This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.
Bound in cloth $2.50.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

JERUSALEM'S RETURNING PROSPERITY.

THE London Times says: "The British consul at Jerusalem in his latest report gives some interesting details respecting the present condition of the holy city. It appears that buildings of various kinds continue to be erected in the vicinity, and that the city is far outgrowing its former limits. On the western side houses have been increased so rapidly during the last few years that quite a large suburb has arisen where formerly there were fields and vineyards. Every available piece of land is now being bought up by private persons or by benevolent societies and missions, and already the name of "Modern Jerusalem" has been given to this new quarter. Last year the first public garden was completed outside of Jaffa Gate, and the trade is generally increasing, especially that in Jaffa oranges, olive wood work (now an important local industry), and olive oil. The export of colocynth declined in consequence of a tithe levied on it by the authorities. It is gathered by Arabs in the neighborhood of Gaza, where it grows wild. An interesting enterprise which has recently been commenced is the collection of the bitumen which rises to the surface and floats about on the Dead Sea. Two sailing boats were taken by train from Zaffa to Jerusalem, and then conveyed on cart to the Jordan, where they were floated down the river to the Dead Sea, and there now engaged in picking up the bitumen, which is in much request in Europe. The consul thinks it would be advantageous to trade with the inland districts if a steam launch and several lighters were placed on the Dead Sea to ferry across the produce of Moab, which is a country rich in cereals, fruit, and cattle. At present it is conveyed by caravans round the north and south ends of the Dead Sea, entailing a journey of from four to five days.

Kerak, the chief town of Moab, is now garrisoned with Ottoman troops, and authority is established there, so that if rapid communication were established the whole produce of Moab would find its way to Jerusalem and the coast."

MSS. OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

NO FEWER than 1,760 ancient manuscript copies of the New Testament in whole or in part exist, their abundance markedly contrasting with the small number which have come down to our own day of the classical writers. As no miracle has been wrought to preserve copyists from error, the last century added up 30,000 various readings in the New Testament manuscripts; and the present one has increased the number to 150,000. Some interesting particulars are given in the "Sunday school Teacher's Bible Manual" for December. Only the merest fraction of them are of any consequence; and their number, and the fact that they were made originally in different parts of the world and from a variety of manuscripts, enable biblical students to detect and eliminate the errors and approximate to the original text more closely than if the various "readings" were fewer. This tedious but necessary work has been carried out with untiring energy. The New Testament manuscripts fall into two divisions: "Uncials," written in Greek capitals, with no distinction at all between the different words, and very little even between the different lines; and "Cursives," in small Greek letters, and with divisions of words and lines. Professor Roberts dates the change between the two kinds of Greek writing about the tenth century. Only five manuscripts of the New Testament approaching to completeness are more ancient than this dividing date. The first, numbered by Biblical critics A, is the Alexandrian manuscript. Though brought to this country by Cyril Lucar, Patriarch of Constantinople, as a present to Charles I., it is believed that it was written, not in that capital, but in Alexandria; whence its title. It is now dated in the fifth century, A. D. The second (known as B) is the Vatican manuscript. It has been in the Vatican library from 1475 or an earlier period, but not till A. D. 1859 was an edition of it published, and that one, by Cardinal Mai, when issued, was uncritical and of little value. But in 1868 a facsimile of it came forth so that now it is fully accessible to scholars. The Vatican manuscript dates from the middle of the fourth century, if not even from an earlier period. The third (C), or the Ephraem manuscript, was so called because it was written over the writings of Ephraem, a Syrian theological author—a practice very common in the days when writing materials were scarce and dear. It is believed that it belongs to the fifth century, and perhaps a slightly earlier period of it than the manuscript A. The fourth (D), or the manuscript of Beza, was so called because it belonged to the reformer Beza, who found it in the monastery of St. Irenæus, at Lyons, in A. D. 1562. It is imperfect, and is dated in the sixth century. The fifth (called Alpha) is the Sinaitic manuscript obtained in 1844 by Professor Tischendorf from the monks belonging to the convent of St. Catherine, on Mount Sinai. It contains the whole New Testament. It is believed that it was made in the fourth century, and its value to the biblical critic is very great. Any other "uncial" manuscripts that exist are only fragmentary. The cursive manuscripts, though numerous, are of too late a date to stand on the same level for critical purposes as the "uncials." It is possible indirectly to gain access in whole or in part to the readings in manuscripts which have perished. There were early versions of the New Testament in different languages, such as the Syriac, etc. In many cases these were made from manuscripts not now existing, but the translation shows what the original must have been. Christians of the early ages, like those now living, were accustomed formally to quote or informally to allude to particular Scripture passages. When there is reason to believe that it was done with precision, it is easy to ascertain from their writings what the original reading was in the manuscript of the New Testament in their possession.—Public Opinion.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh day Sabbatariaans, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplemental chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, a life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

POINTS ON TENT WORK.

BRN. F. M. Weld and C. J. Hunt who have been doing tent work in the Galland's Grove district, have given some attention to improving that department of the service with a view to better adapting the "canvas churches" to the comfort of audiences and the ministers who for quite a long season make them their homes.

They write expressing the opinion that no tents should be used but those that can readily be raised or lowered from a center pole. The reasons given for this are that in case of a storm a tent can be immediately lowered and the strain upon rope and canvas be avoided, saving the wear and tear consequent upon a tent left standing under the strain of a heavy wind, which is the case where tents cannot be quickly lowered. Besides this, those in charge are apt to be struck and severely injured by pegs attached to guy ropes pulling out and flying around promiscuously. These brethren have been using an old style tent, which has at times become considerably damaged because they could not promptly lower it during storms. They are now remodeling it, converting it into a center pole tent, believing evidently that a converted tent will better suit the purposes of their mission, and we think so too if it is thus better adapted to their purposes and the comfort of their hearers.

They call attention to another point, an important one—the matter of seating. Hitherto they have been obliged to obtain cumbersome lumber and arrange temporary seats at each point visited, which has been found to be very unsatisfactory; but they now think they have succeeded in solving the seating problem by a simple device that anyone can manufacture cheaply, and which can be carried with the tent without undue trouble, weight, or expense. They will send sample "standards" at cost to any of the brethren who desire them, on receipt of twenty-five cents, and believe they will give entire satisfaction. They state that their audiences have generally commended the device as comfortable and through which they have waived the usual objections to tent seats as "uncomfortable" and otherwise unpleasant, and because of which many have heretofore remained away from "tent meetings." They can now advertise "good comfortable seats" and have found them a decided factor in securing large and attentive audiences.

Inasmuch as some are urging the use of "camp chairs" for tents, Bro. Weld urges the objections to them that they last but one season and are therefore expensive; that they are uncomfortable except upon level ground—which at times has to be leveled against the wishes of proprietors; and that they cut up the ground, which is also frequently objected to by land owners.

We present these items to all whom they may concern in the interests of those engaged in tent service. Those desiring to obtain the sample seating standard referred to should address the brethren, either of them, as follows: C. J. Hunt, Deloit, Iowa; F. M. Weld, Lamoni, Iowa.

If others have good points on tent work we shall be glad to hear from them. The brethren referred to have their tent neatly decorated with attractive mottoes, etc., a feature peculiar to all tents in use, we suppose.

UNION, OR NO UNION.

THE brethren at St. Louis, Missouri, have been having a little experience with popular evangelical ways that gives wisdom, though not pleasant to contemplate.

A big tent is being used to hold meetings in, and all denominations were to have a day each. Brn. Russell Archibald, J. C. Hitchcock, and others made request and secured the promise of Saturday, August 18, for the Reorganized Church. Having secured the promise of the manager, Bro. Archibald set about securing a representative of the church. He wrote Bro. Luff, but failed to reach him; Brn. Charley Jones and Wm. Bozarth were both away and not available, so the authorities at Lamoni were requested by letter and telegram to be sure and have some one on hand to occupy the big tent on August 18. Presidents Joseph and Alexander H. Smith consulted together and secured Bro. J. W. Wight to attend the appointment. The result was that a telegram reached Lamoni, on August 16, at 11:55 a. m., an hour and ten minutes before Bro. Wight was to take train for St. Louis directing that he should not come.

The following letter from Bro.

Archibald written the 16th, will explain the reason why:—

ST. LOUIS, MO., Aug. 16, 1894.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Last night I received your wire, in reply to mine of yesterday, stating that Bro. J. W. Wight would leave for St. Louis to-day, the 16th, and have wired you this morning stating that Bro. Wight need not come and that I would write you fully.

Last night there appeared an article in the evening papers, stating that the Management of the Camp Meeting had decided to be very careful as to who should hold forth at the camp in the future, and had drawn the line this side of the sect known as Latter Day Saints. Two weeks ago they told us we could have Saturday, the 18th, so after reading the article above referred to we went out to the tent and had a talk with the manager. He said that Rev. Sam Jones would be back by Saturday and that he would have to cut us off for him, but that we could have the following Saturday if we desired. He denounced the article referred to, which appeared in the papers, as being untrue and seemed to want to justify himself, but it is evident that "where there is so much smoke there must be some fire."

It was quite evident to me that he did not care to give us a hearing and has adopted this method of causing us to withdraw without placing him under the necessity of making a flat refusal, and as he has shown that we can place no confidence in his promises we have decided to let the matter drop. When next Saturday came he would have another excuse, and for this reason I wired you this morning to prevent any further expense or trouble. At any rate, Bro. Jones will be here by next Sunday and he will be able to look after us in case we should have an opportunity to be heard on the 25th.

The whole matter has terminated rather abruptly and unsatisfactorily to us, but the papers remarked that if they had their choice between the Latter Day Saints and Sam Joneses' they would prefer the former. Am sorry to have put you all to so much trouble, ending in such an unsatisfactory result, but you will know where the fault lies.

Fraternally yours,
RUSSELL ARCHIBALD.

No. 2613 North Market Street.

Doubtless the brethren at St. Louis feel hurt over the affair; for men of good hearts and correct intentions are always wounded in feeling, when men whose profession should be a warrant for fair dealing, fail in their promises, or are guilty of marked disregard for their word and the courtesy of good faith and fairness toward their fellow men.

It would have been far more manly for the manager to have said at the start, "We cannot let you in," than to have promised and then broken his word. Of course there would be more money attraction in Rev. Sam Jones. He is at present the representative of the Southern in sensational religion, as Dwight L. Moody is of the Northern wing; but neither of these gentlemen is of value enough for a Christian gentleman to forfeit his word, however humble the man, or few the sect to whom that word was given—but then—as Bro. Archibald writes we “know where the fault lies.” Is it a fault that “lies”?

HERALD'S CIRCULATION INCREASING.

THE Herald Office management has had occasion to ask remittances from its patrons from time to time, especially during the past two years, which have been seasons of unusual business depression. However, it should not be inferred from this—an ordinary business method of making collections—that the church organ is running behind in its list of subscriptions; for the HERALD has been steadily increasing its list, notwithstanding the financial depression through which the country has been passing, as is shown in the following statement.

Two years ago the Herald Office printed 4,400 copies as its average weekly issue, and that too in a time when crops were good and times were prosperous; and in the face of continued and increasing financial depression—not overlooking the fact that numbers of delinquents have been dropped from the lists—the present average weekly issue from the press is about 4,600 with a steadily growing list of subscribers.

The HERALD receives numerous commendations from the Saints, and which it gratefully appreciates and acknowledges, but such commendations have not been published for the reason that it believes it to be the true policy to let its merits speak for the paper, and because publication of statements made in its favor may take on the character of self-praise. It is proper for its patrons to express their appreciation of its subject matter, and we are grateful that they thus express their good words of encouragement; but it may not be in good taste for its editors to publish the many statements made in its favor.

The continued patronage of the Saints is solicited. We shall try to make the HERALD all that it should be as the organ of the people, conducting it for the good of the body and on lines of policy as broad and impartial as truth itself.

ANOTHER PROPHECY GONE WRONG.

THE following taken from an exchange, tells its own story:—

NEW YORK, July 26.—Professor Falb, the Vienna earthquake sharp, prophesies that New York City will be destroyed August 16.

It was recently announced by Professor Falb that there would be a great submarine earthquake “in July or August next,” which would “swamp the city of New York under a tidal wave, while at the same time Florida and California would become islands.”

His date of maximum disturbances for the present year are, in the order of their violence: August 30, September 29, February 20, March 21, August 1, April 6, January 21, May 5, and October 28.

Up to the present time the predictions have been verified with singular accuracy; all the earthquakes, cyclones, disturbances, cloud-bursts, floods, etc., having occurred on about one or another of the above dates, so far as these have lapsed, the next one to be heard from being on August 1, and the next following on August 16, being designated by Professor Falb as the most serious for the year.

It is pretty generally known that Professor Falb makes his predictions of the times of the physical phenomena on the basis of the conjunctions and oppositions of the sun and moon, believing that these two bodies exercise an attractive influence upon the earth—otherwise shown in the movements of tides—which causes earthquakes, violent storm periods, and other catastrophes.

The earthquakes in Greece of May 6-7 were at the time of a conjunction of the sun and moon, just as those of April 20, were exactly on the date of an opposition of the sun and moon. On June 18 there was an opposition of the sun and moon, and on June 20 occurred the great earthquake in Tokio, Japan, which among other things destroyed the German Legation and the American Episcopal mission buildings.

The great tidal wave which accompanied the earthquake of May, 1877, wrought havoc at Africa, Iquique, and other coast towns. This earthquake occurred on the evening of a conjunction of the sun and moon in Taurus.

It is August 20 at present writing and New York, Central Park, Bedloe's Island, and the Goddess of Liberty Enlightning the World, and the Brooklyn Bridge, and Wall Street are still above the seas. If that prophetically threatened city can stand four days after the time set by Prof. Falb, who shall tell when the strong pillars beneath it shall break and pitch the doomed city into the surges of the Atlantic. We wait the developments of time and the work of God.

A NEW REPUBLIC PROBABLE.

A CORRESPONDENT of a London, England, paper is responsible for the news that Guatemala, Nicaragua, San Salvador, and Honduras, Central American powers, had signed an agreement looking to the establishment of a Central American Republic.

Costa Rica, the smallest of the republics along the Isthmus of Darien, declined to sign, preferring to remain independent rather than to become an integral part of the larger republic. It seems that the better wisdom would be to join the four States, then in a body connect with the United States, and thus open the way to a republic reaching from Hudson's Bay to the Straits of Magellan. “Long live the Republic.”

Honduras has a trade of considerable importance, one half of it being carried on with this country and the greater part of the rest with the neighboring States. Its area is 43,000 miles and its population is nearly 500,000. The capital, Tegucigalpa, has 13,000 people and is near the center of the State. There are several seaports of some importance. It is an agricultural State, and tropic and semi-tropic products grow there profusely. There are some American firms largely interested in colonies in the State. One is an Illinois corporation, and considerable money is there invested in banana lands.

Guatemala has a population of 1,500,000 people, but sixty per cent of them are Indians. Guatemala spends money freely on education, which is free and compulsory. The capital is Guatemala La Nueva, with a population of 70,000 people. The soil is fertile and the products are maize, sugar, bananas, and cocoa.

San Salvador has a population of 700,000 people, and an area of 7,225 miles. The products are coffee, indigo, sugar, and tobacco, and there are 180 mines in operation.

Nicaragua, where canal interests are of paramount importance to the United States, has an area of nearly 50,000 square miles and a population of 312,000 people. There are few towns of importance. The present capital is Nanagua on the lake of the same name. Its population is 18,000. Nicaragua has a large trade in hides, cattle-raising being the chief occupation of the inhabitants.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. H. A. STEBBINS, now in attendance at the Northwestern Kansas reunion, kindly consented to represent the business interests of the Herald Office at that gathering and has furnished a report of the services, which appears in another column. He wrote from Blue Rapids, Kansas, August 17, as follows:—

I am preparing minutes or sketch of reunion being held here, but will not send any of it until the 20th is past. I presume you would like one for the Herald. The Saints are enjoying comfort, peace, and spiritual blessings as well as each other's society. They are here from seven or eight counties. Three have been baptized so far and others expected. Camp beautifully situated on the bank of the Blue River. Heavy rain last evening that helps nature greatly.

Bro. W. H. Davenport, Bandera, Texas, August 18:—

Bro. O. D. Johnson and I have just finished visiting the Saints of Bandera. We left them all feeling well spiritually. We have appointments for the first, second, third, and fifth Sundays of each month. Bro. T. J. Sheppard has been with us. We are looking for Brn. Wight and Hawley to visit us.

Bro. David Smith, Whittemore, Michigan, August 21:—

I have returned home for a day or so from Augres, about twenty miles from here, where I have been laboring for the last three weeks. I went there three weeks ago and opened up a new place and have organized a Sunday school and baptized seventeen. Everyone is interested; others are near the kingdom. I left them all rejoicing in the gospel. The good work is rolling on and the honest ones are being gathered in.

Bro. Joseph Maxon of Bannings, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, who learned of the latter-day work through William Bickerton's organization writes commending the Reorganization, whose publications he obtained in some manner; he says:—

I never knew there was another body of Latter Day Saints outside of Salt Lake City until a few years ago. I united with the Bickerton faction and received testimony that the latter-day work was of God. I did not have and did not know there was such a book as the Book of Covenants, but when it came into my hands I believed it to be a law to the church. When I would mention it I would be told that we were not to be carried around by every wind of doctrine; but my answer was, "Did not that wind begin to blow from 1830, and did not Sidney Rigdon blow the same in 1845 when in Pittsburg he baptized and ordained William Bickerton?" We must believe all the word of God. I like your paper and the sermons. May God bless us all. Brethren passing this way, please call and see me. You will be welcome.

Bro. W. P. Terry, Millersburg, Illinois, August 18:—

Brn. E. E. Wheeler and J. W. Terry have been laboring in the southeastern part of the district for the last two weeks. The latter returned, leaving Bro. Wheeler, who is preaching in a park to large crowds with excellent liberty.

Bro. H. H. Robinson, Andover, New York, August 20:—

We closed grove meetings last night with best of interest—about four hundred present. Town and country people who would not come before are now our best friends. Bro. Powell leaves for Kirtland; I am to continue for some time.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ERROR.—In HERALD for August 22, page 535, middle column, in the sentence beginning "In so stating," occurs the word "agreement;" the word is an error of composition; the sentence should read, "In so stating we do not ask for an argument of implications," etc.

Bro. Blair was at Harlan, Iowa, on August 16 to remain over Sunday the 19th and to hold four services during the time. He wrote, "All goes fairly."

Bro. Joseph Luff was a welcome visitor to the Saints at Lamoni, August 19, and occupied the stand to the pleasure and profit of the usual audience, morning and evening of that day.

P. P. Kelley, Esq., of Mills county, Iowa, attorney for the Reorganized Church, in the Temple suit, has been nominated for the judgeship by the Democrats of the Fifteenth judicial district of Iowa. It is a fitting nomination, as the candidate is both able and worthy.

Judge Caldwell of the Court of Appeals, to which the Temple suit is to go for rehearing and trial, has caused an order of court to be entered providing that the cause shall be tried in the Court of Appeals on the original abstracts of evidence; which order is quite satisfactory.

Bro. William Kelley of New Albany, Indiana, writes an interesting letter descriptive of a grove meeting held in Orange county, Indiana, beginning August 12, by brethren J. M. Scott, George Jenkins, David Scott, and himself. The people turned out freely to hear the word, which was well received; and other openings were made with earnest wishes expressed that the brethren preach the word. Bro. Kelley looks for numerous additions to the church as a result of the labor being done by the brethren named. A friendly spirit is moving upon the people toward the ministry almost everywhere an effort is made to declare the truth.

Bro. James Huff, Fremont, Nebraska, recounts another instance of God's goodness to mortals bestowed upon an afflicted one not a member of the church, to whom he was requested to administer by prayer and the laying on of hands, and who was made whole.

Bro. E. A. Stedman has returned to his field in Minnesota after a short visit and rest at home, by which his health was improved.

Bro. Columbus Scott returned home on the 18th inst., because of poor health, from which he has suffered considerably during the summer.

Bro. J. F. Mintun secured the insertion of an article in defense of the faith in the Kingsley, Iowa, Democrat of August 16.

President Joseph Smith went to Garden Grove, Iowa, August 21, to attend and address the old settlers' reunion. He was to remain over Sunday and preach in the opera house.

Letters from two of the brethren in this issue report over eighty baptisms; Bro. I. N. Roberts reporting forty baptized in his field and Bro. R. R. Dana over forty in the Southern California district. These with others indicate the more rapid growth of the work. May Zion continue to move with mighty power for good.

Letters are received from Sr. S. E. Cook, Galesburg, Illinois; Bro. A. P. Cantrell, Lanagan, Missouri; and Bro. L. L. Wight, San Antonio, Texas.

ERRATUM.—The name of Bro. and Sr. Charles Tyler was given erroneously as Taylor in HERALD page 460, in letter of Bro F. Swan.

Bro. C. De Pay reports progress being made in the Lee's Summit, Missouri, branch and the immediate vicinity. The Saints have a nice chapel, are making friends among the people, and are encouraged to continue for good.

Sr. Mollie Prettyman sends us a clipping from the Stark county, Indiana, Democrat of August 9, which commends the work of Bro. S. W. L. Scott in refuting attacks made on the faith by a local minister of which Bro. Scott writes more fully in this issue.

Sr. L. E. Fuller of Escanaba, Michigan, requests brethren who can to consider and respond to her urgent requests for preaching in that place. Her husband is an invalid, in whose behalf she requests prayer.

Bro. A. S. Cochran, Secretary of the Board of Publication, left Lamoni on Friday the 24th inst. for the Maysville reunion, where he will receive orders and remittances for church publications, and will also have on sale a supply of books, tracts, Sunday school and other printed matter. He will also visit the Logan reunion in like capacity.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins reached home on Thursday, August 23, from the Northwestern Kansas reunion.

Bro. Heman C. Smith reports a good reunion and conference at Sedalia, Graves county, Kentucky, closing August 21.

Bro. W. W. Blair was at Council Bluffs, on August 21, but was going to Macedonia. He reports crops short, weather hot and dry; but that the churches and the work prospects were good.

Bro. F. H. Brooks wrote from McKinley, Michigan, the 22d inst.: "The work is onward here. Shall baptize as soon as I get back; several waiting."

Bro. Columbus Scott went to Garden Grove, Iowa, Saturday, the 25th inst., to assist President Joseph Smith, who was to hold three services in the opera house.

Advice to a young preacher: "Have something to say. Say it. Stop."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"There's no time like the present;
To-morrow's far away,
And what our hands may find to do
God bids us do to-day.

"Be ready in the golden Now
To do a helpful deed,
And never let the chance go by
To meet a sister's need."

THE question has been asked by some of our correspondents, if Leaflets numbers 9 and 10 have been issued. They have not. In the absence of funds necessary for defraying the expense of printing the Advisory Committee have thought it best to use selected reading matter. We are only waiting for our local societies to awake to the necessities of the case and take active measures in this direction. Have we not friends also, who are sufficiently interested in the work to contribute of their substance for this purpose? Let us hear from you.

LITERATURE AND VICE.

ANNA GARLIN SPENCER.

Select reading for Daughters of Zion meetings for September.

AT sight of this heading, many mothers and teachers will at once think of Mr. Anthony Comstock, and of the terrible facts he has brought to light respecting the manufacture and sale of illegal and obscene reading-matter and pictures. They will remember how this vile stuff has been found in the possession of young boys and girls in the most trusted schools and in the most respectable homes. Doubtless the statements respecting the prevalence of this purposely obscene literature have been sometimes exaggerated, but it still remains a horrible and menacing fact that there are men at work using the printing press, and cheap picture-making processes, and all the contrivances of trade, and all the ingenuity of evasion of law, to maliciously and of purpose vitiate the youth of our land. Into the home, the public school, the private seminary, and the college, these agencies of corruption are sent, whenever and wherever the vigilance of parents and teachers, and of a decent public sentiment is relaxed. Hence the first duty of all concerned in the training of children in the matter of "literature and vice," is to see to it that none of this openly and utterly obscene matter reaches them. For a picture, or a story, or a suggestion, made for the express purpose of debauching youthful innocence, does its work fatally well. A child cannot, if it would, forget readily a leading toward evil of this sort. The obscenity reaches down through the purity which is the child's priceless birthright, down to that animalism which underlies the human and divine in our natures; and, stirring that animalism to conscious life, it forces a warring of elements in the soul, for which the child has as yet no moral strength. After evil is once known, and known in its most polluting forms, only the strenuous efforts of conscious virtue can hold the uncaged beast in check. That there should be any human being fiendish enough to deliberately plan and work to excite immoral thoughts, and vulgar, and debasing curiosity, to stimulate passion and start the fires of unholy desires in innocent children, is almost past belief! Yet facts make us believe that this sweetest and most hopeful treasure of humanity—the purity of little children—is thus systematically assailed. Let every parent watch well, then, the channels through which such unspeakable impurity can enter the school or the home. If in any newspaper coming under the eye of the child a mysteriously-worded advertisement of books, papers, or pictures, to "be sent through the mails in secure covers," is found, let the parent or teacher be on guard! If slips of paper are handed around slyly and with guilty look among the children, let a watch be set! And above all things, the parent should speak of this danger to the teachers of both private and public schools, for the circulation of vile matter, sent around illegally in secret ways, is much more apt to be detected in the school than in the home. First, then, to protect our children against the vicious influences that come through the printing press, look out for the obscene matter sent by the criminals through the mails, and help bring the evil doers to justice!

After watching for and dealing with these monstrous slayers of innocence, we must take vigorously in hand the legal and respectable agencies which pander to and increase a depraved public taste in literature. There is an almost limitless number of publications, books, magazines, and papers, which are made not to destroy youthful innocence, but merely "to sell." And the vast majority of these, which find easy access to the uneducated classes in our community, are the cheap "story papers" and trashy novels which either weaken or debauch the moral sense.

At a newspaper stand in a small and very respectable country town, a traveler asked for reading matter. She was shown six specimens of story-papers. She looked them over carefully to see what was the general taste that led the dealer from his experience, to offer them so confidently. All were illustrated, and the pictures portrayed for the most part horrible or sensational situations of terror, vice, or crime. The headings were: "Escaped—or, the Betrayed Bride," "The False Wife," "A Fight For Life; or, the Escaped Convict," and the like. Asking the dealer if he had anything more thrilling and "spicy" than these, the traveler was shown a package of papers not put on the public tables but on a handy shelf below. These were The Police Gazette and others devoted exclusively to the recital of criminal matters.

"Do you sell many of these papers kept out of public sight?" asked the traveler.

"O yes; quite a number for this small place. Nine of them are taken by regular subscribers, and I get rid of a dozen at least each issue."

"How many inhabitants have you?"

"About twelve hundred."

"And how many of the sort of papers you showed me first do your villagers take?" pursued the inquirer.

"O, a large number; more than sixty families take this regularly," handing out one not so bad as some, but palpably sensational in moral tone, and wholly devoid of literary merit. "And I get rid of more than a hundred and fifty story-papers altogether each week."

"Do you sell any large number of first class magazines or papers?"

"O no; most people who read them order direct from the publishers. The people who buy at news-stands generally read papers like these."

A week later the same traveler stood in the magnificent public library building of one of the largest, richest, and most cultured cities in America. It was Saturday afternoon. In the rooms where reference books and standard literature of all sorts were kept, there was no crowd, although a goodly number of students and readers were using the books and applying for them to take home. But in the department of "fiction," at the tables from which books were sent out, there was a crowd so great that from twenty to thirty stood in line waiting their turns, and many rows of long benches were filled with those waiting a chance to get into line. Inquiring of a courteous attendant if this crowd was unusual, the traveler received the reply, "No; not for Saturday afternoon." Asking what authors and what sort of books were most in demand, the inquirer was shown a list in which authors' names were arranged in the order of their popularity. Leading this list were the names of writers known to be most prolific in exciting incidents, terrific plots, and freest use of all the coarser tragic elements of life. Among them were authors who, like "Ouida," portray man only as a trained animal of physical senses and public ambitions; and portray woman as the clever and seductive panderer to man's passions, and his need to be "amused." Among these authors were many who were simply silly, and whose work must act upon the mind as the swiftly-flying telegraph poles upon the eye of the steam car passenger—to confuse and to weaken. But so far as the knowledge of the traveler, and of the library attendant, also, went, the books most in demand by this great crowd of seekers were more or less base or foolish representations of a false conception of life. In them "luck" ruled, not life's stern laws of "reaping as we sow." In them happiness was dependent upon and secured by houses, and lands, and fine clothes, and the world's admiration, rather than by inward satisfactions of a clean conscience and a loving heart. In them, the heroine always achieved a brilliant marriage, and the poor girl found opportunities for social elevation which real life does not give. In them, the hero was a striking personage who seemed out of place in this hard-working world. To feed on such mental diet must inevitably make one more and more discontented with the steady drudgery, the humble pleasures, the simple joys, the obscure self-sacrifices, and the everlasting struggle which life, real life, alone demands and affords to the most of us. Such reading must make the boy more ready to seek to "live by his wits," even if not quite honestly, than to work hard for little pay. Such reading must make the girl more ready to accept marriage at any sacrifice of better judgment, than to strive steadily for honorable independence until the true and elevating love comes. Aye, such reading must make the girl's mind more open to the voice of the tempter who promises ease, and fine dresses, and theatres, and "shows," and all sorts of "good times" in exchange for her virtue!

Thinking of all this, our traveler noted the extreme youth of many of the crowd at the fiction-table in the public library. And in response to her questions, the attendant said, "These are mostly school children. In the evening we have the shop-girls, even the cash boys and girls, not older than these younger ones, in just such a crowd."

"And do many of these come often, so that you get to know them?"

"O yes. That girl you see at the desk now," a slender child, not above thirteen, by her looks, "takes out two books a week regularly. That boy you see gets two every Wednesday, and two more every Saturday; and he wants the most exciting stories we can select for him; won't take anything better if we suggest it to him. And the girl just back of him is a high-school scholar, and takes out from two to four a week. We know almost all of this crowd!"

"And, so far as you know, they select for themselves; are allowed to choose from this public table without home restriction as to quantity or quality?" asked the inquirer.

"Yes; the most of those who come to this department on Saturday. At the departments of travel, biography, history, science, art, and standard fiction, many young boys and girls come with slips of paper on which are written the titles of books they have been advised to consult, or take home to read, by their parents or teachers. We try to advise those who pick for themselves—the trustees of the library wish us to do so—but we can't make them take what they don't want, and we don't have much time to talk with any of those who come in such a crowd as this."

After this revelation, one does not wonder that Mr. Charles Francis Adams questioned the right and usefulness of such lavish provision in public libraries for the free gratification of the taste for ordinary works of fiction.

Let no one understand that we are opposing or speaking slightly of the great department of literature spoken of as fiction. A story may be, and often is, the very highest mental and moral food, and the imagination should be treated as the most creative element in the child's mind, and fed abundantly in all true, and harmless, and beautiful ways; but a perverted imagination is the readiest panderer to vice; and much of what is called fiction is the chief perverter of the young imagination.

There are two inflexible rules which every parent should obey and make the child obey, in respect to all reading outside of that required and suggested by a competent and trusted teacher in connection with school work. The first rule is, get the best and widest knowledge possible to you in respect to mentally and morally desirable books and papers for your children to read. The second rule is, allow no child to read anything which you have not selected yourself understandingly.

What would be thought of a parent who turned a baby loose upon a table of indigestible and poisonous foods and drinks prepared for feasting grown-up and depraved appetites, and let it eat and drink at will? Yet, inasmuch as the mind and conscience are more precious and costly than the body, to permit a child to range, unattended and unrestrained, through the field of literature, is far more murderous and criminal!

There can be hardly one mother in all America so isolated from educated people, or so poor in literary opportunity, that it is impossible for her to get something good, wholesome, and attractive for her children to read. Cheap editions of standard books, and low-priced magazines, free libraries, and friendly advisers among ministers, and teachers, and helpful people, abound. It is failure to appreciate at its full power the evil that is in bad or poor literature, rather than inability to find out and procure good literature, which is the real trouble. It is the failure of ordinary parents to appreciate the duty to control and protect the growing mind, as of the same binding importance as the protection and care of the little body, which is the real trouble in this matter. It is, deeper than all, a false taste and vitiated moral judgment in the parents themselves that leave the children a prey to bad and silly books and papers. Let the parents "begin at Jerusalem." Let them cultivate in themselves a refined taste, a discriminating mental choice, and a real elevation of moral feeling respecting literature, and then they can and will surround their children with reading matter which will be altogether helpful.

Another point which parents must think of seriously in studying the effects of literature upon vicious tendencies, is the influence of the daily press. The newspaper is almost the sole literature of millions of families; of more people by far than read books or magazines. The "story-papers" before alluded to are, with a few honorable exceptions, weakening to the mind, and enervating or positively hurtful to the moral sense. They give low ideals of life, false pictures of society, and strained or over-stimulating play of incident; but numerous and widely circulated as these story-papers are, the daily newspaper is doubtless read by a hundred where these are read by one. The agency, then, affecting social purity most widely and directly through the printed word, is the ordinary daily press. What is its teaching and influence?

There are clean journals; giving news and not vulgar gossip; giving a full record of the time, of the evil as well as the good, as a true newspaper must do; but showing, by the space given respectively to each, that they hold great movements in the conduct of public affairs to be of more importance than small details of personal vice and crime. But of how many newspapers is this true? In how many is the eye first attracted by showy headings relating to the evil doings of insignificant people, or vulgar details of personal gossip? In how many is to be found a disgusting particularity in all reports of scandals and obscenities? In how many is the space not devoted to advertisements given much more largely to the vicious than to the good side of life? In how many are the "police court reports" and the "about-town notes" modeled after the Police Gazette columns rather than after any decent sheet?

If complaint is made to the editor respecting these points, he declares he "must make a paper that will sell." And is this really what sells best? An account of private affairs which only the most audacious insolence could gain knowledge of? A minute photograph of the personality of the meanest and commonest people who gain notoriety by a murder, or a theft, or a foul social sin? A detailed description of the animalism of human nature? A "realistic" picture of the mental idiocy, and moral dementia, of poor creatures whom a decent respect for society, or a spark of pity for the unfortunate, would alike hide under the veil of silence; is this, indeed, what "sells"?

Then must the work of mothers' meetings, as respects "literature and vice," begin with the public taste which forms the popular daily newspaper, and reform it!

What the spoken word of the old civilization was in the education of the people the printed word is now.

Let mothers and fathers see to it that the daily press, the cheap story-paper, the widely-circulated book, and all the reading matter which enters the home, or is suffered to influence the child, is pure in tone, and elevating to mind and to heart.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR AUGUST.

"O, friends! if the greater burdens
His love can make so light,
Why should his wonderful goodness
Our halting credence slight!
The little sharp vexations,
And the briars that catch and fret,
Shall we not take them to the Helper
Who has never failed us yet?"

BLOOMINGTON, Idaho, Aug. 9.

Editors Herald—Since last writing I have baptized a son of Bro. Price at Elkhorn. I left the sick brethren at Malad improving quite rapidly, and came on to the Bear Lake country. I have tried to get the Mormon meetinghouse here, but have been refused. I will begin services in Paris next week in the courthouse. Bro. Hyrum Grimmer is deputy sheriff and has sole charge. It remains to be seen whether the meetings will succeed. I go to Dingle to meet with the Saints next Sunday. I expect to spend two months in this valley if conditions are favorable.

To show how averse the "priesthood" of the Mormon Church are to using what is written I quote from the Semi-Weekly Deseret News of August 7, 1894, in its report of one of the speakers at a priesthood meeting held recently in Salt Lake City: "Elder Joseph E. Taylor deprecated the conduct of certain persons, members of the church, who were always judging and criticising their leaders by what was written in the books, placing the dead letter above the living oracles. He showed that the written word being a record of the past, was not always applicable to present conditions, hence the necessity of inspired leaders, whose teachings had the precedence over instructions given under other circumstances and conditions." It seems by this that there is nothing by which an elder in the Mormon Church can be judged but that they set themselves up as superior to the "law and the testimony."

I attended a meeting to-day in which "Apostle" F. M. Lyman of the Utah church was the speaker. He advised the Bishop to appoint a clerk to record all sermons that might be preached by the various ministers that might come to this ward, and these sermons would be scripture to them. I could not help thinking of what value scripture could be in the light of Mr. Taylor's ideas as presented above. I would like to have been a shorthand reporter and taken Mr. Lyman's sermon and had it printed verbatim in the Herald as a specimen of Mormon "scripture." He gave us an account of his various courtships and how the Lord had directed him especially in the selection of his last wife. He deprecated the practice of kissing and advised the girls not to let the young men kiss them until after they were married to them. He said he never had had his heart broken by a refusal to his suit, but he had not proposed to anyone since the manifesto had been issued, but thanked God that although the government had stopped the practice of plural marriage, it could not stop the belief in the principle; that they believed in it just as much as they ever did; that they could not face their children if they should acknowledge that it was not right.

To me it was strange to sit and listen to a man who professed to be an apostle of Jesus Christ talking about courting wife after wife and cracking his jokes about the matter and being applauded by his hearers with smiles and laughter; and as I looked at the congregation an intense longing came to tell them the way of truth. But what could I do! I had been refused the use of the house; the people are warned not to listen to me, and told that the books were a dead letter. Surely the mighty are fallen. May God hasten the time when the chains will be riven and the eyes of the people be opened to their true condition, is my prayer.

HYRUM O. SMITH.

KINGSLEY, Iowa, Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—When I last wrote the tent services had just begun at Oto, in Woodbury county, Iowa. Services continued there for three weeks and two days, closing the 29th ult. The interest was fair all the time, and excellent part of the time. The results were apparently meager for good, only by way of removing prejudice, strengthening the few Saints who live there, and warning the people of the soon coming of the Judge of all the earth. Those who ministered the word were much blessed from first to last. The Saints endured the burden of the work with cheerfulness and seemed gratified to think they could thus help. There is no place where my lot has been cast where there is greater need of labor in the interest of the Christ work than at Oto. Few there be who hold the name of the Christ sacred, but many hold it in irreverence, and use it more frequently in that direction than in reverence. How my heart was saddened to hear the children so universally using the sacred names of Deity profanely, and how hard amidst such influence must it be for the Saints to bring up their children pure minded. Mr. C. A. Polard who has charge of the lumber yard at that place rendered us much assistance, for which may God bless him and lead him to the Lamb of God, that he may rejoice in the gospel as restored to earth through the agency of angelic ministration, in fulfillment of prophecy. We left Oto with many requests that we should return. While there we were titled by such titles as were not at all commendable although applied by the finitely authorized and financially inspired; such as polygamist, tramp preacher, trash, mud, etc., and we rejoiced that such was the best argument they could use, and that they had received such from the father of lies, showing the nature of their sanctification, as they claimed to enjoy.

From Oto I came to this place where we have held forth a week, making apparently but slight impressions, though I can see that we are making slight inroads. Twice since we have been here has incendiarism manifested itself; the first time with but slight loss, but night before last two elevators went up in flames, and the entire town seemed doomed, as cinders were scattered over almost the entire place, starting several small fires; but Providence smiled and the town was saved, many confessing that it was miraculous, who in religious matters assert that the day of miracles is past. Tent was not damaged in the least although cinders and sparks were flying over it and scattered all about it. The cause of the fire as concluded upon here was because the council have decided to not permit a saloon in town, and he whose elevator was fired was one of the councilmen, and prominently opposed to a saloon, for which he had been threatened. This was the second attempt they had made to burn him out. This shows the weapons of Satan and his emissaries as against principle, and one of his main arguments to persuade men to do as he will, in religious as well as social matters. Destruction, disease, death, are the three d's that should be applied to him and his agents, and anyone trying to persuade men to believe as they do by such means as these evidence whose ministers they are.

Will write more fully of the work here when we conclude, however we expect to remain till the latter part of the month.

A lover of truth,

J. F. MINTUN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—Our reunion at Downey City, July 13 to 22, was a success all the way through. The attendance was large, both of the Saints and nonmembers; the preaching was excellent, the attention first-class, order good, victuals good, the social exchange of thought good; in fact it was all good but the water, and our committee are under orders by vote of the people to furnish pure water for the grounds next year. Twelve persons were baptized during the sessions and others convinced of the truth. Some expressed themselves as being dissatisfied because the meetings were not continued longer; but it is better to leave them hungry for more than glutted by too much. Eight persons were baptized before the reunion at the Newport branch and nine the Sunday following at the same place, five at San Bernardino before the reunion, and some others since; and two at Santa Monica, June 24, and two at Long Beach yesterday. Others are awaiting the ordinance at as many as three places in the district.

The district tent is being operated in this city, and Elders J. F. Burton, M. H. Forscutt, and D. L. Harris, are drawing quite large and attentive audiences, reaching more of the outside classes in a single week by this means than could be reached in a year's Sunday services in the hall where services have been held for years past. Elder Charles Baly and the writer held preaching, baptismal, confirmation, and sacrament services yesterday at Long Beach where Sister Charles Crow's heart was made glad by the baptism of her husband. The other one baptized was William W. McQuig.

Bro. Baly and self will leave this week on a missionary trip up the coast as far as San Luis Obispo county, where some are ready for the water. We expect to be gone until the district conference the last Friday in October, and we may stay longer if the work demands our labors. Thus, summing up our gains so far this conference year and our prospects for still further additions in numbers, we think we have reason to rejoice in the far West as well as our brethren in the East for the moving of God's Spirit upon the hearts of the children of men all over the land. Let us continue to pray for the advancement of the good work everywhere.

Your brother,

R. R. DANA.

Editors Herald:—Our conference convened on the 4th at four p. m. and adjourned on the 6th at nine p. m., which was satisfactory, therefore profitable, though our procedure did not evidence a preparation for translation as with Zion of old. I have seldom witnessed a greater unanimity of feeling with corresponding peace at a conference. The representation was good, and much interest with a godly zeal was manifested, which greatly tended to confirm a previously obtained impression with me as to the practicability of my coöperating with the Saints in this land for the further extension of Christ's Church, pleasantly and by God's grace effectively. Though my stay and experience with the Saints in England has been but limited, I am satisfied that the love of country is not a preventive to their being in touch with the church in America, and perhaps there are none that realize and more readily recognize the important truth of all being baptized into one body than the Saints in this land; and their ready recognition of authority is visible to even the casual observer.

While I appreciate my reception among them I think this respect arises more from the fact of their recognition of the power that sent me, than to the person or individual, and it's more than gratifying to me to know that the church or power that sent me is thus recognized. He that receiveth you receiveth me, said the Perfect One, the mighty Christ; which is not to be construed to mean that those sent by Christ are to be recognized as Christ's unless they practically represent Christ. Nor do I mean by this that a godly perfection is to be expected; and yet perfection in our several spheres or positions should be sought and striven for, otherwise the injunction of Christ, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," is without significance, which I understand to mean to be perfect in our sphere as God is perfect in his. But God's sphere is vastly greater than ours, hence his perfection and knowledge are proportionally great.

Christ told his disciples they were clean through the word he had spoken unto them; but who would say in view of this that they were clean and pure as God was pure? Would it not be better to recognize the fact of degrees of goodness, perfection, etc., and having by God's grace attained to one degree of goodness by the continuance of his grace we may pass on, or come up higher? I would not wish to see the Saints in this or any other land, have men's persons in admiration to such an extent as to recognize and honor them from the mere fact of their authority while evidence of a godly procedure were lacking, nor would I see them too exacting, but wrong is wrong, whether perpetrated by angels, men, or devils; yet the wisest and best may err in an unguarded moment. But when a love for righteousness predominates, the desire to linger in error's path will soon be subjected. It may be humiliating to say, "I am wrong," but 'twere better than to be Pharisaical—far better. It were dangerous (I think) to claim infallibility because of place, position, or power; and however deftly or piously done a demand for indorsement because of position would fall beneath some critical eye, to whom our weakness would at once be manifest. I thought a statement as to the readiness of the Saints in this land to be in harmony with the church in America due the church and the Saints themselves.

So far as my experience goes, evidence of a godly zeal with much and well-divided ministerial labor in Manchester is visible. Beside one regular place of worship—which costs the Saints twenty pounds a year—there are three points or missions opened in different parts of the big city of Manchester, attended with some expense. These several missions are supplied with elders by mutual action of the presidents of the district and branch, so that all know their place and work and are kept active, and as the big body of water known as the sea is kept pure by its constant agitation, so legitimate spiritual activity tends greatly to keep the body of Christ united, which greatly tends to purity. So, many officials, when properly active, are effective in spreading forth the Redeemer's kingdom, while a superabundance of officials remaining inactive is effective in retarding the work. I learn that several are ready for baptism in that known as the Bradford mission.

We have some excellent young men here with considerable ability coming to the front, who at present promise well in rendering efficient service in the church, as well as young women that are legitimately striving to come up higher, ready to render what service they can to the church, while the middle aged and those further advanced in life evince a commendable zeal. Nor is interest for the Sabbath school wanting, as the minutes will show. An effort was made at the above conference to organize a district Sabbath school association, but in view of a desire for a more extensive organization a further consideration was deferred until next conference. I have reason to think a consciousness of their inability to patronize the church or Sabbath school literature to the extent that it might have been expected rather deterred them in a more extensive Sabbath school organization, but I assumed to say to them that no more would be required of them than was possible for them to do.

I can't speak for other branches as yet, but I am satisfied that the Manchester branch is bearing as big a financial burden, with the pressure of the times, as they can well bear; but they are working for, and hoping for an increase of membership and with a realization of this hope I think there will be a willingness to correspondingly increase their financial responsibility.

The ready acquiescence in the ordination of Bro. Joseph Dewsnap, Sr., as per action of General Conference gave evidence of appreciation of his labors in this and other localities adjacent to Manchester in the past and present. The spirit that prompted the acquiescence must have been encouraging to the brother. The many who so quickly raised their hands must have felt that in their representative being honored they too were honored. This is as it should be. For many years Bro. D. has borne aloft the gospel banner through evil and good report, facing the foe as well as the friend when necessary. May his usefulness increase as the years go by.

I find considerable musical talent in Manchester, which I hope may be utilized and improved for the good of the cause. Nor do I think that this is confined to the Saints in Manchester; our Welsh brethren and sisters who were in attendance, gave palpable evidence of their musical talent, which was very pleasing indeed. The Welsh Saints are really good singers. In a contest in Manchester of recent date, between the English and Welsh, the latter took the prize as being the best singers.

The local officers in Manchester are certainly active, nor are their labors in vain. At these places designated as missions they preach in the open air, private residences, or both. I sincerely hope they may go on successfully, as may all in every part of the Lord's great harvest field who labor for Zion's welfare. We are similarly situated so far as securing places for preaching is concerned, with our brethren John Kaler and Gomer Wells by the way. I was glad to read their letters in Herald for July 25, and pray the good Lord to bless and encourage the boys in that far-off land. Nor can I forget those who are faithfully laboring in the South Sea Islands. Surely the endurance of Bro. and Sr. Devore will elicit the sympathy of all Godfearing Latter Day Saints, not forgetting those whose emigration, per action of General Conference to those trying islands, is more recent, and who are seemingly desirous to follow the example of their predecessors in endurance. God help and be with them.

Let not the reader think that the above reference to the loyalty of the Saints in this land is to be construed to mean a readiness to gulp down anything that might be presented without investigation. They are not so susceptible, and why should they be? I must here inform the church that I am not fishing for such Latter Day Saints. Nor do I believe that gospel liberty means license, but rather that gospel liberty is guaranteed by gospel law, and such guaranteed liberty will not conflict with the verity of gospel law. Nor were it compatible with gospel dignity (in my opinion) to make an indirect attack on character or become an indirect accuser of the brethren, under the pretext of being a champion of liberty. The explicitness of our recognized method of adjudication ought to preclude this, which certainly forbids publishing one as a transgressor in Zion until the required proof by a legitimate procedure of labor and investigation is had. Why not then believe that all are innocent until proven guilty, and if evidence of wrong exists, move legitimately to meet and adjust it, and not adopt one wrong to eliminate another, always frowning down whatever may savor of nepotism, or being exact with the poor, because they can't help us, and a little lenient with the rich because they might smile upon us.

As additional evidence of a desire of the Manchester Saints, to cooperate for good, I find that for several years they have established a burial fund, all being recipients of its benefits, to the reception of four pounds at death, to defray funeral expenses, all who contribute or pay one half penny per week; that up to this time eighty pounds have been paid out and that there are one hundred pounds on deposit. Why can't others do likewise on an enlarged scale, for mutual benefit?

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

BOTTINEAU, N. D., August 13.

Editors Herald:—I left Pipestone July 2 for Clifford, North Dakota, arrived on the 3d, finding Bro. Swenson and Sparling on duty. On the 4th Bro. Swenson and I walked over to the grove near Bro. N. C. Anderson's where a nice crowd of people had gathered to celebrate. I was called upon to deliver the speech, which was very much out of my line of business. I tried to be excused, but failed. So I mounted the speaker's platform and rendered the best service I could under the circumstances. However, all seemed pleased with my effort. After the speaking we all partook of the bounties of life, after which the young folks enjoyed themselves in the ways of modern enjoyments. In the evening Bro. Swenson and the writer retired to the water and he baptized two good souls into the kingdom of God. On the 5th I spoke at two o'clock at the schoolhouse five miles southwest of Clifford, after which Bro. Swenson baptized two more. As Bro. Sparling has told you what took place on the 6th I will say nothing about it. I spoke again on the night of the 7th and three times on Sunday the 8th, and on Monday the 9th Bro. Sparling baptized three more.

On the 10th Bro. Swenson left us for his field in Minnesota. I was sorry to see him leave, as were many others. Bro. Sparling having to go to work on the farm, the writer kept up preaching during the week, enjoying the Spirit of God to my heart's content. On Saturday the 14th I had the pleasure of leading three more into the kingdom. We met at the schoolhouse where I organized a branch of twenty-three members, being assisted by William Sparling instead of Bro. Swenson as stated in Herald two weeks ago. On Sunday the 15th I spoke in the morning and afternoon. The Saints and friends met in sacrament meeting after which a glorious testimony meeting was had. All enjoyed the Spirit; those present not of our faith could not keep back the tears of joy. At night the writer spoke in Clifford on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and Joseph's land. I enjoyed the Spirit much.

On Monday the 16th I left Clifford for Turtle Mountains, stopping off at Leeds and speaking once in the Methodist church, arranging to hold a series of meetings there on my return. I landed in Bottineau on the 20th and stayed over night with Mr. and Sr. Rosetta Howery, nee Trowbridge. On Saturday the 21st Mr. George Howery came after and took me to his home some eight miles out. On Sunday the 22d I began meetings and at night I spoke again, and at the close of the meeting nine gave their names for baptism. I kept up meetings every other night during the week with good interest and Sunday the 29th baptized ten and confirmed them.

August 3 I went to Dunseith and spoke twice on Sunday the 5th. Harvesting being in full blast I could not hold meeting during the week. On Monday the 6th I visited the mountains with Mr. Courtney and enjoyed the day very much; some lovely scenery. The Lamanites are settled quite thickly in this portion of the mountains. On the 7th I visited with Bro. L. H. Trowbridge and family. On the 8th I baptized two more, and on the 10th went back to Bottineau. On the 11th met at schoolhouse and organized a branch of sixteen members, Salu Stowell priest, George Howery teacher, Charles Spaulding clerk. On Sunday the 12th I spoke twice, and in the afternoon administered sacrament, after which a good time was enjoyed in prayer and testimony. The good Lord did bless us all. To-night will end my work here for the present.

When I first arrived here I thought from what was told me that I would have some hard battles to fight, as three Baptist preachers had been holding forth here for nearly eight weeks and telling what they could do. However, I felt anxious for the fray and immediately put myself in position for the attack: but O, it was all a flash! When their friends urged them to do what they had promised to do, they said, "Not to-night;" so you see I escaped a gospel licking. The editor of the paper at Bottineau when I was here last year gave me good recognition in his paper and was out to hear me preach; but O, what a sad change has taken place since then! He has joined the Baptists, and I suppose got so much of the Baptist spirit that he doesn't even speak to me, much less notice me in his paper. What a change! I have baptized forty. With kindest regards to all.

Yours in the faith,

I. N. ROBERTS.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—I left home June 27 and came to this place, where I remained most of the time till July 10, preaching seven discourses. I then went to Winslow via Little's, and made an effort to hold church at the last place without success. I held forth from July 13 to August 3, at the following points; Flat Creek, Traylor, and White chapels; Hickory and Hollow schoolhouses and Winslow Christian church. The attendance was average.

August 4.—I was at Blackburn where I ministered gospel food at three points till the 13th inst., when I came here. Bro. I. P. Baggerly also arrived recently and we are occupying the Mission church. A debate is in progress here; the disputants are Rev. T. A. H. Laslie, General Baptist, and Rev. Lemuel Potter, Regular Baptist. I cannot say the latter-day work is gaining rapidly, however there is perceptible improvement. The gospel wheat must displace sectarian chaff before it can effectually operate. Deathbed repentance and similar traditions militate against it. After presenting the principles of divine acceptance I am frequently asked, "What do you think of the thief on the cross?" An escape hole; see? I of course explain. Dying repentance has no biblical sanction. We cannot spend our lives in sin till death and then say, "Lord, save me, take me as I am, then soar away beyond the bounds of time and space—Babylon heaven—there mingle in the society of Christ and angels, meet righteous Noah, dwell in faithful Abraham's bosom, clasp hands with zealous Paul, greet ardent Peter with a "holy kiss;" in brief, commune with the redeemed myriads. Reason: where art thou! She exists but is sadly in the minority. The gospel is the means of salvation. This is comforting as also is the promise, "Every plant which my heavenly Father has not planted shall be rooted up."

If any of the Saints desire to write me remember my present address is given at the head of this letter.

Yours in the gospel,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

TENANT'S HARBOR, Me., Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—The Eastern reunion began here on Friday last as per announcement. Forty-one of the brethren came from the Massachusetts district, including Sr. Florence Oakley, of Willoughby, Ohio. We left the Boston pier at five p. m., Thursday the 9th inst. on the steamer Penobscot, and arrived in Rockland, Maine, at seven o'clock the following morning. A cool, bracing wind blew from the north which made overcoats and caps a luxury. The ocean was tranquil and the night ride a pleasant one. All appeared cheerful and happy, and seemed delighted with a ride on the ocean under such favorable circumstances. Those who work in houses and shops of various kinds know how to appreciate the fresh air and nature's sceneries when once at liberty. After a short stay at the Rockland wharf, lunching in the meantime, we were transferred to the steamer Silver Star, and an hour later were safely landed at this place, sixteen miles distance. It is a typical New England coast town, said to contain about three thousand inhabitants. The houses are extended along the shore, mostly of wood but of a substantial kind. The harbor is small, but doubtless a safe one. The land gradually rises with its rocky surface from the water which is covered with pine, fir, spruce, hemlock, etc., giving the surroundings a picturesque and slightly appearance. Mosses cover the ground and blueberries appear in profusion—a charming place for a camp meeting. The inhabitants are of the sturdy, practical, intelligent New England class. They have no use, seemingly, for the letter v. There are no flowers, nor fathers, nor mothers here. It is flowahs, fathahs, and mothahs, etc. It sounds pretty to hear girls talk that way. Westerners can get used to it and then it sounds all right. Usage seems to be everything among people. Every one thinks their accustomed ways the best. It is here where adaptation comes in—

"all things to all men." Woe is he that ostreperously intrudes upon the sacred precincts of usage.

Our coming here appears much like an invasion. There are but two Latter Day Saints resident in the place; and there is but one church—Baptist. It is a large one and stands upon the hill, the only place where the gospel is attempted to be handed out to the community.

On first arriving the outlook seemed a little discouraging; the committee had not completed its arrangements for accommodations, and it appeared doubtful about obtaining "certain dwelling places." Bro. D. S. Seavey and George Robley were pushing things energetically to completion however. There was talk of putting board up to five dollars per week. Of course the queer people had come to town, and scarcely heralded. Curiosity was aroused as if a Sioux tribe, or one of the noted Sitting Bull's gang had landed. "Joe Smith Mormons" had sallied forth. Some said we were here to break up churches. The first shock over and civilization began to assert itself, so in due time places to stay and tents were arranged for, board was provided at reasonable rates, and matters assumed a cheerful and hopeful aspect. Quite a number of the brethren had come in from different parts of Maine and there were more on the way. At evening the large tent was well seated and lighted, which was soon packed with anxious listeners, to learn of the new faith. The suave Bro. F. M. Sheehy introduced with an effective effort, hitting the nail on the head.

Saturday was preparation, only we met at ten p. m. to effect a permanent organization. Brn. W. H. Kelley, F. M. Sheehy, and U. W. Greene were selected to be in charge, M. F. Gowell secretary, Sr. Samuel Ashton organist, Bro. Orrin Coombs chorister and to lead with the cornet; ushers, etc., were also provided. At evening the audience had largely increased—tent overflowing and standing around on the outside. Bro. Henry C. Smith discoursed interestingly to attentive listeners, the best of order prevailing.

Sunday the 12th was a bright, cool, airy day. A fervent prayer service was held at nine a. m., and at 10:45 the writer preached mainly to the Saints, the citizens attending largely at their accustomed place. At 2:30 the tent was extended to its utmost capacity, the sides raised, and seats placed around on the outside, all of which were filled with orderly listeners. Bro. U. W. Greene preached a plain and pointed discourse which seemed to be appreciated. At 7:30 p. m. the sky was clear, the moon shone brightly, and the large audience of the afternoon reappeared at the tent and Bro. F. M. Sheehy discoursed for an hour entertainingly. The singing was excellent, the best of order prevailed, and our reunion was now an assured success.

Monday morning an excellent prayer service was held, a number of the citizens being present. At 2:30 p. m. the writer discoursed with ease to attentive listeners, and at evening Bro. Henry C. Smith preached with good effect to a large assembly. On Tuesday the prayer service was in charge of Brn. George H. Gates and Charles Coombs. It was a good one. The weather was delightful, and a happy, cheerful feeling prevailed everywhere. Citizens begin to find out that Latter Day Saints are much as other people. They like them; recognition and compliments are being passed around and the tide is setting in our direction as far as relates to friendly sentiment. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. M. F. Gowell discoursed logically upon the gospel theme. In the evening there was a show in town and the lodge met, but notwithstanding this, about all of the available room was occupied in the tent. Bro. Richard Bullard arrived from Boston and a new impetus was given to the singing, which delighted every one. The writer talked again on the main facts of the faith, and was listened to attentively and with seeming interest.

On Wednesday the regular order of meetings were continued. Bro. J. Holman and others of the Saints had arrived from Dixfield, Bro. J. C. Foss and Sr. Murry from Rockland. Bro. Arthur Phillips of Boston, and Sr. Lois Graham left the reunion for home. In the afternoon Bro. H. C. Smith delivered a lengthy and instructive discourse which was duly appreciated. At evening Bro. George Robley came in on divine authority, which was listened to with interest. It rained and there was not so large a number in attendance.

Thursday the 16th was a delightful day. Everybody is well and enjoying life except Sr. Gowell; she is quite ill to-day—taken so a day or so ago, so was removed from the tent to the house of Dr. Bartlett near by, who kindly opened his house where she could be properly cared for. An excellent prayer service was held in the forenoon. At two p. m. Bro. Henry C. Smith left the reunion for Ohio; circumstances being such that he deemed it advisable to not remain longer east. Bro. Smith has done a good service east and will be welcomed back at any time when it may be advisable for him to return. At 2:30 Bro. Charles Coombs preached to attentive listeners and bore a strong testimony to the faith. Bro. Samuel Ashton was in charge. The weather was about perfect and sightseeing occupied the remainder of the day. Bro. U. W. Greene returned from Dixfield where he had been summoned by telegram to preach a funeral discourse on Tuesday. Bro. William Blanchard also arrived in camp, belated on account of a young heir putting in an appearance recently at his domicile. A large audience was present at the evening service and Bro. J. C. Foss preached with liberty and fluency, and the audience listened attentively and with pleasure to the close. Bro. Smith, of Providence, Rhode Island, was in charge of the service. So up to date the reunion is up to standard and on the upward tendency, growing better as the days go by. But when the sons of God met together, Satan also appeared. Last night some robbers entered the post office, blew the safe open and took the deposits, said to be about three hundred and twenty-five dollars. They fired four shots as a warning to those who might feel to interfere with them in their profession.

Yesterday I had the pleasure of meeting the mother of eighteen children, Mrs. Hannah Murtry. Ten of the children live in this place. She is fifty-nine years old but does not look to be over forty-five, there being but few gray hairs in her head, and she is hale and hearty. None of her children use intoxicants nor tobacco in any form. So it appears that first-class people other than the Saints have learned that tobacco and whisky are not good. More anon,

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 11.

Editors Herald:—I have received instructions from Bro. H. C. Smith to stop at Kingfisher, Oklahoma, and do some preaching, which I did. I was there two weeks, preaching about every night. I found people there that paid good attention. I preached in three different places. At two of these Heman and Bro. J. R. Lambert and others had been before me, and I am glad to report they were highly spoken of. The record I make will have to speak for itself.

Heman also directed me to stop off at Oscar, Indian Territory, which I did, and there my time was occupied in preaching for about a month. At this point I could look over into Texas, my field of labor. I met the two Moores—John and his father, who had come to hold a week's preaching at this point, which was well occupied by them, and Bro. Simmons, and the writer. We all felt well and parted in good spirits, I going to Texas, they to their different fields.

The sub-missionary, A. J. Moore, directed me to labor where I thought I could do the most good. He wished me to labor some in Bell county, Texas, as did Heman; and I am glad they thus directed me, for I enjoyed myself in Bell county and other counties in that part for over a month. At Troy and Rogers in Bell county were my first labors in my mission, and I found good Saints. At Troy Bro. Renfrow was the elder. One week's work here and at Rogers. Bro. G. Thompson, a priest, had charge. He is a defender of the work as well as Bro. Renfrow. I labored about a week when Bro. L. L. Wight came and we went with Brn. Thompson and Norwood by team to the Central district conference fifty miles distant. We camped out on the way in old Texas style. At this conference I met Bro. Nunley, the president of the district. All moved peaceably in our sessions and the Saints enjoyed themselves well. The preaching was done by Brn. Nunley, Wight, Hays, and the writer. When the separation time came Wight went to San Antonio, and Hays and others to Navesott, and Nunley and I to preach the remainder of the week. We did so, and Bro. Nunley baptized five. He and I went from there to Cook's Point where we held forth a week with good results I think, and from there went to Rogers to hold a week's meeting. The people paid good attention and I think good was done. Last Sunday our meeting broke up and Bro. Nunley went to his appointments and the writer to this point. Here I met Bro. L. L. Wight, his wife, and daughter. His wife I had not seen for forty-one years. The meeting was very pleasant indeed. I found Bro. Wight preaching, Bro. Sheppard had left recently. The flood of water which broke loose from the clouds commencing on the 5th have hindered the people from coming out.

I never enjoyed myself better than on my mission thus far. This will be my address for quite awhile, as Heman wished me to do the most of my work in and about this point.

In love to God and his Saints,

JOHN HAWLEY.

COATS, Ark., Aug. 13.

Editors Herald:—Last Wednesday night the best meeting we ever had ended, after continuing a week. Elders Spurlock and Ward conducted the services and six families of the Saints who lived too far to go back and forth to and from the meetings, came and camped on the ground. We indeed enjoyed a spiritual feast from the ministrations of the word. The social fellowship enjoyed by all will long be remembered and not by the Saints alone, for at the basket dinner held on the grounds on Sunday the 5th inst., many of the most influential families, not of the fold, spread their dinners with us in the grove; and the echo of the meeting keeps coming to us from all sides, with nothing but words of praise and inquiry, and that too from sources where if there had not been positive prejudice, there was heretofore nothing but indifference. We feel that the work here now occupies a point of vantage above that of any of the sects, and only fear that it will be lost if it is not followed up, for the elders had to leave their own appointed field to come over here into Macedonia, and they will probably be unable to return soon again.

There were two baptized, and we feel that the word became rooted in many hearts from which we hope to see fruition in the future. We regretted very much that Apostle Heman C. Smith was prevented from being with us, after his endeavoring so persistently to effect such an arrangement.

Yours for truth,

J. J. HASBROUCK.

COLDWATER, Mich., Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—The work at Knox is on high ground; a great awakening manifest. The pastor of the Christian Church announced as follows through the county papers: "The pastor will discourse August 5, on the difference of the claims between the Latter Day Saints and the true Christian Church." We were on hand but kept our presence dark until the appointed hour. When we walked in it is needless to say that surprise, chagrin, and disconcert reigned for a few moments. The pastor read the entire third chapter of Second Timothy, emphasizing the sixth verse: "For of this sort are they which creep into houses and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts." I need not say how sweet our Latter Day Saint sisters felt, or with what twitch of mouth it was hurled off, as the reverend gentleman rolled this palatable morsel with pitiable precocity from his lips. The line of attack was old; 'twas stale; the old threadbare choker of "bad boy," "bad family," "bad bank accountant," "revelation on plurality," "spiritual wifery," "presumptive claims," were the chaste and classic notes of proof that the Saints' faith was founded in deception. I thought, if Israel did not move out of bondage onto higher grounds of grace and understanding, these Campbellites stay back under the dominion of old Pharaoh, and chew and gloat over the onions and garlic, upsetting the fleshpots and wallowing in the filthy soup. He couldn't give an excellent, clean, clear-cut argument to overthrow the simplest item of our faith. Stand up, ye Latter Day Saints; present the cup of the restoration to the lips of the great and say, Now swallow or be swallowed!

At the close I asked the privilege of saying a few words, which was granted. I submitted a proposition embodying the debatable ideas in his sermon and asked him to meet me in joint discussion on the merits of the two churches, but he emphatically declined. Arrangements were then made for a reply the following evening. He was good; proffered the use of his house. Of course we did not refuse his generosity, and following in the wake of Young America we took delight in "bearding the lion in his own den." The evening came and also a large audience. Poor fellow, he looked as though he never learned that Adam tumbled over the embankment sixty centuries ago, and the race in one long train, has gone on tumbling in the same direction, crash! clash! To rehearse the reply would crowd the limits of a letter, so we refrain. Suffice it to say, that change in sentiment and opinion of hundreds is indeed visible, and a county paper from that point reveals a dead line over which there is no passage, but an attempt will be made to resume in two or three weeks. This is the first opportunity we have had in giving our faith full airing to the Campbellites, so far. They have been very conservative and scarce heretofore. The good Saints there are highly elated and encouraged. Due praise is given for the noble attitude and firmness they sustained while the faith was being subjected to such a strange criticism.

On general principles, the work is well fortified in this part of the district. The only drawback is the lack of laborers to honor the numerous calls. Bro. I. M. Smith is in the field east of Angola, Indiana. The disciples are firing away in that country, too; they talk of getting Braden to give us a brushing up, but perhaps he will not be through at Anderson in time for that.

I must not omit to say that the Sunday schools of the district are progressing remarkably well. The convention recently held at Knox did grand work; sorry the minutes were misplaced. The programme surpassed anything we have ever seen, considering the opportunity, number, and ages of children. It was remarked upon by all. The above concerning the Sunday school may be late, but if past due the principal should be given with some interest. I have kept up action at Girard, Dimond, and Fowler while at Coldwater. We baptized two heads of families at Coldwater branch two Sundays ago. Many are believing, but as it was in the days of Jesus, they "fear the people," and the old Devil is doing his best to choke out the seed by lying and intrigue. The Saints are yet in strong faith, zealous of good works, and hoping and praying for peace and prosperity to come to Zion.

Am just now having a battle with my opponent in the West over the adoption of King James' Bible as standard in chief during the coming conflict. He does not want it; would rather take the revised—too much like going from the "effulgent light of the nineteenth century to the dim twilight of the seventh." I do not know which he will decide to adopt.

With love for all,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

Editors Herald:—Have been assisting Bro. G. M. L. Whitman in holding tent meeting at Blair, Nebraska, of late. Have found the interest all that could be expected. We have received good treatment and a fair hearing. We had the privilege of baptizing nine there August 18. I came here for yesterday's services, leaving Bro. Whitman to continue the effort at Blair. I return there to-morrow and expect to remain until the 25th. We have had upwards of forty additions by baptism in Eastern Nebraska this year. Am sorry our ministerial force has been decreased. Am hopeful in the work.

THE TESTIMONIES OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

THE above caption will no doubt suggest to the mind of the reader the line of thought that will be taken by the writer. I am free to admit that the line of thought has been suggested by reading an article in Herald of January 24, 1894, entitled, "To whom it may concern;" and if I should differ in my opinion from my brother, I desire to do it in the kindest of feelings.

I do consider that the writer of the above article has taken an extreme view in some things, and it may be possible that I may take an extreme view in the other direction. If this be so judged by the readers of the Herald, then it would, to the writer's mind, be the part of wisdom to take the medium course. We quote from said article:—

While to the mind of those who have been highly favored with the "signs" referred to it may seem the part of gratitude to often tell of them in public, and while it may appear that their testimony of such things will be the most convincing evidence they can furnish of the gospel's truth to the outer world, it should nevertheless be sufficient for them to know that the Master has commanded otherwise.

We gather from the foregoing that the writer believes that the Master has commanded his people that they should not testify often in public, concerning the marvelous manifestations of God's power, as he gives us to understand a little further on, in case of healing, miracle, divine interposition, revelation, prophecy, etc. The word often is rather ambiguous, and does not state as to how many times we may testify, but concedes the privilege of testifying sometimes. Now we suggest that if the Master had commanded his people to not testify of these things there would have been no ambiguity about it, but we should have known exactly what he meant. But we are referred to Matthew 8: 4; 9: 30; Luke 8: 56 and 9: 36 to prove that the Master has commanded otherwise. We turn to Matthew 8: 4 and read:—

And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man; but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

Multitudes were present when this act of healing the leper was performed, hence it could not be for fear of the publicity of the thing that he commanded him to tell no man. It may be asked, then, why he commanded to tell no man? We answer that we cannot tell the reason why, but it could not be to prevent him bearing testimony to the Master's wonderful power and goodness, for certainly the multitudes present would noise abroad the wonderful manifestation. But this scripture that we are cited to, to prove that the Saints should not often bear testimony publicly, if of general application would prove that the people of God should not bear testimony at all, when the writer only used it to prove that they were not to do so often. And you know it is a principle in logic, that what proves too much proves nothing.

