæ,' likewise Schöttgen, and Wünsche in his commentary recently published."

To the question, "Is it not singular that Christianity, which is a religion that came of the Jews, is essentially missionary in spirit, while Judaism seems content with being a religion of the Jews?"

The Rabbi said: "I once preached a sermon on the subject, 'Is Judaism a missionary religion?' in answer to certain statements made by Professor Max Müller. There I say as follows: 'Judaism has never held that the salvation of other nations is dependent upon their becoming Jews. It cannot bring itself to believe that the God of mercy has opened the gates of heaven to us alone. Our faith teaches that the so-called Mosaic law with its various rites and ordinances, is incumbent upon us Jews only, and that the non-Israelite need but observe the high ethical precepts there inculcated, and that if he keep these faithfully he may hope to win eternal bliss.'

"Is it a fair question to ask you sir," said the interviewer, "how far you, as Jews, can join in the rising movement for religious unity?"

"On that I rejoice to speak," the Rabbi said. "I may say readily that I am at all times ready, and regard it as a great privilege, to co-operate with my fellow countrymen in every social and philanthropic work. Such opportunities are to me a great happiness. I often sit on the same platform at the Mansion House with representatives of the Protestant and Roman Catholic sections of Christianity. I do so in all matters connected with the hospital movement, prevention of cruelty to children, to animals, and many philanthropic organizations. We seize all such opportunities of working with Christian ecclesiastics. I enjoy the honor of personal acquaintance with the Archbishop of Canterbury, and I am intimate with many clergymen of the Church of England and with several of the Dissenting leaders. I had the friendliest relations with the late Cardinal Manning, and they are continued with his successor, Cardinal Vaughan. But of course, as regards theologic differences, I must say at the present time I do not see any prospect of our agreement."—Literary Digest.

According to the official report, 139 members of the new German Parliament are Catholics, of whom 95 are members of the Catholic or Center party. Of the others several are Conservatives, 19 are Poles, one an anti-Semite, and four, strangely enough, are Social Democrats.

FROM GOD TO MAN.

MEN universally find it easier to unfold some one truth, and push it to its extreme conclusions, than they do to unite it with other complementary truths, and spread them out together as a harmonious system of belief. This is emphatically true in religion. There are so many points in faith capable of intense illumination, that the majority of men are sure to seize upon one or another of them, deepen their feelings toward it, and make of it a ruling term in thought. Intensity is much more readily attained in religious life than diffusion; yet diffusion—a gentle, genial light that embraces the entire spiritual landscape, and carries with it everywhere the conditions of growth—expresses far more of the Divine mind.

Both those who cling to the Christian church with tender regard, and those who look on it askance and criticize it harshly, often agree in the sentiment that the church, in its relations to men, is not so directly and constantly beneficent as we have a right to expect it to be. It separates itself from the great mass of human concerns, or brings its influence to bear on them in so indirect and dogmatic a form as to make it inefficacious and purely conventional. They are impressed with the want of vital sympathy between Christians and the masses of men in the hard contentions of life they are daily undergoing.

Christians seem to meet with more success in obeying the first commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," than they do in conforming to the second commandment, which flows directly from it: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." A part of this failure arises from the lack of diffusion, of which we have spoken, in Christian life, by which light and heat at one point become light and heat everywhere; and a part arises from the ease with which beliefs separate themselves from the actions they were designed to control, and become earnest yet barren speculations.

The demand of our time as contrasted with all previous times is, that we shall make this very transition by which the first commandment flows into the second commandment; by which the second commandment gives new vitality and scope to the first commandment. Christianity is not waiting for any more concise, penetrative, and adequate statement of truth, for any fresh emphasis on a neglected item of belief, but for diffusion, an actual taking possession of the social world in the spirit of Christ for ends of life—physical, social, and spiritual—in all and with all. This is the point I wish to emphasize,—the passage of that love which is kindled in the heart toward God, outward toward men.

This is the notion involved in the coming of the kingdom of heaven, put foremost in the prayer of our Lord. That kingdom is God's grace spread abroad among men, and reflected on all by all. It is a kingdom that will be as comprehensive as our wants, as full as are the resources of the world by which we are surrounded. It will be a kingdom, therefore, whose physical terms will include the highest and most general prosperity possible to men; whose intellectual terms will involve the widest response of men's minds to wisdom, and whose spiritual terms will embrace the most complete and universal expression of good-will. For such a kingdom as this, we can all labor in every possible relation of life. There is no act right in spirit and form that does not find its place in it. If this kingdom of heaven lies habitually before the mind as the glorious ideal toward which God's grace is tending,—which is gathering up and saving all that is worth saving in our lives and the lives of others, which is struggling in every social question for the victory of truth,—then our faith in God cannot lack diffusion. We are brought, by the love of God, face to face with the very work in which that love is fulfilled,—fulfilled as our expression of love toward God, fulfilled as God's expression of love toward us.

The one great corrective force in Christian life, its inner and ever-returning elasticity, is found in adequately conceiving and framing the kingdom of heaven among men. This lets in a light, speculatively and practically, which bathes the world.

Something allied to this, productive of a wonderful diffusion of thought, has taken place in science. It is that extension of the notion of law by which the mind of God, traveling outward through things, returns to us everywhere as the omnipresence of wisdom and power. The physical world, wisely apprehended, thus reflects back upon us constantly the thought of God. We are enveloped in it, instantly helped by it, led by it, borne up and on by it, as the true vitality of things,—the power by which they are gathered into a purpose, and made to pursue a creative end. Fate, accident, obstacles, all pass away, and we are with God, and him only, as he builds the world.

Now, some such transformation as this is waiting for us in the social world. This world is to disclose his love in the same full and unmistakable way in which the physical world has come to uncover his wisdom and power. God's love can secure concrete, varied, and full expression only in the lives of men in their relations to each other. What the mineral and vegetable kingdoms are to sunlight, sporting with it everywhere, dissolving it in every way, and flinging it back from the landscape, an exhaustless revelation of form and color, that must the spiritual kingdom—men with men—be to the spiritual attributes of God. God's grace must luxuriate in the love of men, must ever find in it new points of attachment, fresh and wider and more complex relations in which to reveal itself. The law we now need to know is the law of love, as the one correcting, harmonizing, building power in human society. It is here that we wait the revelation of God. The power to receive this light is the power to turn it back again on the world as light. The power to feel the love of God is the power to convey the love of God. Thus is the beauty of the Lord our God upon us.

The offices of Christ are so many that we can put intense emphasis on one or another of them at pleasure, and absorb ourselves in its contemplation. Is it not, however, distinctly the one preëminent feature in the life of Christ, that he wrought constantly, constructively, on the relations of men to men, to bring forth love in them, to inspire reciprocal life in them? The word was made flesh and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; that is, God disclosed himself in man and among men. These lives of ours were thus taught to reflect the divine light. A spiritual world, and God's omnipresence in it, began to be seen. This is the work with which we also are occupied, passing over from the invisible to the visible, from the principle to its fulfillment in practice, from the Word that was with God to the Word that is with man, from the chaos of human passion to the creation of human affection, from God declared in his own nature to God revealed in the nature of man. Says a recent writer: "Christianity, objectively considered, is Christ himself,—the mind, life, character, and spirit of Christ." There is a most true sense in which we may make Christ our creed, not striving primarily to render him on the speculative side, but to render him on the practical side, a power in man and between men. The true understanding of Christ, the theory of godliness, must arise out of knowing Christ; and we know him only as we find him a spiritual force working spiritual constructions in human society. The slow yet progressive and vital methods of God are operative, not so much speculatively as in that historic unfolding of events by which his will is carried forward in the social world,—the completion of all worlds.—Sunday School Times.

JOINT COUNCIL.

In compliance with the requirement of paragraph thirteen of the revelation received during conference and by agreement between the quorums affected, the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric met in joint council in the editor's room of the Herald Office at nine a. m., Friday, April 20. There were present: Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair, of the First Presidency; Alex. H. Smith, E. C. Briggs, James Caffall, W. H. Kelley, J. H. Lake, J. R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, Joseph Luff, and Gomer T. Griffiths, of the Twelve; E. L. Kelley, G. H. Hilliard, and E. A. Blakeslee, of the Bishopric.

President Joseph Smith was chosen to preside, and E. A. Blakeslee to act as secretary. A. H. Smith offered prayer, after which the president made a few remarks bearing upon the object of the council, and advising forbearance and toleration in speech and feeling, regardless of the distance between those present in their judgment upon the matters under discussion.

A number of questions were named and noted for discussion, and considerable informal talk was indulged in, after which resolutions were presented, discussed, and adopted in the following order, all decisions being finally made unanimous, with the sole exception noted:—

LAMONI COLLEGE.

Resolved that we look with favor upon the effort to build a college at Lamoni, to be controlled by the church.

Resolved, further, that we believe it should be a purely educational institution and free from sectarian influences or bias.

Resolved, further, That we give our hearty support to the present movement looking in the above direction.

CHURCH HISTORY.

Resolved that it is the opinion of this council that there is nothing in the resolution of April, 1893, on church history, that should in any way interfere with the preparation and publication of an authentic church history by the church.

Resolved, further, that it is the opinion of this council that church history, both ancient and modern, may be freely used as a means of information, for what the same may be worth.

DISCUSSIONS IN HERALD.

Whereas there seems to be a demand for a publication that may be a medium for more progressive and controversial articles for the good of the body than can be supplied by the Herald, therefore be it,

Resolved that the Board of Publication be requested to provide for such want as soon as practicable and without injury or interference with the circulation of the Herald.

UTAH CHURCH.

The present attitude of the Utah Church was discussed and the council informally expressed itself as of the opinion that the ministry should boldly stand as aggressors or defenders everywhere where the questions at issue between the two churches were introduced. The Presidency received unmistakable assurance of support in their efforts to direct such controversy as might be invited by contingencies arising.

LOCATING IN REGIONS ROUND ABOUT.

Resolved that all parties wishing to change their location be recommended to correspond with the Bishopric for information.

PRESIDING COUNCILS.

Resolved that it is the opinion of this joint council, that the words "presiding councils" in the fourth and seventh paragraphs of section 120 [of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants] refer to the traveling ministry—the Twelve and Seventy.

From this decision President W. W. Blair dissented.

DOCTRINAL TRACTS.

Resolved that the members of the Quorum of Twelve and the Presidency be requested to write tracts on such gospel topics as each may select, all of which shall be placed in the hands of the Presidency for examination; said tracts, when approved, to be placed in the hands of the Board of Publication to be issued as soon as possible.

DIRECTING LABOR OF HIGH PRIESTS.

Resolved that it is the opinion of this council that high priests, when needed for missionary service abroad, may be appointed by the First Presidency or the Twelve or both jointly, and should labor after such appointment under the direction of the Twelve, the same as seventies.

Resolved, further, that when high priests are acting in their own standing as local presidents, they are subject to the direction and counsel of members of both the First Presidency and the Twelve, whose duty it is to regulate.

Resolved, further, that when a necessity occurs for changing men or placing new men in the field, between conferences, to meet special exigencies, those making the appointment should notify the ministers in charge of the fields affected, if practicable, so as to avoid irregularity or possible conflict.

GOSPEL BOAT.

Resolved as the opinion of this joint council, that Bro. E. L. Kelley should proceed to San Francisco at the earliest possible time and secure the proposed boat for the Society Islands.

DETROIT BRANCH.

Resolved that we advise that the Colored members in Detroit, Michigan, be organized in a separate branch as soon as practicable.

BISHOP'S COUNCIL.

After some deliberation the consensus of opinion of the council was secured to the effect that the words "the Bishop and his council" found in paragraph 6 of the revelation of 1894, mean the Bishop and his two counselors, and a vote obtained in support of such understanding.

PRESIDENTS OF HIGH COUNCIL.

The following was adopted by regular vote:—

It is our opinion that the councilors referred to in paragraph 6, section 99, are the councilors of the President in the Presidency of the Church, but whether or not under certain circumstances the President would not be privileged to call others to assist him, is a query.

COUNCIL TO BE HONORED.

Resolved, that it is the opinion of this council that the statements found in paragraphs 1, 2, and 3 of the revelation of 1894 should be understood in the same sense as paragraph 3 of the revelation of 1882 and paragraph 4 of the revelation of 1890, and that it is the duty of the Saints to honor more fully the counsel and advice of the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Seventy in spiritual things.

PRESIDENCY OF TWELVE, AND MEANING OF THE WORD "ABROAD."

The following opinion of the First Presidency, as communicated to the Quorum of the Twelve, in 1890, was adopted as the opinion of this joint council:—

"As a traveling, presiding council, your quorum has the active supervision and presidency, under the First Presidency, over the entire field of ministerial labor, and control over districts, branches, and the ministry as a whole and as church organizations, and not as local presiding officers in these several organizations; holding special local presidency where no organization has been perfected; in a similar way as the First Presidency presides over the whole church, differing in this, that the First Presidency is necessarily local, while your province is not localized; nor do we mean by this that the word "abroad" is to be construed to mean foreign lands, but in the field of itinerant gospel labor everywhere, as contradistinguished from branch, district, or other local organizations."

REVELATION OF 1861.

Resolved, that paragraph 5, of the revelation of April 15, 1894, relating to the duty of the Twelve under the authority of the revelation of 1861 (D. and C. sec. 114), teaches that said revelation is still in force; but that whatever duty the Twelve might have felt rested upon them in "looking after the disbursements of the moneys in the treasury, or the management of the properties of the church," more than what is set forth in the agreement between the Twelve and the Bishopric, as affected in April, 1878, and reaffirmed in April, 1888, or indicated in the revelation of April, 1894, "they are now absolved from, the end designed by it having been reached."

REQUEST FOR ARTICLES FOR PUBLICATION.

The Herald editors were, by vote, advised to call for articles from any who might be disposed to write upon leading gospel topics, said articles to be subjected to the inspection of the committee as heretofore named, and to be accepted or rejected at its discretion.

It was then ordered that the president and secretary of the council prepare the minutes of proceedings for publication in the Herald.

The special business of the council having ended, Bro. James Caffall expressed a desire that the usual custom of setting foreign missionaries apart by laying on of hands and blessing be observed in his behalf, as he had been appointed to labor in Europe.

The council then knelt and was led in prayer by President Joseph Smith, who earnestly invoked the divine blessing upon Bro. Caffall and his labors, after which Bro. Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, A. H. Smith, and E. L. Kelley laid their hands upon him and set him apart, Pres. W. W. Blair being mouth in supplication. The Spirit of the Master fell upon those present and the service and season was one of joyful solemnity and peace.

"Redeemer of Israel" was then sung and the benediction pronounced by President Joseph Smith.

Thus ended the work of the council convened in accordance with the requirement of the revelation which had been formerly accepted by the church. All present were convinced that the appointment had been wisely made and that the results were and would be such as would fully attest the divinity of the call.

The sessions continued until the afternoon of the 25th, adjournment being had about four o'clock. Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths was excused and left for home on the 23d, and Bro. E. A. Blakeslee at noon on the 25th. Bro. Joseph Luff was then chosen secretary for the closing session.

To God whose hand has led us and whose patience has borne with our infirmities, the generous praise of his church is due. May our renewed consecration under the better conditions his mercy has brought about, bring to him added glory and to his church prosperity and peace.

JOSEPH SMITH, President,
JOSEPH LUFF, Secretary.

SCATTERED MEMBERS.

We would therefore kindly ask them to report to the branch by June 1. Otherwise they will be reported on our branch record as scattered members. THOMAS E. THOMPSON, Pres.,
J. W. SAWYER, Sec.

BEELER, Ness county, Kansas, April 7, 1894.

BORN.

ASHMORE.—Lillie Frances was born to John F. and Sr. Clara Ashmore, June 10, 1893. She was blessed at the South Park Mission in St. Joseph, Missouri, on April 20, 1894, by Elder J. M. Terry. The mother of this child lately embraced the gospel and is happy.

DIED.

HINKLE.—At her home near Sparta, Christian county, Missouri, March 18, 1894. Sr. Sarah Hinkle, aged 67 years. Deceased was born in Glasgow, Scotland; was baptized into the Utah Church at the age of eighteen in Glasgow; came to America in May, 1864, and crossed the plains to Utah. She arrived in Salt Lake in October, 1864, and returned to the States in May, 1865. Was married to Bro. A. J. Hinkle in the fall of 1865; was baptized into the Rigdon organization by Stephen Post in 1867; moved to Manitoba in 1875, with Stephen Post and others of the Rigdonites. She was baptized into the Reorganization, with her husband and, in August, 1882, at Green Ridge, Manitoba, by Bishop Blakeslee. A husband, two sons, and three daughters survive her. She died firm in the faith of the latter-day work.

STONE.—At the home of her son, Eugene Howard, in Blackberry, Kane county, Illinois, Sr. Unity Stone, aged 76 years, 9 months, 9 days. Sr. Unity was born in Ellisburg, Jefferson county, New York; and died December 21, 1893. Deceased was married to the late Bro. Dimic Howard, who died December 11, 1868, in Blackberry, Kane county, Illinois. She was again married to S. S. Stone, in 1874. Mr. Stone died September 4, 1889. After that time she made her home with her Son Eugene.

BOWKER.—At his home in Union, Oregon, January 17, 1894, Bro. Arthur G. Bowker. He was born in Belleville, Wisconsin, August 6, 1860; was baptized in July, 1884, by Elder Thomas Nutt, at Audubon, Minnesota. He removed to Oregon two years ago to visit his Brother Willie whom he had not seen for nineteen years. A mother, two sisters, two brothers, a wife, and two little daughters mourn. There being no elder near, his funeral sermon was conducted by the M. E. minister to a large and attentive congregation which had gathered despite the blinding storm, thus showing the respect in which he was held by all. He died firm in the faith which he had espoused. That we may be united in heaven after our separation on earth is our prayer.

MATTHEWS.—Sr. Mary P. Matthews, wife of J. W. Matthews, died March 30, 1894, at her home in Ft. Madison, Iowa. Sister Matthews was a loving wife, a kind mother, and a faithful Christian. Her death is a sad blow to the husband and five children who survive her. Deceased was a native of Maryland and was born in Harford county, June 19, 1836.

GLOVER.—At the home of her daughter, Galien, Michigan, April 19, 1894, Mrs. Sarah A. Glover. She was born September 5, 1827, in Saratoga county, New York. She was the mother of seven children, three of whom are now living. Her first husband, Ezra N. Serrine, died May 27, 1867. She was again married to Andrew J. Glover, Sr., June 15, 1873, who survives her. She was not a member of the church, but believed in the doctrine, and no doubt would have obeyed the gospel had she lived. Funeral services were conducted by Elder E. J. Goodenough.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Southern Missouri district, Greeting:—During the past conference year more than seventy baptisms have been reported in our district, though the laborers are few. It is quite encouraging to know that neither the ministry nor the laity have been idle. As the General Conference just past has been a grand success, I for one, though not permitted to be present, feel encouraged to go forward in the work committed to my charge. My earnest desire and prayer to God is that the presidents of each branch in our district, as well as every other officer and member, will fully realize the importance and magnitude of the work now confronting us, and by using wisdom and commendable zeal will perform their respective duties, acting in perfect harmony with each other and with the Spirit and letter of the law of God as revealed in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and at the same time having charity for all men, whether in or out of the church.

Let us all remember the command; "Owe no man anything;" and if in debt let us get out as quickly as possible. We should remember and keep the law of tithing as kept by Abraham and Jacob. (Genesis 14: 20; 28: 22.) This law was also taught by Christ. (See Matthew 23: 23.) This law was taught anciently when the gospel was on the earth, and was obeyed with good results following. The gospel being the same, it must and will be obeyed in our day. The contest for the right is now on, "Therefore let us not sleep as do others, but let us watch and be sober." "Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly,—comfort the feeble-minded,—support the weak,—be patient toward all men."

Let us not be fearful of the final result of our work, neither doubting, but with a Moses' meekness and a Joshua's zeal let us press on to victory.

We want no cowards in our bands,
Who will their colors fly;
We call for valiant-hearted men,
Who're not afraid to die.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Cholera has reappeared in Warsaw, Constantinople, and Lisbon.

Europe's crop outlook is reported as good.

BERLIN, April 21.—The important event which Emperor William was the first to announce yesterday at Coburg—namely; the betrothal of the Grand Duke Nicholas, Czarowitz of Russia, to the Princess Alix of Hesse, is looked upon as cementing the new entente between Russia and Germany, and as securing a prolonged period of European peace. Although the rumor of the betrothal has frequently been circulated, only to be as frequently denied, the announcement that it was a fact was a surprise to every member of the royal family. The betrothal has been spoken of as impossible of realization, and there is no doubt it is almost directly traceable to the influence of Emperor William.

ATHENS, April 21.—Earthquakes last night and to-day have done great damage at Thebes and its vicinity. The town of Neapille, near Atalanta, otherwise known as Talanda, seven miles north of Mount Talanda, is a heap of ruins. A number of persons were injured at Atalanta and at Chalcis, capital of Eubœa, seventeen miles from Thebes. Volo and Larissa have also sustained considerable damage, but Thebes suffered most of all. Its inhabitants will have to be promptly succored by the government, as they are said to be without food or shelter.

At Thebes about fifty houses fell during one of the shocks this morning. The city is in a state of panic and destitution. The terrified people have rushed in crowds away from Thebes, believing that the end of the world had come. Conflicting stories are told of the loss of life. The government is sending to-night, a warship to Thebes with 500 tents, a large number of surgeons, a detachment of engineers, and supplies of food for the destitute people.

General Kelley's commonweal army, two thousand strong, marched out of Council Bluffs, Iowa, April 21, for Western Iowa. Omaha railroad men firmly refused to transport the army except as individuals and at regular fare. The army has camped at Underwood, Neola, Avoca, and Atlantic, where it has been fed by citizens.

General Coxe's army was at Boonsboro, Maryland, April 23, en route to Washington. Branches of the commonweal army or industrial movements have been organized at numerous points throughout the United States.

The city council of Chicago has taken steps to prohibit commonwealers and industrialists from passing through the city and has enjoined the railroads from landing bodies of men in the city and surrounding territory.

The commissioners of the District of Columbia have issued a proclamation urging those marching on the capital to turn back, and notifying all that the laws of the District will be rigidly enforced against violators of the public peace. It is said that General Coxe expects to have from 300,000 to 500,000 commonwealers congregated in Washington early in May, and that they will bring the strongest pressure to bear upon Congress by holding mass meetings and issuing addresses to the people.

General Kelly is reported as making the following declaration of intentions:—

"Petitions from laboring people have been numerous and ineffective in the past," said the General; but this living petition will be hard to pigeonhole. That is the reason I am leading these men to the Capital. Once there our plans will be successfully carried out. Two Congressmen are already pledged to present a memorial in our behalf. That memorial is now being drawn up by a well-known Washington firm of constitutional lawyers, and will be ready for us when we reach the journey's end. Our demands as set forth in the memorial will be about as follows:—

"We will ask that the commission already in existence to look after the redeeming of arid lands in the West be instructed to proceed with the work. We will ask that the men in our army, and the great army of the unemployed which we represent, be put to work on this irrigation. My idea is that by the time those arid wastes have been wrested from the sage brush and jack rabbit and have begun to bloom the men who have worked there will have saved enough money to carry them through their first year of farming. They can settle on the lands they have reclaimed and within a short period will have developed from homeless wanderers into sturdy farmers and property-owners. That in substance is our demand. We will not attempt to dictate what wages will be; what we want is work. If we can only get to Washington, if we can let the lawmakers see that we are breadwinners, honest, and sincere, we will be successful in our mission, for our demands are not unreasonable.

"I have no connection with Coxe. We will combine with his army if we can reach Washington in time, but if not we will go alone."

COLUMBUS, O., April 21.—Three fourths of all the miners of bituminous coal in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, Missouri, Colorado, and Indian Territory at noon to-day laid down their tools and inaugurated the biggest strike ever known in the United States, according to President McBride of the United Mine Workers of America. He estimates that 132,000 out of 180,000 miners have stopped work. This includes substantially all the organized miners and many of the unorganized. It is not anticipated by the officers of the National organization that all of the organized men will join at first, but they will soon fall into line.

The following is a statement of commonwealers now en route to Washington:—

Commander.	Number of men.	Where marching.
Kelley	1,118	Iowa.
—	850	California.

BILLINGS, Mont., April 25.—In a fight this forenoon between Hogan's division of the Coxe army and eighty-seven Deputy United States Marshals one man was fatally shot and several others were hurt. The citizens took a stout stand for the commonwealers and so terrorized the marshals that Hogan was allowed to load his men in the captured Northern Pacific train and proceed eastward.

Butte's contingent of Coxe's army captured a train Tuesday morning in Butte, and with its own engineer, fireman, and train crew left at 5:55 a. m. over the Northern Pacific road.

Murder and other acts of violence have resulted from the miners' strike in Alabama. The torch has been applied to mining property in the Hocking Valley, Ohio.

John Alexander Dowie, the Chicago faith cure healer, so called, who was exposed by the Chicago Tribune, is securing funds with the avowed object of erecting a tabernacle for the halt, lame, and afflicted among his followers.

ATHENS, April 23.—There were several lighter shocks of earthquake last night and to-day. Telegrams received from the shaken districts represent an appalling aspect of affairs. Whole villages are in ruins and the survivors are camping out, in many cases entirely without food. The total number of deaths reported is 227, of which 130 were killed at Malesina alone. The King and Prince Nicholas, accompanied by their suites, arrived at noon to-day at a village near Atalanta. They proceeded on horseback in order to visit several of the ruined villages.

A mob of workmen which demanded of the authorities of Hold-Mezo Nasarhely, Hungary, the return of a lot of Socialist documents which had been seized were fired at by troops and half a dozen men were wounded.

The large woolen mills at Ivanovo, Russia, have been burned. The damage is estimated at 1,750,000 rubles. Ten persons were killed or injured during the conflagration and 1,200 people were thrown out of work.

AALESUND, Norway, April 24.—The American North Polar expedition under the command of Walter Wellman, sailed to-day for the island of Spitzbergen on the steamer Ragnvold Jarl, which has been chartered for the purposes of the expedition. Experts here pronounce the steamer to be the best iceboat belonging in Norway. The aluminum boats that the expedition carries were greatly admired here for their beauty, strength, and lightness. As the Ragnvold Jarl left the quay on her voyage to the far North, the stars and stripes were hoisted at the foremast head, and salutes were fired. All the shipping in the harbor was decorated with flags in honor of the Arctic explorers. A large fleet of small boats escorted the steamer out of the harbor. Prior to her departure, a large number of cable dispatches expressing well-wishes for the success of the expedition were received from the United States.

St. PETERSBURG, April 24.—A law has been prepared compelling the owners of all Russian vessels to place them at the disposal of the government in time of war if demanded.

Telegrams dated Adair, Iowa, April 26, report Kelly's army as weary and footsore and as making an effort to obtain railroad transportation. Railroad authorities have warned the marchers that laws for protection of their property will be strictly enforced. It is said that numbers of desertions from Kelly and Coxy have occurred.

Senator Allen's resolution of sympathy for the commonwealers was defeated in the United States Senate by vote of 54 to 6.

TOLUCA, Ill., April 26.—Four thousand angry coal miners from Spring Valley, La Salle, Peru, Streator, and other places are coming here to force the 500 miners here to strike to-morrow. They left these points this evening and are marching in bodies across the country, so as to arrive at Toluca about daylight to-morrow. Most of these men are said to be armed and for that reason the residents have great fears that there will be serious trouble.

LONDON, April 27.—The full details of the loss of life and damage to property caused by the earthquakes that occurred in Greece Friday, Saturday, and Sunday last have been slow in coming to hand. The Times correspondent now at Matrini, near Atalanta, says:—

I have visited several villages in this district and everywhere a scene of terrible destruction presents itself. Kiparissa was leveled completely. Of the village of Proskyne nothing remains save heaps of stones and piles of broken timbers. The number of dead here was forty-three. The scene at Malesina, some eight miles away, was appalling. This place was so completely wiped out of existence that in most cases even traces of the house walls have disappeared, they having been swallowed in the chasms that opened in the earth. The dead here numbered 135. Bread is being distributed among the sufferers, as the peasants' stores of grain have been destroyed and the mills have fallen. Everywhere the people beg for planks with which to construct temporary dwellings. The weather has improved, and this in a measure alleviates the prevailing distress.

Henry Asquith to-day introduced in the House of Commons the bill for the disestablishment of the church in Wales and Monmouth.

Cholera prevails in East Galicia, twenty-eight cases and eleven deaths. At Koons, in Russia, fifty-five cases and thirty-three deaths in one month, and at Plock, six cases and five deaths. Cholera also prevails in the department of Finisterre, France.

A CHEAP POWER,

And at the same time a reliable power, are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the gauge is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, 405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco. Marder, Luse & Co. PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc. Price,.....$1 25

VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. THE SON OF THE CARPENTER AND THE COMMON PEOPLE.

In an article contributed by Dr. Lyman Abbott to The Cosmopolitan, he observes, that, from the first the message of Jesus was received with welcome by the peasant population—especially in Galilee. This northern province of Palestine was the New England of the Holy Land. The influence of the hierarchy was far less there than in Judea. Neither the elaborate system of observances which characterized the Pharisee, nor the cynical scepticism which characterized the Sadducee, had infected the peasant and commercial population of Galilee as it had the more exclusive and restricted population of Judea, dominated as it was by the Holy City, the temple, and the priesthood. Provincial pride in the genius of the untaught Rabbi, who was one of the people, and spoke as one of them, added to his fame and popularity. But the secret of both lay in his message and spirit. The author of "Ecce Homo" has well indicated these in the now familiar phrase, "Enthusiasm of Humanity." The Jew regarded disease as a special sign of divine displeasure: the more loathsome the disease the greater the displeasure; the lunatic as possessed of a devil; the blind as punished for his own sin or that of his parents; the leper as loathsome alike to God and all good men. Jesus treated disease as a misfortune, and the sick, the blind, the leprous, as objects of pity. Galilee resounded with the fame of the cures which accompanied his preaching. The Sabbath was not too sacred a day nor the synagogues too sacred a place for the manifestation of this pity and the exercise of this mercy. The law of Moses forbade touching a corpse; but Jesus more than once touched the hand of the corpse that he might bring life back. It forbade one to touch a leper; but Jesus put his hand upon the leper to heal him. Whatever interpretation Rationalism may put upon these stories of marvelous cure, it cannot be doubted that the simple faith of the common people would find no difficulty in believing them, and in them find an evidence of a humanity without a precedent then, if not without a parallel since.

Not only disease, but, scarcely less, sin Jesus treated as a misfortune, and the sinner as an object of compassion, not of invective. The only exception was the hypocrite, who pretended to religion in order that he might mask iniquity. In discarding the sacrificial system of the Jews, Jesus discarded the legislation which had grown up with it.

Out of certain sanitary regulations, probably prescribed in the wilderness, there had grown up an elaborate doctrine of ceremonial uncleanness. Certain meats were unclean and could not be eaten; the corpse was unclean and could not be touched; certain diseases made the sufferer unclean and made him an outcast until the priest had pronounced him cleansed; the Pagan was unclean—contact with him must be scrupulously avoided. Out of this doctrine grew an elaborate ritualism of ablutions. All these elaborate religious regulations Jesus swept away. He refused to perform the ceremonial ablutions and ate with "unwashed hands;" he himself enjoyed freedom and he recommended to others freedom on the Sabbath; he discountenanced praying in public, counseled against long prayers, and told the people, in their praying, to ask God for anything they wanted. Between children and their father there is no court etiquette. Thus, under his teaching, religion ceased to be a special observance and became an affair of practical life.

In these and other respects, Jesus showed unmistakably his sympathy with the common people, and the common people heard him gladly. He preached a doctrine which they could understand; presented a religious life which they could enter into; prescribed no duties which they could not practice; and recommended his teaching by illustrations drawn from their daily life. His congregations were chiefly composed of the common people; his special friends and companions were chosen from the common people. In the practical and social questions of the day he identified himself with them. The priest and Levite who passed the wounded traveler by, he condemned; the heretical Samaritan who went out of his way to relieve the unfortunate wayfarer, he commended. The rich man who fared sumptuously every day, oblivious of the poverty about him, he portrayed as in another life suffering torments in hell; the outcast beggar is in paradise. The shrewd and thrifty capitalist, whose only notion of prosperity was accumulation and still accumulation, he called a "fool." A corrupt ring had installed themselves in the outer court of the Temple, turned it into a market-place, and driven the common people out. With flashing eye, he turned upon the traffickers and single-handed drove them away. Personally, he shared the poverty of the poor with them and required those who wished to unite themselves to him in the innermost circle of his friends to do the same; much in the spirit in which to-day a Salvationist working in the slums submits to the conditions of the life which she endeavors to transform.—Literary Digest.

ON SUNDAY AFTERNOONS.

In my experience I have found invaluable help in books, writes Eleanor B. Amerman on a discussion on "Children and the Sabbath" in the May Ladies' Home Journal. Almost every child likes to be read to. I have tried to choose books which would widen the children's field of scriptural knowledge, and they have listened to so much about the land of Palestine, its hills and valleys and grand old mountains, its plains, and rivers, and seas, and its principal cities and villages, that they think of it now as a real place, where people live, and where the flowers grow, and the birds sing, and where little children play, just as they do in other countries. And we have found so many beautiful Bible stories connected with these different places, both in the Old and New Testaments.

I have read to the children from the lives of great missionaries, of their labors among the Heathen, for Christ, and as they hear these stories—these thrilling stories which are all true—of noble self-sacrifice, dauntless courage and patient perseverance in the Master's service, do you not think, with me, that they will be filled with a desire to be like these men, "faithful over a few things"? They hear of foreign lands, of queer people who "sit in darkness," of heathen customs and religious rites and ceremonies. They hear, too, of the change wrought in these people by the working of the Holy Spirit in their hearts.

It is best that you should not do all the reading yourself. Let there be some magazine, paper, or book suitable for the day, which the children may have to read themselves and let these be reserved for Sunday.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT DECISION.

The decision of Judge Philips, of the United States Circuit Court, Western District of Missouri, Kansas City, awarding title and possession of the Temple Lot to the Reorganized Church as the true successor of the original Church of Latter Day Saints organized April 6, 1830, and setting forth the position of the Utah Church and other factions as departures from the true faith, and without right to the name or property of the Original Church.

Published by the Reorganized Church. Valuable for reference, and general distribution.

In pamphlet form complete: price 15 cents each; two for 25 c. nts. Special prices on orders for ten or more.

Address orders to David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recess-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit of Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific stand points. Christ as the true type of man, his life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.
R. S. SALYARDS - ASSISTANT EDITOR.
JOSEPH LUFF CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 9, 1894.

LET THE HERALD HEAR FROM YOU.

THE HERALD being the organ of the church, the property of the church, every member having the same pecuniary interest and ownership in it as every other member, it seems to us that there should be a far better interest in its success, both as to its success financially, and its contents as a literary work.

It has been the aim of the editors to make it the best paper for the general good of the whole church; but we regret to write that there is a class of writers, in the ministry as well as among the laymembers, who take but little or no pains to give the HERALD the benefit of their efforts. We sometimes get the first notice of events that have transpired in the field, of practical interest and worth to the whole church, from reading of them in other papers than the church journal.

Of course, the HERALD cannot print all that is written, but it can come as near to it as any other paper not larger than itself; and certainly the standing and experience of its editorial staff may be as safely trusted to gather out the good and save it, as any others.

It is a fact, however, that personal interest and private enterprise lose sight of the public benefit, and cause a neglect that is scarcely excusable; and this is especially so in the case of the eldership.

If anything of interest occurs in your fields of labor that would be acceptable to the church, as news, let them hear of it through the HERALD.

The sermons published and sent out as supplements to the HERALD, are so sent that the Saints who want to send them to others as tracts may do so, without putting the possible controversies supposed to be in the HERALD into the hands of their friends; thus removing that awful objection to the circulation of the HERALD among outsiders; an objection in which the editors do not share, as a matter of course, but which we acknowledge the existence of.

It is our conviction that in some cases, few or many, the objection to controversy in HERALD is purely technical and has no sufficient basis in fact; but having an existence, must be recognized, and catered to, if practicable without loss of principle or effectiveness. Our elders in their preaching in effect, invite controversy; nor do they shun it when aroused, deeming it one way to effectively reach the people.

But, let the good work of spreading the truth go on, and give the church journal a cordial, material, and moral support.

THE A. P. A.

WE regret to see any of the brethren mixed up with quasi-political and religious organizations, such as the American Protective Association appears to be; and without attempting to dictate to any man, we suggest that the agitation which this association is making possible is sure to result in political trouble. Already, the church is charged in one place with favoring an active orator in the association, because the Glad Tidings in a late issue made favorable mention of a book written by a former elder in the church, James A. McIntosh, by name.

A copy of this book was sent us to read and advertise in HERALD; which we did not do, for reasons that are good to us; and without reference to the merits of the subject matter of the book we declined to notice it in HERALD.

We suggest that everybody inclined to associate the church or the HERALD with the A. P. A. movement, because the Glad Tidings published a favorable notice of the book above referred to, will do well to take notice and remember that the Glad Tidings is a private enterprise conducted by a member of the church, for which the general church is in no wise responsible; Bro. E. K. Evans being quite able to answer for his own conduct of said Glad Tidings.

ETERNAL LIFE.

THE central and grand promise given to man of God and assured to him by and through the life, mission, suffering, and death of Jesus, was, is and ever will be eternal life:—

And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.—1 John 2: 25.

And this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life and this life is in his Son.—1 John 5: 11.

Everything else that is enjoyed by the disciple of Jesus here, or to be enjoyed hereafter is secondary in its nature, and is made dependent largely on the realization of the one great final promise, eternal life.

The conditions upon which rest all the pleasures, peace, joys, and glories of the world to come are made dependent on the reception of the principle by which life is perpetuated in eternity. Jesus, in his prayer to the Father, said:—

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.—St. John 17: 3.

This is frequently misquoted by some of the elders, and made to mean something a little different; equivalent to the saying that if a man knew Jesus Christ that man was in possession of eternal life; whereas the apparently clear meaning is that eternal life is essential to the condition in which a man can know God and Jesus Christ; that a man securing the right to life eternal would, if he should continue in those conditions in which he shall find himself, both see and know God and Christ; for where they are he will be. How important then it is that men should make use of the only means by which they may attain unto eternal life. See to it then, brethren, that you so love.

"REORGANIZATION."

IN a letter written by Dr. Karl G. Maeser, president California mission of the Utah Church, dated at San Francisco, California, February 9, 1894, and published in the Call for February 10, he states:—

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has never had any need of "reorganization," having maintained her legitimate continuance uninterruptedly from President Joseph Smith, the martyred prophet, until now. Parties have occasionally fallen away and organized under various names, only to fade out of sight again after an ephemeral existence. Apostles Thatcher and Lyman, Elder Roberts, the undersigned, and all our collaborators in this mission, duly commissioned by the First Presidency in Salt Lake City, do not recognize any "reorganized church."

It may be possible that Professor Maeser is not informed that in the year 1847, at Winter Quarters, President Brigham Young said that the time had come that it was necessary to reorganize the church, and then and there commenced to so reorganize, beginning at the Presidency.

This reorganization must have been the work of design on the part of President Brigham Young, and the persistence with which the baptism of all who came "over the rim of the basin;" meaning the crest that divided the plains of the east from the valleys in the midst of the mountains, is strong presumptive evidence that there was a settled policy to unfix the old relations of the membership and bind them into the reorganized new regime.

Professor Maeser is too good a scholar not to know that when the faith and doctrines and modes of procedure of a church have been agreed upon and made public among its members, no number of the body can so far create a diversion by the introduction of new doctrines or practices, as to divest the smallest minority of the rights, privileges, and blessings, or opportunities and immunities with which union with that church at first endowed them; hence, when President Young was chosen to preside over the church reorganized under his advice and personal direction, he was violating and setting at naught a principle the influence and action of which affected every member existing in the church at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith; and when that reorganization, begun at Winter Quarters in Iowa and Nebraska, culminated in 1852 in the public announcement of the dogma of plural marriage, so widely different from the law given of God in 1831, and, by article and covenant solemnly made by the church in 1835, every single member of the original church was absolved from anything like allegiance to the show of authority, if such absolution had not already occurred, which we are of the opinion had so occurred.

The change in the marital law of the church, which took place at such public and fateful declaration of that peculiar dogma on that fatal 29th of August, 1852, wrought such mischief that of it President Wilford Woodruff said, October 25, 1891:—

I have received a revelation and a commandment from the Lord, which I have not revealed to any man, which I shall reveal to this assembly, and the command of the Lord I shall give to this people, which is this: The Lord has revealed to me that there are many in the church who feel badly tried about the manifesto, and also about the testimony of the Presidency and Apostles before the master in chancery. The Lord has commanded me to put the following question to the Saints, and those who will give strict attention to it, shall have the Holy Ghost to be with them to inspire them to answer that question for themselves, and the Lord has promised that the answer will be to all alike. The question is this: Which is the wisest course for the Latter Day Saints to pursue—to continue to attempt to practice plural marriage, with the laws of the nation against it and the opposition of 60,000,000 of people and at the cost of the confiscation and loss of all the temples, and the stopping of all the ordinances therein, both for the living and the dead, and the imprisonment of the First Presidency and Twelve and the leaders or heads of families in the church, and the confiscation of the personal property of the people (all of which of themselves would stop the practice), or after doing and suffering what we have through our adherence to this principle, to cease the practice and submit to the law, and through doing so leave the prophets, apostles, and fathers at home, so that they can instruct the people and attend to the duties of the church, and also leave the temples in the hands of the Saints, so that they can attend to the ordinances of the gospel, both for the living and the dead?

Now, the inspiration of the Lord will reveal to any person which course wisdom would dictate us to pursue. And the Latter Day Saints throughout Israel should understand that the First Presidency of the church and the Twelve Apostles are led and guided by the inspiration of the Lord, and the Lord will not permit me, nor any other man, to lead the people astray.

This was published in the current number of the Juvenile Instructor, Pres. G. Q. Cannon's paper, and is therefore, practicable evidence on the point herein made.

This departure was but the climaxing of teaching, by which President Young had reorganized the church under his personal touch to make it what he desired it to be.

From the evidence of the manifesto, and the later developments touching doctrine and practice, taken together with the closing words of President Woodruff's remarks as given above, it is an inevitable but fair deduction that notwithstanding President Woodruff said that the Lord will not permit him or any other man to lead the people astray, some one had led them into a course in which they did antagonize the laws of the nation and found themselves in opposition to 60,000,000 of people, as well as out of harmony with the laws of God given by revelation, upon which the primitive church was founded and flourished till the death of Joseph Smith.

Professor Maeser says that himself and fellows "do not recognize any reorganized church." Possibly not, but it is patent that God has, and the courts of the land do; some think these men would do far better for themselves and those attendant upon their teaching if they would but listen to the logic of events and do likewise.

A NEW HEALER.

A QUEER little man apparently of the Aztec race, and ninety-three years of age, wearing white hair and beard, almost entirely deaf, is exciting much comment and curiosity at San Antonio, Texas, as a healer. His methods are peculiar, and it is said, cures are wrought in many instances by his prescriptions. Sr. Nannie A. Gifford, writing of him in a late letter, is disturbed that some Saints seem to have faith in him as a healer. But we advise her and all others that they be patient, remembering that all such things are in our day but the manifestations of those things which the prophets said should come; hence are neither mysterious nor marvelous, but are attestations of prophecies uttered long since. The Saints should be contented with the means God has placed at their disposal for relief from pain, disease, or death; and if God does not hear them and answer by renewal of the forces of the life of the flesh, rest satisfied with the life to come, of which no child of God can by any possibility be deprived.

FOLLY OR LIE—WHICH IS IT?

THE following is from the Wesleyan Methodist, published at Syracuse, New York, in its issue for January 24, 1894, sent us by some one from Northern Michigan:—

FREESOIL.—We are still in the moral warfare on the Freesoil charge. We have not had any extra meetings yet on this charge, but we expect to have some soon. There seems to be indications of the church taking on a higher type of Christianity. God be praised for this; we have had some blessed conversions notwithstanding the minds of the people are being poisoned with that fearful doctrine called Latter Day Saints, who are no more nor less than Mormons, for they believe the Book of Mormon to be the inspired word of God, and they claim to have discovered a new gospel. But Paul says:—

"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

And in Revelation 22: 18:—

"For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book."

But the most blasphemous thing about this sect known as Latter Day Saints is, that they teach that God is the God of Adam, and Adam is the God of Christ, and Christ is the God of Joseph Smith, and Joseph Smith is the God of this nation. God save us from such heretical doctrine. One of the alarming things about it is that they deceived the people here until they have a membership of sixty. But I believe that this is the fulfillment of that scripture where it says, That in the last days false prophets shall arise and deceive the very elect, if it were possible. There is a book called "New Light on Mormonism," and I wish it could be placed on sale in our publishing house and its sale urged everywhere. This book is doing much good here in exposing this terrible ism, for it is a conglomeration of isms,—Mormonism and Universalism, Adventism, Mohammedanism, and Devilism; and the latter is its main feature.

Well, I must not fail to speak of the good people of this place. I have always thought that surprise parties were a failure, but the good people of this place made a success of it last Monday night, when the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church and wife came and made me a pleasant call, and just as we got nicely visiting I heard some one at the door and I went and opened it, and in walked about thirty of our friends and took complete control of the house. After a pleasant visit and song and prayer, and a few words from Brother D. E. Reed, all returned home, leaving the writer $10.50 better off than when they came. May the good Lord bless them all is my prayer.—M. F. ROZELL.

If this man Rozell is himself ignorant in regard to the truths of the doctrine and faith of the Reorganized Church, it is really pitiable that the publishers of so old, and usually so reliable a religious journal as the Wesleyan Methodist has been, should be so easily caught by so bold a misrepresentsensation as this letter from Freesoil, Michigan, contains.

No matter whether any other body of so-called Mormons ever believed or taught as this writer states about God, Adam, Christ, and Joseph Smith, it should have been well known to Mr. Rozell, and the Methodist's editors, that the Reorganized Church had become celebrated as opponents of those dogmas, by which the God and Christ ideas had been cheapened and scandalized. The mission work of Brethren Cornish, F. C. Smith, Carpenter, Cooper, and others in that Northern Michigan country; and the attitude of Bro. J. H. Peters, well known at Coleman, Midland, and that region, should have been a public safeguard against so foolish a misstatement as Mr. Rozell indulges in. And while it is a matter of pity that any man wearing the sheep's clothing of a reputed minister of the gospel, of any denomination of so-called Christian worshippers, could descend to make and write to his denominational journal so vain and powerless a falsehood, it is also a pity that the sense of propriety, the calling of a minister, the expectation of the people that a preacher should be a truthful and truth-loving man, does not keep such men from being guilty of telling lies about those who may possibly oppose them in religious ideas. Such efforts as this letter from Freesoil, can only hurt those who make them, as the truth is sure to come to the light sooner or later to the discomfiture and chagrin of those who are guilty of misrepresentation.

The Reorganized Church, the representatives of which Mr. Rozell met at Freesoil, Michigan, and of whom he wrote as deceiving the people, believe in God, the Father; Christ, the Son of God; and in the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of Truth; and that Adam was only Adam, the first man; and that Joseph Smith was but a man; and that neither Adam nor Joseph Smith is a God, or to be worshiped as such.

JEWISH COLONIZATION.

THE following taken from the Semi-weekly Deseret News, for April 27 is of interest to the Saints. It is pleasing to discover that there is a possibility of there being a plan of coöperative colonization the details of which may be carried into effect. We shall take interest in seeing whether this one will be a success, or fail as so many have before it.

JEWISH SETTLEMENTS.

The Jewish colonization scheme in the Argentine republic under the auspices of Baron Hirsch is attracting attention on account of the great success it has met with, and the socialistic principles to which this success partly is due.

The enterprise was undertaken as a means of relief to the thousands of Jews who were crowded out of Russia by the edicts of the Czar. A committee selected for the purpose recommended suitable families as settlers, and at present the colonists amount to 6,300, most of whom are from the southern parts of Russia. Practical men are superintending the work of the settlers, and they have already brought 17,250 acres under cultivation, with the prospects of an abundant harvest.

The sum invested by the Hirsch fund amounts to $2,200,000, and this capital is represented in the municipal government of the colonists. As soon as a colony is formed, a council is appointed consisting of three members, two of whom are elected by the settlers and one by the manager of the fund. This council meets every day and decides upon what work is to be done by each colonist. It regulates the distribution of the machinery and deals with matters of transport, building, and the public health. It receives the produce and distributes it to each individual according to his contribution of labor. With these principles carried out in every detail, it is not surprising that great success should be achieved; and the eulogistic reports sent by colonists to their friends in other parts of the world will readily be believed.

The Jews gathering in Palestine and settling in the agricultural colonies in that country are meeting with great success, too. Nothing in the whole country is more striking to the traveler than the glaring contrast between the old villages of the natives and the new settlements of the Jews. The former are mere mud huts surrounded by filth and debris and neglected fields and apologies for orchards, while the latter stand as oases in the gloomy desert, inviting and smiling upon the stranger from beneath the luxurious shading leaves of a semitropical vegetation, made more inviting still by the application of industry and genius. What the Jews are capable of doing in the way of cultivating the soil, when properly guided and supported, is perhaps nowhere more apparent than in their settlements on the southern slope of Mount Carmel. It seems, then, that the result is equally satisfactory in the old world and the new.

To ascribe this notable success to a certain system of government alone as the true cause of it would be a fallacious conclusion. Nothing can account for it except the interference of Providence. To the Ruler of nations it is due that the people long scattered on the surface of the earth are beginning to assemble and achieve a success that will ultimately result in their being acknowledged as one of the leading nations of the world. Their gathering on this continent—the land of Joseph—and in the country of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is no accident, but clearly a part of the great, divine plan for bringing that people to a fulfillment of their final destiny.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Iowa State Agricultural Society will hold its forty-first annual State Fair at Des Moines, August 31 to September 7 inclusive. It offers $35,000 in premiums and other inducements too numerous for separate mention. Book premium list free on application to the Secretary, at Des Moines.

Bro. William Hart, of Oakland, California, reports the condition of the branch at that place as being most excellent. The cloud long hovering over them has been dispersed by patient love and forbearance.

Brn. I. P. and J. M. Baggerly departed for Southern Indiana, their field of labor, on Thursday the 3d inst.

Bro. James Caffall will sail for Liverpool, England, July 14, on the steamer Campania.

Bro. William Taylor, of Drain, Douglas county, Oregon, asks the ministry in that field to feed the flock there, who have heard no preaching for over a year.

The Herald Office has a limited number of Saints' Harps, bound in cloth, at seventy-five cents per copy. Order early if wanted, as they will not be kept in stock at that price.

Pres. W. W. Blair left Lamoni on the 1st inst., intending to visit various points and attend district conferences in Missouri, Iowa, and possibly other States. Bishop E. L. Kelley arrived home on the 2d inst. Brn. C. Scott and W. Waterman left for their fields, the former going to Central and Northern Iowa, the latter to Kentucky and Tennessee.

Brn. A. B. and A. J. Moore, the latter accompanied by his wife and family, left for the Southwestern mission on Tuesday the 1st inst. Sr. Moore goes South for the benefit of her health.

Sr. Ella E. Thompson writes from Lady Lake, Lake county, Florida, that much good could be done there by the ministry. She says: "Send preacher if possible. The people are anxious to hear, and I think only waiting to hear, believe, and come into the church."

Sr. Ardelia M. Clark asks for the preaching of the word in her home town, West Dighton, Massachusetts. Who can answer the call?

Bro. W. H. Bridgeman, of Fontanelle, Iowa, has for sale unbound volumes 1-7 of Autumn Leaves, at one dollar per volume, the buyer to pay freight or expressage.

AT AGREEMENT.

THE First Presidency take great pleasure in assuring the Saints that the result of the late conference, and the council held between the Presidency, the Twelve, and the Bishopric, was most gratifying.

The differing opinions held by some, out of which suspicion and distrust had grown were compared, and an agreement reached that was acceptable to all; and at the close of the council the most cordial and friendly feelings were found to exist; all being moved upon to renew their diligence, let the past bury its dead, and to press on in the great work together in unity of faith and purpose.

What was done the letter of the report will show; but no mere statement in print can make to appear the spirit of peace and unity that prevailed.

The spiritual side of the issues as decided, is fraught with great promise for the year; and it remains for all to set themselves in their line of work active and zealous for the onward march of the truth.

The temporal issues were settled to the understanding of all; and we take pleasure in asking all who may have felt the strain of the past year or two to prevent their giving material aid and comfort, to put their fears aside, let the misunderstandings of the past be by-gones; and with renewed purpose and confidence now sustain the work of the eldership and the church, by putting into the hands of the Bishop the material sinews of support for the spiritual warfare the missionaries are maintaining, and the complete success of every branch of church work.

The basis of adjustment is renewed, and harmony of understanding as to temporalities reached, so that all may rest assured that there will be nothing but correct procedure in regard to finances, all within the safe provisions of the law of the Lord given to the church.

We bespeak for the traveling ministry, the Twelve, Seventy, and others, each in his respective sphere and calling, the confidence, esteem, and reverence due their positions, that all may be honored as designed of the Lord in their appointment. Let no man put himself in the way of the work to prevent or hinder the great progress so much desired, prayed, and hoped for.

We also bespeak for those called to preside, the cordial support of those presided over, that none may be hindered or put to shame in his work.

The powers that are set to rule in the church are of God. Said Paul, long ago:—

Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power in the church but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same.—Rom. 13: 1-3.

This comes to us by the inspiration of the latter-day work; and in its wise counsel should challenge not only our admiration but our obedience as well.

Then with thankfulness and praise to God for the mercies past, the blessings of the present, and the prospects for good before us, let us put aside what may have hindered us hitherto, and in the light of restored unity and peace, push forward the work of God intrusted to our care to a glorious consummation.

W. W. BLAIR,
Of the Presidency.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERIES IN EGYPT.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 18.—Prof. Gorgan, who has been excavating in Egypt for some time past, has made a fresh and important discovery. A few weeks ago the Professor discovered the remains of a supposed king of Egypt, and now, it is announced, his explorations at the foot of the brick pyramid of Dashour have led to the discovery of the fourth dynasty king, Morus Ratouab. In addition, the excavator found an ebony statue and some gold plates, etc. The explorations will be continued.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"He that lacks time to mourn, lacks time to mend,
Eternity mourns that. 'Tis an ill cure
For life's worst ills, to have no time to feel them.
Where sorrow's held intrusive and turned out,
There wisdom will not enter, nor true power,
Nor aught that dignifies humanity."

ALWAYS A RIVER TO CROSS.

There's always a river to cross;
Always an effort to make
If there's anything good to win,
Any rich prize to take.
Yonder's the fruit we crave,
Yonder's the charming scene;
But deep and wide with a troubled tide,
Is the river that lies between.

For the treasures of precious worth
We must patiently dig and dive;
For the places we long to fill
We must push, and struggle, and strive;
And always and everywhere
We'll find in our onward course
Thorns for the feet and trials to meet,
And a difficult river to cross.

The rougher the way that we take,
The stouter the heart and the nerve,
The stones in our path we break,
Nor e'er from our impulse swerve.
For the glory we hope to win
Our labors we count no loss;
'Tis folly to pause and murmur because
Of the river we have to cross.

So, ready to do and to dare.
Should we in our places stand,
Fulfilling the Master's will,
Fulfilling the soul's demand;
For though as the mountains high
The billows may rear and toss, They'll not overwhelm if the Lord's at the helm
When the difficult river we cross.

LITTLE HELPERS.

IF mothers could realize that it is better to begin their housekeeping lessons when their daughters are six instead of sixteen years old, it would save them many a heartache over the blunders of the young girl who often must assume duties for which she is wholly unfitted.

It is not important, and not even desirable, upon entering society, that a girl should be the most fashionable or the most attractive among her friends, but it is important that she should be taught in early youth the management and economy of the household as a part of her studies, so that when she reaches womanhood she is fitted to be a homemaker in place of just commencing this part of her education.

Children can learn to work through their play, even before they are old enough to attend school. They can be taught to wash the clothing for their dolls, and they will enjoy it immensely. Impress upon them that the morning is the time for such work, and furnish them with a big apron, and then let them spatter and splash about in their little tub. A very little oversight will teach them how to wash and rinse their clothes properly, and a little praise will stimulate them to have these clothes compare favorably for whiteness with the family washing.

Later on they can be taught how to starch and iron these same articles.