To the writer's mind the cases referred to, of the two blind men after being healed, and the dead maid being raised, and their being commanded to tell no one have not the least bearing against the Saints bearing testimony publicly to the marvelous goodness of their heavenly Father vouchsafed unto them, else the Savior would have reproved the leper who came back when he saw he was healed, "and with a loud voice glorified God, and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks; and he was a Samaritan." (Luke 17.) It is remarkable here that the Savior did not command him to tell no man that he was healed, nor the other nine when they should be healed; neither did he reprove him, although he in a loud voice glorified God, and publicly, too, in a village in or near Samaria. But on the other hand he approved of his act, and censured the nine who returned not to glorify God. On another occasion, when he was traveling on a beast, going to Jerusalem, followed by a large multitude, he was praised thus:—

The whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen, [and publicly too]; saying, Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest.

And some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master, rebuke thy disciples. And he answered and said unto them, I tell you that, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out.—Luke 19: 37-40.

This does not look much as if he had commanded them, in a general sense, not to bear testimony to the mighty works they had seen; but on the contrary he commended them for so doing, and with strong emphasis, saying that the stones would have cried out if they had not.

The last quotation we are cited to, was concerning the three disciples being with Christ on the holy mount, and they agreed among themselves not to say anything of what they had seen; but not a word is said about being commanded of their Lord not to say anything about it. In Matthew 17: 9 it states:—

Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen from the dead.

After that time they were permitted to bear testimony of the circumstance, or we would not have had an account of it. Peter we know testified of it in his second general epistle, first chapter. If it could be shown that the people of God do break his commandments by bearing testimony publicly in the social meetings to the goodness and power of God in giving sight to the blind, in the healing of the sick and afflicted, or to any of the mighty works of God bestowed upon his children, then our brother's remarks concerning Saul's disobedience and Samuel's arraignment of him upon his return with the spoils might have a seeming application; but in the absence of such proof to the writer's mind they seem gratuitous. The writer desires to be understood that he indorses the language of Samuel, the servant of the Lord:—

To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

We have quoted to us a portion of a revelation from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants which reads:—

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.

The intent of this quotation was to prove that some of the things which had brought the church under condemnation was the breaking of the commandment of God, by boasting themselves of the signs that should follow the believer and speaking them before the world, as is shown by his suggestion just prior to his quoting that portion of the revelation concerning the signs. Now we offer a suggestion that it could not be for bearing testimony of the mercy and goodness of God in bestowing these gifts upon his children, thus proving his promises to be yea and amen, that they could be accused of unbelief. It would be a manifestation of belief we would think rather than unbelief, and therefore they could not come under that condemnation and their minds could not have become darkened in that regard. We offer another suggestion; that the quotation in the paragraph concerning the signs had no connection with the one quoted concerning the condemnation, therefore we think had no reference to it; but the apostles of God were commanded to go into all the world (like unto the command in Mark) and preach the gospel, and they were promised that every soul that believed their words and was baptized in water for the remission of sins should receive the Holy Ghost and the signs enumerated in the next paragraph should follow them; and in this connection the Lord gave the command that those who received them should not boast of themselves, neither speak them before the world, which command related to the future and not to the past.

We will quote a portion of the word of the Lord given to us as a guide in the use of these gifts, or in bearing testimony, to disobey which would be disobeying the command of God, and treating lightly the things received. The revelation from which we quote, is the forty-sixth section of the Book of Covenants:—

But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally, and that which the Spirit testifies unto you, even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men, for some are of men, and others of devils. Wherefore, beware, lest ye are deceived, and that ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefited, that seeketh or asketh of me, that asketh, and not for a sign that he may consume it upon his lusts.

Then follows a description of the gifts of the Spirit, or the signs which should follow the believer. Now that which the Spirit testifies is the mind of the Lord what we should do, and another revelation says:—

That which cometh from above is sacred, and should be spoken only by constraint of the Spirit.

If we do that which the Spirit testifies, and by constraint of the Spirit, in all holiness of heart, (and if we do there will be no boasting of ourselves,) we are certainly doing the will of God and cannot come under condemnation, and no matter how often the Spirit testifies or the Spirit constrains us, it is right in the sight of the Lord and is not treating lightly the things we have received.

Now the gifts of the Spirit are given, according to this revelation, for the benefit of those that love God and keep his commandments, and him that seeketh so to do. This being the case, if a man receives the gift of wisdom and he keeps his wisdom to himself and never manifests it in the congregation of the Lord and before the world who meet with them to investigate the doctrine, and who are seeking to keep the commandments of the Lord, how are they going to be benefited by that gift in the one who never exercises it? The writer thinks that God would soon take the gift away from him, and would give it to another who would use it for the benefit of his fellow man and for the glory of God. So we reason about all the gifts as they are enumerated in the word of God in the section just referred to; they are each and all given for the benefit of those who love God and keep his commandments and they that seek so to do.

The above revelation says that we are not to cast anyone out of our sacrament or confirmation meetings who are earnestly seeking the kingdom, and that whatsoever the Spirit testifies (though those of the world are present) that the Lord would we should do with all holiness of heart, etc., and that if performed according to these instructions must be in accordance with the mind of the Lord, and cannot be considered as breaking the commandment of the Lord; namely, "Neither speak them before the world."

If, as our brother would infer in his article, it has been done in the congregation of the Saints when strangers were present—that the Saints have in a boastful manner related the marvelous manifestations of God to them in cases of healing, miracle, divine interposition, revelation, prophecy, etc., then the wrong rests in their boastfulness, which if really so was not done by constraint or by direction of the Spirit of God, hence condemnation rests upon those who have so wrought. It could not be that condemnation would ensue for testifying according to the mind of the Spirit though strangers were there, for whatever the Spirit does is for a purpose, and that purpose will be accomplished. If because those of the world were present and those speaking before them were breaking the command of the Lord what will be done with the many testimonies of the Saints to the effect that they, although of the world, were convinced of the truth of the work by the testimonies of the people of God in social or sacrament meetings? Will those people of God assembled on the day of Pentecost upon whom the Spirit descended and caused to speak in tongues before that vast multitude of the world, some of whom accused them of being drunken, but of whom Peter stood up and spoke and denied the charge, and said it was that Spirit spoken of by Joel the prophet, will they come under the condemnation of speaking before the world? O, no; they did it under constraint of the Spirit, and did not boast themselves, therefore were not condemned.

Neither are the Saints of God who assemble at our reunions and conferences under condemnation who testify of the wonderful power of God made manifest in their behalf, in cases of healing of the sick, of heavenly visions and dreams, and that prophesy and speak in tongues, and interpret the same, etc., before the large numbers of the world, if they do so by constraint of the Spirit. Neither do we believe that the Herald is to be condemned either as principal or as accessory before the fact, for causing its subscribers to carry to their neighbors and friends of the world the testimonies of the people of God of the remarkable displays of his power in healings, in visions, in prophecy, etc., that are found in its pages. What then is the meaning of the command, "Neither speak them before the world"? To the writer's understanding it is the same as the Savior's command in the New Testament: "Cast not your pearls before swine, lest they turn again and rend you." It is before such characters that we are not to speak them; those who fear not God nor regard their fellowmen who have the swinish habit of devouring and destroying. The pearls or gifts of Spirit would be of as much value to them as for man to put before the hog to eat the pearls or diamonds of the mines. The Spirit of God never would constrain anyone to speak of such pearls before such characters, for as the word says:—

For what doth it profit a man if a gift is bestowed upon him, and he receiveth not the gift? Behold, he rejoices not in that which is given to him, neither rejoices in him who is the giver of the gift.

To show still further what is our understanding of what is meant by the language, "Neither speak them before the world," we will do so by relating a circumstance that came under the writer's observation. When attending General Conference (no matter where or when) the writer was walking the streets of the city during the interval between the morning and afternoon sessions, and perceiving quite a crowd assembled on one of the streets, and distinguishing a brother in the crowd whose actions denoted that he was talking to them, my curiosity was excited to go and hear what he was conversing about. Arriving there I discovered that there was a large number of the outside world, with two or three brethren listening to a discussion between the aforesaid brother and another man who seemed to be the chief speaker, but others of the world would put in their quota once in a while, and so did one or two of the brethren to help our brother. The topic of discussion was, "These signs shall follow them that believe." After some little time had been spent in the discussion (or free fight it might be termed), the brother perceiving that he made no headway in converting them to his side of the question thought that he would give a clincher (at least the writer thought he did) to support his side of the argument by relating one or two (I think two) remarkable cases of healing that had come under his observation. Did he convince them? Far from it. The peculiar sign of unbelief was expressed in their countenances and their outward manifestations some speaking outright that they did not believe him, and particularly the leading spokesman. That to the writer's mind, was "speaking them before the world," and broke the command; that was casting pearls before swine, and certainly (to our mind) they trampled them under their feet and did by their acknowledged unbelief turn again and rend him in the sense the Savior meant.

Then, brethren and sisters in the Lord, who have been blessed with so many precious pearls, who have been miraculously healed by the power of the living God, who have seen many wonders and mighty works performed by that same power through the administration of those who were clothed with authority to act in the name of their divine Master, and through the exercise of faith in his name; who have been blessed with heavenly visions, with divine interpositions in various ways through the medium of that blessed Spirit which "Searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God," let us not boast of ourselves, in being the recipients of these precious gifts, but like Ammon, (see Book of Mormon page 275,) who rejoicing before his brethren over what God had wrought in their behalf in enabling them to bring the Lamanites to repentance, though reproved by his Brother Aaron of boasting, replied:—

I do not boast in my own strength, or in my own wisdom; but behold, my joy is full, yea, my heart is brim with joy, and I will rejoice in my God; yea, I know that I am nothing; as to my strength, I am weak; therefore I will not boast of myself, but I will boast of my God; for in his strength I can do all things; yea, behold, many mighty miracles we have wrought in this land, for which we will praise his name forever. . . . Behold, who can glory too much in the Lord? Yea, who can say too much of his great power, and of his mercy, and of his long suffering towards the children of men?

I cannot close this article better than by stating that these sentiments of Ammon are my sentiments, and hope and pray that they may be the sentiments of every child of God; that we may not boast in our own strength, but in the strength of God. And those precious pearls that he hath bestowed upon us, may they be carefully preserved, and we not suffer them to be trampled under foot of evil-minded men, but use them in the way that God has pointed out in his word—only by the constraint of the Spirit.

"HARD TIMES."

WHOSE FAULT IS IT, THE CAPITALISTS' OR LABORERS'?

I HAVE read with interest an article on the "labor question" in Herald of April 25 by William Cairns, who says, "As a laborer I have thought to write and state that side of the case as I have seen and heard." Now while Mr. Cairns tells us many things that are true, let it be remembered that he only speaks from "one side,"—"that side of the case" he has "seen and heard;" so that however true his defense of the laboring man may be, it is only "one-sided" at best; and as a fellow laborer let me say that "the half has not been told," even on the side that Mr. Cairns essays to write.

It is easy enough to point out how that the capitalist is "grinding down" the laboring man, and how "that all law is in his favor," and how "the little law in favor of the laborer is never obeyed nor enforced," and how all this is the fault of the moneyed men or capitalists; but there are at least two sides to a question, and some have many sides so that such a complicated question as the "labor question" should be viewed from more than one standpoint.

Now, the writer maintains that the laboring men are to blame for the distress, poverty, and "hard times" equally as much, if not more than the capitalist or moneyed men. There are more than a thousand laborers to every moneyed man, and has it not always been so? And as the majority govern in the United States, whose fault is it if the law is all in favor of the few? There is a just law, a law of God—the law of retribution—which says:—

Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

Now what have the laboring men been sowing that they should reap such a great harvest of tares as they are continually crying about? Those who make the loudest noise about "corrupt rulers," and "unjust laws," and "brutal capitalists" are many times the first to sell their votes for a drink of whisky or beer, a few cigars, or a dollar or two, without ever questioning the character of the one voted for. Yes, the founders of our great republic said that all men should have equal rights, and founded a great nation for that purpose; but what shall we say when men will to abuse their rights and deliberately sell themselves into bondage by making themselves slaves to that which will damn both soul and body?

The laboring men of the United States spend—yes, worse than waste more money every nine months than all the banks of the country combined contain, simply for intoxicating drinks and tobacco, to say nothing about gambling and other evils. We are told that the laborer is the producer of wealth; yes, and when he deliberately wastes the products of his hard labor the few “shrewd ones” can so much the easier gather it up and when they become capitalists go to the other selfish extreme and use the very means the laborer has so unwisely wasted to further bring him into bondage.

The working men are in the majority, and always have been; and as the majority can govern, if they will, why don't they properly use the power granted them to remedy the evil? Ah! my fellow workers, you have sown to the wind and now as a result you are reaping the whirlwind, and thus many of the poor and innocent ones are made to suffer by your folly.

The writer having labored from childhood for a living and having worked with gangs on public works, speaks from experience concerning the evils of many of the working men, and those who get the very best wages are many times the first to get dissatisfied and go on a strike and thus ruin the business of the man who furnishes them a living.

The writer knows two different places where miners were making five dollars and over a day, yet they were not satisfied, but struck and ruined the business of the companies who employed them, so that when they wanted to return to work there was little work because of no sale for coal, as other mines had been opened and were supplying the demand. But of course the poor wives and children of such men are to be pitied, and how often you can learn from their own lips that they fare no better when their husbands make five dollars a day than when they earn one or two dollars, only the saloonkeeper does not get so much.

The writer has worked with men who would not save any of their wages no matter how much or little they earned; besides, they were ever ready to curse those who were striving to live honest and saving. However, there are good, honest laboring men who need encouragement and sympathy, and there have been men of capital who have spent their all to benefit their fellows; nor do I believe that all moneyed men of the present are bad.

The Herald editors have been severely criticised for saying that the employed were at fault sometimes as well as their employers, and yet they simply told the plain, unvarnished truth.

Mr. Cairns said:—

Much has been said about ironworkers who would not work at the wages offered, but we have yet to learn of any of the professors who have talked so much about it making any attempt to do such work, even for such good wages.

Allow me to inform you, Mr. C., that “those professors” have been doing harder work for less wages, besides, they are not ironworkers, so couldn't take their places, and if they had been they would not have cared to take their places when they refused to work themselves and stood ready to murder anyone who attempted to fill their places; and I don't think you would attempt such a thing yourself under similar circumstances. Consistency thou art indeed a jewel. Such logic is hardly worth criticism.

To conclude let me say that I have no sympathy for the grasping capitalist who desires to hoard up money for selfish purposes or to oppress his fellows, unless it would be to pity his foolishness, for Jesus called the selfish miser a “fool” because he trusted in his riches. Nor do I believe in laboring men being free from fault, but am prepared to prove by my own observations and by figures that cannot lie that they are as much responsible for “hard times” and “distress” as is the capitalist. Yes, all both rich and poor who are not living by the eternal principles of truth as revealed in the fullness of the gospel of Jesus Christ are in Mystery Babylon—under the dominion of sin and Satan, and have need for repentance—reformation of character and obedience to the truth so that they can receive the love of God shed abroad in their hearts, which only can purge out the selfishness of humanity so that they can live an unselfish life and truly love their neighbor as themselves.

I care not how rich a man may be, if he has the pure love of Christ in his heart he will use his riches for the good of his fellowman, and if he is poor he will glorify God by a pure, unselfish life even in poverty; and if he has not that love he will be a miserable failure, whether rich or poor. And so long as human selfishness predominates in the society of either rich or poor we may look for “hard times” and “distress of nations,” “perplexity,” in fulfillment of Christ's words. Come Lord Jesus to reign, thou prince of peace, that confusion may forever pass away! For truth, RELIGIO-LITERARY SOCIETY.

WHILE at Denver, Colorado, I took the liberty to suggest to the Religio-Literary Society that the city be sectionized or districted, that one or more members have charge of a district and by some method agreed upon supply every house therein with one or more tracts illustrative of our faith. It may be thought that it means work. To be sure it does, and how can any member or department of Christ's Church expect to help in the great redemptive plan without work, care, anxiety, and responsibility? Christ utilized his time in his appointed sphere in labor, travel, teaching, exhorting, reproving, etc., and bade his followers to work, watch, and pray with a portrayal of consequences to ensue if failing to work. If they were diligent, persevering, abiding, hopeful, and patient they would secure the promised prize. Can we be negligent, trifling, doubtful, impatient, etc., and yet hope to rest with the diligent and worthy?

What think you, reader, of the parable of the five, two, and one talents in the interim from the departure to the return of the Lord? There might have been no visible difference between those utilizing their talents and the one who had his talent, but how visible the difference at the time of the Lord's return, with the examination that followed. What is our prospect for the plaudit “well done” in the Lord's great examination day? What a time that will be. The Lord is to be a swift witness against the characters named in the third chapter of Malachi. I wonder if the book of remembrance or its contents will not assist the righteous Judge in making his decisions from which there will be no appeal? There can be no false swearing there, for he comes as a swift witness against the false swearer. There will be no pettifoggery, for it is a time of God's justice, therefore his decisions will be final. The time of lying, deception, intrigue, and the like is past. “Behold a king shall reign in righteousness.” Christ therefore to all true prophets and Saints is the coming man; nor will he judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears, but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and the earth shall be full of the knowledge of God, and there shall be nothing to hurt nor destroy in all the holy mountain of the Lord. How cheering the thought! But I am diverging.

Who can predict the effect of thousands of tracts being circulated throughout the various cities through the energy and perseverance of the Religio-Literary Society? It may require time and much labor to accomplish this and work in an orderly and systematic manner, but that which is worth doing should be well done, and nothing is done effectively without system and order. Mutual benefit for the members of the Religio-Literary Society is essential, but measures and labor to carry them out for the general benefit of the work should not be overlooked. I cherish no desire to become dictatorial to the Religio or any other department of the church, hence the suggestions are respectfully offered and may be taken for what they are worth only, or if worthless may be pushed to one side and no one injured.

I believe a similar sectionizing by large branches placing a priest and teacher in charge of each section, that by due diligence they may become familiar with the moral status of branch members, thus diligently striving, by proper watchcare and corresponding diligence, there may be preventives to the Saints being led into evil, as well as proper labor to adjust wrong when, despite efforts to prevent, wrongs come to the surface.

The law permits high priests, elders, and the lesser priests to travel, but provides that deacons and teachers be appointing standing ministers to the church (D. C. p. 231), which is made to appear that there is something more for the teacher to do than fold his arms and rest at ease in Zion until something is learned by Mother Grundy's method and then start off as it were, on a wild goose chase. I don't know any guaranty for class legislation or special privileges under the general auspices of God's government, but believe that every official member should aspire to a proper conception of his responsibility and thereby be better qualified to act in his own calling than any other person. To illustrate: the president may teach and explain the duties of the teacher in a general way, but he cannot instruct that officer in a way to at once qualify him to successfully meet, and deal with every exigency that may arise, for the diligent and Godfearing teacher may meet an exigency to-day never before known, needing advice and encouragement differing from all preceding advice. Hence the necessity for every official aspiring to a proficiency that he may work effectively in his own calling. It is not improbable that a watchful teacher may with a little wholesome advice prevent trouble which if neglected might involve a necessity for litigation of a serious character. He was an unwise and dangerous official who for every seeming provocation would hastily bring charges necessitating trials consuming time and money before wisely and patiently resorting to the law-imposed preparatory measures, which may supercede the necessity of a trial, and perhaps save a soul or souls from death. We ought not to think that elders' courts are for the sole purpose of gaining a victory over a foe, but rather as a last resort in the advocacy of justice and to protect the fair fame of the church, after all other lawful means have been properly brought into requisition and failed. If a proper conception of responsibility in the acceptance of an official position with due diligence, is a necessity for a proper spiritual development, then a lack of this responsibility and due diligence must militate against this spiritual development.

I have thought between ordinations to meet the necessities of the cause, and ordinations as compliments or to satisfy an aspiring or vain, ambitious spirit were different, far different, the latter being a grave error, for which (if done) some one or ones must meet the consequences attendant upon such a procedure. It is possible that my judgment may be at fault, but when seeing so much indifference among some officials, I have been almost ready to attribute that indifference to hasty and indiscreet ordination. Numerical strength is very desirable and legitimate labor, therefore, is God-like, but knowledge bespeaks our actual spiritual growth.

"MAHICANI."

THE Hon. Elijah M. Haines, late member of the House of Representatives of the United States, in the preface to his book, "The American Indian" (Uh-Nish-In-Na-Ba), says:—

The subject of the American Indian has ever been one of peculiar interest to the ethnologist and student of history; but at no time since the discovery of America has it attracted so much attention as is being given it at the present day.

I might add that the most interesting chapter of history in relation to the "red man" has neither been accepted nor understood, but it is an encouraging thought, at least to Latter Day Saints, that the evidence of the origin and former civilization of the ancient people of America is on the increase, confirming the stand taken by pioneers of this church.

I have read with considerable relish what has been written of late in relation to the Stockbridge Indians, and if acceptable add a word. Haines says:—

The Mohegans, an Algonquin word, pronounced also Mohicans and Mohigans, meaning "wolves," was a name given them, it is supposed by some other tribe of the Algonquin stock, as descriptive of their savage nature.—American Indian, p. 121.

The different people of Europe who made their homes in the "new world" had much to do in giving definition and pronunciation to Indian names, and in some instances have furnished the name.

Haines informs us:—

Mohegans were also called Mahicani, by the Dutch, Mahikanders, by the French, Morigans and Mahingans by the English, Mohiccans, Mohnecans, Mohegans, Muh-heekanew; also Shatikooks (River Indians), Algonquin stock, on the Hudson River, from Escopus to Albany. They were divided into Muchquanh (Bear tribe), Mechchaooh (Wolf tribe), and Toon-paoh (Turtle).—American Indian, pp. 153, 154.

This explanation by Mr. Haines will make plain the difference in spelling of the writers using Indian names. My preference is for the Dutch, as their spelling seems to be in unison with the Nephite ending of names. Here is what Mr. Haines has to say of the Stockbridge tribe:—

Stockbridge, originally from New England, now in Wisconsin, near Winnebago Lake; a small remnant, Algonquin stock.—American Indian, p. 163.

Much more could be written of interest on the ancient people of Joseph's land, but for the present I forbear.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northern and Central California districts:—Our reunion will commence September 28 and will continue over two Sundays. The meeting will be held near the old fair grounds, West Santa Clara street, San Jose, on the same ground on which it was held last year. It is earnestly desired that a large number of the Saints will be present. Come at the first and come prepared to remain until the close. Come in faith and prayer that a great spiritual feast may be enjoyed and the good seed sown to the saving of souls and the glory of God. All those desiring to rent tents can do so at reasonable rates on short notice at the tent-maker's near by. Those desiring to engage rooms or board and lodging in private families can do so by corresponding with Sr. Mrs. Henry Burgess, 525 West Julian street, San Jose, California. Those coming by rail can get railroad certificates for reduced fare by writing to C. A. Parkin, 3010 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, California, or J. M. Putney, Gilroy, inclosing stamp.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS REUNION.

The tent owned by the Northwestern Kansas district was pitched on the northern border of Blue Rapids, down on the bank of Blue River, for the purpose of holding therein the reunion of 1894, it being the third held in the district. The time was August 9 to 19. The location of the camp was good; and though for months the weather had been one of protracted drought, yet the place was grassy enough to make little discomfort from the dust. Also there came two rains during the reunion which effectively settled the dust for the remainder of the time. The river with its sandy bottom supplied plenty of water for teams and a newly bored well in the camp yielded bountifully for drinking and cooking purposes.

Saints were present from Marshall, Clay, Republic, Washington, Mitchell, Nemaha, Ottawa, Riley, Jackson, and Brown counties, also a few from the Nebraska border. Their number was not large, yet they were an earnest and intelligent band of the Lord's people. And though all this region has been more or less burned up by the drought this year, much corn being as dry and yellow as if stricken by a November frost, and the prospect for winter a very gloomy one, yet the Saints are trying to make the best of what they comprehend is but one of the evils foretold by the prophets are to befall the nations in the latter days. They are hopeful of the mercy of God, whereby their needs will be supplied, assisted by their own efforts to do the best they can under their circumstances.

Brn. J. T. Davis and R. L. Ware were chosen to have charge of the meetings, to arrange their order, and to appoint the speakers. Upon some days there were held both prayer and preaching services in the forenoon, but upon most days the prayer and testimony meetings lasted through the morning hours, with the usual sermons in the afternoon and evening.

Upon Thursday evening, the 9th, the first sermon of the session was preached by Bro. R. L. Ware president of the district. On Friday there was also no preaching until evening, when the time was occupied by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. There was quite a large gathering of the town people upon both occasions as well as of the Saints. On Saturday both the forenoon and afternoon hours were taken up with the conference business of the district. Bro. R. W. Davis was the speaker in the evening.

On Sunday, the 12th, at the morning prayer and sacrament service, Brn. S. C. Andes and Arthur Smith were ordained elders as provided for by the conference on Saturday. The forenoon sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, that of the afternoon by Bro. J. T. Davis and in the evening Bro. Stebbins again preached, according to appointment. Bro. R. L. Ware baptized two persons late in the day.

On Monday at the prayer and testimony meeting the two baptized were confirmed by Brn. R. L. Ware and H. A. Stebbins. The afternoon sermon was by Bro. James Hudgins of Baker, Kansas, and Bro. C. W. Prettyman of Custer county, Nebraska, preached in the evening.

On Tuesday, 14th, a very interesting prayer and testimony service was enjoyed. The sermon was by Bro. Henry Resch of Minneapolis, Kansas. In the evening Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached.

Wednesday forenoon was devoted to the usual social meeting, and it was much enjoyed. Bro. C. W. Prettyman preached in the afternoon and Bro. R. L. Ware in the evening. In addition to the brethren named as preaching and as by turns presiding over prayer meetings, there were also Brn. Mahlon Smith, Arthur Smith, and Victor F. Rogers, who assisted in these various services. On Wednesday evening Bro. R. W. Davis baptized Mr. William H. Miller, the husband of one of the sisters who was baptized on Sunday.

The Thursday morning prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. Mahlon Smith and J. S. Goble. As heretofore, so upon this occasion, there was peace, joy, and instruction by the Holy Spirit. The brother baptized the previous evening was confirmed. The afternoon sermon was by Bro. R. W. Davis from the words, "Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?"—Matt. 19: 27. He discussed the subject of the rewards to be given by the Lord to his people, and to others according to their deeds. A little before the time for the evening sermon a heavy rain came which lasted over an hour, preventing the town people from coming down to the camp, as well as many of the Saints. Hence it was decided to omit this service.

Brn. R. W. Davis and Henry Resch were in charge of the prayer meeting of Friday forenoon, 17th. It was a time to be remembered by the Saints thus gathered from far apart in these northern and western counties of Kansas. The most of them will carry in memory for months the spiritual feast that they have enjoyed together, and will live over its scenes again and again. The afternoon sermon was delivered by Bro. John T. Davis, from the words, "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail: whether there be tongues, they shall cease." His argument was against the illogical and unwarranted claim that the gifts of the Spirit of God accomplished their purpose in the first century and were no longer needed. Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached in the evening upon the subject of water baptism, at the desire of some who wished to hear the subject spoken upon by us. He presented much scriptural and historical evidence upon the necessity, the object, and the mode of baptism, as instituted by the Lord and his ministers in the first century.

On Saturday, the 18th, Bro. R. L. Ware presided over the prayer and testimony service, which was, like all the previous ones, a season of instruction and of peace. The time was fully occupied by those present, earnest words of prayer, praise, and supplication being offered before the Lord in meekness and humility of heart. At the afternoon session, Bro. Arthur Smith occupied such portion of the time as he felt to do, speaking upon the Savior's answer as to the signs that would show his second coming to be near at hand, and of the judgment day to follow. He presented the subject of the parable of the ten virgins and the condition of the church at Christ's coming. Bro. H. A. Stebbins followed upon the same subject, and as to the duties of the Saints in being faithful, prayerful, and just; that they may lay up a store of light and truth to last them through the period of darkness and trial that is even now upon all. In the evening Bro. R. L. Ware preached upon continued revelation, ably refuting the idea that all that God would give to men upon his duty to his fellowmen and to God was contained in the volume called the Bible. The speaker discussed Revelation 22: 18 and showed that these words could not apply as the world generally considers that they do. Also in the same manner he discussed the common ideas concerning 1 Corinthians 13: 8-12 and other passages of Scripture.

Sunday, the 19th, the social meeting was in charge of Brn. H. A. Stebbins and J. S. Goble. It was the last testimony meeting of the reunion and the Saints were touched with the feeling of their near separation to go far from each other on the morrow. But there was given comfort and blessing. The sermon that followed was from Bro. J. T. Davis. The text was, "Repent ye and believe the gospel." The gospel of the kingdom of God exists only in that kingdom, and when it is sent forth it is only by the authority of that kingdom. Christ came not to preach himself but the gospel in its entirety. No part could be left out. He said, "Unto this was I sent." Paul declared that the true gospel was "not in word only, but in power [or authority], in the Holy Ghost and in much assurance." A record was made, but that alone is not the gospel. There must be authority, and the presence of the Holy Spirit, the same power that was with the gospel in olden times. The assurance, or evidence, was the result and effect of its work. They received the witness of God as testimony, or "assurance" of the truth of the gospel. And we believe in the same results to-day. Every seed produces after its own kind, and the seed of the gospel must always be the same in every age, and its products the same. In the afternoon Bro. Henry Resch had charge and Bro. R. W. Davis preached upon the doctrine of baptism as a part of the perfect law of God and Christ. He spoke of the thief, and claimed that he must have known of Christ as his kingdom in order to have acknowledged him as "Lord" while upon the cross. If he had sinned he repented and was forgiven by the Savior, evidently. No doubt he had been baptized, probably by John in the days of his ministry, and knew of Christ as the coming Redeemer. The evening sermon was by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. The subject was the laying on of hands as a divine ordinance, for the ordaining of the ministry, the blessing of children, the healing of the sick, and the conferring of the Holy Spirit. After that the speaker briefly sketched the promises made by Christ and his apostles as to the power and office work of the Holy Spirit in giving knowledge of divine things and instruction from God, guiding men "into all truth."

This was the last service of the reunion. The congregation was a large one, and there was excellent order and attention. But this was so throughout the reunion, and the local brethren believe that the good seed has been sown in the hearts of several honest men and women, and that it will bring forth salvation to some.

Before the close of the service Bro. Henry Resch was ordained an elder, and Seth Sandy (who had been baptized before meeting by Bro. Arthur Smith) was confirmed. The reunion then adjourned. The Saints of the district hope to meet again next year under favorable circumstances and with the blessing and favor of God. May their desires be granted and the work roll on in the district. In it already nearly forty have been baptized since April General Conference

TO THE FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On and after August 21, 1894, my address will be Courts, Gallatin county, Montana. Please bear this in mind, and address all communications to that point.

The hot summer days will soon be over, and the most favorable time for labor will be at hand. We trust that each one may be able to realize the responsibilities resting upon him and use every effort to discharge the same. Constantly remember the watchword of the present hour, "The hastening time is here."

Do not forget to keep an accurate account of your labor, so that we may know what each one has done during the year.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Independence district conference will convene at Independence, Missouri, Saturday, September 8, at ten a. m. A full attendance of all the elders and ministry is requested. The work in hand demands our special attention. The prospect before us is bright. The field is white for the harvest, and the laborers are few, therefore come one and all and let us counsel together for the best interests of the Lord's work.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Cablegrams dated August 18 report that cholera in epidemic form has gained a foothold at Battersea, London, on the Surrey side of the Thames, where eleven persons have died of the disease.

Washington advices from the American minister to Russia state that cholera appeared earlier in the season than usual; that new cases are rapidly approaching 200 per day, while deaths have exceeded 100 daily. The Russian government has provided ample sanitary precautions, but the superstition of the peasants and their excessive use of alcoholic liquors largely nullifies the effects of these precautions. On that account the epidemic has thus far been mainly confined to the peasant class.

Irish leaders in the British House of Commons are extremely anxious about the outlook in Ireland for the coming winter, owing to the rejection of the evicted tenant's bill by the House of Lords. The danger arises from the feeling of keen exasperation throughout Ireland against the Lords and the conviction that they are determined not to pass such a bill in this parliament. The resentment of the evicted may cause them to commit crimes in some places.

The new northern railroad line of Sweden has been completed. It is about 1,250 miles long and passes from north to south through the whole length of Sweden. It extends forty-seven miles north of the polar circle.

A report compiled by the British Board of Agriculture on Canadian cattle announces that it is beyond question that a disease occurring in the lungs of Canadian cattle is contagious pleuro-pneumonia.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 18.—As a result of their connection with the recent great strike a large number of railroad men in this city are making arrangements to leave this country, claiming they have been placed on the blacklist of all the railroads and can secure no places. Forty of these have made preliminary arrangements to go to South Africa, and others are talking of going to Brazil. Firemen Olson and Kerwin, formerly of the Burlington, have brought suit against that company on the charge of blacklisting. They claim they have secured positions on the Northern Pacific and later lost them because of letters from the Burlington.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Aug. 19.—An extremely rich strike has been made in the Nettie Morgan mine, on the Leadville gold belt. The ore was found at a depth of 225 feet and assays 104.26 ounces of gold to the ton. The strike is an important one and it means that a large territory in that section will be thoroughly explored for gold.

VINCENNES, Ind., Aug. 19.—Wheat is thrashing out from 38 to 41 bushels to the acre. Late showers have helped the corn, but it will not run over 40 bushels to the acre. Hay will be about three-quarters of the usual crop. Oats are thrashing heavy.

Governor Altgeld of Illinois, after making a personal investigation of the condition of the unemployed at Pullman, has issued a proclamation asking contributions for their relief.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 20.—The great textile strike, which bids fair to prove the biggest of its kind in the history of New England, is on. It is estimated that 11,000 persons have stopped work. Among the business men of the city there is a general belief that a settlement of the whole trouble will be made within a week. At the north end of the city considerable excitement was caused when it was discovered that a dozen or more operatives had gone to work at the Bristol Mill. A mob of 1,000 people surrounded the mill for an hour and caused a small riot.

A summary of crop reports to August 22 shows that rain has aided and that conditions throughout the country show improvement.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 22.—At the convention of the Polish Roman Catholic Union today Bishop Hortsmann welcomed the delegates in a speech in which he urged them to be loyal to the church. Ignatz Czemincki of Milwaukee responded, condemning the Poles who had joined the independent movement headed by Bishop Vilatto and urging all Catholic Poles to be patriotic American citizens.

A fire at Hammondsport, New York, August 21, rendered 1,200 people homeless.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Aug. 22.—In the mills here to-day there is an increase of 2,500 looms over yesterday and 1,000 over Monday. The Cornell mill did not open this morning and the Tecumseh stopped at noon, while the Osborne will shut down to-night. The gain in looms is in the Merchant, Seacommel, and Pocasset mills. The spinners in the Globe and Sanford mills struck at noon. The mills closed at once and now 1,000 more operatives are idle.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 22.—The State Board of Arbitration has notified the New Bedford manufacturers and the striking employees it will gladly undertake to settle their differences, but as yet has not received an answer from either side. The board cannot take any action in the matter until some notice is received from the contestants.

SHICHI-GEN, Corea, Aug. 3.—A bloody battle has just been fought at Songhwan and won by the Japanese. This place is the headquarters of the Japanese Gen. Oshima, and is one of the most important villages of the kingdom. The Chinese have strong fortifications at Songhwan, and 17,000 troops are said to be stationed there.

The Japanese were determined to capture the arms and provisions, and baited the army by a clever bit of intrigue. They gave out that they were going to march back to A-San, and in fact they did parade for a considerable distance in that direction, but no sooner were they convinced of the success of their scheme in making the Chinese believe they had left the settlement than they marched with a rush straight up to the fortifications, attacking them in a body. They made a clean sweep of everything in the course of five hours' fighting. About 1,000 Chinese were killed in the engagement and seventy Japanese.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21.—Gen. Tio, commanding the Feng-Tien division of the Chinese forces, telegraphs as follows: "The Chinese Friday attacked the Japanese forces at Ping-Yang, driving them back with a heavy loss, a distance of eleven miles to Chung-Ho. The Chinese made a second attack Saturday and drove the Japanese from Chung-Ho, which is now in Chinese hands. The Japanese again lost heavily in Saturday's fighting. Another great battle is expected to-day."

The Chinese force which occupied Vashan has evacuated that place and has marched eastward in the direction of Seoul. The force, which is under Gen. Yeh, who was falsely reported to have been killed in a recent battle, has been augmented by the adhesion of numbers of sympathizing Koreans. The Chinese forces are converging on Ping-

Yang. The telegraph line at the latter point remains in the possession of the Chinese. Nine thousand Japanese troops have left Seoul and marched in the direction of Ping Yang.

He says the plans of the commission when completed will add at least half a million acres to the rich agricultural lands in the Red River Valley.

B. O. Flower's paper on "Early Environment in Home Life" in the September Arena is a plea for a larger measure of common sense and justice being exercised toward young folks growing into maturity by parents and guardians in regard to the proper functions of their bodies, and the relations of the sexes. It also shows the destiny-shaping force of the moral ideas in the atmosphere in a child's early years, and how loving care and intelligent sympathetic home surroundings and education can overcome or mitigate even bad hereditary tendencies. Beauty and truth, high ideals and example and candor about all those physical facts of life so freighted with moral perils is Mr. Flower's ideal of education for children. He believes parents do not feel their responsibilities enough; they think the whole of education is school books and the Sunday school. The greatest influences of all are in the daily lives and thoughts of the parents.

Money Spent Economically.

Money economically spent is not always judiciously spent. Why? Simply because a cheap article often requires more money spent on it to keep it in repair than it would cost to purchase the best. We manufacture nothing but the best gas and gasoline engines in the market, and results prove it. Send for catalogue. PALMER & REY TYPE FOUNDRY, 405-407 Sansome Street, San Francisco. ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

AN English writer says: Not until we learn that body and mind, or body and soul, are not separate entities, independent of each other, but that they are wedded so closely that one cannot possibly be impaired without corresponding loss to the other, will this matter of health claim just attention. A woman whose lungs are choked by corsets, whose liver is congested, whose stomach is taken possession of by dyspepsia, whose head throbs with pain, or whose nerves have run away with her will and self-possession and peace of mind, cannot comprehend or appreciate the meaning of truth, justice, and liberty, or impress it upon others with anything like the clearness and force that she could if her body could be an efficient aid instead of a deplorable clog. You cannot expect a battered, unstrung harp to give forth the harmonies of heaven. Health and freedom of mind and soul must go hand in hand with health and freedom of body, if the coming age is to realize the possibilities of a true and worthy womanhood and manhood.

Aside from other evils which affect their lives, think for one moment how the majority of our women are dressed, from their poor abused heads to their poor abused feet, and cease with me to wonder at their sickly condition. Their prisoned lungs can only flutter and gasp; they cannot draw full, deep inspirations of God's pure air. Their delicate vital organs, compressed and oppressed by wicked corsets, are weakened and displaced. Their limbs, yes, and their whole bodies, are fettered and burdened with long, heavy skirts.

We remember once of hearing a gentleman say that he had occasion the evening before to carry the clothes which his wife had worn during the day, from one chair to another, and was utterly astonished at their great weight. "Why," said he, "if I had to carry such a load as that in my office for one day, it would be the hardest day's work I ever did. How can the women endure it?"—Peoples' Health Journal.

THE LUMINIFEROUS ETHER.

SIR G. C. STOKES has recently published some interesting remarks upon a subject about which, he says, the study of light has caused him to think a good deal—namely, the nature and properties of the so-called luminiferous ether. It appeared from his discourse that Sir G. C. Stokes is one of those philosophers who regard the luminiferous ether as a conception of the scientific mind put forward as supplying the obvious need of something for light and gravity to act through or by, thereby avoiding the alternative of supposing these phenomena to be the results of action at a distance. Newton himself scouted the idea of action at a distance as too absurd for any "man who has in philosophical matters a competent faculty of thinking" to entertain. He accepted the existence of an "agent" between bodies affected by gravity; but what this necessary agent might be he was content to leave to the consideration of others. Now, as Sir G. C. Stokes points out, modern science has shifted into the background the difficulty of defining the nature of this unknown agency, by calling it the "ether," which term is in this connection no more than the mathematician's eternal x written in five letters. All that is certainly known about it is negative; while of many aspects from which the conception can be regarded it is impossible to say anything either positive or negative. Granting the physicist his ether, is this the same thing that propogates light and gravity?

Sir G. C. Stokes confesses that "we do not know." We cannot conceive of space as other than infinite—is the ether likewise infinite? Again we do not know. Does the ether gravitate toward what we call ponderable matter? This is another question to which no positive scientific answer can be given; and the same remark applies to the question as to whether the ether consists of ultimate molecules, such as those of which there is strong reason for believing that ponderable matter consists. The undulatory theory of light was greatly promoted in the first instance by the known phenomena of sound; but the latter failed to show a counterpart to the phenomena of polarization and double refraction. These phenomena are only intelligible according to the theory of undulations by supposing the vibrations of the ether differ altogether in character from the vibrations of the air which belong to sound. Hence the ether is not at all like air, and almost the only other thing known about it is that it has not been proved to possess any viscosity, and that the extremely tenuous matter of which the tails of comets are composed does not suffer any noticeable resistance in passing through the space which it is presumed to fill.—Journal of Gaslighting.

PHYSICAL CULTURE OF CHILDREN.

All outdoor games that involve running and active movements of any kind are useful adjuncts in physical development, writes Elizabeth Robinson Scovil in the September Ladies' Home Journal. An immense amount of exercise is taken under the guise of diversion. Battledore and shuttlecock, which was long a favorite amusement, is a capital indoor game where there is room to play it, and might be revived with advantage. Bean-bags, colored bags filled with beans and aimed at a ring or other mark, and the form of quoits played on shipboard with rings of rope may be utilized to furnish exercise on rainy days. Especial attention should be paid to ventilation when the children are exercising indoors. The respiration is quickened, the lungs demand more air, and there should be a plentiful supply of oxygen to meet it. Impure air poisons the delicate tissues of children; that which has been devitalized by passing through the lungs is unfit to be breathed again. If the impurities with which it is loaded could be visible we would shrink from inhaling it, and wonder at our folly when by raising the window a fresh supply is at our command.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplemental chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested. The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named, and as a general defense of Christianity. The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference. Indexed; 126 pages. Orders solicited.

REDUCED FARE TO LOGAN REUNION.

REDUCED railroad rates to the Logan, Iowa, reunion have been secured over twenty or more different lines of road, by the reunion management. For the list of roads, see notice of Bro. A. M. Fyrando, secretary of reunion, in this HERALD.

The rate granted is the usual reduction—one and one third fare for the round trip. The rules governing the sale of such reduced rate tickets require that passengers shall purchase a full fare ticket over every line of road traveled on the going trip, and with each ticket obtain a certificate of purchase from the agent. These certificates must be signed by both the railroad agent and the secretary of the reunion at Logan. The holders are then entitled to return tickets at one third fare.

Bro. David Chambers writes that other roads than those named are in the association which granted the reduction; that it covers all points in the Eastern Committee's territory. Those who may use other roads should make inquiry of agents concerning rates.

Bro. Chambers believes it would be cheaper for those living near railroads to travel by rail instead of by team, because feed will be "quite high-priced."

A large attendance is expected and a successful session anticipated.

ON UTAH STATEHOOD.

TO THOSE of the HERALD readers who may be looking for something on which to base an opinion as to the probability of the revival of the practice of plural marriage in Utah, under Statehood, we commend the following from the Salt Lake Tribune for August 14, 1894.

It must be remembered that the Tribune was hostile to the church in Utah from its inception, and for this reason the opinion now expressed in that paper that there is no good reason to fear that when Utah is fully vested with the powers of Statehood, there will be a return to the practice of polygamous marriages on the part of the Mormon Church, is of value. It is a hopeful sign for a man or a people, when those who have been at enmity recognize and acknowledge the good that may be in either.

"Will polygamy be restored under Statehood?" This is the question that has been many times propounded to the Tribune by homeseekers and information-seekers in various parts of the Union. Four years have now elapsed since the manifesto suspending the practice of polygamy was promulgated by the head of the Mormon Church and sustained by the people, but just at the present time, when the eyes of the Nation are on Utah, there seems to be a demand for some further assurance that the practice will not be resumed under Statehood. Inquiries on the subject have been coming in ever since the passage of the Utah enabling act, and even while it was pending in Congress. The Tribune reached the conclusion that the best and most satisfactory way to answer them all at one time would be through the publication of expressions of opinion from the leading men of this community. These statements were solicited from the church authorities and from prominent members of both political parties, including many who vigorously opposed the practice of polygamy and sustained the enforcement of the law in the past. It is noteworthy that not one expresses any fear that the practice of polygamy will be resumed. These opinions will answer all inquiries, expressed and unexpressed, from people at home as well as abroad, and will be read with interest.

GEORGE Q. CANNON.

President George Q. Cannon, speaking in behalf of the First Presidency of the Mormon Church, said: "There is not the slightest danger of a resumption of the practice of polygamy. The views of the First Presidency on this subject have been published so many times that any further statement would merely be a repetition. There is no more danger of a resumption of the practice of polygamy than there would be had the practice been that of burning widows. We would be annihilated by public sentiment."

One of the statements that have heretofore been made by the church leaders was that published in the Tribune in January of last year. While no direct reference was made to the practice of polygamy, the First Presidency and the twelve apostles disclaimed any desire or intention of returning to the "old conditions" should Statehood be granted, using the following language:—

"Conditions have materially changed in this Territory since the time you mention (1880-5). The intense feeling then existing between members of the church and their opponents has subsided and given way to the sentiment of mutual forbearance and respect. The animosities of the past are fast being forgotten on both sides. The different elements of the community are coming to understand each other better and recognize hidden virtues in their former opponents. There is an almost universal desire for harmony and good feeling among all classes of the community. We must not turn back the wheels of progress, nor in any way delay the desired consummation."

HEBER J. GRANT,

one of the twelve apostles and in politics a Democrat—I do not think there would be the least attempt. It would be an evidence of bad faith—punic faith, so to speak, on the part of the Mormon people to attempt any such thing as a restoration of polygamy. This feeling would prevail generally, in my opinion.

WILLARD YOUNG,

a son of Brigham Young and a staunch Mormon; a graduate of the West Point Military Academy, retired from the army with the rank of Captain—No, I do not think there is any possibility of a resumption of the practice of polygamy. No one thoroughly understanding the situation here would ask such a question.

C. S. ZANE,

Republican, under whose administration as Chief Justice of the Territory the law against polygamy and unlawful cohabitation was first enforced—At the time the semi-annual conference in October, 1890, sustained the manifesto abolishing the practice of polygamy, I was holding court in this city. The next morning three Mormons were brought into court for sentence, having pleaded guilty to the charge of unlawful cohabitation, and four Mormons applied for citizenship. All of these promised to obey the laws prohibiting polygamy and unlawful cohabitation. One of them had refused on a previous occasion to make this promise, and when I questioned him as to the reason for his change he replied that the doctrine of the church had been changed. I stated from the bench at that time that I believed the church had abandoned polygamy, and I have had no reason to change my opinion. I do not think there is any danger that the practice of polygamy will be resumed.

ARTHUR L. THOMAS,

Republican, ex-Governor of Utah and formerly a Liberal—In a supplementary report made by me as Governor to the Secretary of the Interior in November, 1890, speaking of the action of the Mormon people at the general conference held on October 4, 1890, when they ratified and adopted the anti-polygamy manifesto of President Woodruff, I said: "I have no doubt that it will be received by the members of the Mormon Church as an authoritative rule of conduct and that, in effect, polygamy is formally renounced as a church doctrine." I further said there were some who entertained doubts as to the sincerity or finality of the action of the conference, and that "so far as they reflect upon the sincerity of the people in this matter, I do not partake of them. This is one of the things which has been constantly demanded and a cheerful and not grudging credit should be given to the act."

My observation and experience since the filing of the report from which these extracts have been taken, have only strengthened the opinion formed at that time. I believe the Latter Day Saints will keep the promise they have made in regard to polygamy, and that they will not break faith with the government.

J. W. JUDD,

Democrat, and United States Attorney for Utah—My answer to be of any moment must be something more than a mere categorical reply. My advent into Utah as Judge was such as to bring me at once in direct contact with the Mormon practice of polygamy. I began the study of the Mormon people and of their social system with a view to arrive at the truth. That polygamy had become thoroughly embedded into the social system of Mormonism, and was a part of it, is a fact not in dispute; at the same time I confess I was much astonished at the small per cent of people actually in polygamy. I believe statistics show that at no time was there more than two or three per cent of the adult male population in polygamy. I discovered another important fact: that very many of those not in polygamy, while tacitly agreeing as to its rightfulness, were unwilling to practice it themselves; and that with the great majority of people the practice of polygamy was absolutely unpopular. It is unnecessary at this day to enter into a discussion of the causes for this feeling amongst the people; that it existed there can be no doubt in the mind of any man who studied the people with the purpose of knowing them as they were. Suffice it to say that the social forces operating amongst the Mormon people themselves for the abolishment of the system were so strong that the pressure from within the Mormon Church had quite as much, if not more, to do with producing the manifesto of President Woodruff in September, 1890, than any influence from without. The manifesto of the President of the Mormon Church did not accomplish the destruction of the system of polygamy: it was simply an acknowledgment of a foregone conclusion; of an accomplished fact. The overwhelming majority of the Mormon people were opposed to the practice of polygamy at the time of the publication of the manifesto; the minority who would favor it now is so small that its influence would not be felt.

If my premises are true, the conclusion must follow that there is absolutely no danger of the reestablishment of polygamy in Utah under any conditions, Statehood or otherwise. Polygamy as a system has passed into history. The Mormon people are more than satisfied that the system with all its attendant troubles and evils is a thing of the past. They do not want it any more. This much they will say to anyone. A new ambition inspires them. They are proud of American citizenship. They aspire to build a Commonwealth which will be a pride to the Union and which will bring them into patriotic sympathy with their fellow citizens of the whole country. Let no American citizen believe any such nonsense as that polygamy can be again established here; rather let him come and live with us, and if he be an industrious, well-behaved man, he will find no more hospitable people to be with, or more pleasant place to make his home in Columbia's land.

J. L. RAWLINS,

Democrat, and delegate to Congress from Utah—I am of the opinion that there is no danger of a return to old conditions or a restoration of the practice of polygamy. There has been such a change in the sentiment of the Territory as to render it impossible that such a thing will take place.

W. S. DICKSON,

Republican and ex-Liberal, and one of the leading members of the bar, under whose administration as United States Attorney the enforcement of the Edmunds polygamy law was commenced, said:—

"My opinion and belief is that the Mormon people have abandoned polygamy in good faith, and I do not think there need be any fear that the practice will ever be resumed."

R. N. BASKIN,

Mayor of Salt Lake City; a Democrat; one of the leaders of the fight waged by the Liberal party for the enforcement of the law against polygamy, said: "I do not think there is any possibility of a resumption of the practice of polygamy. To restore polygamy would be a violation of the most solemn pledges, and it would be attended by such a disturbance of our local affairs that I do not believe the Mormon people would undertake it. I give them credit for too much wisdom to suppose they would do any such thing."

C. S. VARIAN,

Republican, and ex-United States Attorney for Utah—The faith of the Mormon Church and people is pledged to the United States that polygamy shall not be reestablished. Ordinary candor and fair dealing require the acceptance of this pledge by the country. I believe the mass of the Mormon people will observe their plighted faith. But, no relapse to former conditions will be suffered. The sentiment of the American people on the question is too pronounced to permit the establishment of polygamy in any State of the Union. If occasion arose, the power of Congress to carve the State into as many Federal judicial districts as might be necessary would be exercised, when, with an amendment to the Constitution giving jurisdiction, the whole power of the Government would be brought in play to extirpate the evil.

J. R. LETCHER,

Democrat, Chairman of the Utah Commission and grand sachem of the Tuscarora Society—The general compliance of the people with the United States laws relating to such questions; the public declarations of the whole community through a convention called to frame a Constitution (as in 1887); the official proclamation of a religious denomination embracing two thirds of the population (manifesto, 1890); the formal dissolution of political organizations based on local differences and their alignment on National issues (1891-1892); the enactment of a penal statute by the Representatives of the people of the Territory (laws of Utah, 1892); and the provision in the enabling act, which requires the proposed Constitutional convention to provide by ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States and the proposed State, "that perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, and that no inhabitant of said State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; provided, that polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited"—are sufficient guarantees, past and prospective, of the effectual settlement of this question.

H. P. HENDERSON,

Democrat, ex-Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Utah, and president of the Democratic Society of Utah—I do not apprehend that there will upon the admission of Utah be any trouble on account of polygamy. On the contrary, I think that question has been settled fully, finally, and for all time to come. The Edmunds-Tucker law will have, of course, been suspended, so far as it applies to Utah upon its admission to Statehood, but there is a territorial law the provisions of which are almost identical with those contained in the Edmunds-Tucker law, and I have no doubt but that a law of similar nature will be passed by the Legislature of the State. I have no idea that the Church of Latter Day Saints will undertake to revive the practice, and I am satisfied that the great mass of the Mormon people feel as others that they are glad it has been done away with. Any attempt to revive it will, I believe, be met with vigorous opposition from them, and I believe, in fact, they are better pleased at the retirement of that clause in the teachings of their religion than people who do not belong to the church. No, sir, the church nor its followers can never afford to restore polygamy. It would injure the new State; it would kill the church.

ARTHUR PRATT,

Republican, Chief of Police of Salt Lake City—I do not think there is any danger of a restoration of polygamy. I think the church has been acting in perfect good faith. I do not believe there will ever be another polygamous marriage knowingly solemnized by the Mormon Church.

J. C. CONKLIN,

Republican, and last Liberal candidate for Mayor—I believe that the Mormons are sincere. I have talked with many of them, and I am convinced that they are acting in good faith. Furthermore, I believe that the younger Mormons will never consent to a resumption of the practice of polygamy. Of course, in the next few years they will be the leaders in the church. I think they will become so thoroughly imbued with the principles of this government that they will never consent to the practice of polygamy under the authority of the church. I don't believe there is any probability of a resumption of the practice of polygamy.

W. S. M'CORNICK,

banker, Republican, and president of the City Council—I do not understand that polygamy can be practiced without violating the Constitution that is to be framed under the enabling act. I suppose that could be evaded, but that is the least of my fears. I do not think it will be attempted.

W. C. HALL,

Democrat, chairman of the Democratic County Committee and one of the leaders of the Liberal party up to the time it was disbanded—I think the great majority of the Mormon people are satisfied with the pronouncement abolishing polygamy, and would not be willing, under any circumstances, to restore it. I think they feel better under the present than they did under the previous condition.

C. E. ALLEN,

Republican and last Liberal candidate for Delegate to Congress—Will the admission of Utah to the Union restore the old conditions? I do not believe it will. No backward steps, as a rule, are taken in political affairs. The growth of the people along these lines has been great and will be permanent.

RICHARD MACKINTOSH,

Republican and ex-Liberal, stated that there would certainly be a clause in the State Constitution prohibiting polygamous practices. He believed the Mormons would not be inclined to break the law, for if they did it would be their own destruction. The sentiment of the country is against a revival of the practice, and to antagonize this sentiment would be most unwise. That even an attempt would be made to revive polygamy, Mr. Mackintosh does not for a moment think within the range of probability.

BRO. WILLIAM NEWTON wrote from the island of Hao, Oceanica, May 11 last, the letter reaching the office August 17; three months and seven days after the date. But the letter bears a postscript dated at Island Amanu, June 2, giving two months and fifteen days for ocean and land travel for the mail that brought it. What a long, long time for correspondence.

ISLAND AMANU, June 2, 1894.—I came to this island on the 29th of last month. It is about fifteen miles from the island of Hao. Most of the people of this place belong to the church. I have not been able to gather them as yet, as they have been away and only came back to-day. I will write again the first ship that comes if all is well. It is hard to send mail from this part of the islands, as very few ships come here. The ship that takes letters goes to the Marquesas Islands, and not to Tahiti; but it will meet the American mail-ship there. This is a hard place to labor; no table to write on as a rule, sleep on the stones. I bought a thin little mattress while I was in Tahiti, or I do not know how I should get on. Have no vegetables or fresh meat, and hardly ever any soft bread, but hard biscuits. Other than this, canned beef, poorest kind of meat, and it is not always that we can get that. We get no fruit of any kind, we get some canned salmon. But I must not complain too much. I have not had worship that I could understand since I left America. I think I shall not be able to learn this language, as the people do not talk it in the parts where I am laboring, only when they read, or pray, or preach. These islands have not been visited by any of our missionaries before I came here. I will give particulars in my next letter. The Mormon elders have been here and taken away sixty-two of our members. There was said to be five hundred in these three islands a few years ago.

"AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ELDER JOSEPH LUFF."

THE Herald Office is finishing the binding of Bro. Luff's book, which is now on sale. It is a work of 385 pages, 328 of it containing the story of the author's life, the remainder comprising two sermons: "Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man" and "The modern stumbling-stone." The book is neatly printed and bound. It contains three engravings: of Bro. Luff, of Sr. Devine his mother, and of himself and family.

It is a worthy addition to our literature; it is the delineation of a life—the life of one whom God "raised up" to fill an important place in his kingdom, to do service of responsible character in behalf of the church and the world. Bro. Luff presents in graphic, interesting detail the story of his life; of his personal makeup and the surrounding conditions in his favor and against him. In its thread one sees the unmistakable providences in which he struggled and mastered himself in the school of actual, tangible realities; in which he proved the truth of the assertion: "Adversity is the best school."

It has been said, "The most impressive thing is a life." In this narrative we have a life vividly presented; its inner consciousness and outer manifestations and experiences, and the results of self-repression, of earnest toil, of faith in God. The author is a natural close observer of men and events and has the faculty of formulating his ideas in fluent, intelligible language. With him the range of travel and experience has been wide. His ability to see quickly has enabled him to collect a large amount of matter in his study of human nature and the law of the Spirit of life.

Persons who can, give their children the benefits of study in the theory of mental and moral science in institutions of learning, which is good; but in the influences of the gospel such education is obtained in fact—not only in principle, in theory, but in deeper understanding and power, by which the one so taught is made potent for good; is capacitated, and qualified to resist evil and manifest righteousness. For instance; one may learn in school the theory, the letter of moral duty, and yet fail to receive the love and power of such principles in the heart, and while in the world be lost in its evils or low standards and go down with the prevailing tide. Indeed, it is only by the Spirit of truth that truths are sensed, and fully comprehended, and fixed in the heart. Only by struggle, and pain, and the application of the testing of severe experience are men and women made free and prepared for Christlike service. Only by the teaching and sustaining grace of God can such education be acquired.

The story of Bro. Luff's life is a narrative of one so called and chosen according to God's "eternal purpose;" of one so trained, so blessed, so inspired of God. The spirit of the higher life pervades it; the range of its inner spiritualities is broad, and stimulating to similar growth. It is therefore worthy of the perusal and study of young and old. It teaches truth, and will ennoble and encourage. It ought to prove an inspiration to young people to choose the right way and be steadfast, immovable in the right.

Persons who would not hear the word preached or decline to read regular tract literature of the church will in many cases read this book with interest. To such it will be entertaining and prove a blessing. In the work of evangelistic literature it is a help. There always is room for the necessary and the good, and on this account we find a place and speak a word for this volume.

On sale at the Herald Office; price $1.25 postpaid. Address orders to David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE editor is pleased to announce that he returned from Garden Grove, Iowa, in company with Elder Columbus Scott, after occupying the opera hall for three services on Sunday, August 26. Of the services Bro. and Sr. William and Emma Ray, resident, write:—

We feel like telling what a glorious time we had here Sunday. Elders Joseph Smith and Columbus Scott paid us a visit; Elder Smith preached in the morning and afternoon and Elder Scott in the evening.

You Saints that are living where there is no branch of the church, as we are, will know how much we enjoyed it.

The churches were denied us, so we got the opera hall. The attendance morning and afternoon was fair, with a large audience at the evening meeting. They paid good attention and expressed themselves well pleased with all three sermons. We have been striving by our walk and conversation to bring about a hearing in this place. We hope the elders will not forget us lonely ones. We feel to give God the praise for his mercies to us.

REUNION.

THE General Reunion will be at Logan, Iowa, September 8 to 16 inclusive.

The hard times, long drouth, and discouraging outlook for winter will be to many an apparently good excuse not to be there; but, the times of trouble having been so long foretold, ought to be borne with in equanimity by the Saints long schooled to expect them. And, will it not be better for those inclined to be despondent to come together at the reunion and lessen their griefs and fears by sharing them with their neighbors? It will cost little, or nothing more to sustain oneself and family at the reunion than at home; the time spent in preparation, going and coming being the chief outlay; and surely those who can be there under any circumstances can spare that much.

There will be much to instruct and interest in the services; and the spiritual strength of all attending will be renewed, if coming in the spirit of humility and trust, in which men and women should worship.

Besides, the renewal of old acquaintances, the making of new ones, the friendly intercourse on the camp ground, and the outdoor life will help the health of all, if proper providence and care are used in eating and drinking.

Come, good Saints, let us be joyful in the Lord.

DEATH OF SISTER DANCER.

SR. ROSALIA H., wife of Bro. David Dancer, died at Lamoni, Iowa, on Tuesday, August 28, and was buried from the family residence on the 30th, Elders H. A. Stebbins and J. H. Hansen conducting brief, unostentatious services, according to her request.

A large attendance of Saints and friends, and the general manifestations of sorrow witnessed the high esteem in which Sr. Dancer was held by all who knew her.

She was a woman of rare qualities of heart and mind. One of her chief virtues found expression in "remembering the poor," for whom her sympathies were boundless and in which her charity was widespread. She has gone to her rest in light, worthy of her crown, which is sure and eternal.

Bro. Dancer and his family have the sincere sympathy of God's people in their bereavement.

PLEA FOR AUTUMN LEAVES.

IN the September issue of Autumn Leaves Sr. Walker, its editor, announces her intention to turn that publication over to the Board of Publication. For particulars see her full statement under the editorial heading, "The future of Autumn Leaves."

The question of supporting the Leaves is presented for the consideration of the Saints. It is the wish of Sr. Walker to bring its subscription list up to the former standard of two years ago, when times were good and the magazine enjoyed its most liberal patronage. This is a laudable purpose, in which its editor deserves support and active coöperation. Sr. Walker has been a pioneer in many excellent and necessary lines of effort and has stepped forward and risked her personal financial interests in order to put into operation various movements that have told effectively for the general good. By her persistent efforts the Hope has twice been enlarged and maintained, the publication of general Sunday school and children's literature been aided, and the Home Column become a power for good. Not the least has been the publication of Autumn Leaves with its general lines of literature, suited to the capacities of old and young, with its special departments, in which the youth of the church have found many treasures of knowledge and in which their individual talents have been reflected for the common good.

To let Autumn Leaves go down or to remain with a diminished list is to permit one of the necessary forces of the church militant—a magazine devoted to the especial interests of its youth—to become lessened in vigor, whereas it ought to be maintained.

We are aware that demands are many and times hard, but are also aware that the gain in spiritual and general prosperity to a family or friend derived from the expenditure of $1.50 for a year's subscription to the Leaves will far outweigh the money value of that amount.

Boys and girls—young people in general—require the blending of the true religious spirit with all their studies and general education. While the world issues much for good in this direction, it lacks in tone and spirit a something supplied alone through the channels wherein the true life runs and from which the light reflects in purer, clearer rays, unmarred and undimmed by worldly misconceptions and erroneous beliefs.

To those who recognize that in legitimate channels of usefulness the present workers and rising generations of Zion's children are to find the lines of direction that shall assist in educating their powers for good and enable them to become prepared by intelligent training and applied consecration, we commend consideration of Autumn Leaves as a factor in the great educational work, and recommend that the Saints sustain it on the lines on which it has done its work, and in which we trust it will be continued in its future publication by the church.

Sr. Walker will in all probability be continued as editor of the Leaves.

Address subscriptions to David Dancer, Lamoni, Iowa. Price $1.50 per year.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. ETZENHouser writes from Middletown, Ohio, August 27:—

The conference at Highland was well attended considering the times; peaceful and profitable sessions were had. The hospitality of Saints and friends was free as the water of a brooklet. The aftermath showed four baptisms, well-attended services, and two services of intense interest at Sinking Springs. Bro. Griffiths presided in a meek and dignified manner, lining matters up in the line of the late revelation. The district by resolution asks the Sunday schools within her borders to get into line and use the Sunday school Quarterlies.

Bro. Charles J. Hunt, writing from Quimby, Iowa, August 24, says:—

Held two meetings here in the gospel tent. Good attendance and attention.

Bro. J. W. Waldsmith wrote from Nebraska City, August 24, of recent labors:—

We have just closed a series of six meetings at the Union branch—Bro. D. R. Baldwin and self. We had a good turnout and good interest. We believe some will join us ere long.

Bro. F. G. Pitt was at Joy, Illinois, August 28, whence he wrote the following:—

I am laboring at present in Kewanee district, preaching every night. Last week at Henderson, only moderate interest. This week till Friday at Joy, Friday night at Millersburg, and from there to conference at Buffalo Prairie, next Saturday and Sunday. Our tent meetings at Joliet we consider on the whole a success. We made friends, and no enemies that we have heard of; and several have given their names for baptism. We are in hopes that a branch will be organized there in the near future. We expect to give the tent a trial in Chicago about September 15. It is now at Wilmington, Illinois.

Bro. D. M. Rudd, Oskaloosa, Iowa, August 24:—

Will close tent meetings here next Sunday and ship tent to Runnels where conference will be held in it.

Bro. E. E. Williams writes from Marceline, Missouri, August 22. He is trying to do what all should do:—

I am here all alone, trying to live worthy the name I bear. Bro. D. E. Tucker was here in May, preaching, and I think much good was done. Some are inquiring after the truth. Times have been very hard here the past three months. We are doing better now.

Bro. J. R. Anderson writes from Lebeck, Missouri:—

The work is onward in these parts. Lots of openings to preach. We have been passing through severe trials here this season; a great deal of sickness, the Saints having their share.

Bro. Henry Sparling, wrote from Willow Springs, Missouri, August 29:—

Baptized two noble people here, the faithful labors of Grandma McGowen and her daughter, Sister Lay. They have striven to build up the work here. Their work has been slow, but they have laid a sure foundation, which makes it easy for an elder to build upon. Bro. Henry Sparling will meet one Rev. Bradshaw, of the Missionary Baptist Church, in discussion on the church proposition, commencing September 16, four miles west of Cabool. Bro. Joseph Ward will meet Rev. J. C. Cowen of the Caristian Church, will discuss the church proposition and Book of Mormon, commencing September 23, if it does not fall through. It is to be held at Rogersville, Missouri.

Of the Maysville reunion, Bro. A. S. Cochran wrote August 31, from camp:—

One was baptized yesterday by Bro. John Rounds; another, and perhaps more, will be baptized Sunday. The preaching has as a rule been excellent; audiences on Sunday and evenings have been all that could be expected. Sunday school exercises were very interesting. There are many tents on the grounds—a larger number than last year. Those in charge seem encouraged by the number in attendance. Brn. Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair are expected to-day. The prayer services have been of an interesting character, and the Spirit's presence sensibly felt. The indications are that the meetings will be a decided success, so far as removing prejudice is concerned, and affording the Saints an enjoyable time. Have had fair success selling books and receiving subscriptions.

Bro. J. S. Roth, Grinnell, Iowa, August 28:—

We closed our tent meeting at Amber on the 26th. We had good interest and very large attendance, some coming five or six miles almost every night. An infidel came the last night, and after meeting came to me and bade me good-bye and said that if I ever preached there again he would come to hear. Although none were baptized, a number are very near the kingdom. Some said that if ever they joined any church it would be ours. May the Lord lead them into the light. O. B. Thomas is at Maquoketa. I came home to go to Logan reunion.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Farwell, Michigan, August 28:—

The Gilmore two days' meetings are over; we had a good gathering. I was the only elder present, but we were blessed, comforted, and cheered. Three more were baptized, and others are believing. Weather very dry; fires raging; crops poor.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH, reported from Sedalia, Graves county, Kentucky, that there has been a fair degree of activity on the part of the ministerial force in his field, resulting in about one hundred baptisms up to July 1 of the conference year. He has labored in the Indian Territory with Bro. J. D. Erwin at Standley, Dexter, and Wilburton; in Arkansas at Rogers, Rascal Flats, and Bald Knob; with Bro. M. M. Turpen at latter place, where they organized the Shady Grove branch with eleven members. He had also labored at Memphis, Tennessee, and Sedalia, Kentucky.

The Iowa State fair will be held at Des Moines from August 31 to September 7 inclusive. The society has been using every available means to make this, the forty-first time that the State has shown its resources, a complete success; and, notwithstanding the drouth and hard times, the exhibits will be wonderful. All who can should attend.

Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair departed for Maysville, Missouri, on the 30th ult. to attend the reunion at that point.

Bro. J. W. Wight left Lamoni on the 29th ult. for his field in Northwestern Iowa, going via Maysville, Missouri, where he will be present during the closing days of that reunion.

Seven or eight have been baptized of late at and near Lamoni by Brn. A. S. Cochran, H. A. Stebbins, and R. M. Elvin.

One was added to the Davis City, Iowa, branch, Elder J. McDiffit administering the rite.

Bro. J. M. Stubbart, located in business at Octavia, Nebraska, writes reporting himself busily engaged in gospel work as circumstances permit. He preaches on Sundays at Octavia, Webster, and North Bend, at times holding two meetings per day. He is blessed with liberty and attention and is baptizing some. He recounts the recovery of his sister from serious and long standing illness after the administration of laying on of hands and her baptism and confirmation. He will continue labor unless the poor health of his wife prevents.

Don't forget our list of church books, tracts, and Sunday school supplies—and the HERALD. The Abstract of Temple Lot Suit Decision, etc., are also on sale. See advertisements of publications. Complete descriptive catalogue mailed to any address on application.

Bro. T. H. Moore, Providence, Rhode Island, writing August 20, gives news of good work being done at Cranston, near by. Many strangers attended the general and Sunday school meetings of the Saints, among them a local minister, and all expressed pleasure at what they heard and felt in the services.

Bro. B. F. Pollard, residing at Douglas, Red River county, Texas, and writing from Isaca, that State, reports Brn. J. D. and E. A. Erwin as creating quite a stir among the people of that region, who are considerably awakened religiously by the preaching of the word. Four were baptized and a number of others confessed belief, who promise to obey when Bro. J. D. Erwin returns in October. Bro. Pollard invites help from the ministry.

The HERALD makes no charge for insertion of notices, minutes, or other matter essential to the interests of any department of church work; including Sunday school conventions, Daughters of Zion, Zion's Religio-Literary Society, etc. This by way of explanation in answer to queries.

The Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy road announces its "last cheap Sunday excursion of the season," "from Grant City and Chariton to St. Joseph and return," for September 9. See regular notice.

Bro. John Smith arrived out, England, Milnrow, Lancashire, August 14, well, and found some things to encourage him.

Brn. J. B. Gouldsmith and G. W. Beebe have been doing tent work at Taberville, and in the vicinity of Monegaw Springs, Missouri, the results of which the former reports as good in making friends and other openings. Brn. Manning and Ezzel assisted them.

Bro. Russel Archibald wrote this encouraging word, of the progress of the work in St. Louis, August 29: "The work here continues to move forward. Twenty-three have been added to the branch by baptism since General Conference, and the cause has not suffered because of our failure to be heard at the big tent, as there is always a reaction in such matters."

Bro. J. C. Clapp and Sr. Mary A. Twaddle, of Tulare, California, both write warning against a confidence man, mentioned in the HERALD of August 22, who has been swindling some of the California Saints, representing himself as a minister of the church, and borrowing sums of money. He is clubfooted (cloven-footed too it appears), has dark eyes, and goes under various names. Beware of him.

Bro. J. C. Foss, Rockland, Maine, August 29: "The work is gaining ground slowly here. I baptized two more yesterday; others near. I preach in three places now.

By letter from Bro. M. F. Gowell we learn that Sr. Gowell, his wife, died suddenly during the Eastern Reunion, at Tenant's Harbor, Maine. We regret to learn of this sad visitation.

"It is a great deal better to live a holy life than to talk about it. We are told to let our light shine, and if it does we won't need to tell anybody it does. The light will be its own witness. Lighthouses don't ring bells and fire cannon to call attention to their shining—they just shine."

SYNOPSIS OF READING, CHAPTER SEVENTEEN, HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING. TRAINING A CHILD TO COURTESY.

COURTESY gives a man an advantage in life beyond all that wealth or health can give; discourtesy, or want of courtesy, places a man at a disadvantage though he possess every other trait and quality. Courtesy is not a natural quality but a result of training. To extend courtesy it is necessary to cultivate a spirit of unselfishness and a fitting regard for the rights and feelings of others. Much study is requisite on the part of those who would teach and practice the principles of courtesy and its expression.

Courtesy is not merely a surface finish of manners, but a feeling of good-will and kindness of which politeness and fine manners are the expression rather than the essence. The self-respect of a courteous man is shown in his consideration of the comfort and welfare of others, and his courtesy is evidenced by his lack of self-assertion and his willingness to contribute to the happiness of those with whom he comes in contact.

Personal attractions, such as graceful bearing, taste in dressing, elegance in manners, choice of language, careful tone of voice, etc., may be present when true courtesy is lacking, and persons possessing these personal attractions often appear at a disadvantage while others who have no attractions of face or figure or who give no attention to manners or dress are so unselfishly thoughtful of the comfort of others that they are loved by all who know them. They speak kindly because they feel kindly. They give no thought to themselves or to the impression they are making upon others. By keeping self in the background they win admiration, respect, and affection. Real courtesy is impossible except where self is practically lost sight of.

In training a child to courtesy it is better to teach him to be thoughtful of the comfort of others rather than to teach him to be forgetful of self; in this way his thoughts go out to his fellow beings and self-forgetfulness is the result rather than the cause of his effort. If he were taught to forget self the result might be painful self-consciousness and consequent bashfulness and embarrassment. This distinction in methods of training should be borne in mind by all teachers of courtesy.

True courtesy includes much more than an expression of thanks for kindnesses shown and in ordinary salutation and greeting. Many a boy, while courteous at all points of conventional etiquette, exhibits lack of courtesy in his intercourse with others; he is more ready to talk of himself and his own interests than to interest himself in the welfare of others; often he is at a loss for a topic of conversation when the theme of his own immediate concerns, is exhausted. Parents should train a child to make it his business to find out what his playmates would enjoy and to shape his own interests to that end for the time being.

True courtesy involves a readiness to apologize for failures or mistakes. A reluctance to proffer apologies is evidence of a lack of the spirit of courtesy. If a child is lacking in courtesy his parents are understood to be at fault in his training, and if a child is not trained to courtesy he is at a disadvantage as long as he lives.

Personal embarrassment and a lack of freedom of expression in the presence of others are usually the result of absorption in one's own interests and a lack of interest in the welfare of those with whom he comes in contact. The surest protection against these disadvantages is the wise training of children to have an interest in the welfare of others, and so they will always be courteous as a result of good training. C. WHAT TO DO WITH THE CHILDREN DURING VACATION.

FIFTH PAPER.—SOUL LIFE OF BOYS AND GIRLS.

WHEN school is in session, boys and girls have little time for other than their text books. Any other reading must wait until vacation comes. Instead of the school "ma'am," the mother now becomes the intellectual guide. These are days of high possibilities to her children, and a mother would do wisely to consider her opportunities well.

The young minds are beginning to unfold, and to roam in the realm of thought and fancy. Young hopes and aspirations are sending up their tender shoots. Youthful sentiments, vague longings, a yearning for companionship that can sympathize with them now begins to possess them.

A mother should expect this period of transition and be prepared to meet it. Gently, intuitively, delicately she may win the confidence of the young soul that, unconsciously, is reaching out for congeniality as the flowers turn to meet the sun. Unperceived, she directs the youthful impulses. Tactfully she helps those vague, conflicting fancies and feelings to understand themselves. Quietly she floats away the clouds of doubt and perplexity, and lets the light and force of the young mind shine through. Unobtrusively she wends her way into the heart of her child. She becomes their mental companion and the confidant of their spirits. She shares their hopes, their aspirations, and their longings. Their secret thoughts and fancies are hers. She is one in the child's disappointments, and one in his triumphs.

Mothers, to you, and you alone belong these rights and privileges, and how jealously you should guard them. Do not let your child drift away from you, and live in a world of its own in which you have no part nor understanding. A child is a frail, pitiful little bark upon a great ocean. And oh! could you know the yearnings of that young heart, the soarings of that youthful mind; how much they want and need counsel and companionship, not so many children would have their tender feelings rebuffed and wounded at the uncomprehending stupidity of their parents.

As young as you think your child, maybe a little ambition that took root in the other world is beginning to spring into life. A mother should be the first to preceive the signs of the awakening, and become its most jealous guardian. The child needs older experience and wisdom to guide him, think for him, plan for him, hope for him.

What is more to be pitied than that lonely child who struggles alone with his or her own ambitions and perplexities? whose very soul cries out, "Oh, if I only knew what was best to do!"

Rose Hartwich Thorpe, when only a young schoolgirl, wrote slyly upon the back of her slate one evening, when she was thought to be getting her lessons, that beautiful poem, "The Curfew shall not Ring To-night," because her parents failed to appreciate the creature of the soul that was growing with the body of their child.

It is cruel to leave the youthful footsteps to blunder along alone, trying at this and trying at that, endeavoring to find out themselves. Maybe, after years of struggling and discouragements, triumph is finally won. But how often adverse elements overcome a gentle, timid spirit and,

"Fall many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Every child must encounter obstacles and sorrows enough in the course of its life. It should be spared every such experience that is within a parent's ability to save it.

A child's nature at this unsettled period is very sensitive. It requires fine tact to win his confidence. His needs must be intuitively felt, rather than openly acknowledged.

Nothing hurts a sensitive child more than to have his peculiarities held up to everybody's view. It is very embarrassing to a child who has shown some ability to expect too much of him. It is generally characteristic of such natures to be timid and shrinking, and nothing can hurt them keener than to feel that some one will be disappointed in them if they fail to come up to that one's expectations. It should be remembered that talent or genius is a delicate thing and cannot be forced.

Often children are urged to do what they have not the ability for. They exhibit some inclination, which, as they grow older, is found to have been nothing more than childish precocity. Cultivate intellectual balance and symmetry of character, and let the proclivities take their own course and develop naturally. However, a child likes to feel that there is a steady, abiding faith reposed in him.

Give a child encouragement, but do not attempt to domineer over his tastes. Above all things, do not try to have a girl a great musician if she has more liking for house-keeping. Do not insist upon a boy's being a lawyer if he was born to be a carpenter.

Some children are more peculiar than others, and sometimes, where unusual qualities exist, they are harder to understand. However, at this point in their age, all children exhibit peculiarities. They are incident to their years. Many of their whims and notions, aggravating as they sometimes are, they will outgrow. It is better to take no notice of many of them, or in other words, not to think too seriously of them. Most children are inclined to be more or less sensitive and imaginative. They will shrink into themselves with harsh treatment, and become morbid and fanciful. When a child cannot find at home anyone to whom he can give his confidence, he will seek it from outside. It may happen to be boys and girls like themselves, who, left to themselves, dwell upon hurts and unappreciation, sometimes as fancied as real, until, in their united sympathy, they come to regard themselves as youthful martyrs.

A child's opinions should be treated with as much respect as those of older people. Sometimes it is necessary to show them the foolishness of a notion, but it should be done kindly and seriously. Scolding does no good, but harm; and a child should never be laughed at. That humiliates and exasperates him, and he is sure to develop some unpleasant trait in very self-defense.

There should be the clearest discrimination made between judicious leniency and encouragement, and that flattery and overindulgence that makes a child foolishly sensitive, conceited and selfish.

In all matters, a child should be required to pay respectful deference to the opinions and advices of his elders.

LOUISE PALFREY.

LETTERS of inquiry have reached us in reference to the conversation tube advertised in this paper by Bro. Geer, and we most cheerfully testify to all interested that if you are afflicted with deafness, for all conversational purposes these tubes are invaluable. They are helpful in listening to a public speaker, but do not give the same amount of help as in conversation. If money could not replace ours, then money would never tempt us to part with it.

BELL, Iowa, Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—On the 10th inst. I was called home on account of water supply for the family giving out and other matters which demanded my attention. When I left our grove meeting at Benan, Carroll county, Iowa, had been running for eight days and was to continue two days longer. Bro. C. Derry was with us five days and did some excellent preaching. Pres. W. W. Blair came in on the 4th inst. and was to remain over the 12th in fulfillment of a promise made last year. The people were well pleased with his preaching and therefore it was thought best by those in charge that he should do the most of the preaching, though Brn. W. W. Whiting, J. T. Turner, and J. W. Simons each favored us with a good sermon or two. One was baptized while the writer was present.

While Brn. J. F. McDowell, C. J. Hunt, and F. M. Weld were at Defiance with a gospel tent the people became much disturbed on the subject of religion. The meetings there were well attended and some seemed inclined to "search the Scriptures" to see whether the things preached were so or not. The question of authority disturbed some, while others reasoned among themselves, being almost persuaded to believe that these ministers preached the correct faith and represented the true Church of God. This was almost too much for our friends of the Christian Church, so they set themselves to work to look up a man to defend their faith and annihilate Mormonism. Finally one

Rev. Truman, of Red Oak, Nebraska, was found who would do the job for two hundred dollars, or so we are informed. But alas! times are hard and the Christians could not afford to dance to the tune of two hundred dollars a debate, so Mormonism as they term it, will have to go unanswered until crops are better and money more abundant.

Tent meetings closed at Defiance the 22d ult. and commenced at Charter Oak, in Crawford county, on the 25th. At the latter place the meetings were well attended from first to last and much good seed was sown with liberal hands, loving hearts, and true and zealous ministers. There were no baptisms, but hope is entertained by both elders and Saints that the seed sown will in the due time of the Lord bring forth fruit to the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

During the meetings at Charter Oak the pastor of the M. E. Church was away but his place was supplied by a young Rev. W. Bruce Empey, fresh from college, who attended services at the tabernacle and listened to Bro. C. J. Hunt preach a few sermons, and from all appearances was quite friendly as he borrowed a Book of Mormon and promised to investigate our claims.

On Sunday morning the 19th inst. Brn. Hunt and Weld attended services at the M. E. church, desiring to hear the young minister preach; but to their surprise he read a fifteen minutes' essay as a lecture against Joseph Smith, Mormonism, and the Book of Mormon. Among other things contained in said lecture, the Rev. Empey said: "Anyone by reading the Book of Mormon for a half hour can tell what its contents are;" and yet it takes an ordinary reader who has not been college bred about forty-eight hours to read the book through. Is it not wonderful how much a few years of college life will do for some men! He said: "Isaiah 29: 11, 12 refers to the Bible. . . . The Book of Mormon is only good for the flames. . . . Where the Bible say you shall and you shan't the Book of Mormon says you may if you wish."

When the reverend commenced his lecture Bro. Hunt vacated his seat at the rear of the church and walked forward and took a seat right under the droppings of the sanctuary. When the lecture was ended Bro. Hunt arose and asked permission to make a statement, and the minister gave his consent, but a good Methodist brother spoke up and said, "No; we can't have any discussion here;" and the minister said, "No; this is a house of God, sir." Bro. Hunt took his seat, though he wished only to announce that the lecture would be answered in the evening.

At the close of the meeting Bro. Hunt spoke kindly to the young minister and desired to secure the manuscript or a copy, and the minister said he should have it; but again the members interfered and said it would not do. Bro. Hunt saw the minister again in the afternoon in company of two leading members of the M. E. Church as they were returning from services held in the country, and wanted to know when he could have the promised manuscript. After some talk pro and con the Rev. Empey told him he could have it and it was agreed that Bro. William Butterworth's boy should call for it in thirty minutes; but, lo and behold! when the boy returned instead of the desired manuscript he bore a note from the reverend stating in substance: "My lecture this morning was publicly delivered and you listened to it, therefore I positively refuse to let you have my manuscript." At our afternoon meeting announcement was made that the lecture would be answered in the evening and the tent was filled with attentive listeners. The lecture was answered by Bro. Hunt in the spirit of kindness, though his arguments were clear and logical. Such attacks only result in good to our cause.

The Saints and friends at Charter Oak were very kind to our ministers during their stay there. Brn. Hunt and Weld will next pitch their tent at Quimby, where it is hoped good will be done. When last heard from, Elder J. F. McDowell was battling away for the truth at Okoboji, Dickinson county, where prejudice was as tangible as "Egyptian darkness." In bonds, LAMONI, Iowa, Aug. 17.

Editors Herald:—Allow me space in your valuable paper to correct some of Bro. Bishop's statements in the Herald of August 8. I have no ax to grind; my object in what I did in the July 4 number was to prevent a wrong impression being formed from Bro. Nutt's letter of June 20. I wrote as the impression was formed when I was in the county. I did not say a binder or mower could not be run any place in the county; I excepted some small patches on the high land and the small bottoms.

As to the time it would take to take the timber off an acre of land, anyone acquainted with work in timber can see how near I was right. The best land is covered with what is known North as a large second growth of oak timber, ranging from six to fifteen inches in diameter (I do not suppose a person would clear land that would not grow timber reasonably well) and is middling thick on the ground. I stated that one acre of prairie would produce as much grass as forty or fifty acres of outrange, not meadow land, as Bro. Bishop stated. The land was offered me as stated, at one dollar per acre, but it did not suit me to buy it.

If Brn. Bishop and Nutt would advertise their country and state just what it is good for as near as they can it would soon be settled up I think; but people, after they go and see the country are so dissatisfied with it that very few locate. It is not a good farming country, but I think is a fair grazing country. The land is cheap compared to prices North, and when put into grass perhaps three acres would produce as much grass as one of high-priced land north; but the timber would have to be got rid of in some way. I think fruit will do better there than in Iowa; such as peaches, apples, pears, grapes, and some small fruit; but in order to market it it must be raised near the railroad, as it is a very rocky, stony country. Wishing Brn. Bishop and Nutt all the health and happiness they can enjoy in this life, I remain,

In gospel bonds,

MCKINLEY, Mich., Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—About one year ago I got a place to preach here. As soon as the truth was presented persecution began, and has continued until now, but while our enemies have done all they could to hinder us, the good work has steadily gained ground, until to-day we can muster quite a band of Saints. The first time we had baptism here last fall there was a very large crowd out to witness it, and all kinds of remarks made regarding us; and while I was standing in the water the crowd jeered and laughed at us. The laugh was rather turned on one party though, for as I was about to immerse the last one he began to ridicule me, but just then he lost his balance and fell into the river. That drew the attention of the people from us of course for a few minutes.

One baptized that day was a Roman Catholic, and that roused the Catholics some, as she was one of their best members. I was told that if I baptized any more there, I had "better look out." Some time afterwards I baptized another lady, and then started to leave the town to go to an appointment; but I had not gone far when I saw a band of Catholics, who began to throw stones, and with the intention of killing me, I thought, as some came unpleasantly close to my head. I went down another street and entered a house, and so escaped harm. Since that time all kinds of threats have been made, but I have not been hurt.

The work had not made much advancement before the reverend divines began to be worried and to try to hurt the work by warning the people against us, and trying to have us shut out of the schoolhouse, etc. After a while one young man sent me a challenge to meet him in debate. Of course I tried to accommodate the gentleman. I guess he found before he got through that he had made a mistake, for he told me afterwards that he thought that by next December he would be able to meet the question all right. While the debate was going on several were waiting to see how it would come out. As the question was, "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?" some were satisfied so far as the principles of the doctrine went, but they wanted to see what proof could be brought forth to support Joseph Smith. Before the debate closed some told me they were satisfied, and since then I have baptized a good many. Among those baptized were the mother, one brother, two sisters, and two aunts of the gentleman with whom I had the debate.

Soon afterwards I met another minister in discussion, an old gentleman, who made a worse failure than the young man. He was going to show that they believed in, and taught all the Bible taught, but after we got through the only thing that I could find he believed in was love; and when I came to examine the love he claimed to have in his heart, which he said was the pure love of Christ, I found that it caused him to try to have me turned out of the schoolhouse and to say many things about me that were not true. So I came to the conclusion that the religion some men have to-day is about the same as Cain had. But while evil men have done all that they could to hinder us, God has been with us, and with the aid of his Spirit we have continued to battle for the truth, until we now have something over forty Saints here, where a little over a year ago I could not get a place to hold meetings in.

For the last few months I have had help from some of the Saints, who have gone right to work like good soldiers, and it is surprising how they can defend and explain the gospel to their neighbors. I feel glad in this work which I know to be true. I am glad to be able to say it is moving onward in these parts. I start to-day for a place called Hillman.

Your brother,

F. H. BROOKS.

BRADLEYVILLE, Mo., Aug. 12.

Editors Herald:—I see by a late Herald that Bro. Sparling gives a description of the Southern Missouri district and states that there are Saints in all the counties but Taney. I wish to state that there are Saints in Taney county, two families by the name of Kinyon, four or five miles northwest of Forsyth, and some believers. The writer and family live one and one half miles south of Bradleyville. We would welcome any of the ministry, and believe that good opportunities to preach can be obtained.

If any of the Saints wishing to secure homes want to get land cheap they can get it here at from two dollars and fifty cents to fifteen dollars per acre. The country is timbered, stony, and rough. The timber has to be cleared off, and in some places the stone, before it can be farmed. The lands spoken of above have been cleared, or partially so, and fenced; with houses and other improvements on. Government and school lands can be bought for one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, or homesteaded. There are some good farms for sale near us with good school advantages, upon which we would like to have some of the Saints settle. I will give more information on application.

Yours in bonds,

C. H. DERRY.

OLIVET, Iowa, Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—We have been much encouraged lately by the labors of Bro. Fred A. Smith, there being but my mother's family who were members here, but I now thank the Lord that my husband has also accepted the gospel, being baptized on the 8th inst. by Bro. Smith. A very worthy young lady was also led into the waters of baptism.

Bro. Smith preached a number of very able discourses while here making a very flattering opening at Leighton. We were sorry he could not be with us longer, but appointments previously announced called him away. He is now holding tent meetings (assisted by Bro. Rudd) at Oskaloosa. We learn that honest souls there are seeing the light, and some are already awaiting baptism. It affords us isolated members real joy to entertain one of God's messengers. But while we are basking in the sunshine of peace they bring us, we are reminded that somewhere there is a home where their presence is sadly missed, and in that home there is a wife who is in daily need of the counsel, assistance, and companionship of the absent one. But we can assure Sr. Smith that her husband does not forget to speak of her admirable qualities. We sometimes think all wives who are so situated must find some remuneration in the thought of the joy the gospel message brings to other hearts and homes; and also that half the sheaves gathered must be theirs and half the bright stars glitter in their crowns.

Your sister,

ADDA LAUGHLIN DAVIS.

HONOLULU, H. I., July 31.

Editors Herald:—I have very little to report with regard to the work here. Since Elder Clapp left I have kept up the church services which are held as follows: Wednesday evening, prayer and testimony meeting; Sunday morning, at ten Bible class; and at 11:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. preaching to the natives through an interpreter. The English service at 7:30 p. m. I have discontinued for the present. In our Sunday school we use the Gospel Quarterlies and I consider them very instructive and valuable.

While there are no new members being added just now, I am not discouraged with the future prospects. The few who have stuck to the work are making progress, have got a better understanding of their duty, and are becoming more united and thus we enjoy more of the Spirit in our meetings, which is what is needed to build up the work.

The Herald reaches us regularly and is just as welcome now as ever. You may never have experienced the longing for the church papers that is experienced by those who are far distant from the headquarters of the church, or who may be traveling from place to place and are thus deprived of regular church news and the fellowship of the members. I have many times during my short life in the church experienced this longing. When I left Oakland, shortly after joining the church, on a voyage to England by way of Panama and New York, I found the longed for Herald awaiting my arrival in the general post office at New York; and during my stay in various parts of the north of England it was a regular, welcome weekly visitor; and for a long time while I was absent and far distant from any members of the church, the Herald was my instructor together with the other books of the church. And oftentimes have I wished when my mind was anxious about some particular doctrine I did not fully comprehend, the Herald would soon afterwards come with an article written by the editors upon the very subject I desired information upon, thus comforting and building me up in the faith and dispelling doubts and fears. And what has been my experience in this respect must have been also the experience of many others in like circumstances; and this proves that God uses the Herald as a means of feeding the hungry sheep in his flock who have not the privilege of attending church meetings, where through the gifts of the gospel he edifies and builds up the members in the faith; by inspiring those upon whom has been placed the responsibility of writing for that paper. And here upon the islands of the sea the Herald visits us, not so regularly as we could wish on account of lack of steam communication, but when it does come it is prized the more; and oftentimes I wonder how it is that those who have received the light of the restored gospel should become so lukewarm in the cause as to forget to sustain the Herald by neglecting to pay in their due subscriptions. That this is the case with many is shown by the appeals made by those in charge of the publishing department of the church to the members to pay what they owe in order that the paper may be properly sustained and be sent forth upon its mission to all parts of the earth.

Our Savior's words to his disciples of old which we often quote (and they apply to us to-day just as well) that if they wished for God's blessings both in this life and in the life to come, they were to work first to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness. Can we truly say that we are obeying this commandment if we forget or neglect to give of our means to sustain his church paper or the paper of his kingdom on earth, in which every citizen of the kingdom should have an interest? Again, Jesus says, "If ye love me keep my commandments." How can I or any other Saint say that we truly love him and neglect the duty pointed out above? And so I shall always strive to show my love for him by sustaining the recognized paper of his church, so long as he blesses me with sufficient means to do so.

Yours in the one faith,

G. J. WALLER.

QUEENSFERRY, Victoria, July 16.

Editors Herald:—It is with a feeling of sadness I write to testify of our sorrow on account of the death of our brother, Apostle T. W. Smith. Since his first attack was made known to us we have had little hopes of a complete recovery, but would have been thankful to God if he had recovered so far as to have been able to in a measure fulfill his ministry. I for one will much miss his wise and sage advice, as he was always so willing to assist with advice when asked. This part of the Australian mission (Victoria district) gained much by his wise counsels. Although we could not always see eye to eye, we knew that whatever he did was with an eye single to the glory of God and his work in this land. We trust he has gone to his reward.

With respect to the work here (Queensferry) it is in a very low state. The financial crisis has been so hard on our members that all spirituality has been completely crushed out of the majority, but such of course should not be the case. He is a poor fighter who cannot face adversity; and seeing that we are primarily to blame ourselves through making haste to get rich, I cannot see why we should punish ourselves by neglecting our spiritual welfare. But so it is. I feel like leaving the branch to look after itself for a time, and make a point of going out on the Sunday from here and endeavor to raise an interest in the work in the regions round about. I was from home a few days last month, but could get no place to preach in unless on paying a price I could not afford, so had to be content with house to house visitations among old-time friends; and having distributed the printed word left with the determination to follow on with correspondences. I notice wherever I go that the spirit of inquiry is abroad, and a great running to and fro for light and none to be had. Would that the times would allow of more laborers in the field, but unfortunately it cannot be done under present circumstances. I trust that God will so order that this financial blight will soon be scattered, but as it is at present it is an utter impossibility.

It is not easy getting about just now as our winter is on. Bro. and Sr. Wight will understand what that means here; but it is not as it was when our pioneer veteran Bro. Glaud Rodger came here; as at that time he often had to walk over the knees in water getting to and fro. The lines are cast in pleasanter places now, compared to what it was then, as he had to make all the openings. His successor, Bro. Gillen, will, I am sure, remember what he too had to undergo in this locality. The most of our population has left here since then, but we are likely to have a number of people around here again, as coal seams are being developed in the immediate vicinity, so there may soon be a population to labor with here. I am glad to see by the Herald that the work is progressing and trust there may be a great determination among the Saints everywhere to come up higher.

Your colaborer,

DAVID MCINTOSH.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—It may interest the Herald readers to know that the work in Pottawatamie district, as also in other parts where I have visited in answer to calls, is in fair condition. At the Benan reunion or camp meeting there was good interest manifest, and the Holy Spirit was with the ministry in their efforts to tell the glad story of the gospel. Everybody was pleased to see and hear Elder Blair. I left him at that place. Elders Butterworth, Turner, Simmonds, and Whiting effectually wielded the sword of truth.

Business and duty demanded my presence elsewhere, and on the 11th and 12th instant Bro. H. N. Hansen and the writer broke the bread of life in Boomer, and I had the privilege of burying two precious souls in the waters of baptism there, on the 12th. They were confirmed by Bro. Hansen and myself.

I attended the Wheeler reunion, where I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. A. H. Smith, Bro. Blair, also Brn. T. W. Williams and H. Kemp. The blessing of God attended the efforts of the ministry there also, and the Saints were made glad. The camp ground was a beautiful one, and the committee of arrangements had every thing in order and agreeable. One baptized while I was there, and when I left I understood eight names were given in for baptism, with the prospect of more. There was good order, but too much Sunday school. I believe with the ancient writer: "There is a time for all things," and when the right thing is done in the right time, it will result in good; but when we crowd things out of their proper time and space, the effect is disastrous, all around. Zeal is good when seasoned with wisdom; but when that is lacking, it is distasteful.

The dry, hot weather continues with us, but we are better off than some in neighboring States. Now is the time for the exercise of faith and patience. Blessed are they who have a good stock of these virtues laid up. But I find these are the result of a faithful life, and lacking that faithful life, we shall be lacking the necessary amount of faith and patience to endure in the evil day.

These troubles will not come upon the faithful unawares; they will be looking for them, knowing that the "day of the Lord is at hand." The Saints will be tried to the core as well as the world. Our faith and works must be tested, and the day will prove what kind they are. If we have built wood, hay, and stubble on the true foundation we shall suffer loss. May God bless his ministry, and help them to unite more thoroughly that they may be more successful in feeding the flock of God.

Yours in gospel bonds,

C. DERRY.

ASHMONT, Ohio, Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—Please say to those who may wish to know, that my address for a time is as above. I returned on the 18th inst. from a three months' mission tour among the churches of the East, having labored in Chenango county, and Brooklyn, New York; Boston, Fall River, New Bedford, Sheltonville, and Little Compton, Massachusetts; Providence, Rhode Island; and Tenant's Harbor, Maine; and feel hereby to express my thanks to the many Saints who have so kindly administered to my wants and the substantial aid rendered in every time of need. Truly the evidences of being "disciples of Christ" are not wanting among those where I have labored, and they will always occupy a tender place in my affections; and by my associations with Saints from Nova Scotia to New York City my confidence in the union in Christ is strengthened and love for humanity encouraged, and I can freely ask the blessings of our heavenly Father upon them.

I regret having to leave the coast so soon, but find that ocean breezes and neuralgia are at war with one another, and using me as the battle ground, compelled me to retire. Expect to resume labor in this or some other part as soon as able. Northern Ohio is suffering from drouth considerably.

A carping spirit rarely goes with a working spirit. It is easier to find fault with what some one else does, than it is to do something oneself; hence a man who enjoys doing the easier thing, is disinclined to do the harder one. As a rule, men are divided into the two classes of those who growl and those who work; and each class is alike devoted to its own mission. But when it comes to the relative worth in the community of the two classes, everybody can see the difference.—H. Clay Trumbull.

WHO SHALL RISE FROM THE DEAD?

WITHOUT wishing to criticise any individual idea I offer the following in regard to the resurrection of the dead. Who shall be resurrected from the dead? is a question that long has puzzled the minds of some, believing as they do, that none shall be raised from the dead until they have complied with the teachings of the Savior; while others believe that Jesus the Christ actually atoned for the sin of Adam by tasting death once for all men, and then rising triumphant over death, hell, and the grave; thus giving victory to every man to whom the monster death should come, and that without any conditions on the part of man.

I shall predicate my argument on the last-named proposition; that is, an unconditional resurrection, and then go to Holy Writ to see what I can gather either for or against it.

The first I shall call attention to is Paul's saying in 1 Corinthians 15: 21-22:

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

It seems that the Apostle Paul while writing the above language had the privilege of seeing just to what extent the mission of Christ to the earth would be and what effect it would have upon the sons of men; therefore, knowing that all men should be raised from the dead through Christ's resurrection, he says, "As in Adam all die;" that is, as truly as all men are subjected to death, and must die, and that without any voluntary act of disobedience on their part; just so sure, "or even so [in like manner] in Christ shall all be made alive," without any voluntary act on their part.

"But," says the objecter, "in Christ;" that is, when they obey Christ they shall be raised. But it says, "As in Adam all die." Would you have it that all men must do like Adam—sin by voluntary disobedience before they could die? If you would, you are wrong, for the Heathen dies, and he never sinned a voluntary sin; for Paul says "where no law is, there is no transgression." The Heathen could not transgress God's law before he heard it, neither does he know anything about the transgression of Adam; but he dies just the same, and that simply because death was pronounced on all men and became a universal thing when Adam sinned. It seems, then, that man has nothing to say about the matter and can do only one thing; that is, yield to his foe (death) when it comes along, let his conditions in this life be good, bad, or what they may.

Now seeing what a universal thing death is, Paul takes it to illustrate the resurrection from the dead by saying, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," thus making the plaster just as big as the sore.

If the resurrection depended on the obedience or disobedience of man, then there are some that would never come up; and that would contradict the saying of Christ as recorded in John 5:28, 29, for there he says:—

Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

"Well," says the objector, "don't you hear him saying, 'All that are in the graves shall hear his voice'? That means they will all obey before they are raised." But let us see: If Christ meant that, then he said too much; for right in the next breath he says: "They that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." Here the Savior shows distinctly that there are two classes of people to be raised from the dead; that is, the obedient and the disobedient. Now if to hear Christ's voice in this case really meant obedience to the gospel, how shall we answer the question as to the resurrection and coming forth of those that he (Christ) calls disobedient; for he surely says they shall come forth unto a resurrection of damnation? "But," says the objector, "those disobedient ones mean those that have obeyed the gospel and have then fallen away from grace."

Beautiful! It is the first time I ever heard that there was to be more honor placed where there is willful disobedience than where there is no sin; or, in other words, the greater criminal is to be honored with a privilege of resurrection from the grave while the common sinner must remain dead forever simply because he did not become a greater sinner, otherwise a perfect man.

The Scriptures teach that there are at least two resurrections yet in the future; the one is called the resurrection of the just, the other the resurrection of the unjust. The resurrection of the just is conditional, and has power over none save those that have obeyed the gospel as taught in the earth, or in the prison house; and it takes place at the coming of Christ to reign on the earth with his people. The second resurrection is unconditional and has power over every individual who has lived on the earth who did not take part in the first resurrection. It takes place after the thousand years, at the time the sea gives up the dead that are in it and death and hell deliver up the dead which are in them, that they may all be judged according to their works as represented in Revelation 20:13. Thus we see that the last resurrection is in its scope as universal as death is in its scope, and that without any conditions in either case. If it were not so then Satan would come off victorious, for all he would need to do would be to get mankind to sin and tell them never to repent but stick right to doing wrong, and by so doing he would escape the judgment of God; for the general judgment is the other side of the general resurrection; or in other words, when God gets to the day of judgment, he will find himself alone—nobody to judge simply because there was no resurrection, and no resurrection because mankind had been careless in obeying the conditions that would entitle them to arise. Fiddlesticks; such a theological scheme as that! Satan would say at once, "I was able to get death to every man, but the Lord could only resurrect a few who lived as he wanted them to." and thus claim the victory.

I shall now call attention to the Book of Mormon and settle the matter once for all, at least to my mind, that the last resurrection is an unconditional one:—

Therefore the wicked remain as though there had been no redemption made, except it be the loosing of the bands of death; for behold, the day cometh that all shall arise from the dead and stand before God, and be judged according to their works. Now there is a death which is called a temporal death; and the death of Christ shall loose the bands of this temporal death, that all shall be raised from this temporal death; the spirit and the body shall be reunited again, in its perfect form; both limb and joint shall be restored to its proper frame, even as we now are at this time: and we shall be brought to stand before God, knowing even as we know now, and have a bright recollection of all our guilt. Now this restoration shall come to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, both the wicked and the righteous; and even there shall not so much as a hair of their heads be lost: but all things shall be restored to its perfect frame, as it is now, or in the body, and shall be brought and be arraigned before the bar of Christ the Son, and God the Father, and the Holy Spirit, which is one eternal God, to be judged according to their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil. Now behold I have spoken unto you concerning the death of the mortal body, and also concerning the resurrection of the mortal body. I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; that is from death; even from the first death, unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption. —B. M. 235, 236.

Here the man of God called Alma tells us that all shall rise from the dead, both the wicked and the just, bond and free, male and female; and that because Christ died; thus proving an unconditional resurrection of the dead.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.

EDITORS HERALD:—I take up my pen again to say a word to the Saints about this country. I have received a number of letters of late asking for information about locations. Some write me wanting me to work up trades on real estate, others want advice as to what they had better do under certain circumstances, etc.

Now let me put it on record right here: I would not advise anybody to move to this country until he has come and made a personal investigation of the conditions. If you do so you are liable to be very much disappointed. I wrote to various parties in Southern Missouri before coming here, and talked with many persons who had traveled over it, and I never got anything like a correct idea of things as I see them. I will state that it is a much better country in every way than I had expected to find, judging by what I had heard. Further; some one else might read my representation of it and think it better than what it is.

Health: Anyone who cannot have health in Southern or Southwestern Missouri need not hope to have it any place. The water is excellent, the country rolling and hilly, consequently no chance for malaria. There is some sickness, of course, but people get sick and die any place.

To describe the country right is rather hard to do. It is both rough and smooth, good and poor quality of soil. What I might say of one farm would not apply to another. One farm might be smooth, good soil, worth twenty dollars per acre, and the one joining it might be a rock pile worth nothing.

Again, you can many times drive for several miles on a nice, rich, rolling prairie, as fine soil and good farms as can be found in any country; then you will strike the rough land again for awhile, where it isn't worth the trouble of clearing up in some cases, while in others you could get a good farm quite cheap. There is some cheap land in the hills that is quite good, and not so very hard to get into cultivation. The best chances I have seen to locate on cheap land is in Cedar county. It is not so rough as the hilly land farther south, and is easier cleared and cultivated. The price ranges about five dollars per acre, and even as much as ten, in some cases, for unimproved land. For those who are not able to buy higher priced land this is a very good chance, in the judgment of the writer. But those who are able to pay fifteen to twenty dollars per acre for land can find an excellent place to locate in the southeastern part of Newton county between Neosho and Pierce City. I drove through there a short time ago in company with Bro. O. P. Sutherland. We found a fine country all the way from Webb City southeast for a day's drive. Land is high in price near Webb and Joplin, on account of the lead mines there; but as we got over in the region of Newtonia and Granby, we found them pricing it at fifteen to twenty dollars per acre. I call this a good country, and think it is the best chance I have seen for those who are able to buy land. Persons wishing to locate over there can confer with Saints at Webb City or Joplin for information. There are no Saints closer than the above points that I know of.

There is no government land worth taking, either in Southern Missouri or Arkansas. The papers often contain statements that there are four million acres of government land in the Ozark Mountains subject to homestead entry. The statement is true, but the land will always belong to "Uncle Sam." He couldn't even give it to a railroad company, for it wouldn't take it as a gift.

I prefer not to act as agent on land trades, nor anything of that kind. Parties contemplating a change of location should confer with the Presidency and Bishopric, and not listen to any and every person who might give advice in matters of this kind. From the tone of some letters I receive it looks as though the time had come for the church to begin a systematic effort at helping the poor Saints to secure locations in Missouri. Some have tried the drought-stricken regions of the West until they are not able to leave and get located in "a place of safety." Perilous times are upon us, and bid fair to remain with us for awhile. The worthy poor in the church should receive proper consideration. Our Bishop fully understands his duty in the matter, but he cannot act without the means to work with. That call made by the Bishopric for one hundred thousand dollars as a reserve fund was made before these hard times had set in, and no doubt many could have responded easier than now. We therefore see the wisdom of such a move just at that time.

I am very anxious to see the Saints settle in Missouri and the "regions round about" as fast as wisdom and circumstances may justify. We should, however, abide the time of the Lord in all things, as he is competent to take care of his own work. That we may all become wise, holy, and righteous—worthy servants of God—is my prayer.

SOUTHWESTERN IOWA REUNION.

Our reunion meetings open grandly, in the promise of the divine Spirit. The grove where the camp is, is a beautiful place, and is arranged handsomely with an eye to comfort, and there is a manifest determination to preserve its arrangement in order, for the comfort of all.

An organization was effected Saturday forenoon. President W. W. Blair was selected to preside, A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, and H. Kemp, submissionary, to assist during the meetings of the reunion. Bro. Blair not having arrived, Brn. A. H. Smith and H. Kemp took charge. The afternoon meeting was used for short speeches and more complete organization. The Holy Spirit was felt, comforting in its influence and promise. Our Sabbath school workers, on the alert, secured the grant of one session each day for five days commencing on Monday morning, and Wednesday night for a temperance lecture. These sessions were so arranged that only three prayer and three preaching services were yielded, out of possibly thirty-six services of the reunion, and all seem to be happy. The good work goes on. Of the ministry there are now present Charles Derry, T. W. Williams, H. Kemp, George Kemp, S. Butler, J. S. Strain, D. Hougas, J. B. Heide, D. K. Dodson, A. Badham, A. H. Smith, and we expect on tomorrow W. W. Blair.

Bro. J. B. Heide being called upon, promptly came to the front and opened the campaign Saturday night with a feeling gospel effort. Sunday morning prayer service in charge of Brn. D. Hougas and Strain was a blessed meeting in which we had the promise of the blessing of God in all our worship if we would only be faithful. At 10:45 a. m. A. H. Smith occupied the hour with good liberty. At 2:30 p. m. Henry Kemp gave us a splendid talk; subject, "Christ the faithful witness." At 7:30 p. m. A. H. Smith entertained the Saints and friends with a characteristic conversation on the extent of the promise in the commission, Mark 16: 16, and the exhortation of our Savior, "Search the Scriptures," our future home, its nature and location, etc.

Monday, at nine a. m., the Sabbath school workers occupied the hour, marshalling the little ones in the camp, and holding school service, and had a real enjoyable time, in charge of that earnest Sabbath school worker, T. A. Hougas. And by the way, I must say in our organization this brother was chosen chorister, and with his able help we have had sweet and soul-cheering music and song. At 10:45 Bro. D. Hougas occupied, giving us earnest, able, and comforting exhortations and Scriptural doctrinal evidences of the truth and efficacy of the gospel. At 2:30 p. m. Bro. Senterlow Butler's voice rang out in the gospel tent and went echoing through the grove, calling men to a consideration of the gospel law with such earnestness that the hearer was impressed with the feeling, "That man believes it, and is in it with all his might and strength." At eight p. m. Bro. Charles Derry was our speaker, and the Spirit came upon him, and we were constrained to believe that the gospel comes in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance. I saw the eyes of our brethren shine and sparkle and their faces light up with the Spirit's fire as the voice of our brother rang out loud, clear, and firm, carrying conviction. It seemed to me, surely, surely; positively, positively; emphatically, emphatically, that man must be born again of water and of the Spirit, or he cannot enter the kingdom of God.

Tuesday morning the Saints met in prayer at 8:30. Brn. Dodson and Williams in charge, and what a blessed good time we did have. Tongues and interpretation, assuring the Saints that God is well pleased with them, and exhorting them to greater diligence. Every heart felt the softening influence of the good Spirit. "Oh! 'tis good to be a Saint in latter days." And now I hear sweet songs and the closing services of our Sunday school workers as the noon hour comes apace. May God ever bless the reunions of his Saints, that they may prove faithful until the great, grand reunion when Christ our living head shall come, with all his holy angels and the redeemed ones to dwell on the earth in its redeemed state. Amen. All goes well with those who love the Lord.

August 22.—The meetings of our reunion are progressing nicely. Bro. W. W. Blair came in to-day, and several tents were added to our little white city in the grove, and of course the meetings are more interesting as the attendance becomes more numerous. At the prayer services the good Spirit is present and the Saints rejoice in the gifts. Tongues, and interpretation, and prophesying, in meekness, are among the blessings enjoyed. The song services are excellent and the Sabbath school work is ably carried forward by Bro. T. A. Hougas and his band of faithful teachers, and it is simply surprising to see what an amount of work the energy of Bro. Hougas gets out of the Sabbath school workers, and the little ones. His gift is an important one. It would be good if every district in the church had such an earnest, gifted Sunday school worker. Tuesday eve at eight Bro. T. W. Williams being called to the stand, filled the hour with a plain, pungent, spirited talk upon the subject of the declaration made by our Savior, "Upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The Saints were deeply interested; others who had come to hear were heard to remark, "What do they put up that boy for? He must have a hard time among those old grey heads;" but after he was through, it was heard, "I wish they would put him up again and he preach the same sermon." So the good work goes on.

Wednesday's services opened with Sunday school services at nine o'clock and the time was spent profitably until 10:15. At 10:45 Bro. D. K. Dodson filled the stand very creditably, driving some nails in a sure place, and clinching some already driven, speaking figuratively. It is good and very strengthening to the young in the work to see men like Bro. Dodson, who, born at a time when apostasy was rampant, and brought up among those who were more or less unfaithful to their trust in the latter-day work, still gives evidence that the root of the matter had laid hold and firmly fixed itself in his heart, and now bears such rich fruit in the earnest, strong, faithful testimony of the truth of the work and the goodness of God. He is a strong man in body, spirit, and testimony. At 2:30 p. m. the Saints were again favored and blessed in hearing that humble old standard bearer, Bro. C. Derry. Our hearts were stirred to their depths with the Holy Spirit in response, as his electrical, explosive arguments and evidences broke upon the stillness which reigned as if by magic, while he was talking to us. But as the meetings progress your writer feels much like Father John A. McIntosh, "Every meeting is the best, and the last is always the best." At eight p. m. the program was a temperance sermon by Bro. T. W. Williams under the direction of the Sunday school workers, and a lecture by Bro. T. A. Hougas with some beautiful music and singing. I must say it was very entertaining and instructive. Bro. T. W. Williams delivered some heavy, strait-forward blows at the use of intoxicating drinks, using the Word of Wisdom as a text, also touching up the tobacco habit. He gave some plain and wholesome advice to the maidens and mothers, and scored the habitual intemperates in a wholesome manner, reminding one of the injunction of the angel, "Lift up your voice and spare not." The whole evening's service was enjoyable and instructive, the song service being simply grand. Long may the temperance banner wave.

Thursday morning at 8:30, the Saints met in prayer again and were highly blessed, the Spirit's presence being felt by all, or at least the greater majority, the gifts being notably manifest. At ten o'clock the Sunday school workers began another of their interesting services, which proved enjoyable to those whose minds lead in that channel. There has been an opposition by some to the use of so much of the reunion's time for Sunday school work, but I believe the evidence of the practical demonstration of Sunday school work, in our reunion, is resulting in a change of sentiment. It is a well-attested fact that a diversity of meetings, a change in the programme occasionally, makes our meetings more interesting, and removes the feeling of weariness which sometimes comes over the people because of the sameness which occurs when the same programme is carried out day after day. And then the work being done by the Sunday school operatives is of lasting effect, and highly beneficial. It is furnishing a field of usefulness for earnest, energetic, able minds, which otherwise must remain comparatively idle in the great work of education for a better world. The Sunday school is the primary department, and ought not to be neglected. At 2:30 p. m., Pres. W. W. Blair gave us a very interesting and instructive sermon on the divinity of the Savior, Christ Jesus. Bro. Blair seemed in one of his happiest moods, and hence his testimony was of the most positive kind, and the congregation gave him close attention. At eight o'clock Bro. Chas. Derry followed Bro. Blair's effort with a grand effort on the unchangeability of Christ and the positive necessity of putting into practical operation the rules Jesus established in the church in order to reap the results in benefits to man. Such efforts to be appreciated must be heard and felt. The light of the Spirit shone in many of the faces upturned towards the speaker. Eyes sparkled, and one could easily tell how the Saints were "receiving the words." There is some sickness in the camp, but so far the administrations have been successful, the Lord being merciful and granting favor. Bro. D. Hougas, Sr. Riley Briggs, Sr. T. A. Hougas, and Sr. J. B. Heide being among those indisposed, but at present writing all are improving, I believe. It is good to be a Saint of latter days, especially when we are stricken, and have God's strengthening arm beneath us to raise us up.

Friday, August 24.—On request of some of the Saints the morning hour from 7:30 till nine o'clock was occupied in prayer, and as at the former coming together for prayer, the blessed influence of God's Spirit was present, gladdening the heart and bringing comfort to all. At nine o'clock the Sunday school service opened, and a profitable season was spent in teaching, singing, and reading from the sacred records. And when the preaching service came Bro. W. W. Blair stood in defense of the word, at 10:45. Subject, "The divinity of Christ." His arguments were forceful, his enunciation clear, but at the close many thought his position ambiguous, and others not of our faith were heard to remark, "We can indorse that, for that is the way we believe in Christ." And so the leaven worketh, and the servants of God are reminded they cannot please everyone, and they do exceedingly well if they please God. At 2:30 the bell called the hour of worship again, and now Bro. J. C. Crabb is in the stand, and the Saints are treated to an hour of logic and reasoning supportive of the law and its necessity. And we wondered how it is possible to evade the conclusions he presented, with the divine record open, and was forced to the conclusion that the only safety, if we desire to escape the penalty of broken law, is to be obedient, and comply with its requirements. He so beautifully set forth the fundamental principles of the law of life that none need be deficient of understanding if willing to receive instruction. The evening hours between the services, were enjoyed by the Saints in visiting from tent to tent, in converse and singing, and small groups of people could be seen here and there among the trees, and an occasional burst of laughter proclaimed that wit and pleasantries were passing current, and all were happy and thoroughly enjoying themselves. Peace, good order, and a quiet home feeling seems the prevailing sentiment, and all is joy and peace in the Lord. To-day Brn. C. Derry, J. S. Strain, and J. B. Heide left us reluctantly, while others came in. At eight p. m., meeting having been opened, Bro. A. H. Smith was introduced as the speaker, and for something over an hour he occupied, treating upon the all-prevailing subject, "The life of Christ." All seemed to enjoy the meeting, some expressing themselves well pleased, while others were disposed to criticize; and proper criticism doeth us no harm, and if done in the right spirit will result in good. Oh! what a blessed thing it is that we all have our individuality and can see things from different standpoints, for wherein one is lacking another supplieth the want felt; so we thought at this service. And still the good work goes on. But the shades of night are upon us and the ten o'clock bell warns all it is time to rest.

Saturday, 25.—At early morn the camp was astir and home life was busy in and around each tent, and it was pleasant to hear the chatter of the little ones, the grave, earnest conversation of the older ones, all intent upon the concerns of life uppermost. An air of peace and content prevails through all the camp. Those who had been ill were seen and all were convalescent and entering into the cares and pleasures of camp life seemingly with as much zest and zeal as any others. At 3:30 the bell rang out in token of the arrival of the hour of prayer, and soon the voice of song is heard, sweet and soothing, calling those who heed not the iron tongue of the bell. In the meeting this morning rich experiences, good exhortations, tongues and interpretations, with the tender, comforting assurance of the Spirit that our offerings were accepted and God was well pleased, filled the hearts of the Saints with gladness and joy. But the best of times here in this life must come to an end, but we are glad we can have the earnest of our hope, even short seasons of the joy which is to be permanent and lasting, abiding in it for ever in companionship with our Lord when he comes. At 10:45 the Saints reassembled to listen to Pres. W. W. Blair on the subject of "Angelic ministrations," and it was refreshing indeed to feel the generous impulses of the Spirit as it flowed from heart to heart as our brother related the many instances of God's goodness in the ministrations of angels. And when he came to relate the restoration of the gospel and the repeated visit of the angel to the Seer in his youth, the speaker was so wrought upon that tears checked his utterance, and a thrill ran through the congregation and many shed tears in response. Oh! it is a blessed feeling, and one of those strange features of this latter-day work, that great, strong men, whom no amount of suffering would cause to weep before their fellow man, own the melting power of the Spirit and break down and weep like children. "Except ye become as little children," etc. At 2:30 Bro. T. W. Williams exorcized our skeptic and unbelieving friends, showing the untenable positions taken by infidelity as all uncertainty and speculation, while there is a certainty and a knowledge of God's goodness and saving power revealed in the gospel. And while Bro. Williams was so ably defending the truth, Brn. H. Kemp and A. H. Smith, with others, repaired to the water and attended to the ordinance of baptism. There were nine immersed, thus obeying the perfect law of liberty, A. H. Smith officiating

In the afternoon a call meeting was held to determine if another reunion should be held at which it was decided to hold another camp meeting in the fall of 1895, and a committee was appointed to locate time and place. It was also determined that the branch at or near which the reunion should be held was to organize the executive committee to make all needed regulations, to make our next reunion as great a success if not greater than the present one, which, from present data, we are forced to believe will be an arduous task. The place and time will be given later when the committee reports. At eight p. m. the singing of the choir and bell call summoned the Saints and people once more to listen to Bro. J. C. Crabb in a judicial, lawyerlike dissertation upon the gospel, its gifts, doctrines, blessings, and peculiar promises. His ideas were so clearly defined in terse, positive language, it did seem that none need be mistaken, none need misunderstand. How wonderfully plain it seems to those who have believed and been born of water and the Spirit, that they can see, and how strange it does seem when those principles essential to salvation are so plainly explained that all cannot see it, notwithstanding it is written, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom."

Sunday, 26.—The morning was ushered in smoky and with a hazy appearance, and any hopes which might have been entertained that rain might come to lay the dust and cool the parched earth were dispelled by the appearance of the sun as he slowly climbed towards the meridian, red as blood, looking like a ball of fire near by, and not afar off, and by the noon hour we could readily believe he was near by and not afar off. The pleasant voices prepared one for the smiling faces as we strolled among the tents and exchanged the morning greetings. It was good to see when the hour of prayer came, many with eager feet hasten to the large tent to be present at the first service of the day, and not lose any of the good things God had in store and willing to give to those who seek him early. Now when the hour was fully come, the glad voice of singing went up in praise of the goodness of our Lord. The confirmation of those baptized the day before was attended to. Brn. H. Kemp, J. C. Crabb, S. Butler, and T. W. Williams officiating. Seven adults and two children were made full members of the Church of Christ. And then song and prayer, testimony, tongues, and interpretation, with exhortation, filled the time till the preaching hour. Many will never forget the thrilling experience of the morning's prayer meeting of the closing day's service of the reunion. At 10:45 Bro. W. W. Blair delivered an interesting discourse on the "Signs of the times in fulfilment of prophecy" to a large congregation, many of the most prominent citizens of the surrounding villages being present; Macedonia, Carson, and Henderson being represented. Good order and a splendid feeling prevailed. It is wonderful under the circumstances how contented the people seemed to be, considering the prospects of ruined crops, but so it is they came to the reunion to enjoy themselves and the Spirit of God, and have not been disappointed. At 2:30, Bro. T. W. Williams being the speaker, the Saints were treated to both an amusing and instructive discourse upon the general principles of the gospel, illustrating what the gospel really is, and its effect when rightly, that is, legally, administered. The speaker seemed in a happy mood and made his illustrations so pleasantly that the points made, though in some sense severe upon other religionists, could scarcely be offensive. Once more the wisdom of God was manifest, at least to your writer, in the demonstration that different individuals, different organizations, different qualifications and qualities of mind, are needed and used to reach the many types of character among the masses of humanity to whom the servants of God are sent. After this service the grounds presented a scene of busy life; groups of happy souls, talking, singing, and promenading, thus passing the hours until the closing service of the day and the reunion. Notwithstanding the heat and dust, the reunion has been a most enjoyable season. Eight p. m. soon came, and a large concourse of people came together to hear the last service; and after the song service and prayer, Bro. A. H. Smith was presented as the speaker, and he chose as his subject the warning of Jesus to his disciples, "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing," etc., and in his earnestness he offended some of his hearers, and a free expression of opinion of an offended party sounded much like, "That fellow ought to be knocked down," and sentiments of like kindly feeling toward him. Well, so let it be; the Apostle Paul did say, "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." I wonder if that time is now?

The members of the committee deserve great credit for their untiring efforts to make the reunion a success, and the police force also deserves credit for the good order which prevailed during the entire time of our meetings. At the close of the service the committee on locating time and place notified the Saints they were not yet ready to announce the place, but would later publish their decision. And now our reunion is over, and the little white city on the hill in the grove is a thing of the past. May the blessed influence of the Spirit which ruled in all our meetings, long remain with the Saints to cheer on life's rough road. Amen.

ADDRESS WANTED.

The address of Bro. John McKnight is desired. Information of his whereabouts is needed, as matters of importance await action.

ROBERT R. SMITH,
Teacher of Pleasant View branch.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI DISTRICT.

Dear Saints:—I feel it my duty to call your attention through the Herald, and also wish the cooperation of the presiding elders of the branches, to call the attention of the Saints under their charge to the subject of tithing. My reason for urging branch presidents in this matter is because there are many families in this district that do not get the Herald, hence they will be ignorant of this request. I want every Saint through the district warned in this matter, and remember that there is an agent in this district, and the funds are low. Dear Saints, this work is worth sacrificing a little of our temporal means. I know the times are hard, and this is one objection with me to press on you. I know your desires are good, and many of you have done nobly in the past, while there are others who do not take much interest in the law of tithing, and I am sorry to say that there are many who do not subscribe for the Herald. Every Latter Day Saint family should be interested enough to subscribe for the Herald and be posted in the movements of the church. I speak of those who are able to subscribe for it. I hope and trust that what I have mentioned, such parties will receive in the same spirit as the writer intends. Let us awake, Saints, to a sense of our duties, and work together in this glorious work. If your mites are small, do not hold them back. The Lord will bless you, inasmuch as you have done it with a free will and good purpose. The one that remembered the poor widow's mite will also remember you when he comes to gather up his jewels. The Lord bless you all, both temporally and spiritually, is my prayer.

J. T. WILLIAMS, Bishop's agent.

DIED.

BATY.—Robert Baty, Sen., was born July 1, 1824, at Dalston, near Carlisle, Cumberland; died July 10, 1894, at Manchester, England. Was first baptized April 20, 1848, at Dalston, Cumberland, by Elder Thomas Adams. He was called to the office of priest, and subsequently to that of elder; followed the fortunes of the Utah faction of the church until 1878. A few months prior to March 7, 1878, he with his family removed to Manchester, and shortly after his arrival, having the claims of the Reorganized Church placed before him by Elder Joseph Dawsnap of that body, he at once recognized that to be the true successor of the original organization, and became a member thereof, being baptized by Elder Joseph Dawsnap March 7, 1878, and was ordained an elder on the 10th of the same month. For some years he occupied the position of branch priest in the Manchester branch and faithfully performed the duties of that office, but for some years prior to his death, owing to the nature of his illness, was unable to further pursue his labors. He was a loving husband, an indulgent parent, and a true saint, beloved by all who knew him. He leaves an aged partner (73 years), three sons, and two daughters, all of whom are together with their families members of the Reorganized Church, sorrowing for the loss of his presence here, but rejoicing in the prospect (if faithful) of a happy reunion in that home where parting or sorrow never comes.

"He fell asleep in Christ his Lord;
He gave to Him to keep,
The soul His great love had redeemed,
Then calmly went to sleep,
"Like as a tired bird folds its wing,
Sure of the morning light;
He laid him down in trusting faith
And did not dread the night."

FLINT.—Near New Marion, Indiana, on the morning of August 10, 1894, Sr. Susana, wife of Bro. Edwin Flint. Deceased was born September 6, 1840, in Jefferson county, Indiana. Was baptized April 22, 1877, by Elder C. Scott. Her husband, four sons, four brothers, and two sisters survive her. She was loved by all who knew her and lived and died firm in the faith. Funeral services in the Shelby church to a large congregation by M. R. Scott, Jr.; text, Revelation 14: 13.

CHAMBERS.—Sr. Elizabeth Lillian, daughter of Bro. Wm. and Sr. Louisa Chambers, was born December 31, 1877, in Washington township, Harrison county, Iowa; died August 2, 1894, aged 16 years, 7 months, and 2 days. She was baptized October 19, 1890. She passed through great pain and suffering nearly seven months with patience and died with the hope of the rest prepared for her. Father, mother, five brothers, three sisters, and many friends mourn her early departure.

HICKMAN.—Sr. Jennie, wife of Franklin Hickman, of Big Bend, West Virginia, was born May 9, 1862; departed this life July 30, 1894. Sr. Hickman was baptized by Elder James Moler in February, 1891. Her husband, four children, father, mother, three sisters, and two brothers mourn her departure. She ever lived a dutiful and faithful wife and child, a fond mother, patient in all of her afflictions, which were great. Her faith in God and the restored gospel was unshaken to the end.

HANSON.—At Detroit, Michigan, August 12, 1894, Gale Adelaide, daughter of Bro. Alma and Sr. Adelaide Hanson, aged 4 months and 28 days. Funeral services at the home of its grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Claus, August 13, in charge of Elder W. J. Smith. Interment in Woodmere cemetery.

RITTER.—At the home of her sister, Viola Ritter, Macomb, Illinois, August 6, 1894, Sr. Sylvia Ritter, daughter of Bro. Horace Wetherbe. She was born at Rockport, Illinois, December 4, 1856; was baptized May 8, 1875, by C. Mills; was married to Geo. Ritter May 20, 1875. She lived a consistent Christian life, was very charitable and attentive to the poor and afflicted, and was much loved by those who knew her. She was a loving mother, daughter, sister, and friend. Though a great sufferer for years her excellent disposition was not impaired. A son, father, two sisters, two brothers, and numerous relatives and friends mourn. The remains were conveyed by train to Versailles, thence by hearse to Hebron church (in the country), where funeral services were conducted by Elder James McKiernan at eleven a. m., August 8, after which she was buried near her mother in the cemetery near the church.

The situation is considered so serious that the members of the College of Cardinals have been notified to hold themselves in readiness for a visit to Rome to elect a new Pope. The utmost sorrow prevails throughout the Vatican. The Italian Government awaits with anxiety the results of Leo's demise.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 26. — A wind of death. No other name can describe the cyclone that swept across the Sea of Azov yesterday. LONDON, Aug. 25.—The constabulary forces at Glasgow seem to be able to do little in the way of suppressing the riots of coal miners, which have now been in progress a week. The strikers have wrecked the machinery at several points, and by stopping the pumping works have caused the flooding of three mines. They say they have waited patiently and too long for boards of conciliation and arbitration to arrange matters with the mine-owners. They have grown hungry and desperate and are in a dangerous mood. Peaceful methods, they assert, have utterly failed, and now they have appealed to violence. The result, of course, can only be more misery, destitution, and the loss of sympathy which the public has so far expressed for the strikers.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aug., 27.—A strike which has broken out among the sheep shearers has been the cause of a number of outrages at Netellie. The police in a struggle with the unionists shot two of them fatally. A party of armed men burned to the water's edge the steamer Rodney, which was conveying some free shearers up the Darling River.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug., 26.—News received from the Massillon coal fields is to the effect that the miners have refused to accept the ultimatum of the operators, which provided that they should resume work to-morrow upon a schedule of wages based on the Columbus scale. It is said many of the miners are now removing their tools from the mines, and it is believed the operators will carry out their intention of resuming work to-morrow with non-union men. The miners of the Massillon district, about 6,000 in number, have been on strike since Feb. 17.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 27.—The Tremont and Suffolk mills started up to-day in all departments except the color and blanket rooms. The total number of operatives set to work is 3,600.

ODESSA, Aug. 26.—A terrible hurricane has swept over the Sea of Azof. The force of the wind raised heavy waves which have swept many of the seacoast villages, not leaving a house standing and drowning a large number of people. In addition several steamers have been lost during the hurricane, and their entire crews have been drowned.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 27.—The expedition against Lambok was attacked by the natives and the Dutch were beaten. Lambok is an island not far from Java. BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 29.—The International Migration Society of this city has just closed a contract in Philadelphia for the transportation of five thousand negroes to Liberia prior to November 1, and many more later, from different Southern ports. The migration managers say the ruler of Liberia has promised each emigrant twenty-five acres of land and implements necessary to till it. Thousands of negroes have joined the society, which is conducted on a cooperative plan, a ticket to Africa being given each member when forty dollars has been paid in. It is expected that ten thousand negroes will be moved to Africa before January.

BARABOO, Wis., Aug. 29.—For the last few days the sun could hardly be seen for the dense smoke in this vicinity caused from fires. Last night it was so dense people could hardly sleep for want of fresh air. Fires have been raging in the woods and on the marshes for several days, and much damage done. Farmers are fighting flames night and day. Everything is dry and no rain has fallen in this country to speak of since June 17. Yesterday afternoon fire destroyed over $10,000 worth of property.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 25.—The letter from Chemulpo, Corea, received at Che Foo yesterday, announcing the defeat of a Japanese force and the killing of 1,300 Japanese soldiers, is much commented upon here.

If the report of the battle is correct the Chinese cavalry, in dividing the Japanese forces in two parts, did excellent service, and the subsequent heavy firing of the Chinese artillery from an eminence causing great havoc in the ranks of the soldiers of the Mikado would seem to denote generalship of no mean order upon the part of the Chinese commanders.

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—China is about to address a note to the powers protesting against the King of Corea declaring his independence. The dispatch adds that several of the powers are likely to recognize the justice of the protest, because they are certain that the declaration was under Japanese compulsion after the King was captured, and that it was ante-dated to make it appear voluntary. The German gunboat Litis has arrived at Che Foo.

TIEN TSIN, Aug. 23.—Gen. Yeh, with 4,000 men, has effected a junction with the Chinese main body at Ping Yang. The remainder of the force under Gen. Nieh is expected to arrive at Ping Yang to-morrow. The retreat from Asan was brilliantly carried out. They broke through the Japanese lines at Chungwa. The heat in Corea since July has been intense.

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 27.—The war feeling here is growing more intense every day and there is a great popular demand for the transfer of operations from Corea to China. It is suggested that Japan should unite all its available troops and march upon Peking immediately. The commercial treaty between Great Britain and Japan was ratified Saturday last.

Around Dundalk whole fields of grain and miles of forest are destroyed. UVALDE, Texas, Aug. 31.—A terrible catastrophe befell this thriving town last night. The treacherous Leona River, swollen to a raging torrent, swept down upon the town, wrecking homes and killing a number of people. Great apprehension is felt for 75 to 100 families living on the ditch south of town. It is feared they have been destroyed. An earthquake shock preceded or accompanied the calamity. Great distress prevails. The loss to the Southern Pacific Company is enormous, forty miles of track and many bridges having been washed away. A rough estimate of the loss to property in general places it at $1,500,000. News received late this evening reports that three families living south of town were drowned.

GROUND'S FOR ARBITRATION.

The railway strike was wrong, and could not be allowed to succeed. But, neither the General Managers' Association which conducted the struggle for the railway companies, nor the general public whose rights had to be actively asserted by President Cleveland as the commander-in-chief of the army of the United States, has any reason whatever to be thankful to Mr. Pullman. As we have already explained, a strike can never succeed when labor by the means it employs inflicts injury chiefly upon the innocent public and only incidentally and in small degree upon the capitalist or employer whom it seeks to bring to terms. On the other hand it may be stated as a general principle that there is always some ground for arbitration whenever the nature of an employer's business is such that by protracted controversy with his employes he is causing the general public vast inconvenience and harm. Under all the circumstances, it would not seem like a very extreme way of putting it to say that Mr. Pullman owed it to the country to keep on good terms with his employes; and that if he had not tact, skill, experience, or good feeling enough to maintain the peace without any outside intervention, then his failure was reason enough why, upon the request of the Mayor and Common Council of Chicago, he should have been quite willing to consider some plan for the arbitration of differences. If all that Mr. Pullman claimed was true, he had nothing whatever to lose by the result of arbitration. And he had very much to gain. He would have gained the thanks of the country and of the whole world for a broadminded, unselfish action. He would have gained immense popularity for himself, his company, and the Pullman system. He would have gained the sort of public confidence that would have given him enormous prestige and advantage in case of any future labor troubles. He would have gained the good will of railway managers, many of whom may now be disposed to think it expedient to operate their own sleeping-cars as soon as their existing Pullman contracts expire.—From "The Progress of the World," August Review of Reviews.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.

Bound in cloth $2.50.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from his historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHECIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, amounting in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

LORD SALISBURY ON THE MYSTERY OF LIFE.

THE Marquis of Salisbury, as President of the British Association, recently delivered a speech in the Sheldonian Theater at Oxford, in which he attacked Darwin's theory of the origin of species. He said:—

"The deepest obscurity still hangs over the origin of the variety of life; two of the strongest objections to the Darwinian explanation appear still to retain their force. It seems strange that a philosopher of Professor Weismann's penetration should have established a hypothetical process, the truth of which he admits that he cannot demonstrate in detail, and the operation of which he cannot even imagine. The reason which he gives seems to me instructive of the great danger scientific research is running at the present time—the acceptance of mere conjecture in the name and place of knowledge, in preference to making frankly the admission that no certain knowledge can be attained. 'We accept natural selection,' he says, 'because we must; because it is the only possible explanation that we can conceive.' As a politician, I know that argument very well. In political controversy it is sometimes said of a disputed proposal 'that it holds the field,' that it must be accepted because no possible alternative has been suggested. In politics there is, occasionally, a certain validity in the argument, for it happens that some definite course must be taken, even though no course is free from objection. But such a line of reasoning is utterly out of place in science. We are under no obligation to accept a theory, if the facts will not provide a sound one. To the riddles which nature propounds to us, the profession of ignorance must constantly be our only reasonable answer. A cloud of impenetrable mystery hangs over the developments and still more the origin of life. If we strain our eyes to pierce it, with the foregone conclusion that some solution is and must be attainable, we shall only mistake for discoveries the figments of our own imagination. . . .

"Professor Weismann adds another reason for his belief in natural selection, which is certainly characteristic of the time in which we live. 'It is inconceivable,' he says, 'that there is another principle capable of explaining the adoption of organisms without assuming the help of a principle of design.' The whirligig of time assuredly brings its revenges. Time was, not very long ago when the belief in creative design was supreme. Even those who were sapping its authority were wont to pay it a formal homage, fearing to shock the public conscience by denying it. Now the revolution is so complete that a great philosopher uses it as a reductio ad absurdum and prefers to believe that which can neither be demonstrated in detail, nor imagined, rather than run the slightest risk of such a heresy. I quite accept the Professor's dictum, that, if natural selection is rejected, we have no rescue but to fall back on mediate or immediate agency of a principle of design. In Oxford, at least, he will not find that argument conclusive. . . .

I prefer to shelter myself in this matter behind the judgment of Lord Kelvin: 'I feel profoundly convinced that the argument of design has been too much lost sight of in recent zoological speculations. Overpowering proofs of intelligent and benevolent design lie around us, and if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific, turn us away from them for a time, they come back upon us with irresistible force, showing to us through nature the influence of a free will, and teaching us that all living things depend on one everlasting Creator and Ruler.'"

Lord Salisbury's address was received, both by his audience and by the Press, with much interest and approval. The newspapers express themselves in a spirit similar to that of the following excerpt from The Daily News, London:—

"We have had no instance of variation by natural selection. It is, as Lord Salisbury says, purely hypothetical. But variation by artificial selection, that is, natural selection modified by a superintending purpose, is one of the most familiar facts of the modern world. The conclusion is irresistible, though it leads us back to the old argument for design. In restating this argument and showing high scientific authority for it Lord Salisbury has done a service to science, and made a very valuable and important contribution to the popular thinking of the time."—Literary Digest.

MEAT EATING AND TEMPER.

MRS. ERNEST HART, who accompanied her husband in his recent trip around the world, appears to come to the conclusion that meat eating is bad for the temper. In the Hospital she says that in no country is home rendered so unhappy and life made so miserable by the ill-temper of those who are obliged to live together as in England. If we compare domestic life and manners in England with those of other countries where meat does not form such an integral article of diet, a notable improvement will be remarked. In less meat eating France, urbanity is the rule of the home; in fish and rice-eating Japan, harsh words are unknown, and an exquisite politeness to one another prevails even among the children who play together in the streets. In Japan I never heard rude, angry words spoken by any but Englishmen. I am strongly of opinion that the ill-temper of the English is caused in a great measure by a too abundant meat dietary, combined with a sedentary life. The half-oxidized products of albumen circulating in the blood produce both mental and moral disturbances. The healthful thing to do is to lead an active and unselfish life, on a moderate diet, sufficient to maintain strength and not increase weight.—Scientific American.

DUTY'S CALL.

Rise! for the day is passing,
And you lie dreaming on;
And others have buckled their armor,
And forth to the fight have gone.
A place in the ranks awaits you,
Each man has a part to play;
The Past and the Future are looking
In the face of the stern to-day.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.
R. S. SALYARDS - ASSISTANT EDITOR.
JOSEPH LUFF CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, SEPT. 12, 1894.