Let the little hands roll out some of the dough, baking days, and give them the top of the pepper-box to cut out their little biscuits and cakes. They will be proud to "help mother," and if they are not discouraged and made to understand that they are more bother than good, their delight in cooking will abide with them when the biscuits are larger, and made for the family instead of dollie's tea-table.

There are many things that children can do and enjoy, too, that are of real help, besides picking up their own toys and keeping them in order.

If a little broom and dustpan be given to a child for its own especial use, and at the same time a little task be assigned, such as the brushing up of crumbs under the dining-table after each meal, the child will be pleased and proud of the duty. During the rainy afternoons let the little girl bring her work-basket and sit beside you while you show her how to cut out undergarments and dresses for her dolls from paper patterns; instruct her how to sew them neatly, how to make bows for the little hats and caps, and what combination of colors may be used for the costumes.

You will find that it will be time well spent, mothers, for you will be laying the foundation of taste in dress, and teaching a skillful use of the needle, which in a few years will be of value to the young girl who has little money to spend upon her toilet, and must make her brain and fingers do what money will for her sister who is more fortunate in worldly things.—Sel.

SYNOPSIS OF READING, CHAPTER THIRTEEN.
HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

TRAINING A CHILD AS A QUESTIONER.

A CHILD needs no training to make him a questioner; he is that by nature; but he does need training as a questioner. Before a child can talk he looks his questions; and, when he can speak them, they crowd one another so fast that it would seem to need all of one person's time to answer them. With this state of things a parent is tempted to repress rather than to train his child as a questioner; and by so doing many lose or undervalue a golden privilege.

All knowledge begins with a question, and progress is made only as the questioning is continued. A child could make no start in knowledge unless he began as a questioner; and if his questioning could be stayed his progress in knowledge would be at an end. Questioning is the expression of mental appetite.

Important as this impulse to ask questions evidently is, yet it is true that parents generally take far more pains to check children in their questioning than to train them in it. "Don't ask so many questions;" "Why will you be asking questions all the time?" "You'll worry my life out with your questions." Parents speak thus of their children's questions, instead of saying, "I'm glad you want to know all about these things;" or, "always ask me about anything that you want to know more of;" or "The more questions you ask the better, if only they are proper ones."

Most children grow to feel that to ask questions is unbecoming; and so they repress the desire to inquire into matters which interest and perplex them, until, perhaps, they are no longer curious about things which they do not understand, or have no hope of receiving any satisfaction concerning them. From being full of questions in order to gain knowledge, they become changed, until, by the time they are grown they seem willing to live and die in ignorance rather than to annoy others, or bring discredit on themselves by asking questions.

It is not strange that a parent does not feel like encouraging his child to ask all the questions he thinks of. For one reason, it takes a great deal of time to answer them, and when one finds that fifty questions answered only seem to prompt the asking of five hundred more, it naturally seems as if they ought to be stopped somewhere. Again it is not always easy to answer a child's questions. The average child can ask questions that the average parent cannot answer; and it is not pleasant to confess ignorance on a subject in which a child is interested. It is a temptation to a parent to discourage a habit which may bring out his lack of knowledge, and thus render him less imposing in the eyes of the child.

A child's privilege of question-asking evidently ought to be limited; for every privilege, like every duty, has its limitations. But it ought to be limited as to when and of whom questions may be asked rather than as to the extent of the questioning. A child should not ask his mother's guest how old she is, or why her face is homely, nor ask a poor playmate why she has no better shoes or clothing. A child ought not to interrupt others in order to ask his questions; and it is not always right to ask a question even of father or mother in the presence of others. As part of his training it should be made known to him when and of whom he may ask such questions, as it is right for him to ask.

To the parent a child ought to be perfectly free to come with questions. Both mother and father should welcome any question to which the child honestly desires an answer and they should set apart certain times which the child can feel are sacred to the special purpose of hearing and answering his questions. Perhaps just before breakfast or just after, or at evening, when the father may be always ready to answer his child's special questions; or there may be a quiet time on Sunday, or when they walk out together, that the child may be sure of his time for questioning. With the mother there may be frequent times during the day when a child may be free to sit or stand near and question her as she attends to household duties. But the surest time for helping him in this way is at his bedtime. At such times as the parent is able to give attention he should encourage and give a loving and well-considered answer to all questions that the child really wants to ask.

If a child is inclined to ask silly questions, he should be reminded of his duty of seeking knowledge, and that he ought not to waste his time, or his parents' time, in aimless questioning. In his questioning a child may dwell unduly upon one point. Then he should be turned from that by drawing him to question on some other point. A parent has the power, and it is his duty, to train his child as a questioner, by listening kindly, and by shaping this proper impulse of questioning.

It is better for a parent to answer a child, "I do not know," when this is the truth, than to say impatiently, "Oh don't be asking such foolish questions!" On the other hand, it is often better to give a simple answer to one point in a child's question, than to give an answer beyond his understanding, or to put him off till some future time. If a child asks why he always sees the sunrise from some windows, and the sunset from others, do not tell him that he is too young to understand about it, nor yet attempt to give an astronomical explanation. Simply tell him that the sun rises in the east and sets in the west, and tell him which way the windows face. One new item of knowledge will satisfy him for the time.

If a child questions on a point which just yet cannot properly be made clear to him, he ought not to be rebuked for it, but be answered (if possible), by declaring a general truth which will include his special point of inquiry; and he should be told that by and by he may know more about it. This will satisfy and yet encourage him to continue his search for truth in questioning.

A very simple answer is all that a child expects; and this much is his right, if he questions honestly. And it is the parents' duty to give it, if the child comes for it at a proper time and in a proper way. A child is harmed if unduly checked as a questioner; and he is helped as a truth seeker, perhaps as he could be in no other way, if he is encouraged and wisely trained as a questioner.

C. B. STEBBINS.

GLOBEVILLE, Colorado.

Dear Sisters:—As circumstances prevented my attendance at the Prayer Union to-day I have been fasting, reading, and praying at home. My heart is filled with love to God, good will to man, and earnest desires for the spread of truth, also with a humiliating sense of my own shortcomings, and apparent inability to accomplish the good I desire to do. I have long desired to write you, but poor health and many other things, not unmixed at times, with a lack of energy on my part, have hindered. I now beg forgiveness, and wish to inform you how much good your "Talks with Mothers," and other things connected with the work of the Daughters of Zion, have done me. Would that I could have had the benefit of such instructions before I assumed the responsibilities of motherhood. However, I am trying to profit by them so far as may be. It is undoubtedly a work that should have been commenced long ago, but better late than never. Force of circumstances impressed upon my mind much of this long ago; but as my educational advantages were very limited in girlhood, I did not know how it was to be accomplished. I have often felt that mothers should instruct their children in the laws of nature, but was at a loss many times how to do so. I was led by circumstances to talk with my little daughter just after having read your leaflet, "Talks with Mothers.—No 2." In answer to her questions, I took her on my lap and explained things to her and was surprised, not only at how easy it was for me to do so, but how readily she comprehended me, without the least apparent thought of there being anything of shame in it.

The sisters here are showing their faith by their works, and this will inspire confidence. I think we should each guard against all feelings of jealousy, whether sisters or brothers, if we would aid the cause we love. Each one can do something, be it ever so little; and while we should not be content with doing little if it is in our power to do much, we should be glad and not jealous if some one else is able to do more, for thereby is the work benefited. My prayer to God is that you with all other workers may receive that strength, wisdom, and patience so necessary for your own good and the good of the work. The work is onward in Denver. The Lord is blessing the efforts put forth in weakness. Some are very near the kingdom. Some not of our faith are interested in the Prayer Union and Daughters of Zion. One lady invited us to meet at her house which we did, two other ladies not of the church were present.

Yours in love of the truth,

E. C. SHUPE.

A FEW HINTS.

MANY of the blood and nervous derangements of adult age are the result of evil habits in childhood and youth. The indulgence of candy eating is one of the earliest. Too much sweet takes away the appetite for food that is required to develop the body, consequently it is robbed of its rights; and if the candy is colored a poison is taken into the system, small though it may be, but it will tell in time.

The habit of fretting and irritating the child, or others in his presence, is injurious to his nerves as well as to your own. The cultivation of his combativeness sends with its every impulse through the brain and nerves an unhealthy influence to the blood. Many of the juvenile feats practiced by schoolchildren have injurious effects; such as standing on the head, turning around sufficient to be dizzy and fall down, and jumping the rope till exhausted. The effect of the first exploit, is to impair the circulation of both the blood and nerve fluid and congest the brain. The second is injurious to the optic nerve, which is irritated by the sudden change of objects passing before it, and also to the brain, whose function of distributing nervo-electricity to the system is partially suspended. The third interferes with the circulation, the breath, and is one of the ways to cause disease peculiar to women, and one which is liable to give a lifelong misery. This we know by experience as well as by observation, so wish to give a word of warning to others, hoping they may escape such a dire misfortune.

As one's position in sitting and standing has much to do with the quantity of air taken in at each breath, it is very important for him to know what that position is. It is an easy, erect position, with well-expanded lungs. It seems as though every person would practice it, if there was only one object in view, and that, "good looks."

Mothers should not be over anxious to have their children excel their classmates, and especially when small. Before taxing the brain and nerves, a good development of body should be attained. Plain, wholesome food such as vegetables, ripe fruit, and harmless drinks, a plenty of outdoor exercise in Father's pure air, proper hours of sleep are each promoters of health and development of body. A clean house is required in connection.

Young children and youths should not make a practice of sleeping with the aged or with those who have diseases. It will have an injurious effect on them even as one decayed vegetable has on another.

Self-abuse is a great evil, and a great destroyer of the young, and many have died in ignorance of the fact, because friends were too modest to inform them of it. Mock modesty is being set aside, and many who know their duty are showing up such facts and we hope good may be done thereby. The subject in question is often the habit of children too small to have learned it of others, yet it has a tendency to their destruction all the same, and mothers should be on the lookout for such evils just as much as for their language and other habits. If gentle words do not have the desired effect, authority should be put in force. Often the habit is not formed or even thought of till the child is permitted to sleep with others or has entered school. Sometimes the injudicious language or acts of parents before their children have had a tendency to lead them into the evil habit, trashy literature stimulating to the same. Dr. Foote says: "Five children in every ten over twelve years of age bear marks which this disgusting vice stamps on its victims." This habit acts slowly but surely in destroying the harmony of the nervous system. It vitiates the blood, the results of which are disease, mental depression, nervous prostration, insanity, and consumption. There are many other causes for such diseases, and yet many cases arise from the habit spoken of. The doctor referred to says he has had many cases, of both sexes, (more of the male, however,) which he could see at a glance were caused by the same. That which is done in secret is proclaimed upon the housetop. It is of no use for such a victim to deny its practice, for its footprints are visible to every one who has made the subject a study and made observation. Parents are not very ready to believe that their own children have indulged in the habit, but are often willing to accept the same in regard to other people's children. The writer has had pupils who bore marks, and very visible ones, too, and one case in school of a certainty, a boy only eight, and is sorry to say that the rising generation with all its advantages, shows signs of the same in many instances of her acquaintance. We say to the dear children and youth, don't let your minds dwell on low, sensual pleasure, but turn it to the true and reliable, for that which fills the mind will command your limbs, and they like any other machine, are operated by the mind, even though it be to their utter destruction.

We can be great and grand if we will, and thus nobly fill our mission on earth; that is, have an influence for good, and leave the same behind us; have a blessing all the way along the journey and a reward in the future. Doctors cannot cure, Christ will not cure us unless we forsake all bad habits that cause our disease. God bless and direct the children.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MAY.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, May 10.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verse.—Jacob 2: 49.

Thursday, May 17.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Romans 9: 22-26; Proverbs 22: 20-23.

Thursday, May 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 33: 11, 12; Enos 1: 18, 19; Alma 17: 21.

Thursday, May 31.—The gathering of Israel to their land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Ezekiel 39: 23-25.

BIRD'S EYE, Ind., April 6.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I held a series of meetings at Bicknell, Indiana, beginning February 14, closing on the 18th. Some interest was manifested and invitations to come again were received. Only one member of the church resides there—Sr. Alsman, wife of J. M. Alsman. Her husband is not a member of the church but is a Saint in his zeal to get the gospel before his fellow townsmen. By the generosity of Mr. Fox, merchant, we obtained the use of his hall for a dollar a night, after speaking in a private house one night. The hall rent was paid by collections.

I was treated with kindness by almost all; there were a few exceptions. One gentleman (?) of M. E. proclivities remarked that he would not give ten cents to hear me preach but would help bear the cost of egging me out of town. It seems strange that in America, the land of political freedom and religious liberty, people would say such things. Such a spirit is a relic of antiquity; it is not American and belongs to the "dark ages." I was the guest of Mr. J. M. Alsman and Manford Robison. The latter used to live in my native country. I also visited Mr. William Downey, a man of charity and toleration. Bicknell's denizens are as a rule affable.

I visited the Saints in Daviess county. The work there is in a backward state. Some Saints(?) are of the Latter Day faith but are not as yet identified with the work. On March 8 and 9 I preached at Hazleton to attentive congregations. There is a prospect of accomplishing something there yet. I domiciled with Mr. Pierce Chamberlain, a native of Crawford county, formerly a near neighbor to my father. March 12 found me in Pike county where I held several meetings. There is but one Saint in Pike county now. Bro. Sylvester Coleman is maintaining the faith alone.

While at Winslow, Indiana, waiting for a train to carry me home I met with some Seventh-day Adventists; Elders M. M. Kenny and J. M. Ellis of that fraternity were holding church there. I had an argument with the former in which the doctrine of soul-immortality kept its place in the front ranks while the opposite theory was the reverse. Those who heard so judged. He refused to debate, giving as his reason, "You have no church in this place." He says that they never debate with any denomination where there is no church of their faith. I concluded to stay and hear them preach; Elder Ellis speaker; subject, Spiritualism. He didn't have much liberty; his head got hot. That is what he told me apologetically. I have his word for it. I asked several questions on the soul question just before preaching. Only part of them were answered and that partially. In a paper they were circulating entitled Review and Herald published at Battle Creek, Michigan, I noticed an article under the caption "Mormonism" written by Elder W. B. Hill of Osakis, Minnesota, I note the following: "Some people think there is not much to fear from Mormonism; that it is waning and passing away. It is one of the most cunning, smooth counterfeits of true religion that there is in the world today. Even Seventh-day Adventists need to be on their guard against its seductive power. It is receiving new life and power, and comes to us oftentimes through the agency of nice-appearing, smooth, sincere men."

It is obvious to everyone conversant with the facts that the Mormonism (so-called) that "is receiving new life and power" is no other than the Reorganization. Such is not the case with Mormonism as represented in Utah. The decision in the late Temple Lot Suit is evidence of this. Said decision was truly encouraging; it gave new life. While the suit was going on a brother told me that nothing could shake his faith in the latter-day work but its loss. I concurred with him. Our faith is now confirmed. God is able to care for his work and people.

May his richest blessings attend those "nice-appearing, smooth, sincere men whose seductive [?] power, even Seventh-day Adventists need to be on their guard against."

Yours in Christ,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

MANCHESTER, Texas, April 25.

Editors Herald:—I came to this place on the 8th and was gladly received by the Saints. It was a very busy time and things looked just a little discouraging for meetings, but knowing it was a duty to put forth an effort, we went to work. A good interest was manifest from the start, with increase in numbers to hear, and attention. I have preached ten discourses here, and four at Davenport, some eight miles distant. I returned home on Monday, and yesterday had the pleasure of leading eight precious souls into the water, and several are to follow on Sunday. I feel well in the work and the Saints seem to be greatly revived and strengthened.

Your brother in bonds,

MANNVILLE, Ind., April 30.

Editors Herald:—I have been looking over the Herald, seeing the transactions of the conference, and I am well pleased with the appointments made in Southern Indiana. I am truly glad that Bro. M. T. Short has been placed back here. He is a man who will accomplish as much good here as any man I know of. May the Lord bless all the laborers in the church, and may this latter-day work roll on till all the honest in heart are gathered out of Babylon into the kingdom of God's dear Son.

The work in this place is moving forward; many are investigating. We have our new chapel inclosed and some plank in for seats. We held our first social meeting on Saturday night. We cannot finish it until we get help from other branches. I wrote in March to six other branches, and have not heard from any of them yet. We hope they will help us some, if they possibly can, and all others. The Saints as a general thing know we are few in number and poor in this world's goods. We have borrowed some money with the expectation of help from other Saints. May the Lord bless the Saints and cause them to send in their mites. Let it be ever so little, it will be thankfully received. We would like to have the church finished before the district conference in June, so as to have it dedicated by one of the ministry. The outsiders that don't profess religion donated liberally in building. Prejudice is fast removing here; we have good attendance. We have preaching services every fourth Sunday and social meetings on Saturday nights, and Sunday school on Sunday; so you see we are busy most of the time.

If anyone wishes to help us financially please send to Mannville, Jefferson county, Indiana, by registered letter addressed to me.

Yours in the one faith,

J. D. PORTER.

BUTLER, Mo., April 30.

Editors Herald:—The writer had the privilege of leading two noble souls into the waters of baptism yesterday. They were the fruit of the discussion held here between the writer and a representative of the Church of God, in last February. There are many others almost persuaded, and many are investigating who will obey the gospel in time.

Some of the brethren are trying to obey the voice of the Spirit and come up higher. They have laid aside tobacco. May God uphold them in their efforts to live "by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." When I obeyed the work some three years ago I was told that tobacco was not good for man. It was hard to quit the vile habit, but by earnest prayer and supplication to God I was able by his assistance to overcome it. To him be all the glory.

I am thankful for the tracts sent by the Herald Office. May God bless the one who sent them. I have used them to good advantage.

I see by the Herald that Bro. I. N. White has been returned to this district. We would be pleased to have him come and preach for us sometime in the near future.

If he will let us know about a week ahead we will meet him at Butler any time he may see fit to come. We hold our preaching services the second and fourth Sundays of each month. We cannot have the school-house through the week till after the first of June, as school is going on and the directors say it makes too much trouble for the teacher; but school will be out the first of June; then it will be at our service, at least part of the time, as the Church of God people hold forth at the same place the first and third Sundays of each month.

There is another discussion pending, from what I can learn. This time it will be the Campbellites; they have sent for one of their big guns, Price by name. Well, so mote it be.

Yours for the spreading of truth and the upbuilding of Zion's cause,

J. I. YOUNG.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., March 28.

Editors Herald:—After closing our meeting in State, some are investigating the great latter-day work. We hope good may result therefrom in time to come. It is the Lord's work. Jesus said, "no man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him." We are holding preaching services at my son-in-law's, W. H. Kelley. We need the prayers of all the Saints, for this is a hard place to get a hearing. I am very thankful for the tracts sent me by the Herald Office. I believe they are a great help, for people will read who will not go to church.

I had the champion Campbellite up to see me a few days ago, and we talked about four hours. He took the position that the church or kingdom of God remained intact down through all ages until the present day; that is, in organic form, but not in faith. I asked him to show me where it was. He said the disciples in all the churches constituted the church or kingdom. I said, "If God organized his kingdom with all the offices and officers and placed every one of them as it pleased him, and all of the gifts in order, and that too for man's salvation, pray tell me how you and I will be saved outside of that unless we be Heathens, that is, where there is no law? But we have a law, for you say you are saved." He got mad, said, "Stop; I want to put in some Greek." I said, "Sir, this Bible was translated out of the original Greek; we don't want yours."

I also said, "Will you affirm the church of which you are a member is the Church of Christ?" He said: "No; I will not." I then said: "I want to be saved; tell me where I must go. You said it took all the churches to constitute the Church of Christ; if so, I must join all of the churches in order to be saved." I wanted him to tell me the induction laws into the kingdom or church. He said, "Repentance and baptism; I don't know any more. The laying on of hands was for the apostles, and we have none of them. We have substituted evangelists in their place." I said: "Where did you get your authority, if you have any? Can they in their stead lay on hands for confirmation?" He said: "No, we don't need any confirmation." "Why," he said, "I know more than Martin Luther."

I asked him if he would publicly affirm that it took all the churches to constitute the one Church of Christ. He said, "Yes." So I drew up the propositions, "Resolved that the church established by Christ and the apostles continued in faith and organization from the time of its establishment until the present time, and that the disciples of Christ are to be found in the different religious bodies of the present day." Second, "Resolved that the canon of Scripture is full, and that all that God ever intended to reveal was revealed prior to and during the lifetime of the apostles; the Bible and authentic history to be the standard of evidence." I took it down the next day and he denied uttering that, saying he aimed to say that he would discuss in his own pulpit, but we should not reply in his church among his flock. I told him to answer my first question, how men were inducted into the church. Formerly he said he did not know outside of faith and baptism. I then told him to read up on Acts 8: 5; 19: 2-8. He read the passages, then became mad and said he did not want to talk with me any more while he lived. I think he will not stay here long.

The night before he came I had this dream: I saw a snake. His head was round like a plate, and the body came out in the center of the head, and he opened his mouth and looked very strange at me. He tried to get at me, but I had something in my hand and I let him have it, and I smashed his head all to pieces. It was the strangest serpent I ever saw.

We are trying to hold up the light the best we can; we are learning something every day. This is my first letter. If it would be encouraging to put it in the Herald, do so; if not, all right. I love this latter-day work. May God bless his laborers in the field.

Your brother,
DAVID SCOTT.

Editors Herald:—I want to thank the Herald for the many blessings that come to many to cheer them, and while writing I want to say a few words to our elders who hold such a responsible place in this great work. I long to see the time when nothing will hinder it, and I do think it is hindered at times by some elders; I think they trifle and jest too much with the young folks where they are staying, instead of breaking to them the true bread of life. I noticed a circumstance while at conference one time. While some had done nothing but jest, one elder took his opportunity to break the bread of life to one young lady, which I saw took effect, and may be the means of leading her where she can taste of the good things above and bless the one that sowed the good seed. O that we may not waste our precious time, but drop a word for our Master in season and out of season, that we may reap wheat and not leaves. Your sister in faith,

LETTIE A. DUNN.

Editors Herald:—I reached here Saturday evening last from General Conference and on Sunday evening I preached in the Methodist church, and have continued there since. One year ago I was refused the use of the building, now many seem anxious to hear us, and considerable interest is manifest. They have arranged to hold revival service here next week, so I am glad to have the privilege of preparing the people on the principle of discernment by using such texts as Hebrew 2: 1-4; Jeremiah 6: 16; John 8: 31, 32; etc.

REVIEW OF BOGUS BRASS PLATES.

IN the Juvenile Instructor, edited and published in Salt Lake City, by George Q. Cannon, on pages 176-178 of the number for March 15, 1894, there is an article from the pen of G. G. Bywater, in which he furnishes food for the youth of Utah and elsewhere; and in which he takes occasion to write of the Reorganized Church and its members, of whom he has no good thing to say.

Once, in the elder's experience, when the claims of Joseph Smith, son of the martyred prophet, were pressed upon him by Jason W. Briggs, he declined to discuss the question; but in this article he evidently believes the time has come when he can venture to discuss it. The elder says:—

While perusing Elder B. H. Roberts' excellent little book, "Succession in the Presidency of the Church," an incident in the history of J. J. Strang was brought to my mind.

He then tells how he met Jason W. Briggs in Wales, between the years 1860 and 1864, and declined to discuss the question of succession. Among other things he says:—

Furthermore, I did not care to listen to anything that could be said upon this subject by persons who had withdrawn from the church while the Prophet Joseph was still living and who became followers of so unscrupulous an aspirant as James J. Strang; and the support which he received reflected very discreditably upon the people who allied themselves to his cause; and that whatever "claims" Joseph Smith held by virtue of his sonship were much impaired by being advocated by so unstable a class of people.

In the first place, the elder proves himself to be out of harmony with these divine injunctions:—

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.

And again:—

Wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you, both in public and private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful their shame shall be made manifest, wherefore let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord.—D. C. 71: 2.

That was the time for Elder Bywater to have heard the "strong reasons," and refuted them by the truth if he could. But, instead of that he waits until no one is near, and attacks the position by telling what President George A. Smith told him. Now, the truth of the matter is, Jason W. Briggs and the prime movers in the Reorganized Church did not "withdraw from the church while the Prophet Joseph was still living." Jason W. Briggs was president of a branch of the church at Beloit, Wisconsin, at the death of Joseph Smith and continued to preside over that branch for some time after. Admitting, however, for the argument's sake, that he and others were with Strang for a short time, how could that impair the claims of Joseph, the son of the prophet? If the elder's reasoning is correct, then good-bye to the claims made for the Son of God, Jesus of Nazareth; for vacillating men have strongly advocated his divine mission, and yet it has neither invalidated his claims, nor reflected discredit upon him, or his work; only in the estimation of men who occupy grounds as does Elder Bywater. There have been very many "unscrupulous men" such as J. J. Strang and others in the estimation of G. G. Bywater, who have vindicated the mission of Joseph Smith, and the divinity of the Book of Mormon. Will the elder claim that because they have so done and still do, that those claims are much impaired thereby? We think not.

When the elder rehearses the story told him by President G. A. Smith, about Jason W. Briggs, and a "bogus revelation," and "brass plates," there is no truth in the assertion. It was claimed for J. J. Strang that he found plates from which he translated the "Book of the Law;" but Jason W. Briggs was in no way connected with Strang in that work. Why should Elder Bywater in his effort to refute the claims of the Reorganized Church present what somebody else said? Why not sustain his position by the word of the Lord? That would end the controversy. But when men resort to such methods against opponents it is almost sure that their case is a hopeless one.

The good man's heart is touched, however, when he thinks of the "simpleminded and unwary led astray by illusory representations of designing men, precipitating them into difficulties that become appalling when the gauzy cloak of deception is thrown aside and the delusion made bare."

The elder should remember the fate of Strang and others who have assumed to be prophets and presidents of the church, and look to his own defense. If he will turn to the history of his own people, he will discover that when Brigham Young assumed the position he did at Joseph's death, that from that on the people were "led astray," and their difficulties became "appalling" indeed.

And just as rapidly as the "gauzy cloak" has been thrown aside, the leaders of his people have been forced to see that their position on the plural wife theory was untenable and must be abandoned; and if the elders of that church will discuss the question of succession, the people will see that as J. J. Strang and others assumed to be leaders, so did Brigham Young, and that up to this date his position has not been sustained by the law of the church; neither can it be. If the position occupied by the church under the presidency of Wilford Woodruff today is correct, why not defend it from the revelations of God? If the "excellent little book" written by Elder B. H. Roberts is the weapon formed to meet the claims of the Reorganized Church, and to bolster up the church which that elder represents, we are prepared to meet the issue now.

Elder Bywater writes: "A greater prophet than Joseph never lived;" and then speaks of the great and glorious dispensation founded by him, and further says:—

And yet three of his sons have suffered themselves to be entreated, and have become representative advocates, nay more: leaders of an organization made up of the most incongruous elements of human society—the debris of a defunct body.

The sons of Joseph Smith were called to the position they occupy by the revelations of God, and are sustained by the laws of the church. The elements of which the Reorganized Church is composed are of the very best, as we shall see further on; competent to compare, decide, and act, both as to law and church polity. The ministry under Joseph Smith, son of the Seer, have never had to hide from the "powers that be," neither recede from any position they have yet taken. He is the lawful heir to the rights and presidency of the church, and is sustained both by the law of God and of the land.

Mr. Strang claimed to be the successor to the Prophet Joseph Smith, and taught doctrine contrary to that restored through God's prophet; and of course his work came to naught. The body of which G. G. Bywater is a representative occupies a similar position to that J. J. Strang assumed. They claim Brigham Young, John Taylor, and Wilford Woodruff to be lawful successors to Joseph Smith; but when the Temple Lot case was submitted to a proper tribunal, in a cause wherein a question of the rights of priesthood and presidency of the church were involved as well as claim to original tenets and doctrine of the church, that tribunal decided that Joseph Smith, son of the "greatest prophet of all the dispensations" was the legal successor to the presidency of the church. The same cause that proved the overthrow of J. J. Strang's position will ultimately produce decay and death to the church under the presidency of Wilford Woodruff.

When Elder Bywater speaks of the class and character of the people composing the Reorganized Church, he must remember that a great many of them were connected with the church in the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and their children, and a host are new converts to the faith; and for him to undertake to cast damaging reflections on them, is not argument nor is it in good taste, to say the least; and I am surprised to think the elder would resort to so weak a plea as that; he evidently begins to see that he is trying to defend a lost or rapidly losing cause.

After telling about J. W. Briggs fixing up and palming off the "brass plates" he concludes his article by telling how "the men who were the most staunch supporters of Mr. Strang" published an account of his imposture, stating how they were deceived in the character of the "plates" he claimed to have received by revelation:—

They declared his ecclesiastical polity was out of harmony with that contained in the Book of Mormon.

Why did the elder just undertake to make his readers believe that Jason W. Briggs had the "bogus revelation" and palmed off the "plates" and then tell us that Mr. Strang's imposture had been exposed? Evidently a man who is as well informed as the elder is, knows that when Mr. Strang's imposture had been exposed, it was shown that Jason Briggs was not a party to the fraud. Besides, what our friend Bywater presents here as a weakness proves directly to the opposite. Those men followed the divine injunction to "prove all things;" and when they decided that Mr. Strang's "ecclesiastical polity was out of harmony" with the teachings of the Book of Mormon and the law of the church, it shows clearly that they had carefully compared such polity with what was written in the books, and they then had the courage to decide against what was found to be wrong; and that is just what the sons of Joseph Smith and the elders associated with them have done with the teachings of Brigham Young and his people. They have shown to Latter Day Saints and the world that those things were out of "harmony" with the sacred books, until the nation and the world begin to see the position clearly; and, as Strang's ecclesiastical polity was exposed, so, in like manner, will the teachings and practices of the church under President Woodruff be compared with the teachings of the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants; until all who will, may see where the light is,

That wise men and rulers may hear and know that which they have never considered; that I may proceed to bring to pass my act, my strange act; and perform my work, my strange work; that men may discern between the righteous and the wicked; saith God.—D. and C. 101, Utah edition.

In the discussion of the Utah problem the Reorganized Church has stood in the front ranks, constantly advocating the purity of the gospel, and setting forth the fact that the restored gospel through Joseph Smith, was in harmony with the laws of the nation and its institutions; and because of that, wise men and rulers have heard what they never considered, and men have been led to decide between good and evil, or the righteous and the wicked.

When the elder quotes, "It is written that God would send strong delusion that men might believe a lie because they take pleasure in unrighteousness," we recommend to him that he take his own medicine. The rule laid down by the great Teacher, "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the best test that can be applied. Are the Utah Church and people prepared for that test? If Elder Bywater and his people want to reflect the grandeur and glory of this latter-day work, let them meet some of the elders of the "incongruous element" he refers to, and compare the teaching of each by the word of God, and thus let it be seen who is on the Lord's side.

R. J. ANTHONY.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

EDITORS HERALD:—I noticed an article in your issue of April 25, on the labor question, over the signature of William Cairns. It seems to me that Mr. Cairns fails to get at the true cause of the present labor troubles; neither do I think he offers a remedy sufficient for the disease. Of course starting colonies on the cooperative plan is good as far as it goes, but we might as well have undertaken to have abolished chattel slavery in the South by advising a few slaves to purchase their freedom from their masters and then form themselves into a colony.

There is but one way to remedy existing evils, and that is to remove the cause. The imperialism of capital is to be feared; and that capital has become arrogant, dictating to the laborer the very terms by which he may exist, is not to be successfully contradicted. Mr. Cairns rightfully asserts that labor creates everything in the way of wealth; there is absolutely no other way of supplying our wants other than by labor. The individual that buys wheat at less than what it cost the farmer to raise it and sells it at double the price he pays for it, makes a fortune out of the transaction, but has not added a penny to the wealth of the community; the fact is, he has simply appropriated the wealth produced by some other individual to his own use.

Now, then, if labor is the producer of all wealth, let us learn by what means labor is to be employed in order to create wealth. Primarily, all that we have comes from the earth; we readily see, therefore, that before labor can produce anything in the way of wealth it must have access to what God has given to all alike—land. I believe the system is wrong that compels one individual to work a part of his time for some other individual for the privilege of staying here on the earth. I believe that every man, woman, and child that by their labor have produced wealth of any kind, should have all of it, to do with it as they see fit. The land should be the common heritage of all, and should be used for the comfort and happiness of all alike, and not for speculative purposes.

Would like to receive a communication from Mr. Cairns on the subject I have outlined. For fear this may find its way into the wastebasket I will not undertake to follow the subject farther at this time.

CUBA, Kansas, April, 1894.

WHY NOT?

AT the inception of his ministerial work, Christ, for a purpose of course, said:—

Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.—John 5:39.

Paul in his defense of Christ caught this inspiration, and said:—

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—1 Thess. 5:21.

I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.—1 Cor. 10:15.

So we have a basis for belief that nothing comes within the grasp of mortals that is too sacred to touch, or too true to investigate.

But Paul grows very bold in teaching the gospel plan, declaring thus:—

Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.—Gal. 1:8.

This certainly savors strongly of exclusiveness, or salvation by one method only, which we of the Reorganized Church indorse.

But is it not a fact that while so many spiritual proofs may be adduced to substantiate the fact of God having revealed but one saving method, that the Scriptures are silent on many matters of importance, save in a general way; that is to say, a full detail is not given? To illustrate: The actuality of Christ's second coming is settled; we all believe it, and its contemplation is always inspr'ing. But we read of his coming in flaming fire. (2 Thess. 2:1-8.) Daniel saw one like the Son of man coming to the Ancient of days. (Dan. 7:13.) Zechariah says Christ is to set his feet on the mount of Olives, and go forth to fight for Israel as he fought in the day of battle; that some of all the nations that go up to fight against Jerusalem, are to remain, and go up once a year to Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, etc. (See Zech. 14.) The Scriptures teach that his Satanic Majesty is to be bound, shut up, and a seal set upon him as a preventive to his deceiving the nations for a thousand years; indicative of a thousand years of blessed rest and peace, and of his being loosed again.

The Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants furnish abundant evidence of a coming retribution, all being rewarded according to their deeds.

Now, seeing that the above, with many other important matters are taught, but only in general terms, why cannot contributors to the Herald give publicity to thoughts in its columns on these matters without disturbing the peace of anyone? Why not? And since we are all united as to the perfect law, or God's saving method, how can injury accrue to the body by giving expression in a respectful manner upon the above and similar matters?

But there is an objection to controversy. Well, if controversy is construed to mean one writer making an attack upon another, arraigning and indirectly charging, etc., the controversy ought to be prohibited; but a desire for such controversy should never obtain in our minds, nor will it if the desire to impart and receive good predominates to the exclusion of a desire for bravado and a striving for the mastery, saying, Come, let us reason together.

Our teachers and Sabbath school pupils are benefited by the weekly study of lessons found in our very excellent quarterlies, and our Sabbath school teachers in turn become more proficient for their essential work by having teachers' meetings for exchange of thought, suggestion, etc. Ought it to be said, in this age of free thought, of a free press, etc., that our Herald, the church organ, is closed to the expression of adverse thoughts because such a liberty cannot be enjoyed without abusing it? Ought it to be so? I think not. Surely God is not displeased, when we write in a legitimate pursuit for knowledge, or in trying to study out that presented to us in our minds.

The Saints cannot fail to notice that the Board of Publication is using its best endeavors to improve the Herald and lessen the price of church literature. Ought we not to cooperate with it? The Board of Publication, being a creature of the church, acts in the name, and for the church; which fact raises their expectations, for the cooperation of the church. And the church is benefited, if its efforts are crowned with success; but if they fail, she will correspondingly suffer.

I am glad to know that no coercive measures are resorted to to increase the sale of our church literature or to fill the church coffers, but that done by the members, for one or both the above purposes, should be with a ready and willing mind, thus doing right because it is right to do right.

If, therefore, the preparation and distribution of our church literature is a means to build up the kingdom among men, (and who will deny this?) then every member ought to aid in the circulation of the church literature before giving time and money to circulate other literature. It is surprising that any member should evince any indifference in this matter.

It is said that the Herald is too high in price. Well, cannot the Saints see a remedy for this? It is a simple one, but the Board of Publication cannot apply it. But the members may by a cooperative movement. Let three or four thousand members forward six months' or a year's subscription for the Herald at present rates, and it is my opinion that we would soon see a tumbling down of the price. It ought to be apparent to the most casual observer that the board would rather issue literature, especially the Herald, at prices that all could reach than that it should be otherwise.

For years our Herald has been similar to a man essaying to row a boat against wind and tide. Why leave it to struggle with present strength, when by due exertion it might be greatly augmented? Roll up the subscription until the board can with safety reduce its price. It would be inconsistent to raise our hands or voice to sustain the Board unless we cooperate with it to circulate the literature prepared. The church has but one Board of Publication, and but one church organ. Let us sustain it first, and let its columns be opened to the advocacy of adverse thought with due respect to all, evincing a desire to bless, instruct, and encourage, rather than to charge, accuse, or belittle. So strive with pure motives to push on the great work. In bonds,

Selected Articles.

GLEANINGS FROM OLD TESTAMENT MARGINS.

In a former paper printed in The Sunday School Times, some of the more remarkable marginal notes in the Authorized Version of the New Testament were collected, and their significance was discussed. It is proposed in the present article to print a somewhat similar collection from the margins of the Old Testament, though no attempt has been made to furnish an exhaustive list. Exhaustive lists are apt to be exhausting, and in this, as in many other matters, there is good sense in the Greek proverb which tells us that "the half is better than the whole."

It should be pointed out, to begin with, that the notes in the margin of the Authorized Version have no more authority than attaches to them from the circumstance that they were thought worthy of print by the learned and pious translators who were brought together in the reign of James I. They are sometimes valuable, sometimes misleading; but in all cases they are worth reading, if not always for the light which they throw upon the sacred text itself, yet for the insight which they give us into the habits of thought of the scholars to whom we owe the most precious inheritance of English speaking Christendom.

Notes calling attention to various readings are much less frequent in the Old Testament than in the New, and this because (for reasons which need not here be set forth) there is very much less doubt as to the manuscript text of the Hebrew Bible, than there is as to that of the Greek Testament. The manuscripts which have come down to us all agree very minutely, and thus the student has not the difficulty arising from this source of distinguishing between the claims of divergent "readings," which is so prominent in the criticism of the New Testament. The few notes of this kind which do appear are nearly all of the same character, and they are rarely of doctrinal importance. For instance, the Hebrew letters represented by the English d and r are so like each other that one might very easily be mistaken for the other; and thus in Genesis 10:4, the marginal note tells us that possibly the Dodanim of the text should be read Rodanim. And in a good many other cases, a little uncertainty as to the true spelling of proper names is noted; for example, Joshua 7:1; Ezra 10:40, etc. A more important difference is noted in the margin of the familiar passage Isaiah 9:9. The ordinary reading, "Thou hast multiplied the nation, and not increased the joy," has puzzled many readers; for it is certainly not obvious how the two parts of the sentence can be harmonized. But the unassuming note which tells us that for the word "not" we should substitute another word meaning "to him," clears away all our difficulty; for it enables us to translate (with the Revised Version), "Thou hast multiplied the nation, thou hast increased their joy," which is quite clear.

As an instance of a marginal reading which, though, perhaps, not worthy of a place in the text itself, is yet interesting, we may refer to Isaiah 19:18. Every reader of Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress" remembers "The City of Destruction," a title which he got from this verse. But the note tells us that the reading is not quite certain; and that some ancient authorities have here "The City of the Sun." Another instance of the same kind is the alternative translation suggested for "everlasting strength," in the margin of Isaiah 26:4; namely, "Rock of Ages," a phrase which has been immortalized in Toplady's famous hymn. Good alternative translations are often given in the margin; indeed, there can be little doubt as to the superior claims of some of these to the translations in the text. For instance, (though, indeed, in this place there is some doubt as to the true reading,) in Nehemiah 4:23 we get a much more vivid picture of the state of things at Jerusalem during the building of the walls under Nehemiah's directions if we take the marginal rendering, "Every one went with his weapon for water," than if we merely pay attention to the text of the Authorized Version.

Again, the verse, Proverbs 25:23, as ordinarily translated, does not seem to give very good sense: "The north wind driveth away rain: so doth an angry countenance, a backbiting tongue." This is not easy to understand, but the marginal rendering supplies the true lesson intended by the sacred writer, namely: "The north wind bringeth forth rain: so doth a backbiting tongue an angry countenance,"—a proverb of very different meaning. Or again, in Daniel 9:26 (a very difficult verse), it is plain that we shall be much more likely to get at the gist of the passage if we observe the marginal "and shall have nothing," which, it is suggested, should replace the obscure "but not for himself" of the text. Once more: People have been sometimes at a loss to know why, in Jeremiah 51:59, the note "and this Seraiah was a quiet prince" was added at the end of the verse, as it does not seem to have any natural connection with what goes before. But the margin explains to us that there is here appended a description of the office rather than the character of Seraiah. He was "prince of the resting places;" that is, "quarter-master," or "chief chamberlain."

In the Book of Judges, short explanatory notes are frequent. Thus (Judges 12:8) Ibzan, according to the margin, "seems to have been only a civil judge to do justice in northeast Israel;" and Samson (Judges 15:20) "seems to have judged southwest Israel during twenty years of their servitude of the Philistines;" while similar remarks are appended to the names of Jephthah, Elon, and Abdon, as well as to that of Eli. (1 Sam. 4:18.) Geographical explanations are, too, sometimes given. Thus "the river," in 2 Samuel 10:16, is identified with the Euphrates, and "the mount of corruption," in 2 Kings 23:13, with the better known Mount of Olives. But the explanations are also concerned with the structure of obscure sentences and difficult allusions, and these, when they occur, present many points of interest. For instance, Job 35:15 runs as follows in the Authorized Version: "But now, because it is not so, he [God] hath visited it in his anger; yet he [Job] knoweth it not in great extremity." The words printed between brackets are found in the margin, being put there by the translators in the desperate attempt to make sense of their translation. But, indeed, even thus it is not easy to see what was meant; and it seems more probable that the personal pronoun "he" refers in both clauses to God, and that the verse should be rendered as it appears in the Revised Version; namely, "But now, because he hath not visited in his anger, neither doth he greatly regard arrogance." The passage is, however, confessedly full of obscurity.

A better sample of the insight of annotators would be Hosea 13:10, where the English text has "I will be thy king," and the margin notes "Rather, where is thy king? King Hoshea being then in prison, 2 Kings 17:4." In this case, however, the note did not appear in the original edition of 1611, but was added at a later time, a remark which applies, be it observed, to a large number both of notes and references, which are printed in our ordinary nineteenth-century editions.

It cannot be too often repeated, in connection with what has been just said, that the marginal notes and references, as well as the headings to the chapters (usually printed in italics), form no part of the sacred text itself, and have only that claim on our attention which any commentary by pious and learned men is entitled to.

To take an instance or two from these chapter headings. By what right is it said at the head of the twentieth chapter of Second Kings, that "the sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign" of the promise to Hezekiah of prolonged life? Nothing of the sort is recorded by the historian; the sign vouchsafed was that the shadow of the sun went ten degrees backward on the dial, which is an entirely different thing. It has been suggested, indeed, with much plausibility, that the phenomenon which Isaiah by divine assistance foresaw may have been brought about by a solar eclipse; but, however that may be, and whether the events here recorded were truly miraculous or not, it is plain that the inference drawn by the annotators of King James' Version is not justified by the statement of the sacred writer.

Or, we may well ask, why should the beautiful words "Children are an heritage of the Lord" be paraphrased into "Good children are God's gift"? (see Psa. 127). There is nothing in the context to justify the insertion of the adjective; and indeed most people will be content, despite this unauthorized comment, to recognize the hand of God in the precious gift of all their children, whether they be blessings or sorrows. And, not to multiply instances from the Old Testament, are the headings to the chapters all through the Song of Songs so certainly right that they deserve a place in our ordinary Bibles? They may be accurate, or they may be misleading; good people will be found who maintain either side of the alternative. But at least they are not "scripture;" they are only commentary, and that of a rather fanciful (though devotional) character.

We add one more example from the New Testament. The heading to the seventh chapter of Luke's Gospel describes the "woman who was a sinner," who anointed the Lord's feet with ointment, as "Mary Magdalene." Now, it is possible (perhaps) that Mary of Magdala and the sinful woman of Luke 7: 37 are one and the same person, but it is by no means certain. It is an inference only, and (as most commentators believe) a mistaken inference, derived from the comparison of certain parallel passages in the Gospels. No simpler illustration could be given of the danger of trusting implicitly to these chapter headings, and building a superstructure of theory upon them.

But it is not the main purpose of this paper to criticise. We desire rather to direct attention to what is of value in our marginal notes, and we include among those deserving of attention, not only the annotations printed in the original edition of 1611, but those added at a later time. Read the margins of the Second Book of Chronicles, for example. Sidelights are thus thrown on the narrative which are often illuminating. For example, we miss the full force of the statements in 2 Chronicles 20: 35, 36, as to the alliance of Ahaziah and Jehoshaphat if we overlook the note which reminds us that, according to the parallel narrative in First Kings, "at first Jehosaphat was unwilling." And the note to 2 Chronicles 21: 12, though it is curiously worded, recalls to our memory the difficulties which arise when we investigate closely the date of the translation of Elijah in the fiery chariot, as recorded in Second Kings.

There are certain marginal annotations in these historical books which show that those who are responsible for them were fully conscious of the variations as to numbers between our copies of Kings and Chronicles, about which there has been much needless discussion. For instance, in 1 Kings 9: 23 "the chief of the officers over Solomon's work" are set down as five hundred and fifty in all; but the marginal reference directs us to compare 2 Chronicles 8: 10, where, according to our present manuscripts, two hundred and fifty is said to have been the total number. Or, again, according to 2 Kings 8: 26, the age of Ahaziah at his accession to the throne was twenty-two years; but we are referred to a passage in Second Chronicles which tells us that he was forty-two years old at that time.

These trivial differences, worthy of little attention in themselves, are not unimportant as illustrating the significant fact that the text of Holy Scripture has not come down to our time without suffering from the errors of scribes. And the marginal references, by directing our notice to minor discrepancies of this sort which we should otherwise, perhaps, pass by, teach us a valuable lesson, as they remind us that even so precious a gift as the record of the revelation of the divine will and of God's dealings with his chosen people may be marred by the failures and shortcomings and ignorance of the human instruments employed in its transmission.

To take a simpler class of marginal references. Perhaps not every one has noticed (though it is sufficiently plain) that the last two verses of the Second Book of Chronicles are identical with the first two and a half verses of the Book of Ezra. Our attention is directed to this in the margin, and the fact is of considerable interest as suggesting that Chronicles and Ezra were originally one work, a suggestion which is highly probable on other grounds. In like manner we are reminded by the margins that the remarkable prophecy in Isaiah 2: 2, 3, about the mountain of the Lord's house being established in the top of the hills, is repeated verbatim in Micah 4: 1; and that the prophecy in Isaiah 11: 9, "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea," occurs also in Habakkuk 2: 14. Large critical problems are opened up by references like these, as they lead us to ask which prophet is to be viewed as the author of the prediction, and which is to be regarded as having under divine guidance adapted the inspired words of his predecessor to the needs of his own generation. There are many such coincidences in the Prophets, of which one of the most familiar is the noble description of the divine character in Joel. "He is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil," which (though it is probably based on earlier passages in the Law and the Psalms) is almost exactly reproduced in Jonah (4: 1).

No reader can pass by references such as these, which abound on every page of the Old Testament, without loss, but to multiply instances of them would be wearisome, and to no purpose. If students are induced by anything here written to observe them closely in their daily reading, they will find that in time they will have provided themselves with a valuable aid towards the better understanding of Holy Scripture.—J. H. Bernard, D. D., in S. S. Times.

POOR TEETH AND THE CAUSE.

THE author of that excellent book, "The Avoidable Causes of Disease" which has been so long in the list of the Fowler & Wells Co. that Dr. John Ellis scarcely needs an introduction to the reader, has a letter in the Tribune on the subject of the title. He very properly attributes the poor teeth that most people have to their improper dietetic habits, and speaking from the observations of a long life says in his emphatic manner:—

"If parents care for the present health and development and for the comfort of their children in after life they should never let any superfine flour or bread or cakes made from such flour enter the house where their children dwell. It is difficult to imagine the immense harm to the present and rising generation which is being done by the use of superfine white flour—and the whiter the poorer it is. It should be banished from use, and it is being banished steadily by intelligent and liberal minded people who are not slaves to habit and fashion. I have known a man when traveling to walk a mile to get a loaf of graham bread rather than to eat white bread. To those who have been accustomed to eat graham bread, cakes, etc., white bread is tasteless and without substance, and altogether unsatisfactory.

"Whenever people live on unbolted wheat or rye flour or meal, they have good teeth, bones, and muscles. I well remember, when in Egypt in 1884, at Thebes, the little Arab girl who, with a vessel of water upon her head, ran over the sand, stones, rocks, and hills as we rode upon our donkeys to visit the tombs of the kings, for she had splendid teeth, sparkling eyes, and a beautiful and well-developed waist, symmetrical in form and graceful in every movement. On a visit to the house of our Arab dragoman, or guide, to look at some curiosities which had been obtained from the tombs of the ancient Egyptians, we saw two women grinding at a mill, and making the kind of flour which that young girl ate. There were two mill stones, perhaps eighteen or twenty inches in diameter, standing in a tray, with an opening through the center of the upper one for pouring in the grain, and at opposite sides erect handles.

"The women took hold of these handles and turned the upper stone around and around, and back and forth, and the flour or meal came out between the outer edges of the stones. I said to our guide: 'We have not had a bit of good bread in Egypt, for at the hotels at which he have been stopping they think that they must furnish superfine flour bread for foreigners to eat. Now, I want you to make us a loaf of bread from that flour and bring it to our hotel to-morrow and I will pay you for your trouble.' He did so, and it was the best bread we had in Egypt.

"It is wonderful to see the improvement in health, development, and vitality which frequently ensues when delicate, sickly children—and even old dyspeptics—who have been living largely upon superfine flour and its products are fed upon unbolted wheat or rye flour bread or pudding. But, if the stomach and bowels are weak from the want of proper nourishment, or if they are irritable or inflamed, then for a limited time or until they gain strength and health from the use of this more nourishing food, it is necessary either to sift out with a coarse sieve the coarsest of the bran from the graham flour, or to obtain flour which has been ground from wheat which has been hulled before grinding, which can be had in some of our cities. If this caution is not heeded by those beginning the use of graham or unbolted flour it will not infrequently, in the cases named above, prove too irritating at first, and its use abandoned and condemned, but for strong, healthy children and adults this flour, bran and all, is just right, as the Lord intended it."—Phrenological Journal.

PASTORAL.

IOWA, NORTHERN ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN, MINNESOTA, AND NORTH AND SOUTH DAKOTA MISSION.

To all whom it may concern; Greeting:—At the late General Conference it was ordered that the following described mission field should be under my charge, hence I have made choice of those specified below as my aids, and in charge as designated. It is a wide and populous field. The laborers are few but with a systematic effort, all doing their duty, a grand work can be done in the coming year.

There never was a better prospect for the success of the work than now opens to our view. The church has of late been in a state of uncertainty because of internal trials and much misunderstanding; but a better condition has obtained, and much of the distrust so hurtful to the work has been removed. The ministry can now move out with a better feeling and renewed confidence. One more grand evidence of the divinity of the work, or rather the divine watchcare which is over it, is seen in the ruling and overruling in the hours of deep perplexity, when the wisest of the ministry could see no way except a clash, and fierce array of the priesthood against itself, or brethren in the priesthood. The clouds would gather and look black. A quiet move of the Spirit, and time is extended; again the clouds gather force, another quiet move, and the sunshine is seen; and when the wisdom of the best seemed exhausted and they were humbled because of the perplexities of the situation and danger threatening, the overruling Spirit of the work comes to the rescue, and the light of revelation speaks peace to the troubled ones, and once again harmony is restored, confidence renewed, and the work moves on with better prospects than ever before. Whatever root of bitterness that may remain in our hearts, let it be our work to dig it up and cast it away. And let us enter into the work with renewed vigor and a determination to make a success of our part of the great and good work for the present year, and God will verify his promise. He will go before us and be our rear guard. If God be with us what need we fear? If God be with us what need we care what the world may say or do? We shall succeed.

Iowa, Northern Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota present a fair field for the exercise of our best talent, and I shall expect every opening to be provided for in some way, or carefully noted for future work. I regret that some parts, which to me seem promising fields, are so poorly provided for.

I shall try to meet the calls made upon me promptly, and trust the ministry who are my coworkers will respond cheerfully and so move the good work that we may have God's approval all along the line.

Northern Illinois,—an old and extensive field, a very important one,—has but six general appointees; and were it not for the good and faithful local help found in places I should feel discouraged at the prospect. However, it is God's work; he will provide. For the good working of the missionary forces in this field I have deemed it best to place Bro. F. G. Pitt in charge, and trust that not only the missionary force, but the local force also will recognize him and give him all the aid they can, laboring in harmony for the common good of all in building up the kingdom of God.

The Eastern Iowa district will be in charge of Bro. John S. Roth. Bro. John has three good helpers, and I shall look for a splendid record at the close of the year. The Des Moines district, Iowa, will look to Bro. Columbus Scott as in charge. He with his young and active force ought to stir up such a religious furor that the world shall become acquainted with the fact that God is with the young men, aiding in turning the religious world upside down, making the people thoroughly acquainted with what is in it, to the confounding of error and establishing the truth.

The Galland's Grove district will find in Bro. C. E. Butterworth a wise counselor, and in charge. May he prove himself equal to the emergency and lead his forces to fields fruitful in the Master's labor, to the winning of souls and glory to the cause of Christ.

The Fremont, Iowa, and Nodaway, Missouri, districts, are so well acquainted with and speak so highly of Bro. Henry Kemp, and he fits in the niche so nicely, we will consider him in charge, and hope to visit him and find him and his able aids sounding aloud the gospel trumpet, at no distant day.

The Pottawattamie district, Iowa, will continue in charge of Bro. Charles Derry, whose hairs are telling of years spent in the service; yet they cluster round a head wise in counsel and fearless in opposition of the adversary of our faith; hence with the help at his command good results must be reported at our next General Conference.

The Little Sioux district, Iowa, will find, I trust, in Bro. J. W. Wight as presiding in charge, that energy and push that will renew awakened interest in the Master's cause and stir up a desire to emulation of good works, such as shall be equal in good results to any part of the great vineyard of our Lord. And as his help is quite limited in number, united action will be of great benefit; and while the field seems large for so few, let them so combine that the Holy Spirit shall be in all their labor, and success is sure.

The String Prairie and Nauvoo district is in charge of Bro. James McKiernan. May the Master so order that an interest in the waste places found in this district shall be aroused and the set time for their redemption and rebuilding, revealed, and the good work be begun.

Eastern Nebraska I have felt impressed to place in charge of Bro. Charles H. Porter and feel a confidence in the appointment that looks to splendid results, and hope those assigned to that field will work with him shoulder to shoulder.

The State of Wisconsin I shall leave in charge of Bro. W. S. Pender. There is a good force appointed in this field, and the action of conference leaves it in good shape, so we may with confidence expect the year's record to be of that character that denotes talent of a high grade and activity in the work surpassed by none.

North and South Dakota will be in charge of Bro. I. N. Roberts; a difficult field, and but one appointee in it. I pray the Master to send or raise up more laborers for that field.

Minnesota makes up the field allotted me. I hope to make such arrangements that this promising field shall be cared for, but as yet have not decided who shall be put in charge. I hope to visit this field as the needs may appear, and provide.

Now to close, I ask that all the ministry will cheerfully go to work as if our beloved Lord was soon to visit their respective fields, and so occupy that we may receive the welcome plaudit, "Well done."

A. H. SMITH, In Charge.

To the ministry and Saints of the Southern mission, Greeting:—At our late General Conference I was assigned the charge of the work in Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Oklahoma, and New Mexico. I wish to invite and encourage the hearty coöperation of the ministry both general and local, and also the support and help of all Saints and lovers of truth. The general missionaries will so far as possible push out into new fields, and to the end that effectual doors may be opened and demands supplied, I hope scattered Saints and friends will notify us of opportunities in their respective localities. I hope local officers of both branches and districts will renew their diligence to keep up the work where established so as to require as little of the time of the missionaries as possible.

For the purpose of systemizing the work and enabling us to more readily respond to its demands I have appointed Bro. M. M. Turpen (Garland, Butler county, Alabama) in charge of Georgia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and that portion of Louisiana lying east of Mississippi River. Bro. T. C. Kelley (Pilot Oak, Graves county, Kentucky) in charge of Kentucky and Tennessee. Bro. A. J. Moore (Beaver, Wichita county, Texas) in charge of Texas, Western Louisiana, and Chickasaw and Comanche Nations, Indian Territory. Bro. George Montague (Lowell, Benton county, Arkansas) in charge of Arkansas, Indian Territory (except Chickasaw and Comanche Nations) and Oklahoma.