IS THIS A CORRECT THEORY?

IN the letter of Bro. Hyrum O. Smith, dated at Bloomington, Idaho, is an extract from a discourse by Joseph E. Taylor, of the Utah Church, taken from the Deseret News for August 7, 1894:—

Elder Joseph E. Taylor deprecated the conduct of certain persons, members of the church, who were always judging and criticising their leaders by what was written in the books, placing the dead letter above the living oracles. He showed that the written word, being a record of the past, was not always applicable to present conditions. Hence the necessity of inspired leaders, whose teachings had the precedence over instructions given under other circumstances and conditions.

It may be improper to presume that Elder Joseph E. Taylor is so far a representative man as to represent the positive leading men of the Utah Church; but the principle announced in the statement made by him is not a new one in the Utah philosophy, and is the basis for the teaching, "obey counsel," so long held to on the one part and objected to on the other.

When the Savior uttered those memorable words wrung from him by his necessities and the knowledge that he must resist the pressure of those necessities if he would abide worthy of the great mission on which he had been sent, "It is written," he gave into the possession of all men then living, or to live, the safe central thought upon which all could and should make defence against the seductive teaching of designing, or evil men, and the direct temptations of the adversary of souls.

It surely cannot be that it has been or is now the deliberate intention of Elder Taylor and the men he represents as a minister, to set aside the written word and set in force instead the sayings and teaching of men. If so, then is there not a refuge against imposition left to the people; they are a prey to priestly teaching and power. It does seem as if nearly a half century of such teaching should be enough. Under its baneful influence almost every excess of peculiarity in belief has followed; and the absolute safety for the people of the church from the danger of a final departure from the faith, is in a return to the written word. Apply Elder Taylor's principle to the words uttered by Joseph Smith, some of which are quoted by himself and others, and they too, with what was written and held sacred by him and his compeers must be set aside.

The Savior's charge to the Jews was:—

Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me.—John 5: 39.

The church was commanded by the Lord to hearken to the teaching of the Book of Mormon, and that a condemnation rested on them for not remembering the things written in that book, which condemnation rested upon all, and would continue until they did remember the book not only to say (we believe) but to do the things therein written.

And as if to make assurance doubly sure, or as if oppressed by the thought that the church would be led aside by "living oracles" contrary to the wisdom and will of God the Lord gave to the church in his commandment prefacing the Doctrine and Covenants: "Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled." Whatever the conditions under which the foregoing were given the language is clear, and leaves no possible ground for such teaching as that of Elder Taylor's in the quotation given from his discourse.

There are no conditions or circumstances that can warrant the setting aside the commands: "Thou shalt not kill; thou shalt not lie; thou shalt not steal; thou shalt not commit adultery," given to the church in 1831; by the words of any "living oracle." What Jesus cannot do, no disciple or representative of his on earth can do; and it is sure that Jesus could not, would not, nor ever did disregard or set aside the commands of his Father.

The people have the right to measure their leading men by what is written, and no living oracle, here or there, has any right to ask the people to set the word aside for his inspiration; for "If they do not speak according to this word there is no light in them."

A BROTHER is impressed to dissent from the editor of HERALD, on what was stated a few numbers back in regard to a baptism performed for healing, and takes pains to state his belief that it is better to stick by what is written.

We concede the brother's right to differ from the editor on the subject named by us, but would prefer that what was written by us should be treated only as it was written and understood as it was intended.

We have once already stated that we did not state that rebaptism was a doctrine, or a practice of the church; nor did we state that baptism for healing was either a doctrine or practice of the church; but did state that we had so administered on one or two occasions, which administration was followed by good results. It appears from what the brother in Texas wrote about somebody afflicted with an evil spirit having been baptized to cast such evil spirit out; that such baptism was effectual to the accomplishment of the object sought. We thank the brother for the confirmation of what we wrote afforded by the incident named by him.

No one at this end of the line holds, or teaches "rebaptism," or "baptism for healing," as a dogma or a practice of the church; but the editor is just as much entitled to the expression of his views as is the brother from Texas, or any other; and that was all that was done. The case inquired of was stated with its conditions and was answered with direct reference to the conditions named.

Can anyone tell why the prophet stretched himself on the lad as it is stated in 1 Kings 17:21, 22, and 2 Kings 4:34, 35. Or why the prophet told Naaman to dip seven times in Jordan; or why the Savior commanded the leper to dip in the Pool of Siloam; or made spittle and anointed the blind man's eyes with it. There are no such ordinances named in either the Old or New Testaments as belonging to or appertaining to the healing of the sick; nor is the historian who recorded these several instances chargeable with teaching the acts as doctrine, or practice; nor is the Savior or the prophets reprehensible for having taught improperly by so acting. Just so in the instances named by us in the editorial complained of. We state again, that "we know of no law, or rule of the church enjoining rebaptism as a necessity." Neither do we know any law against it under the circumstances cited. We know no law, or rule of the church providing for baptism for restoration to health; neither do we, or anyone that we know of among the elders so hold or teach. And this is just what we wrote in the editorial referred to.

The brethren are welcome to write against the views expressed in that editorial; but so far those writing have not written to what was in it. And if there is controversy in the HERALD over it, it is not our fault, as we are not contending about it.

HARDLY FAIR TREATMENT.

BRO. RUSSELL ARCHIBALD, writing from St. Louis, Missouri:—

We were treated quite shabbily in regard to the tent, and in order that you may have some idea of the general wind-up of matters, as I presume you are to some extent interested in it, I inclose herewith clipping from the Sunday morning Star-Sayings of August 19, which gives an account of an interview with Bro. Hitchcock, who was a member of the arrangement committee. In general the report is a very fair one, with the exception that it is overdrawn in regard to the adjectives used. Some of the Saints were not acquainted with the final action taken and took their baskets out to the tent, intending to stop all day, and of course were disappointed; but I have not heard of any even expressing themselves as though they were angry.

As they stated we were not evangelical, we proposed to them that we have an opportunity to prove we are, they to furnish a man to prove we are not, but they feared they would not be able to get a man to represent them.

The work here continues to move forward. Twenty-three have been added to the branch by baptism since General Conference and the cause has not suffered because of our failure to be heard at the big tent, as there is always a reaction in such matters.

As many would like to know the result of the St. Louis attempt to be heard by the Saints in a popular tent movement, we present the clipping from the Star-Sayings referred to by Bro. Archibald:—

Representatives of the church which claims to be the successor to that founded by Joseph Smith in 1830, the Church of the Latter Day Saints, were surprised when they reached the camp ground at Page and De Hodiament avenues, yesterday morning, to find the big tent occupied by the Methodist denomination, and services were being conducted by Rev. B. Carradine, the Methodist Evangelist. It was announced from the pulpit of the various churches of the Latter Day Saints, in St. Louis, last Sunday, that the people of that faith had made arrangements with Ben Deering, through the chairman of an appointed committee, John C. Hitchcock, to hold religious services at the camp ground yesterday at 10:30 a. m., 3:30 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. Notices were also forwarded to the various newspapers by the committee of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, which were kindly published, making the same announcement. To say that those who had not been informed to the contrary were surprised yesterday to find the Methodists holding the fort when they arrived at the camp ground, is putting it mildly. They were non-plussed, confounded, indignant, and were not backward in expressing their feelings at the condition of affairs.

When their astonishment and excitement had subsided sufficiently to bring them into a condition to converse calmly upon the subject, it was learned that arrangements had been perfected by Mr. Hitchcock with Ben Deering for the exclusive use of the camp ground, on Saturday, August 18, with permission to hold three services. Speakers, they said, had been engaged at considerable expense and the musical programme had been arranged after much labor.

What is the meaning of this condition of affairs? That was the vexed question. Ben Deering, manager of the camp ground, explained the situation by saying that Saturday, August 18, was the day set apart for the Methodist evangelist, Rev. B. Carradine. This explanation of the situation did not satisfy those members of the church of the Latter Day Saints, who expected to see the exponents of their faith granted a hearing yesterday. They remembered that at the Congress of Religions, held in Chicago during the World's Fair, they were the only ones who were not in evidence. That they should be left the second time aroused their ire and deprecatory adjectives were at a premium at the entrance to Camp De Hodiament yesterday morning.

John C. Hitchcock, a prominent member of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, worshipping at 2518 Elliot avenue, when seen by a Star-Sayings reporter last evening, said:—

"I made a straight contract with Manager Ben Deering early last week for the use of the tent and grounds of the De Hodiament camp for to-day. Terms were agreed upon and details entered into. There was no doubt in my mind about it. This arrangement was fixed up about the middle of last week. On Saturday night, August 11, I saw Mr. Deering again. He said it was all right, and the Church of the Latter Day Saints could hold forth at the camp ground to-day, the 18th, according to arrangements fixed upon. I reported to our church the result of my conferences with Mr. Deering.

"We caused notices to be prepared to that effect; they were sent to every local church of our faith; they were read from the pulpits; we wired to prominent speakers requesting them to be present, at considerable expense; we began rehearsing for the musical services; we sent notices to the press announcing the fact that the camp ground management had done well to accord our people a representation and that the Latter Day Saints were always anxious and willing to represent themselves in preference to being represented by others and that they were grateful for the opportunity that had been accorded them.

"My first information which led me to think there was something wrong was the item published in the Star-Sayings Wednesday evening to the effect that L. F. Lindsay, Ben Deering's right-hand man, had said that the church people of the faith of the Latter Day Saints would not be allowed to use the camp ground for religious services. The management had decided not to let the grounds for profane use. The enterprise was instituted solely for religious purposes.

"After reading the startling piece of news I hastened to the camp at Page and De Hodiament avenues, and held another conference with Ben Deering. He talked very smoothly and perhaps kindly to me. He said he thought the Star-Sayings had done Bro. Lindsay an injustice; that it was possible he did not say the Latter Day Saints could not hold services on the camp ground. After telling Mr. Deering that we had perfected arrangements for holding three meetings on Saturday, August 18, in the big tent at the camp ground, on the strength of the contract made with him, he said that he would consider the matter and let me know about it. Very soon after, he sent word to me that it would be impossible to carry out the contract made with me and we must give up the idea of holding services at the camp ground on Saturday, August 18. He made the excuse that some of the people who were backing him in the enterprise, objected to our faith being represented in the series of camp meetings. 'He thought,' so he stated, 'that we could hold forth at the camp ground Saturday week, August 25.' I think he gave as another reason that he expected Sam Jones would be at the camp meeting to-day. But the next day after he told me that, the newspapers came out with an announcement that the Rev. Beverly Carradine would preach there to-day, and I understand that he did.

"Of course our committee was obliged to go to the expense and trouble of wiring our speakers that engagements were off and recalling the announcements, as far as possible, which had been made, from the pulpits and in the newspapers. The thought that there was a strong probability that we should have the camp ground on Saturday, August 25, held us down a bit and we decided to quietly await developments.

"Another letter came to me from Ben Deering this morning. It blasted what little hopes we had left. In it he stated in a very smooth way that it would not be convenient to arrange with our people for meetings at the camp ground on Saturday, August 25. The Salvation Army had been assigned to that day. Mr. Deering stated, half apologetically, that he was obliged to apportion the open dates up to September 2, among other denominations that had stood by him, I suppose he meant; those that would bring in the most money. He offered the use of the tent and grounds to us, any date that we should choose after September 2, for a sum sufficient to pay for the use of the tent and contingent expenses."

Mr. Hitchcock waited a few minutes, then gathering himself together, he continued:—

"I don't think we have received fair treatment. The meat in the shell is that our church is unpopular. We would not be a drawing card. As for the evangelical phase of our belief, I agree with Ben Deering, that our speakers would talk on subjects based on the Bible, that they would say nothing that could not be proved by the Bible. He has carried us outside of the limits of the camp meeting series of meetings evidently for a purpose. We shall have no use for the camp ground after September 2."

The scribe made an attempt to see Manager Ben Deering last evening to obtain further information on the subject, but he had left the camp ground and could not be located at that time. It was understood, however, that L. F. Lindsay voiced the sentiments of the management in the account published in the Star-Sayings, Wednesday, August 15.

JOHN C. WHITMER DEAD.

THE Ray county, (Missouri,) Republican, published at Richmond, for August 30, comes to us sent by Bro. R. L. Ware, announcing the death of Elder John C. Whitmer, nephew of David Whitmer, and President of the Church of Christ, commonly called the "Whitmerites."

The Republican has as a biographical sketch the following:—

John C. Whitmer was born fifty years ago in Caldwell. His parents were Jacob Whitmer and Eliza Shutt Whitmer. In 1838 he was brought to Ray county by his parents, who settled in the country just south of Richmond. In 1856 Mr. Whitmer was married to Miss Mary Grant, a resident of this country. Eleven children resulted from this union, nine of whom are living. All of these have grown up and are sterling citizens in our community. Mr. Whitmer was an elder in the Church of Christ and was ordained by David Whitmer. His ability as a financier was rewarded by a handsome property which reverts to his family. Most of his life was spent upon the farm. John C. Whitmer belonged to that branch of the Whitmer family which were expelled from the Mormon Church for refusing to accept polygamy. They were driven from their homes and their property confiscated. While penniless they settled in Ray county and built up their fortunes and social standing.

The editor of the Republican is clearly misinformed about the expulsion of the Whitmer family from the so-called Mormon Church. David Whitmer was disfellowshipped in May, 1838, for insubordination and a disregard of the church articles. The church was expelled the State that fall and the Whitmer family remained without molestation. If they were driven from their homes it was not by the church, nor was their property taken from them by the church. The general integrity of the family is acknowledged in the community where they have dwelt. David Whitmer himself stated that there was nothing known of polygamy in the church during his connection with it.

We regret the death of Elder Whitmer. Who will be chosen by the church he presided over to succeed him, will, we suppose, be decided after a time.

FROM a fragment of a letter received from M. R. Scott, Sr., we gather that he has been hearing Reverends Orr and Kelley arraign the faith without giving him a chance to defend against the attack. He writes thus:—

To be misrepresented and not have the privilege to reply is hard to bear; but God being our helper we will feel of these "mudsills" yet.

Mudsills are heavy logs or timbers laid under bridges and buildings in places where stone is not handy and the ground wet, to support the main structure and keep it from sinking. Bro. Scott probably deems the ministers to whom he refers as those upon whom the members of the churches they represent found their belief in faith, doctrine, and organization; hence, when opportunity comes, as come it will, sooner or later, he will "feel of," that is, examine them to see whether they are sound and a sufficient foundation for human faith to stand on or not.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. HIRAM L. HOLT writes from Sweet Home, Oregon, August 27:—

I am getting along finely here, have held thirty preaching meetings in four weeks, prejudice is giving away every day. I know that last night there was more interest than ever before, one was baptized last Sunday and a number more are almost ready to follow; many say it is so good, yet so new and strange, that they don't know what to think of it; nearly all admit that we harmonize the Scriptures as they never heard before. I wish I could remain two weeks more, for there is lots of the story I have not told yet. Apostasy and restoration I have not yet considered directly: the gospel is a good story, a plain and a long story. I think it increases in plainness and beauty to me as I continue to tell it. Two spiritualists here say they would give forty dollars to have me "sit" with a medium that is to be here in a day or so. I don't feel afraid to, but I don't know that I ought to, just to show them that I am not afraid, should I?

Bro. J. Alfred Davis, Atchison, Kansas, August 31:—

I have been laboring in Doniphan and Brown counties, and it is encouraging to note that the interest seems to be on the increase in most places. The people turn out well to our meetings considering the hot, dry, and trying times. I baptized one at Severance the 12th inst., and two in this city the 29th. It would be well if an elder could be here continually, but I realize that the harvest is great, and the laborers few.

Bro. C. H. Porter, Wilber, Nebraska, September 3:—

The Saints held a Sunday school picnic at the Castor Grove, south of Wilber, August 31. A splendid time was had, all seeming to enjoy themselves hugely. We commenced a series of meetings here at the church on Saturday evening, September 1. Bro. T. W. Williams is with us and we hope to prevail on him to remain all the week. Yesterday we had the pleasure of baptizing the president of the W. C. T. U. of Wilber. The interest here is good.

R. E. Grant, West Bay City, Michigan, August 30:—

A tent is just the thing; every district ought to have one. We have reached more people in the last month with the gospel tent in Bay City than with hall service in five years before. I hope the Saints in Eastern Michigan district will never rest easy until we have a gospel tent. Big crowds and the best of interest in West Bay City; preaching every night and three times on Sunday.

Bro. R. E. Grant, West Bay City, Michigan, September 3:—

Our tent meetings here are a success. The city is getting awakened and the tent is full nearly every night. Last night there was not room for all, so we built on an addition by raising the side wall on the left, and had an overflow meeting, during which time F. M. Cooper blew a blast on the gospel horn that seemed to shake the very walls of sectarianism. The people say, "That is the gospel." Several have given their names for baptism, while others are near. We will trouble the waters next Sunday with perhaps a dozen candidates.

Bro. R. R. Dana, Santa Maria, California, August 27:—

Elder Charles Baly and self are here on missionary work and the prospects for effective labor in the two counties mentioned above seem quite good, and some have given their names for baptism.

Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California, September 3:—

I am sure there is not a reader of the Herald but what will rejoice to learn that the Gospel Boat is near completion and will be dedicated September 16. My wife was baptized September 2. There are others waiting, but why they wait so long I do not know. Bro. E. L. Kelley preached two excellent sermons the 2d inst.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE brethren of the Far West district are entitled to credit for the success of their late reunion, held at Maysville, Missouri, August 23 to September 2, inclusive. The editor was in attendance for three days, and was pleased with the spirit which prevailed. Much good was evidently the result to the cause. Maysville is the place where Bro. Leonard Scott met Rev. Padgett in discussion; and, if the people of the place have it correctly, defeated him. Bro. T. W. Chatburn was in charge, and was ably assisted by all the local brethren.

Bro. H. P. Curtis wrote from Porcupine, Wisconsin, August 28, giving an account of labor and progress in that region, of which Bro. C. H. Burr writes in the present issue. He reports open doors for preaching on every hand. The Lord had bestowed marked blessings upon the sick, to the confirmation of his word. He had been ill, but was now resuming active preaching. He had organized the young people into a choir, which had benefited them and aided the general work.

Bro. William Rozell, Waterloo, Oregon, and Bro. J. J. Leabo of Independence, same State, commend the labors of Bro. H. L. Holt and wife in that field. The former reports two baptized; the latter refers to much good having been done; himself a descendant of those who persecuted the Saints in the martyr's day, and a former "Mormon hater," being convinced of the truth and becoming obedient to it. Bro. Holt writes of his labors in this issue.

Letters are received from Sr. I. S. Wilder, Panama, Iowa; Bro. Z. Taylor, Council Bluffs; A. D. Bonham, Grizzly Flats, California; A. M. Baker, Monnegaw Springs, Missouri; A. H. Smith, South Boardman, Michigan.

Bro. J. H. Lawn, writing from Stockton, California, also warns the Saints against the swindler who has been victimizing a number of our people, representing himself as a destitute member of the church and borrowing money. He is aged about forty-five, medium height, has dark hair, and is club footed. Look out for him.

The Tenant's Harbor, Maine, Traveler, of August 24, devotes two columns to the New England reunion, closing with these words: "An impression favorable to the 'Saints' has been made on the community who have heard this evangel so ably and eloquently defended from a Bible standpoint."

The address of Bro. A. N. Bishop is Market Chambers, Bryn-Mawr, South Wales.

Brn. Joseph Smith and A. S. Cochran started for the Logan reunion on Friday, the 7th inst.

Sr. N. V. Pearson, of Hamon, Texas, writes for tracts for distribution among her neighbors. Brn. Sheppard and Currie were at Hamon, preaching the word and making friends to the cause.

Sr. A. Hancock, Quincy, Illinois, requests prayer in behalf of her husband, now under treatment for insanity at Jacksonville, Illinois.

"If God imposes law upon unorganized matter much more must he upon rational beings."

Bro. James Kemp is pushing the work in Western Colorado.

Brn. Heman C. Smith, Charles Jones, and William Waterman arrived home during the week of the 2d, from Southern fields, the latter being ill. Bro. Henry C. Smith, of the Eastern mission, also arrived during the week.

Bro. Willard J. Smith writes that some are occasionally added to the branch in Detroit, Michigan. Prospects bright.

Bro. N. Stamm, writing from Runnells, Iowa, the 6th inst., reports fifteen baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth at the close of the late Des Moines district conference, with others about ready to obey. Bro. W. C. Nirk had baptized seven into the Richland branch in Tama county. Many others manifest a deep interest. Bro. Stamm has been preaching the word and feels well in the service. He asks prayers for restoration of hearing.

THE De Kalb county Record, published at Maysville, Missouri, thus notices the late Maysville reunion in its issue of September 6:—

The Latter Day Saints camp meeting closed Monday morning. The meeting was conducted in the most orderly and becoming manner. The ministers were able and earnest in their work, and altogether it was a profitable and interesting reunion, at which seed for future good was abundantly sown. The management has won the respect and confidence of the entire community by their earnest bearing and courteous Christian deportment.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Speak a shade more kindly
Than the year before;
Pray a little oftener,
Love a little more;
Cling a little closer
To the Father's love;
Life below shall liker grow
To the life above."

DEAR SISTERS:—It is a comforting thought to us that the Lord will not lose sight of the least of our good deeds. We sometimes do what we feel at the time to be a kind and charitable act to a fellow being. In the course of time we may discover that we have made a mistake—that the person so favored has proved himself unworthy of the kindness. It dawns upon us that it is a case of misplaced charity. And while we naturally experience a twinge of disgust for the unworthy recipient, let not a wave of doubt cross our minds as to our reward for the act; for most assuredly the Lord acknowledged the good intent of our hearts and will reward us accordingly. Then let those who may strive to discharge any duty, though it be but to pen a few thoughts or relate an experience for the comfort or edification of others, fully realize that He who knows our hearts will acknowledge and bless our efforts and all will be well.

We mothers who are so pressed on every hand with the cares and labor necessary for the temporal comfort of those in our charge and burdened with the responsibilities of this, at best, arduous life, sometimes feel it is not in our province to do other than these everyday duties; and if we faithfully and well discharge the same, we are free from other obligations. But let us not deceive ourselves. I believe that there is a place for each one and a work for each in the church—the great workhouse of God; an opportunity for each one to secure a blessing by occupying the same. And, if he will only arouse himself to action, divest himself of every false idea and diffidence, and earnestly seek to obtain the proffered blessing, great joy and satisfaction will be his at the end of the race according to the promises of God; and do we not believe that the Lord will verify his promises to his children? Rest assured, sisters, that we each, if so disposed, can find a place and also time to assist in this great gospel work; whether by pen, by speaking a word of cheer to a soul-tried brother or sister, by performing some task or aiding in the advancement of our branch meetings, and in numberless ways lend a helping hand at the right time and in the right place.

We need not desire to perform the duties of another or aspire to that to which we cannot attain, but simply endeavor to improve the talent God has given us, and with earnest zeal and a prayerful heart willingly do only what we can. It is well to faithfully discharge all temporal duties but not entirely to the exclusion of spiritual or religious obligations. If we are not equal to the task to meet and discharge all duties as we journey along through life, is it not better to neglect those pertaining to our temporal comfort rather than to fail to perform those that will prove of worth in the salvation of our souls? For are we not as saints only living for the life to come? Do we not realize that this mortal sphere is but a preparation for the great eternity? And though I believe it is pleasing in the sight of the Lord for his children to be true to their life-work and the duties and requirements of the same, it is not his will that we be so wrapped up, so to speak, in our efforts for earthly needs as to plead for a want of time to do his will for the furtherance of his cause. Let it not be said to us as in days ago it was said to a certain class, "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

I sometimes think, when meditating on the life of those of God's children who have made a sacrifice of the comfort and pleasures which tend to make this life bearable, and so willingly and cheerfully leave those who are dear to them by the ties of nature, thereby denying themselves the pleasure which is found nowhere outside of the sanctuary of home for the sole purpose of preaching God's word. I think if we could more fully realize the earnest and noble efforts of these soldiers of the cross and the unselfish lives they live, that we would take courage and feel that we had far the easier part; that we who enjoy the pleasures of home-life and presence of dear ones, as well as those comforts which make this life so agreeable and enhance our joy here below, surely ought to be more alive to our duties and more earnest in our endeavor to aid and assist them in various ways, and thus lend encouragement to them as well as laying up treasures unto ourselves by heeding the injunction, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren ye did it unto me." Can we conceive of one motive that might prompt them to forsake all, follow the meek and lowly Jesus, and become "fishers of men," save the desire to save souls and the obtaining of life eternal? No worldly honor or renown is theirs, but rather the essence of ridicule and insult is flung at them by humanity at large. It is true there is comfort in Christ's words, "He that loveth father or mother, . . . son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." Yet compliance with the same does not change man's natural affections. And while he may indeed drink of the bitter cup in sacrificing home and loved ones, the imperative, though comforting thought comes to him, "I must be about my Father's business." What more is required of frail humanity in order to gain life celestial, I ask? And if they faithfully continue in their God-given work until called from this stage of action their life-work o'er, will they not rest where sorrow cometh not and where parting shall be no more? Surely they will be among the number of whom it will be said, "These are they who bore the cross, despised the shame, and are now seated at the right hand of the Father."

And are not those who by pen are doing such noble work in the way of editing our worthy church publications, coworkers with God's servants? Can we realize the depth of love for the Master and for humanity which prompts them to live such unselfish lives, and the many hours of toil and labor to which they are subject, before we are made to feast on those productions which prove of such worth to us? Then let us share in the glory which will be theirs by lending a helping hand from time to time that they "faint not by the way." Let us be a band of workers. Work in the Sabbath school, in the different organizations for good, and also in our families, in preparing the minds of our children to receive the truth.

Do we as mothers in Israel fully realize the great work designed to be done by the Daughters of Zion? And how all-important and requisite such a work seems to be in this age of sin and vice. Would we have our children escape the great evil? Then we must prepare them through a knowledge of the physical laws of nature to resist the evil which will tend to pollute the bodies God has given them. We are commanded to make these bodies pure and fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, if we would receive the blessings God has promised us. And are we not responsible in a great measure for the sins of those whom God has intrusted to our care? Realizing this, then, let us leave nothing undone that may prove as a shield to them when the hour of trial shall come. If mothers cannot feel the need and importance of such a work, let them "take it to the Lord in prayer," for he will guide your minds aright in all things when trusting him. And as we become convinced that the work is of the Lord, let nothing stand in the way of its progress. For when our desires are for right, the Lord will provide a way for us to accomplish much good. Let us work while it is day, for how soon the night cometh. That we may all more fully realize our duties as Saints and mothers, and also the great reward which will be ours by living true to the same, is the desire and prayer of your sister,

WHAT TO DO WITH THE CHILDREN DURING VACATION.

SIXTH PAPER (CONTINUED).—SOUL LIFE OF BOYS AND GIRLS.

A CHILD should not be left to select his own reading. Right here, though, may come in some difficulty. Many parents do not consider themselves competent to advise in such matters. But we think that unlettered parents, with a little effort to inform themselves, can more safely choose their reading matter than can inexperienced boys and girls. It is a duty, however, that should be exercised very conscientiously. It requires thought and investigation, a broad habit of thinking, and liberal consideration for every legitimate branch of literature.

A parent should permit no personal whim to dictate in child's reading. In this, as in the matter of preparing them for an avocation in life, allowance should be made for a child's own peculiar tastes. And it is absurd to expect to pin young, fanciful minds down to dry and heavy reading. A gentleman in comfortable circumstances, who is regarded as intelligent and well informed too, when asked by his fifteen year old daughter for more books and magazines, told her there were a lot of religious books and encyclopedias in the house; to read them.

The wise selection of reading matter for young people is not so difficult as some suppose. A few simple principles are sufficient to direct in all cases. Choose only the best books in each department, and those suited to the age of a child. This is not so hard a thing to do, even by persons of limited acquaintance with books. There are so many easily accessible sources of acquiring such information, if only one will give the subject a little time and study.

It is absolutely ignorant to bar out this branch and that branch of literature, and restrict a child's reading to any one thing. Each department of literature occupies a legitimate place in the world of letters. Only see to it that your child is given the choicest of books and papers, and guard his reading against oneness and extreme in any direction. Of course fuller indulgence should be allowed in any department of knowledge in which a young person is especially interested.

It is believed by some of the wisest thinkers that everyone should be thoroughly informed upon some subject. We fully agree with the idea. But it is not well to direct a child's tastes in any direction particularly, until it can be decided what they are, although, where a child seems to develop no mental aim, it is commendable to try and interest him in something. But the first thing to do, as a great writer once said, is to cultivate an even mental balance, and to give scope and liberality of thinking.

Teach the children not to regard music, painting, reading, etc., as only amusements, but that they hold a higher place, as duties.

We have two natures. The wants of the animal are more insistent, but the requirements of the spiritual have no end. It is essential to the rounding of character, to the destiny of the human, that the mind and heart be cultivated as well as that the hands be trained. Youth offers the principal opportunity in the lives of many for the acquiring of culture. It is always sad to see a young person who is being permitted to fritter away this precious time on what is merely amusing. Perhaps, when the day comes that he or she wishes for more cultivated information, his leisure for it is past.

With the workingman and the man of affairs, occupied from seven till six and longer, there is little time for other reading than that of current happenings. Prominent men have said that they depended for their knowledge of classic books and authors mostly upon the acquaintance they made with them in youth.

Young people of course, cannot appreciate their opportunities at the time, and it is for this reason that those intrusted with their care should insist upon the reading that older wisdom and experience know will be to their benefit. Do not regard the library as merely a luxury. Count in good books and papers as among the necessary expenses. If sacrifices must be made, they may better be in some other direction than here. Cultivate in the boys and girls a thorough, systematic habit of reading, that will become so ingrafted in their methods, that they will carry it with them into future life.

With all our teaching and training, we do not want to overdo the matter. No boy or girl should be robbed of his heritage to be free and mirthful. We would not have them get the idea of cramming into their heads. There is no form of the extremist more detestable than the languid, absent-minded, spiritless bookworm, whose head is so full of theories and other people's ideas, that he is of no practical use on earth; who never found out a truth by actual demonstration or experiment in his life. Humanity, nature, the things we see about us afford a great school for study. It is a deficient education that does not teach the need of observation and reflection. All men of originality, all great minds, all men who have rendered the world actual service have been reflective men.

One of the greatest of the old time philosophers was in the habit of daily withdrawing into solitude to think. Sir Walter Scott loved nature's quiet retreats and there, among the mountains, in the forests, by the water's side, to dream and plan. It is said of Henry Ward Beecher that he would be interested for hours watching the busy laborer at his work, and that he keenly enjoyed conversing with these humble men of toil. It was not a sponge-absorbing brain that discovered that greatest of inventions, the steam engine. James Watt was only noticing a steaming teakettle when the principle of steam power was suggested to his mind.

Teach the children to appreciate the opportunities that open eyes and listening ears and thoughtful minds can find. The mind is never more keenly active than when it is enjoying itself. Yes, there is a use for recreation and for idle minutes. There is inspiration in a summer evening; there are lessons in a country walk. Nature is the great resource of life; the study of it, the foundation of thought. Lead the young minds to drink of its fountains freely, to experience its reviving influence upon the drooping spirits, to let its magnetism thrill their souls, to test the power of its magic to illumine the mind and to give impetus to ambition. In short, teach the boys and girls this summer, some lessons in how to think, how to observe, how to be useful, how to be successful, and how to enjoy life.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—During my trips to the late Benan and Wheeler's Grove camp meetings, I witnessed the most destructive drought ever known to Iowa. But in the midst of the general depression caused by it, the Saints exhibited generally a spirit of quiet submission, recognizing existing conditions as so many harbingers of the near coming reign of Christ promised in all the sacred books of the church. Our meetings at Benan will not, did not fail of good fruits in many ways. Our meetings at Wheeler's Grove, all things considered, gave general satisfaction and resulted well. I held five meetings at Harlan in the meantime, fairly well attended and from which good fruits will surely come. In all these places the Saints were revived and encouraged by their interchange of goodly words, also by the religious exercises and the presence of the Comforter. Many friends and a fair proportion of converts were made to the Reorganized Church of Christ and its saving work.

When returning to Lamoni I met Hon. P. P. Kelley, leading attorney in the Temple Lot suit. He has recently been nominated for district judge, and from present indications will be elected. Many strong, influential men, of all parties favor his election and will cheerfully aid him. The country needs "good men and wise men" to fill offices of public trust, and our sacred books teach that "such should be earnestly sought for," irrespective of party lines. Parley P. Kelley fills the bill and is eminently worthy.

I have just returned from the Maysville, Missouri, reunion and have only good words for that meeting. The managers made good their promises in every way I believe. Excellent fruits were manifest with more to follow. In all the foregoing meetings important gains in numbers added to the church were made, while many more were and are almost persuaded to join the Saints.

Fine rains having fallen all through Western Iowa, Northern Missouri, and Eastern Kansas and Nebraska, the prospects are encouraging for the Logan reunion, ample preparations for which are being made. The times are very favorable for thorough, active, patient ministerial labor in all quarters, at least it so appears to the writer.

STOCKTON, Cal., Aug. 21.

Editors Herald:—I came here on the 27th of July; since which time I have preached nineteen times, baptized and confirmed one, a Catholic lady of French parentage, a native of this State, with a good English education. A few others, not Catholics, are interested and some investigating, but because of misdeeds committed here by a few who were once in the light, it causes a spirit of timidity, fear, and dread to take possession of them; and thus they stand at the threshold ready to enter, but for fear, spend their precious time in waiting till the clouds roll by.

I find this city not only overshadowed by clouds, but surrounded by an almost impregnable wall of superstition, prejudice, and priestcraft, whose foundation is already beginning to shake, and her towering walls of error must in the near future crumble and fall to rise no more. God speed the day.

As this is my first visit to Stockton I will say of the Saints here (those whom I have seen) that they are in general, as good Saints are everywhere, a noble, generous-hearted people, confessing their faults to and praying for each other, thus trying to live their holy religion. This should encourage the itinerant ministry. I have been greatly blessed when standing to declare the word to the people, both here and at Santa Cruz, since I left home. When I left Santa Cruz to come here there were a few there who were about ready for baptism. I held ten meetings there, six of which were held in a hall, for which the Saints paid.

Yesterday I was informed that there was a young man working at a hotel here who wanted to be baptized right away. He had been attending the meetings, so I went with Bro. Thomas Jolley, the branch president, and the result was that I baptized him yesterday afternoon. He has been raised under the teachings of the Utah Church but never could indorse their wicked practices. We held a splendid prayer and testimony meeting last evening at the chapel and confirmed Bro. Bonner, after which he and all present bore testimony.

J. H. LAWN.

JONESPORT, Me., Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—The regular hours for meetings were observed at the reunion, on Friday the 17th inst., a business meeting being held in the forenoon, at which the Maine and Massachusetts reunion, known as the Eastern reunion, was dissolved. The intention is to hold two unions annually instead of one; one in Maine, the other in Massachusetts; each State being left to arrange for its own. In the afternoon Bro. William Blanchard preached a pointed and well-delivered discourse to a respectable number of attentive listeners. At evening a large audience was present and Bro. F. M. Sheehy arose to the occasion and delivered an appropriate discourse, which was listened to attentively. The singing also was excellent, which seemed to delight the audience.

The Saturday morning prayer service was well attended and enjoyed by all present. The remainder of the day was spent as a holiday to recuperate the physical man in unrestrained, open-air exercise. At evening a large audience was present again at the meeting and the writer interested them on the knotty problem of the latter-day message—the sealed book. The best of attention and order prevailed.

Sunday the 19th was the closing day of the reunion. It was a bright, beautiful day. The morning prayer service was well attended. The preaching service brought together the largest audience that had assembled at a morning meeting. Bro. George H. Gates and U. W. Greene occupied the stand and Bro. Greene preached a telling discourse on the signs of the times. The pulpit had been nicely decorated by the young sisters the day previous, the choir put in trim, and the whole atmosphere seemed to bloom with delight and good cheer. As the hours passed by the interest increased, so that at 2:30 p. m. a great crowd had assembled, many having come long distances to hear the new philosophy. Bro. F. M. Sheehy posed again as the defender of the faith, and was carefully followed for over an hour by his hearers. Evening brought out the largest audience of the reunion. The view was rather imposing, and every one appeared to be delighted. The music that floated out on the evening air, the moon's pale, mellow light, the bracing atmosphere, were added pleasures to the occasion, while a deep interest was manifest by the great audience. It was the writer's turn again to point out some of the prominent, interesting, and attractive features of the faith which combine to make the peculiar and distinctive denomination represented. The Lord gave liberty of thought and speech, so the closing of the reunion was pronounced a success. Invitations came in to continue another week, but this could not be complied with.

The placing of the reunion at Tenant's Harbor was done with some hesitancy, but the effort was crowned with success, emphasizing the sentiment, "Have faith in God." The Lord and faithful Saints can win anywhere.

There was but a single cloud upon our reunion; that was the sickness and death of Sr. Millie Gowell. She was taken severely ill on Monday night of the 13th instant with cholera morbus, from which she received no permanent relief. A complication of diseases set in and she continued to grow weaker until Wednesday the 22d at four p. m., when she was released by death. She breathed her last as peacefully and quietly as an infant's sleep, at the residence of Dr. Bartlett where she had been invited to stay, by that excellent man, during her sickness, and without charge. A consultation of physicians was had in her case, and every possible attention given her; but neither prayer nor medicine availed anything. She seemed to be fated from the first. Sr. Lydia Kelley, Ella Rogers, Orilla Sheehy, and Kate Blood are entitled to worthy mention for the sisters' part shown in caring for the sick one. Sr. Gowell's body was embalmed by Mr. Davis, the undertaker and postmaster at Tenant's Harbor, who is deserving of respectful remembrance by all Saints and lovers of true manhood for his kindness and unselfish efforts manifest towards us while there, and indeed others whose names I have not should share in this remembrance. God bless true men and women everywhere, irrespective of creed or dogma. Dr. and Mrs. Bartlett can only be remembered with gratitude for the Christian work done by them in behalf of Sr. Gowell. The body of Sr. Gowell was borne to Jonesport, her home, and interred in the Evergreen cemetery of that place on Friday of the 24th instant. She was one of the best of women, hence rests in peace. Her funeral discourse was preached by the writer on Sunday the 26th inst. at two p. m., in the church at Jonesport, a large audience of relatives and friends being present. He also preached at the same place to attentive listeners in the evening. For this evening, preaching is announced for Beal's Island. Bro. Gowell thinks my services are needed in this section until after the holding of their district conference, which is appointed to convene at South Addison, the 15th of September. After that I will return to Massachusetts. To-morrow we go to Cutler, Machias, etc. The Saints are usually well here. Bro. Gowell is feeling well physically.

Very truly,

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

COOK'S POINT, Texas, Aug. 31.

Editors Herald:—I have three debates on foot; one with a Baptist, one with an Advent, one with a Christian. It seems that they are disturbed; they all challenged us. These discussions are to be held in three different counties; Lee, Williamson, and Robertson. When the battle is over we will let you hear if we survive the conflict. We have no fears in making a defense for the doctrine of the church from a Scriptural standpoint, God being our helper, for we know the doctrine is true. We hope to make a defense for our claims as set forth in the standard books. But we don't feel like having it said that we teach baptism is to be administered to the sick to heal them, and when we deny it be referred to what our presiding officer said in the editorial column of the church paper. Baptism is for no other purpose than for the remission of sins. After we read that article in last Herald about rebaptism and about baptizing to heal the sick we remember what an old brother told us took place in Nauvoo. He said his father was told to go and cast an evil spirit out of a man that was a member of the church, and they tried to do it, and it seemed they did; but the evil spirit would not leave the house and reentered the man, and so the man in whom the evil spirit was said that if they would take him and baptize him the evil spirit would leave him; and so they did. It took four men to take him to the water, and he said when he was baptized the evil spirit did leave him and did not again trouble him. I think this case about a parallel one with the cases referred to in said article. I will be satisfied when the Lord concludes to change the order of baptism, or when the sick are to be baptized to heal them the Lord will let us all know it; and until he does we had better abide in that which is written, do that which is commanded, administer the ordinances for the purposes the Lord has given them, and leave the result with him.

We will stop and let those who were referred to reply to said article, as what I have said are my convictions; and I felt like expressing them to you that you might know how I felt about the matter referred to.

Yours in bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

TUNCURRY, N. S. W., July 31.

Editors Herald:—Since last report Elder Kaler and self have "opened up" one new place, where we found a hall in a farming community free, and good-sized audiences and attention; which is all any gospeler can ask. Country halls have no stoves, and nights being chilly and very dark, we could not speak so often as we wished.

A debate of unknown proportions was reported by one of our local elders at New Castle, Bro. Haworth. Having other matters on hand, he sent for Bro. Kaler to take his place. The latter asked for further particulars, as to time, the proposition, etc., but heard nothing in reply; hence we know nothing of the outcome.

The third Sunday in July was spent with the Tuncurry branch. In the afternoon it was my pleasure to unite in the golden bonds of matrimony Sr. Eliza Avery and Mr. Thomas Dunn. The ceremony was solemnized in the chapel before a house full of friends and relatives. Immediately following was a sermon by Elder Kaler appropriate to the occasion. He also preached the sermon at night, when we held a "memorial service" for Bro. T. W. Smith, the news of whose death had just arrived.

He was esteemed here as a plain, straightforward, earnest preacher, and the sad news is received by the church in Australia with regret, as was also that of his wife. At Nambucca the brethren voluntarily remarked that it was due to the energy of Bro. and Sr. Smith that they now have a chapel to worship in. While in Victoria he wrote and had printed a pamphlet entitled, "One hundred and eighty-two fair questions and candid answers," explanatory of the faith. It exhibits the same clear-cut logic and literary ability that always characterized his work.

Gospel matters are quiet and slow. We are not "turning the world upside down" religiously, as you seem to be doing at home. I wish that hastening spirit would make haste and come over to this land. Perhaps a little more activity on our part will attract it.

Inclose find clipping from the Bulletin, a Sydney paper. It is difficult to understand just why our people here are spoken of as "a colony" or "community," as though they were different in that respect from other churches in this country. The same could be said just as appropriately of any local congregation of other churches in Australia.

Hopefully,

GOMER WELLS.

"Dear Bulletin:—Regarding the Mormon colony at Forster, Cape Hawke, N. S. W., I spent some of the happiest wage-days there. More money, better living; more picnics and shorter hours working for a selector who was one of the leading lights. Their pastor worked during the week and preached most eloquently on Sundays on any important question of the day. They call themselves Latter Day Saints, and repudiate the sect who strive for polygamy, which is denounced in their Bible the Book of Mormon.—C. A. J. L."

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald:—We are engaging just now probably in the first persistent effort ever made in the city of Cleveland to introduce this latter-day work. All the difficulties, and a few more perhaps, that generally present themselves in the introduction of our work attend our effort in this place. The cloud of internal witnesses seems necessary in order to fortify against the external pressure that seems to be brought to bear against and to oppose the progress of the truth. Under the inspection made possible by the search-light of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the blindness and darkness of the world seems appalling in its unreason, and nowhere is this persistent blindness, evasion, and uncertainty more apparent than in a visit to those places where his name is constantly mouthed by those who, first and foremost of all, stand ready to deny the power of that gospel which alone has power to save men from the folly and ignorance of a denial of its unchangeability, and of its practical application to the intellectual, spiritual, or even physical wants of man.

It really seems too bad, and too hard a fate, that this old world has fallen into, that after eighteen hundred years of experience we should find ourselves upon what I believe a careful and legal examination of all the premises to be a little further away from a lawful and rational exposition of the Scriptures, or practical application of the teachings and principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, than upon that fateful day for the Jew when he cried, "Away with him;" "Crucify him." None know better or perhaps so well as does the gospel evangelist out upon its frontiers the small difference between the ancient and the modern Pharisees and their methods of opposition to the truth, or the contemptible or evasive and cowardly methods to which they will allow themselves to descend and stoop in order to befog the minds of their blinded followers, or the unholy zeal with which they seek to hinder and oppose the spread of Bible truth.

This may sound a little harsh to those whose lines fall in pleasant and agreeable places in the prosecution of the work inaugurated by the angel's message. It might have been a hard thing for Jesus to have uttered his strictures, or for Paul to have said, "From such turn away," or the angel of this latter-day message to have said, "They are all wrong," "join none of them;" but they told the truth, and a truth that more than ourselves need to know; and though wisdom is justified in our presentation of it as regards time and method, yet I believe and know that there are times when the Holy Spirit forces its utterance; moves the lover of truth toward, and the hypocrite away from us.

Even the moral power of the reformation, which we have so freely credited as a people, seems losing its force, and the gains that are claimed in that direction by our religious contemporaries seem, at least to my mind, to be largely offset by the persistent and united front that they always present in opposition to rational, fair, and manly discussion, freedom of thought or speech, and especially upon religious subjects. This condition, to my mind, is manifestly the result of a conviction upon their part, born of experience that the position they maintain does not hold itself responsible and ready to the challenge of reason or a fair Bible analysis. How inconsistent for those who claim to be servants of God and of the people, ambassadors and representatives of Jesus Christ, when pressed in argument to so hastily abandon the original foundations which he and his chosen apostles laid, and hasten backward for a defence to the antecedent words of Confucius or even the sublime decrees of the Vedas, or of Buddha, and there plant the standard of their Christian faith!

"If any man serve me, let him follow me, and where I am, there shall also my servant be;" and there you will find him, not hobnobbing with everything and everybody whose carnal support seems an advantage to possess. If a man plants his standard under the provisions which Buddha or a Mohammed has announced for salvation to man, let him say so, and if he proposes to use the name of Jesus Christ as a standard bearer, let him ally himself to the provisions which he himself has made for the salvation of the human race. What a hodgepodge affair was the World's Congress of Religions at Chicago to be sure! A congress of the "world's religions;" true enough! Better than that, they could not have said. "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own, but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you;" and that is the reason why Jesus Christ had no show with Buddha or Mohammed in this Christian country at the World's Congress of Religions in the year of grace 1893; and it's all right;

"There is a divinity that shapes our ends" better than we in our zeal and haste for worldly recognition sometimes would shape it ourselves.

There are religions, and there are religions, and the world is filled with them; good, bad, and indifferent. But as a servant of Jesus Christ I propose to rally under his standard, to ally myself with his methods, and his tests of superiority, to anything this world has to offer in the way of religion; to allow him to interpret and to represent himself, and to abide the issue. I am impressed with the statement that "it is a day of warning and not of many words." I would like to please all men, and I sincerely hope to be able to please as many as are willing of themselves to please God in their worship of him. If I please God, I shall do well, at any rate. But if indeed I shall neglect the preaching of the word in order that I may please men, I shall not be the servant of Jesus Christ.

"Preach the word," the only abiding thing; "be instant in season who are out of season, exhort, rebuke, with all longsuffering and doctrine; for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." Even the Reformation upon which the Protestant churches of different names and beliefs are built seems losing its original strength of protest, and everybody is looking hopefully to the formation of a mutual admiration association whose particular tenet will be that one religion is as good as another, barring one of course.

I had an interview with a Disciple minister the other day in the place where I am now writing. He desired to know more of our faith or belief and when informed of our allegiance to the doctrines of faith, repentance, and baptism, he said, "Why, you seem to be all right; but," he continued, baiting his hook with the question with which Alexander Campbell and his compeers caught so many of those whom they once styled heterodox Christians, "what do you people baptize for?" "For the Scripture reason given us by St. Peter," said I. "Well," said he, "I see no difference between us." "I'm sorry to say there is," said I. "What is it?" "Do you Disciples baptize for the remission of sins?" "Yes." "Can't sins be remitted without?" "That's what the word says," said he. "Do you believe it?" said I, and he began to squirm as we approached the trap. "Do you not fellowship our Methodist and Presbyterian religionists?" "O yes." "Are you not solidifying and compacting yourselves in closer relations with them as a body?" "Yes." "Have they been baptized for sins, or will you hang it upon your banner, or courageously warn them that they are yet 'in the gall of bitterness and bond of iniquity' for rejecting the essential feature of Alexander Campbell's doctrine?" "Well," said he, "I did not want to have a discussion; I wanted to know what you people believed." "But that's not all we believe," said I; "indeed, we haven't come to what we consider the most essential and important part as yet." But the interview had lasted long enough for the ammunition supply apparently, and whether or not he learned enough of "Mormonism" to do him any good or us any harm, he went away a little wiser than he came, and we felt sorry for the victim of a system that could or possibly would turn so fine looking a young man into an opposer of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In hoc signo vinces! The beloved disciple was right, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." It's a hard saying for even that church that is "built upon the Bible and the Bible alone," and they with others will not endure sound doctrine, but, "by this sign we conquer," and we shall insist upon its proclamation to the ends of the earth.

Our audiences in Cleveland are increasing in numbers all the time. The interest is excellent, and attention and order all that could be wished for, and the liberty and power given in presenting the word of truth seems to be given as needed, and with such certainty and comfort in direction as to fill our hearts with gratitude and praise to the author of this great latter-day work. We are decidedly of the opinion that the effort to reach the people should be continued, and that some one should be returned here after the district conference at Conneautville, Pennsylvania, to be held next Saturday and Sunday, and which we hope to attend.

We have a fine hall and a very moderate rent in the heart of the city. It is quite clear to us who had charge of these matters that the Lord has gone before us here in this city and has prepared the hearts of men to deal generously with us. Notwithstanding trials we feel hopeful and blessed in the gospel work.

As ever,

M. H. BOND.

OKARCHE, Ok., Aug. 27.

Editors Herald.—Since our war with "backslidden Israel's" representatives in July we have been giving our attention to opening new points. By the kindness of Brn. Norman and Worthington we were taken to the Suartz schoolhouse, a new place, where we were made comfortable and welcome by our congenial brother, M. F. Wells, cousin of J. H. We opened there Sunday night, July 15, with fair hearing. On Thursday night we found the house locked with a notice to leave the country, signed "citizens."

Later developments showed that the "citizens" consisted of two or three men(?), while the rest of the district knew nothing of it, and showed their citizenship by opening the house next night. But one of those first citizens being director, declared the house closed after that night's service, and we announced that we would preach next night in the forks of the road. In the meantime, these citizens were circulating a petition to have us expelled from the community, but only got three names, one of them the preacher. Next night found me in the pulpit, in forks of road, with lamps all lit (stars) and pews full (wagons, and grass carpeted road). The congregation were most or all men ('twas dark, I couldn't see), who told me after services that they had heard the rumblings of "citizen" thunder (threats of violence), and had come to see "fair play." We were assured the house would be opened for us soon, and were invited to return.

I joined Bro. Maloney Monday at Macedonia and together we were taken sixteen miles west, by Bro. W. P. Norman, to Bro. R. H. Wolf's, where we gave them the pure article for a week. While there, we had the pleasure of listening to an able discourse from C. P. Kelley, M. D., D. D., of Campbellite persuasion, whom we readily concluded was the same stock as "our" Kelleys.

Leaving Bro. Maloney at Norman, I came to Edmond, where I was met by Bro. W. M. Aylor, who took me to the "sod" schoolhouse, near Snyder, where the "Bible Literary" was in session; the question for discussion being, "Resolved that water baptism is essential to salvation." Brn. Aylor and Head were the prime movers of this, so as to stimulate investigation. It has resulted in much good for the truth. I found a little band of five Saints here, the result of Bro. J. R. Lambert's work. Commenced a meeting in the Head schoolhouse on the 5th inst., and held one week with increasing interest and hearing.

Sunday, the 12th. In the presence of two hundred or more we led Mrs. Christy and Mr. Rowland through the waters of baptism and on Wednesday Misses Ellen Head and Ethel Baldwin followed. These are the fruits of labor done by Brn. Lambert, Butler, T. J. and H. C. Smith, and the light reflected by the lives of the Saints. Our most successful warfare against slander and falsehood is waged by pure, upright lives. The Saints here have forced the people to honor them by their lives. O, how grateful we are to see the result of such examples! It goes so much farther toward converting the world than desires, unexecuted. On Sunday, the 12th, we commenced at the "sod" three miles south, where we had unusual interest and attention. The house would not near accommodate the crowd. The Lord was not unmindful of us, for which we feel to praise him, and render more diligent obedience. Good singing was rendered, assisted by the organ and clarinet, Sr. Aylor presiding at former while the writer manipulated the latter. Bro. Maloney joined me last of the week, and Sunday night, the 29th, gave us one of his characteristic Book of Mormom sermons. After services were dismissed a Methodist brother called them to order to "wipe from the face of Methodists, the dirt and smirch left by these brethren." His talk was gentlemanly, but fell flat. One of them came up and shook hands with me and said: "I want to express the thanks of this township to you for your preaching here, and to your people for bringing you here." Others gave us a hearty handshake, saying, "God speed you." These are but few of the many words of commendation of the doctrine presented. Surely God is moving "before" and "with" us to "prepare" the way.

I never met a more sociable, better hearted people than we have found in Oklahoma. The "harvest" certainly is "ripe" here, and waiting the reapers' labor. We can't begin to meet the calls for preaching. We desire to thank those who have responded to our request in Herald for literature. We have received some from Iowa, Missouri, Rhode Island, and other States, and can use all they'll send. We are very much encouraged by prospects and are hopeful of marked progress. Very dry, and corn generally is a total failure; wheat will average with other years. We are anxiously wishing for our missionary in charge, Bro. Montague. Saints living in Oklahoma, please let us hear from you as to the opportunities for preaching. We will possibly spend five or six weeks more in this part of the field. In gospel bonds,

W. S. MACRAE.

KIMBALL, Mich., Aug. 15.

Editors Herald:—Bro. William Davis and the writer are holding forth here and at other places in this region of country. It is so dry and hot, the dust is just terrible. Last Tuesday I went to St. Clair and held forth there three evenings; baptized one; and so the Lord is adding to his church such as shall be saved. I joined Bro. Davis again Friday evening. We are opening up new places and the Lord is blessing us in the preaching of his word. We expect to leave here about the middle of next week for other parts. May the good work move on until the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our God and his Christ.

Yours in bonds,

J. A. GRANT.

PORCUPINE, Wis., Aug. 23.

Editors Herald:—The principal part of my missionary labor so far this year has been in Pepin and Pierce counties. I left home May 20, and with the exception of a ten days' visit at home, July 1, have been constantly engaged in preaching the word in those two counties. Owing to the ill health of Bro. H. P. Curtis, my collaborer, I have been alone some of the time, and even while we were together it has been necessary for me to do the most of the preaching; but we are glad to be able to state that his health is fast improving and he will soon be able to resume his labors again. Bro. W. A. McDowell is now with us, having joined us about three weeks ago, just in time to assist us in carrying on a series of grove meetings, which we have been doing for the past three weeks, and which have resulted in good. We have held one service each evening through the week, and three on Sunday, and our Sunday attendance has been large.

Last Saturday two noble souls were baptized, Bro. and Sr. Alexander Metcalf, (man and wife,) and cousins of Bro. Curtis; and next Sunday is the day set for troubling the waters again. How many are to be baptized we don't just know, but this we do know, that some of the best people in this country have expressed themselves satisfied that we have the truth, and have signified their intention to obey the gospel in the near future; and so the good work goes on, and thus the promise is being fulfilled. But while the Lord is blessing his servants and his work, Satan is not idle, and it is with feelings of sadness that we note the successful workings of his power and influences among the Saints, the children of God, and they of all others are those who should ever be on the alert and guarding themselves against the encroachments of Satanic influences. But while we are sorry that these things are, yet they are but an added testimony that we are living in the hastening time.

Before I close I want to bear my testimony to the fulfillment of the words given by the Spirit at our last General Conference in regard to the especial blessing promised to the elders who should go forth to labor in the vineyard of the Master. I can truly say I never before enjoyed such blessings of the Spirit of God, such freedom of thought, such liberty of speech, as I have since I heard those blessed words; and every time I am thus blessed I feel to say, "God is with us."

Bro. McDowell and the writer expect to begin preaching in Oak Grove schoolhouse, about one and one half miles from Red Cedar, this county, a new place, only one sermon having been preached there, and that by your humble servant. We go back there by request.

Your brother,

CHARLES H. BURR.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference held here August 31 and September 1 was well attended. District officers present and in their places. Brn. W. C. Nirk, C. E. Hand, F. A. Smith, D. M. Rudd, and J. S. Roth of the ministry were present. Saints from Grinnell, Eagle Grove, Perry, Rhodes, Des Moines, Richland Creek, Olivet, Pleasantville, and other points in the district in attendance. Business was done promptly and pleasantly. A feeling of good fellowship exists. Meetings have been continued evenings since conference adjourned, and to date fifteen have been baptized. Most of the branches have had additions to their numbers since conference of three months ago. The work is moving and all are encouraged. Pray for us.

Yours hopefully,

C. SCOTT.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—Don't forget the debate which Bro. S. W. L. Scott is to hold with Rev. J. B. Briney, of the Christian Church, at Lowry City, Missouri, commencing October 16 at seven p. m., to continue nine successive evenings of three hours each; upon the Book of Mormon and the two churches. Rev. G. H. Garrison, editor of the St. Louis Christian Evangelist, got off the following in way of indorsing Mr. Briney for the occasion: "Is universally regarded in the brotherhood, among whom he is an honored minister, as an able and representative man, capable of defending the truth as we hold and teach it, against all gainsayers."

From the loud talk and widespread comment indulged in by members and elders of the so-called Christian Church, in regard to Mr. Briney annihilating Mormonism in these parts, it would appear that we had struck the "top round" of Campbellism this time. Maybe we have. The excitement is becoming immense among all classes. Cheap rates for board and lodging will be secured to accommodate the many. Tents will be on the ground for lodging. Parties wishing to take advantage of the hard times can bring tick and covering, and will be accommodated with room.

Lowry City is one hundred and twelve miles southeast of Kansas City, on the Kansas City and Southern and Kansas City and Ft. Scott railways. The Kansas City and Southern leaves the Kansas City Air Line depot at 4:30 p. m. and arrives at Lowry City about nine. Kansas City and Ft. Scott leaves Kansas City union depot 9:20 a. m. and arrives at Lowry City 2:23 p. m. For further particulars address T. R. White, Lowry City, Missouri.

The way things look now, this may be the discussion of all that have been held in the Southwest. If we live humble and are faithful, what have we to fear? Simply nothing.

A GENUINE CAMPBELLITE MIRACLE.

THE writer of this article is in favor of the idea that when a clipping is found that will in any way confirm or furnish any additional evidence relative to the faith, it should be forwarded to our church organ, the Herald, and to the Ensign, and if the editors consider it worthy of a place, it should be placed on record where all may profit by it.

As the denomination commonly called Campbellites, or as called by themselves, Christians or Disciples, is one of the most ultra we have to meet; claiming to have builded their structure on the "Bible and the Bible alone," rejecting all spiritual gifts or manifestations as the result of a diseased imagination or a palpable fraud gotten up to "deceive the very elect;" the word with them being also the Spirit, when I came across the following genuine miracle in their church I "wondered with great admiration" at the inconsistency of accepting "miracles" in the one place and rejecting them in the other.

The clipping is from "Letters of Travel" written by Elder J. W. McGarvey, Professor of Sacred History in the College of the Bible. These letters were published simultaneously in the Christian Standard, Cincinnati, Ohio, Apostolic Times, Lexington, Kentucky, and The Christian, St. Louis, Missouri, and afterward embodied in his book, "The Lands of the Bible," the "letters" comprising part three of the book; and an excellent work by the way, being the most accurate of any in my knowledge, strongly confirmatory of the marvelous restoration of that land to its former fertility.

On page 533 he relates the experiences of a trip from Tyre to Sidon, one of which was a close call for his life while bathing in the Mediterranean Sea.

He describes how he, "Bro. Earl," and "Frank" (his cousin) were caught in the undertow or "suck-back." I give the account verbatim, the italics only being mine:—

My muscles were aching, my joints were growing stiff, my strength was exhausted. . . . At last my hands and feet both refused to make another stroke. I folded my aching arms across my breast and offered the prayer: "O God, bless my family; sustain them under this blow, and take me to heaven," and then sank beneath the waves. As I went down I was conscious of being turned upon my face. . . . My chest and head felt as if they were being crushed under a great weight, and my limbs were aching as if they were cramped. But I knew my torture could not last long and I watched and waited for the experience of leaving the body. . . . The manner of my marvelous rescue related to me afterward was as follows. [Here follows a description of his rescue by "Bro. Earl," and his resuscitation.]

I have now repeated the story of what I may call my death and restoration. . . . He (Bro. Earl) commanded me to keep silent on the subject, but perish he that writes these lines if I ever forget the debt of gratitude which I owe him.

And if I am thus indebted to my faithful brethren and fellow-travelers, what shall I say of the debt I owe to Him without whose help they could have done nothing? It was he who rescued first of all two lives of which I had despaired, and then made one of these the instrument to save mine. I had passed through all the conscious experience of dying, and God drew me back out of the very jaws of death. I feel that the remnant of my days, whatever it shall be, is a special gift of his providence—as special as that granted to King Hezekiah when his hour to die had come, and God, hearing his prayer for longer time, added fifteen years to his life. And if the gift is special, I think it must have a special purpose. I fain would know what that purpose is. Is it that I may bear before I go hence, a heavier burden of earthly woe than has hitherto fallen to my easy lot? Is it that some dire temptation shall grapple with my soul and strain my faith to its utmost tension? . . . Or is it that I shall continue for some years, and with more abounding fruit, the labor of preaching and teaching God's blessed word? O, how often since that dreadful June 14 have I asked myself these questions. On the snowy top of Hermon, amid the cedars of Lebanon, musing by midnight among the ruins of Baalbec, pacing the deck of many a ship; standing on Mars' Hill by the imaginary side of him who spent a "day and a night in the deep;" on the lone mountain, in the crowded city, these questions have pressed themselves upon me, and have occupied many a tearful hour.

Before I left home many of my brethren and sisters, men and women who are in favor with God, gave me assurance that they would continually pray for my safe return. I know they have done so; and I have the strongest conviction that their prayers have been effective. I would now address to all of them the words addressed by Paul to the saints in Corinth on a somewhat similar occasion: "We would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that we despaired even of life: but we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead: who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver us in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us; you also helping together by prayer for us, that for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many in our behalf."—2 Cor. 1:8-11.

The above is the extract as found in the book. I do not doubt it as being a special blessing bestowed upon this man, by the One who is "no respecter of persons," yet this same people—possibly this same individual—would if a case of healing, a miraculous interposition of providence in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints were shown them, would laugh to scorn and explain it away as "animal magnetism," and cite the old sow and the cripple as an equal in miraculous or supernatural phenomenon with the other. This occurrence is the equal of any within my knowledge as far as a claim of divine care over weak mortal. It is as the writer claims "as special as that of King Hezekiah" whose life was lengthened in answer to prayer and the dial shadow was changed backward and forward in order to satisfy him that his prayer was answered.

Where is there any claim greater than this in the latter times? And this blessing to the reverend gentleman was just as "special." Wesley's "lame horse" cured in answer to prayer; Dow's mission to Ireland shown by vision; Luther's personal fight with the Devil; McGarvey's death and restoration; Catholicism miracles and claims, all show that we are not alone in believing that God answers prayer. If we are "fanatical," and "inconsistent," what can be said of them.

Yours in bonds,
A. B. KIRKENDALL.

SOME LEAVES FROM LIFE'S EXPERIENCES.

A BROTHER asks, What is faith? That question seems simple:—

Faith is the assurance of things hoped for.

"Yes, I so believe. I sowed some seeds and planted corn in hope to receive a crop, but I have no assurance that I will get one."

"O, yes, you have; God sends his rain on the just and the unjust."

"True, but there seems to be exceptions to all rules, laws, and sayings; for I once sowed seed for six years and never got crop enough to keep me till next harvest."

I did once think I knew all about faith, but as years pass onward and the experience of life unfolds things to view, I begin to believe I know very little about faith. I can see and understand hope and things hoped for, and I live in hope, and hope carries me onward, oftentimes to loss and trouble, yet it is always there with try, try again. You may succeed though there is no assurance that I will. Some believe; others tell me that what one man has done or obtained another man in like conditions may do and obtain, but I have found that it is not always so in life. There is much truth in the saying:—

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Roughhew them how we will.

We are not all alike, we are but parts of one great whole and each and all of us will fill the place we are fit to occupy. We may be as the trees in the orchard; bear fruit much alike, but each brings forth his fruit in the place God has appointed. It is written that "God is no respecter of persons," but this, like many other parts of Scripture, is oftentimes given too wide an application. I understand this statement as I do that other saying, "Uncle Sam is no respecter of persons;" for from every nation have come men who desire to enjoy the liberty and rights of the people of these United States and on applying to the proper authorities and taking the oath of allegiance have obtained that right. So, then, it is with those who desire to receive the rights and blessings of God's kingdom. I read that whatsoever you ask in faith, nothing doubting but believe, you shall receive, shall be given to you.

"This don't mean me, for I learn that it is he that is without sin that may so ask and so receive. The question is, Can a man live without sin."

"Yes, surely he can."

"Oh! but I am so weak, and yet when I think of it the greatest delight and comfort of my life is to feel assured God is good, just, and merciful. So, then, are his laws. I have been a citizen of these United States about twenty-five years and have lived in obedience to all law. Then what is sin? Transgression of the law. Now, if I can live without transgression of the laws of man, surely I can live in obedience to the laws of God. In studying the laws of God I find they have a much deeper meaning than I at first understood and I fear that I have oftentimes been like the men who wanted to make Jesus king. They saw in him one who could make the bread that sustains this life, but understood not what the real bread of life was. If I would obey I must love God because he loves me, and if I truly love him I shall fear him lest he be displeased because of my disobedience; and since God cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance I must obey in all things. To obey means a rigid self-examination to make sure there is nothing left undone that should be done. So I begin with the teachings of Jesus:—

Love your enemies, do good to them that hate you.

All this is right in my relation to mankind; I must also consider my own body and the care it needs, I must shun the evils of intemperance, gluttony, late hours, and overwork. We may have much steam in the boiler, but if the engine is clogged up or out of order so that it won't work, the steam is of little use. So it is with the body; the Spirit can only use it for good when it is in good condition.

Then there are the passions, they must be under control of the will; hate, revenge, anger, and all such must have no place in the mind. Then there is the proper use of the sexual parts. Here I learn the teachings of men have been far amiss and much evil has been done through ignorance and in giving way to the lusts of the flesh. I have reasoned with myself thus: What would you think of a man who had a sack of most valuable seed and he was to sow some in spring, sow some more every month or two, and keep sowing no matter what the season was. Well, I would think such a man a stupid fool. Well, that is just what I have been. And here I learn how fearfully and wonderfully I am made; for this seed is most precious, being distilled from my blood, forty ounces of which it takes to make one ounce of this fluid. It can only be used lawfully for the purpose of procreation, and if retained in the body, is taken up by the brain and becomes the creator of new thought. In fact I never knew any man who indulged to any great extent sexually that could originate any thought for good or even remember passing events. He could, for the time, hear from others and repeat what was said; he was simply an echo.

The Book of Mormon tells us there is no greater sin in the sight of God, except murder. I truly believe it, for there can be no greater sin against the body, unless it be self-destruction. I have discovered there is a greater depth to thought than I at first knew. As I think, so I am. If I think no evil, I will not do it. Nay, if I write God's laws in my remembrance, they will guard me from evil. I have been tempted to steal; thought would come most forcibly, Take it, no one shall know it. Nay, you are mistaken; I shall know it, God shall know, that is two witnesses; there is condemnation. Get thee hence, Satan. Would you have me brand myself a thief? Men have said to me, "I wish I could stop sexual abuse. How can I?" "Why, never entertain a thought that suggests the act, order it out soon as it comes, declare it wicked, sinful, injurious to the body, and you will succeed." So they did.

This is a matter of great importance. No wonder the sages have said, "Guard well your thoughts." Yes, let the thoughts be pure, honest, just, and true, so shall I be in acts. Out with all suggestions of evil or its appearance, and evil can have no place in me. The Devil is a poor reasoner; he will not stay long when I begin to reason. A brother came here preaching tithing; he said if I did not pay my tithes I would not inherit celestial glory. Yes, thinks I, that preacher, like many others, plays upon the selfishness of humanity. Now to me there seems to be three conditions of men. There are the liars and filthy, the honest and true, the pure and holy. I have always had an assurance I would be among the honest and true, but as yet have not a hope to be of the pure and holy; so I won't be the least disappointed if I don't get celestial glory. Why, then, should I pay tithes? For the same reason that I pay taxes. That the officers of God's kingdom may be enabled to do their duties in the part they are called to perform in preaching or doing God's work.

I have been sick, called for the elders, was anointed, and got well. I have been sorely afflicted in body and mind, called for the elders, was anointed, got no benefit, what shall I do? Some one says, Call for the elders again. Why? O you might get well next time. Now, this is a something I can't understand. If the elders lay hands on the sick and they don't recover, who is to blame? the elders? I shall say, no; they have done their part. Am I to blame? I don't know; I told my Father that I was sick, did as his law directed, and if there was anything left undone that I should do that would hinder me from receiving the blessing of health, please let me know. What more can mortal do? I believe that my Father could bless as desired if he would. But why don't he? Would some wise man please arise and explain? I have earnestly prayed to know the reason why of such afflictions. The only comfort was, be patient, my son, be patient. I have heard it said when people are sick it is because they have sinned and God is punishing them, but this won't do all the time. Some of the worst sinners I ever knew were the very pictures of health, never was sick a day of their lives, and some good God-fearing men hardly ever know a well day. It is easy to blame poor, helpless mortals and accuse them, but I must be careful; the Devil was an accuser of the brethren.

I read of those whose faith stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, of others who were sawed asunder or burned alive. Was this because of a difference of faith? for they all had faith, or was it in the purposes of God that such things should be? Now, if faith is belief, then I have much faith; but to me it has a deeper meaning. It is easy to believe I will receive, but why have I not the assurance and whence comes the assurance. I believe it must come from God. So then the one who was put in the lion's den had the assurance that God would save him, he who was burned alive had also the assurance that God would save him, his work on earth was done. The one in the lion's den had yet work to do, so God would not suffer the wicked to destroy his body, for all the wicked can do is destroy the body, the life is God's and his children he will preserve.

So then I have come to this conclusion: that when I was baptized I made a covenant with God that I would do his will, which is to live in obedience to his laws and up to the knowledge received while here on earth he permits me to dwell, bearing in mind that in so doing God will protect and none can injure me; unless I give way to temptations, depart from the ways of righteousness, and so injure myself. Then come what may, joy or sorrow, sickness or health, poverty or wealth, whatever comes, must be for good to me, my Father knows best. Then let me bear in patience all afflictions and tribulations of life, and when life's work is done I shall go satisfied that having done what I could there will, at least, be a place of rest for me.

This is the great beauty of the light of truth revealed in the gospel, the grandeur and sublimity of it all I am sure I cannot tell. The great depth of the love of God, my Father, I do not understand. I am ever so thankful to have received a taste of that love; it makes life worth living and a most important thing it is to learn life's lessons well, that when Christ shall come to earth again I may be there to meet him, stand before his face, and not feel ashamed.

AN APPEAL

To the General Membership of the Church.—In the year 1891, we, a few of the members of the Hanley branch (about one third of the recorded number), secured and at great sacrifice of time and money, prepared a place to hold meetings in. It is a very convenient place, centrally situated, and has everything attached to make it a good place for prosecuting the work in, well lighted and ventilated and is lofty, being eighteen feet from floor to ceiling. But owing to unforeseen circumstances we find ourselves unable to carry on any longer. We are indebted to the owner for above twelve months' rent, and on the 29th of September, 1894, we may expect to have to clear out and leave all behind us. It will take about £35 English money to clear Hanley branch of its indebtedness. Who will respond in time for the above date. I had no desire to send this appeal, but per force of circumstances, this is the last resort. Personally, I have nothing to gain; the church will be benefited considerably, should there be a successful response to the appeal. Shall I lose anything by it should it fail? Well, yes; and to me it will be a great loss, but nothing to be compared with what the church will lose, speaking in a general sense. All assistance rendered will be published in Herald, also a printed receipt given for all moneys. Those who can and will help us in this hour of need, please address your help to

BRO. HENRY TABBINER,
Secretary and Trustee of Hanley branch.
No. 7 Russell street, SHELTON,
Stoke-on-Trent, England.

TO ALL INTERESTED IN THE SOUTH SEA MISSION.

By permission of the Herald editorial corps, I address a few lines in the interests of those faithful missionaries who are there, and those who may go on the Evanalia—pronounced Ev'-ah-na'-le-ah, the Gospel (ship).

Bro. and Sr. Devore, Brn. Newton, Gilbert, Hawkins, and Johnson (the last married to a native sister, and not wholly in the ministry), are the only white gospel laborers in the South Sea mission field. They who are there, and they who go, will need light clothing to wear,—light as denims or linen; as thin shoes, but strong ones, as they can use, not tight fitting. Straw hats, the sisters there will make for them. I found celluloid collars and cuffs the best, as, except in Papeete, it is not easy to secure good laundry work. If I were going again, I would take light negligee shirts, and two or three celluloid fronts, as large as I could get them, for pulpit use. Or, still better, alpaca vests, made to button up to the neck, then no fronts are needed. Let every one take a rubber coat and leggings; for heavy and frequent rains at certain seasons make them necessary. Take good ones: the constant heat of the tropics makes poor rubber goods a nuisance. A few good points, muslin delaines, or lawns, are what sisters need. Remember Sister Devore. Sisters knows the little things, useful things only, with which they can make themselves feel that they are presentable. Those who have faded ribbons, and such little things they will not use, by sending them and some diamond dyes, can aid their white and colored sisters to make themselves and their homes into homes of taste and beauty for that region. Self-threading, and other needles: pins, white and black; hair pins, combs, and brushes, tooth brushes especially, the sisters will appreciate, cotton and thread, and a spool of black sewing silk to mend alpaca clothing and other clothing with would do good.

Let every one take a good fountain syringe, and if any are able to send one each to those there, they will confer a positive blessing. Those who go and wish or need anything besides native cooking, had better take small, portable coal oil stoves with them. You cannot get gasoline there, and wood and coal are too dear for common use. Do not take gasoline or other stoves. Get oven and all accoutrements with your coal oil stoves. If you would like a good knife and fork, tea and table spoon, hatchet and ax, take them; but use them before you get there, or pay duty on them.

Butter is seventy cents per pound, cheese and other such luxuries are same rates if you buy them there. If any Saints on the Pacific Coast make butter or cheese, etc., and would like to make the missionaries there glad, they can do so by sending some. They can have it reach them in good condition by mixing with their butter (from which every drop of buttermilk has been expressed), 1st, a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, or very finely crushed and rolled white sugar, 2d, as much saltpetre only as will lie flat on a dime. Let these proportions be mixed with each pound of butter, and work all in thoroughly. Then put a thin layer of powdered salt at the bottom of your crock, cover this with a piece of white muslin or cheese cloth, and carefully pack on this the butter, pressing it solidly all around to exclude all air. When crock is full to within half an inch, cut to fit it, another piece of muslin or cheese cloth, and tightly pack onto this powdered salt. Then, if you can get it, tie tightly over all, or fasten down over it, a good bladder skin. I did not name salt in making, for this every butter maker will use as usual, and I wished to say, do not make your butter any more salt than for home consumption; the saltpetre in the butter will attract to it salt from below and above, so that if more salt be needed for it for transportation than for home use it will be supplied.

In naming the Saints upon the Pacific coast, I did not wish to interdict others from sending if they wished to do so. If any send anything to be forwarded by the Evanelia, they will, I hope, pardon me for asking them to pay full charges to San Francisco, and if they can obtain receipts in duplicate specifying that charges are paid in full, please send one of those receipts to me, with a letter telling me what is sent, and for whom.

Jellies, jams, any little thing any sister likes to send they need not hesitate to send. If anything be sent and I be not told for whom it is designed, I shall send it to Sr. Devore for her to divide up between all, or use as she deems best. The rule there is for Bro. and Sr. Devore to take two parts, and the elders one part each, whether of money or merchandise. I name the rule so that if any senders wist anyone to have especially more or less, they may instruct accordingly.

On this business alone, please address me thus: Messrs. Forscutt and Parkin, No. 3010 Sixteenth street, San Francisco, California.

On all other, and personal matters address me care C. A. Parkin, same address. The former letters, he will open and attend to if I am not there; my personal letters he will forward to me.

Knowing the needs (not wants), the real needs of the South Sea Islands mission, I have written the foregoing. Were I still there, or were I going, this appeal would not appear. Your brother in the "one faith,"

MARK H. FORSCUTT.

Downey, Cal., August 31, 1894.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE REUNION.

On the morning of August 9 the Saints began to gather at the Saints' chapel (a new house built mainly through the efforts of Bro. D. W. Cook) near Lebanon, Graves county, Kentucky. The pleasant smiles and hearty hand shaking were tokens of brotherly love and a promise of future good. Bro. T. C. Kelley called the meeting to order at ten a. m. Bro. Kelley gave us an appropriate speech, welcoming and encouraging the Saints. Bro. H. C. Smith was chosen to preside, Brn. T. C. Kelley and M. M. Turpen associates; Bro. Wm. Waterman secretary, Bro. A. S. Snow assistant; Sr. Nola Adair organist, Bro. T. C. Kelley chorister, Jefferson Myers and Willie Cook ushers. President H. C. Smith gave some valuable instruction to the Saints and called for short speeches from the following brethren: M. M. Turpen, Wm. Waterman, W. H. Griffin, J. H. Scott, S. Reed, P. B. Seaton, J. H. Adair, and C. L. Snow. At 2:30 p. m., prayer meeting in charge of Bro. Heman C. Smith, who gave us an instructive address on prayer. Testimony and prayer followed—an enjoyable time. Eight p. m., H. C. Smith was the speaker; text, Romans 1:16. The sermon was full of points and power.

Friday, August 10.—At 9:30 a. m., prayer meeting. A spiritual time was had. Eleven a. m., preaching by Bro. C. L. Snow; text, Matthew 24:14. At 2:30 p. m., Bro. Wm. Waterman was the speaker; subject, the Holy Ghost. Eight p. m., preaching by Bro. M. M. Turpen; text, John 17:23.

Saturday, August 11.—Bro. W. H. Griffin was the speaker; texts, Acts 24:14; Matthew 28:19. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by Bro. P. B. Seaton; text, 2 Corinthians 5:17. Eight p. m., Bro. T. C. Kelley was the speaker; text, Romans 4:3.

Sunday, August 12.—At 9:30 a. m., prayer meeting. A profitable time. At eleven a. m., Bro. Heman C. Smith was the speaker; text, Galatians 1:1 with Matthew fifth chapter. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by Bro. M. M. Turpen; text, Hebrews 1:13, 14. Eight p. m. Bro. Heman C. Smith preached; text, Psalms 127:1: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it."

Monday, August 13.—At 9:30 a. m., prayer meeting. A good time. At eleven a. m. Bro. J. H. Scott was speaker. Subject, Plan of salvation. At 2:30 p. m., Brn. A. D. Greer and Heman C. Smith were the speakers. "Wonderful words of life" were imparted during this service. At eight p. m., preaching by Bro. T. C. Kelley; texts, Matthew 27:19-22; John 10:1.

Robert Warren was the speaker; subject, Abraham's faith. Bro. G. H. Hilliard's smiling face appeared on the scene during the evening. At eight p. m., preaching by Bro. M. M. Turpen; text, 1 Timothy 3:15.

Wednesday, August 15.—At 9:30 a. m. prayer service. At eleven a. m. Bro. G. H. Hilliard was the speaker; text, Matthew 4:4. At 2:30 p. m., preaching by Bro. Heman C. Smith; text, 1 Thessalonians 4:4. A sermon to the ministry. Eight a. m., Bro. T. C. Kelley was the speaker; subject, Resurrection a miracle. A masterly effort.

Thursday, August 16.—At 9:30 a. m., prayer service. At eleven a. m. and 2:30 p. m. preaching by Bro. G. H. Hilliard; subject, Tithing. The speaker showed that by obedience to this law we became workers together with God. That the devourer would be rebuked for our sakes. That tithing was a means by which the gospel could be carried to all the world. That God demanded the smallest rent of any landlord in existence. That if we did not pay tithing we robbed God and brought cursing upon ourselves. Space prevents us telling the good and true points made. The Saints were pleased and some expressed determination to observe the law. At eight p. m. preaching by Bro. Heman C. Smith.

Friday, August 17.—At 2:30 p. m. reunion business meeting was held, Bro. Heman C. Smith presiding. It was moved and adopted that when this reunion adjourns it does so to meet at Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky, on Thursday before the first quarter moon in August, 1895. It was moved and adopted that a committee of five be appointed on arrangements. The following were selected: Brn. C. L. Snow, Dr. Boyd, Jefferson Myers, W. H. Griffin, and J. H. Adair. It was moved and adopted that the secretary be authorized to send the minutes of this reunion to the Herald and Ensign.

Three persons were baptized during the reunion; viz., Brn. Josiah M. Tobbert, Jefferson Myers, and Willie Cook. The sermons were from good to grand. The prayer services were generally very refreshing. The secretary was afflicted with tonsillitis and was not always able to be present and asks kind consideration on account of omissions and brevity of report.

ORGANIZATION OF SOUTHERN WISCONSIN DISTRICT.

To whom it may concern:—The late General Conference provided for the organization of a Northern and a Southern district in Wisconsin. The boundary between the two districts is the parallel which forms the northern boundary of Vernon, Sauk, Columbia, Dodge, Washington, and Ozaukee counties.

A meeting to effect the organization of the Southern Wisconsin district will convene at the Wilder schoolhouse, five miles northeast of Evansville, Rock county, Wisconsin, Saturday, October 6, at 10:30 a. m. Persons coming by rail, and arriving at Evansville on Friday will be met at the trains there and conveyed to the place of meetings. We hope for a large attendance and a profitable time. Bro. A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, is expected to be with us.

Branches should elect delegates, as provided for in Book of Rules, page 162: "The basis of representation shall be one delegate for each six members in each branch, or fraction thereof." The report from each branch should be a complete duplicate of the branch record itself. It should contain a list of the names of all the members with all the items of birth, baptism, etc., on the branch book. This is necessary so that the names may all be transferred to the new district record and thence to General Church Recorder.

W. S. PENDER,
Submissionary in charge.

DIED.

BAXTER.—George M. Baxter was born April 29, 1811, in Seneca county, New York; baptized June 3, 1894, by Elder J. M. Brown; died July 6, 1894. He came to Kansas in an early day and endured the hardships and privations of a frontier life for many years. He was married to Ida Stronce, January 1, 1890. Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Brown; text, Job 14: 14.

MEFFORD.—Pearl, beloved daughter of Lemuel and Lilly Mefford, was born September 7, 1880; passed away August 21, 1894. She was baptized when nine years of age. She was a bright, pure, affectionate daughter. Funeral services held at Saints' chapel, Woodbine, Iowa, August 23; sermon by A. M. Py-rando. A vast assembly paid tribute to the memory of the departed in attending the services.

DANCER.—Sr. Rosalia H. Dancer, wife of Bro. David Dancer of Lamoni, Iowa, departed this life August 28, 1894, at her home, surrounded by her relatives, peacefully falling asleep in the Lord after a long and tedious sickness borne as only a Christian can bear the ills and pain incident to a mortal sickness. Sr. Dancer's maiden name was Harvey; she was born at Hadley, Canada East, January 31, 1833; removed to Illinois with her parents while quite young, and was married to Bro. David Dancer when eighteen. She was baptized at Wilton, Will county, Illinois, in April, 1863, by Elder E. C. Briggs. She was a consistent believer, and early adopted the sentiment that charity and the love of Christ were best exemplified in the exercise of love and charity toward man. From the exercise of this sentiment Sr. Dancer became a minister of blessings to those by whom she was surrounded, a sister of mercy to the afflicted and needy on every side. Bro. and Sr. Dancer removed to Decatur county at the time the colony was located, and built a home in Lamoni about 1882, and from thence she has now removed to the mansion not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Hers were an estimable Christian character and a life worthy of praise, and will leave among the community where she lived and where she died, a fragrant memory forever. She sleeps the sleep of the righteous, leaving husband, two sons, and a granddaughter, and a host of friends who miss and mourn her.

MORROW.—Robert Morrow, son of Widow Martin of Woodbine, died at Moorehead, Iowa, June 23, 1894. He was traveling home near Moorehead, Iowa, on Saturday evening, June 23, through a terrific storm of rain. When about two miles from his home a fierce and vivid shaft of lightning struck him and his two horses dead instantly. His little boy, six years and two months old, was sitting with him wrapped in the same blanket, but was not hurt; but as the wagon came to a sudden standstill when the horses fell dead, the sudden stop hurled the little boy from the seat, and he fell over the front of the wagon onto the dead horses, from which he arose uninjured, and finding himself unable to rouse his father to life, or to get the horses up, he hurried through the storm to his home. When he got opposite his home he found the water too deep to cross, and he was compelled to travel to the head of the flood, and then he had to wade in order to get across. When the brave little man entered the house he told his mother, "I have no papa now; he is burnt up." Imagination fails to depict the sad feeling of that bereaved wife and mother's heart. Bro. Morrow was a consistent Latter Day Saint, and his death is deeply mourned by a large circle of friends. May God guide and comfort his bereaved wife and children. His memorial sermon was preached by the writer to a very large audience in the Saints' church at Woodbine, Iowa, June 25.

C. DERRY.

CRAIG.—At his home, Moolap, Victoria, Australia, July 26, 1894, Bro. John Craig, aged 65 years. Deceased was born in Londonderry, Ireland; came to Australia in 1852, and was married in 1863. He leaves to mourn a wife and ten children, who are all in the church. He accepted the latter-day work through the teachings of Bro. Burton, and was baptized July 26, 1878. He was teacher of the Moolap branch and set an example before the Saints that would give credit to any servant of God. His home was an oasis in the desert to the weary servants of God, where they always found a resting place and word of encouragement to cheer them on in the warfare of life. He was ill for five years, during which time he gradually grew worse, but was never heard to murmur nor complain at his lot. A long procession of sympathizing friends followed his remains to the Eastern cemetery, Geelong, where his remains were quietly laid to rest. He lived in peace, died in peace, and may the peace of the Lord ever follow him. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Trembath and Butterworth. Deceased was father of Sr. C. A. Butterworth.

"We shall meet them at home, we shall greet them;

Though now they are hid from our sight

We think of the time we shall meet them

And it off fills our hearts with delight.

We have laid them away in deep sadness,

Yet not without hope in our breast,

For again they will join us with gladness

And enter the heavenly rest."

CROUCH.—At Norwich, Connecticut, July 3, 1894, Emiline A. Crouch. Deceased was born in Groton, Connecticut, August 9, 1864. Her parents' names were Josiah F. and Abiah Chapman Phillips. She was the wife of Elvin Crouch. She was reared in the faith of the Rogerine Quakers. She had been a member of the Latter Day Saints about one year; baptized by Elder G. W. Robley. Funeral services at Norwich and Ledyard by Elder F. M. Sheehy.

KETTLEWELL.—Elizabeth L. Kettlewell died at Blenheim, Ontario, March 12, 1894. She was born March 25, 1836, in Ontario; baptized October 29, 1870, at Louisville, Ontario, by George Cleveland. She was married to Bro. Geo. Kettlewell March 10, 1891. She was a woman who had passed through a great many severe trials. She buried seven of her children and a husband, only one of her family left to mourn. She always bore a strong testimony to the restored gospel. Prior to 1878 she stated if she was spared to see a living prophet she would quit the use of tobacco. In 1878 she met Bro. Joseph, and from that time to her death she used the weed no more. Her remains were interred in the Crawford cemetery on the shore of Lake Erie. Funeral sermon by Elder Samuel Brown in the Saints' church at Blenheim, to a large concourse of friends and relatives. Her spirit rests with the pure and the good till the resurrection morn.

FULKS.—At the home of her eldest son, Elder C. M. Fulks, near Manchester, Texas, January 26, 1894, Sr. Lucinda Fulks. Deceased was born at Chestertown, Ohio, December 28, 1817. She was married to Bro. Wm. Fulks near Spencer, Ohio, and after some twelve years moved to Iowa, thence to Kansas, where, near Mound Valley, she was baptized by Elder B. H. Davis. She was the mother of ten children. Funeral services by Elder E. A. Erwin.

Gen. N. P. Banks died at Waltham, Massachusetts, September 1.

France has launched a new type of war ship, the Carnot, that will cost 21,000,000 francs.

Sweden will hold an international exposition at Stockholm in 1897.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 1.—Six negroes, all members of an organized gang of incendiaries, were lynched by a mob near Millington, Tennessee, a small town on the Chesapeake, Ohio, and Southwestern railroad, thirty miles north of Memphis, last night.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 1.—All the plumbing firms in the city with one exception have formed a combine for commanding exorbitant prices for work. They have been arrested and will be vigorously prosecuted under a recent law.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Advices from Athens state that the Greek capital is full of fugitives who have fled from Cyprus in terror of the Turk. The panic has been caused by the withdrawal of British troops. The island was turned over to England for administration in June, 1878, and was formally ceded to Great Britain in 1888. Under its administration oppression ceased and religious tolerance prevailed.

The removal of the British troops, although accompanied by the announcement that the island would not be turned over to Turkey, created the most tremendous panic among those not Moslems. The Turkish inhabitants in vans and companies ranging from ten to a hundred in number raided the fields and villages, destroyed crops, abused the women, and robbed and murdered the men who were known to be Christians. The latter fled to adjacent islands or to Greece. The situation is one that has created great indignation. It is learned that the slave trade in girls has been steadily carried on in Cyprus, under the protection of certain Egyptian pashas.

TANGIER, Sept. 1.—Disorder and revolution are spreading in Central and Southern Morocco. The towns of Demmat and Zamza have been pillaged. The town of Zania has been looted and two Jews brutally killed, the wives of some of the former Caids outraged and their families enslaved. The outlook is threatening and serious complications are feared.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 3.—To-day being Labor day, all the government departments and public offices were closed, as were a great many stores and public places. The labor organizations paraded and spent the day at a park in the outskirts.

Labor day was observed in many cities throughout the United States by demonstrations of workingmen's societies and organizations; also in Canada, where business was generally suspended. The Trades Union Congress with four hundred delegates began its sessions at Norwich, England, on that date—September 3.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 2.—The scene of destruction and desolation in the flooded district for a distance of 100 miles east and west from here and extending south from the Southern Pacific railroad to the Rio Grande, 200 miles away, is simply terrible. Thousands upon thousands of acres of pasture and farm land are still under water. It is estimated that the damage to crops in the valley of the Leona River alone will reach $500,000, while in the Valleys of the Saco and Sabinal rivers the losses will be fully as much more. Many thousand head of cattle, horses, and sheep were swept away and drowned. It is still a matter of uncertainty as to the number of lives lost, but additions to the list of drowned are constantly being added. Half of the houses in Uvalde, a town of 2,800 population, were carried away, and there is much suffering there by homeless families, but no more fatalities are reported there. Nothing has yet been heard from the settlement of seventy-five families several miles below Uvalde, but there are still grave fears that many, if not all of them, were swept down by the torrent and lost. The town of Batesville was entirely inundated and there was heavy loss of property, but no lives reported lost. There are several other towns in the flooded district, but they are away from the railroad and telegraphic reach and nothing can be heard from them until the waters subside.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 2.—The Southern Pacific officials here had full advices from the seat of the storm in Texas to-day and said the reports of damage to the track and of the amount of loss to the Southern Pacific has been exaggerated. The principal damage sustained is near Uvalde, Texas, is the washing away of iron spans of bridges over the Leona, Hondo, and Secor Rivers. The report that forty miles of track were washed away and that $1,250,000 loss is involved is ridiculous.

Madrid advices say Spain has published a decree canceling the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Cuba. Negotiations are in progress for a new commercial treaty between the United States and the Spanish colonies.

MASSILLON, Ohio, Sept. 4.—As a possible means of effecting a settlement with their miners the Millport Coal Company offered their men $1.75 a day, supplies free. The proposition was rejected. The operators report progress in arranging for the reception of new men. Labor agencies have agreed to place the men at mines in the Massillon district and stay with them until all danger is past.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—The 8,000 garment-workers in New York and Brooklyn, who say they have been underpaid, have begun a great strike. It is estimated that before the week is out there will be from 25,000 to 30,000 people out of work, either as strikers or because of the strike. The trouble is not confined to New York and Brooklyn. In Philadelphia, Boston, and other large cities similar conditions have existed, and the people have either quit work or have decided to quit in the event of a failure to get better wages by some near at hand date. It bids fair, in a word, to be a general strike on the part of the sweat-shop workers.

Delegates of all the local branches of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the United Order of Carpenters and Joiners, and the Progressive Carpenters Society have decided to order a strike, and will meet at nine a. m. to-morrow to hear reports from different parts of the city.

The United States has formally recognized the Hawaiian Government.

The Union Pacific Railroad Company has posted the following bulletin at Omaha, Nebraska: "On account of personal strife engendered by partisanship it has been decided to ask all employees of the Union Pacific company to refrain from active participation in politics. Should any employee desire to accept the nomination for any office he will be requested to resign from the service of the company."

OTTUMWA, Iowa, Sept. 5.—Stormy Jordan, the notorious saloon man, once immensely wealthy, has spent all his money fighting Iowa's prohibition law. His place was closed to-day because he could not pay the license.

NORTH SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 5.—The schooner Rigel of Gloucester, Massachusetts, Captain G. W. Dixon, arrived here to-day, having on board, the crew and passengers of the steamer Miranda, which left New York, July 7, with Dr. F. A. Cook's Arctic excursion. All the members of the party are well. August 9 the Miranda struck a rock near Sukkertoppen, West Greenland, and was abandoned in a sinking condition, August 23, in Davis Strait, latitude about 61° 15', longitude 58° 40'.

Japan has invited the United States Government to appoint American officers to travel with its army and witness its various military operations.

The United States has declined to enter into alliance with China at the instance of the British Minister to Washington, Sir Julian Pauncefote, for an active naval demonstration with the purpose of seizing the treaty ports, though this government had previously tendered its good offices in connection with the European powers to keep the ports open.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 5.—The Japanese residents here, numbering 700, are selling out their business preparatory to a rapid departure as possible, owing to the surrender by the United States of two Japanese said to be spies to the Tasta outside the settlement limits. It is said these Japanese were executed immediately, whereas it was agreed they should receive a fair trial. The reported executions have not been confirmed, but the story makes the Japanese residents feel they have no protection here. Up to now they believed themselves safe under the protection of the United States. A junk, which was passing through a forbidden channel, has been blown up by a torpedo.

CHEMULPO, Corea, Aug. 6.—The battle of Gazan began in earnest the afternoon of July 29. At first the Chinese fought outside of their gun parapets, with the intention of taking refuge there if they were beaten back. But the sudden charges of the Japanese gave them no time to run within their parapets. They fled, leaving their flags behind. When the Japanese attacked his camp at Seikwan, the Chinese General Che deserted, threw away his uniform as an incumbrance to flight, and left behind the papers which, as a General, he should never have allowed to leave his side. It is not known where General Che has fled. The Japanese army pursued the Chinese for twelve miles to Yoran, near Gazan. At Gazan the army found many hundreds of thousands of rounds of powder and six or seven hundred bags of rice.

RIE LAKE, Wis., Sept. 1.—Terrible forest fires are raging in this neighborhood, and the town of Bashaw, fifteen miles north of here, has been entirely wiped out, railroad bridges are partially burned and telegraphic connections are entirely cut from the north. The noon passenger train, which left here at 1:30, reached Bashaw, but had to return, picking up what people they could find and bringing them to this city. Some of the sufferers were nearly overcome with heat and smoke and would have perished had it not been for the timely rescue. A party was sent out from here by a special train, but only succeeded in finding one man, whom they found half crazed, wandering around in search of his family, they having become separated while escaping from the flames. It is thought some persons have burned to death, as no trace can be found of them.

BASCOBEL, Wis., Sept. 1.—A terrific fire swept over the thriving city of Muscoda this afternoon. Muscoda is a lively place of about 1,500 inhabitants, situated thirty miles east of Prairie du Chien on the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul road. The fire originated in an old barn, probably the work of children playing around there. There has been no rain here for over eight weeks. The cisterns in the city were dry. A high southwestern wind was blowing and nothing could be done to prevent the flames from spreading rapidly. At ten o'clock to-night a breeze from a different direction is blowing and it looks as if the whole town will go, and the loss will be much heavier if the wind gets stronger. It is reported that two children were burned, but the report is probably not true.

MARQUETTE, Mich., Sept. 1.—Heavy forest fires are burning to the southwestward of Ishpeming, around Republic, and on towards Iron Mountain. The fires, which have been burning for days in the lower end of Houghton county, west of Nestoria, seem to have taken fresh start to-day, and there are reports that Sidnaw is cleaned out and that Trout Creek and Ewan are in great danger. These reports cannot now be verified, as the wires are down west of Nestoria.

PINE CITY, Minn., Sept. 1.—The forest fires north of the town are raging with savage fury. The high wind through the day has fanned every spark into flames which have been traveling over the country, sweeping everything before them. Settlers are being driven from their homes to seek shelter in the marshes. Hay and buildings have been consumed, and the air is in a suffocating condition from heat and smoke. The north-bound limited train with all its passengers is now laid up at this place waiting to get through to Duluth. Crews are out working on burnt culverts and repairing bent rails to get the trains through if possible to-night. There is no communication with Hinckley, but it is feared here that the town is in imminent danger. Relief crews are being sent out from town as rapidly as possible to aid the distressed settlers.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Sept. 1.—The town of Marengo, in Ashland county, has been completely destroyed by fire and 200 families rendered homeless.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 1.—The fires are widespread and the smoke is extremely dense. At Duluth at West Superior to-day the smoke was so dense that people found work difficult, while the heat was scarcely endurable. Railroad men reported inability to see as far as a hundred feet and business was at a standstill.

PINE CITY, Minn., Sept. 2.—The town of Hinckley has been wiped out by fire and not less than 200 people perished in the flames. The walls of the schoolhouse, the iron fence about the town hall property, the bank vault, and one absolutely uninjured outhouse are all that is left to mark the site where yesterday stood a score of store buildings and a dozen times as many dwelling houses.

The situation at Sandstone is even more appalling than at Hinckley, except in point of numbers. Of the 200 people living in the town one fourth are dead. Last night at 5:30 flames came near the town and people prepared to leave early. The wind blew like a hurricane, and as the people were getting ready to leave the fire closed in on three sides. Not a single person saved a thing except his clothes. About 160 went to the river, and fifty or sixty were burned to death, and those saved have been all day without food or shelter, and no relief could be got to them to-day. The people are living on potatoes and carrots left in the ground. Sandstone is but three miles from Sandstone Junction on the Duluth road, and the fire was on both sides of the river, so that the town of Partridge was burned.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 2.—Hundreds of settlers along the lines of the St. Paul and Duluth and Eastern Minnesota railways lost their lives yesterday. Seventy dead bodies were counted between Duluth and a point north of Hinckley on the St. Paul and Duluth alone. These were settlers who had run to the railway for their lives, hoping to catch a train. Mansfield was one of the towns entirely wiped out.

CLINTON, Ia., Sept. 2.—Word has been received here that Barronett, Wisconsin, a lumbering town owned by the Barronett Lumber company, is completely destroyed. Artemus Lamb, one of the heaviest stockholders in the company, says there were about 12,000,000 feet of cut lumber piled up in the mill yards, a conservative estimate of the value of which he thinks is $200,000.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Sept. 2.—The regular Hinckley mixed train due here at six o'clock last night is in the ditch at Pokegama. Pokegama was completely wiped out. Thirty to thirty-five families are homeless and suffering. They were caught by the sweep of the flames with hardly a warning and could save nothing.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Sept. 2.—The forest fires are still raging in this vicinity. The little village of Marengo, situated at the junction of the Duluth, South Shore, and Atlantic railway and the Wisconsin Central railway, in Ashland county, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon; also the long bridge which crosses the ravine over the Central road at that point. No lives were lost.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 2.—The little settlement at Mission Creek was wiped off the face of the earth almost as Hinckley its larger neighbor half a dozen miles up the road. The population of the place was about one hundred and twenty-five.

ASHLAND, Wis., Sept. 3.—Washburn was guarded with deputies last night and all carried rifles. The same precautions will be taken to-night. It was found that incendiaries were at work in the city endeavoring to add to the general consternation. Five were arrested and thrown into jail. Ashland officials are also keeping a sharp lookout for incendiaries, as there were two attempts made last night to fire the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha depot, but were thwarted. The anxiety felt at Ashland for the safety of Northern Wisconsin towns was somewhat eased to-day by reports of rain at nearly every locality where the fires have been worst. It has been a godsend to this country. Queries sent out from Ashland have brought back many responses regarding the rains, although in their very copiousness they have been meager to the hundreds of square miles of fiery furnace.

RHINELANDER, Wis., Sept. 3.—The entire population here has been working in reliefs the last three days to save the town. This is a place of 6,000 people, and stored along the railroad tracks are between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 worth of manufactured lumber. Besides this there are six sawmills and several box factories. The town is surrounded by forests of cedar, tamarack, and pine.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 3.—Gov. Peck to-night received a dispatch saying Barronett was wiped out of existence and that fifty-nine families are homeless and forty families are destitute. He appeals to the people of Wisconsin for money, clothing, bedding, provisions, and such articles as destitute people can use.

PINE CITY, Minn., Sept. 3.—The first thought of the officials of the St. Paul and Duluth railroad company was to care for the unfortunate people along its line who had lost everything they owned; the second was to restore the operation of through service between St. Paul and Duluth. These tasks are well under way.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 3.—This place was visited by a terrific rainstorm early this morning. From one o'clock to three water fell in torrents, and much property was damaged. On the Three Mile Creek the water washed out several stables, drowning three horses, and swept away a shanty, drowning a two years' old colored child named Sarah Ellis. A Missouri Pacific bridge below the Union Depot was washed out. Lightning struck places, and trees and sheds were blown down all over the city.

GUTHRIE, Ok., Sept. 3.—A waterspout, coming up suddenly last evening, swelled Skeleton Creek out of its banks, flooding the surrounding country for quite a distance. While endeavoring to cross the stream near here in a buggy the occupants, Mrs. Jack McPhee, her two children, and Miss Mabel Hill, were thrown into the water and drowned. Up to this morning the bodies had not been recovered.

ELGIN, Ill., Sept. 3.—It rained so hard here to-day that at times the storm had the appearance of a cloudburst. Water came down in torrents until the streets were flooded to the depth of two inches in many places, loosening the pavement of paved streets, and the unpaved streets along the bluffs were washed into gulleys, and cellars were flooded. The storm lasted all day. It is the only good rain since early spring and is worth millions to the dairy interests.

OAKLAND, Ill., Sept. 3.—A heavy deluge of rain followed by strong winds wrought havoc in this community to-day. At eleven a. m. the rain began to pour down in torrents, flooding the streets and ditches. Many hundred tons of broomcorn which had been harvested but left in the fields are ruined and the loss will reach many thousands of dollars. A report comes from St. Omer, a small settlement south of this city, that fields of corn, a number of trees, and several hundred rods of fencing were blown down in that vicinity. A number of dwellings in the path of the wind were injured. Even at a heavy loss the rain is a great benefit to this community, as much suffering prevailed among the farmers for want of water.

FAIRBURY, Ill., Sept. 3.—The heaviest rain for some time visited this section to-day, benefiting the pastures and the sowing of fall wheat especially. The lightning struck in various places, doing considerable damage. The Electric Light Company's line was demolished by a bolt.

WICHITA, Kas., Sept. 4.—A terrible storm visited this city at an early hour this morning. The lower portion of the town was inundated by a cloudburst and many telephone wires are down. Lightning was incessant, and at the home of Thomas Hermen a bolt of lightning killed his little boy, fatally burned a little girl, and literally tore the house to pieces.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 4.—The first relief car from here to the fire sufferers left for Cumberland, Wisconsin, to-night. It contained 2,000 pounds of meat, 200 quilts, 200 pairs of blankets, 200 pounds of coffee, two barrels of sugar, and twenty-five barrels of flour purchased by orders of the relief committee and was filled out with donations made by the merchants of the city. Gov. Peck fifteen minutes after his arrival here had a meeting with his staff and mapped out a plan of relief.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 4.—Nearly $9,000 in cash has been donated by the people of Duluth for the fire sufferers, in addition to which the merchants have given hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise, and the citizens generally have contributed large quantities of clothing, bedding, and food. The jobbers' union will add $1,000 to the cash subscriptions, and other donations of cash are being made hourly. Such an outpouring of generosity was never seen before in this town. There are 1,500 people from the burnt district here who are being housed and fed, and all are being provided with abundant clothing as fast as possible.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 3.—At a meeting in this city last night of all interested in the relief measures it was decided to call on the Governor to appoint a central committee to have general oversight of relief and the distribution of all donations from whatever source received. Anything sent to Governor Nelson, to Tams Bixby, or to Mayor Smith will be promptly forwarded. The St. Paul and Duluth road is running relief trains and carrying all supplies offered. The American Express company announced to-day they would carry supplies free of charge. Governor Nelson last night issued a proclamation calling for aid for the sufferers.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 4.—The work of securing relief for the Minnesota fire sufferers has been reduced to a system and is progressing finely. More than $7,000 in cash contributions and two carloads of clothing and provisions have been received from St. Paul people by the General Relief committee. The A. O. U. W. order has come forward with $1,000 in cash. The Odd-Fellows at a meeting this evening contributed a large sum. Cash subscriptions, varying all the way from $500 to fifty cents, were made all day yesterday to Gen. Bend, manager of the General Relief committee. At the supply depot a corps of men and women was kept busy receiving and packing supplies for shipment to the fire sufferers. All over the State the citizens are offering contributions in money and clothing. From abroad also relief is coming. A telegram saying, "Draw on me for $500," came from Austin Corbin, the Brooklyn capitalist, and in like manner others are obeying the promptings of generosity. The Boston Elks gave $100, and other lodges of the B. P. O. E. have been equally prompt and generous.

CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—Mayor Hopkins yesterday issued the following proclamation calling for relief for the forest fire sufferers: "The attention of the citizens of Chicago is called to the horrible suffering and destitution of the people of Minnesota and Wisconsin occasioned by the recent forest fires. The condition of these sufferers appeals with the greatest force to the humane people of Chicago, who, when the victims of a devastating fire, received the substantial sympathy of the civilized world. I ask with confidence that our people will give liberally and promptly out of their abundance to the relief of our suffering neighbors. All contributions for this purpose sent to William K. Ackerman, City Controller, will be faithfully applied to the purpose designed. John P. Hopkins, Mayor."

In spite of the rains many places are still in great danger from the fires.

The war governor of Iowa, Samuel J. Kirkwood, passed to his rest at Iowa City at 1:15, September 1.

The railroads have suffered heavy losses but are making wonderful progresses in repairing damage done by the fire, and nearly all trains are now running on time.

Bad local fires have occurred at Union City and Kewanee Indiana; Iowa City and Waterloo, Iowa; Carlinville and Rockford, Illinois; Wooster, Ohio; Point au Pic, Quebec.

According to Japanese advices the King of Corea has renounced allegiance to China and declared in favor of Japan in the present war between Japan and China. His troops have cooperated with the Japanese forces.

A St. Cloud, Minnesota, dispatch of the 7th states that a suspicion prevails that the late extensive forest fires were caused by timber pirates, who set fire to the woods to avoid investigation of their frauds. The fires have spread over 1,000 square miles of country, have destroyed perhaps a thousand or more human lives, and devoured $20,000,000.

St. Johns, New Brunswick, is endangered by forest fires. The loss to crops by fire in the adjacent country is enormous.

Duluth advices of the 7th state that steps are being taken to supply the destitute people with farms and necessary implements and supplies, now that the denuded lumber district will likely become a farming section. Hinckley, Minnesota, will be rebuilt as a railroad junction and farming territory center.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 7.—The Japanese have occupied some islands in Society Bay, to the north of Port Arthur. An armistice between China and Japan is imminent.

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 7.—Field Marshal Yamagata has started for Corea to assume command of the Japanese army, which amounts to over 100,000 men. It is supposed an attack will be made on Peking at once. It is rumored that China is endeavoring to purchase a fleet from Chile, that half of the purchase price has been paid, and that the fleet is now due. Mr. French, the new British Minister to Japan, has been received by the Emperor. It is said he has brought a copy of the new treaty between Britain and Japan.

VIENNA, Sept. 7.—The Central Sanitary Council announces that since the beginning of the cholera epidemic there have been 4,367 cases of the disease and 2,700 deaths in Galicia, and 519 cases and 300 deaths in Bukowina.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 7.—From Maestrich three cases of cholera were reported yesterday. At Dordrecht another death from the disease has occurred and at Kapella there has been one fresh case.

Money Spent Economically.

Money economically spent is not always judiciously spent. Why? Simply because a cheap article often requires more money spent on it to keep it in repair than it would cost to purchase the best. ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE
TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendants' witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and re-cross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00.
Bound in cloth $2.50.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

WHAT WILL REMAIN.

THE question propounded is, "If Biblical criticism and scientific inquiry shall overthrow the current theology of Christendom, will the foundation of religion be destroyed?" A writer in the Unitarian, August, signing himself "An Orthodox Inquirer," undertakes to answer the question. He says:—

"Many things would remain. Really, would any of the most important and vital things be destroyed? Let us see.

"Human society would remain. . . . 'Whatever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them,' would remain the Golden Rule for the regulation of human conduct.

"The problem of human destiny would remain. . . . The final answer to that problem might not greatly differ, if it differ at all, from that at present accepted. . . . Men would continue to ask, 'If a man die, shall he live again?' They would indulge a great hope, as did enlightened minds among pagan nations before Christianity came. So long as the doctrine of immortality is not positively proven false, men will entertain the hope of its truth. The overthrow of the orthodox idea of Christianity does not prove Atheism. It simply remands the inquiry regarding religious doctrines back to its status previous to the emergence of Christianity. Practically, not so far back as that, inasmuch as by the enlightenment brought in by Christianity we are far better able to deal with such a question.

"We should continue to have a standard of authority. Hitherto a supernatural revelation has been that standard. In the supposed change which we are discussing the standard would be the inerrancy of the human reason. At once we hear the exclamation, 'How impotent a guide is human reason!' But you will have judged too quickly. . . .

"Some of the greatest minds of the English race and of the English Church have affirmed again and again that all revelation must be judged by human reason. It is not meant by this that prejudice does not obscure and warp judgment, or that reason's dictum is to be accepted on every question that may be presented, because some are matters of speculation only, about which errors may be made.

"The Scriptures will remain to us in essentially their present form. They will remain to utter their truths just as they have for centuries. Whatever change may take place will be in our opinions as to the origin of these Scriptures, the mode of their composition, and the kind of reverence we shall bestow upon them. They may not be regarded as of miraculous origin or supernatural authority. They may not be considered as divinely inspired in the old miraculous sense. But is not Truth true, even if it be not supernaturally imparted? . . . The truths of the Bible are no less true, though they were discerned and expressed in writing by men.

"Jesus Christ will remain to us, and he will be as ever the Captain of our salvation. No one doubts the historical reality of Jesus of Nazareth. He may not have been born of a virgin, he may not have worked miracles nor fulfilled prophecy, he may not have risen from the dead; but nevertheless he remains the spiritual head of the race. He knew the pathway of life as no one else has known it. His feet traveled with eager haste along this pathway, and his encouraging voice and illumined soul call to all men to follow him, and to share with him its blessedness. If God has revealed himself in nature, why may he not reveal himself in man? There is a pathway of life, and men have found it. Jesus found it. Its savingness (and it is a way of salvation) depends not on Jesus' supposed divinity nor upon any alleged supernatural revelation, but on the very nature of the way itself.

"We revere and all but worship other men for what they were and for what they have done for humanity. May we not continue to adore the person and obey the precepts of him who has done so transcendently much more for us than any other benefactor? In this view there is just as great assurance of a blessed immortality as in the old, while our conception of the character of Christ and the future life is brought more into harmony with the demands of enlightened thought.

"One thing more will remain, and that is experience. We shall still know that right is better than wrong. Conscience will work just as truly and steadily as before. Of the truth of the pronouncements of human nature we can always assure ourselves. Experience demonstrates them. We shall still have the fellowship of kindred minds,—minds that share the same passion for righteousness which burns with undying ardor in our own souls. We shall still hope and believe that 'God is not far from any one of us,' the great central Sun of righteousness, of whose fellowship we shall assure our hearts continually."—Literary Digest.

THE SEVEN BIBLES OF THE WORLD.

THE seven Bibles of the world are the Koran of the Mohammedans, the Tri Pitikes of the Buddhists, the Five Kings of the Chinese, the Three Vedas of the Hindus, the Zendavesta of the Persians, the Eddas of the Scandinavians, and the Scriptures of the Christians.

The Koran is the most recent of all, dating from about the Seventh Century after Christ. It is a compound of quotations from both the Old and New Testaments, and from the Talmud.

The Tri Pitikes contain sublime morals and pure aspirations. Their author lived and died in the Sixth Century before Christ.

The sacred writings of the Chinese are called the Five Kings, the word "kings" meaning web of cloth. From this it is presumed they were originally written on five rolls of cloth. They contain wise sayings from the sages on the duties of life, but they cannot be traced further back than the Eleventh Century before our era.

The Vedas are the most ancient books in the language of the Hindus, but they do not, according to late commentators, antedate the Twelfth Century before the Christian era.

The Zendavesta of the Persians, next to our Bible, is reckoned among scholars as being the greatest and most learned of the sacred writings. Zoroaster, whose sayings it contains, lived and worked in the Twelfth Century before Christ.

Moses lived and wrote the Pentateuch fifteen hundred years before the birth of Christ; therefore that portion of our Bible is at least three hundred years older than the most ancient of other sacred writings.

The Eddas, a semi-sacred work of the Scandinavians, was given to the world in the Fourteenth Century.—Sel.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplemental chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

DESERET NEWS ON THE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

THERE is a principle involved in the litigation going on in the courts in what is called the "Temple Lot Suit," of some importance to all Latter Day Saints, whether they be Hedrickites, Brighamites, or Josephites; and the presence of this principle in the controversy is the reason why we allude to it, or canvass anything connected with it in the HERALD.

The Deseret News of Salt Lake City, the official organ of the Utah Church has now and again disavowed on the part of the church it represents, any interest in the suit referred to. In its issue for August 21, this appears:—

THE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

Notwithstanding the clear accounts previously made of the facts involved in the so-called Temple Lot suit between the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Church of Christ, at Independence, Missouri, some of the papers continue to publish the misleading statement that the Latter Day Saints of this Territory are parties to the controversy. In the San Francisco Chronicle of Sunday, August 12, a dispatch from St. Louis, appears, offering the explanation that "the complainant is an Iowa corporation, and represents the Joseph Smith section of the Mormon Church, while the defendants represent the Brigham Young interests."

Inasmuch as a transcript in the case has now been filed on appeal from Judge J. F. Phillips of the western district of Missouri, and the matter will again in due time be brought to the notice of the public, it may not be out of the way to reiterate that the Latter Day Saints in Utah are not parties to the suit and are not interested in it beyond the fact that they, in common with all good citizens, desire to see justice impartially administered by the courts. The complainants, commonly known as "Josephites," are, as their name implies, a "reorganization" of scattered members of the church who for various reasons did not cast their lot with the followers of Joseph Smith when these in accordance with the rules of the church and the teachings of the martyred prophets, accepted the President of the Twelve as their leader. The defendants, also called "Hedrickites," are another reorganized body of separatists from the church. Both claim the title to certain property, once belonging to the church, and the courts have been appealed to for a decision as to which faction is legally entitled thereto. The church in Utah is no more a party to this suit than the Roman Church would be, if the litigation were carried on say, between the followers of Luther and Calvin; for both contestants are as distinctly separate from each other and from the church as those Protestant divisions are from Rome, whether their historical connection with the main body, or the tenets of some of their essential doctrines is made the test of their ecclesiastical status.

The pith of the claim made by both litigants in the suit for the possession of the Temple Lot in Independence is the fact conceded by the News that there were "scattered members" who "for various reasons" did not follow the "President of the Twelve" as their leader. The principle involved in the contest is to be found in that very statement the "various reasons" why the so-called "Hedrickites" and "Josephites" did not "accept" President Young as their "leader." And it is clear that these contestants had most excellent reasons for not so following the President of the Twelve, and that those reasons were and are in "accordance with the rules of the church and the teachings of the martyred prophet." If either party has, or does show this, then that property which the News says "once belonged to the church" will be, must be adjudged by the court to belong to that party making such showing.

If the followers of Luther, or Calvin, had at any past time laid claim to property that once belonged to the Roman Church; and in the contest that ensued had shown to the courts in which the cause was tried that they had been members of that Roman Church; and that while they were such members the church introduced dogmas and practices not provided for in the constitution and rules of the church at the time they became and continued to be such members; and that such dogmas and practices were in conflict with the faith and organic law of said Roman Church as known to them and proclaimed to the world, were heretical and subversive of the good order and peace of the church as originally instituted, and that they refused to accept them, then said followers of Luther and Calvin would have been put into possession of such property so claimed by them and they be declared the true successors of that Roman Church.

The fact that Martin Luther and John Calvin found active followers and support among nearly all classes was based upon their resistance to departures from the right. They became to many the exponents of the true faith, and have continued to be so to this day. They waged a warfare for recognition as the proper representatives of the true spiritual ecclesiasticism that the Roman Church has vitiated and corrupted; and the News knows now that one of the strong reasons urged by the elders of the church it represents, as well as by the early advocates of the angel's message of a restoration of the gospel, at the time and after the publication of the Book of Mormon was, and is, that neither the Roman Church, Calvinists, nor Lutherans are the true successors of the apostolic church, nor true representatives of the original Christianity of the New Testament times.

If the followers of Calvin and Luther should at this late day join issue in the courts for the possession of property once belonging to the Roman church, and of the title to which the Roman Church had never divested itself, does the News believe that there would be no interest taken in such contest by that church? Is it not far more reasonable to think that such Roman Church would contest every point in the controversy in the courts where the issue would be tried? We think so.

There was no "rule of the church," nor any "teaching of the Martyred Prophet," that required any member of the church to follow men unto the acceptance of false dogma, or wrong, or evil practices. On the contrary, resistance to wrong teaching and wrong practices was enjoined by both the rules of the church and the teaching of the Martyred Prophet. Neither is there rule of the church as it existed prior to the death of Joseph Smith, nor any teaching of that man making it the duty of the membership to accept the "President of the Twelve as their leader;" and if there had been any such teaching or rule, every member of the church was absolved from obligation to them the moment the "President of the Twelve" taught or attempted to fasten the practice of plural marriage on the church. No such dogma and practice could claim allegiance from any true follower of Joseph Smith and his teaching as the same is found in the accepted books of the church, and the published writings of the Prophet of Palmyra and his compeers in the ministry up to the date of his death. In proof of this let facts be submitted to the candid judgment of mankind.

THINKING, WRITING, PREACHING, ETC.

WE have a number of lengthy letters for the HERALD, all of which cannot be inserted. In order that as many as possible may be given opportunity to reach its columns we kindly request the brethren to make their letters pointed and brief.

The man who learns to write tersely also trains himself to speak directly to the point, and becomes abler because he so disciplines his mind and cultivates his speech. It rarely occurs that one does injury by saying too little; the mistake in speech when made is generally made by saying too much. Audiences are often confused or wearied both by many words and because of lack of clearness and simplicity in statement and use of language. It is not only what should be presented, but how it should be stated that ought to be considered.

Preaching—teaching—is causing others to know. It is not merely telling, for hearers may hear and not perceive; may listen, but fail to understand; may desire to know, but fail to learn because the speaker fails to awaken and hold their attention. It is necessary therefore for the preacher to study the capacities and conditions of his audiences and adapt his speech to their comprehension; to their easiest, readiest, surest comprehension. He may preach over their heads, but if he makes his statements in plainness and simplicity, all may understand. If he adapts his ideas and words to the capacity of the least, the greater will also get his meaning.

The words of the Master were simple, plain statements. All his preaching was clothed in terms easy to understand: "The common people heard him gladly." While he admonished men to "take heed how" they heard, his ministers may well remember the admonitions contained in the general instructions of some of the revelations to the church that the word be declared in simplicity of manner and in meekness of spirit.

It is fair to presume that not one half of the sermons preached are comprehended by those who hear; this not only because hearers fail to hear attentively, but partly because speakers fail to awaken and hold their attention because of indirectness, lack of clearness, failure to use simple terms, or because of some marked personal peculiarity in manner, or other faults in methods of presenting ideas.

The preacher is apt to take too much for granted. Because he becomes familiar with certain texts, doctrines, and ideas, he is liable to presume his hearers know or will readily grasp what he presents. This is evidenced by the rapidity with which texts are recited. Many times a speaker will rapidly quote six or seven proof texts, hardly stopping to take a full breath while he rolls out words and sentences of which his hearers often are as ignorant as of the geography of remote Thibet. Texts should be read or quoted slowly, clearly, and repeated when necessary; and if they contain terms unlikely to be understood, be explained in language that is simple and comprehensible. It is a mistake to presume upon the knowledge of an audience. And matter can be made plain without presuming that hearers are ignorant; and hearers may be ignorant because not having had opportunity to obtain information. They may or may not know the words of the text; and they may know the words of the text and yet be ignorant of its meaning. They must know the words in order to learn their meaning; but they cannot do either unless rightly taught. Texts should be read or quoted slowly; their meaning be made clear.

Exactness in making quotations is another thing the preacher should cultivate. It is the exception, not the rule, when writers and speakers quote correctly. We frequently hear the words, "Except a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God;" but the text does not so read. The word the before water does not appear in John's Gospel. The language is not specific concerning any particular water, but is of the Spirit. And so we might enumerate other instances, some in which quotations are greatly distorted, or mutilated.

But we did not start out to give the elders a lecture, but to offer a few suggestions; and we confess our own errors in some of the points noted. We might dwell upon the faults of too rapid talking, too frequent and awkward gestures, of too loud a tone, too high a pitch of voice, etc. These often are serious faults and frequently detract from the usefulness of speakers.

A man ought to think while he preaches. If there is any time when a man should think carefully and clearly it is while attempting to fill the office of teacher of the people. He cannot think to best advantage if he talks too rapidly. By that method he may fail to treat his subject thoroughly. He is apt to slight it, to not bring it out, to fail to connect it clearly and logically if he runs over it. True, a man may be blessed to that degree that the subject is rightly divided and every word expresses the proper idea; but the true idea is, when the Spirit rests upon a man he should remember that "the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets;" that is, the Spirit teaches the spirit of man; it constrains him to act, to think, to cultivate, to restrain, to rule his spirit, to have himself well in hand; to use his powers that they may be brought out and developed in harmony with the Spirit of light, that the minister may become a cultivated, a qualified—a refined, and polished, and useful instrument. For if the Spirit rests upon a man and he does not comprehend its mind, its purport, and fails to grow, to become transformed, more intelligent—in other words unless he adjusts himself to it, he fails to retain the virtue and power it would impart and bring out. And such a one would possess no salt in himself; no talent, no capacity, only as he might occasionally be favored by some special bestowment, and by which he would retain no lasting good in himself, and therefore fail to improve. It is not designed to destroy individuality, but to fashion, and teach, and perfect it.

It is a mistake for the minister to fear to present simple truths or principles of the gospel because he thinks they have been heard before. They may have been presented previously, but if they have, it is doubtful if all who heard understood them; and it is probable that impressions were not fixed in the minds of some. It is often the case that persons do not realize the purport of things they have frequently heard or read until years afterward. Truths bear repetition; restatement of them need not be tiresome and uninteresting. Truth is so substantial, so real, so really gratifying, that it bears frequent presentation. Besides it has so many phases, so many applications, that variety attends the preaching of it. One man will recognize its force in an application where another may not, because his experiences and makeup differ from others. Some will present it in diversity of manner, and other minds will still further illustrate and bring out its consistency, its beauty, and its strength. By frequent expounding we have a consensus of facts and applications in demonstration. There is a significant statement in one of the revelations to the church: "which truth shineth." The truth is to shine out clearly, strongly, and into the hearts; and it is to fix its impress in the mind and heart, and consciences of men, and thus become a steadily burning illuminant. Basic, fundamental truths are not only deeply laid in the foundation of the universe—the physical, the moral, and the spiritual universe; they extend outward and upward, grasping, connecting with and sustaining all that rest upon them—the vast universe of God. They comprise the framework upon which every added feature of the universal economy is placed or with which it is blended; and in them combined we have massiveness, strength, beauty, and harmony in the entire economy. Let none then hesitate to declare frequently the first principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the moral, physical, and spiritual simplicities they include. Let them be viewed from all sides and in all their phases that they be fully comprehended. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, an intellectual and extensive writer, states in his "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" that he had concluded to let no one rob him of his thought because it might have been stated by others. What was legitimately his he concluded to present. That is the true way; to present what has been made one's own, when it is timely. The conscientious, the honorable person will not be guilty of merely echoing the thoughts of others. The one sent to teach will receive light and truth in his work if he is himself true; if he is faithful, honorable, upright, manly, and above the pitiable folly of plagiarism. What a depth of meaning and grandness is suggested by that word true! It is worthy of thought, of separate or future consideration and statement.

Another common fault in public speakers is the high key, followed at times by the very low tone in which parts of sentences are spoken, too loudly or too softly. Too high a key is first of all an unnecessary expenditure of force, a wasting of physical energy, which in itself is wrong. It wears out the man; it rasps his throat, and ultimately injures it permanently. It is a species of doing evil that good may come. It also tires an audience, especially those who sit near the speaker or those finely sensitized, thus preventing them from hearing with comfort, to advantage. Men must be earnest, but calm forcefulness has weight with thinking minds. The minister should economize his vitality and as far as possible avoid such strain of mind and body as will prevent him from securing sound sleep "in the hours set apart by God for the rebuilding and strengthening of the body and mind." Unless he can induce a natural repose of body and mind after an evening sermon he will fail to "retire early and to rise early that vigor of body and mind" be retained; and if after a wearisome, restless night he oversleeps, the sturdy or inconsiderate may criticize him as lacking energy. The life of the minister is a hard one on the man physically. This the Lord evidently foresaw, and therefore admonished obedience to the laws of nature, in sleep, in diet, etc.

Few speakers are aware of the prevalence of the habit of articulating words indistinctly. On that account reporters frequently experience great difficulty in getting all they say. Other hearers also complain of losing important parts of discourses because of it. In order to do all the good he can the preacher may study these things to advantage. This we believe to be in harmony with the revelation of 1887, paragraph 2.

It is only by the exercise of care that anyone becomes well qualified in any line of work. This is as it should be. Fineness of perception, clearness of statement—in fact, all culture is the result of persistent, careful effort. "Study to show thyself approved" is an admonition that we all may heed in thinking, in writing, in speaking, in everything, with benefit to others and with profit to ourselves individually.

Heretofore we have written on the subject of attention—the duty of hearers to speakers, and a privilege to themselves. As we both listen and speak, we hope to profit by the suggestions offered to our readers.

A closing word on thought. Thought is the exercise of the higher faculties of reason and reflection in determining or forming a judgment upon what we perceive. By its exercise the mind is strengthened, its power to analyze becomes greater, and the ability to act judiciously and promptly is developed. There is practically no limit to the powers of the human mind enlightened by truth and properly cultivated in all its faculties.

We have some significant and interesting instruction concerning thought in the revelations of God. We quote from a revelation to Oliver Cowdery, Doctrine and Covenants page 76:—

You shall receive a knowledge . . . by the manifestation of my Spirit; yea, behold I will tell you in your mind and in your heart by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you, and which shall dwell in your heart. Now, behold this is the Spirit of revelation; behold this is the Spirit by which Moses brought the children of Israel through the Red Sea on dry ground; therefore this is thy gift: apply unto it and blessed art thou, for it shall deliver you out of the hands of your enemies, when, if it were not so, they would slay you, and bring your soul to destruction.

Again:—

Behold, you have not understood; you have supposed that I would give it unto you, when you took no thought, save it was to ask me; but, behold, I say unto you, that you must study it out in your mind; then you must ask me if it be right, and if it is right, I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you; therefore, you shall feel that it is right; but if it be not right, you shall have no such feelings, but you shall have a stupor of thought, that shall cause you to forget the thing which is wrong; therefore, you can not write that which is sacred, save it be given you from me.—D. C. 8:3.

Of many things suggested by this meaning language we state a few. Oliver Cowdery was to receive knowledge by the Spirit of revelation; was to be told it in his mind and in his heart. He is further told that he must study it out in his mind; he was not only to ask and receive, but was to so exercise his mind as to analyze and comprehend what was conveyed; and comprehending it, his judgment or reason was to be satisfied that it was right, after which if he asked he would feel, realize in his heart that it was right.

Here it is assumed that his mind was a suitable instrument capable of receiving and discerning the purposes of God. God created the mind and arranged the functions or methods of its operations. He therefore would not nullify its normal activities nor set aside nor ignore its natural modes of operation or laws of development. The recipient was to be illuminated; to consider, to think upon, and comprehend what was revealed to him; to become an intelligent servant of and coworker with God. This method alone is consistent with the character of God, who wills that men shall become one with him by perfection of intelligence.

Man is the offspring of God, hence as in the operations of natural law like produces like, so man is by nature Godlike in faculties of mind, in powers of soul; and (diverging) in inherent immortality. The doctrine that man is purely mortal is inconsistent, unscientific, untrue, because in conflict with natural and spiritual science and law. "Man is spirit," are the words of significant import given through the young seer in these last days. "Man is spirit." Spirit is not mortal; it is eternal; and, so is matter. And, further diverging from the main thought, why should the immortality of soul, the eternal existence of the now ever-present necessities of spirituality, affection, and the rich gifts of mind and heart without which this mortal state would be a pandemonium—why should the eternal existence of such realities, necessities, features of life itself, ever be questioned? Truly unbelief is dark, blinding, and wrong.

But, this Spirit of revelation. Moses was enabled to exercise the Spirit of power to that degree that forces of nature seen and unseen were brought to bear to the deliverance of the Israelites and the destruction of Pharaoh's pursuing host. So is the Spirit of revelation to be in the minds and hearts of God's ministry and people to that degree that they shall comprehend the truth and exercise its power; and, bringing it to bear against the degrading, enslaving forces of evil, the right is to be vindicated, the wrong be made manifest—unmasked as such, and the people be delivered from the destructive errors and powers of darkness, and evil finally be destroyed. Error enslaves and degrades; truth makes free and exalts.

An angel is a minister for God who has attained to that degree of perfection that he is capable of abiding in the presence of Deity and receiving and comprehending the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory therein. He ministers to man for God, as God's ministers in turn minister to the world. The same law that has exalted one must be observed if the other would attain like perfection. Moses and Oliver Cowdery stand in similar relationship so far as means employed to deliver and save are concerned. They differ only in position and exercise of functions peculiar to calling and work. Moses and Israel and Oliver Cowdery obtained deliverance by the Spirit of revelation, of power. All truth is sacred and must be studied out in the mind and felt in the heart to be known and exercised.

In the parable of the sower we are told why some failed to bring forth fruit: because they failed to see, and understand, and bring forth fruit with patience to perfection. They did not think aright; they did not care to study it out in their minds; they could not see the kingdom of God because of mental blindness and perversity of heart.

The Spirit of truth operates upon the mind with a view to developing and harmonizing all its faculties. As the Spirit of truth it cannot do otherwise or to the contrary; and it can never cease its office work within the obedient mind and heart while perfection is unattained—nor afterward.

The Spirit of revelation supplies food for thought and rightly directs the operations of the mind. "It shall be in you," was the promise of Jesus the Christ. Let us study out in our minds the things of the Spirit, and ponder them in our hearts.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. S. PENDER, writing from Flora, Wisconsin, the 5th inst., says:—

The only thing out of the usual line with us is a contemplated discussion between Bro. J. W. Peterson and Elder J. L. Gardner, Christian Adventist. The questions agreed upon involve the two churches, the Book of Mormon, nature of man, etc. The Lord still blesses with spiritual light, and the powers of darkness are not idle.

Bro. W. D. McKnight makes a call for labor at Benton, Iowa, as follows:—

Benton is situated twenty-five miles west of Lamoni, in Ringgold county, Iowa. We have had but one sermon preached here by a Latter Day Saint (Bro. A. H. Parsons), but it was so good that people will give us a good hearing if some elder could come and preach a week. The Adventists have had their tent here three months, and preached on the Sabbath question until a change would be welcomed. I have taught the Bible class in the M. E. Sunday school all summer, and think I have done some good. I hope to keep things moving until some elder can come over and help us.

Bro. T. J. Sheppard, San Antonio, Texas, September 10:—

Have just returned from a two weeks' trip in Wilson county, in company with Bro. J. P. Neal. At Fairview and one other point six miles south, we met with kind treatment with large crowds to hear us, with many invitations to return and do more preaching. These points had not heard the gospel since Bro. Bays preached there fifteen years ago. I go from here to Bandera county to attend district conference. Am battling and praying for truth to triumph.

We are permitted to publish the following from Bro. F. M. Cooper to Bro. E. C. Briggs. It is dated West Bay City, Michigan, September 6:—

Eight heads of families were baptized yesterday. Others are quite interested. Nineteen have been baptized in all, to date. R. E. Grant went home last evening to look after home matters for a few days, but expects to return in a week or ten days. I am called by telegram to-morrow to preach a funeral at Beaverton, but feel so poorly I do not know what to do. Bro. E. DeLong is expected to-morrow to remain for a few days. Doubtless we will locate our place of meeting for the winter on this side of the river, as the greatest number of our people reside on this side. The interest of the work is pressing here in the city. Many ask us to visit them, and the opportunity to do good is golden, and my only regrets are my poor condition makes the demand greater than the supply. I hope to be better soon.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, Avoca, Minnesota, September 11:—

I closed here last night; left a good interest. I ordained Bro. E. D. C. Smith, youngest son of Bro. William B. Smith, to the office of an elder. He will make his first effort to preach next Sunday. Bro. E. A. Stedman is expected here soon to hold a series of meetings. Good will be done if properly cared for. I will hold forth for a while at Troskey, Minnesota, and baptize some who are waiting for me; then I go to Salem, South Dakota, to organize a branch of fourteen members and attend to other work as a missionary.

Of the discussion between Bro. Leonard Scott and Clark Braden, Bro. Scott wrote from Coldwater, Michigan, the 13th inst. to Bro. C. Scott, Lamoni, as follows:—

As a fitting climax to Scott-Braden debate twelve of their number cancelled their names from the Campbellite Church registry on Sunday, and in the evening the audience made us up twelve dollars in ten minutes, and yesterday morning seven were baptized by Bro. I. M. Smith right there in South Scott, Indiana. I expect to meet Braden again this fall in Knox.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. A. C. BARMORE, writing from Xenia, Illinois, September 6, informs us that the Southern Illinois reunion which began on the 2d had not been as successful as anticipated. Stormy weather had prevailed; the wind had torn the district tent into shreds. Brn. Short, Bozarth, Morris, Etzenhouser, Hilliard, and Barmore of the traveling ministry were present.

Bro. G. F. Albertson reports the work as progressing at Fairview, Michigan, where it was introduced about ten months ago, and where the membership now numbers fifty.

Bro. V. D. Baggerly reports opening doors and friendly receptions of the ministry by the people of Southern Indiana, among whom the word is finding fallow fields that insure its growth. He orders sample copies of the HERALD sent to a number.

The Board of Publication some years ago adopted the policy of sending the HERALD free for a few months to every family in the church not taking it, with the intention of inducing them to become regular subscribers, to help the publishing department, and to themselves keep pace with the onward movement of the work. The ministry who know of such families will favor the office and benefit said families themselves by sending in names and addresses. The request is renewed for names of newly baptized persons, for the same purpose. Brethren in missionary or local labor are asked to comply with said requests.

"Scientists are now telling us that the dangerous microbe is lurking in the greenback. Those in arrears, says a contemporary, can send the money, as the publisher has facilities to disinfect small amounts, and is willing to take the risk."

Bro. Fred A. Smith reached home, Lamoni, on the 8th inst., and left on the 14th for Farmington, Iowa, to attend the conference of the Nauvoo and String Prairie district on the 15th.

We omitted mention of the departure of Brn. J. R. Lambert and H. A. Stebbins for the Logan reunion, during the week of the 2d.

A letter from Bro. Stamm dated Runnells, Iowa, the 10th inst., states that Bro. J. S. Roth had baptized all the additions to the church mentioned in his last letter—eighteen since the Des Moines district conference.

The San Francisco Chronicle of the 9th inst., sent us by Bishop E. L. Kelley, contains an interesting description of the Evanelia, the gospel boat; also interviews with Brn. Kelley and Burton. We may republish entire in next issue. The Evanelia was launched on the 11th, was to be dedicated on Sunday, the 16th or 23d, and was to sail soon afterward, Capt. J. F. Burton in command. From the description given the Evanelia is evidently well fitted for the work before her.

We fully expected to furnish our readers with minutes of the Logan reunion, but so far have received nothing for publication, although partial reports have been issued by other papers. We have made so many requests for promptness in furnishing us such items that it seems scarcely necessary to repeat them. The HERALD readers like the news while it is fresh and timely, and we like to favor them with it in season.

Brn. Hunt and Weld baptized three at Quimby, Iowa, leaving others friendly to the faith. They are now at Marathon.

Bro. J. S. Parrish secured insertion of a fair statement of the faith in the Meadville, Pennsylvania, Tribune-Republican of September 7.

Bro. S. V. Bailey arrived in from Indian Territory on the 12th.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"How easy it is to spoil a day!
The thoughtless words of a cherished friend,
The selfish act of a child at play,
The strength of will which will not bend,
The slight of a comrade, the scorn of a foe,
The smile that is full of bitter things—
They all can tarnish its golden glow
And take the grace from its airy wings."

LOVE.

WHAT is love? God is love. Love, joy, peace, etc., are divine attributes, or the attributes of the Holy Spirit. The love of Christ, which is the same, is sometimes called charity. It "suffereth long, and is kind; . . . hopeth all things, endureth all things," etc. Joy and peace are the fruits of that love, and O how unlike the love which is of the earth earthy. There is nothing real or reliable in the latter, and yet it is all right, to a certain extent, like toys and soap-bubbles; but the former is real or eternal, and it is a free, inexhaustible fountain. We have sipped, and we wish to drink and be filled and thirst no more.

Insomuch as we have not kept in close obedience to the commands of the Master we have slipped from the blessing, and brought coldness and darkness into our soul instead of the warmth and the light of love. 'Tis by love we are saved, the love of the Father and the Son, or according to our reciprocation of the same. It is a free gift, and yet one must wrestle for it even as did Jacob. Not for a moment, but through the long night of trial, till the break of day, till the clouds are rifted and the light illuminates our soul. He was alone in his struggling for victory over sin; so must be the experience of every one who comes off conqueror, alone as regards mortals, and alone with God. Each must wrestle for himself, setting his heart like flint, with the eye single to the one great object, to be filled with God's love. After the struggle we lay our will passive in his, and the still small voice will whisper, "Peace, peace," to the troubled soul. O, thus, dear Father, bless us, bless all with the fullness of thy love!

The father and the mother love are great according to their manifestation, but yet only a type of the eternal, inexhaustible love. So is love that bids one to leave friends and home, to bear the glad news of a free and full salvation to his brother man; so is every act of self-denial, designed for the good of others, let it be great or small. The widow's mite, and the case of him who fell among thieves for illustration, as well as cases of a similar nature all about us.

When our souls are filled with the love of Jesus we can do anything, everything for his cause and the good of the world that is placed before us; then our peace will flow like a river. Yes, brother, sister, friend, we can do all things whatsoever he has commanded us through obedience to the commands of our Savior, our Redeemer.

As the Father gave his only Son as a ransom for us, will he not also freely give us all things? Can he do more for us? No, all has been done that can be done. Can we do more than we have done? Yes, we can fully accept his love and live in its light. But in order to do so we must sacrifice self and selfish desires and hide our life with Christ in God. Every hindrance must be shaken off, whether it be riches or a strong sense of poverty, an idolatrous love towards friends or a hatred towards enemies, or some of the thousand and one wrong habits common to everyday life. If we say we love God and cherish hatred towards a fellow being there must be a defect in our love; and if we say we love God and indulge in hatred towards a brother or sister in the church, how then? The beloved disciple gives a clear answer on that point in the second, third, and fourth chapters of his first epistle. But amid all the defects and evils of the present age, there are some who have so risen above self, and so rest in the promises of Christ as to be endowed with the gifts of the gospel. 'Tis the love of Jesus conferred through mortal to mortal that heals, that blesses. We need to be filled with it. We want to be filled with it, and we want all the inhabitants of the earth to be filled with it.