The ministry will understand that they are to apply to these brethren for instruction, and report labors done to them promptly on the first of the months of July, October, January, and March; also any local matters necessarily demanding attention from missionary in charge will be reported to them, and through them, if necessary, to me. I regret that we have no missionaries for New Mexico, but the brethren resident there will do all they can to keep alive the interests of the work, reporting the needs for labor to me, and if possible to do anything for them it will be done. Bro. George Montague will not reach his portion of the field until about November 1, in the meantime that part of the field may be reported directly to me. My permanent address will be Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa. I congratulate you all on the zeal, energy, and sacrifice made by you last year; and also on the success attained. Fondly anticipating a grander and more extensive success this year; and devoutly invoking the blessings of God upon your labors I am, your collaborer for Christ,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

LAMONI, Iowa, April 29, 1894.

To the officers and members in the Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia mission:—Having been again appointed in charge of said mission, after an absence of two years, I take great pleasure in extending to you a brotherly greeting; and also take this means of soliciting your aid and hearty coöperation during the current conference year. Present aspects seem to indicate that we have a prosperous year before us. But the success that we anticipate to realize depends largely upon our individual and collective efforts therefore it is to be hoped that the officials and laity will strive by faithful observance to advance the interests of the Church of God in their respective localities.

There is an increasing demand for the preaching of the gospel throughout the entire mission, hence we trust that district and branch officers will be able to keep the work committed to their respective charges in excellent condition, so that the traveling ministry can devote their time in opening up new places. We have been forced in times past to keep some of the traveling ministry in branches, by reason of the inability of some of the local forces to keep the branches under their care in a healthy condition. We intend, this coming year, to work in harmony with the late revelation; hence, in view of this we hope that none of the branches will insist on having one of the traveling ministry confine their labors to the branches. All matters needing special attention affecting the work in the respective districts should be referred directly to the district presidents. All matters pertaining to missionary work should be addressed to missionary in charge.

There are two other things that are necessary to observe in order that our labors will be conducive to the good of the cause: First, it is very essential that the membership seek to live together in peace and harmony with each other, thus putting an end to all strife and contention; for it is written that by their fruits are God's people to be known among men. Second, we should not lose sight of the fact that it requires temporal means to carry on the gospel work. The Lord has said that it is a day of sacrifice until he comes to reign upon the earth. The Saints of this mission have done remarkably well in this regard in times past, and we pray God to inspire you to do as well in the future, if not better. I can assure you that the Bishop's agents will gladly receive whatever amount you may be able to forward them.

The following able and efficient workers have been assigned to the mission: M. H. Bond, L. W. Powell, J. J. Cornish, R. Etzenhouser, James Moler, H. R. Harder, H. E. Moler, J. S. Parrish, D. L. Shinn, J. L. Goodrich, Thomas Matthews, J. H. Godby, and J. W. Moore. It seems to the writer that with our present strong force of ministerial help and with faithful efforts on the part of local officers, and Saints, we ought to witness a great ingathering of souls into the church ere this conference year closes.

In conclusion, may the Lord of the harvest abundantly bless all our efforts for good; and may he give each grace and strength to stand in his own lot and place that all may redound to the glory of his name and the furtherance of the great latter-day work.

The writer will expect to hear from the missionaries once a month at least.

Yours hopefully,

G. T. GRIFFITHS,
Pres. of Mission.

TEMPLE, Lake Co., Ohio, May 2, 1894.

TO THE EUROPEAN SAINTS.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ, Greeting:—In view of my time being very much occupied in tending to home affairs and looking after church work, I take this method of informing you that I am ever mindful of you and of your kind ministrations to me and others of the ministry while laboring among you. Doubtless you have learned ere this of the appointment of Bro. James Caffall to the European mission. I take great pleasure in recommending him to you as a worthy and faithful minister of Christ, and bespeak for him your faith, prayers, and faithful coöperation; and that you will extend to him the respect and courtesy you accorded the writer and others while in your midst.

I feel to admonish the Welsh Saints to be very patient under present trying circumstances. It is the intention of the church to send a Welsh minister to Wales just as soon as practicable. I have endeavored to keep my promise with the Welsh Saints in regard to paying off the indebtedness on the Llanelly chapel, Bro. William O. Thomas donating $100.00 toward the same. Bro. J. R. Evans and myself will have gathered enough by the 1st of July to clear off the entire indebtedness. This act of kindness on the part of the Welsh Saints in America shows that they are in sympathy with you and concerned in your welfare. We trust that with the active labor of Bro. A. Edwards and local forces, the Religio Society, and Sabbath school workers, that the work will be kept moving.

Praying the Lord to abundantly bless you all, I remain, your brother in the faith,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TEMPLE, Lake Co., Ohio, May 2, 1894.

To the Missionaries and Saints of Southern Indiana, Greeting:—It has pleased our heavenly Father and his church to associate us together again the present year, to preach the gospel and build up the kingdom of heaven in this field.

In order that we may be successful, let us buckle on the whole armor of God, and resolve that we will make a better record the coming year than we have hitherto. Our field has been blessed with quite a goodly number of missionaries in comparison with other fields, and so a good report will be expected of us the coming year.

Brethren, "the hastening time" for the redemption of Zion has come, and great will be our reward if we go to with our might for its accomplishment. We were promised through the spirit of prophecy by President Joseph Smith, at the late General Conference, that "Angels shall go before you and prepare the paths for your coming; doors shall be opened for you; you will be received by them within and without, and you will be enabled to enter in, and occupy, and accomplish good in his name. Amen." In view of this word of encouragement, let us be diligent in the faithful discharge of our heavenly calling that souls may be saved; that the glory of God may be advanced among the sons of men.

In order to expedite the work Elder L. F. Daniel will labor in Boone, Vigo, Clay, and Green counties. Elder M. T. Short, Lawrence, Green, Vigo, and Park counties, and northwest to the city of Terre Haute; Elder James M. Scott in Clarke, Washington, and Orange counties; Elder George Jenkins in Harrison, Washington, and west on the macadamized road running from New Albany to Vincennes; Elder V. D. Baggerly, Pike, Gibson, Warrick, and Spencer in connection with Elder A. C. Barmore; Elder M. R. Scott, Jr., in Jefferson, Brown, Scott, and Jackson counties. Elder W. H. Kelley in the city of New Albany and in Floyd county.

It is our desire to labor in harmony with all the local authorities of the church, and we hereby invite their hearty coöperation.

I remind all the brethren that the policy of the church is to act on the defensive and advise that none of you will be the challenging parties for debates, and when challenged that you will confer with me, that we may adopt the best methods by which the most good may be done. Our business is to preach the gospel and warn the world. "Let us be wise servants."

The missionaries will please remember that their work is to the world and not to the church. We may not be needed in the branches, only as we attend the conferences. It is expected that the local ministry will maintain the work in the branches and do all they can outside as they have opportunity.

The scattered Saints, and the friends scattered over the mission field will please notify me of the needs of their respective neighborhoods, and I will try to supply these demands. Those corresponding, will please remember the postage for return answers. The missionaries will report to me quarterly, beginning with July first. My mission address for the year will be Eckerty, Crawford county, Indiana; my permanent address is Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa.

I. P. BAGGERLY.

He came to America in 1865; became identified with the Reorganization in 1893. He lived a consistent Christian life and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services were in charge of Bro. Nathan Miller. Sermon was preached by Elder Jas. McKiernan at family residence, April 1, 1894. The respect with which he was esteemed was attested by the throng of neighbors and friends who filled the house and yard to sympathize with the bereaved ones. About fifty carriages and teams made the long journey to the cemetery at Eddyville, where the last sad rites of interment took place.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A bill has passed the Cherokee Legislature providing for distributing per capita $6,740,000 among the Cherokees.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 29.—The officials of the United Mine Workers' union, who are at the head of the strike in this district, are authority for the statement that steps will be taken to-morrow for a settlement of the strike. Through W. P. Rend they are trying to reach the Pittsburg operators, who hold the key to the situation. He is in favor of settling the strike.

Mr. Rend, it is said, is preparing a communication to the operators asking them to appoint delegates to meet operators of other States. Some of the other operators do not favor the scheme, and are opposed to making any overtures or concessions.

President John McBride, of Columbus, Ohio, of the United Mine Workers, in reply to questions as to whether anything had been done in that line, said letters had been received from operators suggesting such a conference, but so far as the mine worker's officials were informed no concerted action of operators had been taken. He said the miners were willing at any time to meet with the operators, but would not take the first step.

CITY OF MEXICO, April 29.—With a silver pick President Diaz has finished the opening from end to end of the seven-mile tunnel out of the Valley of Mexico. Several members of the Cabinet and other prominent persons were present. After the opening had been made a luncheon was served and informal exercises indulged in. The tunnel and canal, which it is hoped will at last successfully drain the valley, and thus remove all danger to the City of Mexico from inundation, have been in course of construction for many years, and when finished will have cost nearly $10,000,000.

QUEBEC, April 30.—The inhabitants of St. Albans, an isolated village, Friday night heard a terrific noise resembling the roll of thunder in the distance. The soil vibrated and a panic ensued. Near the parish church is a curve in the River St. Anne which makes a waterfall. The ground which stays the formation on the right side gave way and the earth and rocks filled a deep gap of the falls, burying a wood-pulp mill and blocking up the natural channel of the river for five miles to a depth of seventeen feet, making the water rise above the earth walls. The water rushed down upon the village, carrying away three bridges and all the lumber booms. The house of Farmer Gauthier at St. Albans is buried, and the four persons who occupied it are supposed to be buried in the house, which is evidently burning. Hundreds of cattle; horses, sheep, and pigs have perished, and in the wreckage that floats past the poor brutes can be seen struggling. The piece of land which slid into the river is about a mile long and four miles wide. The latest information received is to the effect that $500,000 worth of property was destroyed and twelve persons were killed.

BELVIDERE, Ill., April 30.—This section of country was visited by a wind and rainstorm this afternoon about four o'clock and much damage was done. About two miles west of this city the storm was a cyclone almost and blew down several barns and killed much live stock.

The storm seems to have covered a wide extent of territory. Richville and Rockford, Illinois, report damage to city and farm property; hail fell at Abingdon, Illinois, to the depth of four inches. Much live stock was lost in Lincoln township, Iowa. Much damage was done at Grinnell, Iowa, by the wind.

OTTUMWA, Ia., April 30.—A furious storm swept over this vicinity last night. The Hedrick schoolhouse was unroofed and the tower blown down through one of the rooms into the basement. At Keosauqua hailstones fell as large as goose eggs and demolished nearly every pane of glass in the business portion of the city. West of the city a tree was blown down, crushing through a small house full of people, but none was injured. The wind was accompanied by heavy rain and hail.

RED CLIFF, Colo., April 30.—Snow is eighteen inches deep here on the level and is still falling fast. It is feared the railway tracks in the canon will be washed away if this snow melts rapidly.

NEW YORK, April 30.—The National League for the Protection of American Institutions has during the last week flooded the State with more than 100,000 copies of documents urging the voters to insist on the passing at the coming constitutional convention of the proposed amendment to Article 8 of the Constitution of the State of New York, as follows: "No law shall be passed respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, nor shall the State nor any county, city, town, village, or other civil division use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or otherwise, or authorize either to be used for the purpose of founding, maintaining, or aiding by appropriation, payment for services, expenses, or in any other manner, any church, religious denomination, or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking, which is wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

JERUSALEM, April 29.—Excavations certain to add to the knowledge of the old city of Jerusalem are soon to be made. The Sultan has granted a firman to the Palestine Exploration Society of London, giving a long-sought privilege. The permission to dig includes a generous strip of land all around the walls on the outside, excluding only Moslem burying grounds and holy places. The work is to be done under the direction of Frederick Bliss, a young American of considerable reputation as an archaeological explorer. Shafts are to be sunk on the hill of Ophel, where were the royal gardens and the tombs of the kings. It is hardly possible that this ground can be turned up without valuable discoveries being made. One thing hoped for is that the old wall that swept around the southern brow of Zion may be found. The imperial firman grants a two years' privilege, time enough to make the old city of Solomon and the Jebusites tell some of its long hidden secrets.

MADRID, April 30.—The Spanish medical delegation sent to look into the epidemic at Lisbon reports that the cholera has spread to the left bank of the River Tagus. Some cases are reported at Castello Branco in the Province of Beira, close to the Spanish frontier.

LISBON, April 30.—There are forty-five new cases of cholera reported Sunday. Sixty-four patients were discharged as cured. There are under treatment 284 persons. No deaths occurred.

CAIRO, April 29.—William Astor Chanler has arrived from Zanzibar after his second Central African expedition, and is the guest of United States Minister Penfield. He leaves Tuesday for Vienna, and will then go for a cure to one of the German springs. Mr. Chanler says his expedition was fairly successful, though he was beset by many mishaps. He will contribute a report of his explorations to the New York Geographical Society.

Five hundred and thirty-four cases of small-pox were reported to the Chicago health authorities during the month of April.

ATHENS, May 1.—A sharp shock of earthquake was felt here at 2:25 a. m. to-day. Several lighter shocks followed, but no further damage was done. Reports from the stricken districts confirm the most alarming reports as to the loss of life and amount of damage. It is believed that when the total loss of life from earthquake disasters and from the subsequent exposure of the homeless people is added up it will be found that nearly if not quite 500 people have lost their lives through the recent calamities.

AKRON, O., May 1.—[Special.]—President O. C. Barber of the Diamond Match company is on his way to Liverpool, England, where the largest match factory in the world will be erected. A combination will also be attempted that will be a trust covering the entire world.

CLEVELAND, O., May 2.—An infuriated alien mob of Poles, Bohemians, Huns, Slavs, and others, whose appetite for blood and violence had been quickened by May-day depredations ran wildly about the streets of Cleveland to-day, almost capturing the city and throwing the citizens into consternation and terror. Four thousand men armed with clubs and stones marched through the streets, closing down each factory as they came to it. Factory after factory was visited and looted, the workmen fleeing in terror. The police finally massed themselves and dispersed the mob.

As a result of the day's depredations six rioters have been arrested. One is Tom Moore, a leading Anarchist and a dangerous fellow. He was captured by Lieut. English, while loudly urging his cohorts to do all kinds of violence. No more mass-meetings will be allowed on the public square, and it is thought violence is at an end. The total numbers of the aggregation which marched the streets would probably reach 9,000. The depredations were committed by about 5,000 of the men.

COLUMBUS, O., May 2.—The great miners' strike is fast approaching a critical point in its operations. That there is to be a coal famine in some sections if the strike continues a week or two is no longer a matter of speculation. Meanwhile the strike is spreading, and reliable information received by President McBride is to the effect that 5,000 more miners are out now than ever before since the strike was inaugurated. There are now 165,000 men in voluntary idleness as a result of the strike for living wages.

ATHENS, May 2.—It is learned that during the earthquake shocks of Friday last nine villages in the Island of Euboea were destroyed. The distress in the districts which suffered by the recent earth disturbances increases, and there is urgent need for bread and flour and materials for building houses.

CARDIFF, May 2.—A sharp shock of earthquake was felt throughout this district to-day. The disturbance was so severe that crockery and furniture in many houses were overturned. Forty miners in the Pnety Pridd district were so alarmed by the shock that they fled in terror from the mines. Little damage was done anywhere.

LONDON, May 2.—Lord Rosebery, speaking at Manchester to-night, expressed the opinion that the Liberal party would soon carry the conviction of the English people in favor of home rule. He was not sanguine that the various measures which had already been presented would pass Parliament at the present session. This was because of the abuse of procedure in the House of Commons in the form of obstruction. He believed the people would protest against this abuse. He advocated revolution as a remedy for parliamentary congestion. He reproached the labor party's representatives for entering Parliament imbued with the spirit of political anarchism and ready to direct their forces against either party and for supporting the Tories as a return for forty years of benefits received at the hands of the Liberals.

General Coxey's commonweal army, 250 strong, reached the suburbs of Washington on the 29th ult. and encamped at Brightwood Park. The army marched to the capitol grounds on the 1st of May, but were refused admission, some of the leaders being placed under arrest, General Coxey himself being refused admission to the capitol and ejected from its precincts. The straggling army went into its new camping place, a vacant lot about a half mile from the capitol. It is thought the army will be compelled to disband. General Coxey and Marshall Browne have been arrested for unlawfully entering the capitol grounds. Both were released on bail.

General Kelly's army, 1,000 in number, reached Des Moines, Iowa, April 29, after a march of twenty-seven miles through a driving rainstorm. They were met by an escort of police and conducted to an empty factory building east of the city, where they were fed.

They were not permitted to remain in the city. General Kelly is reported to have made the following statement:—

"I can tell you that fully three fourths of the members of the army are determined not to march a step further. I don't think they will attempt anything desperate, but I talked with at least five hundred of them and they said that they were ready to sit down here and stay here until a train is furnished. There are about three hundred men in the army who are in earnest in their determination to go to Washington and to try to accomplish the object of the movement, but the rest of the crowd are not caring much where they go. These fellows say they are here now and the people of Des Moines have got to feed them and they can stay here just as well as anywhere else."

This statement is in line with the position taken by Kelly and his officers and is undoubtedly the intention of the bulk of the army. The city authorities say that they will furnish teams to take the army as far as the east line of the county, but the provisions will not be furnished them for a protracted stay. The railroad authorities are firm in their determination to not furnish transportation for the army, and have sworn in a number of men as special deputies to guard their property. The city also has 150 extra officers on duty.

The coal miners' strike is affecting the commercial interests of the country. The coal supply is getting short and is expected to give out in ten or fifteen days. Prices are advancing. Operators from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Pennsylvania met and conferred with miners' officials. It was decided to hold an inter-State conference at Cleveland, Ohio, May 15.

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., May 3.—Anarchists Schwab and Neebe are expected here Saturday and intend to hold a mass-meeting. Circulairs are scattered all over the factories.

TEGUICIGALPA, Honduras, May 3.—Agitators are working among the troops inciting them to revolt on account of not having been paid. Louis Menage is known to have reached Balize, the capital of British Honduras.

Finnish iron miners, on a strike in Northern Minnesota, have been restrained from acts of violence by the presence of State militia.

Cleveland, Ohio, is practically under martial law, and the spirit of the rioters is broken.

LA LIBERTAD, Salvador, May 3.—A battle took place to-day between the government troops and the revolvers at Santa Ana, in which General Antonio Ezeta, commanding the government forces, was victorious. Another body of President Ezeta's troops, under General Farrara, having defeated the revolutionists at La Cruces, is now marching toward Santa Ana.

President Ezeta of Salvador has cabled that the insurrection at Santa Ana will be put down in three days, as the government is well supported. The rebels are committing many depredations, he says.

There was another severe shock of earthquake at Athens Wednesday. It completed the destruction of many buildings which had been damaged by former disturbances. There was no loss of life.

A sanguinary encounter between workmen and gendarmes is reported from Ziedlitz, Bohemia, the trouble growing out of the May day celebrations. One workman was killed and a number injured on both sides.

A CHEAP POWER,

And at the same time a reliable power, are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the gauge is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844. Muslin binding 70

SOME PHOENICIAN INSCRIPTIONS.

J. H. MITCHINER, F. R. A. S.

ACCORDING to general testimony it is to the Phœnicians that the world is indebted for the invention of the alphabet; but whether it was derived by them from the Egyptian hieratic system or from monumental phonetic symbols remains at present a debatable question. M. de Rougé maintains that the primitive form of almost every Semitic letter can be deduced from its normal hieratic prototype. In common with other Semitic alphabets constructed subsequently on the Semitic model, it consisted of twenty-two letters, all consonants, and it may be said to have furnished the basis of nearly all other alphabets. The Hebrew is allied to the Phœnician, and may be considered a dialect of that language. In religion, the Phœnicians acknowledged a single deity—one Supreme Power, but the names by which he was known varied with the locality of the temples—El (great), Ram or Rimmon (high), Baal (Lord), Moloch (King), and Adonai (My Lord).

One of the oldest known alphabetical inscriptions is that of Mesha, King of Moab (B. C. 896), and is known as the Moabite Stone. The stone was discovered by Mr. Klein, a Prussian, at Diban, a village on the east of the Dead Sea. It is of basalt, rounded at both ends, about three and a half feet in height, by two feet in thickness and breadth, having on one face thirty-four lines of inscription, the lines about an inch apart. The original is in the Louvre, but there is an excellent cast in the Second Room of the British Museum. As soon as efforts were made to secure the stone, difficulties arose. Negotiations for its possession were not judiciously managed, and ultimately rather than surrender the stone to Turkish authorities, the Arabs determined to destroy it. They lighted a fire around it, and when sufficiently heated, they threw on its surface cold water and vinegar, thus causing it to crack and split into fragments. Fortunately a squeeze of the inscription had previously been taken by M. Ganneau, a young attaché of the French Consulate.

This stone was erected by Mesha, King of Moab, to commemorate his successes against Omri, King of Israel, and his descendants. This is the same Mesha whose resistance to the united forces of Jehoram, Jehosaphat, and the King of Edom is recorded in the third chapter of 2 Kings. Omri became King of Israel, B. C. 929, and the date of the stone is 890 B. C. The translation begins as follows:—

I am Mesha, son of Kamoshgad, King of Moab, the Dibonite. My father reigned over Moab 30 years, and I reigned after my father.

In 1880, another important discovery was made in Jerusalem, in the ancient conduit which conveys the water through the hill and under the mosque of Omar to the Pool of Siloam. The length of the tunnel is 1,708 feet. The passage winds considerably and reveals several culs-de-sac, showing defective engineering. The inscription, of which there is a cast in the second room of the British Museum, was found in a niche in the wall, about nineteen feet from the mouth of the tunnel where it opens into the Pool of Siloam.

According to Professor Sayce, some of the characters, as waw, zayin, and zadhe, are more archaic in shape than the corresponding letters in the Moabite inscription. He therefore regards this tunnel inscription as older than the Moabite Stone, and assigns it to the age of Solomon. It is, however, more generally held to be about the time of Hezekiah.

TRANSLATION.

Behold the excavation! Now this is the history of the tunnel. While the excavators were using the pick each to his neighbor, and while there were yet three cubits to be excavated the voice of one called to his neighbor, for there was an excess in the rock on the right. They arose . . . they struck on the west of the excavation, the excavators struck each to meet his neighbor pick to pick, and there flowed the waters from the outlet to the Pool for the distance of 1,000 cubits, and . . . of a cubit was the height of the rock at the head of the excavation here.

From this it is clear that the tunnel to the Siloam Pool was begun at both ends simultaneously, and that in consequence of imperfect engineering, as in the Mont Cenis tunnel, the workmen nearly missed meeting in the center and overlapped.

An object of considerable interest in the Third Room of the British Museum is the large bronze Lion-weight, of some twenty manehs, engraved with the inscription in Phœnician characters: “Verified in presence of the supervisors of the silver.” In the Babylonian Room, close by, are several of these weights, evidently of Phœnician manufacture, of from one to ten manehs each. These were found in Babylonia, and are stamped with the official stamp in both Phœnician and cuneiform characters, and were probably cast exclusively for the Babylonian trade.—Literary Digest.

BISHOP VINCENT ON TEMPERANCE AND WOMAN'S DUTIES.

During one of the recent services of the New York Methodist conference, Bishop Vincent tackled St. Paul's much-debated advice to Timothy: “Use a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.” “It would be as absurd for me,” said Bishop Vincent, “to draw from this passage the general views of Paul as to prohibition and the use of wine as to infer his views as to certain other things from other single sentences in his writings. But a very sensible Irishman, Father Matthew, to whom this advice of St. Paul to Timothy was quoted when he was asked to take a drink, gave the best possible reply to it: ‘Well, in the first place, my name is not Timothy; and, in the second place, my stomach is all right.’ The fact is, I think St. Paul meant that we may use wine for the relief of physical pain, but, at the same time, the very fact that he found it necessary to give this advice shows that there was a strong temperance sentiment among the followers of Christ.”

Incidentally, Bishop Vincent gave his views on woman's domestic rights and the minister's choice of a wife. “Paul,” he said, “was a believer in woman's rights. He says, ‘Rule the home, and, indeed, I think that when a woman governs her household and her husband well she is doing a good work. Many a man is fortunate enough in the choice of a helpmeet, but I cannot but believe that the play of passion in selecting companions for life is a dangerous factor. Let a clever man choose unwisely, and, while he goes up in life, his wife must still stay down. It is a terrible thing to be a preacher of the gospel for temporal advantage, and we have to examine ourselves and take heed lest we teach spiritual things with an undiscovered motive. I pray God that every one of us may have such absorption and devotion in his work that even if our salaries ceased, so long as we had a sufficient income to enable us to live, we should steadfastly go on with it.’—Ex.”

JEWES IN PALESTINE.

Bishop Blyth, the Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, asserts in his annual report that “about 100,000 Jews have entered Palestine during the last few years, of whom 65,000 have come within the last seven years, and the arrival of a vaster host is imminent.” No one can, he says, possibly forecast the extent of Jewish immigration to Palestine within the next seven years.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT DECISION.

The decision of Judge Philips, of the United States Circuit Court, Western District of Missouri, Kansas City, awarding title and possession of the Temple Lot to the Reorganized Church as the true successor of the original Church of Latter Day Saints organized April 6, 1830, and setting forth the position of the Utah Church and other factions as departures from the true faith, and without right to the name or property of the Original Church.

In pamphlet form complete; price 15 cents each; two for 25 cents. Special prices on orders for ten or more.

Address orders to David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

HAWAII.

Two thousand miles from California, their nearest neighbor, they make the most important group in the North Pacific, an outpost of the Polynesian world, through which must cross the lines of commerce between the continents. Great changes and improvements have taken place in Hawaii in the last half century, which the United States has done more to bring about than all other nations combined. American missionaries have multiplied their food products and taught them agriculture. They have introduced a public school system, where education is compulsory and English the language spoken, so that all the younger generation, of whatever nationality in Hawaii, is growing up to read, write, and speak English.—From "A Glimpse of the Hawaiian Islands," by Alice Walbridge Guick, in the May number of the Review of Reviews.

THE UNEMPLOYED.

THERE is a small army, or two, endeavoring to make a demonstration at the capital, with a view to affect the present congress in some way to secure national legislation to "ameliorate the condition of the unemployed."

This army, commonly called "Coxey's," is but little more than a rabble, formed by an eccentric man, who fancies that he has a mission to reform American political economy. His following is, unfortunately for the effect he desires to produce, largely composed of the "unemployed" who would not work if work was offered to them; notwithstanding one object said to be had in view by their leader is to get legislation favoring the creating of public governmental works that will give remunerative labor to the masses, to be paid for out of the public treasury by money also created by the government.

Of the idea of great works to be for the use and benefit of the public, such as a system of good roads, public parks, gardens, and other accessories to advanced civilization, we have but little to write; as the history shows that such things were attempted and achieved in the far past; but, if such contemplated works are to be undertaken now, and completed under similar conditions as those of the past seem to have been, then compulsory labor will be necessary; as that was the rule when many of the surviving monumental accomplishments of labor in the past were erected.

Compulsory labor, that is, labor made necessary by the social and economic conditions at present existing, is just what "Coxey's army" do not want, the mass of them not being anxious for chances to earn their bread by "the sweat of the face." So far the various sections of the army have subsisted on public charity, extended to them by sympathetic people along the line of march, and when this has not been freely offered, the community withholding has been roundly denounced. Attempts have been made to compel private corporations to furnish transportation across the country whence some of the sections of the army proceeded; until the presence of one of these fragmentary "industrial" armies has become a menace to public business traffic, peace, and safety.

This may not have been contemplated by Generals Coxey, Kelly, Fry, Hogan, and others, but it was the natural result of a so-called peaceful assault on the halls of legislation, by a "petition in boots," demanding legislation mapped out by its originators who are almost, if not quite worthy to wear the "cap and bells" of folly.

It is well for the army, well for the nation at large, well for society where this army has passed, and where its receding waves will reach, that it began its march when it did; for the uncanny behavior of a backward spring, has with rain and mud and wind and frost, tried the temper of those who endured, decimated the ranks by desertion as the march progressed, and kept thousands from joining in the misdirected scheme.

One section of the army has been arrested by a detachment of the national troops for theft publicly committed by force; another section lies at Des Moines, Iowa, refusing to go further on foot, while the officers of the railways leading out of that city refuse to grant transportation unless paid for it, as is the case with others who wish to travel over their roads, and why should such straggling demonstrations of popular discontent be fed and carried, at either public or private expense other than their own?

The movement is an ill-advised one, cannot be productive of good results; as any possible effect which the assembling of such a host round the halls of legislation could have will be made vain by the folly of it, and the resistance which the necessary safeguards against molestation and intimidation will offer. Mr. Coxey will, of course, insist on his "constitutional right;" but neither he, nor any other has constitutional rights that go so far as it is stated he proposes to go; so that if he pushes claims too far he will be set down as criminal and be punished as such.

The conditions complained of may be bad enough; but they will not be made better by wild legislation; nor can legislation reach some of the evils existing. They have not resulted from legislation good or bad; and no amount of bluster and parading of poverty and distress by certain classes can affect the situation; but can continue some of the conditions and create new ones that will add to the common distress.

Much of the distress under which the community of labor is suffering is the direct product of unwise and unthrifty ways. Many of the unemployed, when labor is plenty and well paid, are spendthrifts, both at home and abroad; do not own their homes, nor make any attempt to do so. They squander a good part of their wages in tobacco and drink; and are voluntarily idle at times when work is to be had, through the foolish wisdom of their labor union legislation. They not only spoil their own chances for success and competency, but they add to the difficulties before others; and even at times deny to others the exercise of freedom of choice to labor or to refrain from it, and make this denial effective by force, unto bloodshed. This peculiarity of the labor and reform problem cannot possibly be reached by legislation; for if the government were to pour money into the public channels of commerce, through which governmental moneys usually reach the masses, until the streams were sluggish with the plenty of it, the idle, vicious classes, the spendthrift sort, and the blatant grumbler kind would get none, for the reason that they would do no more to be entitled to it than they now do; and it is an excellent rule of society emanating from the wisdom of Deity, "He that is idle shall not eat of the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer."

We shall be glad to see successful methods to relieve the really needy of this wide nation, but are reasonably sure that General Coxey and his co-lieutenants have not hit upon those methods in this army movement.

CO-OPERATION.

In the early rise of the church, and in the first years of the Reorganization, there was more or less of agitation of the subject of coöperation, and a manifest desire that some plan should be inaugurated among the Saints that should obtain general approval and be found productive of good to all. But in the activities of gospel work, the task of warning the world, the bettering of the temporal conditions has been in a measure put off to a "more convenient season."

It is apparent to the observant and thoughtful that the political and economical conditions at present prevailing in the United States, as well as in the world at large, are of such a character as to bring the possible necessities of the masses into consideration.

It is conceded that the church—its membership as a whole—is poor; that is, the average condition is below the medium of competency; and yet not so low as to be dependent. There are but few justly called wealthy men in the church. To us this is in keeping with the saying, "the poor have the gospel preached unto them;" and hence is not a condition to be much deplored, seeing it is as God would have it. But that we as a people should be content to drift into a state of apathy and indifference to the common well-being of all, the medium, and so-called, lower classes, more than others; in order that there might be no poor among us, is a mistake.

Several years ago, the HERALD suggested methods of coöperation, a blending of personal interests, temporal and social, into mutual interdependence and helpfulness in lawful ways, to such degree that the advancement of one would be to the advantage of all; and what would be beneficial to the whole must be, necessarily, to the benefit of the individual. At the time, little attention was paid to the HERALD'S idea further than to excite some comment, and the presentation of several schemes which looked well on paper, but which lacked the initial material substance deemed requisite by the promoters.

In order to again call attention to the subject, we introduce an article from the Coming Nation, an industrial journal, published at Greensburg, Indiana, of the issue for Sunday, April 7, 1894. The chief point in this article is that a few absolutely poor workers, did, by dint of personal sacrifice and persistent self-denying economy, succeed in saving to themselves a considerable portion of those profits before accruing to others from their daily expenditures for sustenance.

We believe that just such things could be made successful among the Saints, if they would but be contented to be guided and controlled by the "wisdom that is gentle and easy to be entreated." There must be no wild, reckless rushing into association, upon the hope that by a joining of the littles of the many with here and there the much of the very few, all shall be suddenly enriched.

We know a man who but a few years ago was a sturdy "all things common" man; but who, by a turn in the wheels of fortune, became fairly independent with a competency, and who by such turn of fortune completely lost all zeal in his former theories. How it was done, and by what rule of reasoning the result was reached we do not know; nor is it any business of ours, he being the architect of his peculiar fortune in regard to his acceptance with the Master; it all looks like it was change of views wrought by change of condition, a thing so common as to be unworthy of argument as to the why of it. We commend the reading of the article from the Coming Nation.

BROTHER WORKERS: I may not lay claim to either the age or wisdom to advise you what to do, but if you will consider some of my suggestions relative to your actions and surroundings, and talk them over among yourselves, I am sure you will be able to find the world brighter to you. You seldom, if ever, give any serious thought to bettering your condition except by hoping for better wages. Your ideas begin and end with "wages," and so long as that be true there is no possibility of your conditions being bettered. You mistrust your fellow workmen, never give or receive their confidence, and are afraid of trying to help yourselves by mutual exertion. You may say you also mistrust the employing classes, but you act on their advice or suggestion every time. You say that one of you is dishonest, another lazy, and so on, and they have a like opinion of you, when if you were to go to them as a brother, take them into your confidence and unfold some plan you have thought out, of honestly making more wealth, or retaining that you do create, I am sure under many ragged coats you will find true hearts willing to help you, and minds capable of great and noble deeds. It only lacks this expression of confidence to bring out their nobility and yours also. Who ever speaks to a workman about bettering his conditions except on terms that takes the larger share while the laborer takes all the chances of loss? No one will help you on really just terms. You must learn to help yourselves. I never felt this more than while reading how thirteen poor weavers and shoemakers in Rochdale, England, met and talked over how they might better their condition. They did not have a shilling, but they laid away two pence (four cents) a week from their scanty wages, and began to create a fund. In time they got a few more with them. At the end of a year they had twenty-eight pounds. They bought coffee, sugar, tea, and oatmeal with it, placed it in a room of one of them, and sold it to themselves at the retail price, saving the dealer's profit. They did this at night, that they might not lose time.

This grew and new members were admitted, but it was seven years before the store was finally opened during the day. This was the beginning of a system that has to-day two thousand retail stores, great wholesale stores, factories and workshops, ships, all owned by the very workers who are employed in these institutions, each having only a small share of stock, but dividing the profits among them. They do a business of hundreds of millions of dollars annually. It has not only placed them above the power of British capitalists to make profits out of their toil, but it has done more. It has developed some of the noblest, purest characters in England. It has elevated thousands of working people from degraded conditions to self-reliant men and women. It is an example worthy to be followed by all working people. Are you Americans less noble? Are you less independent? Have you the mettle to meet and overcome your ills? Are you capable of recognizing some of the good in you as you do the bad in you? Are you worthy of better treatment than you are receiving? If you are go to work. Take each other into frankest confidence, talk over plans, and when you have carefully considered and decided on some course, pursue it with a determination and vigor that means success. If some drop by the wayside, stop not. Keep your eyes on the goal, your heart true to truth, and all the powers of capitalism and its combines will give way before you.

You have never tried to help yourselves, and are therefore helpless. Every obstacle met and overcome will make you stronger. There is no victory where there is nothing to conquer. This article will certainly strike some of you who have not lost all hope of being something better than a hireling for some employer, and if it does I beg you to consider it, think over it often, and see if you cannot see some way of helping yourself and others, and not the least must be your desire to do the latter. It is that feeling in your bosom that will bring success. If you strive for self alone you will create the same feeling in others, and you will not succeed. Take the same pleasure in helping others and they will take pleasure in helping you.

WE have received a number of notices of citations of parties to trial, for publication in the HERALD. We call attention to the action of General Conference, October 9, 1876, which prohibits publication of said notices. Parties having sent us such will please take notice why they do not appear in the HERALD:—

Resolved that the practice of citing members to trial, on their church membership, through the Herald, be discontinued.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. S. W. SIMMONS writes from Oscar, Indian Territory, the 4th inst:—

Father A. B. Moore is here. All goes well; the work is spreading; the people are beginning to request us to come and preach for them. We are all expecting to make a grand charge on the enemy this year. May God bless us all.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from St Joseph, Missouri, May 7:—

All goes prosperously. Had fine time at Pleasant Grove yesterday; great meetings at eleven, and 1:30, and 2:30 p. m.

Bro. F. C. Smith, writing from Gilmore, Michigan, May 10, says:—

The debate between Elder J. J. Cornish and Elder Rogers begins on the 14th inst., next Monday evening. Please put it in the HERALD and say to all who wish to attend to come to Farwell on the Flint and Pierre Marquette Railroad. It is then four or five miles to walk. We expect a big time. I baptized a man and wife on the 5th; others are ready.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE want two young men, aged from twenty-one to thirty, of sound bodies and minds, who are zealous and devoted enough to accept and prosecute a mission to the Sandwich Islands. It is desired that they shall be willing to labor, and able to learn the native language.

Bro. W. W. Blair started on the 3d for a tour of several of the conferences. He was at St. Joseph, Missouri, over Sunday, the 6th, and would leave that point for Nebraska City on the 7th. He was in good health and spirits.

Two were baptized at Lamoni, on Tuesday the 1st of May, a husband and wife, after years of investigation. So do the children of the covenant come, one from a family, two of a city, and the kingdom continues to grow.

Col. Thomas C. Sharp, the editor of the Warsaw Signal during the anti-Mormon days in Hancock county, Illinois, died at his home in Carthage, Illinois, a few days ago. He had been a helpless paralytic for some two or three years before his death, so that his final departure from this life was not an unexpected event. So pass unto their destiny the men of both good and evil report. The issue for one and all is in the hands of one "who doeth all things well."

Sr. H. Flinn of Amity, Missouri, writes for Sunday school supplies. She conducted a school in her house during the winter, and now has the use of the Christian church in which to continue the good work. She needs more help, but keeps at work with what she has. May it be said of her as of another, "She hath done what she could."

Bro. C. J. Hunt was at Galland's Grove, Iowa, over Sunday, the 6th inst.

Prayers asked. Sr. Addie Hull, of Ozark, Missouri, asks prayers for her nephew, Alva Rounds; and Bro. Thomas E. Thompson, of Beeler, Kansas, asks that prayers be offered by the Saints for him, for recovery from sickness.

President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley went to St. Joseph and Independence, Missouri, and Bro. Henry C. Smith to Northern Ohio, en route to the Eastern mission, during the week of the 6th.

Bro. A. C. Barmore has stirred the people of Beall, Indiana, to that extent that Bro. John A. Davis writes for church literature to give them further information concerning the faith. He is besieged with questions and is improving the opportunity to furnish the information desired.

Brn. James Moler and R. Etzenhouser will hold a two-days' meeting at Middletown, Ohio, Saturday and Sunday, June 2 and 3.

The address of Bro. R. L. Ware is, care of Mahlon Smith, Blue Rapids, Kansas.

The Federation of Women's Clubs at Philadelphia passed upon some matters timely and important. See report of proceedings in items of interest.

Some notices of two days' and other meetings reached us late in the week and will therefore appear in next issue. We have called attention to those set for early dates.

One was baptized at Lamoni on Sunday the 13th inst.

Brn. A. H. and Heman C. Smith were the speakers at Lamoni on the 13th.

Good reports come in from all points since the late General Conference. The work is moving everywhere for good.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"I could not do the work the reapers did,
Or bind the golden sheaves that thickly fell;
But I could follow by the Master's side
And watch the marred face I loved so well.
Right in my path lay many a ripened ear,
Which I would stoop and gather joyfully:
For I did know the Master placed them there—
'Handfuls of purpose' that he left for me."

LABOR FOR CHRIST.

Come, labor on!
Who dares stand idle on the harvest plain,
While all around him waves the golden grain?
And to each servant does the Master say,
"Go work to-day!"

Come, labor on!
Claim the high calling angels cannot share,—
To young and old the gospel gladness bear:
Redeem the time; its hours too swiftly fly,
The night draws nigh.

Come, labor on!
The laborers are few, the field is wide,
New stations must be filled, and blanks supplied;
From voices distant far, or near at home,
The call is "Come!"

Come, labor on!
The enemy is watching, night and day,
To sow the tares, to snatch the seed away;
While we in sleep our duty have forgot,
He slumbered not.

Come, labor on!
Away with gloomy doubts and faithless fears!
No arm so weak but can do service here;
By feeblest agents can our God fulfill
His righteous will.

Come, labor on!
No time for rest, till glows the western sky,
While the long shadows o'er our pathway lie,
And a glad sound comes with the setting sun,
"Servants, well done!"

Come, labor on!
The toil is pleasant, the reward is sure,
Blessed are those who to the end endure;
How full their joy, how deep their rest shall be,
O Lord, with thee!

MOOLAP, Australia, Feb. 15.

Dear Sisters:—As I have not seen a letter in the Herald from our branch for some time I thought I would write and let you know how we are progressing in the gospel work. I am sorry to say the work seems to move along very slowly in this part of the vineyard, but the Lord has promised that many more shall be added, if the Saints are humble and faithful. But I fear we have not lived as faithfully as we should have done. O may our heavenly Father help us by his Spirit, to live nearer to him in the future, than we have done in the past, so we may be helpers in the gospel work and not hindrances. I am sorry to say we have just parted with Brother and Sister Wight and family, as they expect to sail for America very shortly. We will miss them very much. Bro. Wight has done a great deal of preaching since he came to Australia and has brought many into the sheepfold, and although we would have liked him to have stayed a few more years with us, still we must not be selfish, but rather glad to think he may be the means of bringing many more to the light of the gospel in his native land. But we hope to continue faithful to the end so we may meet all the faithful Saints in the kingdom of God, where we shall never part. For O how Saints love to meet; for are we not all members of the one body, and brothers and sisters in the one faith? "For the body is not one member, but many."

The Herald and Autumn Leaves are welcome visitors to our home, and we have been cheered and encouraged many times, when reading of the thrilling testimonies some of the Saints have received, "For the Spirit beareth witness with our spirits," that the work is true and that the gospel has been restored to the earth in these the latter days. May the time soon come, when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters do the deep. My earnest desire is to continue faithful so I may receive more of the Holy Spirit, to lead and guide me in the way of truth and righteousness. For "hereby know we that we dwell in him and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit." Wishing you every success in your labor of love, I remain,

Your sister in Christ

EMMA CRAIG.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Feb. 26.

Dear Sister Walker:—All day to-day I am impressed to write you. I have nothing special to write about, only to add my mite of encouragement that you may not become discouraged in your (to my mind) well-begun work. I am not as yet one of the enrolled "Daughters of Zion," but in my heart I truly sympathize with the movement. I am especially interested in your "Talks with Mothers." Ever since I was a child, and natural curiosity prompted me to desire to know the whys and wherefores of certain laws pertaining to the natural functions of generating life, I have felt the importance of a mother counseling her children. I shall never forget how shocked and indignant I felt when first I received certain information concerning my embryonic existence. It was when about eleven years of age, and from a companion at school a few years older than myself. It was hurled at me in a spiteful, sarcastic way; and when at last I found courage to ask my mother about it she replied, "Who has been telling you such nonsense? Wait until you are older before you try to pry into things which do not concern you."

I was grieved again. My mother was a quiet, reserved woman; she had been left an orphan at the early age of nine years and having had no instruction in such matters, knew only what she gleaned by observation and experience, and concluded that careful watching on her part was all that was necessary for her children. As I grew older I began to read medical works for information, but while at home this had to be done secretly, as I was always punished if detected in this occupation. Finally, to my discomfiture, I found all such works were kept under lock and key. How many times I wished for a friend in whom I could confide; one whom I could trust as a trustworthy guide!

The summer I was fourteen years old I was sent on a visit to my father's oldest sister, a true Latter Day Saint. I remained with her five or six weeks. She had been the mother of four little ones but they had all passed "over to the other side" in their infancy. I was her favorite niece, and many hours, while others slept, found us in loving embrace, while she imparted information which by the grace of God helped shape my whole future life. Not only did she answer my questions, but she taught me the high and holy calling of woman, the sacredness of motherhood; taught me to shun the vanities of society, which would unfit me for assuming the responsibilities of a wife and mother. She told me she was impressed that I would sometime be an elder's wife, and that the Lord required a work at my hands such as was demanded of but few. I was not a Saint, at this time—not until seven years from then did I acknowledge and obey the truth; but those teachings always clung to me, and to-day I honor and revere her memory, for several years have passed since she entered the "Saints' rest;" still her works are following her.

As years pass and I see and hear of the wickedness that exists in the world, the alarming number of girls and women who sell themselves into infamy and shame for the sake of "filthy lucre," I am often led to cry out, "Mothers, whose fault is it that your daughters go astray? that your sons leave the paths of rectitude, and integrity? Have you done your duty? Have you sought to make known the snares and pitfalls along life's rugged road?"

I believe the first steps downward many, many times have been taken through ignorance, and once started on the down-hill side, how much easier to continue down instead of righting about face and climbing up again in the face of a frowning society, who draw their skirts about them by actions which often speak louder than words, "Come not near to me; for I am holier than thou." I often look at my little ones and pray that I may have wisdom and strength given me to lead the "little ones," intrusted to my care aright, that no false modesty may keep me from teaching them to shun all evil and cleave only unto that which is good.

Ever praying that you may be strengthened for duties required of you, I remain,
Your loving sister in the faith,

HATTIE.

HELPING HAND.

A young friend living in Boston sends us these words of encouragement:—

"I have been following up the reading matter of the leaflets that you have been putting out from time to time, and I can hardly contain myself when I think for a moment on the results that are being accomplished along this line. It has been in my mind for several years, but I never dreamed for a moment that it would work out in the church in this manner in so short a time. The work of the leaflets so far as I have been reading has been a part of my study (and, I may say, a great part of it) during the past six or eight years. The good that is to result from this move will never be thoroughly measured; the class of young women that will naturally come up from this teaching and grow out of it will simply be a wonder to those that look on to see the move of this department of work.

"The leaflet that was sent out written by Bro. Smith was without a doubt in my mind the finest piece of literature of the kind that has ever been published. Possibly my reading has not been as extensive as some others in this respect, but I can say for myself I never saw as plain and comprehensive an article before."

From a laboring elder in Diamond Valley, Nevada, comes the following:—

"Dear Sister:—I have just finished reading your last "leaflet." I feel I must write you my appreciation of it: It is just what is needed, just what it ought to be; a plain, truthful observation of facts, and some of the most practical suggestions to be found in print. I am satisfied the main reason why many do not talk and warn their children of such is because they don't know how to go about it. If people knew how widespread this cursed practice has become, with both sexes, they would be more willing to listen to plain talk. Much of the talk on these matters is too vague and indistinct; it is an evil that we ought to more than hint at.

"I was satisfied from the beginning of the agitation of this question that it would amount to but little or nothing unless the matter was plainly discussed. I waited anxiously for this last to appear. I could see the difficulty in your path; plain talk will be or is distasteful to some, but without it the effort is in vain. You succeeded grandly; a better sermon is not on paper. It is said that over two thirds of the inmates of Stockton, California asylum are there as a result of that Sodomite practice. It is a curse of all classes of civilized society in America, widely prevalent in all our public schools. False delicacy should be thrust aside and the evil be brought prominently before our people anyway.

"Godspeed the Daughters of Zion in their work of redemption and prevention, never mind the croakers; croaking is their part of the work. Thousands will appreciate your work whom you will never hear from, while those who do not will generally let you know it, on the principle that it is more natural to manifest displeasure than approval. Keep the good work moving. Let plain talk be the order, and may God bless you."

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MAY.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, May 17.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Romans 9:22-26; Proverbs 22:20-23.

Thursday, May 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 33:11, 12; Enos 1:18, 19; Alma 17:21.

Thursday, May 31.—The gathering of Israel to their land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Ezekiel 39:23-25.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Isadore Cramer, of Wilmette, Illinois, asks your faith and prayers in her behalf that God will enable her to hold out faithful and that the heart of her husband may be softened to receive and obey the truth.

Sr. L. C., of Pigeon, Iowa, requests your earnest faith and prayers that if it be God's will she may be healed of affliction.

Letter Department.

PORCUPINE, Wis., May 2.

Editors Herald:—The work in Pepin county is onward. The interest last winter here we thought could not be more intense, but if things were lively then, they are doubly so now. God's hand is in every movement. I am alone here now but the Lord sustains me. Last week Rev. Connor, of the M. E. Church, after refusing to discuss the issues of difference between our churches and the character of Joseph Smith and the early Saints, in a well ordered debate, set Friday and Saturday nights on which he attacked our church organization, from Joseph Smith the prophet down to your humble servant; and he called me a wolf in sheep's clothing, naming all the rest of the elders of the Reorganization as wolves. I asked for five minutes to speak the first night after he was through, but was promptly denied. The people were enraged, and while he offered up his closing prayer hisses went up all over the house and chunks of mud and other articles were thrown at him. After the meeting was dismissed cries went up all over the house such as, "Coward;" "That's too thin!" "Tie a man's hand and then throw mud at him;" "If he wont stand up like a man he ought to be run out;" "He don't dare to debate;" and many such expressions of contempt and disgust.

I carefully took notes of all that was said and will reply in a kind and genteel spirit, God helping me. The elder and his colleagues have been holding protracted meetings for two weeks and over and only got two converts. This small number and our church being built seemed to enrage them beyond constraint; hence they exploded, and most everybody is disgusted with the effort, and the meeting is brought to a close. I had been giving them my Sunday night appointment at Porcupine, but will resume it next Sunday, Elder Connor also offered me his eleven o'clock hour. I guess he wants to quit Porcupine now. God orders things this year; brethren, the Lord is at the helm. The time is short and our battles are sharp and decisive. If you are appointed to labor whether on a mission or not, don't lose any time, for I feel that the Lord will work mightily with his people and his ministry and has already commenced this glorious campaign of 1894 by an abundance of his Spirit, and the sandy foundations begin to rock all around us.

The church building is going on nicely at Porcupine, and the waters will be troubled by baptism ere long, and quite a number will get into battle line.

Your brother in Christ,
H. P. CURTIS.

STRINGTOWN, Ill., May 8.

Editors Herald:—After leaving Lamoni I went to Burlington, Iowa, and preached three times. All present seemed interested; some outsiders attended the meetings, and I believe a good work could be done there if a proper effort was made.

From there I went to Pana, Illinois, expecting to preach on Monday night; but no appointment had been given out, and we had no meeting. Two families of Saints live there—Yohe's and Johnson's—and they are glad to have an elder stop and talk with them.

From Pana I came to this place, and began meetings by preaching the funeral of Bro. Henry Wilkinson on Wednesday, May 2, and closed last night. I baptized eight here, and many more are believing, and some are very near the kingdom. There has been much sowing done here, in past years, by the elders, and now it seems the reaping time has come. There is material here now to organize a branch. I hope the district authorities or missionary in charge will attend to it at their earliest convenience. I instructed the Saints here to have prayer and testimony meetings every Sunday until they were organized. I leave here to-day for home, and then will soon be off either to Southern Kansas, or String Prairie and Nauvoo district, to prosecute my own department of the work. Surely "the hastening time has come." Let us work while the day lasts.

While preaching at Stringtown a gentleman attended the meetings who lived at Watson, Illinois, in Effingham county, on the Illinois Central Railroad. His name is Adam Walker, and he says he will get a house and take care of an elder while he opens up the work in that town. Bro. Charles Lane, living in West Liberty, Jasper county, Illinois, also sent word to me that he had a place to hold meetings (a hall) engaged, and the people were anxious to have me come at once. I cannot go, so I write this to let those in charge know the situation, and hope they will get into those new places as soon as possible. Those are new places, our elders have never preached there. O that means would come into the treasury, that more laborers could be kept in the field, for the harvest is fully ripe in many places now unoccupied!

Yours in hope,
G. H. HILLIARD.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 8.

Editors Herald:—Since coming here on the 2d inst. I have been pleased to see the many happy changes since my first visit near twenty years ago. Now I find a growing church, numbering nearly three hundred, with a commodious, substantial, conveniently located chapel, and fine prospects ahead for large increase in numbers and in every important way. Last night, at the close of the sermon, I ordained Elders J. M. Terry and William Lewis to the office of high priest, as chosen by last General Conference and as I was requested to do by Elder Joseph Luff, missionary in charge.

Last Sunday, in company with Brn. Winning and Lewis, I went twenty-five miles east to Pleasant Grove, preached twice, attended sacrament and social meeting, ordained Elder Temme T. Hinderks to the office of high priest as chosen by last General conference, and as requested by Elder Joseph Luff, returning here at eight p. m., wearied with the labors of the day, but spiritually enriched, comforted, and greatly encouraged through association with the Saints and friends. Our services were thronged with eager, interested listeners, many being unable to find sitting or standing room within the church. Unity and loving fellowship made the occasion very profitable, and giving excellent promise for the future.

I go to-day to Nebraska City for a short season and hope to answer some of the many calls to "come over and help us," both in Nebraska and Iowa. Earnest, sober, spiritual work is in demand. Yours,
W. W. BLAIR.

KIRKSEY, Ky., May 6.

Editors Herald:—With my family I removed to this part some six months ago, and have been contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints, as this faith has not been preached in this little town. It has created quite an interest here. I have contended privately and discussed publicly, and being only a teacher thought it wise to write for an elder, so I sent for Charles L. Snow, secured a private house for him to preach in, and he preached on Saturday night, Sunday, Sunday night, and Monday night; taking for a text, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." The effort was grand; he surely was guided by the Spirit of inspiration. The effort has made many friends to the cause. Some had said that I had better go to Salt Lake, but the man who made that expression, after he heard the faith presented, said he had been misinformed as to what our people taught, he, a doctor, taking Bro. Snow home with him and caring for him; saying that by the first sermon he learned that we did not have horns. People are anxious for Bro. Snow's return. I think some may obey when he comes back.

Your brother in faith and love,

IMPORTANT TO TENT WORKERS.

At the late General Conference a number of the brethren interested in tent work met together for consultation. The following points were generally agreed upon:—

The size of tent for ordinary district work should be about 31x45, round ends; the top composed of 12 oz. army duck; walls 7 feet high of 8 oz. duck.

In compliance with the request of a number present I have secured several bids from responsible houses in Chicago on the above tent, and the best bid received is $100. This includes guys, poles, stakes, etc., to make the tent complete; or the same with 10 oz. army duck top $92. This is in answer to several inquiries I have received concerning tents.

I am willing to assist those desiring to purchase, so far as I can; but when tents are ordered the cash must accompany the order. Those writing for information should inclose stamp for reply, as there is no commission for me in the above figures.

I find there is great difference in material used in tents that may be branded the same. Some goods marked 12 oz. army duck is not as good as some marked 8 oz. There is also a great difference in the make up of tents. An unprincipled dealer may take advantages of these things, therefore only responsible parties should be dealt with. The above figures are for the best material.

PASTORAL.

To the Michigan and Northern Indiana Saints:—The conference year is again upon us with all the interest involved to build up the cause of God, confirm Saints, and gather sheaves into the garner of the Lord. This year opens the most propitiously of any in the history of the church. A grand union of all the forces in the world, combined in confidence and love for Christ and his coming kingdom is the watchword from the rising to the setting sun. No revamping or correcting of creeds with us, is the joyous sound in contrast to the ever-murmuring disquiet felt among the human creeds established ever since Constantine the pagan emperor of Rome assumed the Papal See, or the woman mounted the scarlet-colored beast to preside over "peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues." Her daughters are much agitated just now over our unyielding success in presenting our hope in Christ; and to use the language of one of the representatives of the daughters of Babylon: "It is hard to drive out the Saints, if they get a foothold in one of our churches."

We make no war on churches; our aim is to teach Christ and his doctrine unmixed with the commandments of men, treating all as we would like to be treated, with the largest liberality in love for God and humanity,

We court investigation among all people who love philanthropy or the Christian religion. Neither do we shun discussion under the sickly garb that we have not time to prove all things; "hold fast to that which is good."

Our mission work should be vigorously prosecuted in every city and neighborhood. Heed not scoffings of those who would retard the Christian religion as we understand and know its truthfulness, being patient with all, and strictly true to the interest of humanity without selfishness.

Elder F. M. Cooper will take charge of the Northern field, R. E. Grant of the Eastern field, I. M. Smith of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana. The above presiding elders will take charge of their respective fields. Elders J. J. Cornish, F. C. Smith, J. L. Bear, (his appointment should read "Michigan" instead of "Eastern Michigan,") Levi Phelps, J. A. Carpenter, J. A. Grant, David Smith, W. J. Smith, Wm. Davis, and S. W. L. Scott, general appointees—all true and good men—will all join in with you to make success the crowning victory the coming year.

The local elders and priests are all earnestly requested to assist in making and filling appointments in their respective regions where they live. Elders Goodenough and Washburn, and of the priests J. K. Soper, F. H. Brooks, and John Glazier, who have done good work in the past, are on account of the stringent times left so as to be put in the field all the time just as soon as it can be arranged with the Bishop and missionary in charge to provide for them: and we trust by October to so provide. In the meantime take courage and do the very best you can to preach the word. We were all ever so anxious to see you appointed as general missionaries, but had to yield to the inevitable and await a more propitious time. All the Saints are appealed to as they love God and his Christ and wish to be "helpers with God" to second every effort to spread the good news of the gospel; not by your prayers only, but by your cheerful, helping hand. Is it not possible to not only sustain the present appointees of the church, but very soon to put those into the missionary field who were unavoidably left out at General Conference?

The clouds that hung over the horizon the past year have all cleared away to a bright sunshine of a glorious hue, and the golden opportunity for the church to enter in and occupy. Let the time of the end of the world be ever so long or short, to us who are now living the end is very near, and we are sure the reward is guaranteed for well-doing and not for faith only—devils believe but do not the work required in the gospel of Christ.

The district conferences, if they are appointed at Knox, Indiana, June 2, and Bay Port, Michigan, June 16, and the Northern district conference June 30, would make it so as to accommodate those who would like to attend them all, and possibly serve the cause best in the mission.

Bro. Scott, who has served in the Southern district in the most acceptable manner for years, may visit more generally throughout the mission this year. In a word, it is much desired that every effort shall be made to vigorously prosecute the work to the utmost of our ability, sparing no pains to see that the interest of the church is first looked after, if it requires sacrifice on our part. Charity to all and ill will to none, is our motto.

Bishop's agents William Lockerby, Andrew Barr, and J. H. Peters—all good and true men—want all your names on their books, and are anxious to see you credited up to the fullest amount due you as it shall be carried up to the great ledger of all accounts, where it shall be said, "Well done; thou hast labored, enter into your rewards, for you have been faithful."

Please let me hear from you often. To your several field officers report regularly. It will please the several presiding officers in our mission to visit and help in every part as interest demands, so no single place shall be neglected.

By June 1 my standing address will be No. 613 Cavalry avenue, Detroit, Michigan.

Your coworker in Christ,
E. C. BRIGGS.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 11, 1894.

To the Saints in Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Western Nebraska, and Eastern Wyoming, and all others whom it may concern; Greeting:—Having been placed in general charge of the field including the above-named States and portion of States, and having consulted with those preceding me in said charge, as well as with Bro. A. H. Smith, who controls the Eastern Nebraska division of labor, and who has kindly consented to allow me the services of Brn. W. E. Peak and G. W. Shute for Western Nebraska, I have resolved upon the following appointments of "fields of labor" with the brethren named in charge:—

I. N. White, Clinton, Independence, Southern Missouri, and Spring River districts.

W. T. Bozarth, St. Louis district.

T. W. Chatburn, Far West district.

D. E. Tucker, Northeastern Missouri district.

Henry Kemp, Nodaway district.

John T. Davis, Kansas, except that portion included in I. N. White's field.

W. E. Peak, Western Nebraska.

By these appointments, it is, of course, understood that these brethren are to have charge of the general missionary work within the territory named, and are not to interfere with the branch or district work which belongs to local officers, except as may be agreed upon with said officers or specially directed by the undersigned in cases of exigency.

All General Conference appointees in the fields named will report labor, etc., to those thus placed in charge. Laborers in Colorado or Eastern Wyoming will report direct to me, for the present. All are requested to observe the rules for reporting published in Herald one year ago, and which have been observed since that time.

Let the ministry confine their labors to localities outside of branches as much as is possible, thus honoring the counsel of the Lord as found in the recent revelation. Allow no trifling or unimportant demand to move you from this word of counsel. The work is the Lord's and he knows best how to direct and advise for its advancement. Let our faith in his wisdom and our gratitude for his instruction be voiced by our diligent observance of what he has enjoined.

It is evident that great possibilities are before the church and that the faithful workers will be crowned with prosperity and honor. May we each feel that the obligations of service rest upon us individually, and may we be as devoutly anxious to labor now as we will be to be crowned hereafter.

I will endeavor to aid in the different subdivisions of the field as far as possible and by diligence and humility make myself approved with you all. Let love for the truth and for humanity and unbounded confidence in God inspire us as brethren, to whom has been committed so divine an honor and trust as to be ambassadors for Jesus Christ. Let his image continue with us and his life be our only model.

With assurances of ultimate triumph,

Your brother in gospel bonds.

JOSEPH LUFF.

To the Saints of the Ohio district:—We are now entering upon the duties of another conference year, and we have been kindly remembered by those appointing the missionaries, in that we have some additional help. And the time is near when we should begin tent meetings, and it takes money to operate with the tent. I therefore make this appeal to you and ask you to donate for tent expenses at once just what you feel to give. Send all contributions to A. B. Kirkendall, Creola, Ohio; S. J. Jeffers, Arbaugh, Ohio; or S. D. Hannah, Sand Run, Ohio.

Now please do not wait for these brethren to call upon you for the money you feel to give, but forward it to them at once, and thus help spread the great work which we say we love. Remember, the tent will have to be idle unless we have means to defray expenses. And let us each strive together to make this year's labor a successful one in this district.

JAMES MOLER,
Pres. of District.

LIMERICK, Ohio, May 4, 1894.

AN APPEAL TO SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

Brethren, Sisters, and Friends:—A befitting time to consider the financial condition of our district is now upon us. Perhaps your attention has never before been called to this publicly through the Herald. Perhaps there was no necessity for it. Well, if the necessity now exists, it argues a failure somewhere. The stern grasp of business evolution under the present stringency, is unrelaxed and the possibilities for colossal fortunes seem guarded by flaming swords, the four ways. And while we deeply feel with the majority of the people the close pressure, do we recognize the force of our position to give the solution of the problem as to why? And if the distinctive lines, as to "obedience" and prosperity are drawn, why should we as a people feel the weight of disobedience with the great wicked world, in the face of God's promise?

Cannot the widow's cruse of oil be replenished in the midst of famine during 1894 as well as three thousand to four thousand years ago in Israel? Is our heavenly Father circumscribed to old Judea? In the fulfillment of his promises he is not governed by either latitude or longitude, and is therefore not climatic. He is "at hand and not afar off." The world has had the privilege of testing God for six thousand years. Will all the readings and experiences of this vast period point to even one failure on his part? Nay, that is the saddest consideration in the light of the peoples failure! "Bring ye all the tithes unto the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough receive it."—Mal. 3:10. The faithful Saints, who have honored the Lord in the foregoing words, have "proved" him and "set to their seal that God is true;" while those who failed to do so have tested the law of "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

The treasury in the district has been so low the past year that the "agent" has gone down into his own resources to the present amount of one hundred and two dollars and made demands upon his own necessities to supply the needs of ministry and poor. By this condition the ministerial efforts have been crippled to some extent, and the work not accomplished that should have been done. Now while we recognize that money is a sacred talent, and a great one, to be conscientiously exercised and administered with a sense of responsibility to God, it yet appears that this sacredness of money may be gauged by the degree of sacredness we attach to that for which the money goes. Brethren and sisters, your united testimony has been, that, "the latter-day work is nearer" your hearts "than any other consideration" more sacred. Does the Lord's part of the money, which he has furnished, appear to be directed outside and therefore against the Lord's work? Let us all ask ourselves the question, which is most sacred to us, money or the Lord's work? Treasures where moths corrupt and thieves steal, or treasures in heaven where the corroding hand and touch of time will never rest? While we sing, "Tears of grief can ne'er repay the debt of love I owe," let us remember, that while our Father considers these tears, he does not necessarily require or cause them; but, "if ye love me, keep my commandments." This will "repay the debt I owe," among which is, "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of all thine increase;" and that you may know the "debt of love" is "repaid." "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."—Prov. 3: 9, 10. "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn."—1 Tim. 5: 18. "Blessed are ye . . . that send forth thither the feet of the ox."—Isa. 32: 20.

If in the final reckoning some of our dear, dear friends should appear before the radiant throne and through lack of opportunity to obey the gospel (and God holds us responsible to a degree for that opportunity, in that by our means we can "send forth thither the feet of the" laborer) receives the solemn "Depart from me," etc., would we feel that part of the blame rested upon us? Ah, how the Savior recognized "ye" as "the salt of the earth."

Now let us make the required sacrifice: "Buy the truth and sell it not." This is the day of preparation; now is the accepted time: "To-day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." The Redeemer will come, the angels will be revealed, the intense threefold glory of heaven will burst upon the world, and "who shall stand when he appeareth; who will abide the day?" "A fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Let not "the children of this world" be "in their generation wiser than the children of light;" for it might be that "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven: but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out." Abraham paid tithes to the "priest of the most high God." Likewise Jacob. (Gen. 14: 18, 20; 28: 20-22.) "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness." "He was called the friend of God."—James 2: 23. And while Abraham and his faithful company journeyed "from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people" (Ps. 105: 103), building up the kingdom of God and preaching the gospel, for "the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel to Abraham"—Gal. 3: 8—he was protected, blessed, and prospered of God, evidently because of his faith in the gospel—his "righteousness" which is revealed in the gospel, including his "tithing," which is a part of the gospel; for the Lord has ordained that "they which preach the gospel, should live of the gospel." (1 Cor. 9: 14.)

That we may cause the work of God to move on and on to grander achievements of faith and right, and that our district may be self-sustaining and more, and when the King of kings comes, that Zion may gird on her bridal robes, and stand spotless in the blazing light of celestial glory, is our prayer and work. Hopefully yours,
S. W. L. SCOTT, Pres.

Kinnaman pronounced the words and offered the prayer that made the two hearts one. After the nuptials were over the guests present partook of a repast prepared specially for the occasion, after which the evening was spent in vocal and instrumental music. The happy couple received many useful presents. They expect to make Franklin county, Nebraska, their future home. Mr. Ault was baptized on the 4th inst. by Bro. Kinnaman. Bro. Ault now commences life with a new wife and a gospel life.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A Chicago corporation has purchased California lands aggregating $4,700,000 in value, including perpetual water rights for irrigation. The corporation is in close touch with labor organizations that have cooperated in raising large sums of money with a view to providing homes for workmen, who will become independent land owners and fruit growers in the Golden State.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 5.—President McBride of the United Mine Workers' Union has issued a call for a national convention of miners to be held at Cleveland, May 14, preliminary to the joint conference of miners and operators. The Pittsburg operators who are friendly to a conference expect a settlement at the Cleveland convention.

Strikers continue to call out thousands of miners in Illinois. The shut down practically continues throughout the State. Work was resumed at Staunton, which supplies the St. Louis market, under a volunteer guard composed of the Mayor and citizens of Staunton. They are being resisted by strikers, and trouble is expected.

Birmingham, Alabama, iron furnaces and other industries will bank their furnaces because of lack of fuel. The export coal trade is the greatest sufferer. Operators claim the famine will be over in a week; they are importing negro miners.

Two thousand miners quit work in the Boone, Iowa, district on the 5th inst. Miners in the Coal Creek, Tennessee, district are gradually resuming work. Miners joined the general strike, at Wellsburg, West Virginia, May 5. Their action compels large glass factories employing thousands of men to close. All the miners in the Trinidad, Colorado, region have struck in sympathy with Eastern miners. Strong guards are maintained at all mines. Minnesota miners are gradually resuming work, though militia remains on guard at some points.

CLEVELAND, O., May 6.—A fight occurred this afternoon at the Standard foundry, where a strike has been in progress for several weeks. Ever since the trouble began the non-union molders who took the places of the strikers have kept a constant watch on the building. This afternoon about 2,000 idle men assembled in the vicinity. About five o'clock an assault was made upon the building, a volley of stones and other missiles being hurled at the windows. The guards inside, who were armed with rifles, opened fire on the crowd and the battle raged for fully fifteen minutes before the police arrived. It is said that at least 100 shots were fired. A large force of police was summoned as soon as the trouble was reported and the mob was dispersed without difficulty. The officers have been trying to ascertain if anybody was shot, but thus far have been unable to find a single person who was injured.

Alabama miners 200 strong and well armed destroyed mining property by dynamite and by fire. They have also made threatening demonstrations at other points. Trouble is feared at numerous mining districts. Illinois miners continue to join the strikers. Maryland miners are being rendered uneasy by strike agitators. The anthracite coal miners, 100,000 strong, have asked admission to the United Mine Workers' Union.

ANTWERP, May 5.—King Leopold, accompanied by the Queen of Belgium, the Princesses of the royal family, the Countess of Flanders, Prince von Hohenzollern, the Cabinet Ministers, and a host of prominent persons, opened the World's Exhibition here to-day with appropriate ceremonies. There were over 35,000 persons present.

LONDON, May 7.—Baron Hood of Avalon, a Rear Admiral and formerly a Lord of the Admiralty, called the attention of the Lords to-day to the large increase in foreign navies and asked whether the proposed increase in the British navy, provided in the British estimates, was sufficient to insure to Great Britain the command of the seas. Baron Hood especially urged an increase of 6,800 men in the personnel of the navy. Earl Spencer said the government was determined to maintain the navy and render Great Britain paramount upon the sea. The government scheme, he added, provided for the naval requirements of the next five years, but it was not thought advisable to announce the details beforehand.

LONDON, May 8.—Col. Malleon, an eminent authority in Indian affairs has written an open letter to the newspapers on the expected uprising of the natives in India. He says undoubtedly some serious disturbance is impending, and prompt action on the part of the government is imperative. There may not be an uprising Thursday, the anniversary of the Sepoy mutiny, in 1857, but it is bound to come if immediate measures are not taken to prevent it. The natives have a superstitious dread against taking any important action upon an ill-omened date. The writer advises the government to cease tampering with the laws relating to marriage, the sale and use of opium, and other so-called "reforms," which the natives regard as worse than tyrannical, and quietly but closely to watch the movements of the natives.

ROME, May 7.—Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, has intimated to the Pope that while he is devoted and obedient to the Vicar of Christ he cannot counsel his followers to abandon his cause in Spain, which is that of reclaiming his legitimate rights, which claim is similar to that of the Pope for the restoration of temporal power. This declaration of Don Carlos, which challenges the Pope's present attitude to the reigning dynasty of Spain, has produced a deep impression at the Vatican. A large portion of the Spanish clergy follow Don Carlos.

A disastrous storm prevailed throughout Iowa and Kansas, May 5, attended by hail and rain. Tin roofs were perforated and buildings and goods damaged or destroyed. The loss at Iowa City, Iowa, alone is $100,000. At various points the storm assumed the proportions of a cyclone, and completely destroyed buildings and crops. Portions of Indiana, Illinois, Indian Territory, and Minnesota were damaged by the same storm.

The Kansas State Board of Agriculture has received encouraging crop statements from every county in the State. Injuries by the cold weather in March are reported as slight. Wheat is in good shape and corn will excel the yields of previous years. Prospects for fruits are also good.

The Board of Education of the city of Chicago is remodeling the course of studies in the public schools by providing a college preparatory course for the schools and high schools. Higher education is to be begun with youth with a view to preparing them for entrance upon college and university work.

General Kelley's industrial army of commonwealers has constructed 125 flatboats at Des Moines and will start by water for the mouth of the Ohio River in a few days. Various other branches of the industrial army are en route to Washington. Commissioners of the District of Columbia are said to be devising means to break up Coxey's army at Washington, to force it to disband.

ATHENS, May 7.—Another severe shock of earthquake was felt here and in the Atlantic district to-day. Passengers on board the steamers traversing the straits say they distinctly saw the earth trembling to such an extent as to cause part of the fortifications at Chalcis to fall.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 7.—Another appeal to the world for assistance has been received here from the suffering people of Zapata county. The appeal says the starving people have become so desperate that a band of twenty of them made a raid upon a general store the other day for food supplies. □ The raid was stopped by their temporary wants being supplied. The drought in that county has lasted for four years, and there is not a wagon load of grass in the entire county. It is the only section in Southeast Texas that has not been visited by the recent heavy rains.

VIENNA, May 7.—There was some serious rioting here to-day on the part of the striking laborers. A large number assembled around the Burger Platz and tried to prevent the laborers at work from continuing their occupation. The police in trying to disperse the mob were assailed with stones. Several men were wounded and seven arrests were made. The rioters were eventually driven away.

During an anti-Jewish riot at Grajewo, Russian Poland, workmen attacked the Jewish shop-keepers and looted their houses and shops. Four workmen were killed and 100 wounded.

A submarine cable has been laid and is now open for public correspondence between Hong-Kong, China, and Labuan, Borneo.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 8.—The women of America have taken this city by storm, and to-morrow the general federation of women's clubs will set up its banner in the Academy of Music for a three days' stay. During that time there will be discussed all subjects that the female mind is interested in from the care of a house to the momentous one of the right of suffrage. More than 300 clubs will be represented by the States of the Union and from India and Persia.

The report of the committee on dress was referred to a committee of five for revision. A brief portion of its synopsis follows:—

"The public has treated our various styles of dress very kindly, and the dual dress in some form is growing familiar in the bicycle suit as well as in the physical culture classes. These receive favorable comment and illustration in the daily papers. There are indications everywhere of a great change in public opinion within the year, and of an inquiring mind and desire for radical improvement in woman's dress.

"The main work of the council relating to dress improvement was done last year at its dress session during the congress of representative women at the World's Fair. Much good seed-sowing for dress improvement was done in an unofficial way at the Fair. The Committee on dress and members of the council generally are working for the abolishment of certain features of the conventional dress of woman considered unhealthful and artistically objectionable. They believe the corset, however loosely worn, substitutes a false idea of feminine form for the natural and womanly one and jeopardizes maternity. The long skirt sweeps the filth from the streets and is objectionable because of its weight. Woman's dress should allow her the free and healthful use of the organs of her body when walking or taking exercise."

The Supreme Court of South Carolina has decided that there is no law in the State granting power to its authorities to issue licenses for the sale of intoxicants.

British forces in Uganda are suppressing slave traders.

Rebels in San Salvador have been defeated with a loss of 100 killed.

Spanish troops have punished marauding natives in Mindanao, Malay Archipelago.

LONDON, May 9.—Advices from St. Petersburg are that the Russian police have discovered a vast Nihilist conspiracy. It is stated that 100 people have already been arrested in connection with the plot.

DENVER, Colo., May 9.—The Caledonia club of Chicago has secured 5,000 acres in San Luis Valley to parcel into forty-acre farms. Hamilton White, President of the Epworth League of Iowa, and Mrs. E. McMurry, State President of the W. C. T. U. of Iowa, are interesting themselves in a project for colonizing 8,000 acres in the valley. A Swedish syndicate proposes to locate about 1,300 families, and John H. Copeland of Chicago, identified with the American Federation of Labor, is organizing a colony on the cooperative plan.

Striking miners attacked gendarmes guarding coal pits in Troppau, Austrian Silesia, May 9, and were fired upon by the latter. Five were killed and twenty wounded.

Akron, Ohio, is under martial law, because workmen threaten violence to foreign laborers employed on street improvements.

The coal miners' strike is spreading, miners at many points are ceasing work. A battle occurred near Uniontown, Pennsylvania, May 9, between strikers and deputies. Militia is held in readiness to suppress rioters in Alabama and Kansas.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 10.—The monument to Mary, the mother of Washington, was dedicated here to-day, under the auspices of the Mary Washington Memorial Association, a society composed of women. President Cleveland and his cabinet and Vice President Stevenson were present. Senator Daniels of Virginia was the orator of the day.

MONTEVEIDO, Uruguay, May 10.—President Borda, of Uruguay, has expressed his belief in the Monroe doctrine and his intention to encourage a close relationship between his country and the United States, whose course in the Brazilian trouble he admires. He deprecates the anarchistic spirit that has sprung up in some parts of South America.

CARACAS, May 10.—An earthquake took place in Venezuela April 28. Reports which have been received here from the district affected tell of heavy loss of life and destruction of villages and towns.

The cities of Merida, Lagunillas, Chiquara, and San Juan, situated in the northwest of the republic in the region of the Andes, are reported as having been totally destroyed by a shock near midnight. Many villages are said to be wrecked, but details are not yet to be had. The convulsion extended to parts of the adjacent Republic of Colombia.

It is probable that 10,000 people have perished, and it is certain that the greatest suffering prevails in the places visited by the earthquake. The United States Minister here has notified the State Department at Washington of the terrible effect of the catastrophe, and has asked that assistance be given to the people of the stricken districts.

Indianapolis, Indiana, Stillwater, Minnesota, and Akron, Ohio, were visited by severe storms on the 10th inst. The damage done at Stillwater alone was $100,000.

Three thousand men quit work at the Pullman, Illinois, car works on the 11th inst. because refused higher wages.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 11.—At the General Federation of Women's Clubs Mrs. Charles H. Henrotin, of Chicago, was elected president and the following adopted: "Resolved, That the Federation of Women's Clubs declares its belief that one standard of morality is equally binding upon men and women, and that the immoral conduct which debars one from public and social life should debar the other."

A CHEAP POWER,

And at the same time a reliable power, are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the gauge is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & RAY TYPE FOUNDRY, 405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. CHRISTIANITY—TRUE AND FALSE.

ARCHDEACON FARRAR contributes to McClure's Magazine an article in which he addresses himself to the assertions "that religion has been a curse to the human race," and that "Christianity has inflicted upon mankind more harm than good." He says that just as Lucretius was right in exclaiming that a thing which called itself "religion" had been the prolific mother of many a deadly curse, so many modern students have been right in maintaining that something which called itself Christianity—something which priests would fain have passed off for Christianity, something which theologians have taught as Christianity, but which was not Christianity at all, and was, in point of fact, alien from its most essential attributes—had done incredible harm to mankind.

In what respect is the cause of "pure religion and undefiled" injured or weakened by our free admission that the names of Religion and Christianity have been grossly abused to the perpetration of innumerable wrongs? Does the cause of virtue suffer from the fact that the worst ends of vice and falsity are often promoted by men who call themselves the servants of virtue, and wear the cloak of profession "doubly lined with the fox-fur of hypocrisy"? Is the majesty of duty impaired when men use her name as a covering of maliciousness, and obtrude her commandments as an excuse for gratifying their own vindictive rage? No! Religion, Christianity, Freedom, Virtue, Duty—they are eternal entities. Men may deface their true semblance; they might as well throw dust at Heaven, in hope of staining it, as endeavor to obliterate the shining ideal of these great guardian angels of mankind.

Lucretius is an example of one who, using the word "religion" in a partial sense, regarded it as a curse. Voltaire is an example of a man who, having been misled by erring Christians to form an utterly false conception of Christianity; who, mistaking Christianity for a tyrannous, violent, and outward system, which reeked with hypocrisy and error, hated it from the bottom of his soul. Many a sweet and simple nature has shuddered to read how Voltaire used to say "Ecrasez l'Infame," "Crush the Infamous!" Many have been led to believe—horresco referens—that by "the Infamous" Voltaire intended our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It is certain that Voltaire had no such meaning. In the story a remarkable vision, which it is said that he himself related, it is evident that his soul, flippant as it often was, had been deeply overawed by the majesty of Christ. By "l'Infame" Voltaire did not mean Christ; but he did mean the political and sacerdotal system—the travesty of true Catholicism—such as he saw all around him, and such as he knew to be stained through and through with crimes against humanity of the deepest dye.

If Voltaire hated Christianity, what made him hate it? He did not hate anything which resembled true Christianity. He hated the sacerdotal tyranny of the eighteenth century. There was nothing to respect, nothing to love, in the false religion which brought forth evil fruits, even though it declared itself to be Christianity, and the only Christianity.

It has often been asserted that the spirit of religious ruthlessness is dead. But it is not so. Men still carry their passions with them into what they call, and take to be, their religion. Rome, infallible Rome—Rome under the tyranny of her Jesuits—has never frankly repudiated the guilt of religious persecution. If she still holds that the burning or torturing of men for their religious opinions be right, then every advance she makes is a menace to freedom and conscience, and to all which men hold to be most dear. If she has changed her mind; if she now holds that every man is responsible to God alone for his religious opinions, and that they ought (as such) to be free as air—then what harm would there be in setting herself right on this point before the civilized world? The opinion of the early fathers was unanimous that it was irreligious to coerce religious convictions, and that "violence is hateful to God." Why not publicly admit that the early fathers were right, and that the Rome of the Inquisition was wrong? Protestants have long done so. Calvin burned

Servetus; and, even since, Protestants have blushed for that dark deed, and proclaimed that they condemn it; as, indeed, was proclaimed by not a few of Calvin's own contemporaries. Cartwright, in the days of Queen Elizabeth, openly defended religious persecution, and said, "If this be thought cruel, I am content to be so with the Holy Ghost." (!) But Protestants have long ago declared their abhorrence of such a sentiment, and have shivered to atoms the false views of biblical interpretation on which it rested. — Condensed for the Literary Digest.

ONE CAUSE OF SHALLOW CULTURE.

There is no royal road to sound learning. Real intellectual strength and solid culture can no more be got by a wide range of dilettante exercises than a strong body can be developed simply by parlor systems of physical culture. This important truth is set forth in a very graceful way by Miss Agnes Repplier in the April number of the Forum, who shows that "the necessity of knowing a little about a great many things is the most grievous burden of our day, because it deprives us of leisure on the one hand and scholarship on the other." The dissipation and distraction caused by innumerable courses of lectures and the cramming of digests and epitomes are producing a very serious intellectual disease in the American public; for thousands of people conclude that by this means they really become cultivated, whereas they fall far short of any real learning, and put themselves, moreover, into a state of nervous activity which deprives them of the benefit of the leisure that wise men have, and even of the restful results of idleness which those get who are content to be ignorant.

BEAUTY OF THE MIND.

Cultivate the mind, for a grace of soul and education of spirit count for more than limpid eyes, a rosebud mouth, and dimpled chin. Be ever teachable, for there is not one iota of loveableness in the man or woman who thinks he or she knows it all—interest yourself in timely topics, keep the cobwebs well brushed out of your brain, and though you may not possess a single good feature you will be most pleasing to many who appreciate an active mind at its full value.

VITALITY IN DISEASE GERMS.

As an evidence of the phenomenal vitality of disease germs Dr. Koch of Germany and Drs. Ewart and Carpenter of England declare that the blood of animals and men dying of contagions may be dried and kept for years, and that they will then produce the class of infections to which they belong; this even after having been pulverized in a mortar and subjected to the lowest degree of natural and artificial cold.

There are two mountains in Lower California that are estimated to contain 1,000,000 tons of pure alum.

The descendants of a single female wasp will often number 25,000 in one season.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.
Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preëxistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

FRUIT IN ITS SEASON.

We have sometimes been quite amused at being questioned in regard to the lawfulness of eating preserved fruits and vegetables, the questioners contending that according to the word of wisdom, no one was justified in eating of either fruit or vegetables that have been dried, preserved in either salt, vinegar, or sugar, as such preserved food would be out of the season.

On this topic we offer:

1. The word of wisdom is not given by way of commandment or constraint and hence any man who may not keep it in accord with the strict letter of it is not for that reason alone adjudged to be a sinner, and guilty of breaking a command "thou shalt" or "thou shalt not."

2. All wholesome herbs were designed of God for the use of man; and every fruit.

Under this rule every plant, the leaves, bark, or root of which may be found beneficial to man, either in health or in sickness, may be used by man lawfully. And those the qualities of which are preserved by drying are in their season while their quality is not impaired by being kept too long. Also under this rule, every fruit may be eaten in its ripened condition from the vine, shrub, plant, or tree, and so long after it is plucked as it may be kept in a sound condition, whether the process of keeping may be by saving the fruit in a suitable place until it mildews, moulds, or rots; or drying, preserving in syrups, boiling in sugar, canning, or in any other way preserving its original flavor and consistency.

The fig of ancient commerce, the date, and other biblical fruits were saved and used after drying. The olive as a fruit, and the oil pressed from it were articles of food and used the year round; and it is perhaps significant that as a rule it is quite difficult to keep fruits in good condition longer than from crop to crop; but it ought to be a settled matter with all Saints that divine economy has so ordered the ways of man that he may learn from the provident bee, ant, bird, and beast all of them that live in the quarters of the earth where there is a succession of seed time and harvest, a season of blooming and a season of ripening, and provide for the time when the earth rests and sleeps by storing up what has been grown in their season of labor.

3 All grain, and all that the vine above, or in the ground bears, has God given to man for food for himself and his beasts of burden and use. This grain may be grown and stored for an indefinite period; and it is just as logical to refuse to eat bread made from grain more than one year old because it is out of season, as it is to refuse to eat the pear, peach, plum, apricot, apple, strawberry, blackberry, currant, gooseberry, or grape, after the fruit drops from the tree and is preserved, or canned, upon the plea that it is out of its season.

The germ of life has been preserved in wheat garnered on Egypt's plains nearly two thousand years ago, and placed where it was kept from dampness and the weevil; and who shall say that so long as that wheat retained its qualities it should not be eaten by man if his necessities required.

Meat has been dried and salted to preserve it since man lived on the earth, and corned beef and pickled pork are as much out of season as preserved or canned fruit, or kept grain. But all accept the idea that the bean, the pea, the onion, the potato, the carrot, the parsnip, and all other succulent vegetables, roots, or berries must be gathered, dried, and housed to be eaten in the winter; the fruits both of the vine, shrub, or tree are as much the subjects of the provident care that provides for the season of cold, snow, and ice as are the vegetables, or the grains, and we see no good reason why Saints should not be as sensible in the one as the other; avoiding either extreme.

We believe in the Word of Wisdom, and in the conclusions of common sense as well.

A MODERN CHURCH.

THE Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church, Oakwood boulevard and Langley avenue, announced to his congregation yesterday morning that he was going to break away from denominational bonds and organize a church of free thought, without creed or doctrine. The announcement was made at the conclusion of the morning sermon. . . . It is the intention of Mr. Jones to build a new church to cost $200,000 in the vicinity of the present one as soon as the connection is entirely severed. For funds he depends to some extent on the liberality of Chicago citizens who favor religious worship on broad, unlimited grounds, and appeals to such for aid. . . . The building will be eight stories high. The first floor will be equipped with baths, gymnasiums, etc. The next two floors will contain a library, reading room, auditorium, and class rooms. The next four floors will be given to the housing of congenial tenants on a commercial basis, rooms for post-graduate students, working women's guilds, teachers, physicians, and lawyers. The eighth floor will contain a banquet and amusement hall and the parsonage. With such a building it is believed that the four commercial floors will yield revenue enough to pay the running expenses for the whole building.

Mr. Jones said: "I want to see this church as free in letter as it now is in spirit. Its by-laws are as untrammelled as its members are. I begrudge even a shadow upon the openness of this church. I would like to see All Souls' Church as free in letter as its pastor feels he is.

"Lastly, I appeal to those prosperous trustees of the unearned increment of Chicago, the wealthy men and women outside of our organization, outside of all church organization, who rejoice in the luxury of free thought. If they will not and cannot work with their time and their lives let them give some of their money to us. With their help we will rear on the corner yonder a church freer from theological and race, social and conventional trammel than has yet been realized in our prophetic city."

The above is a clipping of the salient points of an article published in a late issue of the Chicago Tribune concerning the new church to be organized by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones. It is not surprising to find men breaking away from sectarian denominational bonds, but it is surprising if not astonishing to note that the causes that impel such deliberate severing of denominational ties do not so operate as to prevent the extreme of adopting an indefinite "free thought" platform in the organization of an independent church.

The creeds are objected to or rejected (and very justly too) because they contain such formulas or theories as a "God without body, parts, or passions" and a "heaven beyond the bounds of time and space;" which have been aptly interpreted as the equivalent of "nothing nowhere." But how much better will the proposed church be "without creed, or doctrine," on broad "unlimited" grounds? Is not such movement without theoretical or practical center or circumference, its center nowhere, its circumference everywhere? What hopes can such a movement inspire? what substantial results can it guarantee? Can it be or reach anything higher than the fertile brain of its founder may permit him to see or his limited finite talent grasp? When like other religious inventions of men it has passed away, what will remain, what can remain but the ruins of another phase of so-called modern religious thought—another illustration of human blindness and folly?

We once read the statement that every boy knows he must have a string to his kite if he would fly it. It must have a means of connection with a center of direction or control; but this principle, the foundation principle of truth in theology—in nature—seems to be lost sight of in the proposed movement. It reminds one of a cartoon by Keppler, the well-known artist of Puck, that graphic portrayer of passing events, which presented the coming modern church assembled in an auditorium where a speaker, surrounded by astronomical instruments and apparatus used in chemistry and other branches of physics, was proclaiming a mixed uncertain homily composed of theology and science so-called, while the listening people sat with expressions of doubt and despair upon their countenances. It was well pictured, and illustrated the situation plainly.

All such movements as the one referred to but confirm the fact of universal apostasy from primitive Christianity, and therein reveal the causes of present religious darkness and uncertainty. They also confirm the consistency of the claim the church represents, of a restoration of the gospel in its primitive doctrine, and power, and church organization. The brethren see in the above a virtual confession of apostasy and a practical concession of the correctness of the claims they represent.

It is passing strange that men seeking and claiming freedom and liberty in either theology or science will so disregard the first principles of both as to cast adrift into unknown seas without chart, compass, rudder, or anchor. The fundamental truths of religion and science both center in a supreme power, a controlling center, an all-pervading mind or intelligence—in God. No feature or department of the physical realm has been claimed as existing in independence of other phases of the universe; no scientific man has made such unscientific claim. This principle Christianity teaches; the Author of faith is the Creator of the universe; there is harmony in all his works.

His course is one eternal round. He is the way, the truth, and the life; "the light and the life of men." There is no free thought nor liberty attainable—there is none such in fact outside the boundaries and limitations of law. All truth, all intelligence is independent in the sphere in which God has placed it to act, the sphere to which it is adapted in the eternal fitness of things; the laws governing its action being those fixed by the supreme, beneficent Creator. To refuse to abide in, to transcend the limitations fixed by him is to pass into darkness and bondage and unhappiness. Such is free thought ungoverned by eternal, immutable law; such is liberty ignorant or heedless of the directings of him who presides in the midst of all things; who looks upon and provides for the preservation and perfection of his children and of all his works.

These cheering potent truths of nature and revelation we are seeking to affirm—the word of God to men, the word in the revelation of its light and power. Such movements as the one to which attention is called emphasize the conditions of doubt and the needs of the human family, and the responsibilities of those to whom the message of life and salvation has been committed, intrusted.

The revelations of the past ages become obscure to men because they lose the Spirit of them by disobedience and transgression; they also become altered in statement by the mutations of time. God is, God is now, the light and life of men to-day as of old—a God of revelation, and ever the same. Without his ever-present light men move backward, away from him. Only by the light and power of truth can truth be understood and its force be realized. Men may become intelligent enough to mentally perceive and in a sense accept principles of truth, and yet lack the indwelling power essential to living the truth. The world, degenerate man, and the Devil are opposed to truth, opposed to it in theory and in forceful power; it therefore requires the indwelling comprehension and power of truth to oppose, to constantly prevail against error and evil in all their forms, in individual and in general phases of life. "Truth endureth and is always strong. It liveth and conquereth for evermore."

Each disciple of the truth is therefore designed to be "a habitation of God through the Spirit" in behalf of his fellows and for his personal salvation. His liberty is guaranteed and his free thought rightly directed by "the Spirit of truth," which dwelling constantly within, produces consciousness of its presence by realization in fact of its light and power. To him it is the promise of eternal life in fullness, in completeness, because it imparts the consciousness and power of life by which its nature is comprehended in its superiority and supremacy over degeneracy and evil. It guarantees to the disciple that he shall "comprehend even God" and inherit all things as an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus, the elder brother, the firstborn, the Redeemer. The perfect God of love and truth offers all he has: "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." In his perfection he cannot offer less to those who receive "the love of the truth." That is "the glorious liberty of the children of God."

Let us have the "modern church" as God has restored it; the ancient church of Adam, of Enoch, and of Christ; and each disciple a living exponent of Christ—in the life of each God manifest in the flesh; through the power and to the glory of God and Christ, and for the salvation of man.

With a divine organization composed of such men and women in the world, what can thwart or prevent the purposes of God? This is the true modern church of Christ in contrast with the weak movements of men. It is bound in loyal covenant with God to work with him and for him in the interests of fellow men. God recognizes the capacities and the fitness of his children to so labor in association with him in devoted interest in the welfare of their fellow creatures.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

WHAT do you think of the Darwin theory of evolution?

A. We think it a very pretty theory born of imaginative minds to take the place of the biblical statements concerning the creation; based on a supposition. Send for Wilford Hall's treatise upon that subject and the wave theory of sound; and you will be able better to judge of how scientists agree.

Hall's "Problem of Human Life," for sale at the Herald Office; or Hall Publishing Company, New York City, is very readable but hard on the theory of evolution.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. J. SMITH, Detroit, Michigan, May 15:—

My Brother David has just come through the smoke and fire of a three-nights' discussion with a Campbellite, at Deckerville, Michigan, during which we think there was a victory scored in the interest of truth.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Farwell, Michigan, May 14:—

The debate with M. D. Rogers commences to-night, to last twelve nights: six evenings on Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, three on the Reorganized Church, three on the Church of God—the Winebrennarians. All alive.

Bro. J. B. Roush wrote from Fulton, Iowa, May 12:—

I will preach over Sunday at Center Junction and depart for my field in Northern Illinois on the 15th. The Saints here have recently organized a Sunday school, and it is progressing nicely.

Bro. J. E. F. Smith wrote from Higginsville, Missouri, May 13:—

Please notify the elders and Saints that I am permanently located here,—Higginsville, Lafayette county, Missouri,—and would be glad to have any of them call on us. We find a good spirit here and have made a few friends to the cause, and believe that if there is wisdom used there will be a branch built up in time. We also desire correspondence with the Saints of this county.

Bro. J. H. Lake wrote May 11 from Temple (Kirtland), Ohio:—

Bro. and Sr. Griffiths left last night for Wheeling, West Virginia. She was not much better. The rest of the Saints are well. Bro. W. H. Kelley baptized two of his children—Belle and George—and a daughter of Sr. Richner early this morning. The morning was lovely; the sun was rising, throwing light over hill and dale, and the Spirit of peace was with us. I expect to start for my mission next week. Grand prospects for fruit in this country.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER William Newton sends a full report of his mission work from Takapoto, Paumotu Island, South Pacific Ocean. He was progressing in the work. Brn. L. R. Devore and J. W. Gilbert had also arrived at that island and were making preparations for the mission conference, April 6, 1894. Bro. Newton's financial report from April 6, 1893, to February 1, 1894, including his preparation and transportation from Kansas City, Missouri, to Papeete, is as follows: receipts $257.70; expenditures $318.20.

Bro. George H. Hilliard has baptized eight near his home since conference, besides his financial work in the Bishopric.

Bro. Marce Sorenson, of the Danish mission, arrived home on Tuesday the 8th inst. Bishop E. L. Kelley returned the same day from St. Joseph and Independence, Missouri.

Brn. F. A. Smith and F. M. Weld departed for the Des Moines district on Wednesday, May 8.

Bro. J. S. Snively, of the Decatur district, has been holding a successful series of meetings at Hiteman, Iowa. Prospects for the permanent establishment and growth of the cause at that point were very good. Brn. Snively and William Anderson have been holding meetings at Allendale, Missouri, and adjacent points, where the former remains to continue the efforts, Bro. Anderson returning to fill and provide for appointments at Lone Rock, Missouri, and other points in the district.

Brn. I. P. and James Baggerly secured an excellent opening at Oakland City, Gibson county, Indiana, a thriving populous city in the Wabash Valley. They created quite a stir among the people and caused many to make investigation of the faith. We expect to present fuller particulars of their work in a later issue. They will revisit the city in due time.

We present in this issue an excellent illustrated article by Bro. William Woodhead, in defense of the Book of Mormon. Bro. Woodhead expects to revise this article, also those formerly published, and combine all in book form. We shall announce the publication when under way.

Bro. C. B. Moyer, of Antonito, Colorado, has been looking at Lamoni and surrounding country with a view to locating. He left for St. Joseph and Independence on the 16th.

Those who in worship and praise use "instruments of music of the reed and of the string, or instruments of brass in congregations that are large, and as wisdom and choice may direct," will be interested in the advertisement of the celebrated "Conn" instruments. They are highly valued by many performers and recommended by leading artists. We can benefit purchasers if in their selection of instruments through Mr. Conn they will correspond with us. We divide the discount obtained through our advertising with patrons of the Herald Office. Notify the office if ready to purchase and it will secure you a good discount.

The June "Program" of Zion's Religio Literary Society will be found on the fourth page of the cover of the present number of the HERALD and will appear there monthly hereafter. The Program is also printed in pamphlet form and mailed to the local organizations by the Herald Office, as arranged for by the officers of the Religio. Its appearance in the HERALD will remind the members of the regular meetings and work of the society and more fully acquaint the church with its objects and the advantages it offers to young people for social and intellectual culture combined with the religious spirit. It will also awaken and increase interest in the Religio Society where it is now unknown or its work but partially comprehended.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins began a series of lectures on the Book of Mormon at Lamoni, on Tuesday the 15th inst., under the combined auspices of the local Zion's Religio-Literary Society, the Student's Society, and the Sunday school.

Three were baptized at Leon, Iowa, on Sunday the 20th inst., by Bro. John Denio, president of the branch.

Three were baptized at Lone Rock, Missouri, on Sunday the 20th inst. by Bro. Charles H. Jones. About one hundred and seventy-five persons were present at the morning Sunday school service, the chapel being well filled. It is but about two years since the Lone Rock Saints, in order to provide sufficient room, built their present house of worship, and present indications are that they will be obliged to enlarge it or rebuild at no distant date.

Mr. J. S. Duss, of Economy, Pennsylvania, Senior Trustee of the Harmony Society, was at Lamoni over Sunday, May 20, visiting relatives and friends.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"COME UP HIGHER."

THROUGHOUT the church we hear the statement, "The hastening time has come." All along the line in this world at large improvement has been noted and commented upon. In intellectual advancement it is especially notable. Science has also taken fresh fields for investigation, public school systems are improving, and by sectarian ministers we are informed that the world is growing better—that religion is becoming more and more acceptable, and church membership is on a steady increase.

But while all this is going on, let none take time to rest or look back, or the tide will sweep on and he will be left behind. The spirit of advancement spreading among the inhabitants of the earth is but a prophetic fulfillment of the fullness of time, and the enemy of all righteousness is not blind to the fact, and in the mighty strength of his despairing struggle he will draw after him all those that fall in the rear, and those who have not the sure foundation beneath their feet. While the widespread advancement is so remarkable in the Christian world, and also in the heathen countries, as is testified by "the voice from the young men of the Orient," the annals of crime and bloodshed are increasing with alarming rapidity, the liquor traffic increases its widespread destruction, and the spirit of the evil one is wielding an even more potent weapon in the hidden workings of the social world and the home. The evil doings in the social and home circle have been, so to speak, refined, polished, and dressed in such attractive guise that the young are infatuated and enthralled, and if moving in the upper circles of society, they must embrace many or all of these deviations from virtue, or be styled a prude, crank, or something of like significance.

While the call "Come up higher" has been sounded within the walls of Zion, and all her children are rejoicing in the purer light of charitable Christian love, it will never, never do to close the eyes to the subtle inventions the evil one is putting forth, for by so doing we may be the first to be drawn into some nicely laid scheme for our destruction.

With the better and brighter light coming with the call, comes the desire for a clearer conception of right and wrong, more perfect wisdom, and a greater degree of the Spirit of Truth to guide us safely through the struggle.

There are many tired and discouraged ones who have been thrilled to the heart by the inspiring thought, "The hastening time has come," and have been stirred into new and greater activity to enable them to keep pace with the onward and upward move. And a mind thus awakened and permeated with the idea of advancement is the more fertile field in which the adversary may plant the seeds of evil ambition, deception, and iniquity. We see this spirit everywhere, keeping pace with any new advance in the cause of truth. We find it even within the limits of the body of Christ's followers, and the fact is self-evident that some must be left behind, and it warns us all to put forth our best efforts united with fervent prayer for our own safety and the safety of others.

In these perilous and uncertain times it is well for both old and young to devote less time to amusement and more to earnest and prayerful work. And let the young not imagine that they are losing the best part of their life by such a course, for the experience of many will tell them they are losing nothing, but are gaining everything because they are building for themselves a character staunch and true, they are nourishing an intellect that will brighten and expand with all the subsequent years of life, and they are acquiring tastes and habits that will be a lasting benefit to themselves, and the admiration of all who appreciate and value the true refinement of life.

The wasted years of many lives are directly due to the frivolous, useless beginning, to the time when the mind and the heart are fresh and young; and because it is more natural to play than to work during these years, the present enjoyment only is thought of, and the future is left to take care of itself. It is by this carelessness that we give the adversary the chance to plan the future for us, for we all know that the tastes and habits acquired during the first twenty years of our lives are apt to go with us to our graves. Then how careful should we be to lay a sure foundation during these years that will not hinder but will help us in the following years, and it can be positively said to the young that the more time they devote to serious and sensible occupations, the more satisfactory, contented, and happy will be their later years.

This is a time when the young must think and act for themselves. Mother and father can counsel and advise, but can by no means keep them in line with the onward move if they refuse to act individually. Each must save himself. And may God's blessing rest with all, and may his Spirit help and sustain every earnest, faithful soul struggling for salvation.

AGNES E. WHITE-KECK.

PLANO, Ill., April 20.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 7.

Dear Sisters:—Upon opening the Herald I invariably turn first to the Mothers' Home Column to see what new thoughts and ideas are presented for training and care of our little ones. I have been much benefited by hints and advice from the various sisters who contribute to this department, and though I have no advice to offer myself, I wish to write to thank those who have.

I have three precious little souls intrusted to my care, whom I am desirous of raising in the fear and admonition of the Lord. I want to do my entire duty by them. I pray continually for patience, wisdom, judgment, and the Holy Spirit to guide me, that my influence over them may always be good. My eldest child, a boy of five years, has a very difficult disposition to understand and manage (whether owing to prenatal influences or not, I am unable to say). He is very loving, affectionate, and truthful, not an atom of deceit in his organization, very nervous and light spirited, and frets under control like a young broncho. He is very intelligent and fond of home, and so penitent when he has grieved his papa and me, but so full of mischief it just pops out at all the corners in spite of himself, even with the tears of penitence still wet on his face. No fixed rule can be applied to every case, because in each case circumstances are so different, and I can assure you, dear sisters, it takes considerable patience and love to always be just to a child and never punish because you are annoyed and angry, but because the child really and truly deserves it, and you feel quite sure that correction in this case is wiser than talking, or reasoning, and pointing out the fault in a loving spirit. I am not one of the most patient mothers, I fear, and it often comes more handy, when I am very busy, to speak crossly, or even give a little slap, when really it wasn't quite necessary, and when they turn away with little quivering lips and tears in their eyes, I think of what Christ said about "offending one of his little ones," and it grieves me to the heart to think I allowed myself to be so hasty. My little girl, Nellie, is three years old and is so sweet and pretty she wins all hearts. Baby is only ten months old but she can manage her papa as well as any finished coquette ever did her lover.

The season here is very rainy during the winter which lasts about seven or eight months, it seems to me, and the children have to rely on me entirely for companionship, as they are almost constantly indoors. So mamma has to tell stories, play games, and be everything when papa is away; but when he is home, then papa is everything and everybody, and mamma has to play second fiddle, for which she is generally very thankful.

The thought comes to my mind just here how very careful parents ought to be in their habits, manners, and conversations, for they are to their little ones models of excellence. I know Charlie thinks it quite impossible for papa to do wrong and imitates his every gesture, and Nellie is the same about mamma. Charlie thought a great deal of a gentleman living by our house, till one day he observed him smoking a cigar, when he ran in instantly to inform me of the fact, shaking his head and feeling quite badly. I don't allow them to associate with other children any more than I can possibly avoid, and you would be surprised to hear them express their old-fashioned little notions, when we have our daily reading (before bedtime every evening, I read to them and afterwards explain and talk it over). Living entirely with grown people they use the same language as we do. Living here in Seattle we are among the isolated ones, all the comfort and news that we get being contained in the Herald and Autumn Leaves. We belonged to the Salt Lake, Utah, branch before moving here two years ago. My husband, Geo. E. Ward, has been a member of the church for some fifteen years, but I was only baptized in January, 1892, by Bro. Joseph Luff. We used to have such strengthening prayer meetings. I wish we lived where there was a branch. I would like to join the Daughters of Zion, too.

I think they have taken up a noble work. The "Talks to Mothers" are splendid. Helpful thoughts were presented to me that I shall endeavor to use to advantage in the welfare of my children.

The subject of social purity has always been touched on so daintily, hitherto, always handled with such delicately gloved hands, and details were entirely too shocking to be gone into, and there has always been such a vagueness of expression employed, that it was almost left entirely to the imagination to think what meaning was intended to be conveyed to the mind. I do want to bring up my children right. I want them to know that their little bodies are God's temples, to be kept clean and pure, that his Holy Spirit can take up its habitation therein. Boys should be taught that it is just as necessary for them to be virtuous as for their sisters to be. God is no respecter of persons. He is not like the corrupt world. He will not wink at a sin because committed by a boy, and then turn around and condemn it in a girl. They are equal in this sight.

I fear I am making my letter too long, but before closing, wish to request the prayers of the Prayer Union in my behalf, that I may be healed of a bad swelling of the glands of my neck. It is now of four months' duration and is growing worse. My husband and I have made it a subject of prayer, but often where individual effort fails united prayers will succeed. No elders being near I am debarred from the privilege of administration. I would ask their prayers also for my sister, Miss Florence Woolfenden, of the Salt Lake branch, who is afflicted with her eyes. Praying that God will bless us all, and give us strength to perform our life's duties from day to day and that the love of the truth may predominate over every other consideration, I remain,

Dear Sisters:—I want to bear my testimony to the good I have received from the use of the consecrated olive oil. As I do not live where there are any elders, now that la grippe has made its appearance again, I prayed to the Lord to show me what I should do for it if any of us should be taken with it. I dreamed that night that we all were taken down with it and we took the oil inwardly and swabbed our throats with it and took a swab and dipped it in the oil and snuffed it up our nostrils every hour until we were healed. Of course we asked in faith for God's blessing to go with it, for without faith we cannot please God. I thought four other young Saints came to our house with the disease and we treated them the same and they were healed. I use the oil internally and externally for all our aches and pains. About three years ago I was praying to the Lord in great earnestness to know what we should do for ourselves if we should be taken down with some terrible disease such as typhoid fever, diphtheria, and such like, and I was shown in a vision that the consecrated oil was the same to us as the brazen serpent was to the children of Israel in the wilderness, that whosoever depended on it wholly, coupled with the prayer of faith, should be healed. The oil will counteract the disease. Olive oil alone will counteract poison and when consecrated the blessing that comes to it will be great.

Sister Knipschild asks that some one through the Herald may inform her how to make mild drinks of barley as also of other grains. I parch the same as coffee, and grind it and they make a very pleasant drink for breakfast. I like to hear the different ones tell of their experiences in keeping the Word of Wisdom, also in abstaining from tobacco. It strengthens others to try to overcome. We still live in Coin, Page county, Iowa, twelve miles southeast of Shenandoah, and are waiting anxiously for some of our elders to come and open up the latter-day work here. We will help them all we can. Our eldest son, Leroy, the lame one, was chosen assistant post master here and our other son, Clark, to help him. They two attend it all themselves. They are opening a notion store on one side of the post office. We have bought three lots and a house here, so I guess we have come to stay, and would be glad to welcome any of the Saints here. My husband would like to have Bro. R. M. Elvin come here. He thinks he is one of the best preachers he ever heard, but he has heard only a few different ones preach. I love to hear them all preach, especially if the Spirit of the Master is there prompting them what to tell the people. The C. B. and Q. runs through here, also the Wabash. I would not exchange the Herald, Hope, Autumn Leaves, and Ensign for all the rest of the pleasures there are in this world, especially those Tahitian letters of late. How the Spirit burns within our hearts while reading them.

Your sister in the gospel,
JOSEPHINE WOOD.

PIPER CITY, Ill., April 28.

Dear Sister Walker:—I left Lamoni on Friday. I hated to say good-bye, but felt that I must come home. I had enjoyed the conference so much, and spent so many pleasant hours and received so much good, so many helpful and encouraging thoughts, that it was with reluctance that I turned my face homeward. It was a spiritual feast for me, and though, as I tell them, I did not find all perfection, but as I did not go with that expectation, I was not disappointed. I know one thing, it was a glorious time for me, and was something of a school. I trust that the good I received may abide with me and that I may impart of it to others, that my life may be better, and that I may be better able to do good in this great cause. I do want to be a worker in the cause of Christ, for unless we do work we cannot expect to grow and develop into a Christ-like character.

I arrived home Saturday afternoon, and though I had enjoyed the country through which I had been traveling, and the hills of Iowa were beautiful to me, yet when I saw this level country where I have always lived, I thought my home was very beautiful.

There is a great deal of work to be done here; but sometimes when I think how many of the Saints have labored here for years, and prayed, and my dear mother among that number, and then think of the few that have ever obeyed the truth, I sometimes wonder what is the use of working. But even if a few are enabled to see the light, that is worth striving for. If there were a number of young people here it would be so much pleasanter. The young people's meetings were such a help to me while at Lamoni, and it seems lonely to me to come back here where there are but two other young folks that are interested in the work. Pray for me that by my life I may show to the young that there is something better in the gospel of Christ than there is in the world, that I may help to bring them into the fold of Christ. I believe the young need the association of the young, for while I enjoy being with those older in years, and working with them, and indeed always have found great pleasures and profit in the society of those who are older in years, and older in the work, yet I long for the society of young Saints. It seems to me it would be so much easier to live right if we could just have young people's prayer meeting, the Religio, etc. But we will work and labor on and hope to accomplish some good. I also believe that when anyone enters the church, especially the young, they should be given some work to do. If they can go to work in the Sunday school, the Daughters of Zion, the Religio, or in any department of church work they will be less likely to desire the vain things of the world again.

I have been reading the Home Column in last Herald. How full of meaning Bro. Burton's address. I fancied I could again see him standing before that vast congregation and hear the words as he spoke them. God grant that good was done. I know good was done to those already in favor of the work; but I trust that some who did not before realize the need of the work, do now.

Some have asked me what I enjoyed the most while at conference. That is hard for me to decide, as it was all so good. I know I realize as never before the divinity of this latter-day work, and the need of each one being an earnest and faithful worker, and be ready to make some sacrifice for the cause of Christ.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MAY.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer:
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

Thursday, May 24.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Psalms 33: 11, 12; Enos 1: 18, 19; Alma 17: 21.

Thursday, May 31.—The gathering of Israel to their land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Ezekiel 39: 23-25.

RECTOR, Ill., May 12.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a protracted meeting here. The Baptist divine came out to hear and made an attack on what we believe. Of course we had to dispute with him; he challenged me to prove that the laying on of hands was practiced for the reception of the Holy Ghost, and I said, "Will you teach and practice it if I can show it from the Bible?" He replied, "I will." So when I showed it so plainly that all could see, he did not want to take it that way, but said, "I will take Webster." He also said: "I am called of God, and I don't believe baptism is for the remission of sins." I remarked that Peter was called of God, too, and that Bro. Clark or the Apostle Peter was wrong, and that we should take the word of God in place of man's say so. He then told the people that if I had preached the truth, his advice was to them to stay away and not come to hear me preach. I told them that Paul told his son

Timothy (2 Timothy, fourth chapter) that they would turn their ears from the truth and turn them unto fables, and that it was manifested before them.

Thank God, the interest turned in our favor. I baptized two precious souls, and others have given me their names for baptism. Excellent interest here; this is a new place five miles north of El Dorado, Saline county, Illinois. I told the Baptist brethren while in the dispute that I wanted them to see that their pastor kept the contract he had made with me to practice the laying on of hands for confirmation. Many are interested and will obey the gospel as soon as I can get around to them. My prospects are bright for a home in the sweet by and by.

I am in the faith,

F. M. SLOVER.

LEEDS, England, April.