ALMIRA.

PIPER CITY, ILL.

Dear Sisters:—To-day the Herald came to us laden with good things. It was a spiritual feast, and how our hearts rejoiced when we read of the success of the work in various parts of the world. To know that the honest in heart are searching for more light and want the truth, and then when they find it are obedient to the commands of God, and are willing to give up all worldly joys and pleasures for the work of the Master, truly gives us joy. Calls for preaching are heard from so many places. The Lord is opening up the way for the message of truth to be presented. Not only is there a call for work in this direction, but looking in the Home Column of June 13, we see a request for work there, a call for help. There are so many ways in which we can help in this glorious cause, and a ready response should be heard from every one. "We will do what we can." We need not say these words to anyone but to ourselves, and the best way to let Sr. Walker know what our response is, is to send in our letters until she will have to choose from among the many.

As I read the letter from "A Sister" in last Herald I could not help thinking how little we realize the work that others are doing for us. We get our papers every week and feast on the good things therein. When at conference last spring I visited the Herald Office, and I began to realize a little more than I did before the great amount of work required to get the papers off on their mission of good. Now when reading them, I do not forget how hard others have worked that we may have such great enjoyment.

Again I recall the visits had with Sr. Walker in her pleasant home, and then think of how unceasingly she has labored for the cause. Think for a moment of how she must feel when but little help is received, and then ask yourself the question, "What am I doing to help?" If the answer should be as it was when I asked myself the question, "Not much of anything," then I beg of you do not delay, but try to do something. Each one of us can surely do a little to help if we but try and ask the Lord to bless our efforts. I know of many who can write good, encouraging letters, yet I never see any of their letters in the Column. Why not send a letter once in a while and let those encouraging words do good to many instead of one? I have heard some relate some of their experience in this work, and it was indeed cheering, comforting, and instructive. Now why not give others the benefit of your experiences. Let us not spend all our time in planning and thinking what we will do. While it is right and wise, of course, to plan and think of work that we will do, let not all the time be spent in that way. Let there come a time when we do that work. Looking back over the bright, joyous spring months that have just passed, I see so many things that I had thought and planned to accomplish. But have they been done? With feelings of sadness I must answer, "No." Had some of the time that was spent in thinking and planning been spent in doing, more would have been accomplished.

I hear one say, "I can't write. I just cannot get the time. My time seems wholly taken up with other duties." Ah! weary and tired ones, whose time is spent in caring for and ministering to the wants of others and working and laboring for the cause, you are doing a work that is equally as pleasing to your heavenly Father.

Another says, "I can't write. My talent is not in that line of work." Well, if you have tried and can't write and your conscience does not accuse you for not writing, then perhaps the editorial Undone does not apply to you.

It seems, though, that there ought to be enough letters sent in for the Home Column so that there would be no need to call for help. Let each one do his best and leave the result with God. There is need of work, earnest, faithful work. Sometimes I think it is a way the adversary has of keeping us from working by telling us we cannot do much good, that there is no use of our trying. If we listen to that voice too long it will become almost impossible for us to do that work which we once felt and perhaps knew was our duty to do. Do not be discouraged if our efforts are not so successful as we wish. The words spoken or written in weakness may do some heart good, and if but one receives help and encouragement, we ought to be thankful that we made the effort. Let us work and labor on in every way we can so that when the Master comes it may be said of us that we have done what we could.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. NANCY MASTON of Baker, Kansas, earnestly desires that her husband may obey the gospel. To this end she asks your faith and prayers.

CHASE'S MILLS, Maine, Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—Bro. M. F. Gowell and I are holding meetings in this place. Appointments are out for over Sunday next. Last week we visited Cutler, but it was not well timed, it being the time of concluding a great Methodist camp meeting, so we were just about obscured. We held three services, however, with attentive listeners, and left friends. Mr. Benjamin L. Kelley, the hotel proprietor, treated us very kindly indeed as did his wife, and at their expense. They fully sustained the Kelley record. Selah! Also Mr. Fred Wilder, who generously allowed us the use of his hall, is entitled to credit for his Christian acts and manly virtues. Long live progressive and fair-minded men.

The Saints are usually well. The smoke from the western forest fires nearly hides the sun here. I will be in Eastern Maine until after the 16th inst.

WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

CHELSEA, I. T., Aug. 24.

Editors Herald:—We rejoice to hear how God's work is progressing in various parts of the world, and regret that we cannot make a better report ourself. There are many obstacles in this field to impede progress, and some of the worst incidents to a new and unbroken field. And yet we have various things to encourage us. I feel it a privilege as well as a duty to struggle on while I find people anxious to hear and care for me.

Some of the Methodists have been very prominent in my assistance. Because one family continues to invite and care for me their minister jumped up and pounded his fists together and told them that we were the vilest and most corrupt body of people on earth. They said they gave him to understand they were not pleased with his conduct and his making assertions without proof, and that I was welcome any time I chose to call; but they failed to give him any further or the same invitation. I baptized a promising young man this week. We think he will win others to the restored gospel, being respected, steady, and industrious. It has been a very hot, busy time, the extra labor, anxiety, and changes having hindered the work; it is very dry yet, almost impossible in places to get water enough for stock.

If the Saints would keep all Herald supplements and Ensigns clean and untorn, and send or take them where elders could get them, they would help the work in such fields as this; take them to the conferences, etc., and thereby save postage. The majority of people here seem to be renters or leasers, hence some indifference. They are on the move. That will make it harder to establish branches. We feel thankful for the supply of Ensigns, etc., furnished us in the past and hope it will be continued. I ever hope for the advance of the truth.

A. C. HART.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—One was baptized the 5th; a young lady who has been educated in the Catholic school for some time, but seems to be earnest and takes a great interest in the church and Sunday school. This makes six added by baptism since conference. As the work progresses Satan rages and uses his utmost power to overthrow the good work, but we believe that if we are humble and are always found in line of duty he will fail in his purposes.

An ice cream social was held at the church the 31st ult.; a pleasant time was had and a neat sum in cash realized. Bro. H. N. Hansen gave us a call on his way to Utah, and preached once. The Sunday school went picnicing to Elitch's Gardens on Labor Day, the 3d. We had a fine time.

E. F. SHUPE.

ROMAN, Va., Aug. 28.

Editors Herald:—I left home on the 23d, arriving here the 24th, and have held four meetings, with very few present except the Saints; and some of them have not been present. The enemy has got in some very effectual work here in the last two or three years, and there has some very good material crept in for him to work with. We read in the Book of Revelation of one branch of the church in John's day being located where "Satan has his seat." Even so it is here seemingly. While he has captured a few, others are holding fast and have not denied the Savior nor his work, and if faithful unto the end will receive a crown of life. Almost every means has been tried here for the overthrow of the work, and now they are trying their most effectual means; that is, letting us alone.

Some of the Saints have recently been made to mourn the loss of loved ones, but they bear it well, and indeed they "sorrow not as those who have no hope," for the three young sisters that have passed over in the last six months left a grand evidence of their acceptance with Him whose cause they had espoused. I do not think there are many to be gathered out in this part of the vineyard; in fact, the Lord has told one of his servants that there were just a few to be gathered out, and from a dream that servant had on first entering this field I am led to believe that this field was neglected too long; and I feel impressed while I write to say that I believe Bro. I. N. Roberts should make an effort in this field for one year, and it will have an effect and an influence that probably no other one can wield.

The people here have had quite a drouth this summer, but last Sunday it rained quite heavily.

I go from here to New Hope, where there are three or four faithful Saints, and from there to Roxbury, southeast of Richmond, where are six or eight more of the faithful ones.

I see as I pass along the unmistakable and increasing evidence of the end, and to these things I try to direct the attention of the Saints and exhort them to diligence and meekness. I shall try and continually strive to warn the wicked and comfort and confirm the Saints. I expect to return to West Virginia for their district conference which convenes at Centerville, October 13; thence to Ohio district reunion at Vales, October 25. Am feeling well in the work, and hope to continue to the end. May God bless us and preserve us blameless unto the coming of the Lord, even so. I am still in the race.

JAMES MOLER.

TECUMSEH, O. T., Aug. 30.

Editors Herald:—What a feast of fat things is heralded forth upon your pages of truth, accompanied by the divine Spirit to those who have anxious desires in the latter-day work of the Lord! How sweet the yearnings of the Spirit was upon me this morning as I read the subject of tithing written by Bro. James Kemp! O, how the Saints ought to bestir themselves in the keeping of this blessed commandment! They will not only prosper temporally, but will receive more abundantly of the Holy Spirit. How I wish Bro. Kemp's article to reach down deep into the mind of every Saint on earth, that they might do this command and receive more abundantly! Why, I would no more think of prospering while the judgments of God are being poured out in the day and age in which we live than to think I could get to heaven without obedience. I am so glad I ever learned the truth. My prayer is continually for the heads of the church, and for the spread of the truth.

I. W. WOLSEY.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—The Maysville reunion is a thing of the past, and while you have had a condensed report of it, we merely wish to say that the meeting was fully up to our expectations, and we have gained ground on all sides in consequence. The masses of people have become better acquainted with us and our doctrine, and others who were our bitter enemies and the most prejudiced are now looking upon us with favor. The clipping you published is from a Maysville paper, the editor of which in the past could scarcely give us a pleasant word.

The district has purchased a new tent, 31x46, center poles, eight feet's walls. The Maysville people are very anxious to have it erected in their town for a series of meetings to be held now, believing it to be a very opportune time.

Brn. Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair came in on Friday, and gave us some rousing sermons. All were made happy on the camp ground because of the sunshine, happiness, and enjoyment manifested. The camp word was, "I never saw Bro. Joseph look better." Brn. Luff, I. N. White, C. Jones, J. M.

Terry, Asa Cochran, J. W. Peterson, and others broke the bread of life very acceptably indeed, and hold a warm place in the minds of the Maysville people. Although we are worn and weary with the labor yet we feel well paid for all the expense and efforts put forth; and we hereby extend the thanks of the reunion committee to all our brethren who so kindly and efficiently aided us in the meetings, and hope to meet you again in a year hence.

Yours,

T. W. CHATBURN.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—In the absence of Bro. Pitt and at his request we desire to announce that about Sunday, September 16, we shall open tent meetings in Chicago. We expect Elders J. B. Roush and J. Kier, who have held successful meetings at Joliet, Wilmington, and other places, will close at Wilmington possibly Tuesday or Wednesday the 11th or 12th September and ship tent thence to Englewood, Chicago. Its location will be at the corner of 66th street and Union avenue. Those from north and west side of city may reach us via State street car line to 61st street, thence transfer on 61st to Halsted street, thence transfer to Halstead, ride three blocks to 66th street, walk two blocks east to tent ground.

Everybody welcome. The harvest is ripening; pray for us, all the brethren and sisters. Time of service 2:30 and seven p. m.

Yours in the gospel,

WILLIAM STRANGE.

BEAVER, Texas, Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—The latter-day work is moving on in Texas; there is some opposition in the way of discussion. Bro. S. W. Simmons did well in the debate of late; the Christian preacher was driven from the Bible, and a host of friends were made to the cause. I believe Bro. Simmons will have to return and baptize some noble people there. On the first of October the writer and Elder T. J. Mannus, of the M. E. Church, will discuss the question of identity of organization and doctrine for eight nights.

I wish to request the ministry in Texas and Chickasaw Nation to report to me October 1. This does not mean the 15th. My report is supposed to be in the hands of the missionary in charge by the 15th. Brethren, be prompt.

In bonds,

AMOS J. MOORE.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Aug. 16.

Editors Herald:—In the language of our illustrious brother and colaborer, C. Scott, of Lamoni, Iowa, I had the exquisite pleasure of baptizing six in Manchester, on Tuesday, the 14th, the fruits of the labors of brethren who have been in charge of that known as the Bradford mission in the above city, in which neighborhood was a small society known as Christian Brethren, who had erected a small wooden building, taking its name as the "tent mission;" at which place Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., attended on one occasion while they were worshiping, and though he conducted himself in a gentlemanly manner, because of his known proclivities, he became so obnoxious that the one in charge politely requested him to leave the tent, which he did; but ministerial labor was vigorously prosecuted by Bro. D. and others, and, do you know, there are some prospects of the tent mission being troubled some, if not broken up. Isn't it dreadful? Why, sirs, two of their members, Brn. Taylor and Legget, have been baptized, ordained, and are preaching the everlasting gospel to the discomfiture of some of their former associates.

The local ministry in this city are very active. Confirmation meeting on Wednesday the 15th, at the hall used by the Manchester branch, which in view of the inclement weather and other untoward circumstances, was well attended, and very confirming.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

WILMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 1.

Editors Herald:—In your last issue I notice notes on tent work from Brn. Hunt and Weld, and think their suggestions good; but I thought I would give you a little of my experience. In the beginning of the season we tried seating our tent with lumber, but we met with difficulties in getting the lumber we wanted. In small towns we found the lumber dealers only kept a small supply on hand, so we could not get enough of the kind we wanted without taking all they had of that kind, and of course they would not permit that; so we were forced to take lumber that we had to use at an inconvenience; sometimes it was too long, or too short, or undressed. When we got into large towns where there were no Saints who had teams to do our hauling for us, the lumbermen would insist on our letting them do the hauling of the lumber to and from the tent for us, and we were always sure to have to pay a larger price, and if we would get a drayman it was no better. Our experience is with lumber that it is quite expensive and a great trouble. We can put up our tent in half the time we can seat it with lumber. So with these objections I advised our district early in the season to take steps to procure seats for the tent that we could move with us. We saw the objection that Bro. Weld sees to camp chairs, and so we got camp seats, seven feet long, capable of seating five persons; and to express myself plainly I find they are just the thing. They have backs on them and canvas bottoms, so they can be folded together. They are very comfortable to sit on and are very convenient to handle. Now the seating of our tent is but a few minutes' job. Why, Bro. Kier and myself have pulled up our tent, got a drayman, and moved it to another part of the town and set it up all ready for meetings in half a day. The objection that our seats will last but a short time, is not well grounded, for I feel quite sure they will with proper care last nearly as long as the tent. The expense of shipping them is small, not so much as it would cost to get lumber hauled. If any of the seats should be broken anyone possessed of the slightest manipulative skill can easily repair them.

Of course there is a risk to run of the mischievous boys cutting the canvas bottoms, and so with the lumber there is an equal risk to run of their cutting or breaking it, and we thus have it to pay for. We think we might just as well have that cut or broken that is already paid for. We have now even our own platform and everything we use with the tent we take with us, and we now find our condition a great improvement over our starting in the season. Our tent is 31 x 45 with two poles and pulleys for raising and lowering it. We find this not only convenient in time of storm, but also in setting up the tent where there are only two of us. Everyone who has seen our tent is pleased with it.

I know not how the brethren find it in other fields, but this is about the way we find things here. I think the tent a very successful means of reaching the people.

Hastily yours,

JOHN B. ROUSH.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—My last communication to you, was written at Jackson, Ohio. The branch organized at Pine, near Jackson, three years ago, has made considerable growth. There has been eighteen baptized there since spring, and the prospects for more uniting soon are very favorable, providing the Saints comport themselves according to the gospel covenant. Bro. Langley Bierly is president, and has acquitted himself in a creditable manner.

My next stop was at Limerick. This branch at one time in the history of Ohio district, was "the branch," on account of its numbers and spirituality; but through death, removals, and expulsions: the branch has diminished in numbers, but the writer felt while there that God was still watching over said branch, and that it would again flourish. Of course this will depend largely upon the united efforts of those living there. Had quite a pleasant visit with Bro. T. J. Beatty, whose health is quite good. I am glad to inform his friends that he is taking an active interest in the work of the Lord. And he has my full consent to labor wherever he can work to the best advantage, and I pray our heavenly Father to bless him and his efforts with the same success that attended his work in years gone by.

The conference at Highland, as reported by Bro. Etzenhouser, was a very peaceful one. Considerable good was accomplished. Large audiences greeted the speakers, who by the grace of God endeavored to instruct them more thoroughly in the doctrines of our Lord. In the fall 1879 Bro. R. Etzenhouser and I performed missionary work together in Missouri. By the way, we are of the same age, and at the time in question we were "boys" and the peculiar experiences we had while together will ever be fresh in our memories. I here relate one incident among the many that occurred. Bro. R. and I had been sent to effect a new opening within a few miles of Knobnoster, Missouri. The party who was to entertain us had gone off on business, hence when we were through preaching no one volunteered to take us home, notwithstanding we had taken special pains to inform them of our unpleasant situation; to our great surprise every soul walked out, leaving us alone. This inhospitable treatment caused us to feel very homesick; however, we decided to remain in the schoolhouse, as it was very cold outside and we were miles away from our friends. By the time we were comfortably (?) seated by the wood fire, we heard footsteps, and a young man appeared upon the scene. He was a work hand for a well to do farmer, some two or three miles away. When he had got about halfway home the thought came to him that perhaps we were left alone in the schoolhouse. He told us there was a vacant bed where he staid, and urged us to go home with him and occupy it. We felt very timid and embarrassed about accepting this invitation, but finally decided to go with him as we thought the Lord had opened up the way for us. But perhaps you can imagine our feeling next morning when we went down to the breakfast table. The family, however, treated us very kindly, for which we rendered thanks and started for a more promising field. Since the year in question Bro. E. has labored in the West and I eastward, and have never been associated in a field until now; and I am pleased to note the development the brother has made; for truly he has become an able minister for Christ.

The conference of Pittsburg and Kirtland district of September 1 and 2 at Conneautville passed off very pleasantly. Bro. G. H. Hulmes was ordained high priest as per resolution of General Conference, and much of the Spirit of the Lord was present to confirm the ordination. There was quite a representation of Saints present. The drouth of several weeks' duration was broken last week by a refreshing shower, followed by others, which will help the pasturage some; but it is too late to help corn, etc. Saints are reasonably well.

Yours for the progress of truth,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

DERBY, Ind., Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—I have been continuously in the field trying to discharge duty. My labors have been in Spencer, Perry, and Crawford counties. I have traveled four hundred miles and received fifty cents as traveling expenses, so you see I take the walking express, which is very convenient, as you are engineer, conductor, fireman, baggagemaster, and if you fail to make connection no one to growl at but self. This is a hard field and I hope no one is envious of it; but we will not complain, nor do we wish the church to call us home till the warfare is over and the battle won. It is through great tribulation we enter the everlasting kingdom, and we want to gain that rest that remains for the people of God. Beautiful rest! Those who labor the hardest will enjoy it the most.

If our labor is gauged by the number baptized it would not amount to much, for not one have I baptized this conference year. My labors have been mostly in new places; have met with some success in making friends, allaying prejudice, and getting some to investigate, and the greater number to rage, or to treat the message with silent contempt. We hear though, that the Brighamites, over in the Corn Cracker State are meeting with some success, baptizing some, about fifteen miles below us on the beautiful Ohio. I hope they will come up and I will meet them, if their commanders will grant leave. The Brighamites are in Hancock county, near Hawesville.

I leave now for a new field in Spencer and Warrick counties, how long to remain I cannot tell, nor what the results will be. Will those interested in Zion's interests in Southern Indiana remember the work and the worker with prayers, and also with their means. The Bishop's agent's address is Borden. It may be that some of the Saints have forgotten the address. We ought to write often enough to him to not forget it.

Your brother,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

WOODSIDE, Mont., Sep 5.

Editors Herald:—Since my last writing to the Herald from Logan, Utah, I have moved around among the people and have tried to talk to them where and whenever I could. Bro. H. O. Smith's letter from Malad and Bloomington clearly presents the position the Brighamite Church occupies. The members are just as ready to obey counsel and do the bidding of the priesthood in some respects as ever, and especially when the Josephites are considered. They seem to take especial pleasure in misrepresenting us. One young returned missionary near Idaho Falls took special pains to tell the people that the Josephites didn't believe in temple building, nor temple work, nor tithing, nor gathering; and according to his idea we scarcely believe anything; and that too after I had told the bishop how we stood on those points. Bishop Rosson sat and heard him go for us to the delight of the people, and never attempted to correct his statements; and then before he would let me speak in their house I must agree to "not abuse our leaders," which I did; but I did not fail to let them know where they misrepresented us.

From Logan I drove to Richmond and stopped with Bro. and Sr. Neilson, and from there I drove to Oxford, and there I spent several days and occupied the Methodist church. It was well filled, and Bishop Lewis and family with about all the leading church people there attended, and I was careful to tell them how President Woodruff had told them they had been wrong in the sealing and adoptions in the temples from the days of Joseph until now, and that we said amen to that. I left Oxford, July 2, for Soda Springs, and drove through March Valley and over the divide to the Portneuff River, where I stopped for the night with Bro. John Hall. From there I drove over to Soda Springs and spent three days visiting with Sr. Eliason, Bro. Bowman, and our old friend Nels Anderson and family. I then drove to Blackfoot, where I intended to do some preaching, but our good friend Hans Hanson and his wife were in Salt Lake City, where she had gone for treatment, and the strike being on, they were detained there several days. I remained at their place until the 12th of July, when I left there with P. C. Hansen, he to go to Pocatello, and I to Idaho Falls. We drove about fifteen miles and camped on a little mountain stream and slept under a clear mountain sky. The next morning it was crisp and sharp. We ate our breakfast at an early hour and then separated. From there I drove to Bro. Oliver T. Smith's, a distance of sixty miles. On the 15th of July Bro. Smith and I attended the Brighamite meeting at two p. m. There were six speakers and four of them bore testimony that Joseph the Seer was a prophet, and that Brigham Young was his legal successor, and that John Taylor was his successor, and that Wilford Woodruff was a prophet too. The other two testified that the mountains were the gathering place, and that this was the place spoken of by Isaiah where the mountain of the Lord's house was to be established, etc.

At the close of their service I asked Bishop Rosson for permission to bear my testimony. He said there was not time as their meeting had been prolonged. I told him it would not take me more than three minutes, but the bishop said no. I told him I would not insist, but as the brethren had testified I really felt impressed to bear mine also. I spoke at night in Bro. Smith's house, but the people were in the midst of hay harvest and I found it impossible to get them out week nights. I did, however, get the Mormon church for one night at Ione and a schoolhouse at Basalt. Had fair audiences at each, and Bishop Mullner told me I could have the house at Ione any time it was not occupied. Bro. David Clark, Jun., formerly of Lehi secured the house for me at Ione, and a Mr. Eby the one at Basalt.

On the 25th of July, after doing what I could and attending the celebration on the 24th at Ione, I drove back to Blackfoot. I camped out alone this time, and yet I was not alone, for the mosquitoes were numerous, and what with their songs and bills they pestered me a heap. Next morning I drove to Bro. Hans Hanson's in time to break my fast with Sr. Hanson. They had returned from the city, but she was in very poor health, I could see such a change in her from the last time I saw her, and she was sick then, over a year ago. She had gradually declined until she was in a critical condition.

The next day I drove to Soda Springs, and that night she was taken with a severe attack of cramping and intense suffering, and when I returned the next evening I found her suffering and greatly weakened. She told me she thought her time had come. I tried to cheer her all I could; I administered to her, and she rested much better that night. The next day I called in my appointment because of her weakened condition. She seemed to be cheerful and sent for her daughter Annie. The next morning before I left to return to Idaho Falls I prayed with her and her daughters, Lena and Annie, and administered to her. The two girls belong to the church. I had some talk with Sr. Hanson before leaving. She said she was perfectly willing to go if it was the Lord's will; that she felt perfectly resigned, and she was so calm, quiet, and peaceful my very heart and soul went out to her. I tried again to give words of encouragement to her and the folks. I told Sister Lena I thought she would recover, not that there had been any manifestation given to me in any way; I only hoped.

I left their hospitable home for Idaho Falls at twenty minutes to nine a. m. I drove up to Bro. Oliver Smith's a distance of seventy miles and rested two hours on the way. While on the road I thought much of Sr. Hanson and of what she had said to me, and the thought was presented to me that possibly I had anointed her for her burial; and so it seemed to be. I remained at Bro. Smith's until the 30th and then went to Deer Lodge, Montana, where I had only been a few days until Bro. Andrew Christofferson received a telegram that Sr. Hanson had passed away. She was a sister to Andrew. A good soul has gone to rest, and loved ones mourn. May the Lord be good to them, I pray. On my arrival at Deer Lodge I found one of Bro. Andrew's little girls very sick indeed; they almost despaired of her at one time, but the Lord graciously spared her to them.

On the 12th of August I preached to the Saints in the little chapel above Deer Lodge, and on the 16th left for this place in the Bitter Root Valley, arriving on the 17th. I immediately began work after being nicely located with Bro. John Johnson and his estimable companion. If ever peace and quiet reigned in any house it is here. Their little black-eyed Jessie makes it interesting for all. Just beginning to talk. She gets off some funny things. I have been busy as possible since I got here, having preached at four different places. The people have turned out fairly well considering the busy season; harvesting and the hum of the thresher is being heard in different parts of the valley, and will be for some time. There is a bountiful harvest here, besides fruit in abundance, melons, and green corn, which makes one think of the light of other days. Day before yesterday we visited Mr. John Sears' place; and by the way, he is father-in-law to Bro. Johnson. Mr. Sears has a large and thrifty orchard, but on the evening of the 30th ult. a streak of hail passed over it and damaged fully one half or more of his fruit, and yet there will be plenty left. He has one of the most sightly places in the valley. It lies just under the mountains on the west side of the Bitter Root River and valley, sloping down towards the river, where it gets all the eastern and noonday sun. It is a most fruitful farm. Hamilton, Riverside, Corevallis, and Stevensville; besides farms for miles are open to view. The scenery is perfectly enchanting. Bro. Nelson Johnson lives in Riverside, where I spent the best part of a week, preaching four nights there in the hotel. I have reason to believe that our effort was appreciated by some. Nelson is working now in Stevensville, where he expects to get an effectual door opened for preaching the gospel. If he succeeds I am to see what can be done. We think there is some interest here, and will remain for a time longer to see what can be accomplished. Bro. J. H. Wells is now on Reese Creek, and from his letter to me I would judge he had on his war paint and anxious to start on the war path.

I have been obliged to call Bro. H. O. Smith from his labors in Idaho to look after the work in the city, where I have placed him in charge until wisdom shall require a change. Prospects are not flattering yet in Montana, but there are hopeful signs. We can't report baptisms by the score nor many near the kingdom, but we can report the fact that for the most part our field is a difficult and a discouraging one, and some one must fight the battle; and while we are counted worthy, we shall continue if it is like pecking down a mountain with a jack knife; and if we never baptize any, we will feel to say, Lord we have done the best we knew and rejoice in the labors of our brethren, and pray that they may move Zion in mighty power. I have thought sometimes that the "hastening time" for the Utah people had not come. I feel sure that while such deception and hypocrisy is being practiced as is done there the Lord will have no use for them. Polygamy is believed in as firmly as ever, and practiced; not so openly as formerly, but secretly and surely, the fruits thereof testifying to the facts. I wish I could write otherwise, but I cannot. I am feeling well every way, and would love to do something that will be counted for good to the people and the onward march of Zion's cause.

Yours in bonds,

R. J. ANTHONY.

JUNIATA, Mich., Aug. 20.

Editors Herald:—God has said through the Spirit that we were not to murmur at our trials. And why should we? God does not wish us to do right simply because we cannot help it. If everything went right, it would be no trouble to do right. Then would we receive a reward for doing what we could not very well help doing? When we feel more like staying at home than going to church, and we go, we overcome that feeling and will get that much reward. It is easy for us to say we love God and his work when we are enjoying his Spirit, but our Savior has said that temptation doth love for him prove; for when we are tried and do not allow ourselves to be carried away, then we know we love God, as the Scriptures say: "If a man love me he will keep my sayings." "These are they which came up out of great tribulation." Should we not rejoice when we are tried, knowing it is for the perfecting of our faith? When we feel gloomy let us go to the Lord in prayer, and if we do not feel better, try again and again. Sometimes we derive a great benefit from fasting. We can overcome if we make up our minds to; for God does not lie, and it is made mention in his word that we will not be tried more than we are able to bear; and the Spirit bears witness to it.

The reason we do not bear our trials is, we do not try; it is easier to listen to the arguments of the evil one and give way to them; still, God cares for us, and when we go to him in a right way he hears us. Christ has said that his arms of love shall be around us amid life's trials and cares, if we will put our trust in him and lean upon our God. If Satan comes and whispers to you then, "Why does not he remove your trials if his arms are around you?" just tell him that God knows what is best.

By reading the Book of Mormon we find an account of seven cities being destroyed because of wickedness, but God would not have allowed a city to be destroyed if there were one righteous man in it. So God watches over us and cares for us, and are we as grateful to him at all times as we should be? I have often thought what a great trial it must be for a mother to have to live separate from her children and thought it would be the greatest trial I could be called upon to pass through; and since my companion's health has been so poor I have thought, Can it be that he is to be taken from me? Many thoughts have come to me. I can only say, God's will be done; he knows best. My whole desire is that I may be faithful to the end.

Your sister,

ANNA PHELPS.

SHELDONVILLE, Mass., Sept. 4.

Editors Herald:—My last letter was written from West Mansfield, where Bro. Sheehy and the writer were presenting the word. Our meetings were a success, and seed was sown that we trust may grow and sometime produce fruit that may be a blessing to the church. Feeling that our work was done for the present in West Mansfield, we moved to South Foxboro, Mr. Charles Sawyer kindly taking our tent and other paraphernalia in a wagon to the above place. We met with many kind-hearted people and know that God will reward them. In South Foxboro we had good interest and good liberty. Mr. John Waggott came over from West Mansfield and the writer led him into the water, the first fruit of the tent services.

I was called home on Saturday night, July 21, my little child being very sick; but through the mercy of God he recovered. We remained at South Foxboro until July 30, and then came to Sheldonville; and here we find a kind-hearted people, Bro. and now Sr. Gardner doing all in their power to make life pleasant for the "missionary." Sr Gardner was baptized yesterday by Bro. Charles Coombs, who has kindly assisted us in our services here and elsewhere. We held meetings through the week at Sheldonville and over Sunday, Bro. H. C. Smith joining us, giving the writer a chance to do a little work at home for a day or two. On Monday, August 6, we packed up and started for the reunion. Of the reunion we have this to say; that the preaching was the best the writer ever heard. All who spoke did well.

Returning to Rhode Island, I went to Fiskville and held two services, then came to Sheldonville, and while resting and waiting for Bro. Blanchard, who was to join me, I put the tent up and went to preaching. Continued through the week and was comforted Saturday evening by shaking hands with Bro. Blanchard. Sunday services passed off nicely, and we are still here, but think we shall leave soon. There are several quite near the door and we may possibly lead them into the water before we leave. The work is onward, the prospect bright, and if we die in this war, I trust it may be with our faces to the foe.

Yours as ever,

GEORGE W. ROBLEY.

THE RESURRECTION.

IN perusing Bro. H. P. Curtis' thoughts on the resurrection, in Herald of August 22, I could not help noticing some points that seemed to be questionable, so I shall venture to offer my thoughts on the subject wherein they differ from those of the brother.

In the first place, the brother seems to have a desire to do away with the literal resurrection of all except the saints. He tells us of the many bodies of the saints that came out of their graves after Christ's resurrection and that appeared to many (Matt. 27:52, 53); and of the Lord opening the graves of the Israelites and causing them to come out of their graves and of bringing them into the land of Israel, and of the Lord causing the dry bones to live (Ezek. 37:1-14), with other items of scripture to prove the literal resurrection of the saints. This is very good, but still I believe there is just as good proof of the literal resurrection of all.

The Spirit said to Ezekiel:—

Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel.—Ezek. 37:11.

If these bones that were to receive life and thus be resurrected, were "the whole house of Israel," there must have been some unrighteous ones in that "great army." The brother quotes Doctrine and Covenants 85:4:—

The spirit and the body is the soul of man. And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul, and then says, "If the soul of man is to be redeemed by the resurrection, will not both spirit and body come forth? Is not death a separation of spirit and body? and is not the resurrection a reuniting of spirit and body as promised to the saints of God?" All this I believe to be true, and good logic; but I think it argues more than the brother wishes for it.

The promise, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," teaches that death or separation of spirit and body comes to all by the fall of Adam, but through Christ all shall be reunited in spirit and body. Revelation 20:5 tells us of a "first resurrection." If a first then there must of necessity be a second. If a second, then all shall be resurrected, and hence the spirits and bodies of all shall be reunited. After the first resurrection, we are told:—

The rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished.

If they did not live until that set time, there must have been something lacking to constitute life. Their spirits surely lived in the prison house where they were to be visited after many days. (Isa. 24:22.) So their living again must have referred to the reuniting of body and spirit.

The earth was expressly created, that after it is "quickened again" (D. C. 85:6), and is "prepared for the celestial glory" (D. C. 85:4), "bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it forever and ever." (D. C. 85:4.) And we read again:—

The righteous shall inherit it: for, notwithstanding they die, they also shall rise a spiritual body: they who are of a celestial spirit shall receive the same body, which was a natural body.—D. C. 85:6.

The fact that the same bodies of the celestial, which were natural before the resurrection, will be given them after the resurrection, does not prove that they will not be spiritual afterward. They will surely not be natural, but will be the same bodies changed and made spiritual. Here the brother draws a line of demarcation between the righteous and those "of a celestial spirit," or possessed of "the Spirit of God." To my mind the righteous are those who obey the gospel:—

For therein is the righteousness of God revealed.—Rom. 1:17.

Christ said:—

Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.—Matt. 5:20.

Abel "obtained witness that he was righteous." (Heb. 11:4.) Christ promised the righteous "life eternal." (Matt. 25:46.) Paul said:—

By the obedience of one [Christ] shall many be made righteous.—Rom. 5:19.

John said:—

If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous.—1 John 2:1.

Paul said:—

If righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.—Gal. 2:21.

So the righteous are Christ and his followers.

The Book of Mormon gives this explanation of the resurrection:—

And he [Christ] shall come into the world to redeem his people; and he shall take upon him the transgressions of those that believe on his name; and these are they that shall have eternal life, and salvation comes to none else; therefore the wicked remain as though there had been no redemption made except it be the loosing of the bands of death; for behold, the day cometh that all shall rise from the dead and stand before God, and be judged according to their works. Now there is a death which is called a temporal death; and the death of Christ shall loose the bands of this temporal death, that all shall be raised from this temporal death; the spirit and the body shall be reunited again, in its perfect form; both limb and joint shall be restored to its proper form, even as we now are at this time; and we shall be brought to stand before God, knowing even as we know now and having a bright recollection of all our guilt. Now this restoration shall come to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, both the wicked and righteous. . . . I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; that is, from death; even from the first death, unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption.—Alma 8:10, 11.

So we see this literal resurrection is to come to all and that spiritual and immortal bodies are the same. I find nothing contrary to this in Paul's teaching. In reply to some of the Corinthian brethren who had objected to the doctrine of the resurrection; he told them:—

If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.—1 Cor. 15:13, 14.

It was the resurrection of the Saints he was particularly speaking about and was the most interested in. He gives us to understand, however, as death came to all by Adam, so life or the resurrection came to all by Christ. He speaks of the different orders or times of the resurrection and also of the different glories to which they were to be resurrected, and said:—

For one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead.—1 Cor. 15:41, 42.

But nowhere does he give us to understand that they should not all receive the same bodies that were natural but were made spiritual. On the contrary he says:—

But God giveth it [whether wheat or some other grain, good or bad] a body as it hath [in the past] pleased him, and to every seed his own body.—1 Cor. 15:38.

So we will all get our own bodies, and they will be "spiritual and immortal." He says:—

It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body.—Verse 44. It is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory.—Verse 43.

The expression, "it is sown," indicates any or all, good or bad. The fact of it being sown in dishonor, does not argue that he is only speaking of those who were not worthy of a celestial glory; for he says in Philippians 3:21:—

[Christ] shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body.

So Paul claimed to have a vile body. The brother says, "Neither flesh nor blood can inherit the kingdom of God. When do the saints inherit the kingdom of God? Not until after the millennium," and then quotes as evidence Doctrine and Covenants 85:33, which speaks of Christ treading the wine press of Almighty God alone:—

And then shall the angels be crowned with the glory of his might, and the saints shall be filled with his glory, and receive their inheritance and be made equal with him.

I do not believe this quotation has reference to the end of the millennium, for this language was that of the last of seven angels that should sound their trumps. The first said:—

The face of the Lord shall be unveiled; and the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth.—D. C. 85:27.

So the saints shall receive immortal bodies at the sound of the first trump. After the six have sounded their trumps, the seventh gives the language of the quotation. Then they all sound their trumps again, each declaring the events of the corresponding thousand years; and when the seventh has sounded his trump the second time, he declares time to be no longer, and then Satan is to be bound a thousand years. So the change from mortal to immortal, the resurrection, the end of time are all to take place before the binding of Satan, and before the commencement of the millennium. The expression, "It is finished," used in connection with the promise of the saints receiving their inheritance, could only refer to the completion of the present condition of things, so also, "There shall be time no longer," only referred to the present time and not the millennium. Isaiah says they are to "build houses and inhabit them." "They shall not build and another inhabit." (Isa. 65: 21, 22.) The time then for them to receive their inheritance is at the beginning and not at the end of the millennium.

It is true that mortality will continue through that period, but it will not be resurrected or changed ones, but those who are not changed:—

For the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner being an hundred years old shall be accursed.—Isa. 65: 20.

The saints shall be changed before and during the millennium. We have already learned that they shall be *quicken*ed at Christ's coming. Again we read:—

Yea, and blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, when the Lord shall come, and old things shall pass away, and all things become new, they shall rise from the dead and shall not die after, and shall receive an inheritance before the Lord, in the holy city; and he that liveth when the Lord shall come, and has kept the faith, blessed is he, nevertheless it is appointed to him to die at the age of man; wherefore, children shall grow up until they become old; old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye.—D. C. 63: 13.

The change, then, shall not all be at the beginning. Only those shall be changed who have attained to the age of man. The rest will live on in their natural bodies till their times shall come and then as Isaiah 65:20 says:—

The child shall die an hundred years old.

Then they shall be changed, and the changing shall go on to the end of the millennium.

Shall flesh and blood inherit the kingdom of God? If the kingdom of God and the kingdom of Christ are one, I say, Yes; for they shall live natural lives and die in Christ's kingdom during the millennium: but if God's kingdom means the one that is to take the rule after the millennium and the "little season;" when death and hell shall be no more having been cast into the lake; when Christ shall deliver all things up to the Father having finished all his work; the kingdom of that new heaven that John saw, in which there was no death, I say, No, not that combination; but flesh and bones will, for Christ surely will, and he said:—

Handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have.—Luke 24: 39.

He was a spiritual body, not a spirit without a body. Paul said Christ "was made a quickening spirit." (1 Cor. 15: 45.)

THE SHORT—PERKINS DISCUSSION.

THE great theological battle is over; open hostilities have a temporary end; an armistice of peace and good will is actually upon us; and the ecclesiastical banner of truce is again unfurled. Thunderbolts and lightning's vivid flash destroy the unfortunate few; but, sure, they purify and render healthful the atmosphere for the denizens of old earth. Fire and flood, wind and electricity, do sad havoc by times; but under wholesome restraint they enter into and render potent all the avenues of life. Religious tournaments or contests are quite necessary to stir the latent powers of the soul to the very center of the heart. When the angel of olden time stirred the stagnant pool the first and foremost adventurer in the troubled water was healed. Jesus' mercy came sure and speedily when the furious tempest swept wild over historic Galilee; as also Israel's guiding star arose from obscurity to illumine the path of the teeming millions.

In trying to substantiate "the teaching and practice" of Elder J. W. Perkins' church from the Bible, he sought to bolster up the erroneous dogma that it was set up and became a living church on the day of Pentecost. Christ became a king then, and the Holy Ghost was first dispensed at that time. He applied Isaiah 2: 1-4 to that event; also Luke 24: 45, 46; Daniel 2: 44. "In the latter days" meant the end of the Jewish age or dispensation. He laid great stress on "in his name, among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." He claimed Daniel 2: 44 was then and there fulfilled, and that the phrase, "these kings," meant Julius, Tiberius, and Claudius Cæsar. Joel 2: 28 was fulfilled on that occasion, and the eleventh of Isaiah was complete during the apostolic age, as seen in Peter's vision. "The prayer of faith" belonged to those halcyon days; inspirational knowledge, miracles, tongues, revelation, the baptism, office work, and manifestations of the Spirit, as well as all signs, dreams, visions, angels, and all, were relegated to the long ago.

To show that his Gibraltar text, Matthew 16: 18, where Jesus said "I will build my church," not only referred to the future, but to the past, and present as well, I referred to such texts as the following: Matthew 4: 23; 6: 33; 18: 18; 23: 13-15; 11: 11, 12; 12: 28; 16: 28; 17: 1-9; Luke 10: 28-30; 9: 1-8, 27; 16: 16; 11: 20; 17: 21, 22, Mark 1: 14; Matthew 18: 1-3; 20: 1. In Psalms 19: 6, where it says "The law of the Lord is perfect," my opponent averred that it meant the thirty-nine books of the Old Testament. I showed that the language quoted could not mean anything of the kind, for the words are found in the nineteenth book, and twenty followed. Furthermore, the old covenant, or law was a yoke, a task, or schoolmaster, weak and quite imperfect, as saith the sacred Scriptures. "The perfect law of liberty" he thought was the New Testament. Seven books were written after St. James made the above statement, so that would-be argument was a fake.

He had the returns all in, and the stream of revelation ceased to flow at the time Christ observed "it is written," "it is finished," on the day of Pentecost, on Patmos, where John says not to add to or take from the perfect word of God, or his complete revelation; that is the perfect law, or infallible rule, as saith my belligerent and his fraternity of gullibles. The name "Christian" as found only in Acts 11: 26; 26: 28; 1 Peter 4: 16, he judged was the new name of prophecy; but unfortunately for the man those are given as Hepzibah and Beulah; see Isaiah 62: 4.

My clever litigant had actually seen Alexander Campbell and heard him. When I urged him much and vehemently to identify his "Church of Christ" in the dark ages, or tell if it was the one in succession, reformation, or in restitution, he finally avowed that Alexander Campbell and colaborers went to work to give us the true meaning of the Bible, and to speak where it speaks, and to be silent where the infallible word is silent. The movement was to discard all human creeds, and to unite on the Bible alone, and in that manner restore to the work of God its meaning and authority, hence to bring back primitive Christianity.

He railed at a reorganization, because, forsooth, it was not found in the Bible. He denied a complete apostasy, but allowed a falling away to the extent that a restitution was necessary. You see that he was at war with his perfect law, history, observation, and his own dear self.

A dollar, he stated, has seventy-six marks of identity stamped upon it,

If it were lost and found, fifty years after it would be current coin. He made such a scattering, evasive, and puerile attempt to develop organization, ordinances, doctrine, and discipline, that I will not tax your patience in tracing out his labyrinthian darkness.

This savant from No. 192 Fletcher avenue, Indianapolis, Indiana, actually said: "We have the Bible revealed to us in our own native tongue;" howbeit this book was given to the world originally in the dead languages; viz., Hebrew and Greek. He informed us that the "Bible was stereotyped on high, and is the spiritual bill of heaven, so to speak; therefore it is perfect, complete, infallible," etc. Inasmuch as it contained sixty-six books, no more and no less, if the brother's theory be true, the twenty odd books referred to and quoted from in the existing Bible may be in the archives of heaven after all. He reasoned that the sun, moon, and stars still perform their duty, hence the stars of "the blessed Bible" are doing their perfect work as an all-sufficient guide. To hear the Christian Church sing, exhort, and preach about the book of God and return thanks over the same, the unwary might be misled to think that perhaps they actually believed in the Holy Scriptures they are so loud and fussy about.

For the elder to beg the question, by assuming that his church is chronologically, historically, prophetically, and biblically right, not only in the absence of proof and in the face of irrefragable evidences to the contrary, is monumental presumption indeed. He applied the seven unities of Ephesians 4:4-6, to so many planks in his platform. For an explanation, exposition, and identification of these characteristic marks behold as follows: 1. One body. (Rom. 12:5; 1 Cor. 12:12, 13, 28.) 2. One spirit. (1 Cor. 12:4-11; 14:1, 12, 39; Gal. 5:22, 23.) 3. One hope. (Eph. 1:17, 18; 2:12; 1 Cor. 13:13.) 4. One Lord. (Gal. 1:8; 1 Thess. 1:5; 2 John 9, 10; Rom. 1:16.) 5. One faith. (Jude 3; Eph. 4:13; James 5:15; Rom. 1:17; 1 John 5:4.) 6. One baptism. (Heb. 6:2; Titus 3:5; John 3:5; Acts 1:5.) 7. One God. (1 Cor. 12:6; Rev. 14:6, 7; Deut. 6:4.)

The reverend gentleman claimed to have the Spirit; that is, the Holy Ghost of the New Testament, because Christ said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are Spirit, and they are life." "But these things are written that you might believe," etc., howbeit the record says the engrafted word is able to build you up, as also, "These signs shall follow them that believe."

"The Scriptures advocate the perpetuity of spiritual gifts," was the proposition I was called upon or agreed to vindicate. The adverse side clamored lustily for signs, miracles, tongues, and the like. He actually wanted me to strike him dumb, like Zachariah was in days of old. If I would only perform a well-authenticated miracle, or give them a sign, I could baptize this controversialist and all his church folks present, and thus end the debate. Remember this person has made a profession of religion, administers and partakes of the sacrament, teaches ordinances of divine service, and lo, he preaches the Christianity of the Bible! He stated that, according to Jesus Christ, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." His Titanic, yea his Herculean conclusion was that the resurrection of Jesus was the amen, or end of all miracles, signs, etc. After he found the alpha and omega of all direct interposition of Providence he asked poor me to break in on the scheme. If he had this gracious, blessed power to heal, there would be no lame, blind, infirm, nor sick near, or as far as he could range abroad. He would be more merciful than ever the Savior was, and actually nullify the purposes of Jehovah. These "forked tongues," and "the prayer of faith" were on the wrong side of his "center pole," the last sign; that is, Christ's resurrection. While he was a kind man, a good exhorter, and an eloquent orator, his assumption, presumption, quibbling, and sophistries were appalling. How dark and devious are the ways of error, while truth treads firmly on a celestial highway! The triumphal car of justice and right is fast rolling throughout the broad land. The sound is heard again in the mulberry trees, and the chariots of Israel are ready for the battle as the divine hand touches the electric button, even the anointed of God. My antagonist wanted to know if I had the prayer of faith. He failed to pump out a miracle. He thought the Latter Day Saints do not limit themselves to the word of God, the Bible. He said: "Hearing comes by the word of God, the Bible. Look into the perfect law, the Bible. Job and the apostles get their inspiration from the Bible. It is written, the Bible, mouth of God, the Bible; but Elder Short has another Bible." He wanted me to get a revelation and confirm it by a miracle, or go to China and confirm the Bible by a sign. John was commanded to write the Book of Revelation and close it with an amen; so the New Testament was consummated, according to Mr. Perkins. When I did not pack up and light out for China, but stuck to him closer than a brother, he prescribed five grains of arsenic. One of his fellow laborers thought he might run us all out of the country with a little garter snake, wherein I acquiesced, for my little wife, a first-class Saint, will flee from a fish worm or even a harmless mouse, etc.

After the earth was created it was to be perpetuated by natural law, not by miracle! After our first parents were found, procreation is the rule; and when we plant a grain of corn we need not "stick down a miracle to make it grow." The whole corps or band of inspired officers, as well as the spiritual gifts, were "the scaffolding;" but when the house is complete they are removed. Such fallacious logic needs only to be stated to be hated and to be "bated." The tabernacle is not still up in the wilderness; the Red Sea is not still congealed nor open; the water is not now gushing from the rock; and old Sinai is not still shaking; so the elder concludes we need not care for or expect any more supernatural demonstrations. His conclusions were about as strained, farfetched, preposterous, and groundless as the preacher who said, "Adam fell; ha! hum! therefore Paul got shipwrecked;" or the modern Irishman that whipped the Jew from hearing of the tragedy of calvary. The sun shines, as also the Son of Righteousness too, as well.

My opponent argued in regard to the Lord having once "confirmed the word with signs following," it, the word or Bible, including the New Testament, did not need a reconfirmation. It is quite self-evident to the candid student that these divine attestations accompanied the gospel that came "Not in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." Because I used this last-named quotation he tried much, but all in vain, to make it appear that to "speak the word only" did not amount to anything.

He resorted to much caviling, turning, twisting, and writhing over the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians, and finally settled down on "When that which is perfect is come" meant the complete revelation, the gospel, the perfect law of liberty, or the Bible. I admitted that if when the New Testament was compiled the reception, office work, gifts, blessings, and sealing power of the Holy Ghost were to come to an end, it was the greatest calamity and curse that could befall us. "And yet show I unto you a more excellent way," according to the elder meant inspirational knowledge, signs, miracles, tongues, healings, etc., no more nowadays. "Spiritual gifts" were Paul's "childhood toys," but when he became a man he put away childish things, and took, in the stead thereof, Perkins' "perfect law," the Bible; howbeit the last books thereof were not written till the great gentile apostle had been cold in death about thirty years; and they were not compiled in their present form nor stamped with ecclesiastical authority for centuries later on.

The "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God," "is quick and powerful." "The books" of Revelation 20, the brother stated, were the Old and New Testaments; but he was at sea on "another book." If he had not told me that his was the Church of Christ, and that he believed the word of God, and not the word of "Joe Smith" (Joseph Smith), I would never have dreamed that either statement had the elements of truth in their makeup.

I will not burden the reader with the numerous, pointed, and plain quotations that were freely used to maintain and defend the truth and the irresistible avalanche of logic, reason, and facts that crushed and pulverized the egg-shell citadels of error where my friend sought shelter. Being an eloquent orator, a polished scholar, a ready spokesman, a good exhorter, a kind, clever man, and a perfect gentleman, his best efforts were at the very first. His first and best foot being thrust forward, the longer the contest waged the more effeminate and weak he appeared. His closing speech where he had a splendid chance to pick up a few faded laurels, was a puerile failure in that he did not review and recapitulate, but simply boomed the Bible, the dear, blessed Bible. Without boasting, but in all honor to the God of the Bible, I felt tranquil and hopeful all the while, and had the great light, liberty, and power of the Spirit in accelerated magnitude till I felt like a strong man coming out of his chamber to run a race, yea, like the house of David.

Elder Denny and Bro. Daniel, who had a four days' tilt last March, were the moderators. Mr. Thomas Green of this place made an impartial and efficient chairman, but their task was easy for the litigants were on their good behavior. The Christian Church folks are more kind to me than ever before in these parts, for they begin to realize that I am toiling for their welfare. The order, attention, and interest of the entire session would be difficult to duplicate. The best of feelings characterized the meetings. A general verdict of the masses is, "All right." The M. E. church here is at my service when not used by the society, and so I close a series of meetings here to-night to hie away to Xenia, Illinois, and the Brush Creek reunion and conference.

Elder L. F. Daniel is operating in Sullivan county. He is negotiating for another debate between himself and Elder H. Williams of Gena, Indiana, on the part of the "Christian Church." I never felt better in Spirit and firmer in heart in my life, so I do say, Let the war come. I repeat it, let it come both thick and fast, and then peace.

Miscellaneous Department.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS REUNION.

It was held at Brush Creek, Illinois, August 31 to September 10. It began according to previous intent on Friday, August 31. Prayer service at three p. m., the forenoon meetings being omitted. At eight p. m. sermon by R. Etzenhouser from Proverbs 21: 2. The necessity of a standard in religion as well as in other things was dwelt upon.

Saturday, September 1.—At nine a. m. organized as follows: G. H. Hilliard, E. Curtis, and I. A. Morris associate presidents; A. C. Barmore secretary, Joseph Morris chorister, James O. Morris organist, M. G. Powell chief of police, he and presidents to select other officers needed, J. K. Cheney, Paul Ayers, and George Tucker completed the police force. Arthur Burroughs, J. K. Cheney, and B. A. Morris reception committee. At 10:45 a. m., A. C. Barmore was the preacher; text, Matthew 3: 11, 12. The baptism and office work of the Holy Spirit was the theme. At the three p. m. prayer service six prayers were offered and thirteen testimonies borne. At eight p. m. G. H. Hilliard was the speaker; texts, Romans 1: 16; 1 Thesalonians 1: 5. The laws of adoption alone will not save. We must be obedient thereafter. God demands our service and may say how it shall be given.

Sunday, Sept. 2.—The forenoon service was preceded by a Sunday school lecture from R. Etzenhouser. Sermon by W. T. Bozarth at 10:45 a. m., from Isaiah 29: 11-17; Matthew 24: 14; Revelation 14: 6. The speaker in effect said: "God, Christ, and the gospel were and are. The Bible being authority, God will proceed under certain circumstances to do a marvelous work and bring forth a sealed book. This was not accomplished in Christ's day, and the reformers made no such claims. The latter-day work only answers to the description. At 2:30 p. m. M. T. Short spoke from Isaiah 28: 21; 2 Peter 3: 3. He pursued a similar course to the previous speaker, dwelling upon the apostasy and closing with the setting up of the stone kingdom.

Monday, September 3.—At nine o'clock, prayer service. At 10:45 a. m., Bro. E. Curtis spoke upon purification and ultimate triumph, from Jude 3. At three p. m., Bro. G. H. Hilliard preached from Psalm 50: 4. He spoke upon the gathering and worthiness for it. The Saints have no promise of preservation from calamities until such occurs. Church at 7:30; discourse by R. Etzenhouser from John 3: 16. The first principles of Christ's doctrine were talked of and incidents used illustrating the attitude of the world toward the Latter Day Saint people and faith.

Tuesday, Sept. 4.—Forenoon service was a refreshing season of prayer and testimony. Bro. J. D. Stead was called to the eldership through the gift of prophecy. At 10:45 a. m. F. M. Slover preached upon first principles and the necessity of divine aid, using as a basis 2 John 9. A. C. Barmore delivered the afternoon sermon from Psalms 52: 7, 8. At 7:30 p. m. M. T. Short was introduced as speaker. He read Acts 9: 10-12, 17, and a commendable effort upon the laying on of hands resulted.

Wednesday, Sept. 5.—Nine o'clock service consisted of seven prayers and a number of testimonies. At 10:45 a. m. G. H. Hilliard used as texts Matthew 16: 18 and 1 Corinthians 3: 11. The great truth of Christ's divinity, the rock upon which he built his church, was commented upon. No man can know it without revelation. The church that does not believe in continuous revelation denies the knowledge of Christ and cannot be built "upon this rock." Several passages were read from Doctrine and Covenants, and that Christ's church in this age was built upon the rock was clearly shown. In the afternoon I. A. Morris preached from Matthew 5: 20.

That the religious world has a degree of righteousness was admitted and the necessity of more urged. At 7:30 p. m. E. Curtis preached from Acts 19: 1-8. Divine authority the theme. The reason Latter Day Saints refuse the baptisms of other churches was given.

Thursday, Sept. 6.—At nine o'clock prayer meeting eight prayers were offered and eighteen testimonies borne. W. A. Kelley was the speaker at 10:45 a. m.; text, Psalm 19: 7. He discoursed upon practical matters, and being Bishop's agent, closed with some advice to the Saints upon tithing. At three p. m. sermon by A. C. Barmore from Acts 26: 8; 24: 15. The hope of God's people relative to the resurrection was presented, also the skeptical manner in which the world has viewed this principle with some others. In the evening R. Etzenhouser preached; text, Ecclesiastes 3: 14, 15. What God does is with respect to the well-being of all men. The law which God gave for man in the past governs still in his spiritual progression.

Friday, Sept. 7.—An enjoyable time was had at the morning prayer service. At the close some were administered to. At 10:45 a. m., Sunday school work. "A model superintendent," by R. Etzenhouser. "How to get parents interested in Sunday school." M. T. Short and G. H. Hilliard. At 2:30 recitations and essays were the order. Bro. J. D. Stead's little boy Dale's recital of the Lord's prayer is worthy of special mention. At its close "Amen" was heartily said by many. His recitation, "Be sure you are right," and Sr. Walker's declamation were also commendable, with others that lack of space forbids mention. The exercise was entertaining and instructive, and converted some to the Sunday school cause. The following district Sunday school officers were selected: Bro. J. D. Stead and Sr. Heppie Morris superintendent and associate, Bro. W. A. Kelley and Sr. Dora Millar secretary and associate. In the evening M. T. Short spoke from Acts 2: 47. The speeches and prayers of the little folks had cleared the speaker's mind, tendered his heart, and energized his soul. He discoursed eloquently upon baptism, mainly with respect to mode and purpose.

Saturday, Sept. 8.—At the close of the nine o'clock prayer service four were administered to. At 10:45, conference business of the district. At 2:30 p. m. one was baptized by G. H. Hilliard. At three o'clock, conference business was completed. The one baptized was confirmed and two were ordained. Reunion matters for the coming year were discussed by G. H. Hilliard, W. T. Bozarth, R. Etzenhouser, A. Burroughs, and W. A. Kelley. A committee was chosen, and to them was given the selection of time and place for the next reunion, also the purchase of a tent. Committee: Brn. J. D. Stead, J. T. Curtis, W. A. Kelley, Scott Millar, J. F. Thomas, John Bass, and Henry Rankin. The money collected in the effort to buy a tent the past year was committed to them. An extra session for Sunday school purposes was held at 6:30 p. m. The use of the Senior Quarterly was discussed by Sr. Bozarth, followed by Brn. Bozarth and Etzenhouser. This district Sunday school association will meet next at Springerton. It was decided to have it connected with the general association. At 7:30 p. m. G. H. Hilliard preached on practical duties, using Malachi upon tithing, with other texts from the standard books. The effort was an excellent one and all felt well.

Sunday, Sept. 9.—At nine a. m., Sunday school; lesson, Acts 2: 1-47. Speeches on Sunday school work, and a collection in its behalf. At 10:45 W. T. Bozarth addressed the people from Hebrews 10: 7; Ephesians 1: 10; Revelation 5: 10. He examined the requirements of God's will in past ages and showed the same would govern in the dispensation prior to Christ's reign. In the afternoon R. Etzenhouser discoursed from Romans 5: 18. He dealt with the nature and effect of Christ's atonement. In the work of salvation man is neither a slave nor beggar. He uses his agency and is redeemed by accepting God's proffered grace. Bro. M. T. Short was presented as speaker in the evening. He used Acts 19: 2 as a basis. Subject, the perpetuity of revelations and spiritual gifts. The doxology was sung and Bro. Curtis pronounced the benediction. Thus ended a profitable series of meetings despite hindrances. Rain diminished the interest and attention to some extent. After the tent destruction the church was occupied until the warm weather necessitated the erection of an arbor near by. We cannot speak of "the white city," as no tents were on the grounds. Most of those visiting boarded with the Saints in the vicinity. Improvement is expected at next year's reunion, which we look forward to with fond anticipation, as also that great one when the divine promise, "Unto him [Christ] shall the gathering of the people be," will fully materialize.

NOTICES.

We expect to begin a series of meetings in our district tent at Englewood, Chicago, Illinois, September 15, to continue till October 7. Will the traveling ministry take notice, and if passing that way stop and give us a few sermons.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Destructive electric and windstorms prevailed at Chicago, Woodstock, Marengo, Rockford, Belvidere, and other points in Illinois; at Baltimore, Maryland; at Detroit and Kalamazoo, Michigan; at Denver, Colorado, at points in Wisconsin, and at numerous other places on the 8th of September. Churches, houses, and barns were struck by lightning and burned, or destroyed by the high winds. A number of people were struck by lightning and killed. The lightning and electric displays were unusually vivid and long continued. Steamers were stranded on the lakes and navigation rendered extremely dangerous. It is impossible to estimate the money loss from these storms.

Trade Unionists in convention at Norwich, September 8, passed resolutions declaring their opinion "that it is essential to the maintenance of British industries to nationalize the land and the whole of the means of production, distribution, and exchange; and that the Parliamentary committee be instructed to promote and support legislation to secure the above objects. This prevailed as an amendment to a motion to "nationalize the land, mines, mineral, and royalty rents." This action shows the socialistic tendencies of the organization. John Burns, the labor leader, joined in the action taken. The trade unionists are also taking an active part in politics in order to secure influence in shaping legislation. Mr. Burns announced that one hundred members of the Trades Union were town councilors, members of school boards, county councilors, members of Parliament, and justices of the peace. The congress also passed resolutions in favor of an eight hours' day.

The Comte de Paris died at his residence in England, September 8. General Francois de Bourbon has laid claim to the throne of France.

Queen Victoria is afflicted so constantly with rheumatism that she has abandoned her proposed winter or spring trip to Italy, her present intention being to take a course of waters at Aix les Baines or Wiesbaden. The Prince of Wales is also afflicted with the same complaint.

The Scotch miners' strike seems as far as ever from ending. The vote of the miners to accept sixpence reduction remains without effect, no action having been taken by the mine operators. According to English correspondents the owners' losses have been enormous; they have lost their contracts and much of their business. Whether they can get it back or not they do not know. Meantime many of the miners have gone to work at the reduction originally fixed by the owners, and the remainder see no prospects of doing better. The English Miners' Federation, in obedience to whose orders they struck, has left them in the lurch. The sums sent have been small. The miners are in great distress; not all of them will get work again at any price, and the Trade Union Congress at Norwich is regretting the dire results of strikes.

There are 599 Trades Union Societies in Great Britain, with a total membership of 1,237,367.

Human sacrifices continue in vogue in Siberia, mainly the Tchuksch tribes, and there is no chance for the discontinuance of this practice in the near future; this according to the Yakutsk (Siberia) News. Old and sick people who are tired of life offer themselves for the sacrifices.

CUMBERLAND, Wis., Sept. 8.—The first rain for many weeks fell here to-day checking the progress of the forest fires and relieving present apprehensions. The relief committee for fire sufferers reports new cases of destitution still coming from country districts, where the condition of things is terrible.

ASHLAND, Wis., Sept. 8.—Settlers around Marengo, which place was destroyed by the recent fires, have caused the arrest of Mike Roepler, charging him with having set the forest fire which swept over that region last Saturday, destroying Marengo and Agnew, with a loss of eight lives. The prisoner was hustled off to Ashland this afternoon and has been placed in the county jail here for safe keeping, as the feeling against him among the homesteaders is very bitter.

U. S. Consul at Riga, Russia, reports cholera there; twenty-eight cases, most of them fatal.

DULUTH, Minn., Sept. 9.—There is fresh terror in the pine lands of Minnesota. Myriads of forest fires have sprung into renewed activity between here and St. Paul to-day, driven by a strong gale that came suddenly out of the southwest. These fires have been smoldering for weeks; it has needed but a bit of wind to drive them into their old fierceness. The wind has come and to-night half a dozen towns are in deadly danger.

At Mora, in Kanabec county, the whole population was driven into the little lake near the town, and nothing but a sudden shift of the wind saved the village. Pine City, just south of the Hinckley burnt district, is begirt with many fires. The place, with its 1,200 citizens and its hundreds of refugees, is considered to be seriously threatened. Ground House, a bit of a village just west of Mora, was deserted by its people. At Barnum, thirty-nine miles south of here, the people had a long and hard fight, but are believed to be safe at seven o'clock. Accounts of the same sort came from many other towns.

Right here in Duluth, in the outskirts, firemen have had to turn out and fight brush and lumber fires. The wind has risen as high as thirty-four miles an hour and the sky to the southwest has taken on the same dull, copper color that showed just before the frightful cyclone that fell upon Hinckley a week and a day ago.

At Merrick, Moose Lake, Mahtowa, Willow River, Rutledge, Oneota, and Mesaba, and many other places the people had terrible struggles with the flames.

ELGIN, Ill., Sept. 10.—Five valuable stallions owned by M. W. Dunham were killed by lightning last night at Wayne. Farmers in this part of the State complain that more damage has been done by the storms of the last week than was done by all the drought. Between here and Marengo over 100 barns have been blown down in the last seven days. Corn has been destroyed by the acre and much stock killed. The damage can scarcely be estimated, but will aggregate hundreds of thousands of dollars.

NILES, Mich., Sept. 10.—The severe storm of last night blew down fruit, shade, and even mammoth oak trees. Hardly a field of corn stands to-day. The lightning was terrific and the wind swept nearly everything before it. The city is a field of woodchoppers to-day clearing the streets.

VICTORIA, B. C., Sept. 9.—Advices from Yokohama: The commander of the Japanese warship Naniwa Kan, when asked why he fired upon the Kow Shing, seeing it was flying the British flag, replied because it was sailing under false colors, was carrying Chinese troops, and had been sold to the Chinese Government. The Japanese Government has agreed to pay $750,000 for the sinking of the vessel. War news is difficult to obtain. China is now hurrying an army of hundreds of thousands through Northern China to Corea, but their progress over the mountainous country is slow. Most of the men enlisted in its service are coolies of the low order. The Chinese have been offering great inducements to Europeans and Americans to enter her service and has secured many. JOSEPHS WITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

HOW TO LIVE LONG AND BE HAPPY.

ONE of the lectures delivered at the recent gathering of members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science was by Sir Benjamin Richardson. It comprised a series of suggestions in regard to the best way by which to make the most of life. As for the term of years, the speaker said that men and women ought to live longer than any machine of steel and iron that can be put together. They have, what no machine can boast, an engineer living inside the premises, night and day, in the form of that vital force which forever is repairing our mistakes and patching up our blemishes until the materials come to pieces. It is all rubbish to talk of three score and ten years as marking the proper span of human life. The average allowance all through the animal kingdom for a being born sound and healthy is five-fold the time occupied in reaching maturity. This rule would give fully a hundred years as the natural term of our anatomical life. Sir Benjamin believes that such a term is easily attainable by the majority of healthy men and women if they are born favorably and live properly. The span of life has been greatly extended in recent years under better comprehended laws of diet, hygiene, and exercise, but most of us still fall far short of our fair allowance. Certainly of late the world has been governed in large part by old men possessing the qualities of youth with all the advantages of experience, among whom Emperor William I., Von Moltke, and Gladstone are shining examples, but if these and others had shared in the law as expounded by the physicists they might still be, in the prime of life. The possible disadvantages of a civilized society in which everybody lived to be a centenarian do not appear to have been taken into account by Sir Benjamin, and it must have been far from his thoughts to suppose it could result in anything like the Struldbrug condition said to have been met with by Gulliver in his travels.

The doctor told what in his opinion is the best way to enjoy life, supposing it to be prolonged. He did not claim that wealth, fame, or any other form of success, as vulgarly understood, is essential. His secret of happiness appears to be couched in the expression, "good will." He says no person is well and happy who is pained at the sight of useful success in others, or who would rather dwell on the failures than rejoice in the progressive careers of other men. "Communion with man and nature lifts the mind above the jealous maunderings of the wayward, contributing new hope and new impulse to those who feel that they are making the most of life." This agrees with the Buddhist maxim, "never to despise and never to envy," and is first-class philosophy whether of Oriental or more Occidental origin. The sunny temper, where it exists, acts like a charm upon the functions of the body. It is worry, not work, that kills. It is the passions that tear the machine in pieces, making its bearings hot and its moral tubes to burst. It is a physiological fact that nothing deranges the action of the liver so much as a fit of anger, and the phrase "jaundiced with envy" has an anatomical as well as a moral meaning.

The Grecian stories of the laughing philosopher who lived to be a hundred and twenty years old, and of the crying philosopher (?) who died at sixty, show that among the ancients there was an appreciation of the fact that good humor tends to prolong life. But supposing this is only a fancy, still the fact remains that the sunny tempered man or woman is the one who most enjoys life while it lasts. No amount of philosophy can rail the seal from off that bond, and the fact should be a sufficient inducement to us to cultivate the graces of a glad heart and a good disposition, even though we might not suppose that to conduce to a long life, or should not desire life to be prolonged beyond what now generally is regarded as the normal period. The case was well put by the man who wrote that "a contented mind is a continual feast."—Chicago Tribune.

SOMETHING NEW FROM JOSEPHUS.

PROFESSOR BRATKE, of Bonn, in the Theologisches Literaturblatt, of Leipsic, Nos. 16 and 17, reports and discusses a literary find of considerable importance to Bible students—a new testimony of the Jewish historian, Josephus, concerning Christ. The new testimony is found in certain acts reporting a religious discussion in Persia in the fifth century between Greeks, Jews, and Christians, the question at issue being the claims of Christ and of Christianity. Just as Bratke was preparing these acts for publication they were issued almost simultaneously by the German church historian, Wirth, "Aus Orientalischen Chroniken," 1894, and by the Russian savant, Vassiliev, in his "Anecdota Græco-Byzantina," I, 1894. In the course of debate the Christian disputant brings up a long list of Israelites, mostly taken from the New Testament, such as John the Baptist, Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, Caiaphas, and others, and closes the list with the remarkable words: "Josephus, your historian, who has spoken of Christ as a just and good man, manifested from divine grace, doing good to many through signs and wonders." This testimony, which seemingly has never before been utilized by Christian historians, is regarded by Bratke as a testimony concerning Christ entirely independent of the one in the Antiquities; and by its contents and wording, very probably historically correct, antedating even the other and doubtful testimony.—Sunday School Times.

AN EFFECTIVE CURE.

A preacher's righteous soul was sadly vexed by the talking and giggling of some of the junior members of his congregation. Breaking off in the middle of his discourse he looked straight at his tormentors and said:—

"Some years ago there happened to sit right in front of the pulpit a young man who was perpetually laughing, and talking, and making silly faces. I stopped short and took him severely to task. At the close of the service a gentleman stepped up to me and said:—

"Sir, you made a great mistake; that young man is an idiot."

"Since that time I have not ventured to reprimand any persons who behave themselves indecorously in church lest I should repeat the same mistake and inflict censure upon an idiot."

There was exemplary silence during the rest of the service.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.
By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplemental chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

DISCUSSION IN UTAH.

PRESBYTERIANS vs. MORMONS.

THE action of the Utah Church, or some of its elders is hardly consistent, so far as discussion is concerned. The Utah Presbytery (Presbyterians) held an annual convention at Nephi, south of Salt Lake City, there being about thirty ministers present. Rev. Dr. Wishard was the lecturer, and in his lectures he attacked the doctrines of the Utah Church, using as texts, "Baptism for the dead," "Preaching to the spirits in prison," and "How to approach apostate Mormons."