Editors Herald:—This day as I am sitting at home unwell and unable to follow my employment, my mind is drawn to reflections upon our weakness. When the smallest things occur, how little is our faith! But I am glad that I have been made to understand the fundamental principles of the plan of salvation. If my understanding be limited to this only, I would have occasion to be glad to think that I am a Latter Day Saint; and I ought to appreciate that privilege more than I do. I find it easier to live with Saints than with the people of the world, although it is our duty to be with them and try and show them the errors of their ways, and try to bring them in the family and fold of our blessed Redeemer's kingdom. I often feel as an old farmer I once read about. The Lord had blessed him with this earthly welfare and when he got old in years and retired from earthly work, one day a friend called to see him and found him in a deep study. The friend asked him the reason. The reply the old gentleman gave was this: "When I look back to-day, I cannot see anything I have done for the kingdom of Christ; it seems to me that I have been receiving from God all my life, and have never attempted to give anything in return." And I am afraid that many of the so-called Saints may look back and say the same thing, and if the Lord was to come they would be found wanting. We have to sacrifice sleep and rest oftentimes to obey our earthly master; but I find in this part of the Lord's vineyard many of the Saints think it too early to arise and come to their places of worship at 10:30 a. m. on the only day the Lord requires us to serve him.

As for myself, I am longing for that day to come so that I can leave the world and meet with brethren and sisters in the gospel of Christ and pay homage to my Creator and make the time enjoyable with each other. I think as Saints of God and having received the light as we say we have, we certainly ought to let our light shine before people of the world. I am thankful to say we are progressing very favorably, and many are near to the water's edge; but we trust as the seed is sown the Lord will give the increase in due time. All we have to do is to be faithful, and press onward, and continue to sow, and we shall reap by and by. I have sent you a clipping from the Leeds Mercury to show you how the four hundred and sixty clergymen have written to his Grace, the Bishop of England. Is a sifting coming? If so, how ought we as the Saints of God to lift up our heads and rejoice in Israel's God knowing these things must be just prior to our Savior's last coming. May the God who created us give us faith to continue faithful to the end of our journey, so that we may be able to say as Paul did to Timothy, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Your brother,

JOB DALLEY.

SIMEON, Neb., May 6.

Editors Herald:—I would like to tell you that we are still in the faith and trying to hold on to the rod of iron, or do what God says, although isolated from any Saints as yet; but we experience almost every day that God is near us and able and willing to redeem his promises when we are childlike before him. And fasting is a great remedy for the big head; it will keep down heat or cure pride. I am glad because of the last revelation. I pray God the church from head to feet will heed it. It is thinly settled here yet; we live twenty-eight miles southwest of Valentine, county seat of Cherry county, Nebraska, on Trout Lake. This is a sand hill, hay flats, and lake country, and can't be beat for stock raising, fish, or game.

We will be glad to have any of the elders or Saints traveling through west or east to call on us. There are no churches nor meetings here yet. We would stand as good a chance as any of them to get a hearing.

Ever praying for the upbuilding of Zion, and asking the prayers of the Saints that we may endure faithful to the end.

Your brother and sister in Christ,

S. A. ROGERS.

F. D. ROGERS.

FAIRFIELD, Neb., May 8.

Editors Herald:—Since coming into this locality one year ago last March I have been preaching in and around Fairfield with a marked degree of liberty, and with fair congregations, and attentive listeners. I have held an average of three meetings per month. I only wish I was able to spend all my time in the great vineyard of our heavenly Father, for truly the harvest is great but the laborers are few; but thank the Lord he is blessing the laborers of his vineyard when they prove true to the trust he has committed unto them.

I am happy to say that the work of the Lord is fast gaining in this part of God's vineyard. I troubled the waters of the Little Blue on last Sabbath by burying in baptism in its lucid waves twelve precious souls who will add greatly to the progress of the work in this part of Nebraska; and still there are more that are almost if not quite ready for the water, who, I think, will come in soon. I expect to be found honestly and zealously engaged in the Master's cause in this part of the country, for there is a good work to be done here. I feel well in the work of my heavenly Father, and do hope with you to labor for its final and glorious victory.

Your brother,

C. E. BLODGETT.

PLAINVILLE, Mass., May 7.

Editors Herald:—What do the signs of the times mean? is the question that comes to the mind of the Bible student. What will be the immediate result of the Coxe movement, the large strikes, the work of anarchists, secret combinations, etc.? Will it not be the fulfillment of the time spoken of by the prophet of the nineteenth century when every man shall take a sword against his neighbor except those that are of Zion. Truly these are the "perilous times" spoken of by Paul. It speaks to us that we should be faithful to the gospel call and our covenants with God, especially the law of tithing, that we may be entitled to the favor of God.

"Yes! we trust the day is breaking;

Joyful times are near at hand;

God—the mighty God is speaking

By his word in every land;

When he chooses,

Darkness flies at his command.

The work of God is moving in this vicinity and the officers of the Plainville branch are determined that the missionary in charge and others shall not have it to say that local laborers are doing but little when next General Conference rolls round. On April 29, Bro. C. A. Coombs opened a new field of labor adjacent to this branch at Blake's Hill schoolhouse. Yesterday Elder Coombs was wonderfully blessed in presenting the gospel claims to those present. Some of the leading citizens of the town were present and gave very favorable expressions in regard to the meetings and want them continued. Bro. F. O. Coombs rendered valuable and timely assistance with his cornet. Miss Guild, the efficient school teacher, presided at the organ. The meetings at Attleboro have been reopened and quite a number of friends seem to be investigating.

In bonds of love,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

ELMIRA, Kan., May 11.

Editors Herald:—This branch is still alive and holding regular prayer meetings; but no preaching or Sabbath school sessions have yet been held this summer. I have two places where I hold forth; one southeast of Beloit, near Bro. Knapp's, and one in Lincoln county. To the last named Bro. R. W. Davis and I went last Sunday. I had been there twice before, but it stormed so I did not have much of a crowd; but last Sunday we had a good crowd and splendid attention, and I think good can be done there.

Bro. Davis just returned from a trip to visit his folks; left to-day, gone east; expects to go to conference at Blue Rapids. I expect to go. Praying for the spread of truth,

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 7.

Editors Herald:—Arriving at Scranton, Kansas, one week ago last Saturday, I began a series of meetings. Fair interest was manifested at all the services. Yesterday ten persons came forward for baptism. One sister was taken from her bed where she has been confined the most of the winter. She attended the afternoon meeting and enjoyed the first night's rest for months.

Three more came forward last night and we baptized and confirmed them this morning before leaving. Many more are near and will follow. I am en route for the East.

Hastily,

A. H. PARSONS.

TUGHOLLOW, Wis., May 9.

Editors Herald:—I am busy, battling for truth. Bro. Henry Wood and I are preaching every night; there is quite a good interest here; the outlook is good in this part of Wisconsin. I baptized two noble ones into the fold a few days ago, and expect to baptize more soon; so the good work goes on.

I feel better in the work than I ever felt before; the Lord has blessed me wonderfully in presenting the gospel. Brethren, let us do a big work in Wisconsin this year. I can't see how we will meet all the demands for preaching, for there is enough work in this one county to keep four elders at work one year, and then plenty to do. O, may the Lord send more laborers into the vineyard, is my prayer! Speed to the work everywhere.

Your colaborer,

VALLEY JUNCTION, Wisconsin.

DURANGO, Texas, May 12.

Editors Herald:—I am at Durango, in Fall county. I aim to go to Mooreville. Will commence meetings there to-morrow and continue as long as the interest demands it. Aim to commence meeting here on the third Sunday in this month, to continue as long as the interest demands. I have prospect for a debate in Lee county with a Baptist minister, to commence on the first Monday in June, but nothing definite yet, as I haven't heard from him since I sent the propositions and agreement. I will let you hear about it later on.

Yours in bonds,

MAGNOLIA, Minn., May 11.

Editors Herald:—I left my home and loved ones April 25 to continue the warfare against the enemies of truth. I stopped one week at Powersville, Iowa, where I had opened the work and baptized several on my way to General Conference. I was well received by the people, especially by the thinking class, whose minds are opened for investigation. The Methodists closed their sanctum against me and cried "deceiver" until all the thinking class were ashamed of them. Mr. P. H. Powers, a prominent citizen and a large-hearted man, kindly gave me the use of his hall, and there I kept the gospel trumpet sounding until the 4th inst., when I was joined by our worthy brother, J. S. Roth. We labored together over Sunday, enjoying the Spirit of our Master in breaking the bread of life to good congregations of honest souls some of whom will soon obey the gospel of Christ and rejoice in the promises of God.

On Monday the 7th I separated from the Saints and many friends at Powersville, leaving Bro. Roth meting out to them the good things of the kingdom of God. I mounted the cars for Minnesota, arriving at this place on the 9th inst., where I met a large number of warm-hearted souls awaiting my coming.

I began meetings last night in the Methodist church, and had a good crowd of interested souls out to hear. I enjoyed the Spirit sufficiently for the occasion, thank God. I will continue over Sunday and on the next week. Prospects are flattering. Opposition is of the low character; of slander and falsehood. My heart is still in the work and I am glad to report that the way is growing clearer. I am as ever,

Yours in bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS.

AMBER, Iowa, May 9.

Editors Herald:—I wish to give thanks through your columns to some one who in kindness sent me a new Saints' harp. May God bless the giver, for the Master hath said and will say again, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

My mother in my early days gave many things to those who were poorer than herself, believing that she was only lending to the Lord; and I can say from experience that the Lord keeps the only bank that never fails. Desiring God's grace to obtain wisdom and strength to serve him to the end of my days, I remain, Yours in the faith,

DANIEL J. DIERKS.

COLUMBUS, Kan., May 4.

Editors Herald:—In looking through the letter department my soul was filled with joy to see how the elders are blessed with the Spirit of God. Fear not, brethren and sisters, the Lord is with you at all times. Saints, when you are sick or in need go to the Lord in prayer, and he will bless you. It always makes me feel good to see how the children of God are blessed when they are sick and when I read and see how much good the elders are doing, spreading the gospel over the land and bringing honest souls into the fold. I have been raised from my bed of affliction many times by calling for the elders of the church; they anointed me with oil and they laid their hands on my head, and I was restored to health and strength by the Spirit of God. Last winter my father was very ill with the typhoid fever. He lay in his bed thirteen weeks and got so he could not help himself at all, and he could not move unless we helped him. The doctor came to see him and he said it was impossible for him to live, and the neighbors all gave him up and said there was no hopes of him ever getting well; but we put him in the hands of the Lord, and he was raised from his bed of affliction; and I feel to praise the Lord for all of his goodness toward us and for sparing father's life for us.

We are having prayer meeting here; the young Saints are greatly interested. I am doing all the good for the cause I can. I was baptized when I was eight years old; I have never regretted the step; I am now fifteen.

My health is very poor, I therefore ask the prayers of all the Saints in my behalf that I may be restored to health and strength and be able to do the work my Master has before me to do. This is my humble prayer in the name of Jesus. Amen.

Your sister,

CORA RANDALL.

ONSLow, Iowa, May 2.

Editors Herald:—A few weeks ago I took up my Bible and my eyes fell upon these words in the sixth chapter of Genesis, Inspired Translation: "For by the water ye keep the commandment; by the Spirit ye are justified; and by the blood ye are sanctified." These words rang in my ears for days, for they touch upon a point upon which there is a great diversity of opinion: the sanctification of God's people. Some have the idea that we are not sanctified until we die; others that when we are sanctified we cannot commit sin; others that we can, but will not. Now sanctification as a word or subject is treated very sparingly, even by the Saints in general; but should we not investigate every part of God's word thoroughly and try to get a right understanding of it? This word plainly tells us "by the blood ye are sanctified," applied at the time of our entrance into the kingdom. When we are in obedience to the command to be baptized for the remission of sins, we are justified by God's Spirit, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses us from all sin. This agrees with what Paul tells his Corinthian brethren: "And such were some of you; but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God." I think it is well for the Saints to remember that when we are born into the kingdom we are as little children, pure and holy in his sight; and O, how it behooves us to retain our child-like faith in our heavenly Father; and as a child has to learn his alphabet to enable him to succeed in his studies, so we, commencing at the first principles, go on learning, ever learning until we arrive at the stature of men and women in Christ Jesus!

John says: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him. . . . And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure"—1 John 3:2, 3.

In the fourteenth verse he says: "He that loveth not his brother abideth in death." O, dear Saints, how careful we should be in our daily life to carry out this spirit of love; to let no hatred nor any evil thing be harbored in our hearts! Does not every such evil thought or feeling take us farther away from God, who is love? The eyes of the world are upon us. If we do good only to them that do good to us what thank have we; "do not even the publicans the same?" But we are to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works; we are to do good to the unthankful and to them that despitefully use us. Sanctified by the blood of Christ; O Father, help us to keep our sanctification! As I look through my Bible and note the many passages requiring God's Saints to be pure and holy, I am impressed with my own weakness and nothingness before him; but thanks be to God, he has promised to be our helper in every time of need. There is one thought in connection with perfection which I wish to mention: For many years I associated sanctification and perfection together, but now I look at it very differently. God sanctifies us when we enter the kingdom; he sets us apart to do his will. Old things have passed away, behold all things have become new. But perfection is a something that by our own individual efforts we are to strive to attain to. Every good deed, every victory over some weakness of the flesh, all the efforts we make to keep ourselves from being led away by the love of the world and the pride and vanity thereof, bring us so much nearer the end desired; but we shall never be entirely perfect until Christ appears and we be like him.

Yours in the faith,

MRS. R. M. GREEN.

MANCHESTER, Texas, April 30.

Editors Herald:—Bro. T. J. Sheppard has spent two weeks or more in Red River branch, preaching the truth, and has done a good work. He has led eleven precious souls into the watery grave of baptism, and left more investigating. Bro. Sheppard has made many friends to the cause on this trip. We want him to come back about the 1st of July with Bro. Moore, when I think there will be several more additions to the church.

Yours in bonds,

HENRY T. McCLAIN.

MANCHESTER, Texas, April 29.

Editors Herald:—Bro. T. J. Sheppard arrived here on the 8th from Indian Territory and began to break the bread of life. He put the truth before the people in such a plain and convincing way that it reached them and caused them to think and investigate for themselves; and the result was that he preached seventeen discourses and baptized eleven souls into the kingdom. He had an invitation to preach at the Baptist church about three miles from this place, on Friday night, but when they met in the evening they found a notice on the door to not preach in the house. Thinking it was some boys' tricks we paid no attention to the matter, but went in and commenced meetings, but we found there was an armed mob around the house and breathing forth threats in a most startling manner; and when meeting closed and we started home they commenced shooting off their guns. But no one was hurt, and last night we held meeting at Manchester, and there were some threats made in the evening but we paid no attention to them.

Since our chapel was burned last spring we have been holding our meetings in a vacant house, and we have been using the Christian church here since Bro. Sheppard came; but they had an appointment out for eleven o'clock to-day and we gave out an appointment for the same hour at the vacant house, but just after meeting closed last night we looked over towards where the house was and, behold, it was on fire and was burned down; so we are left without a place to meet. So you see that when there is any good to be done the evil one will rage and do all in his power to hinder the truth; but we are told that we must suffer persecution, and as we believe the time is short and the hastening time is at hand, that the power of darkness is on the alert and is getting in his work wherever he can, and we must be up and doing and work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

Bro. Sheppard intends to start home to-morrow and we wish him Godspeed, for he is a valiant soldier and an able defender of the truth. He has made many friends here; the outsiders said that he made everything plain. There were more to be baptized to-day, but it rained all day and there were not many came out. Three were baptized in the rain to-day, and there are more near the kingdom. May God bless those that had the courage to come out of Babylon and obey the gospel.

We are expecting Bro. A. J. Moore in July, also Bro. J. D. Erwin, and we look for a great ingathering at this place if we only live faithful and let our lights shine. May the good work roll on. Yours in faith,

L. R. BAY.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 8.

Editors Herald:—We have not intruded upon your valuable space a great deal with news from "the center stake" of late; and as good news from any part of the church is cheering to those who love "Zion's" weal, I desire to tell the Saints abroad how the Lord is remembering "Zion," and bringing comfort and joy to her children.

After adjournment of conference a number of the brethren and sisters came to Independence. We held regular meetings every night,—attendance large and preaching excellent,—so that those who did not go to conference were able to enjoy a second edition of the session. The Holy Spirit was with the Saints to cheer and bless; a gradual growth was manifest as the Saints came to worship.

On Sunday afternoon at the regular sacramental service, the climax seemed to have been reached when the presiding officer announced that he saw the room filled with the Spirit of revelation and tongues, exhorting the Saints to earnest mental prayer that their bodies might be fitted for the indwelling of God's Holy Spirit, and that those who were to be made partakers of the gifts might have the needed strength to do the will of our heavenly Father. A brother arose and gave the mind of the Lord with reference to the district president, the branch president, and branch priest, which was very comforting to those brethren. A tongue was given, (the interpretation Sr. Belle has,) comforting—especially to Bro. Luff. A sister sang in tongues and the interpretation was a beautiful psalm of praise. No skylark ever sang more sweetly, although the sister was quite aged. By this time every soul was in rapport with the divine Spirit. One of the elders arose and said in substance: "Thus saith the Lord: it is my will that you separate my servant Wallace N. Robinson to the office of an elder, unto which he is now called. I the Lord have watched over him from his birth, and have snatched him from the face of death. [The brother knew nothing about Wallace being in the great Chatsworth wreck.] He shall be mighty in my hands for the work he shall perform for the church. Let him be sent by the branch to the conference and there be ordained." Much more was said. Bro. James Torrance was called at the same time to the office of teacher, and Bro. Arthur Mills promised a call in the near future. Through another brother, Bro. George Harrington, the present priest of the branch, was called to the office of an elder and promised that he would still be called higher because of his faithfulness. The flow of the Spirit continued, the president continuing the meeting one hour beyond closing time, and even then the Saints seemed sorry to leave.

On Monday night at the semi-yearly regular business meeting the Spirit was again manifest to a degree, filling the Saints with joy. The president, Bro. J. A. Robinson, was sustained; Priest George Harrington, Teacher J. A. Kennedy, Deacon John McGuire, Clerk Wallace N. Robinson, Treasurer William Williamson, Assistant Clerk A. L. Newton were all sustained unanimously as branch officers, with not a dissenting voice. This is now the fifth term those brethren are serving. The recommendations of Brethren Wallace and George were sent to conference for ordination; and Brn. Arthur Mills and A. L. Newton were called and ordained to the office of priest. Brn. James Torrance and Geo. Bartholomew were called and ordained to the office of teacher, the Spirit of God being present.

Love and joy filled the hearts of the large assemblage of Saints to see the young men of the church called out and humbly accepting the work of the Lord, standing ready to throw the ardor of their young, well-trained minds into line with those who have borne burdens of church work before. We surely can sing, "Zion prospers, all is well."

INFORMER.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 7.

Editors Herald:—I left home on Saturday for the East and stopped off here over Sunday. I preached morning and evening, and after the prayer meeting I baptized two precious souls, and assisted in confirming them and in blessing two children.

At the close of the evening sermon I bade the Saints farewell with many earnest requests to come again. I will leave here this evening for Philadelphia and Scranton, Pennsylvania.

H. H. ROBINSON.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS TIMED.—It is computed that the death rate of the world is sixty-seven a minute and the birth rate seventy a minute, and this seemingly light percentage of gains is sufficient to give a net increase of population each year of almost 1,200,000 souls.

scriptions discovered and first published by Dr. Augustus Le Plongeon in the year 1886, in his "Sacred Mysteries among the Mayas and the Quichas."

Messrs. Champollion, Le Jeane, and C. J. Bunsuen, as published in their great works. (See "Egypt's Place in Universal History.")

Le Plongeon commenting on the Central American alphabet says:—

The ancient Maya hieratic alphabet discovered by me is as near alike to the ancient hieratic alphabet of the Egyptians as two alphabets can possibly be, forcing upon us the conclusion that the Mayas and the Egyptians either learned the art of writing from the same masters, or that the Egyptians learned it from the Mayas.—See Sacred Mysteries, p. 113.

That is, the Mayas and the Egyptians had in ancient times the same alphabet; and Le Plongeon thinks that both people either learned their letters at the same school, or one people learned them from the other. Now that is just about what the author of the Book of Mormon claims:—

For he [Lehi] having been taught in the language of the Egyptians, therefore he could read these [Egyptian] engravings, and teach them to his children, that thereby they could teach them to their children, and so fulfilling the commandments of God, even down to this present time.—Mosiab 1: 1.

Now, if those alphabets were the same in both countries in ancient times, if the same sign and symbol represented the same sound and thought, as Le Plongeon in his works seems to prove, it is then certain and indisputable evidence that the Book of Mormon theory of Egyptian writing is correct, and that the author, whatever his name may be, knew what he was writing about; the facts are as he states them.

But here we are reminded that neither Landa's alphabet, nor the hieroglyphics on the Copan statue, nor those at Palenque agree in any way whatever with the following characters as copied from the gold plates by Joseph Smith. (See Golden Bible, p. 260):—

TABLET OF THE CROSS FROM COPAN, CENTRAL AMERICA.

The above is the Tablet of the Cross from Copan, Central America. These are the hieroglyphics which are said to be evidence against the Book of Mormon theory.

The hieroglyphics on the annexed plate are also from the Copan statue.

The picture writings on the following page are from the Mexican "Codex Mendoza." (See Lamb's Golden Bible, pp. 260-70.)

Now Elder Lamb introduces the Landa alphabet, Tablet of the Cross, hieroglyphics on the Copan

REFORMED EGYPTIAN CHARACTERS.

statue, and the picture writing of Mexico, and then argues like this:—

We ask the candid reader carefully to examine these characters, and then look back again to page 261. Those are the characters Joseph Smith tells us were universally used in Central America fifteen hundred and two thousand years ago while the ruins, the engraved stones, the chiseled marble, tell us that these were the characters actually used in that locality, and at that time. Look at the two attentively—see if you can discover any likeness whatever between them. A woeful fatality, is it not? that there should not happen to be even one of Mr. Smith's characters that bears a family likeness, or the least particle of resemblance to the characters actually used by the ancient inhabitants of Central America.—Lamb's Golden Bible, p. 265.

Elder Lamb is right; there is quite a difference! But it is a fact that the Landa alphabet turns out to be closely related to the Egyptian alphabet. While we do not know what the Tablet of the Cross or the "hieroglyphics on the Copan statue are, yet they are evidence of an enlightened and religious people. Mr. John T. Short says:—

The magnificent sculptured hieroglyphics which cover the sides and backs of these huge idols no doubt could tell the sealed story of Copan's greatness and the attribute of its many gods, were the keys once discovered. Everything is covered with these significant symbols, differing slightly from those at Palenque; but who will read them? In the court of the temple a solid block of stone six feet square and four feet high, resting on four globular stones, was sketched by Catherwood and pronounced an altar by Stevens. Sixteen figures in profile with turbaned heads, breastplates, and each seated cross-legged on hieroglyphic-like cushions, are sculptured in low relief, four figures being on each side of the block. The top of the altar is covered with thirty-six squares of hieroglyphics.—North American Antiquities, pp. 404-5.

Elder Lamb says:—

These same hieroglyphics have been preserved in other forms—for the ancient Mayas had books, real books, a large number of which were found in Central America upon its occupation by the Spaniards three hundred years ago—but ruthlessly destroyed by the superstitious Catholic priests. An examination of the three that are now known to be preserved, shows the same characters that are found upon the stone tablets, idols, etc., as seen in the cuts—and represent the actual written language of the ancient Mayas—a people who are known to have occupied Central America, and been the sole occupants of a portion of that country at the very time, and covering the whole period, when, according to the Book of Mormon, the Nephites lived and flourished there. Golden Bible, p. 262.

And in this way the elder can furnish any amount of evidence from the ruins and books of Central America, that the "fac-simile" characters copied from the gold plates are not like those on slabs and idols and Maya books which is a "fatal blunder." And of course Joseph Smith was an "impostor," and the Book of Mormon a "fraud;" it is "full of blunders, and mistakes, and contradictions, and human imperfections from beginning to end." (See Golden Bible, pp. 317, 245, 257.)

Now, what are the facts about those numerous characters found in the ruins and in Maya books in Central America? All that Elder Lamb seems to know about them is that they are not like Joseph Smith's characters!

Mr. Short says:—

The magnificent sculptured hieroglyphics which cover the sides and backs of these huge idols no doubt could tell the sealed story of Copan's greatness and the attributes of its many gods, were the keys once discovered.

Dr. Le Plongeon says of Yucatan:—

Anciently, this country, now well nigh depopulated, was thickly peopled by a highly civilized nation, if we are to judge by the great number of large cities whose ruins exist scattered in the midst of the forests throughout the country, and by the stupendous edifices, once upon a time temples of the gods, or palaces of the kings and priests, whose walls are covered with inscriptions, bas-reliefs, and other interesting sculptures that in beauty of design and masterly execution equal those of Egypt and Babylon.—Sacred Mysteries, p. 70.

MEXICAN PICTURE WRITING.

Mormon, one of the authors of the Book of Mormon, says concerning Central America:—

And it came to pass that I, being eleven years old [which would be the year A. D. 321], was carried by my father into the land southward, even to the land Zarahemla [in the northern part of South America]; the whole face of the land having become covered with buildings, and the people were as numerous almost, as it were the sand of the sea.—Book of Mormon 1: 1.

1. The author of the Book of Mormon says that Central America was thickly settled by the Nephites, who are represented as a white and civilized people.

2. Le Plongeon says this country (Yucatan) was "thickly peopled by a highly civilized nation" "whose features vividly recall those of the Assyrians of old and the Afghans of to-day."

3. Those "highly civilized" people of Central America could write and did write, and their writings are yet to be seen at Copan, Palenque, Uxmal, Chichen Itza, and other places.

4. Their inscriptions, bas-reliefs, and other interesting sculptures are equal in beauty of design and masterly execution to those of Egypt and Babylon.

5. So, then, the description of the ancient people of Central America, as given by Le Plongeon agrees with Mormon's description of the Nephites.

Mr. Le Plongeon says:—

After twelve years of incessant labors and great hardships, unaided by any government or scientific society, having to encounter opposition, and surmount countless difficulties placed maliciously in our way by those whose duty it should have been to afford us all protection, robbed of our finds by the Mexican government which has even refused to indemnify us for the money expended in making these discoveries, Mrs. Le Plongeon and myself, after saving from destruction many important documents and relics, have at last found a key that will unlock the door of that chamber of mysteries. Shall it be allowed to remain closed much longer? We have lifted, in part at least, the veil that has hung so long over the history of mankind in America in remote ages. Shall it be allowed to fall again? Will no effort be made by American students, by men of wealth and leisure in the United States, to remove it altogether? (See the closing words in Sacred Mysteries, pp. 152-3.)

Mr. Le Plongeon then, has at last found the key that will unlock the door of the chamber of mysteries and lift the veil that has hung so long over the history of mankind in America in remote ages:—

I have made up my mind [says Le Plongeon] to present to American readers some of the historical facts that have been brought to light by deciphering the bas-reliefs and mural inscriptions, by means of the ancient hieratic Maya alphabet discovered by me. I offer them in this small volume that I take pleasure in dedicating to Mr. Pierre Lorillard, as the most worthy of it among Americans, for his generous help to students of American archaeology.—Preface to Sacred Mysteries, pp. 11, 12.

By this we learn what I have before stated; viz., that Le Plongeon was the discoverer of the "Maya alphabet;" and further, that it is by means of the "Maya alphabet" that he has deciphered "the bas-reliefs and mural inscriptions," and thus unlocked the door and lifted the veil from the face of prehistoric man in America.

Elder Lamb in his preface to the "Golden Bible" acknowledges his great obligations to his many friends "for valuable criticisms and suggestions." "To Dr. Brisbin, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Augustus Le Plongeon, of Brooklyn, two of the most accomplished antiquarians now living, for valuable suggestions in their special lines of study." (See p. 14.)

So we see the elder has the utmost confidence in Mr. Le Plongeon; he is in his special line of study, one "of the most accomplished antiquarians now living."

Now what does Le Plongeon say with reference to the hieroglyphics of Central America? Is he on Elder Lamb's side of this controversy, or is he vindicating the claim made by the author of the Book of Mormon? The question stands like this:—

1. The Book of Mormon says that its authors understood and wrote in Egyptian.

2. That the Egyptian art of writing with them had undergone some changes.

3. Elder Lamb says that is not so; that the Egyptian theory is "fatal" to the whole thing, and that "the entire civilization of the Book of Mormon, its whole record from beginning to end is flatly contradicted by the civilization of Central America."

4. The elder gives us to understand that he has consulted with quite a number of Reverends, D. D's., and "two of the greatest antiquarians now living;" and that those persons are responsible for a great part of what he says.

5. It is one of the elder's witnesses who declares that he has discovered the alphabet of the ancient people of Central America.

6. That witness declares that this alphabet to him, is the key to unlock the prehistoric past of Central America.

7. Le Plongeon says this alphabet is the ancient Maya hieratic alphabet of Yucatan.

8. And that this ancient Yucatan alphabet is as near like the ancient Egyptian hieratic alphabet "as two alphabets can possibly be."

9. Thus one "of the greatest antiquarians now living" "flatly contradicts" Elder Lamb.

10. For it is Mr. Le Plongeon, remember, and not Elder Lamb that has deciphered the inscriptions and bas-reliefs of Central America.

11. And proven the Book of Mormon theory of Egyptian writing to be true!

Le Plongeon says:—

The ornaments that cover these walls [the Uxmal] are remarkable in more than one sense. They are not only inscriptions in the Maya language, written with and having the same meaning and value as those carved on the temples of Egypt, but among them are symbols known to have belonged to the ancient sacred mysteries of the Egyptians and to modern free masonry.—Sacred Mysteries p. 40.

Now, if the "inscriptions" in the "Maya language" at Uxmal "are written in characters identical with and having the same meaning and value as those carved on the temples of Egypt," does that fact not prove very fatal to the statements of Elder Lamb's "Golden Bible?"

Will Elder Lamb now try to impeach the testimony of that alphabet? or does he now want to cross-examine and impeach his friend and main witness, Le Plongeon?

Because the characters at Copan, Palenque, Uxmal, and other places are not like Joseph Smith's characters he turns to us and asks, "Do you think they have changed during the ages, since they were chiseled there?" Joseph Smith's characters may prove "to be all a hoax," but Elder Lamb's are "real characters" and just "like those carved on the temples of Egypt;" so that Elder Lamb's characters prove to be the very kind that the author of the Book of Mormon names. But why is it that there is no family likeness between "Joseph Smith's characters," and those at Copan, Palenque, and Uxmal?

The Egyptians appear to have had three alphabets. (See the hieratic alphabet in Bunsen's "Egypt's place in Universal History.") The same appears in this article. Compare that with the Egyptian alphabet as published in Atlantis, p. 219, and then again with the Egyptian alphabet as published by Rawlinson in "Ancient Egypt," plate 6, volume 1. Besides these alphabetical systems they had three other systems that were not alphabetical; viz., hieroglyphics, hieratic, and demotic:—

Mr. Rawlinson says there is not much difference between the hieratic and demotic. . . . It [the hieratic] preserved the hieroglyphic forms to a certain extent. These are nearly lost in the demotic, which appears to have been introduced about the seventh century B. C., and which rapidly superseded the hieratic, being simpler, and consequently easier to write.—Ancient Egypt, vol. 1, p. 58.

The hieroglyphics were characters representing language pictorially; that is, they are drawings of sun, moon, stars, human body, beasts, fishes, reptiles, geometrical figures, and other visible objects.—Beginnings of Civilization, p. 39.

The Egyptian demotic were "cursive forms" "which nearly lost sight of the natural objects in the hieroglyphics," such as pictures, fishes, birds, and reptiles. These systems were ideographical, or the signs expressed thoughts or the sound of syllables, and "not of letters, as is the case with our alphabets."

Prof. Hutson says:—

The hieroglyphic is that [system] of almost all monuments, and is also found occasionally in manuscripts. The hieratic and demotic occur with extreme rarity upon monuments, but are employed far more commonly than the hieroglyphic in papyrus [Egyptian paper] rolls or books of the Egyptians. The de-motif is suited for rapid writing with the pen, but in no way suited for carving upon stone, and manifestly not suited for it.

From the above I understand: first, That the ancient Egyptians had three distinct systems of writing outside of their alphabetical systems; second, that the hieroglyphic, or the pictorial system, was that of "almost all monuments;" and third, the demotic, occurring on monuments "with extreme rarity." This proves, then, that the Egyptians had a purpose suited to each system of writing, and that the natural object system of pictures, birds, fishes, and reptiles, was the one for "slabs," "idols," and columns;" and that the system of "cursive forms," or demotic, was not the one for monuments.

Now, if the reader will turn back and look at the characters that appear in this article again, it will be seen from what I have said that the demotic holds about the same relationship to the natural object system of Egypt that Mr. Smith's characters of geometrical "figures" "or cursive forms" do to the hieroglyphics of Central America. That proves, then, that the objection urged by Elder Lamb against Mr. Smith's characters in this particular is not well taken; for Mr. Smith's characters, like the demotic characters, evidently belong not to the pictorial class of natural objects, or monumental class, but to that class of Egyptian writings "which are only found on monuments with extreme rarity," and are "in no way suited," according to Egyptian art, for carving upon stone. And manifestly the Nephites had the same good reasons that the Egyptians had for not carving them on "slabs" and "idols," they not being suited for it. We need not be alarmed or look, then, for Moroni's "reformed Egyptian" of "figure's," or "cursive forms" on monuments; for it, like the Egyptian demotic system to which it seems related, is not a monumental system, and that very fact removes Lamb's objection.

NEW CURE FOR NERVOUS INVALIDS.

Instead of sending a nervous patient off to Europe to travel, or down to Old Point Comfort to meet as many people as she would in New York, a doctor nowadays packs off his invalid to the near-by country, and bids her go to bed and stay there for a week or a fortnight. A warm bath, made soothing by the addition of bran, and taken every night, is part of the regimen; a rubbing down in the morning after a cold sponge, very light but nourishing diet, and massage when it can be had, are the other features of the "cure." The doctor who prescribes it usually accepts a large fee for his advice, but any rundown and nervous woman may safely try it on her own authority. It is not quite like experimenting with dangerous drugs. She will come back from that prolonged rest a vigorous and rejuvenated being, and afterwards the periodic day of rest will help to keep her so.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in the Rocky Mountain mission; Greeting. Dear Saints:—Once more we have been sustained as a coworker in this field with you for the coming year; and while our mission force is not so strong as last year, with a united effort we hope to accomplish some good and we believe we shall have your united cooperation in the great work.

Bro. H. O. Smith will have the oversight of the work in Idaho while Bro. H. N. Hansen will look after the work in Utah, as before. Bro. Gomer Reese will labor as his circumstances will permit in Montana and direct the interests of the work as well as he may be permitted to do. Bro. A. J. Layland will labor in Idaho and Wyoming as his circumstances will permit. I ask for these brethren the hearty support of the Saints in their different fields. Later on in the season we shall expect Bro. J. S. Lee, who will let the Saints hear from him in due time.

The Bishop has authorized me to act as his agent to collect tithes and offerings, and I appeal to the Saints to aid us all they possibly can. We must have means to supply food and clothing for the minister and his family, so that peace may abide with those who make the sacrifice to minister the word and their dependents, while the generous donors shall be blessed of the Lord and wear the crown for faithful labor done in that great and glorious day. I know all have been affected by the financial panic that has come upon the people and that money is scarce, but we only ask you to do what you can. If all will help a little you will greatly aid the work. I feel sure you will all be willing to sacrifice of your bounties for the spread of the gospel. I will receipt for all monies sent to me either to Box 1123, Salt Lake City, or Pleasant Grove, Utah. May the Lord abundantly bless you all with the good things of this world and everlasting life in the world to come.

Your brother in Christ,
R. J. ANTHONY.

To the Saints of Southern Illinois; greeting:—The conference year of 1893 has passed with all its cares, and now we have entered upon the year 1894; and while we know not what awaits us, we do know in whom we trust, the God of our fathers, who, Peter declared, is no respecter of persons, but he that worketh righteousness is accepted with him. Hence let us go forward unto victory. As the harvest is great and the laborers are few, may we all feel that mutual interest that shall inspire us to assist with our means in tithes and offerings, as well as our talents in preaching, that when God shall gather his Saints who have made a covenant with him by sacrifice we of this mission may be among that happy number.

Whereas in the providence of God and the wisdom of the brethren it has been thought best that I should take the oversight of Southern Illinois, I therefore take this opportunity of informing you that I am again in my field of labor and for the past week have been holding forth nightly in the Helemn schoolhouse, and one Mr. Powell, who is recognized among the substantial and influential farmers, has given his name for baptism, and others are near the kingdom. And while I still remember the promise of the Spirit at our reunion last fall, that a brighter day had dawned upon this mission, I for one feel to go forth in full confidence that if we are humble and faithful, having charity for all, and confiding in the law of God, that ere this year shall have closed we shall see that our efforts are not in vain and that the harvest will far exceed that of the past year. And to this end let us fast and pray continuously.

For the lack of finances our help from the General Conference is limited to Brn. I. A. Morris, F. M. Slover, and your humble servant, therefore I trust that all the local ministry will see and fully feel the great need of doing all they can to help us to carry forward the work, that new fields may be opened. I hope so far as practicable that all those who are in charge of branches will not only look after the flock over whom the Holy Ghost has made them overseers, but will get out in the regions round about and make every legitimate effort to spread the glad tidings, for it must be apparent to all that we are nearing the end; and while the world on every hand is in commotion, and men's hearts failing them for fear of that which is coming, let us lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. I hope that I shall have the cooperation of all and that you may keep me informed as to the needs of the work by writing me, and I shall endeavor to respond to the best of my ability. My permanent address, until further notice, will be Xenia, Illinois, from which my mail will be forwarded.

Remember that our conference will convene on the first Saturday and Sunday in June at the Parrish church, and that Friday before has been appointed for the Sunday school work. I trust that all who are engaged in Sunday school work will see to it that the several schools are properly represented on that day. Come one, come all, and let us have a good time together. Come praying, and God will bless.

I remain, as ever your collaborer in Christ,
EMSLEY CURTIS.
ORCHARDVILLE, Illinois, May 11.

To the scattered Saints in Colorado; greeting:—Whereas the General Conference has appointed me to labor in this State, I shall be very glad to hear from any of the Saints in any part of Colorado where there is a prospect for getting places to preach the gospel and making new openings, as we desire to see the work spread. I hope the Saints will try and secure places to hold services in, and then let me know where it is and how to come or how to get there, and then I will try and answer the calls.

My permanent address will be Hutchinson, Colorado. All letters addressed to me there will be forwarded to me in due time. I hope and trust that every Saint will be up and doing this conference year. Let each one try and convert one soul to the faith of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, so that we can double our numbers this year in the State of Colorado. I hope the Saints will live godly lives in Christ Jesus and set that example that will be worthy of imitation by all they are surrounded with, and let the people have it to say that surely these people have been with God and have been taught of Christ and have learned the more excellent way.

Seeing the hastening time is upon us it stands us in hand to be up and doing and working while the day lasts, for the night will soon come when no man will be able to work. So may God help all to work while it is day, so that we may all be ready when the Master shall come, for we know not when he cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning. So we must be on the watchtower lest coming suddenly he finds us sleeping. I hope that we shall be found among the wise virgins that had oil in their lamps, and not as the foolish.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
JAMES KEMP.

To the officers and members of the Pottawattamie district; Greeting. Beloved in the Lord:—Finding that I am again appointed to the charge of your district, I ask for the hearty and constant cooperation of you all that we may be enabled to make a truthful report of a good work during the current year.

Consecrate your tenth to the Lord through the Bishop's agent that those who sit in darkness may see the light.

Spread the printed word among your neighbors.

Hold up the hands of the ministry, local and traveling, by faithful lives and prompt attendance at the means of grace.

Furnish yourselves with the Herald, which is the only authorized church organ, published by the Reorganized Church. Don't be afraid to put it into the hands of your friends and neighbors.

Look after the interest of the Sabbath school in your several localities.

And, be in attendance at our next quarterly conference on the 26th and 27th of this month, May, at Council Bluffs. Let every branch send in its report in time to be read the morning of the first day. Branch presidents see that this is done; and let every officer be on hand to work for the onward progress of the kingdom of God. Come on brethren and sisters; there is work for all.

CHARLES DERRY.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Chatham district will hold its conference at Wallaceburg, Kent county, Ontario, June 16 and 17, 1894, commencing Saturday at ten o'clock a. m., instead of the 9th and 10th as decided at last conference, for the reason Bro. W. W. Blair will be able to attend. Parties coming from or by way of Port Huron, Michigan, or Sarnia, on Erie and Huron railroad, trains leave Sarnia at 7:30 a. m., and 5:05 p. m. (fast time), arriving at Wallaceburg 9:20 a. m., and 6:25 p. m. Also leaving Chatham, Canadian Pacific railroad station at 9:10 a. m., and 5:50 p. m., and arriving at Wallaceburg 10:15 a. m. and 6:50 p. m. Also leaving Grand Trunk railroad junction at 9:15 a. m. and 5:47 p. m. The Saints of Wallaceburg have hired the town hall for three days, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, for the sum of ten dollars. An invitation is extended to all or as many of the Saints and friends to attend as can make it convenient. All communications intended for conference, address to Box 111, Blenheim, Ontario, until June 11; after that date, to Wallaceburg, care of R. J. Smith, as he is president of the branch.

GEORGE GREEN, Pres.,
SAMUEL BROWN, Clerk.

The Decatur district conference will convene on Saturday and Sunday June 16 and 17 at ten a. m., at Allendale, Missouri. Those going by way of Grant City, Missouri, should notify Bro. E. Keeler, at Grant City, a week before conference, so that arrangements may be made for teams to take them to Allendale, which is eight miles east of Grant City. We expect some of our leading ministry will be present. Come to have a good time, and we will have it.

Presidents of branches will see that their reports are sent to E. L. Page or William Anderson, at Lamoni, Iowa, no later than June 10. We can generally tell the kind of a branch it is by the promptness of its officers.

The ministry that are doing ministerial work in this district are earnestly requested to report either in person or by letter. All should prepare written reports. Brethren, shall we move up with the progress the work is making, or shall we lag back and keep in the old ruts that have hindered its advancement in the past by being a rule or law to ourselves? The demands for laborers in this district are on the increase.

Let all that cannot attend conference report what they can and will do. With the unity that exists in the church to-day our opportunities were never so grand.

WILLIAM ANDERSON,
President of District.

The Eastern Michigan district conference will convene June 9, 10, and 11, 1894, at Bay Port, Michigan. We expect several good speakers in attendance, and among the rest, Sam Bettis, the famous temperance lecturer of Michigan is expected to be present, and will deliver a lecture on the temperance question sometime during the conference. Everbody come! Branch clerks, be sure and have your branch reports filled out and send them to J. A. Grant, Bay Port, on or before June 8, 1894. All officers from the deacon up are expected to report their labors to this conference in writing. Teachers and deacons will report just how many prayer, sacrament, and preaching meetings have been held in their branches since last report. The conference will last three days. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. Saints, don't forget to bring your big baskets of loaves and fishes.

R. E. GRANT, Pres.

The conference of the Nodaway district will be held at Sweet Home, Missouri, June 16 and 17, 1894. At the last conference, in February, the tent committee was authorized to take subscriptions and collect. There is about sixty-five dollars subscribed, and we need about twenty dollars more for a 26x42, 6 feet wall. We urge the committee to make renewed efforts, and the Saints to respond to their call for this amount. The conference also requested that the Bishop's agent be present at the conference. It is expected that Bro. G. H. Hilliard will be present; also Bro. Henry Kemp and J. R. Evans.

M. P. MADISON, Pres.

The Far West conference will convene with the Stewartville branch June 14, 1894. The first day will be devoted to the business of the Sunday school work of the district. It is hoped that all the schools throughout the district will be fully represented. The Stewartville school will be fully alive to the comfort of all delegates, with a full programme for the entertainment of the convention.

We also urge a full delegation from all branches. Important business will be before the conference for adjustment, among which will be the place and date of holding the Northern Missouri and Southern Iowa reunion. This is an important matter and should be located with reference to the accommodation of the Nodaway and Northeastern Missouri districts, who have kindly consented to meet with us, assisting in making the reunion a success. The reunion committee will be called together during the conference session, hence the necessity of all being present. Bro. Joseph Luff, missionary in charge, has kindly consented to be with us during the conference, for the purpose of effecting the ordination of T. T. Hinderks to the office of high priest, and to otherwise instruct the conference. Come up, brethren, with your hearts full of love. Let us fully organize for the battle of the coming year, and that the good Spirit may be with us to the gathering in of the greatest harvest, shall be our prayer.

T. W. CHATBURN, Pres.,
C. P. FAUL, Sec.

Conference of the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin district will convene at DeKalb, Illinois, Saturday, June 23, 1894, at ten a. m. Presidents of branches are requested to see that reports of their respective branches are promptly forwarded, also that their branches are properly represented according to rules of representation adopted at our last conference, copies of which have been forwarded to the several branches in the district. If any have failed to receive a copy they will be supplied by dropping us a card to that effect. Let there be as full an attendance as possible. Elder A. H. Smith hopes to be present.

F. G. PITT, Pres.
No. 897 North Halsted street, Chicago, Illinois.

Conference of the Southern Missouri district will convene with the Vera Cruz branch, Saturday, June 2, 1894, at ten a. m. Brethren, if you cannot be present, please send reports of your labors to George Edwards, in care of Nathaniel Bishop, Vera Cruz, Douglass county, Missouri. Those that expect to be present, bring the Spirit of God with you, so we can have a good time. We send an invitation to all the missionaries, local officers, and members. We would also like to see each branch represented by delegation as business of importance will be transacted.

GEORGE EDWARDS, Clerk.

The Western Wisconsin district conference will convene at North Freedom, Sauk county, Wisconsin, June 16 and 17, 1894. We hope to see a large turn-out of the Saints, especially the ministry. Come prepared for a big work.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Chicago is organizing a Coxe army on a new plan. Only a part of it will go to Washington; two-thirds of the force will remain in Chicago as a reserve, to assist the marching contingent as well as to make demands on the city and State governments. It is designed to make permanent the commonwealth movement and continue aggressive measures and agitation before city, State, and National legislatures until the question of the unemployed is settled—until employment on roads, public works, or elsewhere is given the laborer. The army is said to be composed of skillful mechanics, and well officered. It is to be divided into seven wings, composed of as many nationalities, one of which is 800 strong. The Chicago enrollment alone is expected to reach 10,000 in number. A national organization will follow.

The new torpedo boat Ericsson—the first war vessel ever constructed on inland waters, and the first real torpedo boat ever built by the government—was launched with much ceremony at Dubuque, Iowa, May 12.

LONDON, May 12.—The scare about India started last Saturday by the Spectator has made no great progress. The majority of the Indian authorities disbelieve, or at any rate deny, there is cause for serious alarm. The Spectator theory that the smearing of the mango trees means conspiracy, mutiny, armed revolt, is not generally accepted. People do not profess to know precisely what it is, but conjecture that the cause of it is to be sought in religion or superstition, and not in politics. On the other hand, the Spectator is one of the very highest authorities in this country on India.

The long standing friction between the Vatican and the Quirinal is about to assume an acute phase. A letter was shown a correspondent last week from one of the best-informed and coolest-headed men in Papal circles at Rome, saying that it had been decided to serve on King Humbert a solemn notice that unless exequaturs are granted forthwith to bishops, some thirty sees, the bishops of some of which have been kept out for years, while the Italian treasury absorbs their revenues, will be put under the ban of major excommunication.

A number of Russian anti-Jewish outrages have occurred of late. The Russian censorship is keeping the press silent about these occurrences, and correspondents are able to smuggle out only scraps of hearsay news. But there appears to have been a series of savage popular raids upon the Jews in a number of southern towns at Easter time. That at Ekaterinoslav was, as usual, the bloodiest. Troops were called out and many people are said to have been killed on both sides, though no figures are given. A fresh Jewish exodus on a larger scale than ever is reported from Odessa, where 2,200 left last week, 800 for Argentina direct, the rest for England, which, of course, is a euphemism for America.

NEW YORK, May 13.—Dr. Talmage's tabernacle, the Hotel Regent, and adjoining property, valued at $2,000,000 were destroyed by fire to-day, supposed to be of incendiary origin.

An international meeting in the interest of university extension work will be held in London, England, June 22 and 23. Leading college professors of the United States, Great Britain, Australia, Canada, France, Holland, and other continental countries will gather in the interest of this department of popular education.

Government forces gained a victory over rebels in San Salvador, May 12, after a desperate and bloody battle.

John R. Bartlett, chairman of the Reorganized Committee of the Nicaragua Canal Company states that the canal will be built and controlled by American enterprise.

The railroad tunnel through the Palisades opposite New York City, in New Jersey, has been completed at a cost of $3,000,000.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 14.—Gov. Flower signed the compulsory education bill to-day. This provides that all children between the ages of 8 and 12 shall attend either public or private schools, those between 12 and 14 must attend one half of the school year, and all between 14 and 16 must attend school when not lawfully and regularly employed. Truant schools are to be provided for truants and a superintendent to see that the law is enforced. The Governor also approved the law providing that when cattle affected with tuberculosis are killed the Controller shall appraise the value.

Commonweal items.—General Randall's commonweal army was well cared for by Populists at Elkhart, Indiana, May 13. General Kelley's army was fed at Oskaloosa, Iowa, the same date. Morrison's division was disbanded at Lawrenceville, Illinois, the leader deserting with all its funds. Two hundred and fifty Coxeyites were denied the privilege of encamping at St. Paul, Minnesota. A United States Marshal and posse at Cokeville, Oregon, will endeavor to arrest the Oregon contingent that took possession of a Union Pacific train at Soda Springs, Idaho, May 12.

A small band of industrials took possession of a Union Pacific engine and six cars at Montpellier, Idaho, May 13, and proceeded east.

HELENA, Mont., May 14.—The United States District Court to-day disposed of the 350 Coxeyites who stole a Northern Pacific train at Butte, April 24. Those taking leading parts were sent to jail for various terms, the rank and file being brought into court and dismissed on promise to not again engage in such proceedings.

Three hundred commonwealers started from Omaha to Washington on the 14th inst. Various organizations at numerous points are en route to the national capital.

Coxey's pioneer organization has left Washington and gone into camp at Bladensburg, near by. General Coxey has been denied a new trial at Washington, D. C., and must accept his sentence.

OTTUMWA, Iowa, May 16.—An engagement occurred this morning between Kelley's commonwealers and citizens of Eldon fourteen miles south of this city. Some were injured and some of Kelley's force arrested but were released on condition that they proceed on their journey.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 16.—The northwestern part of the State was visited last night by the worst storm that has been experienced for many years, and as a result several million dollars' worth of property has been destroyed and all the railroads running through that section have been blocked.

According to dispatches received at the Wisconsin Central offices and by the other railroads the storm broke out about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The downpour of rain was terrific. A regular cloudburst seemed to extend over the region between Chippewa Falls and St. Paul. Unlike the usual so-called cloudburst, however, the storm did not pass away quickly, but the fall of rain continued steadily until after midnight. The rivers and streams were unable to carry off the torrents of water and the entire country was flooded. The extent of the damage caused is not known exactly as many of the wires in that part of the country are down and information is meager, being received from contiguous points bordering on the storm area. All through the storm stricken section bridges, railroad tracks, dams, saw mills, barns, lumber yards, and in fact whole villages have been washed away. So far the reports show only one life was lost in the storm and that was a Mrs. Brennan who lived near New Richmond. She was struck by lightning. From the reports received by the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul railroad to-night it is estimated that the loss occasioned by the storm in the country from Chippewa Falls to St. Paul will easily amount to $3,000,000.

The Wisconsin Central tracks from Stanley to Chippewa Falls, a distance of thirty-five miles, are completely washed away. The damage done to property in the vicinity of Chippewa Falls is heavy. Five bridges were swept away and 6,000,000 feet of logs were carried away. The gas works were submerged and the town completely flooded at Little Falls. The Flambeau dam was carried away at Black River Falls. The west wing of the big dam was blown up in order to save the rest of the structure. Throughout the entire northwestern part of the State a number of small bridges and dams have been swept away. The damage to growing crops cannot be estimated.

Chippewa Falls, and Hudson, Wisconsin; St. Cloud, Stillwater, and other points in Minnesota; and South Dakota points report similar damage by the storm. It is said to have been the worst experience in thirty years.

CLEVELAND, O., May 16.—The joint committee of the miners and operators, after an all afternoon session, adjourned to-night, being unable to agree on a basis of settlement, and will so report to-morrow to the convention. The demand of the miners was for a restoration of the old rate, while the operators offered a 65 cents rate for Pennsylvania and a 56 cents rate for Ohio. This the miners refused. After Chairman Zerbe called the convention to order this morning resolutions were read from the State Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce of this city urging the delegates to the convention, in the interests of the country at large, to act harmoniously. The wage question will be thrown back on the general convention to-morrow morning.

Many coke producing plants in Pennsylvania are shut down.

The backbone of the coal miners' strike in Alabama seems to be broken.

Numerous manufacturing plants in various portions of the country have shut down because of lack of fuel.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—Surgeon Fairfax Irwin of the Marine Hospital service has sent the following cablegram to Surgeon-General Wyman, dated Berlin, May 12: Cholera in Kovno, Russia; twenty-one cases, twelve deaths in the last two weeks. Russian frontier dangerous.

Within the last six weeks upwards of eighty cases of cholera and more than fifty deaths have been reported to the bureau from the Russian frontier, a considerable number for so early in the season. The office has two surgeons in Europe closely watching the progress of the disease.

ODESSA, May 15.—It is officially declared that cholera exists in seven governments in the South of Russia.

BERLIN, May 15.—The Frankfort Zeitung has a dispatch from Sydney, N. S. W., reporting that severe earthquakes occurred in the vicinity of Mioko and New Pomerania, March 3 and 4. Almost all of the houses of the missionaries and traders were destroyed and the inhabitants were in a state of panic many days, fearing a repetition of the shocks.

VIENNA, May 15.—News from Belgrade indicates that a popular rising is feared in Servia. Great excitement prevails among the people, who are indignant at the arbitrary and oppressive acts of the government in prohibiting meetings which it was proposed to hold to protest against the reinstatement in power of ex-King Milan. The government in giving notice that such meetings should not be allowed declared that troops would be used to prevent them. The Radicals, however, declare their intention to hold meetings Sunday, and conflicts are then expected.

TRIPOLI, May 15.—A battle between the Tuaregs and the Tibboos has taken place near Kawar, Central Soudan. The Tibboos lost, seventy men killed and a large number of their force was wounded. The Tuaregs then entered Kawar, capturing 500 camels and pillaging the town.

LISBON, May 15.—The Brazilian Charge d'Affaires has been ordered to go to Paris as soon as the legation is closed, in accordance with orders from Rio Janeiro to sever diplomatic relations between Brazil and Portugal. The documents relating to the rupture will be gazetted to-morrow and will declare the cause of the trouble was the fact that Admiral da Gama and other insurgent officers were accorded an asylum on board Portuguese war vessels in Brazilian waters. Negotiations on this subject began March 14.

BOSTON, Mass., May 15.—Ten acres of a populous district of the city were swept by fire to-day, destroying property valued at $300,000 and rendering 6,000 people homeless. Scores of people were compelled to jump from burning buildings. Loss of life is feared; many were injured. It is estimated that one hundred buildings have been burned.

LONDON, May 16.—Dispatches from Rio de Janeiro say that the Brazilian Government forces under command of Gens. Juca and Tigro have been defeated in a battle with insurgents near Iguazu on the river of that name which divides the States of Sao Paulo and Rio Grande do Sul. The federals had 140 men killed.

Lisbon reports say that Portuguese residents in Rio Janeiro, of whom there are large numbers, are incensed by the severing of diplomatic relations between Brazil and Portugal.

BERLIN, May 16.—An international convention of European coal miners opened its sessions here to-day.

KUNKLE, O., May 17.—A cyclone passed a quarter of a mile west of here at 4:30 this afternoon, killing five persons, fatally injuring two others, and slightly wounding several more.

The scene of the cyclone is a hard one to describe. Houses, barns, fences, trees, and obstructions of all kinds in the path of the storm have been carried away and nothing left to mark the spot where they stood except huge holes in the ground. The section devastated is about one quarter of a mile wide and six miles in length, the great funnel-shaped cloud traveling in an irregular southeasterly course. The greatest damage was done about a mile from where it rose and passed on east.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—A wind and rainstorm with hail passed over this city at eight o'clock to-night. It blew down a few trees without serious damage to the city. Great damage is reported from the section southwest of Indianapolis. At Patriot, in Switzerland county, hailstones as big as snowballs shivered trees and pounded the wheat into the earth. Six inches of ice fell in places.