At first little notice was taken of the reverend gentleman; but, when the attack waxed warm, local authorities sent for Elders B. H. Roberts and C. W. Penrose of Salt Lake to come to Nephi and "represent the Mormon side" of the questions.

The Deseret News for August 31 contains a column notice of this discussion, under the headlines, "Doctrines Discussed," "Rev. Dr. Wishard, in Nephi, Presents his Views," "And is Effectively Answered by Elders B. H. Roberts and C. W. Penrose of this City."

The closing paragraph of the notice is as follows:—

These meetings have caused considerable comment, and by both Saints and non-Saints it is conceded that Elders Roberts and Penrose were too much for their reverend opponent. Elder Penrose returned home on Monday, consequently did not attend Dr. Wishard's lecture nor Elder Roberts' reply on Tuesday.

CORRESPONDENT.

It therefore seems to be in order for Utah elders to meet Presbyterian ministers in discussion; but when others are "spoiling for a fight," upon topics far more important in their issues to those who would be disputants, those same elders are "instructed not to discuss." Well, the Reorganized Church will live and thrive notwithstanding the statement of the News that it was "spoiling for a fight."

In a sermon delivered by Elder Angus M. Cannon, in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, July 1, there occurs the following, which we give without comment to point the moral of this notice of the discussion at Nephi:—

Many self-sacrificing and noble men have performed wonderful labor among the uncivilized races of the world, in bringing them to a better understanding of the object of life. But these Christian societies too frequently neglect the very things at home which are in such great need of reformation and improvement. They will take money from the gambler, from the corrupt men, and from him who seeks to destroy his fellow-man, and sometimes they will praise him in their pulpits for his liberality, when the money they thus obtained could be better applied in seeking to effect a reformation in the man who gives it. They send abroad to teach the heathen how to live and neglect the greater and more important duties at home. Do we not more or less fall into this same error? Do our hearts not feel kindly towards the people of the world who sit in darkness? Yes, they do. Hence, we go when we are called, and sometimes we feel so prompted that we do not wait to be called, but go to seek the salvation of our fellow-men. When we have done this, how is it at home? We bring in these souls which have been saved, these brands snatched from the burning, and where are they to-day? Where are many of those whose conversion has required dozens of missionaries? Many of them, I am sorry to say, are apostates to the truth. They have lost the love which so warmed them in their native lands. They do not now feel that zeal which once prompted them to endure anything for the gospel's sake. They have lost the faith, they are recreant to the truth, and are working with Satan and his emissaries to retard the progress of the work of God in the earth. They are sending back to their kindred and friends letters filled with falsehoods, though sometimes telling the truth, be it said to our shame, concerning us, and thus giving offense to those who might otherwise receive the gospel. I think we need missionaries to be called to the labor of looking after those tender and uninformed souls that come in here from abroad.

A BAPTIST MIRACLE.

FROM TEXAS.

I HAVE just closed a most excellent meeting held with Aubrey church, Denton county, Texas, J. D. Ballard pastor. The meeting was, in some respects, the most remarkable one of my life. There were twenty-six baptized, three joined by letter and one restored; total, thirty. The revival was very thorough, as you will perceive when I tell you that neither picnics nor primary elections could draw away the vast crowds in attendance.

There was one very remarkable incident occurred which the world should know. Old Sister Griffeth, who is a deaf-mute, is a member of that church and has been for a number of years. She is now about fifty-five years old; has raised a family of children who are bright and intelligent, but who are not deaf-mutes. But neither her children, or her husband who died a few weeks ago, ever heard her speak. Her neighbors, who loved and respected her as an excellent Christian lady, never heard her utter a word.

But during the meeting, while the church was engaged in a general hand-shaking, I extended my hand to this dear sister, who seemed to be full of the joys of salvation. When I took her by the right hand, she pointed up with the other, which I imitated by also pointing up. When I released her hand, she began screaming. This increased, while she rapidly clapped her hands together until she began to articulate plainly, exclaiming, "Alleluiah! Jesus! glory! glory!" while her face beamed as with the light of God's presence. This was witnessed by a large congregation of devout Christian men and women, who will testify to the same. Should any one who reads this feel the least skeptical, I refer such an one to Elder J. D. Ballard, of Tibat Point, Texas, whose word is as good as any man's in Texas.

A. W. RICHARDSON.

ERA, Cooke county, Texas, July 31.

PILOT POINT, Texas, Aug. 25, 1894.

ELDER HEMAN C. SMITH,

Sedalia, Kentucky,

My Dear Sir:—Your letter of inquiry of the 21st inst. to hand, and in reply will say, that Sister Margaret Griffeth is a member of the Missionary Baptist Church at Aubrey, Denton county, Texas, of which church I'm pastor, and was present when this wonderful power of God's Spirit was made manifest in the person of the above-named sister.

This sister is now about fifty-five years old, never uttered but one word in her life before this very remarkable occurrence, and that word was "papa," when she was about three years old. She did audibly and very distinctly speak the words "Alleluiah," "Jesus," "glory, glory," etc., but has not spoken a word from that time up to the present.

Don't think she possibly could have had any means of knowing the significance of these words. Wonderful, wonderful indeed, it was to behold and hear!!

Yours truly,

J. D. BALLARD.

N. B. This sister had a very severe attack of fever when about three years old, which caused her to lose her hearing, and therefore her speech.

J. D. B.

We recently published "a genuine Campbellite miracle," and now supplement it with a "Baptist miracle," which also appears to be genuine—so far as it goes.

It came into our hands on this wise: Bro. Heman C. Smith noticed the item, "From Texas," in part of a paper sent to him enwrapping a package. Not knowing the name of the paper in which it appeared Bro. Smith wrote Elder J. D. Ballard, whose reply appears herewith, and is self-explanatory.

We do not know how Elder Ballard and his congregation would receive the message of the restored gospel with "these signs shall follow them that believe," etc. Some or all might believe and obey it; but judging from past experiences we could scarcely hope that men and women would, except in individual instances, abandon religious traditions for the truth so plainly declared in all the teachings of Holy Writ—that God and Christ are the same "yesterday, to-day, and forever;" that they confirm the word with signs following them that believe, now as anciently. Our presumption in this respect is based upon the rule that has so far been observed.

However, we shall mail Elder Ballard some of the printed word, that he may have opportunity to learn the way more perfectly; and it may be that some of the missionary force can call at Aubrey and Pilot Point and instruct its good people in the gospel restored in its primitive simplicity and power.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

We call attention to the letter of Bro. C. E. Butterworth, touching upon the proper conduct of members of the church regarding the day of rest, the day of devotion and worship.

The Saints should set an example in this respect that will be worthy of emulation.

The ordinary work of the week should end on the evening of Saturday. All things necessary to be done to prepare for the rest and devotional exercises of Sunday should be attended to on Saturday so that there should be no unnecessary hurry and confusion on the rest day morning irritating the feelings and disturbing the placidity of temper which should characterize the deportment during the day.

Too much looseness of employment on the rest day confuses the ideas of the younger members of the household and tends to disparage the teaching of the eldership in regard to the duty of children to parents and all to God. There is need for improvement, and the sister's example points the way it may come.

ANOTHER HERESY CASE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 11.—The Quaker Church of America promises to have a heresy trial as celebrated in its limits as the Briggs case in the Presbyterian Church. Dr. Dougan Clark, Professor in the Theological school at Earlham College, it was recently learned, was baptized with ten other advanced Quakers at the yearly meeting in Damascus, Ohio, during the last summer. This act on the part of Dr. Clark is a direct rebellion against the time-honored tenets of the Society of Friends. The famous founder of the society, George Fox, expressly laid down that baptism is of the Spirit and not of water. Dr. Clark has not been the first Quaker in America to offend in the matter of baptism, but he is the first man of prominence in the society to defy the elders. His position at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, where he has been teaching the Quaker youths for years, makes it necessary that the elders take action. Accordingly he has been temporarily robbed of his honors and influence, and is now passively waiting the action of the committee which has been appointed to investigate his heresy.

RICHMOND, Ind., Sept. 13.—The announcement that Dr. Dougan Clark, a minister of the Friends Church of this city and the head of the Biblical department of the Earlham College, had been requested to discontinue his work for the church and will probably be asked to do the same at the college, because he was baptized, has produced a sensation. Dr. Clark to-day said: "I submitted to the rite of baptism because I believed the preponderance of scripture is in favor of it. I did it to throw my influence in favor of the liberty of conscience in the individual membership. I do not believe George Fox would have disowned a member and can hardly believe he would have displaced a minister for being baptized."

Our Quaker friends are slow to move, but have finally developed a full-fledged heresy case, and are in that respect up to the times in one phase of modern religious sensations. It will be unfortunate for the present views of the society, however, if it undertakes to haul Dr. Clark over the coals because of his professed belief in and obedience to baptism. Should the Society of Friends conclude to "investigate" Dr. Clark's action they may find themselves confronted by a problem of sufficient importance to either divide them doctrinally or convert them to belief in a cardinal principle of the gospel of Jesus Christ. It needs no argument to show that action excluding this minister because of his belief in baptism would also exclude the Master himself and his apostles from the communion of our Quaker brethren. Dr. Clark may yet have the opportunity of trying the whole Society of Friends for failing to observe this one of the "all things" commanded to be observed in the great commission of Jesus Christ. The Society of Friends may find itself a defendant in this heresy case.

FACTS VERSUS SENTIMENT.

THE argument in defense of the right to sell and to drink intoxicating beverages is said to be based on the idea that a man is free to eat and drink what he pleases, that he is himself the proper judge as to his own conduct. That laws prohibiting the sale, or attempting to stop the drinking of intoxicants is an abridgment of human rights conferred on all.

The following cut from the Nauvoo Rustler is very opportune, and points an excellent moral to what has been lately said of the traffic in liquors at the "Beautiful City."

It is estimated that in the 141 saloons of Quincy, $772,000 are spent each year, the average in each saloon being fifteen dollars a day, or $5,475 a year. Probably four fifths of this enormous sum is paid by the workingmen, as statistics and all other evidence in all cities prove that by far the greater part of the saloon revenue comes from the pockets of the workingmen. Quincy's drink bill, according to these figures, would build over seven hundred $1,000 cottages—better homes than many of those the saloon patrons live in. What is true of Quincy is true of Keokuk. In this city the saloons are closed on Sundays and election days, leaving 311 days in which they are open. There is an average of about forty saloons in Keokuk and that would, using the Quincy figures, make $186,600 spent in those saloons in 311 days. That sum is equal to about twice the revenue of the city from taxation.—Keokuk Gate City.

Does any sensible taxpayer think that those upon whom this burden of the drink bill falls are justified in finding fault and alleging that the tax imposed by the State is too burdensome, when every man of them voluntarily pays more than twice the tax and in an entirely useless and pernicious way.

If the workingmen of the two cities, Quincy and Keokuk, would boycott the saloons, take the money now worse than foolishly spent in them for liquors and use it as a building and mutual insurance fund, there would be no better nor sounder association in the United States. With such a help and the success that sobriety brings, it would not be ten years till every worthy workingman would have a home of his own, in which peace and prosperity would delight to abide.

As the Gate City has it, What is true of these two is true of all cities as a rule.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

"AN ex-chief statistician to the Salvation Army states that the army is on the decline."

We are rather sorry than otherwise to see the foregoing making the rounds of the press, although we have looked for it in some way for years. Our reason for thinking that the movement must run its course and then become a thing of the past is, chiefly, because it has its base of success in an appeal to the sensational, in what we can only see as an indecorous way. Such methods must in the very nature of things fail sooner or later.

That the Salvation Army has done good in certain directions, we concede; but in places the effort has been spasmodic and too brief to be of lasting benefit. In some places the class attracted by the drum, horns, cymbals, and singing girls, has not been the element best calculated to give permanence and stability to an evangelical work, and as soon as it was left to itself unaided by any foreign ability it has fallen into decline. In other places the commixture of the sexes in the sort of work done, has been provocative of too great familiarity resulting in contempt, whether any criminality was discovered or not.

Real religion, the religion of the Savior, needs not the playing of tambourines, trumpets, or drums to commend it to the hearts and brains of those needing salvation; but steadfastness, uprightness, and wise discretion will commend the gospel worker to the sheep who will hear the Shepherd's voice.

Another thing which conduces to the decline of the Army movement, as we view it, is that there is in it a direct and open disregard of the teachings of the New Testament in regard to the work of regeneration; the extreme stress being laid on "coming to Jesus," and "leaving oneself in his hands," unrecommended by any act of obedience save the single one of repentance. There is no baptism, no ordinance for the reception of the Spirit, no authority, no organization like the primitive church work; no recognition of the ordinances ordained of God and set in the church.

"Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up," are the words of the Master, and as certainly as he was divinely sent, so surely will be the fulfillment of his prediction.

THE GOSPEL BOAT.

INTEREST in the gospel boat, the Evanelia, is so general that we publish the following description of the missionary vessel and interview with Brn. Kelley and Burton, from the San Francisco Chronicle of September 9. There are some errors in the reporter's statements. The HERALD wishes Captain Burton and crew a safe and pleasant voyage to the tropics, and the brethren of the islands much of comfort and abundant success in the added help of the Evanelia.

THE NEW GOSPEL SHIP.

The Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints has built and will launch from Holder's shipyard, in this city, on Tuesday next "the Ship of Zion, Evanelia." The vessel, as its name implies in the Maorian language, is a gospel ship, and has been built for the purpose of spreading the gospel of the sect which owns it among the natives of the Society Islands of the Pacific.

In an interview at the shipyard, on Channel street, yesterday, Bishop E. L. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, who came here in June last to arrange for and superintend the building of the vessel, and Capt. J. F. Burton, an old sea captain but now a missionary of the church, who is to command the new ship, told its history.

"When I arrived here," said Bishop Kelley, "I expected to buy a vessel such as would suit our purposes. The money for its purchase, amounting to about $3,000, had been contributed by the pupils in the Sunday schools of our church. In the Society Islands we have already upward of two thousand native converts to our faith, the work of a few missionaries, who have traveled from island to island spreading our gospel at great risk of life and with many hardships. They reported to us constantly that if they only had a boat so arranged that they could live in it and travel quickly from port to port they could do far more work, and so we decided to send them a gospel ship. When I arrived here I consulted with Captain Burton, an old seafaring man, who has been one of our missionaries here for some time, and together we looked over the craft in the bay, but found none to suit us. Then we decided to build a boat, and," pointing to the craft standing upon the ways, "there she is. Now, let Captain Burton, who is to sail her, tell you about the ship, for she is as staunch and true, we hope and believe, as the gospel she will carry abroad."

"The Evanelia," said Captain Burton, "is built for our special purpose, and hence differs in many ways from other vessels of her class. She is to be schooner rigged, but you will see from her breadth of beam and her outlines generally that she conforms to the lines of no set model. The changes were made to give us room in the cabin and between decks, give us a light draught and a fast boat; for, after her cruise from this port to the islands, the Evanelia will only make short voyages. The dimensions of the boat, as surveyed to-day by the customs authorities, are as follows: Over all 45 feet; beam, 15 feet; depth of hold, 6 feet, with a tonnage of 20 tons. The very best material obtainable has been put into her. All the seams are caulked with cotton, then painted with white lead, and sheathed with heavy copper. The draught is about 6 feet, and I think she will be very speedy. The Evanelia will carry all told a crew of seven. She has the latest patent steering gear, and above and below decks will be fitted out for comfort without considering cost. In the cabin will be four double bunks, separated by curtains at night, dividing the cabin into four little staterooms. In addition, arrangements are made for sleeping on deck under awnings, for in the tropics the deck will be preferable to the cabin. The galley is complete with cooking utensils. We have a full set of charts and instruments necessary for navigation, and as a boat for the purpose designed, she will carry in comfort and safety the missionaries from port to port in less than a third of the time it now takes them to travel. The ship will fly the American flag, and claim San Francisco as her home. I will sail her to the islands, and then turn her over to a native preacher who holds a license from the French Government as a pilot and shipmaster. Then I will come home to California again."

"There are a few things I want to add," said Bishop Kelley. "We have three American missionaries now in the islands and will send three more on the Evanelia. We hope to launch the boat on Tuesday next, and to dedicate it to the service of God on September 23. Just when she will sail we are not certain, but we hope to have her at the islands by October 6, next, when the conference is held there. Another thing: please do not mix this church of Latter Day Saints with the Mormon Church of that name in Utah. We have been declared by the United States Courts to be the legal succession of the church founded by Joseph Smith, whose son is at the head of our church. Our headquarters are at Lamoni, Iowa, and in this city at 320 Post street. We do not believe in polygamy, but in original religion as revealed. There was some objection for a time to our building a boat out here, as the bulk of our church is in the East, and they wanted the gospel ship built there; but we have a grand boat and we hope for grand results from the venture."

The builder of the gospel ship, Daniel Holder, added a final word: "The craft is as staunch as the hand of man can make her." After being launched the Evanelia will be towed to Harrison street wharf for the final touches.

THE following is the latest information concerning the researches of American scientists among the ruins of Babylon and Assyria:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 13.—An account of the scientific exploration of the ruins of Niffer, near ancient Babylon, which is being made by American scientists under the auspices of the Babylonian Exploration fund, which was subscribed by Philadelphians in 1888, has been furnished the State Department by Minister Terrell. The work of excavating began in 1887 and has been continued by Dr. Peters and Dr. Hilpricht, only the former being now engaged. From 150 to 250 Arabs are constantly employed. In the number of tablets, brick inscribed vases, and in the value of cuneiform texts found, the American enterprise is said to rival the explorations of Layard at Nineveh. Dr. Hilpricht, the distinguished Assyrian scholar of the University of Pennsylvania, remains at the museum at the request of the Turkish Government to translate inscriptions and arrange the tablets and other relics dating back to 4,000 B. C. Many tons of tablets, sarcophagi, and the like have already arrived at the museum at Constantinople and the Sultan in recognition of the services of the American professors, has promised that the University of Pennsylvania shall receive one of all duplicate antiques. Minister Terrell says: "This enterprise has revealed an antiquity of the human race nearly ten centuries older than science had knowledge of before. The religion, government, habits of life, and to a great extent the customs of men who lived 4,000 years before Christ are revealed by the inscriptions which are now being translated here and arranged by Professor Hilpricht."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. M. M. TURPEN, Bay Minette, Alabama, September 19:—

We had a very nice conference at Theodore, Alabama, on the 8th and 9th inst. Two were added to the church by baptism during conference. We continued meetings there until the 16th and organized a branch of twenty-one members and baptized three others; one by G. T. Chute, and two by the writer. We are trying to make some progress in this field and hope to be numbered with the wise virgins when the Master comes.

BRO. I. M. SMITH, Hartford, Michigan, September 21:—

Closed our meetings here last evening. Bro. E. J. Goodenough baptized five here last Sunday, and I baptized one more on Monday—six in all during the week's meeting. Saints are feeling well in the work, but Satan is on the alert, and if they are not very careful he will get the advantage and sow discord and division. Patience, charity, and forbearance must be exercised by the Saints here or they cannot prosper. I go to Galien to-day for the two days' meeting, commencing there to-morrow. My health is still improving. Am feeling well in the work.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BISHOP E. L. KELLEY returned home from California on Monday, September 17, after an absence of about eleven weeks.

Sr. Pearl O. Price, formerly a resident of Oakland, California, arrived at Lamoni on Monday, the 17th inst., having accepted the position of bookkeeper and stenographer in the office of Bishop E. L. Kelley. She will make her home with Sr. M. Walker.

BRO. A. A. REAMS of Sheridan, Iowa, reported the late Logan reunion for the Iowa State Register. The report occupies space in five issues and contains about seven columns of reading matter, interesting to our people and valuable for distribution among others. Bro. Reams informs us that the papers containing the report will be sent to any address on receipt of fifteen cents. Address the Register, at Des Moines. We expected to notice this report more fully, in this issue, but limited space prevented.

BRN. A. S. COCHRAN, J. W. WIGHT, A. M. NEWBERRY, and Bro. and Sr. I. L. ROGERS, and Bro. and Sr. H. A. STEBBINS arrived home from the Logan reunion during the week of the 17th.

The work of Brn. R. M. Maloney and W. S. Macrae is favorably noticed by the Okarche, Oklahoma, Times of the 14th inst. The "line of distinction" is clearly drawn.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"O mothers, whose children are sleeping,
Thank God by their pillows to-night;
And pray for the mothers now weeping
O'er pillows too smooth and too white;
Where bright little heads off have lain,
And soft little cheeks have been pressed;
O mothers, who know not this pain,
Take courage to bear all the rest."

PETITION FOR GUIDANCE.

O Jesus, Savior, hear my cry!
Unto thee I now draw nigh.
I ask for mercy and for grace,
Be thou my shield and hiding place!

O guide me, Lord, from day to day,
My hope and everlasting stay!
When weary, worn, and sore distressed,
I come to thee, O Lord, for rest.

Where can I flee, O gracious Lord,
'Tis thou alone canst help afford!
O save me, keep me, by thy power,
Through every dark and trying hour.

For thou hast promised to impart
Strength unto every fainting heart.
Let never doubts nor fears invade,
Since, Lord, thou hast the promise made

How sweet it is thy joy to share
Where saints have met for praise and prayer.

But sweeter far, when we can prove
The power of thine Almighty love.

Soon will our work on earth be done,
The conflict past, the victory won;
Then Satan can no more oppress
The souls that Jesus deigns to bless.

O may we reach that heavenly place!
What joy to see thee, face to face,
And mingle with that happy throng,
To serve thee still, through ages long.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.—No. 1.

THERE has been much said and written on cruelty to animals, and that is right and good, and we think it would be well for some skillful writer to offer our readers something on cruelty to children. We have a prompting to give a few stray thoughts on the subject, hoping that those among our writers who are better qualified will take it up and carry it out fully. We feel inadequate for the task, but will attempt to obey the promptings, hoping to be guided by the Prompter, and leave the result with him.

Our heart has often been pained, from childhood, because of the thoughtless, injudicious dealings of parents with their children. The greatest work of life is to rightly train the young. People of different dispositions and different culture disagree widely in their views, and consequently in their labors. O how few that have the care of children have realized the importance of their mission! O how little we have realized our responsibility. How little we have thought of the account we must render in regard to the manner in which we have done the work we voluntarily placed ourselves in position to do. No one starting out on such an enterprise can know what the experience will be, only as it is experienced, nor the result until the work is accomplished. It is like starting out on a voyage on the ocean. One needs skill, judgment, decision, purpose, and perseverance, in order to accomplish the work devolving upon her. We cannot lay down any precise rules, because there are no two cases just alike in all the wide world, but there are points and principles that will apply to any case; and besides, neither yourself nor myself have any right to compel anyone to observe our opinions or our decisions. We can only show up, point by illustrations in life scenes, both by causes and effects, and leave everyone to choose for himself and also to answer for himself. It may be, "Well done, thou good and faithful;" or it may be, "Depart ye unfaithful," that will be the final sentence.

Who is there in the world that does not love a little child? No one who loves God. Who then can practice cruelty to children? Those only who are defective in that love.

It seems as if their pure spirits, fresh from the Creator, are designed to be as links to bind us to him. Look at the sweet face of an infant, whether born in a palace or a cave, it is as pure as the fresh blown rose or lily. No traces of sin are visible in its expression till circumstances call them forth. We are sorry to feel obliged to state the fact, that those circumstances are oftentimes caused by the errors of the parents, long before the child has started out independently, into its own probationary state.

The great work of rearing and educating children means business; means that every point in one's higher nature should be brought to a focus, and set to work to properly care for their bodies and to rightly guide the spirit of every soul intrusted to one's care; means that one has enlisted in the service of the Almighty to labor in the business of educating spirits on probation for eternity.

The question arises, how can one be an educator in any branch of study or in any business unless he is qualified for it? Can one be a successful teacher who has not qualified himself for that business? Can one sail a ship without the required knowledge? Taking these things into consideration, we do not wonder there are so many physical wrecks among our young, neither can we wonder there are such a diversity of methods in spiritual training. This is an age in which all churches and societies are individually at work in the uplifting of the young; and we are glad that the Saints have been inspired with a spirit to show them the various shoals and quicksands that threaten their destruction.

We are glad, too, that the Zion's Religio has called for the thoughts of her laborers, and we hope there will be much good done thereby. Good thoughts are the greatest riches that can be given to the world. Every kind, loving thought or word is good and can never be lost—its influence will live forever. O, how can we mar one of those sweet, fragile flowers, fresh from the garden of God. We will give more on the subject in future.

BEFORE my eyes arises this picture: I see stretching away into the distance a narrow road or highway. It seems to lead through a rough or mountainous country and is ever leading upward. Many, many people are journeying thereon. Every short distance there seem to be obstructions of some kind in the way and these travelers seem to unite their strength in removing such. But now just in front of me arises one larger and more formidable than any hitherto met with. I eagerly watch my travel-stained, weary ones to see how this will be met, as this seems really a giant and rises in the shape of a huge boulder or stone, almost completely barring the way. Covered with green, slimy mud, it had caused the fall of many. From the bottom of the deep ravine at the side came up the cry of thousands that had stumbled here, "O, had I been warned! had I but been differently started upon this journey through life, I might even now be rejoicing upon my way toward the beautiful mansions of which I but faintly catch a glimpse."

And so, as I anxiously wait, I see that these people have seen the necessity of moving this obstruction from the pathway, and I see many ways are resorted to. Some say, "Let us close our eyes and walk quickly by with skirts held closely about us, and we will not be injured at all." Others, "My father went by that road, my mother passed this way, and I have never yet been troubled, so why need we fret?" "Our children will come along in about the same way that we did. Of course some will surely stumble here, but then, comfort your hearts, it won't be ours." "Oh no! not my boy or girl is going to slip from the narrow road to life everlasting. Some other mother's child, perhaps, but not ours."

And so they too pass by. Many are afraid that, trying to push this slimy stone from out the way, they will become covered with the mire. But strange to say, the few that have undertaken it wear garments as spotlessly clean as any that have yet passed. I see these few women banded together, and I read stamped upon their faces the desire to serve God and their fellow man.

At first only a brave few dared to touch the gigantic task. But others came, and later still others joined them till at last a goodly number had gotten close at the foundation of the evil and were patiently working away.

I see a good many standing at one side watching, and by the look upon their faces I can see that if the thing is going to be a success they will join in later, while if it isn't, "Well, there, I told you that they couldn't do it."

Over and above all those that were laboring, I see the smile of love of our Father as he watches the struggles of his sons and daughters to become more Christlike in every way. And much, very much more passes before my eyes, but for want of space I will not write more, only tell you that with it all came the comforting assurance that God was well pleased with the efforts of his daughters to thus serve him, and I feel assured that we will receive his help and also his blessing.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

"To live is Christ."—Phil. 1: 21.

"No 'tis not a weary life,
Though it hath its dangers,
If we wage the holy strife
Here as pilgrim strangers;
It is not a world of woe
If we do not love it,
But a training heaven below
For the heaven above it."

Thursday, Sept. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

BELL, Iowa, Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—While laboring at Coalville, Webster county, Iowa, of late, I noticed that when a certain apple peddler came to the house of a family of Saints where I was staying, on Sunday, August 26, to sell his fruit he was politely told, "not to-day." After the peddler had gone the sister said to the writer: "We needed some apples, but we will not purchase on Sunday, and the gentleman will find that he will sell no fruit to the Saints of this branch to-day."

I admire the action and statement of the sister on that occasion and therefore present it to the Herald readers for what it is worth, believing it to be in perfect harmony with the following scripture: "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments unto the Most High; confessing thy sins unto thy brethren and before the Lord. And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily, this is fasting and prayer; or in other words, rejoicing and prayer."—D. C. 59: 2, 3.

And the Spirit saith further: "Inasmuch as there has been much discussion in the past concerning the Sabbath of the Lord, the church is admonished that until further revelation is received, or the quorums of the church are assembled to decide concerning the law in the church articles and covenants, the Saints are to observe the first day of the week commonly called the Lord's day, as a day of rest; as a day of worship, as given in the covenants and commandments. And on this day they should refrain from unnecessary work; nevertheless, nothing should be permitted to go to waste on that day, nor should necessary work be neglected. . . . Be not hypocrites nor of those who make a man an offender for a word."—D. C. 119: 7.

The branch at Dow City is making some improvements on their chapel, and expect to make some needful repairs, extending the work as far as they can without going into debt. The Sisters' Aid Society of the branch, over which Sr. Nellie Crandall presides, has furnished considerable money to help forward this work, and their effort is appreciated; and, with the consent of the branch, Bro. C. M. Wilder and family gave a "grand chorus concert" for the purpose of helping in the same good work. Bro. Wilder and family spent nearly two weeks in training and preparing those who were to take part in the concert. He also succeeded in securing the assistance and coöperation of the best musical talent of the town and surrounding country, Methodist and Baptist members taking part; and the result was a grand success. Bro. Wilder's ability and effort in this concert have brought about, in the writer's opinion, a better social feeling than has ever before existed in the town, as well as securing about forty-eight dollars for the benefit of the branch. We are glad to have in our field men and women who possess such rare musical talent as the Professor, and his wife, and daughter, and others of the branch who took part in the entertainment. The home talent without an exception did extremely well. The writer is a dear lover of music and song when it is rendered with the Spirit and with the understanding also, as it is in perfect harmony with the truths and music of the gospel.

RAY, Indiana, Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—The debate at South Scott, Indiana, between Bro. S. W. L. Scott and Clark Braden is over, and peace reigns once more. It lasted twelve evenings; house crowded every evening. Bro. Scott exhibited the true Christian spirit from first to last, while Bro. Braden—well, you all know the rest. I haven't time to give anything like an outline of the debate, nor do I wish to brag, but I do think it was a victory for the truth. It seemed to me the hand of God was in it for good. We baptized seven there on Wednesday, after the discussion closed. Two of them (and I think three) came out of the Disciple Church, and two other Disciples ordered their names taken off their church record the next day after the close of the debate. Many there are very near the kingdom and will no doubt obey in the near future, if the work is properly looked after in the proper time. Bro. Scott goes to Knox next Saturday to meet another attack on the faith by the Disciples. The probabilities are that Braden will be the man they will have to represent them there. It seems to me they would get sick of him, but as they don't, we can afford to take his abuse if they can afford to suffer the loss. Pray for us. Our trust is in God and in the strength of his truth.

In gospel bonds,

HILLMAN, Mich., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald:—I came here about a month ago and commenced holding meetings. Everything went smoothly for a few evenings; since then persecution has run high; and although we have met with opposition, the honest ones are receiving the truth. On the 2d I had the pleasure of baptizing eight noble souls in the most beautiful lake I ever saw. Several more have given in their names for baptism next Sunday.

Since they were baptized everything has been said and done that the enemy of truth could think of, I guess. One night this week as I was presenting this beautiful gospel to the people in a schoolhouse the mob on the outside tried to stop me by making a loud noise and throwing sticks at the house; but failing to accomplish their object in this way, they tried another plan. As the house was warm one of the windows was raised to give us some fresh air; and when I was about two thirds through with my sermon I received a volley through the open window that was not very fresh, nor pleasant to take. They were trying the egg argument on me; and while I do not believe that it is a legal argument, I will admit that it is a strong one, when a man's sense of smelling is good. One egg struck me right between the eyes, but as soon as I could get my eyes wiped so I could see, and get the people quieted down, I went on speaking; and it seemed as if I was blessed with aid of the good Spirit as never before. I intend to push the warfare against the strongholds of Satan as best I can. Praying for the welfare of Zion, and asking for the prayers of her children in my behalf, I remain,

Your brother,

F. H. BROOKS.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—About three weeks ago I went to Austinburg, Ashtabula county, Ohio, where lives Sr. M. A. Faulk, I believe a Saint indeed. She did what she could to make my stay agreeable and profitable. I got the use of the town hall free, except as to light, and I preached nine times. I swept the room, but somehow it appeared in streaks, as it is an oiled floor. I lowered the stage curtains, closed the dressing room doors, arranged the chairs, dusted them, filled the lamps, and then I thought it looked neat, except that the smell of tobacco was ill-suggestive. Of course I did the bell ringing too.

Well, during my preaching I put three chairs up in front, not that I expected to occupy them, but I felt the need of a comrade, and the additional chairs were a suggestion that the necessity was all but filled. I was blessed in presenting the word. People can stand a more scorching fire now than they could two years ago in good times. At the close of one of my sermons I spoke for some time solely by the direction of the Spirit, but I suppose none knew it, though I noticed everyone sat transfixed. Such blessings, my dear editors, are worth a little janitor labor and prayers.

Why does not some unmarried priest, east or west, volunteer to company me? I believe God would provide for him; and I am sure I would remember him in my prayers. Who is brave enough to respond?

I had a caller one day; a gentleman who claimed no less distinction than having been a doctor, a lawyer, and a minister. It is a wonder it had not killed him. He had heard, he explained, I was in town and desired to learn of the faith I represented. It was not long, however, before I saw he wanted to tell me what he did not know, and so "snow me under" with words; but I managed to rally, and having got warmed to it on theism and skepticism, I have no doubt our mental thrusts and parries equalled, metaphorically speaking, Sir Walter Scott's description of a Scottish claymore combat. He announced his desire to see me again, but did not ask me to call on him. Sr. Faulk, who in the next room heard all, was much amused at the turn the conversation took.

Much prejudice was removed at that place; for whereas at the first meeting the audience assembled in the vestibule and peeked around the doors at me, at the last several crowded around me asking questions and receiving tracts. Some are believing. That was new ground.

I then went to Rock Creek, near by, but not finding Sr. Norton, I started at once for our district conference at Conneautville, Crawford county, Pennsylvania, minding myself to go afoot, which is something like Luke's observation concerning Paul's departure for Assos, Acts 20: 13. My journey lasted till into the third day, and I preached once. Again my abilities as a janitor were brought into use, but I was again paid well for it. Of course I did not fancy this trip, but I was and am willing to do whatever is best for the good of the work; and I think it is a very good sign to see that those who thus labor are esteemed more highly by the Saints for their work's sake, giving, of course, the Master the glory. I believe, having tried both ways, that more good can be done by doing as little traveling as possible, but do that on the railroads, and by vehicles; but no one should be above walking when it is necessary. It is hoped that the Saints will not willingly see the elders walk unnecessarily.

I regretted much that the district conference had not enough faith to fully come up to the requirements of the revelation of 1894, but I believe they will, in time. When they do, I believe the work here will move faster.

Brethren, please do not discuss the revelation of 1894 in the Herald any more. It is accepted, and a law for the church, and nothing remains but to strive hard to live up to it. Your discussions will hurt the "little ones."

I spoke three times at Tracey, Pennsylvania, where I found some beginning to believe, and left them believing more. Bro. Corey was good to me in carrying me in his buggy.

Not long ago I was at Wheeling, West Virginia; also at Hunter, Badgersburg, and Laurelton, Ohio. The Saints at each place helped me spiritually and financially. May God bless them.

JOHN S. PARRISH.

SHELDONVILLE, Mass., Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—It is with a goodly degree of satisfaction that I note the progress of the work in this place. Last Monday the wife of Bro. Frank Gardner was baptized by Elder Coombs. To-day another lady, a Mrs. Webb of this place, entered the waters of baptism. Both these women are of sterling character and will make progressive workers in the Plainville branch, it being the nearest branch to them. My progenitors, or some of them, were born on "the mount," as it is called, within about a mile of where the tent was located. It never occurred to the writer that when a mere lad of eight or nine years and attending school in the little red brick school-house on the "mount" that my experiences would lead back to the vicinity of these early scenes to help hold up the hands of the ministry by prayer, as they impart the word of life to the people. The prospects for the work are very encouraging.

September 10. Last evening Elder George W. Robley preached a very interesting sermon which the writer believes reached the hearts and minds of some of the people at least. The church will find in Bro. Robley a preacher of whom it need not be ashamed. Bro. W. W. Blanchard delivered an excellent sermon yesterday afternoon. The tent will be removed to-day to West Dighton, near the home of Sr. Adelia Clark.

Sincerely yours,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

CANTON, Ill., Sept. 17.

Editors Herald:—We are still trying to hold the fort here. Yesterday was a most beautiful one and a very busy day for us. We had preaching in the park at eleven a. m., hearing fair, interest and liberty all that could be desired. We went directly from the park to a beautiful lake and baptized three. Mr. Orville Goodale, son of Jackson W. Goodale, was the first to disturb the smooth surface of the water. Won't this make his good old father and friends rejoice! Confirmation meeting was at 2: 30. The Spirit was there in power, and some precious promises were made to Bro. Goodale providing he is obedient and faithful. The testimony meeting that followed was just grand. This is the first fruits of our effort here this time, and we are encouraged. Others are convinced, and we hope to see them obey. At four p. m. we spoke again in the park to quite a large crowd. Bro. J. W. Terry is with me and is rendering all the aid he can. He had charge of the meetings. Last night he spoke in the church on the subject of "knowledge." Mrs. Goodale is one of those who believe, and may the Lord help her to obey. This is the day of God's power, and he will work and none can hinder. We hope and pray and confidently expect that the restitution that has set in in other places will strike this field, that the waste places may be built up. To this end we shall work and pray.

E. E. WHEELER.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—At the close of service in the tent last evening we were visited with a severe rain and windstorm, but it passed over without serious damage, except wet feet and wet clothes to some of the tentgoers. If correct in memory, sixty-two preaching services have been held to fair, and in many instances, large audiences. By this we mean to as large congregations as our seating capacity could accommodate. Brn. J. H. Peters, district president, E. De Long of Vassar, L. Phelps of Juniata, James Burch of Quanicasssee, and Wm. Dowker of Bay Port, have all assisted more or less in the success of these meetings, in preaching the word. R. E. Grant of Canboro, Michigan, has been the principal worker for the last four weeks, in vigorously presenting to the people, in his clear-cut way, the faith of the Saints. We appreciate highly the timely aid and good will expressed by all these ministerial brethren in aiding the work of the Lord in this city. Bro. R. E. Grant is expected to return to assist in the work here again next week. Bro. De Long is expected to aid the local workers here this week.

Hundreds of people have heard the gospel preached during this series of meetings and the seed has been sown far and wide, making the opportunity for gospel work much better than before in the Bay Cities. Wise, careful, and united effort on the part of the local and missionary forces of the church in the coming winter will doubtless add prestige as well as numbers to the already increasing membership of the church. Nineteen have been baptized to date, while many more seem deeply interested in their investigation of the divine claims of the "restored gospel." We have not found it necessary, up to this writing, to move our tent to another place in order to get a congregation or to hold one, as both interest and attendance have increased up to this time. The approach of cold weather and the heavy autumn rains are bound to end our tent meetings in this northern latitude before long, but we hope to continue the effort until driven to seek warmer quarters by the encroachment of colder nights. We have never been disturbed by lawless elements, or unreasonable opposition, but the best order and attention has been preserved from the first, which speaks well for the people of this city.

In justice to the brethren and sisters, both officers and members resident in Bay City and West Bay City, it is proper to say that the majority have done nobly in aiding the missionary effort by their faithful attendance upon the meetings, besides assisting in every way that duty demanded. Evening after evening as we looked upon the tired faces of those brethren and sisters who had wrought through the day "for the bread that perisheth," we felt that in their hearts dwelt love to God and love for man, and that they placed a value upon the work of the Lord which no personal inconvenience could compromise, no personal sacrifice impair. May they never tire in well-doing, "for rest comes sure and soon." Through the weary years of "mixed conditions" here, the gold and dross were closely related and so complicated that nothing but intimate personal acquaintance could give one a true idea of the real condition of affairs; and even then the mind was confronted with problems as difficult and unexplainable as a something removed from the jurisdiction and power of human thought. A district court for days sat in judgment upon evidence presented to it pro and con, which finally resulted in the expulsion of eight members from the church. Some went out because they did not pretend to honor the precepts of Christian practice, and said they did not intend to; and they wanted to be released from church membership, as they did not want the reputation of the church injured by their unchristian lives. These people will be welcomed back to the fold by a reformation of life, and we give them due credit, that if they failed to have true regard for themselves, they had some regard for the church by going out and admitting that they were wrong, but that the church was right in asking them to honor its moral obligations. Others were expelled by the force of overwhelming testimony placed on record against them, which raises a barrier between them and church fellowship which can never be removed only by the enforcement and personal application of the divine command, "Ye must be born again." The principle of these poor, benighted people was "rule or ruin," and especially "ruin." They armed themselves with Mr. Whitmer's "Address" to the Saints and appeared as the champions of "the Church of Christ," denouncing the "Reorganization" everywhere, where time and opportunity presented, as being corrupt from the "First Presidency" down to the lowest official of the church, and that it was builded upon the false revelations of the Book of Covenants—a man-made church. They felt thankful that they had got their eyes open, and the rest of us would when we got as far advanced as they were. Braden, Beadle, Rogers, and the whole host of slanderers and calumniators of the latter-day work, never belched forth more slanderous breath from disordered natures against the church than did these members of the church in Bay City. They were bent on the overthrow of the work here as it is, and, to them, "the end would justify the means."

One of these parties tried to be admitted into the Baptist Church before the time set for trial by the court of elders, but a sister, acquainted with some of the Baptist people, notified the pastor of the charges pending against the integrity of this party, and after due investigation his petition for membership in the Baptist Church was rejected. From that he with others found refuge in the "First Society of Christian Spiritualists of Bay City," and there has bloomed out a full-fledged medium, president of the society, etc. The Devil ain't dead yet, but is more alive than ever, as these people claim to receive revelations direct from Joseph Smith himself, and are moving on in the full blaze of spiritualistic inspiration. Being octagonal in their makeup, one of their eight sides they turn to every Latter Day Saint, who is not acquainted with them, and call that side Latter Day Saint; and then, if they get their ears, they pour out a story of personal wrongs, of injustice which they have suffered, sufficient to make the hardest heart feel sad and full of pity. I write the general facts that all unacquainted with these people may know that they are the avowed enemies of the church. We are perfectly willing that these people may be Spiritualists, Catholics, or whatever they please; but we are not willing that they shall slander the character of the church, deny the faith, seek to destroy the work the church is building, and then pose as martyrs and Saints who are suffering injustice, and try to make scapegoats of the great body of Saints, in order to cover up their proven guilt of dishonesty, apostasy, hypocrisy, falsehood, slander, drunkenness, etc., etc. These people lay responsibility of the stagnant condition of the work in the Bay Cities in the past to the door of those who in the past and present have had charge of the work, but I am prepared to believe it was occasioned by the deleterious influence of microbes, moral and spiritual, which affected the body local.

Brn. Briggs, Cornish, Smith, Scott, Waterman, De Long, and others have labored here, and I have no reason to doubt but that all of these ministers for the church labored to do good. Placed under their circumstances we might not have done so well as they. I know of no mistakes, only those coming under my own personal supervision; no wrongs only those done or committed within the radius of my personal knowledge or investigation. Hence, I believe all who preceded me here were as honest, as true to the church, and as deeply interested in its interests as I possibly can be; and doubtless more able. But through it all God had a people here who built of "gold, silver, and precious stones." They have been in the crucible of attestation. The fiery trial did not destroy them nor their works. They loved Christ for his sake, and they want to become like him. They loved right because it was right, and because that was the way to live. They loved the church and kingdom of God, because in it they found peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, and saw by faith the church "without spot or wrinkle" in the presence of the great "Shepherd of the sheep." As the work moves on under brighter skies and fairer prospects we congratulate those people who by precept and example have stood true to God and his glorious work. Under the meritorious philosophy of the Reorganization, where its principles live enshrined in the hearts and lives of its people will be found a force and power that will astonish the world before the end of the "hastening time." In bonds,

F. M. COOPER.

DERBY, Ind., Sept. 12.

Editors Herald.—I reached this place the 4th of the present month, after an extended trip throughout this district. I have visited all the branches except two, and find the work in moderate condition. The local authorities of the church are striving to advance the cause in their respective localities with commendable zeal. The missionary force is pushing the work in new fields, so the church is becoming pretty well advertised in many places where a few years ago it was unknown. The greater number of those under the direction of General Conference are being employed this year in the Wabash Valley, altogether in new fields, consequently there will not be much of an increase to the church this year in this part of our field.

As a rule, we have been well received by "those without as well as those within," and many friends have been made. I felt quite sanguine of good results from our labors in Oakland City, and still think some there will accept the gospel. I find sometimes that we retard the work by neglecting to follow the divine rules given us, in our desire to swell the membership of the church. There has not been the proper discrimination had in some places. The rule given in Doctrine and Covenants section 42:20, if observed, would save us a great deal of trouble, and the church reproach and disgrace. The idea that the "kingdom of heaven gathers of all kinds" is no excuse to anyone to not observe the foregoing rule.

I began a protracted effort here the 7th, which has increased in interest, resulting in the baptism of three, heads of families, whom

I think will honor their profession. There are quite a number of others at this place who are believers, some of whom may join us ere the close, which will be on Friday evening. I baptized one at the Washington branch the 1st of August. The branch there is in better condition than heretofore, still there is room for improvement, and we trust it will be made. I go from here to the Pleasant Ridge branch, which was disorganized last conference, to try to effect a reorganization. There are about thirty members there and it seems unnatural to leave them in their present condition. While there has been no phenomenal increase in our field this year, still we are gaining, and with this thought we feel content to toil on, feeling confident that at no distant day many more will be gathered into the fold of Christ, from efforts now being made.

In the field,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.—No. 5.

BY T. W. WILLIAMS.

PROPOSITION twelve:—

“God gives freely to those who ask.” (James 1:5; Luke 11:10.) “God withholds his blessings and prevents their reception.”

He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart, that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.—John 12:40.

There is nothing here to show that God “withholds his blessings” or “prevents their reception.” If anything, it proves the opposite. You will notice two personal pronouns in this connection; one in the third person, the other in the first. Now if the antecedent of he is God, who is the person spoken of as I? The one called he did the blinding, while I converted and healed them. I presume you would have us believe that this kind friend called I, who came along and helped them, was Satan? God was the person speaking here, consequently the antecedent of he was some one else. I find no passage in Isaiah as it is thus quoted by John. There is but one passage that bears any resemblance, and that is found in the sixth chapter, ninth to eleventh verses, and fully sustains my position. Here were a people who had ruthlessly spurned the truth and blessings which God had desired to give them, having trampled under foot his statutes and precepts; and so long had they pursued this course that their probation had ended. God's Spirit had ceased to strive with them; God gave them every opportunity and they as frequently refused his terms. But although this was the case, God gave them one more chance by sending Isaiah, and commands him to tell the people:—

Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not.

The Lord here depicted the condition of these people. They heard, but could not yield themselves to comprehend the truth; they saw naturally, but would not enter in and see the truth and light which God sent. Because of their perverseness God did not wish to force his blessings upon them nor compel them to do that which would bring blessings, but he acts in harmony with the statement made by the Savior:—

He that continueth to refuse to receive, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

God withdraws all light, and punishes them by permitting darkness to come upon them. The only point that can be made here is that God withholds his blessings only when men will not receive them or will not put themselves in a position to receive. The infidels can criticise God who has all power for not blessing men, even when they do not want it, or because he does not force a blessing against their will; and still they are loud in their boasts of freedom. Ere you find fault with Israel's God because he does not force things upon men, go and learn a lesson of freedom from him; for you here tacitly admit that God is more liberal with humanity than you would have him be. I believe this, too, and I would very much lament the event of you having sovereign power, for if you found men willful and disobedient, and refusing to accept at your hand what you thought to be good, I fear you would send them to hell much quicker than God may send you. Even now if a good upright citizen who is a minister or churchman differs from you, you immediately commence the hue and cry of “fanatic,” “fool,” etc. Now be honest; if you had the power would you not relegate every minister to Dante's inferno? You think your philosophy is correct and that you have something that is good for humanity, and possessing the power, you would force it upon men. How much of our Bible would be read in the public schools if infidels had the power to suppress, although the majority of the people wanted it read? If you had the power would you recognize the wishes of the majority of the people and preserve the first day of the week as a day of worship? How much of our church property could go untaxed if you had the power to tax it, although the wishes of the majority were against you? “O but,” say you, “it is unjust to leave church property untaxed, and we would tax it because the principle is true.” If this is your principle, then never find fault with God; for while having that which is good for man, he never encroaches upon his agency, but permits him to choose for himself. While I also think it unjust that the millions of dollars invested in church property should be exempted from taxation, still until such times as the people through their representatives say it shall be otherwise, I shall submit graciously to the wish of the majority and not accuse them of being robbers either.

For it was of the Lord to harden their hearts, that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favor.—Josh. 11:20.

The Inspired Translation says:—

For it was of the Lord to destroy them utterly, because they hardened their hearts, that they should come against Israel in battle.

It was the people that hardened their hearts, not God.

O Lord, why has thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our heart.—Isaiah 63:17.

The Inspired Translation gives it:—

O Lord, why hast thou suffered us to err from thy ways; to harden our heart from thy fear.

Proposition thirteen:—

“God is to be found by those who seek him”:—

Everyone that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth.—Matt. 7:8.

Those that seek me early shall find me.—Prov. 8:17.

The first quotation is a conditional promise and was made by Christ in the sermon on the mount; and coupled with other passages of Scripture the reader readily infers that to receive one must ask God aright. Solomon's promise is conditional. Those who seek God early shall find him, and not those who procrastinate until misfortune overtakes them, and who then turn to him. Those who love God and seek him early shall find him, while those who do not love God shall not find him at any time.

God is not to be found by those who seek him.

Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but shall not find me.—Prov. 1:28.

The wise man gives a reason for God thus refusing to hear:—

Because I have called, and ye refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded; but ye have set at naught all my counsel, and would none of my reproof. . . . Then shall they call upon me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me: for that they hated knowledge, and did not choose the fear of the Lord; they would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof. Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices. . . . But whose hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely, and shall be quiet from fear of evil.—Prov. 1:24-33.

The infidel, I suppose, is offended at God because he promises blessings to those who do his will and will hear them, when they cry, but will have nothing to do with those who call upon him and do not do as he says. Of course it leaves you out in the cold, but you should not find fault, for it is the result of your own choosing. Repent and do the things of God, and then when you call he will answer.

And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear.—Isaiah 1: 15.

This passage was given under precisely similar conditions to the previous one. The Lord says:—

Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah. . . . Bring no more vain oblations. . . . When ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood. . . . Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord. . . . If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the good of the land: but if ye refuse and rebel, ye shall be devoured with the sword.—Isa. 1: 10-20.

Thus any man can find God who seeks him aright.

They cried, but there was none to save them; even unto the Lord, but he answered them not.—Ps. 18: 41.

In this same Psalm David said:—

With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful; with an upright man thou wilt show thyself upright; with the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward. For thou wilt save the afflicted people; but wilt bring down high looks.

This Psalm was written by David in praise to God for preserving him from his enemies, especially from Saul. Why did not God hear Saul when he cried unto him? Because he kept not the statutes of God.

Proposition fourteen:—

“God is peaceful.” (Romans 15: 33; 1 Corinthians 14: 33.)

“God is warlike”:—

“The Lord is a man of war.—Ex. 15: 3.”

The Lord is a God of peace, and his every effort is to have men secure peace; but when men deliberately refuse to entertain peace, as in the case of Pharaoh and his host, who had followed God's favored children and persecuted them, and would have exterminated them, God stood out upon the side of those who were suing for peace, and preserved them. To illustrate: during the late rebellion the South seceded from the North; they were insurgents, yea rebels, and were not willing to live in peace. The North was desirous of peace: in fact, they could be called a peaceable people; but when the direct issue came it was to their interests and the interests of peace for them to defend in war and fight to sustain the principles which brought peace to them. So with God; if ever he bestowed his aid upon one of two contending forces it was always in the interests of those who were suing for their rights and peace, save when God permitted them to be punished for their iniquities. This was the case in all of Israel's wanderings from Egypt to Canaan, and afterwards.

The Lord of hosts is his name.—Isa. 51: 15.

I see nothing wrong in this. Host means a multitude, and the term does not necessarily apply to an army, but to any host of people. Please examine a dictionary.

Blessed be the Lord my strength, which teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight.—Ps. 144: 1.

I can only take this in the light that David had been preserved by the power of God, and that when leading Israel against their enemies they had been victorious, and David knew full well that God had helped him. His encounter with Goliath was a well-attested case of God's interposition. David knew wherein his power lay in this victory, hence he could say, he “teacheth my hands to war;” for God guided his arm with unerring accuracy in the hurling of the pebble which slew Israel's enemy. We do not gather from this that God delighted in war, but rather that when war was forced upon his people, or when it became necessary to punish a people, he assisted those who were on the side of right; said assistance being of that character that it could rightly be termed instructive; for God never helped a man but what he “taught” him something. It is only in this sense that we can understand this language of David. Taken in any other sense it would be contrary to the character and nature of God.

There is not a passage from Genesis to Revelation which sustains the idea that God fostered and encouraged war, unless it was in defense of the oppressed, or in meting out just retribution to the wicked. I admit that God assisted in war when the nation's interests were in peril, but I cannot say as much for a few of the leading lights of the infidel world, who staid at home in 1861 when our nation called for volunteers.

Proposition fifteen:—

“God is kind, merciful, and good”:—

The Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.—James 5: 11.

For he doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men.—Lam. 3: 33.

For his mercy endureth forever.—1 Chron. 16: 34.

We will here remind the reader that mercy cannot rob justice, and that God's mercy is as freely and graciously given now, under certain conditions, as it was four thousand years ago.

I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God.—Ezek. 18: 32.

The Lord is good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works.—Ps. 145: 9.

God never brings anything upon man but what is for his good. All of God's punishments are reformatory, from earthly deprivations and affliction to confinement in the prison house. In every instance man will be released therefrom as soon as the reformation is fully realized. Those who will not reform, but who love evil better than right, will remain with the Devil and his angels.

Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.—1 Tim. 2: 4.

The Inspired translation says:—

Who is willing to have all men to be saved, etc.

God is love.—1 John 4: 16.

Good and upright is the Lord.—Ps. 25: 8.

“God is cruel, unmerciful, destructive, and ferocious”:—

I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy, but destroy them.—Jer. 13: 14.

Why? Let the prophet answer:—

This evil people, which refuse to hear my words, which walk in the imagination of their heart, and walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them, shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing. . . . I have seen thine adulteries, and thy neighings, the lewdness of thy whoredom, and thine abominations on the hills in the fields. Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem.

Here was a people who had become so steeped in iniquity that God in his mercy comes to the rescue and takes away their agency by cutting them off from the land of the living so they should not commit greater evil. God, being the author and giver of life, possesses the power to take it and is warranted in demanding it when it ceases entirely to subserve the interests that God intended it should. There also comes a time when agency is injurious to man; and when God sees such, he takes it away. There was nothing cruel in God giving them the opportunity to learn obedience by the things they suffered. To illustrate: when a man becomes so obdurate that he will with impunity trample upon the rights of others as well as injuring self, the government through her representatives calls a halt, takes away his agency (privileges), and punishes him that he may learn obedience from suffering. God does likewise.

And thou shalt consume all the people which the Lord thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity upon them.—Deut. 7: 16.

(See explanation of previous passage.)

Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling.—1 Sam. 15: 2, 3.

Here is the reason:—

Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I remember that which Amalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came came up from Egypt.

In reading the sixth verse you will see where the Kenites, who had not done this wrong, were preserved and permitted to separate from the Amalekites before the destruction.

Because they had looked into the ark of the Lord, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men.—1 Sam. 6: 19.

This was a punishment of God for a willful breaking of his law.

The Lord thy God is a consuming fire.—Deut. 4: 24.

He consumes evil and destroys the instruments thereof as well as its results, and when man becomes so full of sin and evil that he is wholly corrupt and does nothing good, then God takes him away for his own good and the good of humanity. His privileges for committing sin are cut off, and he does not continue to injure others and pile up sin against himself. In the case of infants being destroyed, God knew their surroundings and opportunities for development, and in mercy permitted them to be destroyed; for reared in adultery, idolatry, lasciviousness, and the terrible debauchery of the people here mentioned, there was little opportunity for becoming else but evil.

The Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them . . . and they died.—Josh 10:11.

The inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Joshua and the children of Israel and because of it five kings and their armies combined went up and attacked Gibeon, and Joshua and his people came to the rescue, they being on the defensive; but so powerful were the combined armies of the enemy that they needed help, and God gave it by casting down great stones from heaven upon them.

Proposition sixteen:—

“God’s anger is slow, and endures but for a moment”:—

The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.—Ps. 103:8.

His anger endureth but a moment.—Ps. 30:5.

The Inspired Translation renders this passage:—

For his anger kindleth against the wicked; they repent, and in a moment it is turned away, and they are in his favor, and he giveth them life.

God is slow to anger, but the length of its duration is dependent upon conditions. It must be understood, however, that God does not get “mad” as mortals do, neither do his angry passions rise. Whenever God’s anger is spoken of it means a righteous indignation, such as any judge of our courts would manifest against a culprit guilty of a heinous crime. It is not presumed that he flies into a rage, but his abhorrence of sin causes him to become offended and he permits justice to operate; but if they repent, then his anger or censure ceases in a moment; a thing a furious, angry being cannot do.

“God’s anger is fierce, frequent and endures long.”

And the Lord’s anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years until all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the Lord, was consumed.—Numbers 32:13.

There was a reason for this. That generation had continued to transgress, and they did not repent with that whole-hearted earnestness which was acceptable with God and which would effect an entire release from previous punishment. They were a perverse generation, continually needing punishment, so that the Lord did not deem them worthy to enter Canaan. Truly the Lord had been plenteous in mercy; he had been long-suffering and kind to Israel. In fact, the infidel says that God was a partial being because he showed too much mercy towards Israel at this time; but now he uses a passage which shows that he permitted justice to operate and tries to make it appear that he was not merciful. Fie on such inconsistency!

And the Lord said unto Moses, Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel.—Num. 25:4.

Here the children of Israel had been led into the whoredom and idolatry of the Moabites by certain parties, and it was but just that God should punish these parties (heads); and he commanded Moses that they should be hanged. To show you that this refers to leaders and not decapitation, I quote the fifteenth verse: “he was head over a people.” Was it not right that these leaders should be punished? If a man seduced your daughter would you urge that he be not punished?

For ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn forever.—Jer. 17:4.

Who did he have reference to? Read in same connection this passage:—

Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord. For he shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh; but shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness, in a salt land and not inhabited.—Jer. 17:5, 6.

The fire in God’s anger that was kindled would burn forever against sin wherever found. This people had become so engulfed in sin that God knew their final doom and that they would continue to reject the truth, and his anger would be against them until they accepted truth if it was for eternity. In this connection what does he say to the righteous?

Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is; for he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, etc.—Jer. 17:7, 8.

God is angry with the wicked [interpolation by translators] every day.—Ps. 7:11.

This one passage gives the lie to the whole pamphlet, for on the flyleaf it reads: “One hundred and forty-four propositions . . . each proved affirmatively and negatively by quotations from scripture, without comment;” and here you have only reached the sixteenth proposition, but have found it necessary to comment! How do you know this, “with the wicked” is an interpolation? Is it the “I say so” of some “towering God of speech and pen” whose opinion and theory is law to you? But suppose it was an interpolation, it would not alter the thought; for this is only a qualification that will have to be supplied either mentally, or written, before it could be comprehended; and as the Bible is replete with passages proving that God is not angry with the righteous, then it follows that it must be the wicked, whether he says so or not. The Inspired Translation says “with the wicked,” and as this has come by inspiration they cannot cry interpolation.

And the Lord met him, and sought to kill him.—Ex. 4:24.

In the Inspired it reads:—

The Lord was angry with Moses, and his hand was about to fall upon him, to kill him.

Moses had sinned, but through the interposition of his wife, Zipporah, God spared him, after which Moses said, “I have sinned before the Lord.”

LOGAN REUNION.

The day previous to the convening of the reunion was the day of final preparation for the event and its expected benefits. Prior to it there had been several days of hard work on the part of the committee having it in charge. The grounds had to be laid out and tent plats and streets arranged, also the tabernacle to be erected and other things made ready to receive the Saints in camp and prepare for services. On the evening before the 8th sixty-four tents were on the ground. The next day dawned upon a dry and dusty earth, no rain having fallen in or about Logan for many weeks. Before the first service several more tents were put up, and into some already erected families moved and took possession. The grounds and tent have been nicely arranged for convenience of all, both campers and visitors, and it possibly would be interesting and also instructive to have a brief description of the meeting tent as arranged.

The speakers' stand is situated at the east end, over which is the motto, "Thy word is truth." At the north side of this is the singers' platform, over which is the motto, "Sing with the Spirit." At the south of the speakers' stand are two long seats arranged for the aged people who may be dull of hearing, over which is the motto, "Age before beauty." Over the opening just inside of tent is a motto, "Enter ye in at the gates of the Lord with prayer and praise." The uprights on which the mottoes are placed and also the mottoes are neatly decorated with evergreens. Back of the platform is neatly arranged bunting of appropriate character. On the outside of the tent and near the entrance is floating the "star-spangled banner," waving invitingly to the people to come and associate with a liberty-loving people, both individually and nationally.

The first service was held at eleven o'clock on the 8th. Bro. David Chambers, chairman of the reunion committee, acting as chairman of the meeting. After singing the hymn, "Sweet the time, exceeding sweet," prayer was offered by Bro. J. W. Wight. "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah," was then sung, and the remainder of the session was occupied in the work of organizing. Pres. Joseph Smith was chosen to preside, with Brn. W. W. Blair and A. H. Smith as his assistants. Bro. H. A. Stebbins was chosen as secretary, and Bro. J. F. Mintun as his assistant. Also Bro. Hubert Case aided in these duties a portion of the time. Brn. S. B. Kibler and James Pearsall were selected as choristers.

The afternoon session was taken up with short speeches by those called upon, as follows: Bro. Joseph Smith spoke of the changed condition in Utah, and of the increased liberal feeling that exists among the people of the world. The spirit of investigation exists to a greater degree than ever before, and we ought to occupy accordingly. Bro. W. W. Blair spoke of the chief object we should have in view in assembling; namely, that of true and sincere worship of God. We should consecrate all our powers and abilities to the righteous service of our Creator, and be able always to act in harmony with revealed truth, because error cannot benefit anyone either in worship or in act. Bro. A. H. Smith spoke of these reunions, as being preparatory to the great Reunion, at which time all the pure and the good will meet in triumphant rejoicing. Also these church reunions bring our work before the people and they have opportunity to see that we have been grossly misrepresented and therefore are misunderstood. These gatherings in the free and open air give increased chance to investigate. In the conduct of the present gathering order and harmony should prevail and we should work individually to this end. Bro. John A. McIntosh gave a brief sketch of his experiences from the time of his accepting the work fifty-six years ago, and said that his greatest enjoyment was that of being associated with the people of God and in his old age he rejoiced still that he was numbered with them. Bro. J. W. Wight spoke of the need of educating ourselves to be contented under all circumstances, so that we may be prepared for adversity as well as for prosperity. By patiently bearing our portion of all will our joy in the Lord be increased, our hope reach out to that which is beyond, and our faith in God will cause us to endure and to make sacrifice cheerfully for the sake of the redemption of ourselves and of others by the gospel of Jesus Christ. Bro. H. A. Stebbins contrasted the situation now existing and the time when the nucleus of the Reorganized Church of Christ met June 12 and 13, 1852, in Newark, Wisconsin. That same summer he as a small boy stood in the opening among the saplings where a small band met together and agreed to cast off the claims of all the false leaders and to uphold the rightful succession in the presidency of the church, as God had appointed. In 1863 he became identified with it and had watched its growth with deepest interest. For over twenty years he had recorded the names, and he realized the change that had taken place both in the numbers and in the influence of the church. Our individual efforts should be for faithfulness in every obligation towards God and man, for upon this depends our reward. Bro. A. S. Cochran gave a feeling testimony as to his experiences in the work and spoke of the marvelous effect that the Spirit of God has upon the individual, in converting, chastening, and spiritualizing the being of man, making him humble, contrite, and holy, inasmuch as he is led and taught by it. Bro. J. F. Mintun spoke of his last year's experience, and of its beneficial results. That they had been such as to increase his knowledge that there is a God and that his Redeemer lives. All these brethren closed their remarks with heartfelt desires and prayers that the blessings of God may inspire all the services of this reunion.

At the evening service the following appointments of brethren as a police force and as ushers were made: Police: George N. Derry as chief, H. L. Try, W. W. Baker, A. A. Baker, John Shearer, George Ballentyne, D. A. Hutchings, James Diggle, Harvy Parker, Neslin Smith, Charles Davis, Thomas Jarred, Robert Chambers, George Kennedy, William Heistane, and George Keairns. Ushers: Robert Chambers and Frank Leadingham.

The first regular sermon of the reunion was by Bro. J. W. Wight, from the words, "The law of the Lord is perfect" (Ps. 19: 7, 8), and "Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law" (1 John 3: 4). Because of his transgression man now has the evil condition that he is now in, and only by returning to and keeping the law of God can he return to his presence, from which he fell. Throughout all the universe law is found to govern all things, animate and inanimate. Only by law can anything exist or thrive. Set aside law and chaos results. So any law brought into being is null and void unless it is executed and its penalties enforced. Our every act and motion is in keeping with the edicts of law. So also salvation by Christ is awarded to men by obedience to law, and only in that way. The word is, "If any man will do his will." In all his teachings Christ emphasized the necessity of obedience to law. If there is a perfect law it must have emanated from a perfect being. Every law has fundamental principles, and so with the law of God. Take away any one of these, or more, then the law of God would lack that much of perfection. We argue that whatever was necessary to make the law of the gospel a perfect one anciently is also necessary to-day to make it perfect. We cannot leave out a single principle without making the gospel that much imperfect and so far will it be ineffectual to bring man to perfection. President Joseph Smith followed with a few remarks upon conduct and deportment, especially among those joyous and happy in their youth and in their association with each other. He spoke also of the need of care as to diet that sickness may not be caused while we are thus camped.

Sunday, Sept. 9.—At eight o'clock the Saints convened for prayer. A very good time was had, although the longed for rain began to fall, and during the latter part of the services few of the speakers could be heard except by those nearest them. The rain increased and fell heavily during the sermon that followed, effectually laying the dust and proving a great blessing, for which all felt thankful to the Lord. The preaching was preceded by the use of hymns 1063 and 188. Bro. Joseph Smith spoke of the promise that God made to Abraham, that in his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed. Jesus Christ was the special fulfillment of that covenant so far as the seed spoken of is concerned. The rest of the promise will have fulfillment when the earth is prepared as an inheritance for Abraham and his posterity. To Isaac and Jacob were the promises repeated that had been given to their Father Abraham, and Jacob declared that until Shiloh should come the scepter of power should not depart from Judah. All are agreed that Jesus Christ was the Shiloh thus foretold. Nearly two thousand years later Simeon received the word of the Lord that he should not die till his eyes had seen the Messiah, and this was fulfilled unto his joy and then he was willing to depart. But unless we can trace a legal succession of authority from the Shiloh to our time, such as will make the promise to Abraham available to us, how shall we become adopted into the commonwealth of Israel? The speaker discussed the subject of so-called apostolic succession, presenting argument and history to the effect that such succession has not been proven by anyone and that it cannot be proven. Hence whatever power was needful to bring the people into that covenant anciently must come to those of latter times in some other way. We believe that it has come by restoration from heaven, and that in Revelation 14: 6 and 7 is found the solution as to how it was to be restored. Sixty years ago Joseph Smith and his compeers declared that it had been so restored, for some reason they were wise enough to present the very principles and doctrines that Jesus Christ taught while he was on earth. They took up and defended the very things that Peter, and John, and Paul, and Silas gave their lives for; and, as their successors, we are teaching the same.

At half past two o'clock, Bro. H. A. Stebbins spoke from the words of Peter, "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be made partakers of the divine nature." In our humanity, we are by birth imperfect, the inheritors of the human nature of our parents, as they also were inheritors of the faulty nature of those before them. Hence neither they nor we are fitted to return to that society and condition from which the first ones were shut out. Therefore it becomes needful that we have divine aid that we may return to the station that God intended and still intends for man to occupy. Man was made as the crowning piece of God's workmanship, and was intended to be superior and to have dominion instead of being subject to all powers of destruction and death until he is lost from the earth and has no inheritance therein. Christ promised the Holy Spirit as the regenerative power, it "shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Also he said, "Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you." Paul said, "After that ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." On the day of Pentecost Peter especially presented that after the baptism for the remission of sins would be given "the promise" which was made to all in every age who would obey and accept it. By this power then, were men to be "made partakers of the divine nature," as Peter wrote of. The speaker quoted various passages to show the purpose and office work of the Holy Spirit. It is more than a joy or a good feeling towards God and man. It is the power of a new life, to bring mankind back to stand once more in the presence of God as accepted sons and daughters, as really "partakers of the divine nature," and heirs with Christ of an eternal inheritance.

In the evening Bro. Alexander H. Smith read the fourth chapter of Ephesians and used for a text the words of Christ, "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness." The most of us have accepted Christ through education. According to it have we learned about him. To learn more of him we should enter into a calm consideration of the evidences of Jesus Christ as the author of eternal salvation. It is written that to really know him is life everlasting. Among men he has been spoken of as one of the wisest of philosophers, as one of the leading lights of the world in great moral truths, even by those who deny his divine origin. By others he has been called a great medium. By others he is said to have been altogether an impostor. And the question for us all is, How have we accepted him? In the eighteenth chapter of Deuteronomy we read a prophecy of the coming Savior, with the declaration that "unto him ye shall hearken." In accordance with this when Christ came he said that he then judged no man, but that the words he spoke should judge man at the last day, because whatsoever he taught was that which God commanded him to speak. The prophet declared that a virgin should bear a son and he should be called Immanuel. Also another said that the child should come upon whom should rest the government. The Jew looked for him as a political deliverer solely and they rejected Jesus because he did not come to them as such. Angels declared his birth and sang of him as the Son of God, the Savior of the world. At the age of twelve years he began to do his Father's work. And when he came to the age of manhood and was free for himself he went to John the Baptist and asked for the rite of baptism. From that time he began both to teach and preach the gospel law, the perfect way of life.

Monday, September 10.—At the morning social meeting seven prayers were offered and eighteen spoke in testimony of the work. It was a season of comfort and peace.