CLEVELAND, O., May 17.—The worst hailstorm that has visited this city in years raged here for nearly an hour this afternoon. The storm was accompanied by heavy rain and thunder and lightning. Many of the hail stones were as large as hen's eggs, and were driven by a brisk south wind. Thousands of windows all over the city were broken, greenhouses were wrecked, and several runaways resulted from horses trying to escape the bombardment of ice. The damage will amount to several thousands of dollars.

Decatur, Naperville, and Belvidere, Illinois, report like damage by the same storm.

The severity of the late storm in Minnesota and Dakota becomes more apparent from later reports.

GALESBURG, Ill., May 17.—Prof. Larkin, at Knox College observatory, after watching all day the solar cyclone, says its dimensions exceed those of any storm he has seen on the sun during his career as an astronomer. It is now at its full height. Its length is 86,000 miles and the width varies from 22,000 to 43,000 miles. The whole mass has a twisting, rotary motion. There are two storm centers. The professor attributes the unusual heat now being experienced to this solar storm.

ALPENA, Mich., May 17.—A tidal wave varying from eighteen inches to three feet in height came up from Lake Huron this morning. It had disappeared in about twenty minutes from the time it was first noticed and is supposed to be due to heavy storms in midlake.

SONORA, Cal., May 17.—The snow, rain, and windstorm that prevailed in the Sierra Nevada foothills during Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday was fatal to sheep. Up to this date some 40,000 sheep have entered this country en route for the mountain ranges, and as all of them were caught in the storm it is a low estimate to say that one third of them have perished.

CLEVELAND, O., May 17.—The conference of coal miners and operators came to an end to-day, nothing having been accomplished. All offers of compromise were rejected and the miners declared their belief that any agreement that might be reached would avail nothing, as there were so many operators who refused to join in the conference and would not be bound by its action.

Large operators are expected to make an effort to break the strike, but the miners' representatives declare they will fight it out.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 17.—A coal famine here is practically a reality. Many of the railroad dealers have suspended business entirely. Work at Aldred & Bender's red lead works in Sharpsburg was suspended Tuesday. This is the fourth plant to shut down. All mills in and out of the city are preparing to shut down. At the waterworks crude oil is burned. Gas is as scarce as coal and cannot be got for boilers.

Chicago and Milwaukee are enforcing compulsory vaccination of all residents.

SAN SALVADOR, May 17.—A large party is organizing here and in Guatemala and Honduras to agitate in favor of annexation to Mexico. Another party in Honduras and Nicaragua prefers a British protectorate. Many families are emigrating. A high military officer says President Ezeta is deceiving the outside world, that he has not won any brilliant victories, and that the losses of the government troops are larger than announced. If there is fair play in the approaching elections the Ezeta family will be driven from power.

LONDON, May 17.—A dispatch to the Standard from Odessa says a severe earthquake was felt yesterday at Kars and other places in the Caucasus.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church began its session at Saratoga, New York, May 17.

DENVER, Colo., May 17.—Another industrial army is to be organized in Denver, with which will be consolidated the California commonwealers. Gen. Hegwer of the home reserve says 300 men have already signed an agreement to move to Washington. Barracks have been secured for them. An effort will be made also to organize 1,000 women to go to Washington.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 17.—There is a report current among local iron and steel workers that the most important business to be brought up at the Cleveland convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers will be the advisability of a national strike in the iron trade. A part of the plan is to have the Cleveland convention adopt the sixty-day limit scale so as to prevent any chance of violation of contract by the manufacturers, as would be the case if a yearly agreement was made.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 17.—Two important projects for the inland ship canals were favorably acted upon to-day by the House committee on railways and canals; for a canal to connect the Hudson River and the great lakes, and for one between the Ohio River and Lake Erie.

LONDON, May 17.—A manifesto signed by the English archbishops and thirty-one bishops has been addressed to the members of the church in Wales, protesting against disestablishment of the church in Wales and urging unity of the people to prevent it.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 19.—The gale which began on Tuesday night last increased in force all day yesterday, when it approached a hurricane, blowing at intervals at sixty miles an hour. Eight vessels were lost and at least ten lives were sacrificed. The scene at the lake front was unparalleled in Chicago's history; thousands of people turned out to witness the thrilling incidents of the day. Heroic efforts were made in the saving of vessels' crews, but some were unsuccessful. The financial loss is over $100,000.

Six lives and many vessels were lost at Milwaukee. Other lake points report in a similar strain.

Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, and Michigan points report a fall in temperature from 33 to 50 degrees on the 18th inst., as a result of the late severe storms. Growing trees and vines were stripped and grain beaten down in many places. Anxiety prevails; it is feared that frost has damaged vegetables, grain and fruit.

MADRID, May 18.—The Superior Council of War has confirmed the sentences of death imposed upon the five Anarchists who were convicted of complicity in the plot to murder Captain General Martines Campos and in the Licea theater bomb outrage. It is expected that the condemned men will be shot to-morrow.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 18.—There is a prospect of a new factor in the miners' strike; the American Railway Union, composed of railroad men, will be invoked to aid the miners by refusing to haul a ton of coal from the mining districts of Ohio. It is believed that the railroad men operating every line out of Columbus will be enrolled. Every road carrying coal in this section is largely represented in the membership of the new order.

China proper is divided into nineteen provinces. Most Chinese are Buddhists and Confucianists at the same time; many of them also Taoists. The Mohammedans in China number about 30,000,000, and are found chiefly in the northeast and southwest. There are about 1,000,000 Roman Catholics. Protestants number 60,000. Many of the natives are still nature worshippers. There are at work in the Flowery Kingdom about sixty-six societies, eighteen of which are British, thirteen Continental, and seventeen American, and they support about 1,500 missionaries. Native helpers number over 20,000 and native churches 525. Last year over 500,000 copies of the Bible were distributed.

In 1851 India had 91,000 Christian converts. At present there are 250,000 Hindoo Christians and 1,000,000 adherents to Christian churches. The number of converts last year was 24,000. In the last ten years there has been a gain of 140 per cent.

Of every 10,000 deaths in England 270 are from apoplexy.

CONTENTMENT THE ONLY SPECIFIC.

A newspaper reporter the other day asked George G. Shradly, the great American surgeon and physician, the question: "What manner of life do you think most favorable to health?" His reply was:—

"A moderate life. Take plenty of sleep. Take plenty to eat. Take plenty of exercise. We need more walking philosophers in this world. Keep a contented mind. Remember that the man who wants little is always rich, and the man who has much isn't always. Sometimes a man owns a house, but sometimes the house owns the man. It is better for the man to own the house and bear in mind that a very big man can live in a very little house. I need not say that little men often live in big houses. This life can only give a man at best one thing—contentment.

IMMENSITY OF THE HEAVENS.

If our sun were removed to the pleiades it would hardly be visible in an opera-glass with which nearly 100 stars can be seen in a cluster. Sixty or seventy pleiades surpass our sun in brilliancy, Alcyone being 1,000 times more brilliant, Electra nearly 500 times, and Maia nearly 400. "Sirius itself takes a subordinate rank when compared with the five most brilliant members of the group, the real magnificence of which we can thus in some degree apprehend. If we seek to know the dimensions, not of the individual stars, but of the cluster itself, we are met with many difficulties; but on the assumption that it is approximately spherical in shape we can calculate its diameter to be over 40,000,000,000 miles, so that light would take seven years to pass from one extreme to the other.—

A CHEAP POWER,

And at the same time a reliable power, are the points to be sought for in purchasing an engine. With steam power a constant watch on the gauge is necessary to prevent accidents, and the expense for engineer is a serious item against economy. The gas or gasoline engine is by far the cheapest power, as it will run all day without attention or fear of accident, and the cost is about two cents per hour for fuel per horse power. For intermittent power the economy of gas over steam is beyond comparison. While these points of superiority are without question, it is important in selecting an engine to get the best; the best in the long run is the cheapest. Do not fail to investigate the striking advantages of the Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines. Send for catalogue. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until they are realized on. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, 405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco.

Junior religious department; David J. Krahl, superintendent.

June, first week.—Hymn No. 118, Saints' Harp. Prayer by presiding officer. Roll call. Response: One of the books of the Bible given in their order. (See Note a.) Hymn 732, Saints' Harp. NOTE (b).—Should the program committee think best, the topic might be divided in this way: For confirmation, for ordination, for blessing, and for healing, making four essays instead of two.

Senior historical department; Frank M. Sheehy, superintendent.

June, second week.—Song. Invocation, vice president. Music. Remarks on the beginning of history, by president. (Note a.) Historical Scripture Lesson, conducted by the secretary. (Note b.) Roll call. (b).—This could be as response; verses could be assigned to different ones; or could be read by secretary alone. (c).—Any incident of interest in the Scripture. Should be given in such manner as to be plainly understood by all. (d).—These discussions should be lively, and not allowed to drag. Can be made interesting. (e).—Written or oral. Should be previously prepared.

Junior historical department; Etta M. Izatt, superintendent.

June, second week.—Memory verse: In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.—Genesis 1:1. (Note a.) Song or hymn. Prayer. Song. Recitation. Responsive reading, Genesis 1st chapter. General talk—What you know about one of God's works. (Note b.) Essay, "The Garden of Eden." Duet. Question box. (Note c.) Select reading. Roll call, response, a verse from Genesis. Song. Benediction.

NOTE (a).—"Memory Verse" to be repeated in concert immediately after song, of Part 2. (b).—"General talk." Each one can find something of interest about the sun, moon, the stars, a blade of grass, a flower, a piece of rock, or anything else, and be prepared to tell what you know when you come to "meeting." This part can be made very instructive and interesting, with just a little pleasant trouble. Try! (c).—"Question box." "It is a recognized fact that people can ask a great many questions. Five or six minutes can be devoted to queries, the members to write them on slips of paper; president to read them, and privilege granted to all present in answering. Questions must bear on the evening's program.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

SOCIETY is fast becoming stratified into the very rich and very poor, and everywhere the very rich are hugging their riches, or making a display of their wealth, and creating envy in the minds of the onlookers. What do you suppose becomes of all our fine theories about the brotherhood of man, or even the fatherhood of God, in the mind of that day laborer, as he sits upon the curbstone eating his midday meal of dry brown bread and cold meat and, raising his eyes from the pavement, sees rolling by in his costly equipage the rich man on his way to the parks for his afternoon's outing? And when a moment later, having finished to the last crumb his short ration, and smoothing out the bit of an old, soiled newspaper in which it was wrapped he reads: "Millionaire Z. gave an eloquent banquet at his palatial home, to a large number of his friends. The table groaned beneath the load of rare delicacies, and there were seven kinds of wine served, all of them the rarest vintage."

His thought will first go quickly from that palatial home with its wasted wealth to the little, hot, dingy room where that morning he left his baby girl, weak and wasted, flushed with consuming fever, but soon to be white enough; and with no medical skill and no medicine to stay the end that will break his heart, simply because he cannot command the pittance of money with which to purchase it. And as he thinks he will wipe the eyes that pride cannot keep dry. Will it be strange if the tears he sheds by and by over a plain casket should water a deadly nightshade which will poison his soul? Then what is to hinder this poor man, not only from hating the millionaire, but from coming to the conclusion that "if it is right for yonder rich man to devour me, is it not right for me to devour my fellow laborer if I can?" And then the wolf in human nature is turned loose.

And I am afraid that the church of the Lord Jesus, who is the friend alike of the poor and the rich, has too frequently uttered its platitudes concerning the brotherhood of man and utterly belied in every profession by its practical illustrations of the subject. With its elegant and costly churches, expensive music, rented pews, cold reception to the poor man—by all these things it has proclaimed: "We said brotherhood; but, my dear friend in fustian, we were not thinking of you." Plenty of the brotherhood for the avenues, but no brotherhood of the avenues for the alleys.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

WELSH CHURCH DISESTABLISHMENT.

ALL the English Bishops and Archbishops have appealed to their clergy and flocks for prayers and subscriptions to defeat the Asquith bill for the disestablishment of the Episcopal Church in Wales. The Duke of Westminster and Lord Egerton of Tatton have also appealed for a campaign fund of $125,000, but have said nothing about the prayers. The appeal of the Bishops will appear hypocritical if not ludicrous in the light of the facts. The communicants of the English Church in Wales are but 6.6 per cent of the population, yet the clergy of that church are paid by the State in the aggregate about $1,500,000 per annum.

The Calvinistic Methodists, the Independents, and other denominations which have each a much larger number of communicants have to pay their own clergy and maintain their own churches, Sunday and theological schools, and colleges. They do so without complaining. They do not seek any of the endowments of the Established Church, and yet those Calvinistic Methodists and Independent communicants are mostly workingmen of the towns and the rack-rented peasants of the rural districts, while the communicants of the Established Church are mostly of the wealthy land and house owning and professional classes. The Wesleyans, the Baptists, and the Roman Catholics, who are less in number than the English Church members, are not afraid either that unless the State pays their clergymen and maintains their churches their sick and dying will be denied the ministrations of the clergy.

The Bishops and Archbishops take no note of the fact that the Established Church in Wales is an alien church, opposed to all the ideas and principles of the great majority of the people. The dissenting and Catholic population of the principality in the aggregate outnumber the Episcopalian population eight to one. Of the thirty-four Welsh members of Parliament thirty-one have been elected on a platform of opposition to the establishment and pledged to its overthrow. But Episcopacy has never recognized the logic of numbers or of facts, and is now so wrongheaded that in its obstinacy it threatens to bring about its own overthrow not only in Wales, but in England as well.—Ex.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and re-cross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.
R. S. SALYARDS - ASSISTANT EDITOR.
JOSEPH LUFF - CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 30, 1894.

BRO. T. W. SMITH DEAD.

A TELEGRAM from Bro. Joseph Luff, at Independence, Missouri, May 27, announced that Bro. T. W. Smith, of the Quorum of the Twelve, passed on to the other world at two o'clock in the morning of that day. He was stricken for the second time on Tuesday, May 22, lapsed into a semiconscious condition, lost the power of speech, and finally became unconscious to the things of this life, and passed peacefully away at the turn of the night on the 27th.

Bro. Thomas was present at the morning service Sunday, May 20, and offered the opening prayer before the sermon by Pres. Joseph Smith, and also pronounced the benediction in an impressive manner. As President Smith assisted him down the platform steps he was impressed that it was the last public ministration of the brother who had been so long and so actively engaged in the preaching of the word.

Bro. T. W. Smith was born at Germantown, Pennsylvania, March 7, 1838; was baptized March 17, 1866, in Hardin county, Iowa, by Elder Jason W. Briggs; served faithfully as an elder and a seventy, and was ordained to the apostleship, April 10, 1873, by Presidents J. Smith, W. W. Blair, and Jason W. Briggs.

Bro. Smith's last important service for the church was a mission to Australia and the Society Islands, with his wife, Helen P., whose health became entirely broken down by the long sojourn and severe exposure on the Island mission, and who returned to America but to die. He was reappointed to the Australian mission two years ago, and was at Salt Lake City, on his way when he was stricken by paralysis of his entire left side, from which he had so far recovered as to be able to get about to some extent, when the recurrent stroke, May 22, finished the work for the destroyer, and his body now sleeps.

Bro. Smith leaves a wife, married to him since he was first stricken, and who has most carefully and assiduously cared for and nursed him during his protracted illness.

COLLEGE, COLLEGE, COLLEGE! COME UP TO THE HELP.

THE college at Lamoni is now an assured fact, provided that those who should be interested in it will put to their energies and give the needed aid. Good wishes and "God bless you's" are all good in their place, but we need ready means to pay for material and labor.

Messrs. Rockefeller, Armour, and others among the Gentiles give of their wealth to endow institutions of learning to benefit their fellows; and if but a few of those among the Saints who can, will put a portion of their wealth, small as their possessions may seem to them when compared to such men as Rockefeller and Armour's millions, there need be no hindrance to the speedy establishment of an institution of learning to which the Saints may send their children, and the attendance at which they may have good moral influences surrounding them while securing an education.

It seems to us that there must be some, one or more, who have been blessed to an extent of God in temporal things, who could now make use of an opportunity seldom had to lay up treasures in heaven by an appropriate use of this world's goods. No better outlay can any man make of money, the preaching of the gospel excepted, than in fostering the educational efforts of his time; it is money well expended to endow an institution of learning.

READ THIS AND RESPOND IF IT MEANS YOU.

IT becomes our present duty to ask at the hands of the HERALD patrons and others special consideration and action upon what are to us, and should be to all, very important matters. Much as we dislike writing what may be called dunning editorials for publication, we, nevertheless, are compelled per force of circumstances to tell the Saints a few things in a very plain way, and take whatever risk may attach.

As shown by the Board of Publication's report to General Conference, the Herald Office has been falling behind financially during the past year, and this has been partially resultant, as we believe, from a failure on the part of some to do for the office what has been reasonably expected of them as a duty.

While it is next to if not absolutely impossible for the Board to publish a paper that will meet all the exactions of all classes of minds represented in our church variety, the fact remains that no man of credit within the body can point to the church organ and truthfully say it has been run in the interest of one individuality to the exclusion of the common privilege of others whose convictions and interests, though varying from ours, have been entitled to respectful hearing.

The Sermon Supplements have been issued to meet the demand made by some for doctrinal matter, separated from the controversial features of the HERALD, and for circulation among those without the church. The price of the paper has been reduced to the lowest living figures, and the prices on all books and other publications have been also lowered.

While the Board has been eager to meet every demand made by the body or representative individuals within it, and has sought to bring its publications within the reach of all, the returns have not been nearly so gratifying as was hoped for. Every appointee of the General Conference is furnished free with a copy of the HERALD and is permitted a discount on books, etc., he may sell for the church, and yet there are quite a number of the general ministry from whom we have had no communication of items of news or articles for publication and no report of any effort to extend the interests of the publishing department either by soliciting subscribers for the HERALD or selling other publications. Brethren, is this right?

The number of names of those in arrears on our subscription list is greater than at any time before, yet our running expenses are heavier than ever before. Two dollars behind may not seem much to a subscriber who is delinquent, and perhaps it alone is not; but think of one thousand or fifteen hundred subscribers, each behind to that amount, and many of them to twice that amount, and it will help to an understanding of the situation that inspires this writing. If each one of those delinquents would by some special effort or sacrifice raise the amount due the office and forward it at once, we would not only be relieved of the financial pressure that perplexes, but would also be much comforted with the assurance that the burdens were being more evenly shared and all were honoring the obligations upon them to sustain the publishing department of church work. If those who have been indebted to the office for books purchased all the way from three to twenty-four months ago will kindly heed this appeal also, we will be glad.

Is it an unreasonable appeal to the ministry that we make? Is it more than we should expect that they use all possible means to secure subscribers, sell publications, and write us frequently regarding events of interest affecting the work in their fields, and that they thus sustain the church that is sustaining them?

Is it unbecoming in us to notify those indebted to the office that we need the amount for which they are delinquent, and that we need it badly? Is it improper to make this appeal through the HERALD and thus avoid in these hard times, the extra cost of publishing dunning circulars and mailing them to delinquents individually? If these are unwarranted procedures, please explain to us wherein they are void of warrant in the light of present conditions. If they are justified, let us have an expression from all the office debtors, to that effect, such as will render further appeals unnecessary.

It is true that times are hard; but this confession will not pay the typos, the binders, and other office employees; and we would feel ashamed to offer it in settlement of office debts at the paper mills and printers' supply houses with whom we are under the necessity of dealing. Don't put us off with this plea till you have straightened out every other account, simply because the church does not crowd anybody. Important matters are hanging on our hands for lack of money to push them forth, and you can help us get them under way.

Our request is made in candor and we wing it abroad with faith as to results. The spiritual atmosphere is laden with promises of good for the church. Never was the prospect better, if as good, and with prompt responses from all whom this appeal properly concerns, we shall be put in a position to take advantage of the improving conditions as we discern them and help roll on the work with accelerated momentum.

To the host of earnest laborers and contributors to whom this appeal does not properly apply the office tenders thanks, and prays that their number may be increased as a result hereof. Our address, though made in plainness, is not void of the affection born of the Spirit. We believe that many fail to act because they have never been aroused to a comprehension of the actual necessity for action or from the feeling that what little they have power to do will not count much in the scale. But without reservation we announce to all—ministry and laity, brethren and sisters,—we need your help, and need it now. If you are in our debt, please pay, if at all possible. If you are not, become a worker at once in extending office publications and thus increase our general revenue. We shall try to do our part, and do it as well as we know how. Will you do yours? Let us hear from you.

HERE is some "Fire Brand" literature, published at Carl Junction, Missouri; sent us by a sister; printed in red ink too (some of it), sent out we suppose like Samson's foxes among the standing corn of the Philistines. It is "slightly" sensational and is making some "noise" if it does not cause some fluttering; and there is truth in some of its statements. We are having all sorts of religious medleys in these days of spiritual uncertainty, and it is just as well to keep track of it all, though some features are "incomprehensible amazements."

A REVIVAL NEEDED.

If God should let a red-hot, sanctified, John Brown sort of a man burst upon society—a man that would strike as much terror to the dead pulpits of the church as to the dens of iniquity—it would be the thing we need. You ask, "Was not Moody such a man?" I answer, "No." Moody's work was entirely too shallow; it did not possess the earthquake attribute. We have had for ten years a Y. M. C. A. surface revival work that has consisted mostly in loose theological truth, bouncing up for prayers, and retiring to a private room, and simply professing Christ died for you. God did the best he could, with the kind of doctrine used. Many of these revivalists held the ruinous error, that depravity is never extirpated from the soul, but only covered up by the imputed robe of Christ's personal holiness. That doctrine has no earthquake power in it; it is a poetical device of the Devil; for he loves to be covered over with the borrowed costume of Christ, provided he can retain a niche in the heart. Oh, no; in the revival I mean, the carnal mind is never repressed under borrowed garments, but torn out root and branch; a revival in which no one ever rises for prayers, but where they fall and pray for themselves, and weep and mourn and make the doctor think they are insane; a revival that will make preachers forget their manuscripts, and burst out and weep in the pulpit; a cyclone of mysterious omnipresence that when it strikes a church or community, will make people awfully mad or awfully happy.

I declare in the presence of God and his hosts, I am ready for just such a moral scene. Nothing is so alarming as the utter absence of alarm in the churches. Nothing is so dreadfully terrific to my mind as that sinners have no terror! O that God would so baptize with fire a thousand people, as to render them incomprehensible amazements of power. O, for a few men so dead to all things but God, and so filled with him as to make them more than a match for the rest of mankind! O, thou Triune God of Sinai, Calvary, and Pentecost, art thou not now nursing, under the horizon, the lightning and thunder and rain of an amazing holiness revival? Lord, let it come! Let it strike our nation; though it may blow the steeples of our abominable church pride in the dust; though it may thrust our philanthropic fairs and festivals in the gutter, blow the French music out of our choirs, and the feathers out of our bonnets; though it should confound all the wise ones, and be understood by no one but thy Divine self, let it come! Thou art the master of thine own tempests. O, send us a storm from the Holy Ghost before thou sendest the storm of judgment.

THE FUNERAL LIE.

Telling a lie about a man when he is dead, saying, "he is gone to his rest," or "he is better off," cannot keep him out of hell. But it may be answered, "It does not hurt him." True, but it is a gross deception and crime against the living. It is worse than highway robbery, horse stealing, or even murder. Killing the body, especially if the one killed is a Christian, is of comparatively little importance, as the soul is simply "absent from the body and present with the Lord." But the crime of soul-murder is the most heinous and diabolical, the most terrible and far-reaching in its results of any crime in the calendar. And yet the astounding thing is, that the men who are guilty of the blood of souls in this respect, are the men who are lauded to the skies, and they can command from five to five hundred dollars for delivering a funeral oration and speaking smooth, deceptive things about the dead. Preaching peace, when God has said, "There is no peace to the wicked." "Woe unto them which justify the wicked for reward."—Isa. 5: 22, 23.

We affectionately warn and beseech those who may read this to stop and consider. Ask yourself the question, "If I die as I am, where will I spend eternity?" When you have truthfully answered this question between your soul and God, please fill out the answer in the certificate on the other side of this card, and carry it on your person, so that if you die to-night, your friends will have no excuse for telling untruths about you at your funeral.

May God bless and save you. Amen.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. W. BLAIR wrote from Plum Hollow, Iowa, May 21:—

Last night I concluded a series of five meetings here. Have also held two meetings in the Ross schoolhouse and two in the Elm Creek schoolhouse during the past eight days. Yesterday I baptized four adults—three of them school-teachers—all promising young people. Others are almost persuaded to be baptized. The meetings were well attended notwithstanding the press of business. Prospects for church building are quite good.

Bro. Blair would go to Council Bluffs from Plum Hollow for a ten days' stay from the 23d.

Bro. E. F. Shupe, Globeville, Colorado, May 18:—

Bro. Caffall is visiting Denver and vicinity prior to his departure for Europe. Elder F. J. Chatburn and wife arrived in Denver on the 15th and will make their home here for awhile. We hope their coming will be beneficial to the work in this city and to themselves. Bro. H. O. Smith has promised us a visit on June 3.

Bro. A. L. Whiteaker, Eureka, Kansas, May 23:—

The work is onward here; I baptized five of late, and more are near the kingdom; they will obey soon, I think.

Bro. F. C. Smith, Gilmore, Michigan, May 23:—

The Cornish-Rogers debate is moving on grandly. Those who cheered the opposite party are changing some the other way; good order, and interest is getting better; large crowds. We have had bad weather almost since the start. Elder Rogers is rather abusive in his language, which makes the truth to shine the more. Everything goes well so far, and, we hope for a glorious victory for the right.

Bro. Joseph F. Burton, writing from Dos Palos, Merced county, California, May 19:—

Through Brn. Putney and Steel's efforts I have opened up in this new colony: began last night. Before coming here I preached once in San Felipe, where Bro. Alexander held meetings some time ago, and if I had not had appointments out for this place I should have continued there. Doors are opening, new ones, and I am determined to keep myself in line, sufficient at least, to claim the beautiful promise made us elders by the Spirit which guides in the great latter-day work. I shall use all the wisdom I have in directing the work on the Slope, and pray for divine guidance in that and in all duties. Every working elder this year will rejoice in his work, while those who seek ease and comfort only will be made sad, sorrowful, and doubtful. No. 2910 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, will be my permanent address.

Bro. H. D. McIntyre, Inland, Benzie county, Michigan, May 8:—

The work is moving nicely here and all seem to enjoy the Holy Spirit.

Bro. Joseph Ward, Fordland, Missouri, May 24:—

I baptized one at Rogersville, this morning. Work is flourishing in Southern Missouri.

Bro. E. Curtis, Springerton, Illinois, May 25:—

I baptized five since General Conference. Have labored in Brush Creek and Dry Fork branches. Arrived here yesterday to assist Bro. F. M. Slover, who has baptized fifteen the past week. Three more have given their names; interest is running high. We shall hold forth until over Sunday, then on to Parrish for conference. God is truly with us.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

FORTY-TWO baptisms were reported in the HERALD for May 23 in the letters from laborers in the field. What a harvest of souls this represents. Only a few letters and yet nearly a half hundred of baptisms reported.

A brother, in the field, suggests that it is his opinion that when a man is called of God and chosen by the church and sent into the field as a minister it is the duty of that man to be in the field where he is appointed to labor, active, diligent, and fervent, losing no time in idle waiting in branches, or out of them; but to be up and doing. This brother being in the field has the right to make this suggestion; and his implied criticism of those appointed as missionaries who may be losing, or wasting time in unnecessary stoppages in and around a branch of the church taking life easy, if there be any such, is a just one. He feels the burden of souls to be saved, and honestly thinks that honor due the church requires her appointees to be "up and doing." And that will be the verdict of all conscientious people.

The HERALD for May 23 had a formidable array of pastoral letters—but each bristled with lively energy in the work—breezy, encouraging calls to do valiant service for the Master this year. It does the soul good to read them.

Wanted, a home by a middle-aged lady who is not very strong, but neat. Would like a situation as housekeeper for lady or gentleman. Address Sr. Addie Riley, Spickards, Grundy county, Missouri.

Bro. Walter D. McKnight writes from Benton, Iowa, a town of two hundred population, on the Chicago and Great Western railway. There are three members there, and Bro. McKnight thinks that an opening can be made there. He is willing to give shelter and food to an elder who will come and labor there. He is connected with the Sunday school, and occasionally has an opportunity to speak on the faith in explaining the scripture read in the lessons. Some of the people are looking for something better than they have, and may welcome a gospel talker when he comes.

We learn by telegram from Bro. R. May of Independence, Missouri, that on Tuesday the 22d instant, Bro. T. W. Smith suffered a recurrent stroke of paralysis and that his condition was very critical. The HERALD readers will read this with great regret as strong hopes were indulged that Bro. Smith might fully recover and still do gospel duty in the field. We can only hope, and be prepared for the departure of our brother at any time.

Brn. I. P. and James M. Baggerly made a stir at Oakland City, Indiana; rousing the usual cry of false prophets, etc. They were permitted to occupy a Christian church building by the kindness of Mr. John Wood, a member of the Christian church. The brethren were feeling well at writing, May 18.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith departed on the 25th inst. for Council Bluffs, Iowa, where we understand that Bro. T. W. Williams is to meet a representative of the Utah church in discussion at an early day.

Bro. Heman C. Smith, in charge of the Southern mission, left for his field on Thursday, May 24, Standley, Indian Territory, being his first objective point. Bro. S. V. Bailey, of Lamoni, will also labor in the Southern mission. He left home for Southern Missouri and Eastern Arkansas on the 25th inst.

President Joseph Smith reached home from Missouri points on the 22d inst.

Bro. C. P. Faul corrects the date of Far West district conference. Those interested should note his correction in miscellaneous columns.

Bro. and Sr. John Wahlstrom, who have been doing missionary work in the Swedish mission since the summer of 1892, arrived at home, Lamoni, Iowa, on Wednesday, May 23.

Bro. Charles H. Jones, of Lone Rock, Missouri, went to his field, the St. Louis district, on Friday, May 25.

Sr. M. E. Kearney and Son Willis, formerly of Plano, Illinois, and who came to Lamoni in 1881 with the Plano colony, went to Southern Missouri on the 24th inst., with a view to making a permanent location near the Missouri and Arkansas line. Bro. Kearney was for some years employed in the typographical and bindery departments of the Herald Office. They have the sincere wishes of the Lamoni Saints for their future success.

Bro. W. C. George of Temple, Lake county, Ohio, has sent us a sample package of "Mon Ami coffee," a hygienic preparation composed of grain and vegetable substances, designed to substitute a wholesome beverage for ordinary coffee. It is ground ready for use and put up in pound packages, price fifteen cents each. Pleasant in taste and flavor. Address orders to Bro. George as above.

Sr. Josephine McDonald reports a new Sunday school composed of members and outsiders organized at Prudenville, Michigan, for which they order Gospel Quarterlies.

Bro. Marce Sorenson, lately returned from Denmark, left Lamoni on Monday the 28th inst., going to Northern Texas to see his children, and where he will labor for a time. He expects to soon arrange his affairs to begin labor among the Danish people in America, in whom he feels a special interest, and in whose behalf his missionary experience abroad has prepared him to labor advantageously.

Bishop E. L. Kelley departed for California on Monday, May 28, going via Denver Colorado. He will remain about four weeks, putting the Gospel Boat in commission and giving attention to other church interests.

A letter from Bro. J. T. Davis, dated Clay Center, Kansas, May 25, says, he baptized three, Bro. J. A. Davis one, Bro. G. W. Shute three, and Bro. R. L. Ware one, of late, which with thirteen recently baptized by Bro. Parsons indicates the work is moving in that part of Kansas.

The address of Bro. J. C. Foss is No. 14 Hall street, Rockland, Maine.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Into the path of sin
One step may take you,
For wrong lies near
To the path of right;
But lower down,
From right to wrong,
The way descends;
But back again to right
'Tis steep and rugged."

"For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare for the battle?"—Paul.

AMONG the many gems of apt and striking illustration with which the word of God is replete, we find the one quoted above in every sense suited to our purpose. The battle is on. Let no one deceive himself in regard to this. A people is to be prepared, "Raised up, not converted," to meet the Lord at his coming, and in order that this may be done, the sons and daughters of Zion must be instructed and this instruction must be of a positive, plain, and definite character. In other words, the "trumpet must not give an uncertain sound," but the notes must be both prolonged and clear that the soldiers who hear them from the watch tower may distinctly understand their meaning, gird on their armor, and be ready for the conflict.

The Devil is hurling into our midst his vile schemes of destruction, and our loved ones are by tens and hundreds contaminated thereby. Yet if we have the moral courage to speak of them, especially if we call them by their own name, point them out so that our children may know what we mean and be warned instead of being mystified, there is a class (there always has been and while the present state of things exists there always will be a class), which stands ready to cry out, "You are offending me by your indelicacy of speech!" To such the indelicacy is not in the sin, but in the one who has the fearlessness to point it out.

How long has this very cry been raised against us as a people by the sectarian world? They have long clamored for a smooth, sweet gospel. A gospel which would not disturb them by arousing their conscience to convict them of sin. Their ministry, as a rule, have dealt out this gospel to them. Like Israel of old, they demanded of their prophets to prophesy "smooth things," and while they obeyed the nation became corrupt. It is the same to-day. The sacred rights of the family—that corner stone and guardian of the nation's rights, honor and perpetuity—has been invaded and uninspired reformers have sprung up, working great harm. The gospel of Christ is the only hope of humanity, and while thousands in the world—yes, tens of thousands—have not its full light, just as far as they have light and are walking in that light they are approaching nearer to God. It well becomes us, then, as children of the light, children of the kingdom, to be governed by the fear of men, a desire for popularity or any motive, be it what it may, save a love of truth. In the days of Christ he warned these selfsame over careful, over nice scribes and Pharisees that "the publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before you," and there is a bare possibility in our own day that those who are set as watchmen upon the walls of Zion (and they who have influence are set there no matter what their position) and fail in their duty may be reduced to the necessity of seeing this same class enter the gates which will close at their own approach. Indeed this state of things was revealed to Bro. Joseph in a vision which many Saints have heard him relate. In this vision he saw the entrance to a large and magnificent building guarded by two suspended swords. Some approached with all boldness and confidence but were, to their utter dismay, shut out by the sharp clashing of the swords as they crossed each other to bar the entrance, while others who approached slowly and with trembling, were admitted by the swords instantly drawing back to allow them to pass.

God will have no building with untempered mortar, and he or she who undertakes to work for eternity must have before their eyes the fear of God and not of man.

With this issue we send out as noble a piece of literature as has emanated from the pen of anyone in this age. Let those who receive it appreciate it and thank God for as staunch a champion as Heman C. Smith. We have others by the score, whose letters both cheer and encourage us and who in due time will be heard from. Let the sisters bear in mind that the work is before them and we must have means to carry it on. Some local societies are already sending up their mites and in our next we hope to be able to suggest some means which may be found feasible for meeting the needs of the case. Leaflets must be scattered like the leaves of autumn and a supply must be kept on hand for sale whenever called for.

COLTON, May.

Sister Frances:—Will you pardon this intrusion from one not personally acquainted, who is desirous to make you and a few others a call this lovely morning? Something seems to call me out, for the birds are singing and all nature is smiling. The mocking bird is warbling, chattering, and swinging in the topmost branch of the eucalyptus tree, and as I listened I think surely the birds have a concert. The mocking bird has sung untiringly all night, as if in praise to the one who created the musical organs of his throat. Surely he never had throat troubles, as many of our dear ones have had, which shortened their life of aspiration and song. The garden has put on a new dress of red, pink, and white blossoms, so fragrant that I look around my little vine-covered cottage with a happy, contented sniff at the sweet odors sent forth from the various roses, and I think of the great Artist who has made them so lovely and fragrant; and I ask, who can paint as doth he?

I think sometimes of Bro. Joseph Smith, when visiting here. He was strolling around the Slover mountain and there stooped to gather a tiny wild flower, and said to my daughter, "I wish I could take some of the sweet little things home to my family." Is there not a lesson to be learned from this?

There is beauty in all, small and great. Let the great men stoop to raise up the tiny and weak things of earth, and they will admire the wild flower and cultivate and bring it to a college of royal fame, and in that house teach Social Purity and every good branch that may advance the student. O how much I hope this work of building a college may prosper!

But I said I was out for a stroll and here I am at the Baptist parsonage and am excused for an early call. I chat awhile, as all women are apt to do, and the minister and wife kindly tell of their eight year mission in China, and show me many relics and curious things obtained there. One was a god worshiped by the natives. It was, I thought, anything but lovable. So unfeeling as it was composed of iron and had no heart to feel for its worshipers! The minister said the man who used to worship it was taught by him to believe in a better God; that he became a Christian through his instrumentality, and that he wanted then, to throw it (this hideous image) away, but the missionary retained it for a relic of the past, with a number of other curiosities. I saw on the lace curtain an immense tarantula or trap-door spider. At first I was about to retreat, but coming a bit nearer found it was one of our ornamental native pets and was placed there for a bit of trickery, to make nervous people jump, although it could do that no more. This family had called on me three months previous, and of course hoped I would attend the Baptist church. I gave them the Voice of Warning and some sermons to read. I had now called for them. Had he read them? Well yes, some parts, and he refers to the establishment of the Christian religions and "those blessings you speak of Mrs. R., I think like this," said he, "they were needed only in that day to establish faith in Christ. But now we have become more enlightened, and it is like planting flower seeds. When we see them coming up we place sticks, and tags on them to tell the name of our choice flowers or tree; but when they have developed and grown, we know them, and take away the tags; we don't need the signs any more by them. Just so I think by our Christian religion."

I told him that was very pretty, so far as it went, but I thought the tags were needed badly now, and will be until all come to the unity of the faith: for the seeds the Master of the vineyard and his apostles planted have been scattered and thereby a confusion spiritually took place and thus the covenant was broken and tags lost, and I hoped he would read more and see that God never gives nonessentials, but that it is man who has so changed.

Perhaps I left him and his pleasant wife with a few new things to think of. He said: "We believe as do you, in immersion," and I said, "Good morning, as I must take the train at two o'clock and attend our Daughters of Zion society." There were two waiting at church while another went in quest of the key. Some three or four more came and at least we had the number that God has promised to bless, and asked this blessing from him and sang.

We were only seven, and this little faithful handful, (I will not give the names,) but we collected fifty cents for some more leaflets or as a help to pay the amount. We don't know what it is, but if all will do as some suggested, we shall hope to receive them again. They contain sermons on serious existing evils. These things are not very pleasant to talk about and I for one do not admire that part of my duty; but some one must take it up, and endeavor to promote purity of thought and action. The mother is the first to frame the mind of the precious child. What a most excellent sermon preached by Bro. Burton! Sisters should feel encouraged to go onward.

Some complain that the leaflets are too long on the one subject. The young mother and child become weary, and sometimes tired eyes wish for larger print. A hint to the wise is always sufficient. A variety is spicy and all enjoy the taste thus in literary work.

I am glad to learn and find that in all parts and in San B— the good leaven is at work, and we trust the salt will not lose its savor. For, dear young sisters, sad bread and cakes bring thunder clouds to a man's face, but light wholesome food brings smiles and kisses to the young housewife. I wonder if we shall see Brn. Forscutt and Hilliard at our reunion? I have not seen Bro. F. for eleven years.

May the Lord assist you and the many others in the work in which you are so nobly engaged. Excuse this prolonged call.

Your sister in bonds of gospel love,

ESTHER ROHRER.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MAY.

PRAYER.

"Our lives are fed by prayer—for not alone
Strong yearnings of the soul for holy things,
Or aspirations high, or musings deep
Can give us rest of soul. As to a sea,
In which we children dip our tiny pails
And bring up water, we recur to prayer;
For loving, living, longing every hour,
We give up to thy care, Almighty Strength,
That which our hands are all too weak to hold."

HELPING HAND.

Sr. Margaret J. Head writes: "We feel greatly encouraged and are more desirous to do good in our line than ever. There is an increasing desire among the sisters to reach out the helping hand in any necessary direction. We are thankful to our heavenly Father for additions to our numbers and welcome them with joy. May every effort to towards the accomplishment of the divine will of the Master be blessed!"

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 15.

Editors Herald:—After leaving Lamon, I went, in company with E. L. and Laura, to Macedonia, in part to visit my Brother James and folks at the old homestead in Mills county. At the latter place, under rather unfavorable circumstances, we held two meetings. The old neighbors seemed to retain their former respect for us without distinction of creed, and appeared interested in the preaching. It is worth something to be able to go back where one was raised and meet with respect from old associates. The minds of some of the people there at least are turned towards our work, and they are noting the progress being made. Sometime the leaven planted in the past there, properly enlivened, will show itself.

On my return here I stopped at Davenport to make inquiry in regard to the tablets claimed to have been found in an ancient mound there a few years ago, a facsimile of one of which is found in "Presidency and Priesthood." Their genuineness had been challenged by a party here last winter, "who seemed to be somewhat," in his own opinion; and I desired to get the facts. The tablets are in the custody of the Davenport Academy. Along with these the Academy has a rare collection of specimens of copper, pottery, and other utensils in use by a prehistoric people, found in mounds near the city. If human testimony is worth anything, there can be no question but that these tablets are genuine, and were found as reported. The leading citizens of the place aver that the tablets were discovered in a mound there and in such a manner that it would be next to impossible for anyone to have produced them as a fraud, and they laugh and mock at the idea of anyone questioning their genuineness. I will report more in detail further on.

Things are in fair condition here. The meetings held last Sunday were unusually spiritual and interesting. The Saints appeared very much wrought upon, enlivened, and greatly encouraged. Three were confirmed who had been baptized a few days previously, making five in all baptized since the conference and of the young people here. Two were ordained; one to the office of an elder, the other to that of a priest.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy reports a successful conference held in the Massachusetts district. Brn. U. W. Green and H. J. Davison are uniting their force in Maine and Nova Scotia. Bro. H. H. Robinson is baptizing at Scranton, Pennsylvania. Others are doubtless at their posts, so that the work of the year may be said to be duly inaugurated east.

We are having fine growing weather. Everything bids fair for good crops and abundance of fruit. May it be so.

In the faith,

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

THE A. P. A.

LONDON, Ont., May 15.

Editors Herald:—Kindly grant me the favor of explaining my position with regard to the A. P. A. and the McIntosh pamphlet.

In the first place I am in no way mixed up with the A. P. A. or any other organization except the Church of Jesus Christ, strict obedience to the laws of which I always contend will furnish me all the real protection, relief, sick benefit, endowment, insurance, etc., for both time and eternity that all man-invented institutions that have ever graced or disgraced this world have ever professed to offer. Yet in all other institutions are men who think. Some of them think aloud and I like to hear them. Others put their thoughts on paper, and I like to read them. Friend McIntosh does both. I like most of the thoughts he put in the pamphlet. I do not know that he belongs to the A. P. A., nor do I know that his pamphlet was written for that institution. If it says so, I have forgotten, and have not the work at hand while I write. I do not wait to find out all about a man and all the societies he belongs to before I pronounce his writings good or bad. If they are good, they are good; and if bad, they are bad, no matter from whom or whence they come, nor who smiles or frowns upon them. Though the great "we" in all newspaper offices is supposed to know it all, yet the one in the Glad Tidings office is just growing in knowledge, and often blunders, and may blunder in speaking well of said pamphlet, even though it has helped him to grow some.

To sum it all up I may say I do not favor the A. P. A., nor yet all that is in the book, and my notice of it gave no one any right to infer anything of the kind, much less to suppose that it places the church on the side of the A. P. A. The Herald, Ensign, and Glad Tidings, all by way of advertisement, made favorable mention of Bancroft's History of Utah, but I doubt if any will indorse all that is in the book; yet all can recommend it as a useful book to Saints. All good books have some mistakes. The reader must be his own judge in all cases, the McIntosh pamphlet included. I recommend only the good.

Yours in bonds,

E. K. EVANS.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 19.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here last Friday. I found the Saints well and some of them alive in the gospel work; and, as would naturally be expected, some ready for baptism. The work seems to be reviving here, and I hope that a united effort will be made by the Saints to keep the ball rolling. If each one will do what they can much good will be accomplished.

I baptized three at Newton last Sunday, and blessed two children and baptized one on Tuesday, and I hear that others are ready to come in with us. Bro. John Morgan has been visiting from house to house, doing fire-side preaching, with good results. Hope he will continue.

My address is, No. 225 Philman avenue, Scranton, Pennsylvania. Anyone wanting preaching or information in regard to the work can write me here. Some of the Saints at Plymouth are holding regular meetings on Sunday afternoons at Bro. Baldwin's, Boston Hill, and aiding the work in a financial way what they can, showing their faith by their works. William Ransome, of Plymouth, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, will receive tithes and offerings till further notice. Let each one send in his portion as the Lord has prospered him. We expect an elder here soon, and we want to bring this mission to the front, which can be done by a united effort.

Yours in gospel bonds,

H. H. ROBINSON.

CLIFFORD, N. D., May 21.

Editors Herald:—We are still alive in this out-of-the-way place. We had a little controversy recently, which, as usual, is resulting in additions to the church. I baptized one a month ago, and three yesterday; others have given their names and will be initiated in the near future.

I earnestly hope for assistance from Bro. Roberts at the earliest opportunity. His brief visit last fall has had a good effect, and I believe a more cordial interest awaits him. Praise God for what he is doing for us.

Hastily yours,

WILLIAM SPARLING.

WILBER, Neb., May 16.

Editors Herald:—A number of the Saints assembled at the depot last Monday at one o'clock to give the parting hand and say good-bye to Bro. F. J. Chatburn and wife, Sr. Carrie, ere they took their departure for their field of labor—Denver, Colorado. Bro. and Sr. Chatburn are held in high esteem here by both Saints and friends. This was shown by the congregation that met on last Sunday evening at the Saints' chapel to hear Bro. Frank's farewell sermon and to wish him Godspeed. He was a favorite among the Son's of Veterans, of which he is a member; also among the G. A. R. The writer was told by one of them that had he remained here he would have been chosen to deliver the memorial address. He has done a good work in this district, which is telling now and will continue to tell in after years.

Bro. C. H. Porter is about his Father's business up at Ashland and Omaha, Nebraska.

Our branch is in a prosperous condition under the supervision of our worthy president, Bro. Wilber Savage. I trust the officers of this branch will be faithful and try to make it both pleasant and profitable for those that attend our meetings.

The wheat prospect was fine, but is being damaged by the dry weather and high winds.

Your brother,

SAMUEL BROLLIAR.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 14.

Editors Herald:—The Massachusetts district conference which convened in this city last Saturday will be remembered by those in attendance as one of its most important sessions. Elder F. M. Sheehy presided and was re-elected president of the district; Elder George H. Gates, of Providence, was chosen vice president; Bro. Myron P. Fisher clerk; and Arthur B. Pierce assistant clerk. The preaching was done Sunday, May 13, morning, afternoon, and evening by Elders John Smith, of New Bedford, G. W. Robley, of Providence, Rhode Island, and F. M. Sheehy, of Boston, respectively. Each of these brethren preached excellent sermons. The Sunday morning prayer service was in charge of Elders A. N. Hoxie and J. B. Pearce. A resolution for the organization of a Massachusetts reunion was introduced and adopted and a committee of five appointed, with the probability that said committee will not act this year to the injury of the New England reunion to be held in Maine.

The Spirit of the Lord was felt in power by many during the sessions of conference, and a fair-sized representation was present from the various branches. The prospects were probably never better than at present for preaching in the regions around about the Plainville branch. I feel confident that better results will be seen among the local laborers during the present conference year. The confidence of the traveling ministry towards the local laborers seems to be plainly discernible since the last revelation has been received by the church. The same thing is true of the local ministry towards the traveling missionaries. Confidence in God and in one another will produce good results to the kingdom of God that we profess to love.

"O watch, and fight, and pray!

The battle ne'er give o'er;

Renew it boldly ev'ry day,

And help divine implore."

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

KNOX, Ind., May.

Editors Herald:—Leaving Clear Lake, May 10, I came to this point to look after our side of a debate which was being agitated on the part of the Campbellites, who were feeling a little waspy over the success of the cause here last winter. But they failing to get proper endorsement for a representative at this point, talked of a champion from Indianapolis; but as yet have failed to materialize. We are on record on the defensive and simply wait. We do not assume to be hasty, for with some victory means "excelsior" in dealing in filth and sloth, and the triumph of one's cause depends upon who slings the vaster bulk. When will the world learn that the class of birds engaged in "toting" such away to fill up on, are black, and that those of a feather flock together?

Preaching a few times at Clear Lake, and listening to the Bishop's agent talk "the law" on finance awhile, I gave a temperance effort at State Line on the evening of May 9, and left for Knox to arouse what interest we might before the assembling of district conference. Have held five services and assisted the Sunday school work what I could. The interest so far, is nice. A good investigation is under way, and people are not what they were toward the Latter Day Saints. Tables turned. A good work is imminent.

Hopefully,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., May 18.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. S. Pender accompanied me to Burlington, Iowa, from the recent General Conference. I introduced him to a hospitable home of Saints where the eldership, and laity too, as well, are wont to meet and often sojourn. He tarried in their midst over Sunday, and preached for them a few times in the new Twelfth street chapel. He then came this way and held forth a series of meetings for nearly a fortnight. He spoke a dozen times, myself twice, and attended other services. Three were baptized by his hands, and unity, peace, and love crowned his efforts with the choicest blessings and eminent success. His ardent endeavors and manly toil were remembered with open-handed generosity pleasing to behold. This is the third year this valiant missionary pioneer, as also Bro. John W. Peterson, has been wholly absent from the parental roof. Their homes are transient, and their pilgrimage is to the world. The astrologer's horoscope must have been forecasting from the sinking zodiac and descending stars when these gentlemen made their advents into this world, so far as wives and children are taken into account, up to the present.

The miniature heaven, even the home, with the tendril environments of a loving wife and dutiful children, limits somewhat and necessarily localizes more or less one's work of faith and labor of love. There is a certain liberty in thus being bound, for behold, when the adieu is said it means much! The unmarried, while running the gauntlet, are exposed to cupid's arrows from adroit archers, and once the winged shaft has fairly flown, the ever-revolving wheel of fate rings forth new melodious changes.

As a reminder, and interlude, my children are recovering from the whooping cough as also Bro. E. E. Wheeler's. The golden mean between extremes is to be found when conjugal fidelity is crowned with normal felicity. It is as natural and harmless to woo and wed generally as for doves and quails to pair off. The corelation and interdependence of sex are interwoven and blended as light and heat, or the body and boughs of the trees of the forest.

Last Saturday evening and Sunday I held forth, and in the afternoon it became my pleasing duty to lead a young gentleman into the stream. He was duly confirmed the same afternoon at the social service. We have gained seven accessions here in the last quarter; three by letters of removal from the Buffalo Prairie branch, and four by baptism. The best feature, however, is in that there is marked increase in spirituality, unity, and charity. Sacrifice of self, confessing of sins, and rounding up in general has come with the manna of grace and renewed diligence, patience, forbearance, and universal good will.

I go to Kewanee to-morrow, and on Monday hie away post haste to Rosedale, Indiana, to respond to many urgent calls.

Our district conference is to convene here in two weeks, or on June 2, and Brn. Pitt and Roush, and perhaps others from a distance, will favor us with their presence. It almost makes me heart-sick to bid farewell to the home folks and go forth at the stern and seemingly almost relentless beck and call of rigid yet just duty, so very soon before that gathering. It is rumored that several more will be baptized about then, and a general good time is expected. I feel strong, as usual, in body; my loved ones are usually well; the horn of plenty has blessed the household; the orchards, gardens, and fields are beginning to fairly awake and smile; so all things to your humble servant are propitious, bidding me step out and occupy.

This day's mail brought the substantial and a good letter from our esteemed, yea, shall I not say, beloved Bishop? With the increase of hard times, the waning of creedology, the trembling of the foundations of the social compact, the perplexity of natural factors, and the upheaval of elements come the faithful Saints with tithes and offerings to spread abroad the glorious gospel and liberate mankind, and to avert manifold unheard-of calamities. To see the olive branch of peace wave gently over their homes these troublous times, and bed and board or food, raiment, and lodgings duly supplied is but a tribute of respect from the All-Giver for solid, conscientious service.

And now, gentle reader, God bless you, and good-bye.
M. T. SHORT.

MANCHESTER, Texas, May 12.

Editors Herald:—We have a large branch here of about eighty members. Bro. Shepard was with us three weeks, and left two weeks ago. The brother did much good; he baptized eleven souls and left many more near the kingdom: and on last Sunday Bro. Fulks baptized four, and there are more to be baptized this evening. We have singing every Lord's day at nine o'clock, Sunday school at ten, and church at eleven. We must rejoice in this great work and sing praises to God and pray for the time to hasten on when trials are over, and rejoice; for it is the education of our blessed Redeemer to come to make up his jewels. Dear Saints, let us try to be ready, for this life is nothing to us but trials and troubles. When we are persecuted let us rejoice, for the Savior says: "Blessed are all they that are persecuted for my name's sake."

While Elder Sheppard was here we had our house of worship burned. In the last year we have had two churches burned, and Bro.

E. A. Erwin's cotton gin was also burned, but we rejoice over it; for where there is good to be done Satan rages most.

I ask the prayers of all the Saints. May God be with us all. Your brother,
T. L. MANNING.

LITTLE SIOUX, May 20.

Editors Herald:—On returning home from General Conference I found the vicinity where I live infested with the measles, and remained at home caring for my oldest daughter, who enjoyed the privilege of being in fashion, having measles. I labored at River Sioux from the 8th till the 15th, when I returned home to care for the two youngest who also had the measles, remaining till the 19th, when I returned again to River Sioux and preached once. Two gave their names for baptism last night, a man and his wife.

The services have been sparingly attended on account of measles, and an Indian medicine company, who had a troupe to draw a crowd, and they had the crowd. It brought to mind that "broad is the way and wide the gate that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat." These who attended services were truly interested and God blessed the efforts, and few found life "more abundantly."

I go from here to Smithland to reply to a lecture delivered by an Adventist minister against the Book of Mormon. He refuses to discuss the proposition in which this subject is treated, or to defend his own church in discussion: hence I reply to his criticisms on the book and on our faith.

Prospect for the accomplishment of great good to be done in this part of the vineyard: first, because there is great need of it; second, because the people wish it so, and calls for preaching come from every hand. For Zion's weal I ever labor and pray.

Yours in the covenant of peace,
J. F. MINTUN.

BUTLER, Mo., May 21.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving in this part of God's vineyard. The writer had the privilege of leading two precious souls into the waters of baptism yesterday, making ten that I have baptized since the 1st of March. Many others are believing but do not obey for reasons best known to themselves. We have another new opening five miles southeast of Butler. When the first sermon was preached there by Bro. Oehring and the writer, there were twelve present, the second about twenty, and when the writer went back on the first Sunday in May there were about one hundred and twenty-five. This is a place where the "Church of God" people used to preach, but the preacher conducted himself in such a manner that they quit going, and there has been no preaching there for three or four years. Some are investigating our claims.

Yesterday one of the Church of God ministers gave a lecture against Mormonism at the Lone Star schoolhouse. Bro. E. T. Atwell and the writer were present and took notes. Well, I have heard much about the Mormons but this caps the climax. Of all the misrepresentations I ever heard his were the greatest. In his argument on the Spalding manuscript he made Mr. Rice to say that he had no recollection of how it came into his possession, which statement was made by Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine, and not by Mr. Rice. Mr. Rice says the Spalding manuscript came into his possession in 1839 or 1840. The lecturer also tried to make the Book of Mormon contradict itself, but failed. Bro. Atwell announced at the close of the meeting that he would reply that afternoon, but Rev. Allen did not show up at that meeting.

Bro. Atwell scattered his stories to the four winds of heaven and told the people the plain truth of the matter, and showed where Allen had made misstatements in regard to our faith. Everybody went away satisfied with the effort. I can see a storm arising in the horizon; one of their big guns is here, Rev. Trornbrook by name. I think he is here to see if he cannot build up some of the places that have been torn down by the enemy, as they say. The Savior says, "Every plant that my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." The doctrines and theories of men will go down while the doctrine of God and his Christ will soar aloft as on eagle's wings.

Babylon will go down and the Church of Jesus Christ will rise upon her ruins and will finally fill the whole earth, as the old Hebrew prophet, Daniel saw it.

Yours in gospel bonds,
J. I. YOUNG.

ROGERSVILLE, Mo., May 22.

Editors Herald:—I commenced meeting at Rogersville Saturday night and will continue up to the 30th. The interest here is not so good as when I left here on the 1st of April, but think it will revive again. I left home on the 10th and came to Willow Springs and officiated in a marriage ceremony, solemnizing the marriage of Mr. Thomas F. Rader and Sr. Sallie B. Hamilton, uniting them in holy bonds of matrimony. From the number of friends present and the amount of noise made at the serenade we believe they have many friends who wish them a happy life and safe voyage over the matrimonial sea. The next day I came to Sargent and baptized Sister Steele, who had formerly been a prominent member of the Baptist Church for over forty years, she being aged sixty-one. Sr. Tucker had furnished Sr. Steele papers and talked to her about the hope she had in Christ and told her about the law of tithing; and that was not all, she tries to live in harmony with her precepts, and Sr. Steele is now rejoicing in the same hope, the first fruits of Sr. Tucker's faithful work in Sargent. I feel to say, press on sister, and may many other sisters do likewise.

From Sargent I went to Zanker and held a week's meeting, and at the close baptized four, two of them prominent young men who will be an honor to the cause if they prove faithful, the other two good sisters. Zanker is near the vicinity where I held the discussion last November. While there I had four invitations to go to the adjoining neighborhoods to preach, but could not.

I am traveling alone, not that it is my choice, for I believe in keeping every word of the law; but as there are only three missionaries in Southern Missouri it fell to my lot to go alone. The longer I work for the Master the more I love the work and the more wisdom I can see in the plan he has laid for us to work by. Jesus in sending out his ministry thought it best for his work to send them forth "two and two" (Luke 10: 1), and they went forth and preached and exercised the authority that Jesus gave them, and when they return we hear them report with "joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." (Luke 10: 17.) Again we notice that after Jesus went to heaven and gave the apostles their endowment they went forth to teach people to observe the laws Jesus had commanded them (Matt. 28: 20); and we notice that they went, yes, two of them, down to Samaria to confirm those whom Philip had baptized (Acts 8: 14), and we read the history of the result: "and they received the Holy Ghost," verse 17. Then when the voice of Jesus was heard through the Palmyra seer in the year 1831 it was in exact harmony with that which was already revealed: "And ye shall go forth in the power of my Spirit preaching my gospel, two by two."—D. C. 42: 2. And when the revelation was received for our benefit through our President in 1894 it referred us back to Section 42. I feel satisfied from my own experience together with the teaching of the law, that if we would go out two by two we would plant the work more firmly and immovably. When I left Rogersville on the 1st of April I left a good interest, but when I announced that the meeting had come to a close and that I would take my departure, the next day a Campbellite preacher announced that he would review me the following week. Now if we had been working two by two, one of us would have taken care of him and the other have filled the appointment; but I had to go and leave my good interest in the hands of the wolf, and the result was, he almost destroyed it and the work at Mountain Grove; and at Zanker it has suffered in like manner. I am at Rogersville, and I do not expect to be able to regain what that Campbellite destroyed while he was reviewing, or misrepresenting me.

In conclusion; I will say that I want a fellow laborer to travel with me; one who is not afraid to pick up his valise and walk ten or twenty miles in a day, or afraid it will give him cold to wade a creek, or afraid he will be bitten by a dog or a bedbug, for there are many in Southern Missouri. Brn. Sparling and Spurlock are somewhere in the southern end of our district battling for the truth. Let us all work together in harmony with the law for the advancement of the truth.

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

JESUS said:—

Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. —Matt. 16: 18.

This language was the result of the answer of the Apostle Peter to the question propounded to the disciples by Christ, as to who the Son of man was. Peter's answer was positive and direct, without any equivocation whatever, evincing a knowledge of what he declared:—

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

The Savior knew that man had not the power to reveal unto Peter this knowledge, for he had declared, as recorded in Matthew 11: 27, that,—

No man knoweth the Son, but the Father.

The Savior being in the form of a man, the natural man who beheld him would see no difference in him to other men, hence would not know him as the Son of God, no matter how much he himself might testify to the same. It is true that a great many people had seen some of the mighty works he had done, and some said that he was John the Baptist; some that he was Elias; and some said that he was Jeremias the prophet. But how they could arrive at such conclusions, is, to the writer, a query, unless they had adopted the belief of the transmigration of souls; for two, Elias and Jeremias, had been dead a long time, and John the Baptist's death was recent. It is evident that they were guessing as to who this personage, Christ, was. But after Jesus had inquired of the disciples as to who they thought he was, and received the answer of Peter positively, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," he said:—

Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven . . . and upon this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

Well might the Savior call Peter blessed, for truly he was blessed in having revealed to him from the only source available, even the Father, the knowledge that Jesus was the Christ, the Messiah, the anointed One, who was ordained of God the Father to redeem the race of Adam from the consequences of the fall, to abolish death, and bring to pass the resurrection from the dead, to be the "author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." It was not limited to Peter and the rest of the Twelve, that they alone should have this knowledge revealed to them. O no! But upon this knowledge revealed unto Peter, upon this rock or foundation the whole church was to be built. Peter and his brethren of the Twelve did not constitute the church, therefore, the revelation of this knowledge was not limited to them, but must accrue to all who truly became identified with the church of Christ.

Therefore it involves revelation continued as long as the church of God exists upon the earth, to those that compose the same. It is evident that the church of God was a necessity upon the earth, else Christ would not have attempted to build it. The great purpose of the establishment of the church of God was that men might be saved by becoming identified with it; for it is written in the second chapter of Acts:—

And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

The conclusion from this would be that those who were not added to the church could not be saved—and our friends who depend upon their morality to save them and say that they can be saved without joining the church make a great mistake. Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost; and as one means to this great end proposed to build his church, and he proposed to build it on this solid foundation or rock. Paul, the apostle, seemed to understand this, as will be seen by referring to this language:—

And came and preached peace to you which were afar off [Gentiles], and to them that were nigh [Jews]. For through him we both have access by one Spirit unto the Father. Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit. —Eph. 2: 17-22.

Here the church of God is represented as a building, a habitation for God through the Spirit, or in other words, God would dwell in each member in the church by his Spirit; all the building fitly framed, having a foundation of stones of which Jesus Christ was the chief corner stone, but all resting upon the revealed will of the Father or the knowledge communicated by him to the apostles and prophets that Jesus was the Christ, or under the Father, the chief corner stone. But the members of the church were at one time strangers and foreigners to this household of God and were made fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, both Jew and Gentile, and by one process, through the preaching of and obedience to the gospel of peace. The Apostle Peter, with the rest of his brethren having received a commission, to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, after tarrying at Jerusalem to receive the endowment of the Holy Ghost, in obedience to the command of his Lord, did stand up under the influence of that Spirit, and preached the gospel to those Jews out of every nation assembled there, and did promise those believing his preaching, who were pricked to the heart and made the inquiry what they should do, that if they would repent of their sins and be baptized for the remission of them, they should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this promise was extended to all the world upon the same conditions, so that it was universal in its character.

The apostle says:—

The Holy Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.—1 Cor. 2: 10.

Jesus says:—

But the Comforter which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.—John 14: 26.

And again Jesus says:—

But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me.—John 15: 26.

And Paul states:—

No man can say [knowingly] that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.—1 Cor. 12: 3.

We discover here, that the Holy Spirit is thoroughly acquainted with all the things of God, and that it is the prerogative of the Father to send him, and also that authority was delegated to the Son, after his ascension to the Father, to send the Holy Ghost; but it was to proceed from the Father, and it is made the source by which a knowledge that Christ is the Son of God, that Jesus is the Lord, is revealed unto the children of men who do his will, who become members of the church of God. This must have been the source through which Peter and the rest of the apostles received their knowledge that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God, upon which rock Christ said he would build his church, and the foundation that Paul had reference to when he said that the church was built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. The Savior praying to his Father, says:—

Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son may also glorify thee: as thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent.—John 17: 1-3.

According to this the Father hath given the Son power over all flesh that he should give eternal life to as many as the Father has given him. And the Son hath said:—

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.—Matt. 11: 28, 29.

And it is said also in the Revelation of St. John:—

And the Spirit and the bride [the church] say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

So, we perceive, that when the word says that the Father hath given power to the Son to give eternal life to as many as he has given him, it does not mean that only a few of the human race are singled out for eternal life, but that all the burdened, sin-sick souls, who will, may come unto Christ and partake of the waters of life, or eternal life, freely. But we have seen according to the Savior's prayer that to be saved, or have eternal life, does not depend only upon the knowledge of Jesus Christ being the Son of the eternal God, but that it is eternal life to know the Father and the Son. Jesus says:—

All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.—Matt. 11: 27.

It is seen here, that it is the Son's prerogative to reveal the knowledge of the Father to his people, and also the Father's to reveal the knowledge of the Son, and Jesus has said:—

If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.—John 14: 23.

And if they come and make their abode with a man, certainly he will become acquainted with them, and will know them. And when that has taken place with a man he has laid hold upon eternal life; and he hath done it by keeping the words, or commandments, of Jesus Christ. Jesus has said:—

Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life: and I will raise him up at the last day.—John 6: 54.

It is evident that the partaking of the sacrament, or of the emblems of bread and wine which represent Christ's flesh and blood, is what is meant here, which none partake of but those that have become identified with his church by obedience to his commandments, the law of adoption; and have been born again, of water and of the Spirit, after faith in God and his Son and repentance; and have entered into the kingdom or church of God. Having been born of that Spirit they have received the kingdom of heaven as a little child, have partaken of a portion of eternal life as a little child partakes of the natural life when just born into this world; and as the natural child grows up into manhood agreeably to the laws of the natural life, even so the spiritual child, agreeably to the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ," grows and develops into a perfect man in Christ Jesus, approximates more nearly unto the divine character, and is ready, though he should die, to be raised up again at the last day, coming forth in the resurrection of the just. From the foregoing it is plain, to the writer's mind at least, that Christ would build his church for the salvation of mankind, and having received authority from the Father, to do so, and declaring that he came down from heaven to do his Father's will, would be apt to build it in accordance with that will; but the Father giving all power into his hands he could consistently call it his church. And it is also plain to be seen, that as he ascended into the heavens and sat at the right hand of the majesty on high, that to build his church on earth he must have authorized servants to act in his name, to labor for him in building his church; and must have continual communication with them to instruct them how to build according to his will, for if they attempted to build without a knowledge of his will, it would not be Christ building his church.

We ask, with all due deference to those who may take a different view from us, how men can build or organize the church of Jesus Christ, though allowing honesty of motive in their act of professedly so doing, if communication between them and Jesus Christ is denied, if there is no direct revelation from God in these days, as Christendom positively affirms. They who deny revelation shut off Jesus Christ from having anything to do with building their churches. They cannot claim ancient revelation, or the Scriptures, as their warrant in attempting to build the church of Christ; for if that was the case they would follow the ancient pattern. But even having a description of the ancient pattern, they would not have authority from Christ to build after it, unless he should reveal his will for them to do it; for he alone, under the command of the Father, had authority to build his church. Paul gives us a description of how Christ built his church; he says:—

And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Cor. 12: 28.

We see that God set or placed these officers and gifts in the church; and the apostle tells us in Ephesians, fourth chapter, what God placed them in the church for and how long they were to continue in the church for that purpose:—

And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets, and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, etc.

Now here we have it very plainly stated what these gifts and officers were placed in the church for, "For the perfecting of the saints." We think it will not be claimed by those who profess to be the people of God connected with any church that that desirable object has been attained. We believe there is one church whose members claim to be holy and not capable of committing sin, but it does not have these officers and gifts which were placed in the church of God by himself for the purpose of attaining to the position which they claim. Therefore we are led to the conclusion that not being made holy, or perfect, in the way God had instituted, their claim must be unwarranted by the word of God. Further, they were placed in the church "For the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body [or church] of Christ," and to the end "that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive."

No one will deny that the work of the ministry is needed now, and that the body, or church, of Christ needs edifying, strengthening, and to be taught from time to time the will of God the Father as revealed from Jesus Christ the great Master builder, in order that they may grow up as perfect men and women in him. If this is needed now, then these means by which it is accomplished, those which God set in the church for the purpose, even those officers and gifts we have quoted, are certainly necessary now. But there is another strong reason for their necessity now: that we may not be carried about by every wind of doctrine brought to us by the teaching of men. Every observant mind doth know that there are numerous and conflicting doctrines taught in the religious world, and taught to us as the doctrine of Christ. Conflicting doctrines were evidently taught in the days of the apostle, which he styled "The doctrines of men;" and if it was necessary then that the various officers and gifts should be in the church, as described in Ephesians 4:11-14, that God had placed there in order that the children of God might not be tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine, by the sleight and craftiness of men, it certainly is necessary that they should be in the church in these days for the same purpose, because that particular cause for which they were given exists now, as well as anciently.

The conclusion is forced upon us, that if Christ was building his church now it would be the same in organization, the same in faith and doctrine; he would have to build by the revelation of his will to those whom he had chosen under him, and thus the church of God builded according to his will, would be one in organization, one in faith and doctrine, as the apostle declares, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Division, then, either in church organization or in faith and doctrine, cannot be of Christ, for he says, "If a house be divided against itself that house cannot stand;" therefore his church, if divided, could not stand. From the foregoing and in view of the existing divisions in the religious world in churches and in their doctrinal teachings, it follows that there has been a departure from the faith and doctrine of Jesus Christ, and it is stated by the Apostle John in his second Epistle:—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

He that hath both the Father and the Son, according to the Savior's word, must be in possession of eternal life, and this is brought about by abiding in the doctrine of Christ. Part of the doctrine of Christ was that he will build his church, and no other can even assist in building it, except called and authorized by the revelation of his will to them, and this implies continual revelation to his people, that the church may be built according to his will in all things. It follows then, that the church of God having become extinct, man not being able to restore or build it, it must be restored and built by the revelation of Jesus Christ to men, authorizing them to do so. This, the Latter Day Saints have been testifying to for the last sixty-three years; viz., that Jesus Christ has by the revelation of his will to men, authorized them to organize his church upon earth again; and clothed them with authority to preach the restored gospel, the plan of adoption into the church, and to administer the ordinances thereof; and is still revealing his will, from time to time, giving instruction for the building up of his church: and thousands have become identified with it and are testifying by the revelations of Jesus Christ to them that they through his grace, are now members of the true church, enjoying the rights and privileges of the same; and know that if they endure faithfully in keeping his commandments, they will be eternally saved. Hundreds of elders are now going forth throughout the land, and some to far distant lands, across the briny deep, at the sacrifice of home and its dearest associations, to declare the glad tidings of a reorganized church, and a restored gospel to their fellow men, that they by obedience to the law of adoption may be saved, and numbers are being added to the church, such as shall be saved.

Reader, if not so fortunate as to be identified with Christ's church, let me exhort you to so identify yourself, that you may be saved with an everlasting salvation. Believe in God and in Jesus Christ his Son, whom he hath given as the Savior of the world. Repent, or break off from your sins, and be baptized for the remission of them by one authorized of God to act in that capacity; and through the laying on of hands of God's servants,—which is an ordinance established by God for the reception of the baptism of the Holy Ghost,—you will receive that precious gift by which men are born of God and enter into the church or kingdom of God, and that Spirit will reveal unto you that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God and that God is your Father. It will reveal unto you that Christ is now building his church for the salvation of man, to prepare a people for his second coming to reign on the earth, which coming the "signs of the times" betoken is drawing near. That Spirit will guide you into all truth, and if you follow its guidance, you will be eternally saved.

LAMONI, May 11, 1893.

A GROWING EVIL.

THE evil that I refer to is not only on the increase in the world, but in the church, and I fear that unless the church officials will see that the law is enforced, as a church we will come under condemnation. We understand that the church is to be like unto a city set upon a hill—a light to all that surrounds her.

The Lord says in section 58, paragraph 5, Doctrine and Covenants that whosoever keeps the law of God has no need to break the law of the land. We may keep the law of the land and not live in harmony with the law of God. You may step into a saloon several times a day, take your drink, or you may take out a license and sell beer and whisky, and in this you would be in harmony with the law of your city or state; but your life would be in conflict with the law of God, and the church would be justified in demanding of you to give up such habits and business; and if you would not they would prefer charges and dis-fellowship you from the church.

Again; you may enter the courts of the land and demand that you be given a bill of divorce from your wife on the grounds that she has made life unpleasant for you, and give in your evidence, and in two thirds of the States of the Union your request will be granted, and you may then, before leaving the courthouse, take out license and be married to another person the same hour you were released from your first wife. I need not dwell on this matter, for it is generally understood; for husband and wife can be separated to-day for a very little, just so they have money enough to pay the lawyer's fee. In almost all our newspapers we notice advertisements which read about as follows: "For a moderate sum we will secure you a divorce." Yes, it has become a business with some to undo that which the law of God says should not be undone, save it be for fornication. Let no man, says the good Master, undo that which God hath joined together.

There is no law known to me in the three books that justifies husband and wife in separating except for the cause of adultery. (See Matt. 19: 3-20.) See also D. C. 42: 20, which reads:—

Behold, verily I say unto you, that whatever persons among you having put away their companions for the cause of fornication, or in other words, if they shall testify before you in all lowliness of heart that this is the case, ye shall not cast them out from among you.

We infer from this that if for any other cause a man puts away his wife that there would be grounds to cast him or her out. I admit that there are instances in the world, and possibly some in the church, where the husband will not provide for his family. He may be a drunkard or a gambler, or he may abuse his family; he may be one that has no respect for his family, but makes life miserable. In such cases as this where the wife and friends are convinced that the husband is beyond redemption—no hopes of him leading a better life, I say under such circumstances as this I do not think that God who is just would ask that the wife and little ones remain under the same roof when their lives would be in danger. Still the move to separate should not be done in haste, for I know of some families where the husband was a drunkard for years and still the good wife hung to him, knowing that when he was not intoxicated he was a good man, and her prayers were constantly sent up to Him who she believed would come to her rescue and give her husband strength to overcome the habit that had become almost second nature. This good wife stayed with this man for years and through her good works he was brought to a realization of his conduct and has become a good sober man and now a good Latter Day Saint. He will tell you to-day that the credit is due to his good wife, who staid right with him for years although he would spend half of his time in the saloon. Had she given him up, as many have done, he would have possibly been a lost man; and who knows had she got a bill of divorce, but what her life would have been a blank and she possibly married another man that would not have made life any more pleasant. I confess I am free to acknowledge that the best law that should govern the race on the marriage question is found in the three books; and as Saints we should comply with it; there is no safety outside of it.

I am sorry that I must say that this evil of husband and wife separating is increasing in the church. I have now in mind a branch of the church that has about two hundred and fifty members, and out of that number there are fourteen families that are separated, and some of them are old members of the church. It seems to me so unchristianlike for the husband to come from one direction to meeting, the wife from another. They pass each other on the street or in the meetinghouse, talk and shake hands with others, but never speak to each other; and still in this frame of mind they will partake of the sacrament. I take the position that these parties should not have the church privileges, but labor should be performed by the branch officials, and if they cannot get them to become reconciled, charges should be preferred for unchristianlike conduct. The law given to the church is, that if it comes to my mind that my brother has aught against me I shall go to him, and if he will not hear me, take another; and if then he will not hear, bring the matter before the elders, not the members. This law will apply to husband and wife just as well as to a brother and sister, if they are both members of the church. In case the husband and wife separate and will not take proper steps themselves to become reconciled it is the duty of the teacher to step in and try to get them together. If they still insisted in living apart, it would be advisable, especially if one of the two requested, that the matter be brought before the elders (not the members) as the law states. We read in 1 Cor. 7: 10, 11, where Paul says as follows:—

And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, Let not the wife depart from her husband: but and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.

Some say that the permission to depart as stated in the eleventh verse is just what they ask, as they do not intend to get married again, forgetting that the Lord through Paul in the tenth verse commands that there be no separation. It is true that neither the Lord nor the church will compel husband and wife to live together; still if they do not, they are transgressors of the law; and if transgressors they certainly are not worthy to partake of the sacraments. And when husband and wife or brother or sister will not speak to each other, they are not in a condition to partake of the emblems; and I think the church would be justified in withholding.

Again, I think that neither the husband nor the wife is justified in taking steps to separate until they first have the matter investigated by the proper ones; and if they are determined to separate, then let them do as the Lord says through Paul: "remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband."

I trust that the church will speak on this matter, and that soon; for, as I said, it is a growing evil; and when some make the statement in answer to the question, "If husband and wife are compelled to live together, it is better to live apart in peace than together in hell," this answer, to my mind, is very unwise, for it is not needful for Latter Day Saints as husband and wife to live in hell, nor apart, but if they live up to the requirements of the gospel they can live in peace and dwell together. I confess that if my wife and I cannot live together as Latter Day Saints, I doubt very much if we can live as such apart. The good Savior said that the reason why Moses granted a bill of divorcement was because of the hardness of their hearts, but that from the beginning it was not so. I am safe in making the same statement, that the reason why husband and wife separate is because of the hardness of their hearts. There may be some exceptions, but not many. I remember reading a circumstance in the life of Joseph Smith, that occurred while he was translating the Book of Mormon. One morning when he and Oliver Cowdery went into the room Joseph could not translate. Oliver said "What is the trouble?" "Wait?" said Joseph, "I know what the trouble is." He went down to where Emma, his wife, was and asked her forgiveness for speaking so harshly or unkindly to her. He was not above humbling himself, and when he did, the Lord forgave, and the gift was restored to him and he translated. When we speak harshly or unkindly to one another we not only hurt the feelings of those we speak to, but we grieve the Spirit of the Lord; and we should, like Joseph, humble ourselves and ask the pardon of those we have hurt.

Let us bear each other's burdens and strive to live so that we have the Spirit of the work, and then there will be no desire on our part to separate. We will conquer our evil natures by obedience to the laws of God and the whispering of his Spirit.

Husbands and wives, let us be one as the law comtemplates: "If ye are not one ye are not mine," says the Master.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH.

BY PRESIDENT J. MAX HARK, D. D.

MOST of the old myths, legends, and traditions of the race that long ago passed current as popular beliefs, and afterwards were laughed at and cast aside, had some foundation of truth and reality underneath them,—some soil of fact out of which they have grown. Myths are not only the attempted explanations of natural phenomena, as Mr. Fiske has defined them, but some of them, at least, seem to be the attempted explanation, or interpretation, of phenomena that are not natural, in the ordinary sense of the term, but supernatural, metaphysical, belonging to the realm of eternal verities. Such a myth, it appears to me, and one of the oldest and most widespread, was that of the Fountain of Youth.

This wondrous fountain, with its life and health-giving power, is continually met with in literature. Quaint and credulous old Sir John Mandeville, who traveled into the far East during the first half of the fourteenth century, tells us that he saw and tasted its waters. "Some men clepen it the Welle of Youthe, for thei that often drynken thereat, semen alle weys yongly, and lyven withouten sykenesse. And men seyn, that that welle comethe out of Paradys: and therefore it is so vertuous." A hundred years after, Peter Martyr, writing to Pope Leo X., located it in the West, "among the islands on the north side of Hispaniola," and "about three hundred and twenty-five leagues distant." It was in this direction, too, that Juan Ponce de León soon after made his famous search for it, and was sorely disappointed because he only discovered Florida, nor caught even a glimpse of that miraculous fountain that should make and keep him young.

Now, there is such a fountain, and it actually has the power of giving eternal life and youth to all who drink of its waters. If travelers in olden times and since have not found it, it was not because it does not exist, but because they did not look for it at the right place. Others there are who have found it, and have proved its virtue. For the thirst for its waters has been felt in every human breast from time immemorial, and the search after it has been going on from the earliest days, and still is going on.

Who does not want to be young and remain youthful forever? It is a longing that has been implanted in the human heart by God himself, and therefore is capable of satisfaction. The only reason why it remains unsatisfied so often is because the nature of it is so commonly misunderstood, and the search for it misdirected.

Youthfulness is not a matter of years, nor a condition of the bodily frame of man. It is something pertaining to his spirit. In the words of one who can speak from experience, being still young as the youngest at more than fourscore years,

"For all the base lies that the almanacs hold, While we've youth in our hearts we can never grow old!"

Dr. Holmes is himself a living illustration of the truth of his words; so are Mr. Gladstone in England, and a host of others in all lands and in every walk of life, who have quaffed of the waters of the fountain of youth, and have found it to be no fable, but a blessed reality. It has not, indeed, kept their bodies from growing old, but their selves it has preserved in all the freshness, vigor, and buoyancy of their "best years."

If we analyze this essential youthfulness into its component elements, the source and fountain thereof will not long remain hidden.

As experience accumulates with our years, the inclination grows upon us to dwell more and more in the realm of memory. Every one has noticed this, even if he has not experienced it. Old people are full of reminiscences. Now, if the memory be stored with an abundance of pleasant experiences, if it be a satisfaction to dwell upon our past deeds and life, then will it conduce to our happiness, help to make us contented and peaceful, in our old age. On the contrary, if the memory ever reminds us only of words and deeds that are calculated to fill us with regret and remorse, it becomes the most potent means of robbing us of all strength and buoyancy of mind; it is a main agent in "breaking down" our spirits, souring and embittering those years of our lives that are meant to be, and can be, the most contented and peacefully happy of all. Nothing "ages" a man so soon as the memory of an unsatisfactory, useless, or wicked past. It is utterly destructive of youthfulness, no matter what the number of the years we count behind us. A contented memory is therefore the first element of youth.

The second is a living interest in the present and its work. So soon as we drop out of the ranks of our busy fellow-men, and are no longer in touch with them,—so soon as our interest flags in what the world is thinking, saying, doing, suffering, hoping, and instead cleave to the dead issues of the past,—so soon do we become superannuated. The ever-advancing world shoves us aside. We are out of adjustment to our environment. We do not fit into the present. And the spirit is quick to feel this, and to suffer from it. So long as your bark glides swiftly along on the current, upborne on its bosom, it reaches in triumph the goal; but the moment you permit it to be cast ashore, while the hurrying stream flows past, it will begin to break into pieces, to fall apart and decay. An important part of the secret of the youthfulness of men like Holmes and Gladstone, is that they have never let go their hold on the present, recognizing that:—

"The serf of his own past is not a man;
To change and change is life, to move and never rest."

And, on the other hand, the chief reason why there are so many mentally worn-out, decrepit, useless, and unhappy old men and women in the world, is because they have not done this, but, instead, have sunken idly by the wayside, dead to the present, and miserable because it refused to be the past.

The third essential element of youthfulness, that which we see in every young person, be he a little child or a venerable sire, is hope,—the confident, cheerful outlook into the future. It is this, indeed, that alone makes possible the other two. Without hope, the past of even the best of men would drive them to despair; and their present work becomes treadmill drudgery. It is hope that gives its joyful ring to childhood's laughter, its strength and joy to manhood's labor, and to old age its peace and sweet serenity. As the beautiful butterfly, bereft of the wings that redeem it from the estate of a groveling worm, and change it to a dainty blossom of the sky, so is the spirit of man when robbed of its hope; it wearily crawls to its grave, when it might be soaring aloft into regions far beyond the reach of time, where a thousand years are as one day,—the deathless day of eternity.

A contented memory of the past, an active interest in the present, a confident hope for the future,—who has these three shall never grow old.

Need we yet be told where is the Fountain whence, and whence alone, these can be obtained? Only Christ, by his pardoning power, can so sweeten the memory as to turn its regret and remorse into peace and contentment. Only he, by his constraining love, can keep up in us that steady interest in the welfare of our fellowmen that makes us work for and with them day in and day out, nor ever lets us tire of our labor. It is he, and he alone, who hath eternal life, and opens up before us an endless duration, in which the good deeds here begun shall ripen and be completed, giving hope, boundless hope, to even the poorest and the weakest, the oldest and the youngest. He, then, the Christ, is the Fountain of Youth for whom the ages have thirsted and searched far and wide, and who was nigh unto them all the time; who is nigh unto us, ever inviting all, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink;" and which was part of the revelation made to the rapt disciple when he saw "a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."—Sunday School Times.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S APPEAL.

To the Saints of the West Virginia district:— As the General Conference has remembered us by appointing missionaries to labor with us we should improve the opportunity of having the glad tidings of great joy spread through the entire length and breadth of our district, this being a good field for the elders to labor in, as there are many calls for preaching, and I am sure that much good can be accomplished during this conference year in this district. In order that this good may be done we must come to the front with our means to support the ministry and their families. By an examination of the Bishop's report in Herald for May 16, you can see the condition of the treasury. I am sorry to say we have not supported our resident ministry. This should not be so. I am aware of the fact that as a general thing the Saints in this district are poor in this world's goods and that times are hard; yet notwithstanding all this there are very few but what could help some to roll the good work forward. A great responsibility rests on us and we will surely be called to give an account of our stewardship while here. Now dear Saints, let us arouse to a sense of our duty, and put forth our best efforts to sustain the ministry that come among us as well as our resident elders, and by doing this we will encourage the conference to send more laborers into this part of the vineyard where the field is white to harvest and the laborers few. In bonds,
B. BEALL, Bishop's Agent.

GOOSE CREEK, West Virginia, May 21.

PASTORAL.

*To the Saints of the Eastern Mission, Greeting: Dear Brethren:—*The General Conference in its wisdom saw fit to assign me to labor in the Eastern mission again during the present conference year, and without increasing the list of laborers, it was out of the question to increase our ministerial force. Indeed, it seems almost miraculous, if not quite so, in view of the close times financially that have prevailed for a year, that the church should feel free to undertake to continue the laborers that are already in the field another year. Under the circumstances we should feel more than thankful for this favor, and manifest confidence, and faith. Hitherto we have wrought with the few, and we can do so another year and abide our time.

The ministry, whether under General Conference appointment or local, should lose no opportunity to advance the cause wherever they may chance to be. Be alive to the interest and success of the work.

The General Conference appointees are advised, as in former years, to move out and away from branch organizations as much as is practicable and preach the word among those who have never heard it, and thus widen the influence of the church. The recent revelation given at Lamoni gives emphasis to this method or plan as being the correct one.

There will be no change of appointees to "fields of labor" from last year, for the present. Those in charge last year are requested to continue in charge as per former appointment. Each should be diligent and energetic in the labor to which he is assigned; and not serve as men pleasers, but as you are to account to God when the evening draws nigh. The local ministry also and the membership should do all within their power to encourage and support the work in their respective communities and although we are few in number the conclusion of the present year's labor will prove that the Lord has wrought with us and given us a large fruitage of success. The missionary in charge will endeavor to be exemplary in the work of diligence, and meet with as many as it may be practicable during the year.

The Saints abroad should be encouraged and receive much consolation from the results of the recent General Conference. The conference was all that could have been desired by the most sensitive or exacting in point of success. The supposed alarming conflict that some seemed to feel, whether existing as real or imaginary, was disposed of in the most amicable manner, every vestige of opposition and distrust being swept away, and a cordial feeling and confidence was manifest and extended to all, of a most unqualified character. There is no question but the leading quorums of the church are in accord; and for aught the writer knows, all others, together with the membership. This is encouraging.

The church instead of becoming alarmed and lamenting over the existence of a conflict of opinion in church policies, etc., should feel encouraged and complimented in that the Lord has given her representatives who are capable of thought and holding views of their own and who are competent and have the courage to express them. It shows that they are not being lead along blindly and dominated by some master pope, who may in time, as has been done in the past, lead the church to shipwreck and destruction. The men of the church are jealous for her safety. They know the history of the past. The chief watchmen are loyal and respectful. Never worry and be discouraged over a matter of controversy and conflicts where certainty is not revealed. The time when the members of the Reorganization should become alarmed will be, should it ever come, when the conference denies to its members the right of discussion and the free expression of opinion in matters of church interests, and dictation supported by a blind, unreasoning, fanatical following takes their places. Let us be satisfied, contented, and sensible, then, and go on as of yore, in the safe way of divine direction and the theory of common consent, to success and triumph, in company with free, intelligent people who are capable of entertaining sentiments and views of their own and asserting them. The writer is happy over the present aspect of things for the church. The First Presidency are in a remarkably encouraging and pleasant mood. Haven't appeared to a better advantage for a long time, and the President seems about relieved from his old physical disability. He discoursed with ease and force on every occasion attempted during the conference.

With the work of another year before us, let us go forward cheerfully to the task, and the God of Saints sustain and give us success. My permanent address for the present, is Temple, Lake county, Ohio.

Respectfully,

W. H. KELLEY,
Missionary in charge.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 15, 1894.

*To the Saints of North and South Dakota, Dear Brethren and Sisters:—*As I am appointed to labor with you this conference year I hope to have your assistance in all that is right and proper for the opening up of the work and carrying it on to victory in every respect. I have several places of importance in North Dakota that I opened up last year that will require much of my time this year, and I shall hasten to them as fast as I can, so I hope none will get impatient. I am all alone and can only do one man's work. There are many things that make these States a very difficult field to labor in, more so than any I have ever worked in. I hope that all the members that are scattered through these States will write to me as soon as they see this notice, giving me the demands for work in each of your neighborhoods or towns as the case may be. I want the names of all the membership in my field of labor so I can make a record of the same and report them to the missionary in charge, Bro. A. H. Smith.

I am feeling well in the work and am sure that if I can have the cooperation of all we will meet with success and our heavenly Father will bless us together.

My address will be, Box 401, Pipestone, Minnesota. Please send postage stamp and you will get a prompt reply. Ever praying for Zion's weal I am,

Yours in bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS,

Sub Missionary in Charge.

MAGNOLIA, Minn., May 18, 1894.

To the Saints in Western Nebraska; Greeting:—I see by the last Herald that I am placed in charge of the above-named field, and, as I am not acquainted with its needs, I therefore request the district and branch officers with the scattered members who desire the assistance of, or can advantageously advise the missionaries, to correspond with me as soon as practicable. My permanent address is Netawaka, Kansas. As we all need the assistance of each other and understand the necessity of a united people, I hope an earnest effort will be made by all for the advancement of the cause we love. We see omens of good. The church has ascended the rugged hill of adversity till the glorious valley of peace and prosperity is beginning to come into view. So brethren, let us be diligent till the battle is over, victory won, and the crown of peace resting on our brows.

Your colaborer,

WARREN E. PEAK.

BROWNVILLE, Nebraska, May 18, 1894.

To my colaborers, and Saints in the Fremont and Nodaway districts:—Having been returned to this field again to labor with you the coming year in the interest of the great work intrusted to our care, I take pleasure in stating that I feel satisfied with our past labors of love together in the Master's cause, and for the liberal manner in which I have been sustained among you: both in a spiritual and temporal sense, for which I pray that the blessing of God may rest upon you, and be with you henceforth and forever.

As we have assumed the duties of the coming year, brethren, let us take hold with renewed energy and zeal trusting in the precious promises of the Master, and I am fully persuaded that the Spirit of promise will rest upon us in greater power, helping us in the discharge of the important duties incumbent upon us. Already the Spirit has been powerfully manifested in presenting the word and in testimony.

The field is truly great and laborers few, and the grain ripe for the sickle. Now is the time to reap while the day (for us) shall last. We are pleased to state that in this district all, or nearly so, are alive to the interest of the work. The Shenandoah branch is in first-class working order. God is graciously blessing his Saints here with faith, wisdom, knowledge, combined with the gifts and graces of the gospel as promised. Bro. Leadingham, the president, is an active, efficient worker, and with the helps and governments of God ordained, our hopes are brighter for the future than ever before. The Plum Hollow branch is large and its members very much scattered, still they are doing the best they can. The officers, with Bro. Leeka as president, are not easily discouraged. They are men who are strictly honest, setting good examples for the truth before all men with whom they have to do. We believe the work will still grow, and many be added to this branch who shall be eternally saved. We are safe in making the same statements in reference to the Elm Creek, Glenwood, and Farm Creek branches. The officers especially and members in general are of sterling worth, living exemplary lives before the world, and have an influence for good in communities where they live. Hamburg or Union has greatly revived through the labors of J. B. Heide. This branch has waded through deep waters of trouble and sorrow, and the faithful ones have been severely tried, but thanks be to God they have stood the test and have now come up once more to the help of the Lord. Bro. Simon Bechstead has taken hold anew, and opened and fitted up a large hall for the preaching of the word. Several have been added by baptism and the house well filled with attentive listeners. We are hopeful for the future of this branch. The Nodaway district is not one whit behind in good works. They turn out en masse to the district conferences and come to the front nobly and bravely with all their powers of life and being for this glorious cause; and we hope that with Bro. J. R. Evans and M. P. Madison and the local force of this district that much good may be accomplished.

It may be thought we have written eulogistically, but we think these are worthy. May God speed the work, is the continual prayer of your colaborer and fellow servant for Christ.

HENRY KEMP.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, May 23.

Her remains were interred in the Evergreen cemetery at Blenheim, by the side of her sister, Margaret Brown. Funeral sermon preached by Elder A. ITEMS OF INTEREST.

BERLIN, May 19.—The King of Wurtemberg, William II., has caused a sensation in many circles by coming out with an open declaration against the policy of readmitting the members of the Society of Jesus into Germany. In receiving deputations from the various synods the King expressed the opinion that the Bundesrath would not confirm the repeal of the anti-Jesuit law. "That," he said, "is not only my personal attitude but it is that of my government towards this question." The ultramontane journal, Germania, characterizes this statement as being "incredible and monstrous." The Hamburger Nachrichten, noting the rarity of a sovereign expressing himself so decidedly, says it takes it for granted that the King was accurately informed before committing himself.

It may be added that it is well known that the inhabitants of the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha are opposed to the repeal of the anti-Jesuit law, and it is believed Prussia's opinion remains the same as when Chancellor von Caprivi, as the Premier of Prussia, declared the return of the Jesuits was an impossibility. Bavaria is understood to be of the same mind as Prussia, and several of the smaller States of the German Empire are known to be preparing bills forbidding the return of the Jesuits to their respective territories.

ROME, May 19.—The opposition groups have arranged to vote against the war estimates, their object being to create a cabinet crisis.

LONDON, May 19.—A dispatch from Paris says the police have discovered a plot to explode a bomb in the building in which the guillotine is stored.

BERLIN, May 19.—The International Miners' Congress has fixed upon Paris for the next meeting of the congress in 1895.

The following are from numerous reports of damage done by frost during the late cold spell. Wisconsin and Michigan points report in similar strain:—

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 19.—Dispatches show that many Kansas points were visited by frost last night. The frost also extended to the Cherokee Strip. Great damage was done to garden truck.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 19.—A light frost fell in this vicinity last night, but no damage resulted. Reports received at the railroad offices and by commission men are that in counties north of here and in Kansas and Nebraska the fall was sufficiently large to injure growing vegetables and fruit. Small fruits sustained the greatest injury. Towns in Kansas along the Grand Island road report the heaviest frost.

OMAHA, Neb., May 19.—The "black frost" last night did an immense amount of damage to early vegetables in the eastern part of this State and Western Iowa. The early potatoes and tomato vines were hit hard. Reports from other points go to show that like damage has been done. Lincoln reports a heavy frost and all garden truck killed; potatoes about gone, grape vines killed. Shenandoah reports a heavy frost and great damage to vines and vegetable gardens. Abilene, Kansas, reports a heavy frost; corn, garden truck cut down, wheat, rye, and oats probably hurt.

DECATUR, Ill., May 19.—Ice formed in Decatur last night. Sweet potatoes, beans, strawberries, flowers, and corn were blighted. Corn wilted and blackened to the ground was brought in by farmers to-day. The wind has gone down, and it is feared that frost will be more damaging in effect to-night. Fruit raisers will burn stumps and logs to-night to save the strawberries if possible.

FORT DODGE, Ia., May 19.—There was a sharp freeze last night, and it made an end of all tender vegetables, fruits, and plants. Some farmers were plowing corn, but the crop was cut down and must start again.

FARIBAULT, Minn., May 19.—Heavy frost fell during last night. Grain that had grown three inches high was stricken down. Garden fruit and crops lying along the lowlands are badly damaged. White frost covered the sidewalks about the city quite thick. Ice formed in exposed places.

YANKTON, S. D., May 19.—Frost killed some garden vegetation in this vicinity this morning, and reports from localities north of Yankton indicate that vegetables are frozen. The Russian thistle was killed in all sections visited by the frost.

Snow fell in portions of Kentucky and Tennessee, May 19. Crops were delayed but not destroyed.

TOURS, France, May 19.—A terrible hail-storm lasting an hour swept over this city yesterday evening and did immense damage to the crops in the vicinity.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 20.—Reports from the lake shore counties show that there have been frosts there yesterday and to-day, and it is feared the crops have been severely damaged. The fruit crop in the entire tier of lake counties is ruined. Frost is reported from a number of inland points. In some places ice formed. The season opened so early that wheat is well advanced, and the extent of the damage will not be known until detail reports come in to-morrow.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 21.—The heavy rains of the last few days have swollen all the rivers and streams of Western Pennsylvania to flood-tides. Boats, bridges, houses, and other property have been destroyed. Seven lives have been lost already. The rivers are still rising and the damage is becoming worse hourly. The cellars of all the business and dwelling houses along the banks of the streams are under water and people are moving their goods to upper rooms. Some of the timid are leaving their houses and seeking places of safety on higher ground. Part of the Exposition Building is inundated and the league baseball park is out of sight.

The present flood is similar to that of 1889 in many respects. For the last three days it has been raining heavily in the Conemaugh Valley. The Stony Creek reached its highest point yesterday morning and after that time began to recede, and by night it had fallen several feet, so that no serious damage was apprehended. But in the evening a heavy rain began in the Conemaugh Valley which continued until about ten o'clock, when a cloudburst occurred near Ebensburg. The valley in which the vast volume of water descended is a tributary of the Conemaugh, and shortly after the cloudburst the Conemaugh had swollen to many times its normal size.

The volume of water reached Johnstown about three o'clock this morning, and was accompanied by wholesale destruction. The flood was first felt at South Fork, where numerous small buildings were swept away.

Farther on in the course of the stream the water undermined the tracks of the Pennsylvania road.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., May 21.—Every foot of ground in the city is from four to eight feet under water, and much of it is fifteen feet below the surface of the stream. Many of the families are homeless. Hundreds more expect to be driven from their houses, in the second stories of which they have found refuge, before daylight, and unless the flood ceases there is no power on earth that can avert a greater disaster than has already come upon the helpless city. The loss of the property cannot even be approximated until the waters recede and accounts are cast up.

The gas and electric light plants are under water and the city is without lights. Every one is desperate, terror-stricken, and discouraged.

Just after midnight the big log boom gave way with a crash and went rolling and tumbling down the stream. As it passed the four bridges below the city the logs crashed and banged against the piers with a roar that could be heard for miles. The bridge at Montgomery street was left intact, as was also the Pennsylvania road's span across the river. The Market street bridge was carried away, and three of the four spans of the Maynard street structure succumbed to the rush of water.

DANSVILLE, N. Y., May 21.—The flood now being experienced is the worst that has occurred in the Genesee Valley for years. The water is two feet above the high water mark of the great freshet five years ago. As far as the eye can see down the valley is a vast expanse of water. Immense trees torn from the banks of the raging streams and all sorts of timbers and wreckage are floating everywhere. The destruction of growing and newly planted crops is complete, and the damage the farmers have sustained will run up into the hundreds of thousands. The Bradner Creek at Cumminsville has swept everything along its banks, carrying down acres of rich farming land and depositing the soil in the creeks in the valley below. The Canaseraga Valley has suffered terribly. Bridges are carried away and the main roadway is cut out and washed away for rods in many places, rendering it impassable. Great damage has been done in Stony Brook Glen, and the gorge is dammed in several places to a great height with trees and flood wood. The Dansville and Mount Morris road is under water for miles and traffic is suspended. The bridge below town, an immense wood structure, is under water and fears are entertained that it is becoming undermined and will be swept away. The situation in the valley is deplorable and it will take a long time to recover from the effects of the terrible flood that now prevails.

The above are sample reports from the flooded districts of Western and Eastern Pennsylvania, Western New York, and portions of Virginia. The loss to railroad, public, and private property is very great.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 22.—The danger from the flood is past, and the residents of the lowlands of Pittsburg and Allegheny retired to their beds in the water-soaked houses to-night to sleep soundly after their vigil of last night. Both the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers are now falling. The highest point reached was at midnight last night, when the Allegheny registered 25½ feet. Since then it has been falling as rapidly as it rose.

The Pennsylvania railroad officials here are still battling with the forces of the flood. Trains are running irregularly by way of the Huntingdon and Broad Top and the Baltimore and Ohio lines and it will be noon to-morrow before the main line is open for travel again. It is estimated that there are 1,000 men at work repairing the damage done in and about Conemaugh and Gallitzin. It is now estimated that the damage on the Pittsburg division done by the flood will reach $75,000.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., May 22.—The water has entirely subsided and all danger is past. The losses, aggregating $125,000, are as follows:—

The Pennsylvania railroad company, $50,000; H. Swank & Co., $3,500; Woodvale property owners, $6,000; Gautier Steel Department, $5,000; Johnstown business men, $15,000; Pennsylvania Traffic company, $10,000; City of Johnstown, $10,000; McConaugh & Tate, $6,000; Cambria Iron Company, $5,000; other losses, $10,000.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., May 22.—The river is now going down rapidly and about one half the flooded territory is out of water. This is in the center of the city. The lower portions east and west are yet under water, and, as the rain that has continued unceasingly for forty-eight hours did not stop falling until today, the river is likely to keep up during the next twenty-four hours.

The foreign anarchistic element among striking coal miners at Spring Valley, Illinois, refused to permit more than fifteen men to go to work in the burning coal shafts. Two hundred men would be required to extinguish the fires. The English speaking miners are overruled in the matter by the foreign element.

Maryland miners say they will resist the introduction of colored labor in the mines. A colored miner was slain by strikers at Birmingham, Alabama, May 20.

The coke strikers have given up the contest in Western Pennsylvania and returned to work. All the plants are running with increased forces.

Ohio and Pennsylvania operators have agreed upon a scale of wages and will resist the demands of the miners' union. With 3,000,000 men out of work they claim to be able to secure abundant help to operate their plants. The strike to date is extending, and violence against those attempting to work has been resorted to at numerous points. The coal supply is rapidly diminishing and a number of mills and factories have suspended operations.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—General Coxey, Marshal Brown, and Jones of Coxey's army were each sentenced to twenty days imprisonment and five dollars fine for treading on the grass of the capitol grounds.

Coxey has issued Bulletin No. 5 to the "American Patriots of 1894," in which he gives a highly colored account of the arrest and conviction of the leaders in Washington. The bulletin concludes with an appeal for money and supplies, and urges his followers to hold more meetings and in every way urge Senators and Congressmen to vote for the Coxey bill.

QUINCY, Ill., May 21.—Kelley's armada hove in sight three miles up the river at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Boats were lashed together and pulled by a steamer. The army will encamp to-night just below the river bridge. Kelley spoke at the town hall to-night.

CINCINNATI, O., May 21.—Gen. Fry's army is all in tents to-night at Cullom's Station within the precincts of Riverside. Mayor Wright of the village says they must move to-morrow of their own accord or by force. Capt. George Raymond, owner of a tow boat, has offered to take them to Pittsburg in coal barges for $325. The Central Labor Union of this city is trying to raise that sum of money.

OMAHA, Neb., May 21.—The Quartermaster General Breckinridge and Col. Callahan of the Scheffler industrial army and two companies of that legion reached Omaha before daybreak this morning on Union Pacific box cars. Mayor Bemis, on being informed of his election as National President of the United States industrial army at the Des Moines convention, declined to say whether he would accept or reject it.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., May 21.—Two men arrested yesterday for vagrancy held lieutenants' commissions in the Northwestern division of the industrial army, and say they are advance scouts to secure food for several thousand coming from farther West.

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 21.—Gen. Jennings' division of Gen. Fry's army of the commonweal marched out of Frankfort this morning, but their limbs soon grew tired in the muddy Kentucky roads, and four miles from this city the army camped for the night. Gen. Jennings and his orator, O. P. Ballard, "the Hoosier Kid," returned to the city to-night and held a meeting in the court-house addressing a fair sized crowd.

CORNING, Ia., May 21.—Gen. Kelsey's Omaha contingent of the commonweal army arrived here this afternoon.

The Cochran commonweal army of Chicago has issued an appeal to the country for support. It also calls upon all the unemployed, homeless, and destitute men of Chicago and the United States at large to be in Washington, July 4. It instructs them to get there any way they can; to go organized and unorganized, the object of going being "to show our alleged servants in the Senate and House of Representatives that we are in earnest and must have immediate as well as permanent relief." Cochran says if he ever gets to Washington he will demand "that the present government be set aside and a more equitable arrangement of production and distribution, based on coöperation, be devised to take its place."

King Alexander of Servia has suspended the new constitution and restored the old one of 1869. It is a high-handed measure and has deprived him of the friendship of Russia.

The French ministry under M. Casimir Perrier has been defeated in the Chamber of Deputies and will resign. Political interest centers in the election of a new President to succeed President Carnot, which takes place in October.

The United States war vessels San Francisco and New York are at Bluefields, Nicaragua, to protect American interests in the complicated condition of affairs prevailing there.

A number of new cardinals were created at Rome on May 21.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church will hear the appeal of Dr. Henry Smith who was charged with heresy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 21.—The steamship Gaelic arrived from Hong Kong and Yokohama to-day, bringing China news up to April 18. In a fire which broke out at Schuch-Eng April 1 in Annui Province 2,500 houses were burned. The officials of the province have issued a proclamation remitting taxes and sanctioning relief from the provincial granaries. This was not done, however, until cruel tortures had been inflicted upon the thousands of starving people in the effort to extort from them the taxes remitted by the Emperor eight months ago. The relief given now is inadequate, as greater distress prevails, there having been no rain for five months.

BRUSSELS, May 22.—A treaty concerning the Congo Free State has been concluded between King Leopold and the British Minister at Belgium. The King has recognized the British sphere of influence as indicated in the Anglo-German treaty of July 1, 1890, and abandons to England a small strip of territory in the region of the Lower Congo and Lake Tanganyika, thus giving England access northward to the Nile. In exchange England grants the King until the end of his reign the left bank of the Nile up to the seventh degree. This is considered the most important African treaty concluded for many years, and is a master stroke of diplomacy on the part of King Leopold, as it shuts out France from the Nile basin and places the Congo Free State under the obligation of fighting the Soudan dervishes.

Striking miners indulged in a riot near Evansville, Indiana, May 23. Two were killed and five seriously wounded.

One thousand armed miners, mostly foreigners, assembled at Danville, Illinois, and stopped miners at work, exacting pledges from them to act with the striking miners. The Sheriff's deputies were powerless to resist them. The Sheriff has made a call for troops.

May 24.—Striking miners, 1,500 in number, attacked the Sheriff and his deputies who were guarding property of the La Salle Coal Company. A hand to hand conflict ensued in which many shots were exchanged. A number of each side were badly injured. Miners at Centralia, Illinois, damaged mining property amounting to $5,000. Trouble exists at other Illinois mines. Governor Altgeld has ordered State militia to La Salle.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 24.—The long-threatened attack by the striking miners on the pits of the Washington Coal and Coke company at Stickle Hollow, in the Fourth Pool District, on the Monongahela River, was made this morning. The fight was one of the fiercest in the history of the mining troubles in Western Pennsylvania, and throughout the coke region the situation it has developed is one of intense excitement and uncertainty.

To-night four strikers are lying dead and double that number are badly wounded, some of them mortally. Thomas Kenan of Wood's Run is the only American killed in the encounter with the deputies. The other dead men are Slavs. The wounded men who fell under the first volley from the deputies were taken off the field by the retreating strikers, and the actual number of wounded is not definitely known.

LA LIBERTAD, Salvador, May 24.—There has been fierce fighting since May 15, between the national troops and the rebels. A series of desperate battles has been fought, with severe losses on both sides. More than 3,000 troops have been killed and wounded. The crisis has been reached in the struggle between the opposing forces, and decisive battles are now being fought. The United States warship Bennington arrived here two days ago, with all on board well.

The Presbyterian Church South has declined overtures of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church North to unite: "The blessing of God having rested upon our church in her separate existence and work, the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, in session at Nashville, Tennessee, with affectionate fraternal greetings to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, in session at Saratoga Springs, New York, and wishing it Godspeed in every good word and work, regards it as unwise to reopen the question of organic union."

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., May 25.—Eleven men dead with a report of other fatalities marks the first day of hostilities here, though a pitched battle has not yet taken place. Eleven men started to work this morning in the Strong mine on Battle Mountain. Shortly afterwards a large party of strikers blew up the shaft house with powder, causing a loss of $25,000. They then dropped 100 pounds of giant powder down the shaft, which was also exploded, killing all the inmates. The strikers then fortified themselves and await the efforts of hired armed deputies to dislodge them. Reinforcements to the deputies will increase their number to 1,100. They will make an effort to dislodge the strikers. A reign of terror prevails here and at Victor. Martial law may be declared.

The largest room in the world unbroken by pillars is a drill hall in St. Petersburg, 620 x 150 feet.

The first sea fight mentioned in history was between the Corinthians and Corcyzeans, B. C. 664.

The first printed edition of the whole Bible was issued in 1517.

WHY IS IT?

That Hercules Gas and Gasoline Engines are held by the public in so much higher estimation than other engines? The parties using these engines, and their name is legion, are the ones who can best answer this question. They well know the ease and promptness with which these engines are started and the very little care they require to keep them running month after month with the most perfect satisfaction. They run without a spark battery, which is admitted to be unreliable. The simple ignition tubes of the Hercules Engines are far better than those of other makes. If you want second-hand engines of other makes at cheap rates we can supply you. We have a number taken in trade and cannot take any more until these are realized on. VOICE OF WARNING AND INSTRUCTION TO ALL PEOPLE;

OR AN INTRODUCTION TO THE FAITH AND DOCTRINE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

This work in its graphic review of the prophecies and history of God's dealings with his people in past ages, together with the abundant proofs concerning the work of the latter days, the gathering and restoration of Israel to their ancient home in Palestine, is a book for the times. The author presents the prophetic evidences of the restoration of the gospel in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," showing the evidences in favor of a restoration of primitive Christianity and the organization of the apostolic church with its apostleship and priesthood—its authority—its powers and gifts. This publication has always been a favorite one among inquirers for the truth. 150 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

ENGLISH CLERGYMEN APPEAL.

SELDOM, if ever before, have the Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of England, received such a rebuke as that embodied in the Appeal addressed to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and signed by over four hundred and sixty clergymen who own his Grace as their spiritual head. The Appeal, moderately and respectfully worded as it is, is an emphatic condemnation of the attitude assumed by the Spiritual Peers towards the Parish Council's Bill, and contains an indictment of their action none the less crushing that it is couched in dignified terms. The memorialists begin by saying that "we cannot refrain from expressing our pain and anxiety at the relation in which the National Church of Christ in England finds itself standing towards the Act of Parliament by which it is intended to endow both our agricultural and our London population with larger and richer opportunities for the full exercise of citizenship." They go on to express thankfulness that no direct opposition was offered to the second reading of the measure, but they feel it to be deplorable "that it should have come to appear as if the church had no interest or concern in the measure, except that of excluding from its action its own private properties, or of narrowing and hampering the rights which it concedes."

That this feeling does exist in the country there can be no shadow of a doubt, and that there is every justification for the existence of the feeling is due primarily to the speeches and votes of the Spiritual Peers when the measure was in Committee in the House of Lords. Political memories may be short, but the people have not forgotten how the Archbishop of Canterbury himself attempted to prevent the use of schoolrooms for parish meetings, the success of which attempt would have entailed the holding of the meetings in the public houses. Neither is it forgotten that the whole tone of the Episcopal contributions to the discussion of the measure was one of arrogant contempt for the people over whom they are supposed to exercise pastoral sway. In a word, the whole energies of the legislative representatives of the Established Church were directed, as the appeal sets forth, to the narrowing and hampering of the rights which the measure concedes. But the memorialists do not confine their attention to the past, which they deplore. They look to the future to remove some of the evils which the Episcopal action has brought upon their church's opportunities for usefulness in the rural districts. They earnestly trust that the church may be enabled "to prove itself keen, not merely to secure itself against a possible wrong, but still more to give positive support to legitimate aspirations; alert to the inevitable wants of the newly organized bodies; eager and generous to meet their convenience out of the resources which it has at its disposal."

We can well imagine that the perusal of these scathing comments on the attitude which the Church of England has hitherto adopted towards popular aspirations will cause considerable consternation in high places. But the signatories are too numerous and influential and their position is too strong for them to be ignored or to be coerced into silence by an Archiepiscopal frown. Whatever the nature of the reply vouchsafed to them from the palace at Lambeth, each, in his own sphere, may be reckoned upon to use his influence along the lines advocated in the appeal. The document, indeed, is of historic importance. It marks the dawn of a new era, and though the little leaven may be long in leavening the whole lump, it will do so sooner or later. In the meantime we await with interest the Archbishop's answer to the whole document, but especially to the last clause, in which the signatories say, "We anxiously look to your Grace, and to your brethren on the bench, to make it clear that the Church of England can quicken national life as well as warn it; can guide it forward as well as check it when it is at fault. We turn to you to determine whether, in the future, the main body of churchmen shall regard this enlargement of local liberties, which has now become law, as an encroachment and a menace, or whether they shall not rather give to its helpful working the assistance of a frank and strenuous coöperation."—Leeds Mercury.

BOOM IN MODERN JERUSALEM.

THE report of Mr. Dickson, British Consul at Jerusalem, on the trade of his district, contains several items of interest. Trade with Great Britain in 1893 showed some falling off as compared with 1892, but notwithstanding there has been a steady increase for several years past.

The Jaffa-Jerusalem railway hardly appears to carry as much traffic as might have been expected. There is a daily passenger train each way and also two goods trains. Still a considerable amount of merchandise is conveyed by camels between the two places, on account of both the Jaffa and Jerusalem railway stations being situated at some distance from the towns. The railway company, in order to give further facilities to merchants, employ camels for the transport of goods from the warehouses to the stations. It is rumored that the line will be prolonged to Nablous and Gaza.

Buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity of Jerusalem, and the city is fast outgrowing its former limits. On the western side houses have increased so rapidly within the last few years that quite a large suburb has arisen where formerly fields and vineyards existed. Every available piece of land is now being bought up by private persons or by benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter. The latest enterprise suggested is the placing of a steam launch and lighters on the Dead Sea. If this were done the produce of Moab, which is a country rich in cereals, fruit, and cattle, could then be ferried across in a few hours in the lighters in tow of the steam launch instead of having to be conveyed by caravans round the north or south end of the Dead Sea, entailing a journey of from four to five days.—St. James Gazette.

Five Presbyterian missionaries started from New York for Brazil last month to take up their abode and work there.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

DEATH OF APOSTLE T. W. SMITH.

AGAIN has the militant portion of the Church of Christ been visited by the silent messenger, and from its foremost ranks been borne one whose name has become familiar to thousands. To those who have been acquainted with the condition of Bro. Thomas W. Smith during the last twenty-two months, the announcement of his demise will bring no surprise. Since the hour when the news of his affliction first reached us, nearly two years ago, we have had no hope of his complete recovery; but we sorrow with the church, nevertheless, over the loss of one whose devotion to the cause of truth has been amply attested by labor, sacrifice, endurance, and suffering in its interest; and we rejoice in the assurance that the Author of that truth has approved and will abundantly reward the service rendered.

It may not be ours to write lengthy eulogies of the departed; but we can safely and without mental reservation say that the church has never had within its fold a worker whose zeal was more clearly evidenced and whose talent was more freely consecrated to the advancement of right as comprehended by him. From first to last his career has been marked by unwearying toil and a jealous regard for the prevalence and maintainance of principles understood by him to be correct. His preaching work for the church began on the evening of the very day of his entrance thereinto, and if from that day to the time when disease paralyzed his powers, he ever faltered in faith or dodged an encounter with the enemies of the gospel, or showed unwillingness to aggressively present the evidences of our common religion to the world, the knowledge of such fact has failed to reach us. Human he was and fallible, as are we all; but he exhibited no desire or faculty to conceal the weaknesses of which he was conscious. When encountering opposition to views presented by him or acts performed, his opponents had only to show good cause or ground for their position, in order to secure frank recognition, confession, and restitution at his hands. The thought that any action of his had given offense to a brother or was liable to prove hurtful brought him keen distress of mind and prompted him to labor diligently to undo or make amends instantly.

During his life within the church he baptized over twelve hundred persons, and quite a number of them have become prominent ministers who in their turn have baptized hundreds more. When called upon to leave his native land and sail for the distant islands connected with the Australasian mission, he cheerfully accepted the appointment and, with his companion, hastened to proclaim the tidings of the restoration to the natives. In fact no sacrifice seemed too great for him to make when assured that God required it at his hands. Only by close association with him could some of his chief excellencies be discovered, and by some to whom they were unknown, he was underestimated. For twenty-six years he served the church as an active minister, and by the intimation of the Spirit to the body at its last assembling we are fully warranted in believing that had he lived he would still be worthy of place as an apostle, or in dying he would find place with God and Christ.

His record is dotted throughout with evidences of divine interposition in miraculous ways, and few, if any could point to more striking and marvelous manifestations in answer to prayer than he. When the stroke that interfered with his activity came he was wearing the harness and pushing forward at the bidding of the church in hope of again raising and maintaining the standard of divine truth in far off Australia. This interference, however, was acknowledged later by him to have been providential, and to have been sanctified to his spiritual gain in some respects. When asked by his fellow Apostle, Bro. Joseph Luff, two days before his death, as to his acquiescence in the seeming appointment unto death, he had no power to articulate, his organs of speech having been paralyzed, but he signified by motion of his head that he was satisfied and all was well. Naturally his inclination to live was strong, but with a resignation which well becomes a child of God he bowed to the Father's behest and quietly waited for the escort to accompany his spirit to the realm of peace and repose—the paradise of Saints.

On the morning of May 22, while seated in a chair at his home, he became drowsy, and when arousing himself found it impossible to speak to his wife who stepped from an adjoining room and asked what he desired. At her advice he rose, after several efforts, and walked into his bedroom and lay down. His speech soon returned and, supposing he had fully recovered, he rose and returned to the chair in which he had been sitting and began to converse freely with Bro. Joseph Luff, who had meanwhile been summoned. In less than half an hour his speech began again to fail him and, at Bro. Luff's advice, he returned to bed. Soon his tongue became completely paralyzed and his throat partially so, making it difficult to swallow any nourishment. His right arm and limb, which had been his entire dependence for exercise for nearly two years, lost their ability to serve in less than a day after, and only by the movement of his eyes and head, in response to questions, could indications of his continuing consciousness be found thereafter. This condition continued until two o'clock on the morning of Sunday, May 27, when he breathed his life away as peacefully as a child passes into slumber.

During his last illness he was attended almost constantly by Bro. Luff and a number of the local brethren and sisters, and by excellent fortune or providence, Apostle H. C. Smith stopped off on his way southward to his field of labor, just in time to see our brother alive, and to receive a request from Sister Smith to preach the funeral sermon, which request he effectually honored on the afternoon of Monday, the 28th.

Never was clearer evidence of reverence and affection shown by the Saints of Independence towards one of their number. Early on Sunday morning the church building was draped by willing and devoted hands, impelled by hearts that mourned the loss of a brother and minister beloved. The facing of the entire gallery was covered with the emblems of mourning, and tastily arranged drapery covered the pulpit, the organ, the iron columns, and conspicuous places on the angles and flat surface of the walls, extending in beautiful designs into the alcove occupied by the choir and presenting a scene the most expressive and impressive in its way that we have ever witnessed. Over one hundred yards of material were employed in this work of appropriate decoration, and all day on Sunday the attendants at church were permitted to read in this artistic arrangement of pending fabrics the affection and esteem of the Saints for one whose voice was to be heard in their assemblies no more.

At two o'clock p. m. on Monday the funeral services were conducted. Apostle Heman C. Smith was assisted by Apostle Joseph Luff and High Councilor John A. Robinson. The pallbearers were selected with a view to representing the various positions in the priesthood as well as the membership. No one of the First Presidency or Seventy being available, those quorums were not represented. All of the pallbearers occupied place upon the stand, ranged in order on either side of the speaker, in the following line of representation: Joseph Luff for the Apostles; John A. Robinson for the High Council and High Priests; Roderick May for the High Priests and the Bishopric, he being the Bishop's agent at Independence; John W. Brackenbury for the Elders; Geo. E. Ross for the Priests; George Bartholomew for the Teachers; John A. McGuire for the Deacons; and Thomas James for the membership.

The choir sang two beautiful and appropriate anthems. Permission had been given one of the photographers of the city to locate his camera in the rear end of the gallery, and just as the choir rose to sing the preacher and pallbearers also rose for a moment, and the scene was instantly reproduced in such form as will make it possible for all who wish to look upon it in miniature hereafter. Hymn No. 896 was sung as the closing hymn, it having been composed by Brother Smith. The beautiful casket containing the body of our brother rested upon pedestals before the pulpit, and upon it and before it were arranged a few pretty and suggestive floral emblems. Seated upon the front seat, by the side of the sorrowing widow, was Bro. Alexander McCallum, who kindly acted as escort to her, and by her other side sat Ethel, the little girl adopted by Bro. Smith when in Australia and brought by him to America. Back of these and all around were surrounding Saints of all ages, who had gathered to pay a last tribute to the memory of one whom God had honored and blessed in life and taken to himself at death.

The sermon was from the words found in Matthew 19: 27, 28, 29, and consisted of a review of the life of Bro. Smith and a tribute to the many excellencies that adorned his life, as well as words of comfort to those now mourning his departure. It was a good effort, and was well received. The funeral cortege was long, extending the length of three city blocks as it moved along. At the grave Bro. Luff offered a few remarks and then closed the services with prayer. The company waited until the grave was filled and then solemnly wended their way to the waiting vehicles in which they were borne back to the activities of life from which they had been called for a few hours to pay honor to the dead.

Another vacancy has thus occurred in the Quorum of the Twelve, and the loss will be keenly felt. Bro. Smith was made secretary of the quorum immediately after his reception, and his services in that position were performed with skill and accuracy and the records bear evidence of the jealous care bestowed upon their contents in preparation. We deeply sympathize with the quorum in its loss and with the church in general; but while we think of the vacancy here that death has created we shall be led to transfer our thoughts to another sphere, where labor is continued under more restful and happy conditions, and rejoice that another has been added to the list on that side who has prepared himself to enjoy to the full the bliss of his surroundings. God is "too wise to err, and too good to be unkind." To his wisdom we reverently bow and exclaim, Amen, O Lord; thy will be done!

We herewith subjoin a brief synopsis of the leading items in the funeral discourse: Apostle Thomas Wood Smith was the son of Henry and Mary Ann Smith, and was born in Germantown, Pennsylvania, on the 7th day of March, 1838. In the year 1853, when but fifteen years of age, he joined what was known as the Independent Christian or New Light Church, of Philadelphia, and when eighteen years of age began to study for the ministry. At nineteen his preaching work began, but hearing, later, the doctrine of the "Disciples" he became convinced that baptism was for the remission of sins, and after convincing a fellow minister of the correctness of that idea he was by him immersed for that purpose. Some time afterwards he heard Elder Miles Grant and other leading ministers of the "Adventist Christian Church" preach, and became a partial believer in the soul-sleeping philosophy of that body, though rejecting some of the other cardinal points as held by its votaries.

On December 31, 1858, he married Helen Marr Pierce, and in 1861 moved into Illinois. Here his labors continued as a minister in several counties, with encouraging success. His views on religion and the kingdom of God differed from those of any society with which he had yet come in contact; but he presented them with zeal and fervor in harmony with his conscientious convictions. He was in doubt upon several questions, and was a seeker after light, showing himself willing always to compare doctrines with men of differing thought, with a view to accepting anything that might appeal more certainly to his sense of right and loyalty to the Scriptures.

Accepting a call from Iowa, he moved into that State, was ordained an elder, and became one of the organizers of what was known as the "Iowa Association of the Church of God," for which he acted as Secretary and State Evangelist, continuing his work in this capacity till March 4, 1866. It was while thus acting that he first met Elders Jason W. Briggs and I. L. Rogers, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. These men attended his meetings and were led by what they heard and saw to believe that the preacher was honest, but like Apollos, needed to be instructed in the things of God more perfectly. They therefore assumed the role of Aquila and Priscilla, and "expounded the way of God" to him, finding in him a willing hearer, though an able disputant. The friendly discussions that followed led our brother to inquire of God and receive light concerning the truth of the story they told about the restored gospel. About three o'clock on the morning of March 13, 1866, (as stated in his autobiography,) he heard a voice above him, quoting the words: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call," — followed by the question, "Have you received the Holy Ghost?" He answered the question, and a dialogue ensued, which convinced him that the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, by authorized ministers of God, was necessary, as also was the church, in order to salvation.

After this interview with what to him seemed a heavenly agent, he approached Elder Briggs with questions upon the topics engaging his thought, and from the Scriptures as used by Elder Briggs he was convinced of the correctness of the claims made for a latter-day restoration and the position of the Reorganized Church. This resulted in his baptism by Elder Briggs on the 14th day of March, 1866. He was ordained an elder the same day and began his preaching work the same evening. His wife followed him into the church within a week and proved an excellent helper through subsequent years of missionary toil and sacrifice.

At the April Conference of the same year he was ordained to the office of a seventy, which office he filled creditably for seven years, at the expiration of which time he was called and ordained to the office of an apostle in the Quorum of Twelve at the April Conference of 1873. Apostle Jason W. Briggs officiated in all three of the ordinations received.

The ministerial labor of T. W. Smith extended into the Northern, Southern, Eastern, and Western States—from ocean to ocean; thence across the Pacific to the Society Islands and to Australia. This latter mission was taken in 1884 and continued six years. While on this mission his wife contracted the disease which ended in her death December 3, 1891. Four children had been given them, but all had years before preceded her to the paradise of the good. By the action of the General Conference of April, 1892, Bro. Smith was again appointed to Australia, and in July following started on the long journey, reaching Salt Lake City, Saturday, July 9. Here he halted to visit Bro. Alexander H. Smith, who was then operating there, and to take a look at the chief city of the Utah Mormons. On the day following his arrival there he was invited by Bro. Alexander H. Smith to preach in the little chapel and consented, delivering two excellent discourses, one at eleven a. m. and the other at 7: 30 p. m.

After the close of the evening service he walked with Brn. E. Pettit and Ethan Barrows towards the residence of the latter, where he was to remain for the night. Just as he turned to enter the gateway leading to the house he suddenly, without warning to himself or signal to others, fell to the ground under a stroke of paralysis. Bro. A. H. Smith was quickly summoned and Dr. Benedict followed, who pronounced the case a hopeless one, giving twenty-four hours as the extreme limit of his life. Under the administration of the elders, however, he received a blessing from our heavenly Father, consciousness returned, and in a couple of weeks thereafter he was brought home to Independence by Bro. A. H. Smith, who with Bro. Joseph Luff had waited hourly upon him while he remained in Salt Lake City. His entire left side continued powerless and for a long time his speech was indistinct. After some months, however, his articulation became distinct and he cherished a hope that in time the use of his left arm and limb would return; which hope, however, was never realized, except to a very limited degree. He received sufficient help to enable him to walk short distances, but weariness and languor invariably followed any effort in that direction.

About the time of his starting for Australia he began corresponding with Sister Sarah Lookabill of Oakland, California, whom he expected to meet when reaching that city, and in due time to marry, if such thought proved to be mutually agreeable. This meeting was of course prevented by the occurrence at Salt Lake; but the affection that prompted their mutual hope was not lessened in Sister Lookabill by the intrusion of this unwelcome visitor, as was evidenced, when in December following she left her home in California and came to Independence to marry him and assume the burden of caring for him the remainder of his days. The ceremony that made them one was solemnized at the residence of Elder J. W. Brackenbury, December 4, 1892, by Elder John A. Robinson. Since that time Sister Smith has demonstrated the genuineness of the affection that she avowed at the marriage altar. By his side she watched and for his comfort she ministered, hailing every sign of improvement with delight and detecting every indication of failing vigor with anxiety and sorrow. At times her hope was strengthened, only to be weakened again however by some unmistakable symptom of returning weakness.

His hope of returning health never seemed to waver, notwithstanding the recurring indications of failing vitality, till a short time before the last and fatal stroke fell upon him. When he read the paragraph referring to himself in the recent revelation to the church, he became impressed with the thought that his days were numbered; but took comfort from the intimation that if such should prove to be the case, God would take him to himself, which was far better. His last conversation was upon church affairs and, as he had lived, so he died, unwavering in his confidence in the gospel, concerning the latter-day restoration of which he had for twenty-eight years testified, labored, sacrificed, and suffered. Rest to his spirit. Peace to his ashes. His reward is certain, and his satisfaction will be sure and complete.

THE KINGDOM IN SCHOOL.

THERE is to be an eight-day summer school for the study of Christian Sociology, held in the college chapel, at Grinnell, Iowa, beginning on June 27, and to close on July 4, present year.

The services of twelve reverend gentlemen of eminence have been secured as teachers, including B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, who will lecture on the "Kingdom of God on earth."

No charge will be made for attendance at these lectures; though a charge for board will be made to those visiting from abroad, and who may not have friends in the city.

A school of the kind should be productive of good to those who may be desirous of learning what the ethics of Christianity may do for society, when applied in the different vocations and classes of men, if the inquiry is properly made; so we can commend this effort to any of the Saints who may be near enough Grinnell to attend.

PLEA FOR UNITY.

IN the Presbyterian assembly at Saratoga, New York, May 18, Rev. Dr. Craig, being anxious for church unity, made an earnest speech in favor of the literal interpretation of Scripture and the union of the churches North and South.

This is but one of the many outcroppings of the fast increasing spirit of assurance that the perpetuity of the Christian system is based upon the "word of God," and that man's best interests demand that the word of God be not spiritualized in its application to the needs of the race. It has taken long to teach this lesson, nor is it yet fully learned; but it is being more and more urgently enforced, and it is not hard to believe that some time man will have become reconciled to God in His own way of being understood in "the word."

AUTUMN LEAVES.

EVERY religious society in the world, almost without exception, has discerned the literary wants of its young people and has been prompt to recognize the necessity of furnishing a legitimate, wholesome supply of their demands for reading matter by issuing special publications, in order to provide suitable intellectual entertainment and induce them to cultivate a taste for proper mental food. A movement in this direction was made in the year 1888, when Autumn Leaves was issued as a monthly magazine for the youth of the Reorganized Church. The wisdom of the movement which provided this publication has been tested, the results to the church have been seen in the reception the Leaves has met from the young people, also from the older members of the church, to whom it has been an educator for good in many ways, and in some phases not directly reached by other helps and aids. The Leaves found its place by supplying a legitimate, necessary demand, and will in due time pass into the hands of the Board of Publication. We bespeak for it the support of its former patrons, also of those who have not yet been readers of its pages. Placed in the hands of children and young people,—of any indeed,—it will enlist their interest in the faith of the church.

The excellent matter it has presented to its readers is its best recommendation. We are assured that its reputation will be maintained, and surpassed if possible. As one guarantee of its future worth the forthcoming July number will contain a series of articles from the pen of Elder Heman C. Smith, entitled, "The Bible and the Christian Religion." The series will run through an indefinite number of issues. Bro. Smith's reputation as an experienced minister and writer is well known; the character and worth of his papers will therefore be apparent. We understand that they will present the prominent principles of the Christian religion and evidences of the divine authenticity of the Bible in affirmative form.

The price of Autumn Leaves is $1.50 per year. Those wishing to begin subscriptions with the July number can secure the remaining issues of the present year for 75 cents.

Address all subscriptions to David Dancer, Box 128, Lamoni, Iowa.

BRO. ANDREW BERG, writing from Raton, New Mexico, May 19, has the following to say of cooperation and settling by colonization:—

On account of the hard times, the daily papers are suggesting that workmen in several cities are organizing into colonies to take up land for settlement. I believe if the Latter-Day Saints would make up one or more colonies for settlement in that way, and assist one another, it would be a good thing; because they can trust one another. There is plenty of cheap land in Iowa and Missouri. If the brethren in the church that have plenty of money would buy the land and then sell to the poor brethren, they would make as much money as they would to keep it in a bank; and how much more good would come out of it. I would go in with a colony like this, rather than to be away from my family as I now have to be; because I cannot get work at my trade at home. In a few years many a poor Saint and his family would be independent and better off than to live in a city.

I hope some one that is more able to explain the subject, will take it up and put it in a better shape to be understood.

One portion of Bro. Berg's suggestion has been frequently urged; but so far without avail; that is, the purchasing of land by some having money to invest and the reselling to worthy men, willing to work, but needing a little help of the sort suggested. It is a very practicable way for a really benevolent man to aid his fellow men and brethren.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

THE letters from the elders in the field indicate an unusual spiritual activity in nearly all the districts where the elders are doing gospel work. One brother remarks in reference to his experience in the pulpit since conference, that he never felt, nor enjoyed the inspirational in his service more than he does now. It is absolutely exhilarating and very encouraging to know that the Spirit of the Master is with the preachers of the word.

What a promise is ours if we but prove worthy.

Bro. F. G. Pitt writes from Chicago, May 28, that Bro. George H. Graves has been laboring among his colored brethren at Aurora and DeKalb, apparently with good results.

Bro. Pitt reports the baptism of the daughter and wife's mother of Dr. C. D. Carter of DeKalb. Bro. Pitt would attend the Kewanee district conference at Millersburg.

* *

Bro. W. W. Blair reports May 29, from Council Bluffs:—

Had large and excellent meetings at Omaha and here. The conferences were good in all respects. Prospects fine. Bro. A. H. Smith is at Omaha. I go to Crescent, for services two nights, thence to Magnolia and Moorhead. All goes fairly.

There are several good farms near Mound City, Missouri, that can be bought at reasonable figures. The country is a good one. Write and inquire of Bro. R. K. Ross, Bishop's agent, at Mound City.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. H. HILLIARD wrote from Bluffs, Illinois, May 28:—

I am on my way to Hancock county. I left Pittsfield this morning. Fixed up our churchhouse there last week; preached three times, and baptized four there yesterday. Left every thing in good shape for an elder to go in and occupy, with fair prospect to build up that branch. My work was not the cause of those coming in that I baptized; they were already in the faith. But I believe I made a good impression on the people.

Bro. E. B. Morgan, Lucas, Iowa, May 28:—

Three were baptized and five ordained here yesterday. The attendance was good; the Holy Spirit was present. Those ordained are good men and will no doubt do a good work. We are glad that the Lord of the harvest is sending more laborers into his vineyard. We are gaining ground, and we hope for brighter days for our branch.

Bro. A. H. Parsons, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 28:—

Seven were baptized here yesterday, all adults; large attendance at the baptism. Interest good; others near; so the good work is moving along. Lovely weather since the storm of last Thursday.

Bro. J. H. Lake, Low Banks, Ontario, May 29:—

I have been here for a few days. The work is just opening up in this part. There are twenty-one members here. They have not been organized into a branch, but have a nice Sunday school. There is a good interest among the people, and with proper labor I am sure a good work will be done. I think some will take the Herald. I have been presenting the matter to them.

Bro. F. M. Slover, Bungay, Illinois, May 27:—

I have been preaching in the regions round about here since the 12th of this month and have baptized twenty. Good interest here. I have baptized forty-two here since December 24, 1893. I go home to-morrow, thence to conference. Brn. Morris and Curtis will continue in this, Springerton, branch a few nights. Excellent interest where I have been; I have been greatly blessed with God's Spirit, pray for me that I may have his love to be with me that I may win souls for Christ. I am doing what is right so far as I know, I need help from God to build up his kingdom on earth. So, brethren, remember me in your prayers.

Bro. W. S. Pender wrote from Fulton, Wisconsin, May 31:—

Indications are more favorable for the work here than ever before. Two were baptized on Sunday last and a number of others will doubtless follow. Bro. W. A. McDowell is with me now. We go to Milton Junction to-day.

Bro. Blair wrote from Logan, Iowa, May 31:—

Had five meetings at Crescent. Met H. O. Smith en route to Denver and Utah. Drouth is working havoc with small grain, grass, etc., all through this region. Fruit was badly damaged by frost. Hope to reach Moorhead at ten a. m. to-morrow.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have a criticism from a brother upon the practice of some who face the wall of the house of worship and turn their backs to the congregation, also upon those who uselessly repeat the words "Father" and "heavenly Father," etc. while offering prayer. We mention the criticism for the benefit of any whom it may concern.

We are asked if a branch or district presiding elder can act on a court of elders. We understand that he can be so appointed, if circumstances render it necessary that he should act, and wisdom justifies him in so acting. Conditions governing specific cases, and with which we are not familiar, should determine, those in local or in general charge being in position to understand prevailing conditions.

The Far West district conference will be held at Stewartville, Missouri, June 22-24; not on the 14th as erroneously announced.

Bro. J. W. Waldron writes from Forest Home, Missouri. He was baptized by Bro. W. S. Macrae. We are obliged to omit his letter, also a number of others, because lacking space for them.

Bro. and Sr. G. T. Griffiths were tendered a hearty reception by the Wheeling, West Virginia, Saints on their arrival in that city on the 24th ult. Saints and outsiders greeted them at the home of Sr. Mary Brewster, where music, addresses, and refreshments were the order of the evening. Bro. Griffiths and his co-workers enter upon the work of another conference year in their mission with excellent prospects for continued growth of the cause in the branches and in the field.

Sr. Eva Mee, of Fairhaven, Whatcom county, Washington, orders church publications which she reads and loans. She is not a member of the church but anxiously awaits an opportunity to be baptized.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins has received a letter from Bro. John Tranter, an aged and infirm brother of Iowa City, Iowa, living at No. 917 Maiden Lane, would like to see any of the ministry who can call on or visit him. He also asks the prayers of the Saints. He is seventy-four years old, and has been quite ill for several years. Bro. Stebbins has written Bro. Fred M. Smith, asking him to call on Bro. Tranter.

We have frequent requests for instructions concerning the best methods of conducting Sunday schools. We refer those interested in that line of work to the Sunday school literature on sale at the Herald Office, especially to the Constitution and By-laws of the General Sunday School Association, which contains by-laws for schools; to the Gospel Quarterly, Senior Grade, which has a chapter, "Notes for Teachers" and "Order of Exercises," which contains a number of helpful suggestions; and to the Teachers' Class Record. Other school literature is listed with advertisements. Catalogue describing publications sent on application to Herald Office.

Sr. Rachel Bennett, wife of Bro. John D. Bennett, favored the Senior Editor of the HERALD on the last day of May, with a treat of two quarts of the firstfruits of their strawberry beds. The berries grown at Lamoni, were large, and of excellent flavor, showing conclusively that the good soil and the careful tillage of Bro. Bennett and his faithful wife, of good old Bible name, had wrought the wonderful production. We extend our thanks to Sr. Bennett, for the berries were the first of the season to the Editor and family, and were much enjoyed. Lamoni is in a good region for small fruits.

Bro. John Smith is booked for a discussion with one John Stone, at Plattsburg, Missouri, to begin Saturday, June 10. The religious complexion of Mr. Stone is not stated.

A number of excellent letters from active ministers in the field are crowded out of this issue. We shall publish or summarize them as we can.

Sr. Sarah Hill, living at West End, Saline county, Illinois, names that point for missionary consideration of local or traveling elders.

Bro. Hubert Case is preaching at Oto and other points in Woodbury county, Iowa. He reports encouragingly. Himself and Bro. Mintun had met and parried opposition to the evident good of the work.

We have received letters from Srs. E. Cockerton, Oak, California, and S. Cooper of Tama City, Iowa.

Bro. J. J. Cornish reports a victory in the discussion with Elder M. D. Rogers at Farwell, Michigan. Two were baptized, others were about ready to obey. His letter is dated May 28, and will appear next week.

The pamphlet issued by the General Sunday School Association, "Instructions for organizing Sunday schools," including hints on selections of officers, teachers, literature, etc., can be had, together with the Constitution and By-laws for districts and schools, on application with two-cent stamp. Address the Herald Office.

Bro. D. L. Palsgrove reports prospects good for the cause at Clinton, Iowa. Six were added to that branch during the past year.

President Joseph Smith went to Independence, Missouri, Saturday, June 2, to remain over the early portion of the following week.

A card from Bro. W. W. Blair dated Magnolia, Iowa, June 1, announces his return home early in the week of the 3d. He will leave soon afterward to attend conferences of districts in the Canada mission.

Two were baptized at Lamoni on Sunday, June 3, by Elder J. R. Lambert. Bro. A. S. Cochran preached in the morning hour and Bro. R. M. Elvin in the evening.

Bro. John Hawley, en route to Texas, labored at Kingfisher, Oklahoma, on the 12th ult. and preached ten sermons in schoolhouses near by. Some opposition appeared from the Christians, but the results were in favor of the cause. This Bro. S. J. Butler writes us under date of June 1.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

ERRATUM.—In editorial of last week on page 344, eighth line from the bottom, instead of the words, "It well becomes us then" etc., it should be, "It ill becomes us."

"Watch the princely flowers
Their rich fragrance spread,
Load the air with perfumes,
From their beauty shed;
Yet their lavish spending
Leaves them not in dearth,
With fresh life replenished
By their mother earth.

"Give thy heart's best treasures—
From fair nature learn;
Give thy love—and ask not,
Wait not a return;
And the more thou spendest
From thy little store,
With a double bounty
God will give thee more."

WAYS AND MEANS.

FREQUENTLY the question is asked (perhaps without any definite thought of an answer being given), "What is there that I can do to help in the work of the world? So much of my time is demanded by the cares of my family, by the duties of home that I feel so helpless. I have no time to join the great army of the world's workers. No time to spare in helping to move the cause of right and truth on to victory. I grieve that it is so, but I cannot help it."

Again it is not from another nor from without that the question comes, but it arises from the depths of our own soul, and is asked by the doubting heart, grown tired and weary with the battle of life: "What is there that I can do to help in the work of the world?"

Drummond in his "City Without A Church," as if answering this question, says, "Where are you to begin. Begin where you are. Make that one corner, room, house, office, as like heaven as you can. Begin. Begin with the paper on the wall; make that beautiful; with the air, keep it fresh; with the very drains, make them sweet; with the furniture, see that it be honest. Abolish whatsoever worketh abomination—in food, in drink, in luxury, in books, in art; whatsoever maketh a lie—in conversation, in social intercourse, in correspondence, in domestic life. This done you have arranged for a heaven, but you have not got it. Heaven lies within, in kindness, in humbleness, in unselfishness, in faith, in love, in service."

Ah, my sister, you whose life is so full of service for your loved ones, how can you ask, "What is there that I can do to help in the work of the world?" What is there? Better ask, What more can I do than I am doing now. Let your heart ascend in gratitude to God that he is so directly, so unequivocally fills your hands with the very work he wants you to do. There is no uncertain sound of the trumpet here. No doubts, no hesitation. The work is of his own sending—his own appointing, and if done as such, is just as truly service for him (and being for him it is for the world) as is the ministering of the high priest in his temple.

But to-day we are writing for some, and we believe for many whose hands are not so completely filled with home duties, but who have almost every day some spare moments which they can give directly to helping on the work of righteousness and truth in the world. There is little in a name, unless there be also that which entitles us to the name. To be called a Daughter of Zion and yet be destitute of the works which a Daughter of Zion ought to do, is more—far more—to our condemnation than to our profit.

It has been found that the most effectual work of our organization thus far has been reached through the publication of the leaflets, hence it behooves every one interested in this work to do all in their power to help in sustaining this department. Where there are local organizations a united effort can be made, and where there are only scattered, isolated ones, contributions can be sent in to our treasurer, Mrs. Viola Blair, Lamoni, Iowa, stating that they are to be used for the publication of leaflets.

Now is the time for action. The pleasant days of summer are here and there are various ways in which the sisters can by a united effort realize a return in money for labor expended. Last week the sisters of this place gave an ice cream festival and cleared some $18. Of course this is more than could be realized in smaller places, but it is drops which make the ocean, rivulets which make the river, and if all will do as well accordingly the means we need will not be wanting, but we will have an abundance for carrying on the work. Sisters, who will be among the first to move in this direction? Who will take action for united effort and who will send individual contributions? Let us hear from you.

HELPING HAND.

SYNOPSIS OF READING, CHAPTER FOURTEEN,
HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING.

TRAINING A CHILD'S FAITH.

EVERY child has the instinct of faith, as surely as it has the instinct of appetite. It is not more natural for a normal child to seek nourishment than it is for him to cling to and trust another. True faith always rests upon a person. Even before a child is old enough to learn of a Savior the instinct of faith is one of his qualities, just as he has the instinct of hunger before he knows the nature of his food. An infant will cling as if for dear life to a finger placed within his hand, whether it belong to mother, nurse, or stranger. Not until it has learned to distrust is it said to be "old enough to be afraid." While a child's faith is yet undisturbed, as also after it has become discriminating, it needs wise directing and developing.

Faith is innate in the child, but a knowledge of the One on whom his faith can rest with ultimate confidence, is not innate. The knowledge of God must come to him from without himself, and whoever has responsibility for a child's moral training has the duty of imparting to that child a knowledge of God. A child can grasp a true conception of God quite as easily as can the profoundest philosopher.

A child does not need to be led by degrees to a knowledge of God. As soon as he can learn that his voice can be heard by his loving parents in another room he is capable of learning that his voice can be heard by a loving Father who is always within hearing, though not within sight; who is the loving Father of every one; who is able to do all things and is sure to do all things well. In the knowledge of this truth a child can be taught to pray very early.

The child can take in the great truths concerning God and his power as fully as can a theologian, if only it all be proffered in simplicity, as explicit truth, without any attempt at its explanation. A missionary among South Sea Islanders found that they could comprehend John's gospel better than the historical books of the Bible. It is much the same with children. They can receive the deepest truths of the Bible without any explanation. Later on they may be able to reason concerning them.

The first lesson in the training of a child's faith is that he is to have faith in God. Many a child is taught to have faith in the power of prayer, or faith in the value of good conduct. He is told that he can hope to have whatever he prays for, and that if he is a good boy he can expect a blessing, while if he is bad he cannot expect to be blessed. He ought to be trained to rest his faith upon the God to whom he prays, and in loving obedience to whom he tries to be good.

A child having been told that God is able and ready to give him everything that he prays for, desires a pleasant day and prays for it. If the pleasant day comes his faith in prayer is confirmed; but if the day be stormy, he begins to doubt whether prayer is always so effective as he has been taught to believe, and the same in any case where his prayer is not answered.

If, however, you plainly tell a child that God knows what is best for us, better than we know for ourselves, and that while God is glad to have us come to him with all our wishes and our troubles, we must leave it to him to decide what he will do for us, the child readily accepts this as the truth; and his faith in God is not disturbed by finding that God has decided not to grant his request. When children are taught to have faith in prayer rather than faith in God, their faith is continually subject to shocks, which, with the opposite teaching, would not disturb it.

A child will believe it if told that God loves good children and that he does not love bad children. Then, when he thinks he is good he is glad that there is a God to appreciate him; but when he is bad he may be sorry that there is a God to be his enemy. This is training a child to have confidence, not in God, but in his own merit as a means of commending him to the God who has been misrepresented to him.

If, on the other hand, you tell a child that God is love, that he loves all, even those who have no love for him, and that while God loves to have children good, he loves them very tenderly even while they are very bad, the child will take in that truth gratefully, and be readier to have faith in God, as well as to want to be good because the loving Father loves to have him good. And in this way his faith in God will help to quicken and shape his desires for well-doing.

A very young child can comprehend the truth that God in his love sent his Son into this world as a little child; that Jesus grew from childhood to manhood, that he loved little children, that he died for them, rose from the dead and went back to heaven, that he still loves children, that he watches over them and is ready to help them and to be their Savior forever. With this knowledge of Jesus as the representative of God, a child can be trained to trust him at all times, to feel safe in darkness and danger, to rely upon him because of his nearness and his sympathy. There is no question as to whether a child is capable of such faith as this. Jesus made a child's faith the pattern for all ages, and the only question is whether any but a child can attain to such faith.

The training of a child's faith is the most delicate and important duty of one who is set to the work of child-training. More is involved in it for the child's happiness and efficiency in life, for his present and eternal welfare, than in any other phase of his training. He who would train a child's faith aright has need of wisdom and yet more need of faith. A parent has need to watch lest he check or hinder the loving promptings of a child's faith. Jesus said: "Whoso shall cause one of these little ones which believe in me to stumble it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

PEACE.

"Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you,"—said our beloved Master a short time before he went back to his Father's house. Those words were to us, and the blessings for us, just as much as they were designed for those who heard them by his voice. Blessed peace, that peace which will soothe any or every sorrow, when it is sought for and accepted. It is the peace that passeth understanding, and it often fills the soul with joy and gladness indescribable.

It cannot be obtained from temporal things but comes to us through the avenue of soul, by obedience to the commands of Christ, from the Father.

What a soul-cheering, what a glorious thought, that the Author of all good will condescend to bless us unworthy mortals! Yet it is so. The fountain of salvation is continually flowing, and all who will come may come, bathe, drink, and be made pure and whole. The salvation that Jesus offers is a full salvation. It purifies the heart and heals the body. O what good news! 'Tis as old as Christ himself, but still 'tis new to every soul that receives it. It seems as though everyone who has received it ought to be willing to lay down anything, everything, even life itself for such a glorious, eternal boon.

But, alas, how often after our soul has been filled with such rapturous thought it is cast down by our indulgence in some sinful thought, doubt, fear, or perhaps a feeling of hatred or disgust towards some one. In order to live spiritually, one has much to do after obeying the ordinances of the gospel. The most essential point is to love God with all our heart, or above all else, and our neighbor as ourself—and still further our enemies. If one does that, it will be very easy to take the promises home and live by them and in them.

Why is it that we who claim to have such high spiritual light are much of the time drifting about amid seas of confusion, blown off the course by blasts of sin? The writer speaks from experience as well as from observation.

Where is that sweet peace that pervaded our bosoms twenty years ago, and where is that tie of love that bound the little twigs of this branch together? It was the love of Jesus—'tis not lost, only suspended till we will humble ourselves and be willing to be rebound. Be willing to lay all our misunderstandings down at the feet of Jesus, and receive each his or her own forgiveness. Would ask, Have all branches of the church had a similar experience? Is it necessary to have such an experience, or is it brought about by our unfaithfulness? It seems as though it is possible that we might have lived in such a way as to have retained that peace and union.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,

The saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

No one having a spark of God's love can deny the promises of Christ, and he said: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you," and the gift is just as much for us as a parent's gift is for his child. Is the father pleased if his son rejects his gift? or is he pleased if he accepts and in course of time squanders it? "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." What a world of meaning in this text to every one who has incorporated it into his being, and how beautifully it harmonizes with, "Take no thought for the morrow," etc. They plainly tell us to have a simple, childlike trust, and other scriptures tell us to follow the example of an obedient child. The two combined cannot fail to give success.

Fear is a great barrier between us and success in any direction from the alphabet to oratory, from the nine digits to the higher mathematics, from the most simple to the most complex labor. Just so in accepting the promises and living for the spiritual blessings. "I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me, and I in him the same bringeth forth much fruit." How plain, how beautiful! And still greater: "Ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." Did ever, could ever an earthly father do more? If we are abiding in Christ, he will show us what to ask for that will be for our good and the glory of God, so we may not ask amiss. All nature proclaims his omnipotence, and omnipresence and we, being his most perfect work; were created expressly to show forth his perfection to one another, or the attributes of the Spirit, love, joy, peace, etc. Such a glorious position is more to be prized than all the mines of earth and the gems of the ocean. Such promises are the gems of the gospel, and they can be worn by the poor as well as the rich—yes, even the boon of peace. SR. ALMIRA.

One moment without thee;
But O, the tenderness of thy enfolding,
And O, the faithfulness of thine upholding,

"I am so needy, Lord! and yet I know
All fulness dwells in thee;
And hour by hour that never-failing treasure
Supplies and fills in overflowing measure
My last and greatest need. And so Thy grace is enough for me."

Letter Department.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 26.

Editors Herald:—Hattie is a little better today. I think she is gaining some, but very slowly. The Saints here are all well with one exception. My health continues good and I feel very grateful to God for the same. I shall be thrice happy when Hattie regains her health. Our two-days' meetings, here and at Glen Easton, were grand successes. The Spirit of the Lord was present in much power and the Saints were greatly cheered and encouraged to press forward with more zeal and energy. The preaching was excellent. Bro. Frank Criley attended the meetings here and he delivered a fine sermon. Bro. Powell acquitted himself in a creditable manner. Your humble servant came up in the rear. Bro. Powell left for Youngstown on the 18th, and Brn. L. D. Ullom, F. Ebeling, and I went to Glen Easton. The writer did all the preaching there; also ordained the following brethren to office: Joseph Wyatt an elder, his son, Jasper, a priest, and Bro. G. E. Dobbs a teacher.

This branch has been in a disorganized state since the death of our worthy brother, Aaron Harris, over five years ago. We now have between forty and fifty members there. Bro. James Brown, who passed peacefully away to his eternal home during last March, did a good work there about fourteen months since, at that time he baptized ten, all of whom seem to be actively engaged in the Master's cause. I never saw brighter prospects for this branch than now, and I have been acquainted with the same for over eleven years. While traveling over the hills of West Virginia I thought of days of yore when you and I used to wander over those hills together. There have been many changes in these parts since then; several of the brethren have died, others have been expelled, and many have united with the church. The Wheeling branch numbers about one hundred and twenty-five members, and what is more encouraging is the fact that the Lord has raised up a number of young men to keep the work moving in these parts; Brn. Ullom, Smith, Terry, F. Ebling, Thomas, and Serig. These brethren constitute the branch officers. I leave to-day for Pittsburg to attend meetings there over the coming Sabbath. Hattie will remain here. We shall return to Kirtland next week.

On the first Sunday in this month I baptized my Son David and Bro. Holt's Son Charles. Since we left home two of Bro. W. H. Kelley's children and little Eva Richner were baptized. Brethren James and H. E. Moler, Bond, Powell, Goodrich, and Parrish are out in the field and report favorably. Have not heard from Brn. Harder, Godby, and Moore. Bro. Etzenhouser writes that he is on the way to the mission.

Yours hastily,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

Editors Herald:—The regular visits of the Herald are always welcome and the contents eagerly perused, to learn of the progress being made in the advancement of the cause we all love. If by chance its arrival is delayed, then anxiety takes the place of contentment until it appears, and we learn how another week has passed in the various fields of labor.

We have been enjoying splendid meetings here of late. Elder Mark H. Forscutt is preaching for us, and setting forth the word of truth in such a manner that our faith is being strengthened, our understanding enlarged, and our righteous desires increased, while an interest is being awakened in our friends who come to hear us from time to time. We hope Bro. Mark may remain with us long enough to see the fruit of his efforts gathered safely into the fold, and the branch placed in a condition of greater usefulness. Our condition is good spiritually; our hopes are great, and future prospects bright. Our course is upward and onward.

I had the honor of baptizing two noble souls, April 22, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lonthan. Sr. Mary Lonthan has had quite a reputation as an evangelist, and has been quite a preacher. They will both be very useful members and earnest workers. There is room in the fold for all of God's sheep. On May 13, I baptized Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Crumley, a young couple of whom we are justly proud. They too are earnest and active, and are very desirable members. There are others interested who we hope may soon be ready to hold with us and assist the cause along. We see nothing to discourage us. Our efforts are beginning to bring good results, and we are becoming more thankful. May God prosper his cause.

In bonds yours,

GEORGE S. LINCOLN.

Editors Herald:—Please say that in consequence of my sickness before leaving Tahiti, and a very depressed mental and physical condition since preaching here, I have only answered such of my many kind correspondents, and querists concerning that mission, as I could not "put off" without answering, I have no memory of ever before experiencing such a feeling of lassitude, such an "I can't write" feeling, as since that sickness. All mail sent to me to Tahiti since January 1, is still there, or has been returned to me; and this day I assorted my mail, and find that I have seventy-six (76) unanswered letters by me. Under these circumstances will not the dear Saints who have sent me words of cheer and such kindly remembrances as made my heart glad, pardon my seeming neglect if it be yet some time before I am able to reply, and I hope I am not asking too much—forgive me if I chance to missionize some one in their several localities to offer my sincere thanks and congratulations to the rest, instead of replying to each one, a task I feel inadequate to perform at the present time.

Further, permit me to say that I sent my report on April 7th, and of course incorporated as far as I was able to do so, a report of my colaborers in the South Sea mission. My report should have reached Lamoni on the 11th at latest, while conference was yet in session. It is of course, a grief to me that the unaccountable failure of my report reaching conference has left me without an appointment, and left my brethren who reported to me and the writer under the implied censure of neglect of duty. They, however, are not left out in the cold as I am, and as I should not have been had the good Master given me the ability to write sufficiently early. Brethren Devore, Newton, Gilbert, Hawkins, and Jansen are working faithfully and deserve hearty recognition. I believe them and Sr. Devore—also a faithful worker—to be noble hearted enough to forgive what could not be avoided by their appreciative brother,
MARK H. FORSCUTT.

Editors Herald:—I have not lost faith in the latter-day marvelous work and a wonder, but I have been under a cloud or the chastening hand of God; and this makes me think more than ever that God loves me, for the apostle said, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." After the chastening, he has poured in the oil of gladness, and has made my cup to run over with joy and peace, and a renewing of the latter-day glory in my soul. I want to let the Saints know what this chastening has been for. When I first obeyed the gospel, I used tobacco; this was in fifty-nine. I united with the Bickerton faction of the Saints in Pennsylvania. Bro. James Brown, now deceased, was a member of the same church at the time. One evening when I was returning from work with the pipe in my mouth, there was a kind of a consultation or a dialogue introduced between me and the Spirit. It ran something like this, I taking the pipe in my hand: "Will there be any pipes in the millennium?" This is what the Spirit said, and the answer came with force, from my own mouth, so that I never forgot it, "No." I then threw the pipe from me, and said, "Lord help me." I received help, and without any difficulty quit the use of tobacco. The Lord made it an easy matter for me to lay it away and quit. This is not what I have been chastened for; but for starting again after having such clear knowledge that it was not right and such efficient help. The way of duty is the way of safety. With duty neglected, then I was a subject of temptation. I left the ministry for a something which, to me seemed a good chance to make a little money. It was drilling for water, and sometimes, yes often, we had breakdowns. It was a comfortable place; plenty of everything, and with the rest, pipes and tobacco lying around; and having nothing to do, while waiting for repairs I put forth my hand and took a pipe, filled it with tobacco, and smoked it. I did not feel any condemnation at the time; but I could not quit it again, and I dared not ask the Lord to help me, and I knew I did not have the Spirit as I used to have it. For four or five years I have been in this condition, sometimes almost in despair; but the Lord has had a care over me; while with one hand he has chastened me, he has upheld me with the other. I have overcome and quit the use of tobacco and am keeping the Word of Wisdom, and I feel better. My object is to do good to some other brother who may be in the same condition. Des Moines branch note this as a report. Love to all. JOSEPH P. KNOX.

MULBERRY, Cal., May 21.

Editors Herald:—I left home for Santa Cruz, sixty miles north of here, on the first day of this month, in company with Bro. Sylvester Garner of Fowler, Fresno county, he having brought Bro. A. Haws over to attend our district conference, which was held at Hollister one month ago, and was greatly appreciated by all who attended; for the Spirit of the Master was present with his people during all their business sessions, hence not a jar was felt or an unkind word spoken by any, to mar the peace or wound the spirit of the most chaste and tender ones present. The social meetings were grand, and the preaching of the word accompanied by the Spirit was powerful. Bro. Garner and Bro. Haws have gone back to Fresno; Bro. Haws to labor in the ministry and Bro. Garner to attend, for the present, to things of a more temporal nature; but by and by, if faithful, he will be called higher in the spiritual realm, for he is among the noble of our young men.

We went with horse and buggy to Santa Cruz; was gone sixteen days, during which time I preached sixteen times, including two sacramental services, and organized a Saints' Sunday school; baptized and confirmed two, besides visiting and fishing and assisting what we could in caring for the strawberries and blackberries which were in abundance, and for which Santa Cruz county is famous.

Well the Lord has a noble people in that town, who delight in seeing the truth presented to their neighbors; and I believe the time is near when there will be a noble branch organized there. The Spirit so dictated at the confirmation of the two who had been baptized that day; a Mr. Walter Scott and his wife. They are very much in earnest. Bro. Scott is forty six years old, of Irish parentage. He was born in Brooklyn, Queen's county, New York; was educated there for a Catholic priest, but was careful not to be present on the day and place which had been appointed for his ordination. He has traveled much both at home and in foreign lands, and has witnessed the devotion of sincere worshipers in different parts of the world, and has heard the most famous and world-renowned ministers of the age expounding the Scriptures; but he says, "Never until recently, and that here in Santa Cruz, was I permitted to hear the true gospel of Jesus Christ." Bro.

and Sr. Scott both bear faithful testimonies, and he will yet wield a powerful influence for good if faithful, meek, and humble, as I have every reason to believe this brother will be.

On Sunday the 13th inst. I preached at the residence of Sr. M. H. Grant, corner of Galt and Railroad Streets, East Santa Cruz, and at the eleven a. m. service there were present a Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Dunlap, whose short acquaintance I had the pleasure of making, and from what I had previously heard we were soon talking of family relations to the Smiths. So from the conversation had, I requested them to write on a slip of paper that that I should have published in the Saints' Herald; and she dictated, and he wrote the following: "Mary Anna Dunlap, daughter of Robert and Anna Barden. Her mother, Anna Barden (maiden name), was sister of Hyrum Smith's first wife Jerusha Barden.—S. B. Dunlap, 48 Railroad street, East Santa Cruz, California." I am glad I met Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, and must say that I shall be pleased to accept their very kind invitation to call and make them a visit next time I have the opportunity.

We left the Saints rejoicing and some few honest-hearted ones not far from the kingdom. This is a hard year on us here; there will be no sound of the threshers near here this season. I fear we shall not be able to get what hay we need. I preached here last evening to some forty at the close of the Religio. God is speeding the right.

Your coworker,

J. H. LAWN.

FARWELL, Mich., May 23.

Editors Herald:—I was pleased to know that it is agreed on all sides that I should remain in Michigan until the 1st of September. I am glad for the sake of the work here. There never was a time in the history of the work in Michigan when we needed more help in Northern Michigan than now; and yet a less number of men are appointed. The calls are tenfold more than ever before. The ministry of the other churches seem to combine with a determination to crush, if possible, this latter-day work. But God is on our side, and I have been made to feel it during this present debate with M. D. Rogers.

Mr. Rogers has done his best to blacken the character of the Martyrs and Saints of our Joseph's time as well as the Saints of the present time, bringing forth as usual the old worn-out stories, trash, and slanderous tales, adding to them a volume of personal abuse upon me and my brethren; for all of which he has received the cheers and applause of the majority of the people, especially of the so-called religious element. But we have arranged this time for six evenings of two half hour speeches each evening upon Joseph and the Book of Mormon.

It generally takes them three evenings to get out their slush, then on the next three they will have to come to time. We then have three evenings in which to educate the people, and show that the word of God is being fulfilled in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and the need of a prophet, etc.; showing too how well the defamers of our times agree with those of other times; that the title or appellation they bear, and the weapons they use to-day well agree with those of other days.

This is the twentieth public debate I have had with men of other faiths, and I am built up in the most holy faith. I feel sure that in any of the past Joseph and the Book of Mormon came out bright and clear to the minds of the people as now. Bro. Joseph, on last evening, and the evening before I felt the force of that statement made by you at the last conference when speaking to the ministry, "The angels shall go before you!" I felt it in my very being, and I thought of your statement so much while speaking in the defense of "the marvelous work and wonder." Others of our brethren felt it too. Bro. F. C. Smith said when the Spirit was upon me the most he saw an angel standing by my right side. The people who cheered and applauded so much seemed to be awe-stricken. The scale is turned; last night though their members would start to cheer, the others did not follow as before. The words, "Old Joe," "Imposter Joe," "Black devils," "Mormon God a monkey," and the Saints here "Brazen serpents of Gilmore," etc., all fall dead at his feet; while on the other hand the honest in heart are receiving the truth and despising the shame.

We have one evening more on the Church of Jesus Christ, then three on his "Church of God," or Winebrennarians.

I am glad Bro. Blair answered Mr. Rozzell, of Freesoil, Michigan, in the Wesleyan Methodist. I see the Rev. Rozzell thinks it would be a grand thing if everybody would get "New Light on Mormonism," by Ellen E. Dickinson. Yes, I dare say that some would rather read and believe it than they would the Bible, just as many do in this debate. Let me give the Rev. and all others who think all should have a "copy in their houses," a few pages to consult; then let them use their better judgment and read Paul in 2 Thessalonians 2:10-12, after which if from the abundance of their hearts their mouths must speak, if still evil (see Luke 6:45), let them run off some place where no mortal will see or hear them and give vent to their feelings, and speak it so they will hear how it sounds! and then go back rejoicing to think they have not exposed their ignorance to others:—

Page 16: "It is believed he (Rigdon) had followed Mr. Spalding, etc. and had heard him read the 'Manuscript Found,'" with "The author has received a letter, stating"—Page 17. "And there is a local tradition that he was employed in looking for gold."—P. 21. "Some authors said that."—P. 22. "Mrs. McKinstry says."—P. 22. "It is said that Joseph," etc.—P. 28. "From all accounts the Smiths were."—P. 29. "It has been said."—P. 30. "It is supposed."—P. 32. "Major Gilbert is of the the opinion."—P. 47. "As it is believed."—P. 48. "Mrs. Garfield's father said that he knew a man that . . . and from the statement comes."—P. 48. "A Presbyterian clergyman informed the writer."—P. 49. "Judge John Barr gave an account of."—P. 50. There is a little of it inside of thirty-five pages. What evidence is that to prove that Joseph Smith was not a prophet or that the Book of Mormon is not true?

Now, ye despisers of the prophet of the Lord, and the beautiful gospel of Jesus Christ, open your mouths, robinlike, once more and take another dose of your own medicine from the same source, from which you wish to poison your children, your neighbors, and their children; for which you bring shame and dishonor, and for which you have the disfavor of God, and cause his angels to mourn, the Devil to laugh, and his angels to rejoice. The dose is mixed up as follows:—

"The date of his [Joseph's] birth is not accurately known, but is supposed to be about the year 1800, possibly a little earlier. His father's name was Joseph, and his mother's mother's maiden name was Lucy Mack."—P. 28. Almost every novel or history and other works give it on the 23d of December 1805, in the town of Sharon, Windsor county, Vermont. Again, "He [Joseph] opened it [the box containing the plates] in secret, but said it contained not only the six golden tablets eighteen inches square."—Page 37. Chambers' Encyclopedia and a host of others, with nearly every history that speaks of it, says that they were 7x8 inches in size.

"Smith related that after hearing a sermon from the text, 'If any of you lack wisdom,'" etc.—Page 36. All others say that as he was reading the Bible he came across the passage which reads, "If any," etc. There are a host of such statements in the "New Light [lie!] on Mormonism" by E. E. Dickinson.

But she has another dose mixed up in another way, as follows: "The Golden Bible; no one was allowed to see it."—Page 38. "O. Cowdery, D. Whitmer, and M. Harris saw them."—Page 38. "Several years after these 'three witnesses' quarreled with Smith, renounced Mormonism, and avowed the falsity of the above statement."—Page 42. But on page 217—"Alluding to the golden plates and the angel Moroni at the time the word was given to Joseph, he [D. Whitmer] rose to his feet, stretched out his hands, and said: 'These handled the plates, these eyes saw the angel, these ears heard the voice—I know it is of God.'" Again: "Joe's peek stone—'Palmyra seer stone'—resembled a child's foot."—Page 30. But in page 36 they were like a pair of "wonderful stone spectacles." Again: "When Joe wanted fresh meat for his family (black sheep,) he," etc. That was in "1819 or 1820." (Page 31.) But on page 34, (short memory) "While at Harpsville, Pennsylvania, in 1826, he married Emma, the daughter of Isaac Hale, a well to do farmer of the vicinity." Joe had a large lump of want for his family, six years before he had any! Here is another one: "This Joseph Smith, Jr., is a son of the prophet; he was born at Kirtland in 1832, and was twelve years of age when his father was shot at Nauvoo."—Page 61. And on page 107, "On the 27th of June, 1844," he was shot or "massacred" at Carthage.

But there is a little more to make up the dose: "But as events developed their needs, the Angel Moroni, the same who delivered the golden plates, appeared to Smith from time to time, until he was killed at Nauvoo, in 1846."—P. 45. Now turn to page 59: "When Joseph Smith was killed on June 27, 1844," with as many more.

I believe if we would take the trouble to look over the book carefully we would find about two hundred mistakes in it, a book of two hundred and seventy-two pages. I would advise our brother ministers of other faiths to read their Bibles a little more, and pray a little more, and not be all the time throwing stones at their neighbors.

CANBORO, Mich., May 9.

Editors Herald:—Since General Conference I have been as busy as possible, trying to fill the calls as they come to me from the different parts of our district. It has been impossible to respond to all thus far; but, brethren, I shall do the very best I can to assist you. I am preaching nearly every night, and two and three times on Sundays. The people are anxiously feeling after the truth nearly everywhere.