At the forenoon preaching service Bro. W. Blair read the seventeenth of Acts, and said: We claim that the work we represent is of God, and that our doctrine originated with him. He is not far from any of us, for we are his offspring. Paul shows in the chapter read that God designed that man should dwell upon the face of all the earth, and we believe that he sent a people to dwell in America as a portion of the earth. Evidences are numerous that highly enlightened and civilized peoples did live upon this continent anciently, and the Book of Mormon comes as a record of the dealings of God with them in ages past. And that book confirms the teachings of the Bible as to Jesus Christ being the Savior of the race. Those people sought after God and they found him, for he is no respecter of persons. The book teaches very clearly the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, through the atoning work of Jesus Christ. The world is much divided as to its belief in the future state of man, but the Book of Mormon agrees with the Bible and makes its teachings still clearer and plainer upon the important question of man's future condition both in the spirit state and in the resurrection.

In the afternoon Bro. J. F. Mintun preached the funeral sermon of Elsie, child of Bro. John and Sr. Mary Davis. His text was Romans 8: 23, 24, and especially the words, "We are saved by hope." To the human vision there is nothing hopeful in death. It is separation and loss that seems irreparable. But there is to come life in the place of death now present, and a reuniting that will be eternal. And a living faith in the power of God unto this end is the assurance that our hope shall be realized in the due time of the Lord. As Christ rose from the dead we have good reasons for our hope. Indeed, if he did not rise then we have no hope at all. But with this hope we can endure the great trial of separation. Our hope gives us patience and we are saved from despair. The patriarchs and prophets of old were comforted by this hope and faith in God and his promises. One blessed thought of the children is that "of such is the kingdom of heaven," as Christ assures us in his word. The speaker said many other good and comforting things about this interesting and vital subject.

In the evening hour Bro. Joseph Luff was the speaker. Christ sent his ministers to baptize people in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and he said, "He that heareth you heareth me," and "him that sent me." He also declared that in his ministry his Father commanded him as to what he should say and teach. Our belief is that wherever God and Christ were located eight hundred years ago they are located to-day, as to the plan of redemption and the methods of carrying it into effect. Jesus said that except a man be born of water as well as of the Spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of God, yet the educated and refined ministers of the churches to-day say that he can enter. Here is the contradiction existing between Christ and those who claim to be his ministers to-day. He said to Satan, "It is written." So we say of the words of Christ and his inspired servants of old, "It is written." We have no apologies to offer for what they declared, because we are to teach the truth as we find it and there let it rest. So of the laying on of hands as a gospel ordinance taught in the Bible. By it the grandest blessings were conferred in ancient times, and when it ceased to be practiced the great blessings of God ceased to be given. At this session Brn. J. W. Wight, T. W. Williams, J. S. Roth, D. K. Dodson, D. M. Rudd, and W. N. Robinson were appointed to attend to administering to the sick during the reunion, at a tent separate from the place of general meeting.

Tuesday, September 11.—The usual prayer and testimony meeting was held in the morning. After remarks by Bro. Derry nine prayers were offered and twenty-four spoke in testimony and thanksgiving.

The morning sermon was by Bro. T. W. Williams. The text used was, "Our gospel came not unto you in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance;" and the theme was "the gospel." In reply to the question, What is the gospel? Some say it is the story of the cross; others that it is the New Testament scriptures. But the New Testament is only the record of it, not the thing itself. Is itself composed of certain principles, accompanied by authority to administer its ordinances. The speaker briefly sketched the principles of faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands, showing that all are necessary to the completeness of that which God and Christ ordained as the plan of salvation. We claim that this system has been restored to the earth in this generation with the authority to administer for God, that men and women may obtain like salvation with those of olden time.

The afternoon sermon by Bro. Joseph Smith was upon "Succession." He reviewed the claims of the Roman Catholic Church and those of the Church of England as to the authority in acting for God; also spoke of the churches arising from the reformation and of the foundation of Methodism and the Baptist organization in America, showing that not one of them could trace a line of authority by succession from Christ, or John, or the apostles. He gave a sketch of the work of Alexander Campbell, and then of the origin of the Church of Christ by direct revelation and angelic ministration in 1823 to 1830. Also gave leading points in the history of the church until his fathers' death, and of Brigham Young's leadership into evil doctrines, following with the rise of the Reorganized Church and our present position and work.

At the evening service the subject of the "true foundation" was discussed by Bro. J. R. Lambert. The texts used were 1 Corinthians 3: 11; Hebrews 13: 8, and Matthew 4: 4. He said that the true foundation of our hope and faith is Jesus Christ, even as we believe the testimonies of his disciples from the beginning. Not only so, but Christ must ever have been the true foundation, for he is said to be "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," alike in his work and place in all ages as the Redeemer of the world. And God so loved the world that he gave his Son that man might be redeemed and restored unto life, the fullness of life. It is that which we seek for through Christ and his gospel. Christ is spoken of as being the chief corner stone which the builders rejected, even the head of the corner. We are assured in 1 John 5: 12 that he that hath the Son of God hath life, and in the ninth verse of John's second epistle that he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son. This necessarily involves obedience to Christ's word. In John 14: 6, he said that no man could come unto the Father but by him, because he was the way, the truth, and the life. Without Christ there is no gospel, and without the gospel there is no Christ, no Savior of the world.

Wednesday, September 12.—The social meeting was a time of happy communion with the Saints. The gathering was very large, but all the services were orderly and spiritual. The gifts of speaking in other tongues and of interpretation and of prophecy were received to edification.

At the forenoon service Bro. Alma Fyrando preached upon the subject of "Inspiration," taking for a text Job's words, "There is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." Man of himself is not wise. He may have much understanding as to earthly things, yet not have the inspiration and wisdom which is from above. In our imperfect condition we need constant aid and strength, both for our bodies and our spirits. God intends to educate us and make us as near like Christ as possible. He does this by the inspiration of his Spirit, by its promptings and guidance, and as individuals we need to receive understanding, and to walk in the light of truth, or by the true light. The church itself should be arrayed in the glory of the Lord as with a garment, as John the Revelator pictured her in the twelfth chapter. The speaker presented the subject in this line of thought and showed that we are to be renewed and modeled by the Spirit of God in order that we may inherit eternal life.

The afternoon sermon was by Bro. J. F. McDowell. It has been supposed that the Bible contains all the divine teachings that are necessary for the salvation of men, and that John obtained the last words from God that will ever be given. But those ancient men must have preached thousands of sermons by the Spirit of truth, sermons that must have been as much inspired as what we have on record in the New Testament. But we are thankful that the promise was made of God and Christ that they will reveal all necessary things for the guidance of the Church of Christ and the people of God. In agreement with this we read in the Book of Covenants, "Put your trust in that Spirit that leadeth to do good." The speaker read other passages from the same book to prove that the like blessings had by the Church of Christ in former times were also promised to his church in latter days. A promise is made on page 163 of the Book of Covenants as follows: "That which is of God is light, and he that receiveth light and continueth in God, receiveth more light." I cite these to show you the spirit and character of the revelation to the Church of Christ in these days, and that they agree with the revelations of former days.

At the evening service Bro. J. S. Roth preached upon the subject of the resurrection, using 1 Corinthians 15th chapter, Job 14th chapter, and Isaiah 26: 19. He discussed the nature of the resurrection, showing that Jesus did eat and drink after he had risen with an immortal body, and he was composed of flesh and bones. We are told in Psalms 78: 25 that the people in the wilderness did eat angels' food. In Ezekiel thirty-seventh chapter we are taught exactly how the resurrection shall take place, when the bones and flesh shall be brought together and the Spirit of God shall be put in them to cause life. The speaker also presented the evidences that there is to be both a first and a second resurrection, those in Christ to rise first and the remainder to sleep for a thousand years longer, then to rise to the general judgment.

Thursday, September 13.—The morning prayer meeting was under the direction of Brn. Geo. Needham and Arthur Baker.

The sermon that followed was by Bro. D. M. Rudd. The text was, "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you," etc. As there had been so there would yet be. There were true ones and there were false ones. He quoted Isaiah 30: 9, 10, and Jeremiah 5: 30, 31, and clearly argued the fact that when false and deceitful prophets and teachers came to Israel it was because they were desirous of such. At times they demanded false words and smooth things. From Numbers twenty-second chapter he showed Balak's desire to have his own way instead of the way of the Lord being done. So also Ahab desired Micaiah to say that which would suit him. Ahab had four hundred false ones that spoke to please him and he wished all others to do the same thing. And not only Peter spoke of false prophets and teachers, past, present, and to come, but Paul also said that after his departure such would come into the Church of Christ, which was blessed with true prophets as well as cursed with evil ones as time passed, "Teaching perverse things." God said that it was a horrible thing when the people demanded to have it so, as Jeremiah says. It is largely the case to-day that the people make choice of what the man shall teach whom they hire to preach to them. But the true minister for Christ will never be thus taken captive. There should be no compromise between truth and error. Every man should say, "Where God has spoken there will I abide." The effort was a good one.

Thursday afternoon and evening were used by the General Sunday School Association in its interests, according to resolution providing for it, as adopted at the reunion of 1893.

Friday, September 14.—At the prayer and testimony service five prayers were offered, and forty persons spoke in testimony and exhortation. Also two spoke in tongues, two interpreted, and one other spoke in prophecy.

At the morning preaching service Bro. W. W. Blair preached upon the subject of angelic ministrations. We believe it to have been the order of God to send angel messengers to minister to his church and people in gospel dispensations, according to his wisdom and the necessities of his work. To Christ came Moses and Elias, as recorded in Matthew 17th chapter. They were not resurrected men, but as spirits they were in association with Christ on earth, as related by Matthew, and later referred to by Peter in his second epistle. The angels of the Bible have no wings. By Malachi the Lord promised to send Elijah the prophet to the world, and if he has not already come he will come in due time. Enoch and his city were translated, and there is material for angelic ministrations. Matthew 27: 52, 53 says that many of the saints arose at the time of Christ's resurrection. In Acts tenth we read that God sent an angel to Cornelius to tell him what to do to be saved. Angels appeared to announce the coming births of John the Baptist and of Christ, and others sang to the shepherds of the event. Angels rolled the rock from the tomb, and others witnessed with men his ascension to heaven from the mount. Many other instances were mentioned, as well as of those yet to come to gather God's elect and the one mentioned in Revelation 14: 6 is to restore the gospel.

At half past two o'clock the sermon was by Bro. Joseph Smith, the subject being "Conditions after death." We believe that every degree of good will be rewarded hereafter, even as every class of evil will be punished according to its degree. The argument in full was to this end, showing both the justice and the mercy of God as reaching out to all his children upon earth, so that no good shall be unrewarded by him.

Eight persons were baptized at noon by Bro. J. S. Roth, who were afterwards confirmed by Brn. C. E. Butterworth and J. W. Wight.

Saturday, September 15.—At the social meeting an enjoyable time was had and many Saints were comforted.

At the preaching service Bro. J. S. Roth preached upon the subject of the judgment. He said that once he looked with dread and horror upon this theme, because of the way it was preached by the ministers who claimed to represent Christ and his gospel. But with the greater light I have now, I look upon the judgment of God as a desirable thing. We do not believe in a hell-scared Christianity, or seek to drive people to God and Christ through fear. God is just in all his acts and will be in all the judgments he shall render. In Revelation 20th chapter is presented the fact that at the day of judgment, at the time when the books will be opened, the dead shall be judged "according to their works," not simply according to their faith. In the tenth chapter of Matthew it is said that he who will give help, even a cup of cold water, to those needing it, "he shall in no wise lose his reward." So also of punishment for sin or transgression, it will be rewarded according to the measure of the deed. Paul says that we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, "that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." (2 Cor. 5:10.) In Matthew 25:32-46 is shown three classes: 1. Christ's disciples; 2. The good and benevolent; and, 3. Those who failed even to do good to the needy. This agrees with Paul's statement in 1 Corinthians 15th chapter, that there will be three glories in the resurrection, one compared with the brightness of the sun, another with the glory of the moon, and the third that of the stars.

At noon ten persons were baptized by Bro. David Chambers. They were afterwards confirmed at the tent of Bro. C. A. Beebe, under the hands of Brn. Chambers, Roth, and Stebbins.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached in the afternoon upon the "Signs of the times." He considered the moral, spiritual, political, and physical evidences that the words of the prophets are being fulfilled in our times, dwelling also somewhat upon the coming reign of Christ upon the earth and the establishment of peace, justice, and truth.

At four o'clock business was taken up, Bro. Joseph Smith presiding. The reunion committee presented the following report of finances:—

Balance on hand from 1893.....	$4 45
Received in donations.....	62 72
" from restaurant and lunch stands.....	14 85
	$82 02
Paid ministry expenses.....	$80 00
" printing and postage.....	7 55
" sundry expenses.....	28 05
Balance due committee.....	$33 58
	$115 60 $115 60

There was read a request from the Clinton district, Missouri, for the use of the tent during the El Dorado Springs reunion and for a debate at Lowry City. This request was granted.

Proceeding to consider the subject of holding a reunion in 1895 it was first decided to have one and the choosing of the place was considered. From citizens of Logan came a request that it be held in Logan again, they promising that this, or other grounds equally as good would be secured, and other advantages given for the convenience of the reunion. Also one from citizens of Dow City was read and another from Woodbine. It was moved that a committee be appointed to locate the reunion of 1895. This was discussed by Brn. J. W. Wight, C. A. Beebe, D. M. Rudd, D. K. Dodson, John Pett, Joseph Smith, and J. F. Mintun. Then being put to vote it was defeated by a vote of 171 for and 340 against the proposition. Then the following places were put in nomination: Council Bluffs, Logan, Woodbine, and Dow City. A vote being taken the result was Council Bluffs 104, Logan 210, Woodbine 120, Dow City 70. Before putting the two highest to vote Mr. Bolter, the gentleman appointed by the citizens of Logan to urge the return of the reunion to this place, arose and said:—

"We want you to come back here, for we are friends of your organization. We desire just such a people here as you are, and we make the proposition for a hundred years to come. And if by reason of the drought any of your members are not able to bear the expense of camping here next year, we will supply provisions and tents free to such. If the town succeeds in getting electric lights, as we hope to do soon, we will put them in the camp also, and will make up all other things that are needful. We also want to pay the deficiency in the account of your present committee, and will draw a check for it at once."

After Mr. Bolter's generous proposition, which was so unexpected, the vote was taken upon Logan and Woodbine, the result being an overwhelming number for Logan, only about twenty voting for Woodbine finally. On motion that the chairman appoint the committee for 1895 the appointment was made of Brn. David Chambers, Joseph Seddon, G. W. Scott, — Fallon, and C. A. Beebe.

The General Sunday School Association of the church asked that the last Thursday afternoon and evening of the reunion of 1895 be given to them for their exercises and the request was granted by vote. On motion a hearty vote of thanks was given to the citizens of Logan for their kind reception and favors. Also there was a like vote to the committee of 1894 for their faithful labors.

Brn. I. L. Rogers, J. C. Crabb, J. F. Mintun, and D. M. Rudd blessed some children at the tent of Bro. Beebe after the adjournment.

The evening sermon was preached by Bro. T. W. Williams. The secretary was not present, and as no minutes of it were supplied by the assistants, the subject matter is not given in these minutes.

Sunday, the 10th.—At half past seven o'clock the young folks held a meeting in the tent and seven prayers were offered and thirty-eight young people spoke in testimony and thanksgiving.

The regular morning social meeting was in charge of Bro. Joseph Smith.

At the preaching service Bro. Charles Derry spoke from the text, "To the law and to the testimony."—Isaiah 8:20. He examined the doctrine of the Reorganized Church of Christ, and brought evidence that its principles were according to the New Testament, the teachings of the Savior and his early disciples.

In the morning sixteen persons were baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth who were afterward confirmed by Brn. J. W. Chatburn, J. C. Crabb, T. W. Williams, and Hubert Case, and at noon eight more were baptized by Bro. Roth who were confirmed by Brn. D. Chambers, H. A. Stebbins, G. M. Scott, and J. F. Mintun.

At the afternoon meeting Bro. Joseph Smith preached upon the rise of the church under the presidency of his father and upon the various experiences through which that organization passed until the death of his father. He also briefly sketched the Reorganized Church and its position to-day.

There were at least five thousand people upon the ground and as only about fifteen hundred could sit or stand within the tent an overflow meeting was held in the open air among the trees and Bro. J. W. Wight addressed those who gathered about him. Many hundreds moved to and fro as a restless crowd who could not hear at either place but were upon curiosity bent to see what they could in the street and among the tents. Two hundred tents composed the city in these closing days. The police appointed and named early in these minutes were an efficient body of men and are to be commended for their good service all through the time of the encampment and the services.

The evening sermon was by Bro. Joseph Luff from Ecclesiastes 3:14. He was assisted by Bro. D. K. Dodson. The sermon was upon the perfectness and the thoroughness of the work of God as compared with the imperfect works of man.

After this sermon the reunion adjourned by singing, "When shall we all meet again," and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. W. W. Blair.

The results of the reunion were that forty-two persons were baptized, and that the body of the Saints that came together were greatly cheered, comforted, and strengthened by the Spirit of God and by the meetings and the association with each other. All of them seemed full of hospitality, kindness, and love, and a very cheerful and glad spirit appeared to pervade both the camp of the Saints and their hearts and lives. Friendships were renewed and strengthened, and that they might all meet again was the expressed wish of many.

BORN.

LENT.—At Sand Creek, Iowa, July 22, 1894, to Bro. Charles W. and Sr. Mary E. Lent, a daughter, and named Melissa Victoria. Blessed at home, September 16, 1894, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and Hugh N. Snively.

CLITS.—To Isaac and Sarah Clits of Emerson, Iowa, August 20, 1894, a son, and named Isaac Willard. Blessed August 31 by Elder Henry Kemp.

EVANS.—To Bro. David and Mrs. Elizabeth Evans, at Bevier, Missouri, May 20, 1893, a daughter, and named Mabel. Blessed September 13, 1894, by Elders J. A. Tanner and J. T. Williams.

DIED.

WILLIAMS.—Bro. James Williams was born March 16, 1816, at North Ferriby, Yorkshire, England. He united with the church May 5, 1878, being baptized by Elder Robt. Davis at Lexington, Michigan. Died September 14, 1894. Funeral sermon at his residence the 16th by Priest P. W. Surbrook. He was a good, faithful member, and died in the faith. He leaves a wife and three grandchildren.

COY.—At Plain City, Utah, September 8, 1894, Sr. Maria A. Coy. Sr. Coy was born November 30, 1878. Baptized by Bro. R. J. Anthony. She had been ailing for some time, but not seriously until about one week before her death, when she went in bathing, took cold, and soon succumbed to the grim monster. The Mormon Bishop kindly gave the use of the Mormon church in Plain City for the funeral services, and the sermon was preached by Elder Hyrum O. Smith to a very large congregation of apparently deeply interested listeners. She left many friends and relatives to mourn her early departure. May she have a glorious resurrection.

PONTIUS.—Sr. Sarah Pontius was born September 27, 1871, at Plympton, Lambton county, Ontario. Was baptized by Elder Robert Davis, July 15, 1892, near Coleman, Michigan. Died at her home at Coleman, Michigan, September 12, 1894. She leaves a husband, a babe, two sisters, and one brother. Funeral in Saints' church; sermon by Elder F. M. Cooper to a large audience.

KNIGHT.—Mary E. H. Knight died August 18, 1894, at the residence of her youngest daughter, Sr. J. F. Mintun, in Magnolia, Iowa, after a severe illness of about ten months, most of which time she was confined to her bed. Her trust being in God she complied with the divine instructions given in James 5:14-16, and realized the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit as often as administered unto, by the servants of God, but it pleased God to prolong her sickness until in his own due time he called her home, in accordance with his decree, "It is appointed unto men once to die." Our sister became a member of the M. E. Church at the age of sixteen and so remained until September 11, 1878, when, after a thorough investigation of the doctrine and claims of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, she was baptized into the same, and realized the healing power of God in answer to the prayer of faith and compliance with the healing ordinance at three different times. At one of these times she was given up to die; but God in his mercy restored her to health. Her gratitude to God was manifest in her faithfulness to his cause, and in return for her integrity of heart God gave to her many manifestations of his love by vision and other evidences of his divine care, instructing her that his purpose in permitting her to suffer was her purification and ultimate salvation. This enabled her to bear with patience her lot and wait in confidence the appointed time till her change came. During one of these visitations she was permitted to hear angelic voices and join in spirit in the glad refrain, "Joyfully, joyfully will I go home." Thus her hope was fixed as an anchor beyond the veil. Although her sufferings were great, almost to the last, yet she retained her consciousness until her voice was hushed in death. She leaves two sons, two daughters, and thirteen grandchildren besides many friends who will mourn her departure and miss her presence; but, we trust, will remember her noble example of womanhood and Christlike life. Funeral sermon preached by Elder C. Derry, assisted by Elder A. M. Fyrando.

Thirteen persons have been indicted for murder at Memphis, Tennessee, in connection with the Kerrville lynching of colored men.

In the recent State election in Arkansas about fifty counties voted against issuing licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Germany has assumed control of the Samoan Islands, according to the treaty with Samoa.

A Managua, Nicaragua, item reports a rumored agreement between Great Britain and Nicaragua, whereby the former obtains a foothold in the Mosquito territory and the opportunity to establish a naval station.

COLON, Colombia, Sept. 15.—Some arrangements to put a stop to foreign aggression in Central America is likely to be entered into, it is reported, by the governments of the several republics. The policy of Great Britain is looked upon as jeopardizing all Central American interests.

BERLIN, Sept. 15.—Memorial coins of the value of three marks, called "reconciliation thalers," have been coined in the Berlin Mint at the order of the Emperor to commemorate the reconciliation between his Majesty and the ex-chancellor.

Official cholera reports are said to be unreliable. For the week ending September 10 thirty cases and fifteen deaths are reported for the whole German Empire, while a local Breslau paper reports twenty-three cases of cholera in one day at Laurabutte and sixteen other cases in the neighborhood, of the whole of which seventeen were fatal. The frontier of Marion district, West Prussia, has been closed against Russian traffic except at two points.

BARABOO, Wis., Sept. 15.—A cyclone struck the village of Dalton, ten miles north of this city, last evening and demolished several buildings and other property. Several persons were injured. There is nothing left of a forty acres' field of corn that was cut and shocked.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The separate election amendment, as it was passed by the constitutional convention in Albany yesterday, provides for holding all elections in large cities in odd numbered years, and all State elections in even numbered years, and in order to accomplish this result the term of all State officers except assemblymen are placed at two years. The passing of this amendment clears the way for consideration of the home-rule for cities proposition, which was originally associated with it. As it stands now this proposition is a conservative, not to say mild reform. It simply provides that all special legislation affecting cities having 250,000 or more inhabitants shall be submitted to the mayors of such cities before being sent to the Governor. If the Mayor approves, the bill goes then to the Governor; if the Mayor disapproves, it must be passed anew by the Legislature by a majority vote. In all cities having less than 250,000 inhabitants, the local legislative body and the Mayor act together in approving or disapproving. So far as New York is concerned it is doubtful if much home rule would be secured through this arrangement, but some good might be accomplished through the extra attention which would thus be called to city legislation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The sweating system of industrial New York has virtually received its deathblow. Beginning to-morrow morning the system will be done away with in hundreds of shops. The coatmakers of the United Brotherhood of Tailors say they have succeeded in breaking the back of the association of employers. They declare that numerous contractors who formerly belonged to the association have withdrawn and treated with the unions individually and presented agreements which practically embody all that the unions asked for. It is just two weeks since the strike was begun by the coatmakers, and already 400 contractors have signed individually an agreement providing for ten hours of labor a day, six days a week, and weekly pay. New England is likely to take up the fight against the sweat shops.

Rio Janeiro advices report the discovery of a rebel plot backed by Imperialists to make Prince Augustus sovereign of Brazil.

The Spanish Government has instructed its American minister to begin negotiations for a new commercial treaty with the United States, to be based on the strictest reciprocity.

Russian cholera reports show hundreds of new cases during the month of August.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 15.—The steamer Falcon, Capt. Henry Bartlett, returned here this afternoon, bringing back the whole personnel of the Peary expedition of last year, except Lieutenant Peary himself, Hugh Lee, a companion, and Matthew Henson, a colored servant, all of whom remain at Bowdoin Bay for another year, hoping to accomplish the work of the expedition which is still unfulfilled. The story of the expedition is thrilling.

PARIS, Sept. 16.—The National Labor Congress met at Nantes Saturday. Jules Guesde, a Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies, presided. After considerable discussion a unanimous decision was reached against a general strike. The real purpose of the Labor party, the congress declared, is to gain possession of the authority of the State.

TANGIER, Sept., 16.—A body of Arabs armed with Winchester rifles assaulted the British and Danish Vice Consuls and a number of other Europeans at the gates of Cassablanca and stole their clothing and valuables. Anarchy prevails in the Houz districts. The rebels show respect for neither age nor sex.

PERRY, Ok., Sept. 17.—A tornado passed through the towns of Jennings and Mining to-day and left them in ruins. The storm came from the southwest and dropped upon the villages before anyone could seek cyclone cellars. Fifty homes were demolished in the two places and it is known three persons, a young woman and two children, are dead and several persons are injured. The wreck was universal and the injured were exposed to the elements and did not receive medical attention for several hours or until rescuers from adjoining towns arrived. In the town of Mining the overturned stoves set fire to the ruins and the place was entirely swept over.

Indiana and Illinois are passing laws to prevent extermination of American song birds.

Train robbers attempted to hold up an Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe train at Gorin, Scotland county, Missouri, and were captured.

BRAZIL, Ind., Sept. 19.—Coal operators here employing 2,000 miners threaten to close operations indefinitely unless the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad grant them better rates.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 18.—William Beilstein, Christopher Klutsch, and Henry Kolb, representing the better class of German coke-workers in and around New Haven, Pennsylvania, left to-day for Douglas county, Wisconsin, where they will secure farming land for thirty-five families. This is the beginning of a general exodus.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—A dispatch from Seoul dated yesterday, details a disastrous battle at Ping Yang, Corea, in which the Japanese were victors. It practically puts an end to the war in Corea for a long time to come. It is believed the Chinese position was defended by 20,000 men, of whom only a few succeeded in escaping. The Japanese victory was brilliant and complete. An immense amount of provisions, arms, ammunition, and other stores, in addition to hundreds of flags, were captured in the camps and entrenchments. It is estimated the Chinese lost 16,000 men in killed, wounded, and prisoners. Among the captured Chinese are several of the most prominent commanding officers in the Chinese troops in Corea, only a few of the Chinese commanders succeeding in escaping.

The Japanese loss was trifling, only thirty Japanese being killed and 270 wounded. Eleven Japanese officers are included in these numbers, and the loss of the Japanese was small due to the fact that the Chinese, taken by surprise, became panic-stricken, threw away their arms, and fled, thus throwing into confusion the regiments which otherwise might have been counted upon to make a better stand. The Japanese were in active pursuit of the fugitive Chinese, and as nearly all of the latter were without arms, having thrown them away during the panic, they will undoubtedly surrender as soon as the Japanese overtake them.

So far as the active operations of the Chinese in Corea are concerned the war is practically at an end for a long time to come and the main land of Corea may be said to be completely in the hands of the Japanese.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—A new treaty between the United States and Japan is to be the subject of a conference between Secretary Gresham and the new Japanese Minister, within the next few days. The proposition will come from the latter, who, it is understood, has been given specific instructions by his government to exert his best efforts toward negotiating a treaty on the lines of the one between Great Britain and Japan which was formally ratified last month.

What Japan wants is recognition by the United States as a fully civilized sovereign power. In return for the withdrawal of the objectionable system of extra-territorial jurisdiction, Japan is willing to give the United States almost anything it could reasonably demand. The Mikado wants the abolition of the United States consular courts, believing the Japanese judicial system is sufficiently perfect, or, if not, can be made so within a time to be stipulated in the treaty, which will guarantee protection and a fair trial to American citizens in Japan the same as with Japanese subjects. In the English-Japanese treaty just negotiated five years is allowed to elapse before it goes into effect. This has been done to enable Japan to perfect its judicial system.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 19.—Dispatches received here from Corea announce that the first battle between modern ships of war has taken place on the Yalu River, north of the Gulf of Corea, and both sides claim victory. The Chinese squadron, it appears, was covering the landing of a large force of troops destined to reinforce the Chinese army operating against the Japanese in Corea. According to one account the Chinese succeeded in landing the troops, but in an engagement which followed the Japanese fleet, the Chin Yu, or the Chen Yu of the Chinese fleet was sunk and the Chao Yung and the Yang Wai are reported to have been run ashore.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 19.—The confirmatory news received to-day by Secretary Gresham of the defeat of the Chinese by land and sea with the further notice that telegraphic communication between Pekin and Corea has been cut off by the Japanese, is taken here as an evidence that the Chinese forces are in a miserable plight. The small remnant of an army in Corea is cut off from reinforcement by sea as a result of the defeat of the Chinese fleet at the mouth of the Yalu River, they cannot communicate with their own government by wire and as their escape from the Korean peninsula by the northern overland route is prevented by the seizure of the mountain passes by the Japanese their surrender appears to be inevitable. The military experts believe as soon as the remaining Chinese troops in Corea have surrendered the Japanese will transport the main body of their troops by sea from Ping Yang to the Manchurian coast, and, making a rapid advance on Mukden, the Capital of the province, will soon be in position to organize a campaign on Pekin itself.

EDINBURG, Sept. 19.—In a fight which took place last evening between 100 police constables and a picket of 5,000 men about the Logan pit, near Motherwell, the miners used catapults freely. The police defended themselves with their batons and the picket was ultimately driven back with many casualties. A large force of police is preparing to leave Glasgow immediately for Motherwell.

Two thousand Boston garment makers went out on a strike, September 20, against the sweating system and its accompanying evils. It is expected that 3,500 operatives will be included in the strike and that not one clothing contractor will be able to continue business. The latter have a large amount of half finished work on hand and heavy orders ahead. A number have already made application to sign the agreement.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Sept. 20.—Notwithstanding the refusal of the management of the Zaconnet mills to promise a restoration of the old scale of wages and the announcement that for the present the mills would be operated under the reduction, nearly all the operatives there returned to work to-day. At a mass meeting of the striking weavers this morning it was decided to pay all strikers one-half of the regular strike allowance for one week longer.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 20.—Labor agents are here securing negroes in large numbers to go to the Massillon, Ohio, district to take the places of striking white miners. Three hundred negroes left to-night and 700 or 800 more are expected to follow soon. The negroes have been promised steady work and good wages and are evidently unacquainted with the situation of affairs there, as it is said serious trouble is expected at Massillon when the Southern negroes arrive.

MASSILLON, O., Sept. 20.—For the first time in seven months there are indications the Massillon miners' strike may be settled without the importation of colored labor and possibly the spilling of blood. This is due to the unexpected presence of Joseph Bishop, secretary of the State Board of Arbitration, who succeeded in getting representatives of the miners and operators together this afternoon for informal conference. The session was protracted, and while nothing definite was accomplished the ice was broken, and Mr. Bishop feels somewhat encouraged.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 20.—The Department of Labor has about completed its investigation of strikes and lockouts that have occurred since 1887, upon which it has been engaged for many months past. This report will not, however, be published before spring. It will form an exhaustive showing of all the labor troubles in the United States since the date named, the number of employees involved in each strike or lockout, the causes of the trouble, the loss in wages, etc., the investigation being covered by about thirty questions. The next subject to be investigated by the department is the influence of machinery on labor.

Greek troops have succeeded in exterminating brigands near Lamia, on the Turkish frontier.

Japanese naval commanders, who were so successful in the late naval engagement with the Chinese, were educated at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland.

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—N. Hashiguchi, Japanese Consul-General at New York, said to-day he would not be at all surprised to hear Li Hung Chang had been beheaded. "It will not be long now," continued Mr. Hashiguchi, "before his complete overthrow takes place." In regard to the war the Consul-General said: "We must occupy Pekin and permanently settle this matter. As Minister Kurino said at Washington, 'for the sake of posterity China must be taught its place.' To obtain any permanent and practical benefit from our recent victories Pekin must be captured. To reach Pekin our army must pass through Manchuria. By so doing we place the Emperor—poor, unfortunate young man—in an unsatisfactory position. There is already a feeling of discontent in China that is apt to break out any moment in a revolt against the Emperor. With Japanese troops in Manchuria and a mob of enraged Chinamen at his heels where can the Emperor flee to?"

St. Joseph, Missouri, and Des Moines, Iowa, were visited by heavy rain and windstorms on the 20th inst., which did considerable damage to property.

The Civic Federation of Chicago reports 1,500 to 2,000 professional gamblers and 5,000 habitués of gaming resorts in that city. The pay roll of one prominent gambling resort for "Bouncers," "steerers," and "pluggers" amounted to $3,298 per week, which, added to the annual rental of $10,000 for the premises, made the enormous sum of $171,496 per annum. The federation is endeavoring to suppress the evil.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A dispatch received from Rome says the Austrian and Prussian Ambassadors at the Vatican are trying to induce the Papal authorities to agree to a modus vivendi with the Quirinal. In addition, Emperor Francis Joseph is reported to have written several letters to the Pope with this end in view. Emperor William is said to be equally anxious to bring about an understanding between the Vatican and the Italian government.

TROUBLES THAT NEVER CAME.—I once heard of a lady who wrote down in order the particular fears and anxieties which were harassing her, inclosed the paper and sealed it, hoping by this kind of mechanical contrivance to be enabled in some sort to dismiss the subject from her mind. The paper was put away and forgotten. Several months later it came to light, when she found that not one of the fears therein set down had been realized, and the difficulties had all been smoothed away before she came to the time for their solution.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resumé or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc. Price.....$1 25

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshipped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent. HOW TO PREVENT CONSUMPTION.

DR. H. M. BRIGGS in the Forum: As the tubercle bacilli do not multiply outside of the living body, except under artificial conditions, and as it has been proven experimentally that the disease is due to these germs, it follows that when the disease occurs it must be produced by the same individual germs that have been thrown off by some other human being or animal suffering from tuberculosis.

A vast amount of evidence can now be adduced to show that consumption is comparatively rare among those who live an outdoor life under normal and healthy conditions. For every 1,000 deaths from all causes 103 farmers die of pulmonary tuberculosis, 108 fishermen, 121 gardeners, 122 agricultural laborers, 167 grocers, while among tailors the mortality rises to 290, and among drapers to 301. Out of every 1,000 deaths among printers and compositors 461—or nearly fifty per cent of all—result from consumption.

The duties of State, municipal, and sanitary authorities in this matter are clear and specific. Comprehensive and efficient means should at once be taken for the prevention of tuberculosis. These means should consist in educating the people as to the infectious nature of the disease; in instructing them in the means and methods to be taken to render the sputum innocuous; in the systematic employment of bacteriological examinations of the sputum for the early diagnosis of tubercular patients before they are again occupied by other people; in the establishment of public hospitals for the segregation, isolation, and treatment of the consumptive poor; in the enactment of regulations which shall forbid the employment of tubercular patients in such occupations as shall injure the welfare of others; in the adoption of sanitary regulations to prevent the dissemination of infection by means of tubercular sputum in places of assembly; in the governmental inspection of dairy cattle, and in the destruction of those found to be tubercular.

A person suffering from pulmonary consumption may be absolutely free from danger to his most intimate associates or his immediate surroundings if only the sputum is disposed of with scrupulous care. The sputum and the sputum alone in some way is the source of danger; and common sense, good sanitation, humanity, and even the requirements of simple cleanliness demand that this should be destroyed or rendered harmless. Dr. Lawrence Flick of Philadelphia, who has studied this subject carefully, has expressed the firm conviction that with our present knowledge we have it in our power to completely wipe out pulmonary tuberculosis in a single generation, and he adds: "Were half the energy which is being spent in the almost hopeless task of searching for a specific cure for tuberculosis devoted to its extermination its accomplishment would be assured."

ABILITIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES.

THE Rev. Frank M. Bristol of the First Methodist Church, Evanston, Illinois:—

"Greatness is the power and the purpose of service. It is marvelous that men should imagine themselves great when standing in the presence of Jesus Christ. Yet the unkempt, unlearned fishermen were contending as to which was greatest. Ignorant ambition also expresses itself in the superlative degree—greatest. The Master established a new standard of greatness. The old-fashioned idea which had caused so much sad history, the selfish idea of favor, position, honor, power, privilege, was repudiated, and a new doctrine was taught: 'He that is greatest among you shall be your servant.' The question now uppermost in the mind of every true man is, How may I best serve my fellows? Extraordinary abilities mean extraordinary responsibilities. Genius, education, and talent are in themselves a commission to high duties. Power to serve carries with it the obligation.

"There is no richer endowment possible to man than the power to serve the world, unless it be the purpose to serve. The Ideal Man who leads the race to its millennium, this Son of God, came not to be ministered unto, but to minister. He leads us to a new definition and a new conception of greatness in his own example. His life opens a new era; his self-sacrifice brings a new light, a new meaning to human greatness and to all our living. Henceforth the great are the wise, the good, and the helpful who, like the Divine Master, go about doing good. Our schools of learning in assisting in the development of great personal power should also inspire a high and human purpose in the students of the age. The only honest and high-minded way of getting on in the world is by helping the world to get on. A man is in reality no greater than the service he renders. This thought in professional life would elevate every profession, law, journalism, politics, medicine, the ministry. All literature, science, art, philosophy, and religion should be dominated by this idea. 'The greatest shall be your servants.'"

GREAT ECONOMIC REFORM.—"When all the money of this country is divided equally among its people," said the Socialist orator, "everybody will have enough to live on without labor. As example is better than precept, I invite this vast audience to divide with me now. Let them come forward to this platform and pile their wealth in a glittering heap. They may take half and I will take half, and we will always have the satisfaction of knowing that a great economic reform was started in this place by us."

CIVILIZATION OF AFRICA.—Cardinal Lavigerie's plan for the civilization of Africa is to be tested. The first caravan of one hundred African pioneers reared on the Algerian and Tunisian farms of the confraternities founded by him have just left Marseilles for Madagascar, where they are to settle as agricultural colonists. Another hundred will be sent as soon as these are established, and other companies are under orders to go to the Soudan, the Touareg country, the Tchad region, and the Congo, where they will spread the Catholic faith and French civilization.

PAUPERISM IN ENGLAND.—Pauperism has greatly declined in England since 1871. The proportion of child paupers has changed from 5 to 2.3 per cent, that of the able-bodied from 1.4 to .5 per cent, and that of the old paupers (above sixty) from 21.5 to 13.7 per cent of the population of the several ages. Since 1858 the paupers who are not able-bodied have decreased not only relatively but absolutely by thirty thousand.

The only way to make friends of some people is to begin by making all their enemies your own.

He serves the public best who makes it think right.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.
Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

LAMONI, IOWA, OCT. 3, 1894.

PAUL TO TIMOTHY.

STUDY to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

So wrote the aged apostle who had "finished his course," and was "ready to be offered up." He knew that upon the young and rising ministry would rest the burden of future achievements, and in addressing Timothy as a representative of that class, he gave him counsel that embodied the wisdom of his own experience and observation, together with the will of the Spirit.

By the Spirit of prophecy he had been permitted to look into the future and see the uprising of false teachers and the pernicious influence they would exert, until "sound doctrine" would not be endured; but would be substituted by fables;—that men-pleasers would occupy the place intended for those who labored for the approval of God; that iniquity would abound and the love of many would wax cold; and that apostasy in all its dread significance would sweep over the church till nothing but a lifeless "form of godliness" would remain.

His varied experience and careful observation had doubtless convinced him that the intemperate zeal, the blundering methods, and the unskillful handling of the word of truth by its would-be friends had all contributed to strengthen misunderstandings, to confirm heresies, and to breed disorders within the church. Yearning for the welfare of the cause to which he had committed his life and for which he was then a prisoner in bonds, he poured into the ears of listening Timothy a recital, a warning, and a charge which was intended to preserve him blameless amid the coming evils, and make him a means of extending the clear gospel light as far down the stream of time as his ripening life and growing influence might extend.

Paul and Timothy are both dead but the necessity for the counsel given still remains. The world has an abundance of preachers who may truthfully be termed "men-pleasers," whose chief object seems to be to secure the praise of their hearers. They think frequently upon the comments offered by members of their congregations, but seldom upon the judgment God will pass upon what they have said. The "study" they pursue is not of the character enjoined by the apostle, nor has it the same end in view. The object of it in many instances seems to be to discover the most ingenious way of dodging the obligations of Scripture, and yet preserve in preaching a show of respect for them.

Fulfilling the very prophecies they employ as texts, they teach "for doctrines the commandments of men," distorting the evident sense and significance of clear enunciations, and endeavor to save men by foolish preaching of learned fables rather than by "the foolishness of preaching" the simple and easily understood gospel. Commentaries and lexicons are employed in trying to harmonize philosophies illegitimately begotten by blending abstract texts of the Bible with sentimental twaddle or convenient expressions of popular theology. Finding the people unwilling to come up to the standard and meet the exactions of the divine code, the preacher studies to metamorphose the code and bring God down to the inclinations of men. It looks very much like an effort to convert God to man rather than man to God. Instead of trusting in God for reward for pleasing him by laboring to save men, he takes hire from men for studying to please them.

Think of a workman seeking to be "approved" of his master, yet taking the sound and valuable material his master gave him, and substituting therefor the cheap and trashy timber of some institution that was in league with his master's enemies. Imagine a builder seeking to be "approved" of the man for whom he is to construct a house, yet setting aside the plans and specifications furnished by that man, and proceeding to build according to the advice of on-lookers. The specifications require that he shall dig down six feet to the rock to begin his foundation; but he only goes two feet because somebody has told him two feet reaches the clay and that will be "just as good;" the specifications call for twelve pieces of heavy timber above the rock work and seventy pieces otherwise connected in position as shown in the plan; all of oak, but somebody has suggested that pine works easier, and would answer as well, so pine is used. The specifications call for a plunge bath on the premises but modern taste has suggested a shower bath instead, so the shower bath rigging has been substituted. In fact, wherever the plans and specifications provide for anything that differs from ordinary and popular ideas the latter are honored and the former ignored. But after imagining all this, think of expecting the man whose plans and specifications have been ignored being asked to pay for the work when done. Would not the "workman" "be ashamed" when examination was made of his work in the light of these authorized documents. He had studied to show himself approved of irresponsible and unauthorized critics, but not of him who was at last to accept or reject the work.

The creeds and churches of to-day may and do secure popular approval because constructed and revised to suit the modern idea; but how do they appear in the light of "the law and the testimony" by which alone their right to acceptance or rejection is to be determined by Him who gave the Scriptures? Let the formulators and builders answer. Is there not need for some modern Jeremiah to cry, "Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein"?

In the light of Christ's careful selection and ordination of men as apostles and seventies, and of the inspired apostle's testimony in 1 Corinthians 12: 28, and Ephesians 4: 11-13, how will the institutions now called churches of Christ appear in the day of final inspection? In the light of the divine specification that the ministry should take neither purse nor scrip, how will our salaried clergymen answer the indictment entered against them? In the light of Luke 3: 3; John 3: 5; Acts 2: 38; 22: 16; 8: 17; 19: 6, how will their record of repeated denials and denunciations of baptism and laying on of hands as ordinances requisite to salvation appear? In the blaze of Hebrews 5: 4, 5; Acts 13: 2, 3; John 15: 16; Romans 10: 14, 15; Matthew 7: 21-23, how will men who have denied revelation in their day as well as the need of direct authority from heaven to preach, yet have essayed to represent God and administer in the ordinances of his house, be able to stand? In the face of all the "scripture given by inspiration of God," so "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness" by which "the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," how many will at last, in the answering day, be able to show character and works in evidence that they did study to show themselves approved unto God as workmen that needeth not to be ashamed? How many will hail with joy the inspection that must inevitably come?

WHY BE TROUBLED?

In one of its late issues the Nauvoo, Illinois, Independent states: "Joe Smith seems to be troubled about the saloon business of Nauvoo," and advises that Mr. Smith hunt up the whisky that is "bootlegged" into Lamoni, and the amount sold by the drug stores and make it public and open the eyes of the people to what they lose by not licensing the traffic.

What Joseph Smith wrote about the saloon business was just a little collection of facts, based on an item in the Independent, advertising the habitual drunkenness of some number of the good citizens of the old town which conduct the Independent characterized as "disgusting."

Here is a bit from the Capital, newspaper of Des Moines, Iowa, which helps to emphasize our point on the liquor traffic and habit, for of course both go together.

AS TO THE MULCT.

Editor Capital:—In a recent issue of your paper appeared the following editorial:—

"The open saloon has increased the sale of liquor in this city 100 per cent. Beer drinking is well nigh universal. One could hardly believe that so great a change could take place so soon. The city has fifty licensed saloons with average sales at $100 per day each, making the sum of $5,000 per day spent for liquors, the largest part of the money coming from those who cannot afford to spend it. If business is dull in some lines, business men can lay it to the large amount of money spent for drink, that was formerly spent for something else."

That this is true may be verified by anyone who will go about the city during the day and early night. Going past any of the saloons one can see men leaning against the counters or coming out wiping their mouths. Many of them are dressed in plain working clothes and one wonders what the coming winter will have in store for their families. The crowd of loafers on the street has more than doubled. A lady can hardly walk from Walnut street down Fourth street to the railroad. Especially are the saloons thick in the region of their zealous advocate, the Register. Within a stone's throw of it at least a dozen are located.

I wonder whether when you were writing the note you thought of your editorials of last winter, demanding that the Republican party carry out its "pledge" and enact the law under which the changed condition of affairs has been brought about. Without discussing the question whether the drug store saloons were worse or better than the open saloons, it is manifest that the amount of liquor drunk is vastly greater now than then. And not only is this true, but it is also plain that the Republican party is coming more and more under the power of the liquor element. This was noticeable in the late State convention. While it was made up of good men and nominated an excellent ticket, yet there was a determined suppression of the moral tone which has been a prominent feature of Iowa Republican conventions for forty years. Neither in the speeches nor in the platform was there any allusion to this greatest question of the day. There was a studied and preconcerted avoidance of it, lest some voters should be offended. This, too, is a "change" in Republican methods.

The fifty saloons in our city are liable to pay $60,000 a year for license. Does anyone suppose they are paying it, or will pay it? And why not? Because far less than that sum will corrupt the city officials and secure the evasion of the tax. We need not expect to adopt here the methods of New York and Chicago, and escape the consequences which have followed them. The fifty saloons, with their far-reaching ramifications, will control the Republican party of Des Moines—will manage its caucuses and conventions, dictate its nominations, furnish the campaign funds, choose the policemen and judges. A like result will follow in State politics. Every Republican speaker this year will be told that he must not discuss the liquor question. The great mass of Republicans in Iowa are temperance men, and believe that prohibition is right in principle and more effective than any other law. But they dare not open their mouths, in the press, in convention, or on the stump.

In this condition of affairs, how can a Republican who believes thoroughly in the national principles of the party, and is also a temperance advocate and prohibitionist, vote the Republican State ticket this year? This is the question which I have asked myself, and have not yet found a sufficient answer. Can you, Mr. Editor, show us how this is the best thing to do?

The Catholic Church has just taken a notable step in advance by declaring that liquor sellers cannot enjoy the membership nor receive the sacraments of the church. Is it not a little humiliating to see the Republican party of Iowa put on the cast off clothes of the Catholic Church? The A. P. A. society, which is supposed to consist mostly of Republicans, might study to advantage this phase of Catholicism.

REPUBLICAN.

With the possible political bias of this communication we have no sympathy, but with the facts of an increased traffic in liquor by a law enacted by the legislature to "regulate" such traffic, we have a direct interest, and for reasons that we do not hesitate to state.

After the "amendment to the constitution" of Iowa, prohibiting the manufacture and sale in the State, prevailed at the polls by so large a majority in 1882, and was so disastrously beaten in the courts some two years after, the legislature enacted a law under which there was no general sale of intoxicants in saloons. Changes in the political elements and fields have combined to put the State under the law complained of by the Capital.

Our concern in the matter, and the reason why "Joseph Smith" is "troubled" about the saloon business in Nauvoo, are of a general nature and apply to an objection to the utter folly and wickedness men are guilty of who make drunkards of themselves, and of men who engage in the business of liquor selling thus aiding and abetting drunkard making in which they are as criminal toward the drunkard, his family, and society, as the drunkard himself is.

Drunkard making is a sin against man and God. It is a crime against society for which there is no semblance of excuse; a sin and crime which rests for possible expiation on all classes, but most heavily upon the toiler, the laborer, and wage earner, all of whom pay a tax for the benefit of the saloon element that is enormous in its amount in money, and fearful to contemplate in misery, ruin, and death physical and moral. See what a little gathering of statistics shows concerning the drinking habit, and where it most securely fastens its octopuslike arms to fatten on the people whose ruin it accomplishes:—

SLUM STATISTICS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.

Editor of the Tribune:—The Tribune lately published an abstract of the notable report of Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright in the slum districts of the large cities. No one was surprised at the statements that a large per cent of the inhabitants of the slums were illiterate and were of foreign birth. Perhaps many were surprised at the statements on the following points:—

1. The occupations of the residents of the slum districts are as varied, probably, as in the cities at large.

2. The earnings of the people living in the slum districts canvassed are quite up to the average earnings of the people generally and at large.

3. The statistics show no greater sickness prevailing in the slum districts than in other parts of the cities. If the residents of the slums have variety of occupations, have an average share of earnings and average health, how explain the poverty and existence of the slums?

Is it not explained by the one word "saloons?"

In Chicago in the city at large there was one saloon to every 212 persons, while in the slum districts there was a saloon to every 127 persons.

The beer saloon absorbs a vast per cent of the wages of labor.

Is it strange that in all the late labor excitements the saloons were the headquarters of violence? In one district of the city a body of strikers had about agreed to return to work and were notified that the saloons of the region would refuse them their beer if they gave up the strike. They seemed to fear this beer boycott so much that they then refused to take their old places.

Is it not time for some labor leader to arise and lead a strike against the saloons?

D. C. MILNER.

The HERALD has no apology to make to anyone for its attitude on the liquor habit and traffic. The worst enemy of the working men is not those whom inconsiderate thinkers style plutocrats and gold bugs; but is to be found in the direct and indirect waste of time, labor, muscle, and money which are worse than thrown away in an indulgence in the drink habit.

The laboring men of the United States pay tribute to the gods of the rum still and the brewery a larger sum than the entire earnings of the railway employees amount to. If anyone thinks this is an extravagant statement let him figure out with pen-oil and paper what it costs to maintain the traffic in the typical city of Chicago, the western seat of the working men of the United States. Make all due allowance for the amount that capital as contrasted with labor drinks, consider the amount that each 212 persons in the city at large must pay to maintain their respective saloon; and the increased amount that each 127 persons in the slum districts must pay, and then you will be better prepared to pass judgment on the HERALD'S opinion that drunkard making on both the side of the drinker and him who sells the drink is at once the most wicked and useless curse and enemy that the people of the United States have at present to deal with in solving the labor problem.

IN the Staunton, Virginia, Post of the 17th inst. Bro. O. E. Cleveland, of Annex, Virginia, defends the Saints of the Old Dominion against attacks made upon them in the town of Roman, referred to in Bro. Moler's letter in current HERALD. The brethren are alert in protecting the faith from misrepresentation and our people against injustice. The newspaper is a potent factor in informing and educating the masses, and is being so used to advantage. The church is becoming better known and understood because of the disposition manifest to give its representatives a hearing through the columns of the press. It is evidently a part of our work to do this as it is to use every legitimate and proper means of reaching and educating the masses concerning the church and its work. Because of the use of such agencies people are now being reached with the word who could hardly have been persuaded to hear through the ordinary means of pulpit efforts. We are constantly reminded that much is to be done indirectly to prepare the way for direct presentation of the word. It is true that conditions that prejudice people against us are trying, but it is required that we labor patiently and wisely to dispel the erroneous ideas existing in the popular mind, steadfastly toiling to prepare the soil for the reception of the word. Though the gospel be preached in a community, much wise labor, and patience, and kindly forbearance are necessary until the people, part or all of them, see the kingdom and obey the word. The Lord is patient and longsuffering with his people, with their lack of faith and slowness to fully obey his law. So should his people likewise be careful to win those without to recognize and comply with the principles of the gospel. While we preach the word, we are required to live it in all patience and faith, and in friendly, kindly spirit influence even the most obdurate opponents we have, if possible. It is necessary to speak pointedly and at times strongly in defense of the truth, but this can be done without unnecessary antagonism, and in such way as to commend the truth to every man's conscience in the sight of God. It is ours to attract, not to repel.

All victory and glory is brought to pass unto you through your diligence, faithfulness, and prayers of faith.

The brethren are awake and at work according to the foregoing injunction.

GOOD WORDS.

REFERENCE has been made to the Iowa State Register's report of the late Logan reunion. The report was fair in statement and friendly in tone throughout. We give below an extract from the Register's account of the closing exercises. It indicates the growing better understanding of our faith and the recognition and friendly consideration due the church membership as a moral and religious force for good in the commonwealth. Our people have deserved these good words and we believe will continue to be worthy of such commendations:—

The reunion closed last night and is now only in the memory of the people. Yesterday was the climax and the closing scenes. The day was one of the memorable events in the history of Harrison county, and of special interest from several sides. To the Saints it meant the end of their gathering here for worship and a separation of earthly friends, many of whom will not meet again in this life. The week's association here together has made many new acquaintances that will remain while life lasts. Every hour of the day was taken up in worship.

The Saints have conducted themselves so that no just censure could be brought upon them, the people of Logan have been courteous to them in all things, and the best of feeling prevails among all at the close of the meeting.

C. F. Lewis, of the State Savings Bank, is reported as saying: "I have visited Chautauqua assemblies, many religious gatherings, and all other kinds of public meetings; but for intelligence and all things of high moral character I have never seen the equal of this people." If Mr. Lewis meant this in particular as to the Saints, the Register correspondent must speak on behalf of the multitude in general. The citizens of Harrison, Pottawattamie, Crawford, and Monona counties were well represented, and give evidence of being citizens of the highest class and of more than the average intelligence. A better looking, more intelligent, well dressed, and orderly congregation could not be found than that which was assembled here on Sunday, being made up of citizens of this and surrounding vicinity.—Iowa State Register, September 16.

THE Hantsport, Nova Scotia, Advance for September 6 thus notices a lecture delivered by Bro. H. J. Davison.

Elder H. J. Davison of Lockhartville lectured in the hall at that place on Thursday evening last, subject, "The present, past, and future of the Jews." The lecturer dealt with his subject in a very interesting and able manner, showing that he had thought deeply on the matter. His arguments were clearly and logically wrought out. His proofs for the divinity of the Bible would seem to be invincible. The lecturer was aided by a mammoth chart that enabled the matter to be put so plainly that a child could easily understand it. The attendance was good, the hall being filled. Mr. Davison has promised to favor Hantsport in the near future.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. T. J. MARTIN wrote from Detroit, Minnesota, the 21st ult.:—

I held a debate at Clitherall with a Mr. St. Pierre, on the Book of Mormon not being of divine origin, and won a victory.

Bro. C. H. Burr wrote from Williams Bay, Wisconsin, the 23d ult., as follows:—

The work is onward here; two more baptized last Sunday.

Bro. Burr sends names of new members for sample copies of the HERALD.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Elmira, Michigan, September 24:—

Bro. George Washburn baptized twelve here yesterday, residents of the country four and five miles from this place; all apparently fine people. There seems to be about that many more almost ready, some of whom we think will obey soon. Many hard things are said about us and the church. It comes chiefly from the religious element. We are trying to stand by the work, and face the wicked in their corrupt and slanderous work. Truth is gaining ground.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly wrote from Derby, Indiana, September 24:—

Just closed an interesting series of meetings at Lilly Dale, Perry county. Our congregations increased from the beginning. I baptized one while there and reorganized the branch. It will be known in the future as the Lilly Dale branch, the name being changed to that of the post office. Many are believing there. Prospects for the future of the branch are good. Left the Saints rejoicing. I am on my way to Buckeye, thence to conference.

Bro. F. H. Brooks is doing well in the field. He wrote from Hillman, Michigan, the 22d ult., as follows:—

The work is moving on here. I baptized eleven more last Sunday, and more will follow soon. This makes nineteen I have baptized here in two weeks. Bro. James Davis baptized four at Fairview. He was ordained to the office of priest at our June conference and is taking right hold of the gospel plow, as every man ought to. I am striving to do all I can for the work.

Bro. I. M. Smith, writing from Knox, Indiana, September 26, of the coming second debate between Bro. L. Scott and Clark Braden, says:—

Bro. Scott and Clark Braden met last evening and agreed upon propositions. Bro. Scott affirms the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, and that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, as the first and third propositions. Mr. Braden affirms that the Disciple Church is in harmony with the teaching of the Bible, and the canon of Scripture full and complete, as the second and fourth. The discussion lasts two weeks—three evenings to each proposition. This of course is not time enough, but our conference at Coldwater is to convene October 13, Bro. Scott's debate in Missouri is to commence the 16th, and we were therefore compelled to cut it short.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Elmira, Michigan, September 27:—

I made a mistake in counting the number baptized by Bro. Geo. Washburn last Sunday. It was eleven instead of twelve, and on yesterday he baptized four more, twenty-one that Bro. George has baptized within the last three weeks. So goes the good work. I will leave here in a few days for South Boardman and other points, intending to be at the Eastern and Northern Michigan district conferences.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Macon, Missouri, Republican in its issue of the 14th inst. commends the preaching of Bro. Joseph Tanner of Bevier, "as a unique and powerful address in which he dealt Calvinism and the dogmas of popular theology some sledge hammer blows." The numerous press notices of our brethren's labors manifest the growing disposition to recognize us as a body and indicate good for the cause.

Bro. A. S. Cochran will be present at the coming Lowry City, Missouri, reunion, where he will have on sale a full line of church books, pamphlets, Sunday school supplies, etc., and receive subscriptions and remittances for the HERALD.

Agents and housekeepers will be interested in the card of Bro. A. N. Hoxie, on HERALD cover, of "Hoxie's Instant Luster." It is a superior polish, excelling those in ordinary use, for silverware, glassware, kitchen utensils, etc. See card of announcement and request for agents on second page of cover.

Letters are received from Bro. E. W. Nunley, Cook's Point, Texas, September 21; and from Bro. J. A. Amereson, Greggville, Alabama, the 22d. A small branch exists at Greggville.

By letter from Bro. Francis C. Smith dated Wexford, Michigan, the 12th inst., we learn that he is pushing the work into new neighborhoods, encountering and surmounting the usual opposition of zealous opposers. He reports Bro. Robert Davis actively engaged in missionary labor at Kingsley and other points. Prospects fair in that part of the State.

Bro. John Erter, Antwerp, Ohio, reports the Adventist brethren as anxious for a discussion of the mortal soul question with some Latter Day Saint representative.

We acknowledge receipt of the Toronto, Ontario, Advocate, of August 9, sent us by some of the brethren.

Bro. Heman C. Smith left Lamoni on Saturday the 29th ult. for the Southern mission, after a brief visit at home.

Bro. E. B. Morgan of Lucas, Iowa, visited Lamoni during the week of the 24th ult. He may enter upon active missionary labor at an early day.

Bro. F. M. Weld, who has been laboring in the Galland's Grove district, arrived at his home, Lamoni, on Tuesday, the 25th ult.

Bishop E. L. Kelley went to Kansas City on Thursday, the 27th. Bro. Kelley's absence in California covered a period of sixteen weeks, not eleven only as stated in last issue.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy was at Malone, New York, September 27.

Wanted to purchase: Heralds of volume 1, Nos. 7 and 10, July and October, 1860; or volume 1 complete. Also Times and Seasons volumes 1, 2, and 3. Address the Herald Office, naming prices.

Bro. J. R. Lambert has been laboring at various points in Western Iowa since the Logan reunion. He baptized two at Magnolia. He was to be at Missouri Valley over Sunday, the 30th ult., and would go thence to Woodbine.

Sr. — Seadore of Brinton, Michigan, asks prayer in behalf of her husband who has long been seriously afflicted, also in behalf of herself and children, who suffer in consequence of the husband and father's illness.

Bro. P. L. Claxton, Carbondale, Illinois, requests the district president and traveling ministry of the field to labor at that point, where he reports a good opening.

The gospel tent in which Brn. Daley and Knight were holding meetings, was set on fire by a boy and badly damaged, at Calistoga, California. This we learn by letter from Sr. Nora Gibbs.

The Saints' chapel at Lone Rock, Missouri, near Lamoni, will be dedicated on Sunday, October 14. Local brethren are invited to be present.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

THY WILL BE MINE.

"In every place, in every hour,
Whate'er my changing lot may be,
In joy or grief, in sun or shower,
Father and Lord, I turn to thee.

"Alike in comfort or distress,
O let me trace thy hand divine;
Righteous in chastening, swift to bless,
My Father, let thy will be mine!"

THE GOSPEL BOAT.

DEAR READERS OF THE COLUMN:—Yesterday I witnessed the launching of the "Evanelia" or Gospel Boat. It is now only about two and a half years since the friends of Bro. and Sr. Devore, whose sympathies were aroused in their behalf on learning of their sufferings while traveling in open boats from island to island in the prosecution of their mission work, and knowing the fatal results of such exposure in Sr. Helen Smith's case, suggested starting a fund to provide that mission with a boat that would shelter our missionaries from the elements and render them comparative comfort while on the water, and thereby relieve them in a great measure from their sufferings. When the proposition was being agitated it was thought by some that such a work was scarcely practicable considering the limited means of the church, while others again clearly saw, with an eye of faith, a well-equipped gospel boat and urged onward every effort to that end. During the intervening time while the fund slowly but steadily increased, many may have in like manner beheld such a boat. But now she is a moving if not a living, reality; a glad fruition of the efforts put forth principally by the sisters and children of the Sunday school.

How I wish the pioneers of this noble enterprise in behalf of our missionaries abroad could step on board of this little missionary ship and take a look at her when all ready for sea! And we would gladly welcome the children, too, who have made many a self-sacrifice that they might add their pennies to the boat fund. Let them remember that all their efforts and their sacrifice are known to the Lord and he will reward them. I do not think anyone, either old or young, has ever grudged a penny that they have given to the boat fund; but could they see the results of their faith and works in this miniature palace ship they would have greater joy in their offerings, and, if possible, greater faith in what the mite offerings will accomplish.

"Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand,
Form the mighty ocean.
And the bounteous land."

We as a church have reason to be proud, and are proud, of our little army of workers, our Sunday school children, and children, too, who have not Sunday school privileges, but whose parents have taught them that the Lord requires something of them even though they are only little children. For each one has a work to do, and it is not safe to wait until they become men and women before they make any exertion for the Master's cause, for they know not but he may call them from this world while yet children, and when they meet him they too will want to hear the "Well done, good and faithful one," and they too will want jewels in their crown that will shine like the stars of heaven. Do not become discouraged by hard times, little ones; your pennies are doing lots of good.

If on the printed subscription list California has been somewhat behind the other States, she is coming nobly to the rescue now. Besides what the San Francisco Sunday school and Saints have made up, money is being sent in from the Oakland, Stockton, Sacramento, Irvington, San Jose, and Santa Cruz branches; and others, doubtless, will respond in due time. And individual donations are being liberally proffered, such as sheets, bedspreads, pillows, and pillowslips, table linens, curtains, and material for quilts (which has been duly put together). In fact, the sisters of San Francisco and Oakland seem to be vying with each other in furnishing the cabin with everything necessary, and which will add to the comfort of its inmates on the voyage to the islands as well as for the missionaries after she reaches them.

What a joy the arrival of "Evanelia" will bring to the hearts of the weary missionaries on the "islands of the sea" who endure and suffer so much for the gospel's sake, bearing with her, as she will, wholesome provisions, delicacies, and many useful personal presents! Truly no greater evidence could be given them by the church at home of her love and sympathy for them as well as her interest in their work than the sending of this boat.

I have here spoken of the work of the sisters only, because it is not mine to report men's work. But we do not wish to leave them out in the cold. They are equally interested, and without them the boat never would have been a reality. More could scarcely be expected of anyone in Bro. Kelley's position than he has done, sparing nothing in having her made strong, safe, and comfortable.

We all are proud of her flags. The material is very fine and nice, and they are well made, but of the three, the Stars and Stripes is the handsomest. I wish the sisters of the Aid Society of Lamoni, who furnished the money for it, could have the privilege of seeing it floating at the masthead when unfurled in the breeze. The latter has not yet taken place. Being built as she was in a shed, it was necessary to launch before the spars and rigging could be set up.

Elder Burton has resumed his former title of Captain, but I do not think anyone envied him his position yesterday on the deck of his little ship when she was being launched. He and Bro. Neman, the sailor, were the only persons launched in her. The boat had been forced from the shed to the margin of the dock by the aid of jackscrews, but was still on a bank, and had to give a "run and jump" of nearly three feet down before striking the water. It was a very sudden pitch, and for an instant she looked as if she was going to turn a somersault, but it was soon over.

A general description of the boat's dimensions as given by a reporter for one of our San Francisco papers, will, I believe, have reached the readers of the Herald before this does, so I will not repeat them. But when the cabin is finished and furnished I will, for the benefit of the many who are interested, give as full a description of that as my clumsily wielded pen will afford. I believe she will not sail until after the San Jose reunion, though the dedication will take place on Sunday, the 23d inst.

I think it only fair to add that the advent of the "Evanelia" was materially hastened through the results of the effort put forth by a few sisters in selecting, compiling, and putting on sale the beautiful volume of poems, "Afterglow," a very appropriate title, for the brightness and beauty of the sentiment contained in those poems will glow long after the purpose for which they were sent forth is accomplished. More anon.

SISTER EMMA.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 15.

DAUGHTERS OF ZION, OCTOBER READING.

A TALK WITH THE DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

THE Scriptures inform us that "God is no respecter of persons." In them we learn also that all his creations are for a purpose, yet few of those purposes are known to man. Should a number of those great luminous bodies which form a part of the universe revolt, or fail to fill the measure of their creation, the result, we apprehend, would be disastrous to the harmonious working of the supreme whole, and also to the purpose for which they were separately created.

Within the universe are lesser worlds, organizations, bodies, down even to the human body. The Supreme Being who created all things declares his works are "one eternal round," therefore all are created and governed relatively.

It is the human body with which we have to do, and whether it fills, or fails to fill, the measure of its creation will seriously affect the condition of each individual in the great hereafter. The responsibility rests with us. Therefore it becomes us to search and find out the laws of our being that we may fill the measure of our creation. In the beginning God spake and brought order out of chaos. A chaos of "matter," we understand.

Since that time he has spoken more than once to bring order out of chaos of various kinds, brought about through transgression and consequent darkness upon the minds of men, and man's ruling when "knowledge had vanished away."

In many parts of the world the female portion of mankind has for centuries been so circumscribed in its rights that ambition has been crushed out and intellect dwarfed, agency trespassed upon and individuality ignored. The women of America have been more highly favored than those of other nations; yet up to the present generation even they shared more or less of the bondage placed upon their sex. Now, however, we find ourselves living in a day when God is again speaking from the heavens, and a better order of things is being brought about. Knowledge is being restored, and the rights of both sexes better understood, especially so in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Therein the doors of opportunity to act in a public capacity are rapidly widening, calling for all the talent and energy of the working daughters of Zion.

But is the right to engage in public work all that should be restored to woman? Has she not in consequence of the dark ages lost sight of the royalty, the honor of her work proper that of giving birth to, and molding the human race? If all entered upon public service, what would become of the sanctuary of home, and the perpetuation of our nation? Mothers, sisters, let us not, in the appreciation of, and response to, the right of voice and action in proper ways, lose sight of the one great work which God has prepared woman for, and upon which (as has already been said) there exists no question that it is hers to do.

In the Jewish dispensation when God instructed his people by his own mouth, some women held exalted positions. Deborah was a prophetess, and not only received the word of the Lord, but led an army in the field of battle. And God set Miriam with Moses and Aaron to lead the people. Others also held noted positions. But can we believe that the few who were chosen to fill those public positions were the only ones honored in the sight of God? I repeat that God is no respecter of persons. All are honored in his sight if they do well in their allotted station. There may be a few chosen ones in our day, but it must be remembered that if there should ever be any "Miriams" in the church of to-day, it must be because God set them there. They cannot set themselves in her place.

The sacred records of the past are left for our instruction. In them the careful reader gathers the thought that there was nothing considered more of a misfortune to a Jewish woman than not to have children. To bear children appeared to be the aim and desire of every Jewish woman, and the opposite was a reproach greater almost than they could endure. What a sorrow Rachel's barrenness was to her! Hannah fasted and prayed long in the temple before the Lord that he would grant her motherhood. And even in the case of Jephthah's daughter, when by the rash vow of her father she was to be offered up as a sacrifice, her sorrow was not because she would be slain, but because she would die before the crowning joy of motherhood blessed her life. Whence came this great desire on the part of the women anciently? It has been said, "Because they knew that Christ was to be born of some one of their nation, and all aspired to the honor." This answer is altogether improbable, since those—if there were any—who understood their scriptures concerning Christ's birth must also have known that he was to be born of a virgin.

I take the liberty here to insert an unsustained opinion of my own; viz., that the people of God had in an early age of the world received some greater knowledge concerning this matter, accompanied probably with promise or penalty, other than what is handed down to us. We have only a fragment of such knowledge. Enough only to understand that the earth was made for man, and when it was prepared, the command was, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth." And later, when the inhabitants of the earth became so wicked that they were swept from it, again the command was to those who remained, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth." But we have no definite statement as to how much depends upon the earth being replenished nor what the result will be to those who do or do not share in the work of replenishing. But if to multiply and replenish the earth was a part of the purpose for which mankind was created, we have a grave hint in these latter-day revelations to those who by willful transgression of the laws of their being fail to fill the measure of their creation. It is found in Doctrine and Covenants 85:6: "The earth abideth the law of a celestial kingdom, for it filleth the measure of its creation, and transgresseth not the law." Which argues that whatsoever does not fill the measure of its creation cannot abide a celestial kingdom or glory.

In connection with the thought that the ancient worthies received greater knowledge on the subject under consideration than we have, one cannot but question if there was not also some charge given the man concerning the treatment of his wife during the period so fraught with good or ill results to her and their unborn child. If there was not, why is it that the Jewess is so tenderly cared for during those periods? We do not believe the Jewish husband is, as a rule, any more kind-hearted than the Gentile husband. Yet he sees to it that his wife is exempt from all household cares and menial toil. Her life during that time is made as pleasant as it is possible for it to be. For exercise she takes pleasant walks in the open air, and frequent drives also; and in all ways is treated with far more consideration than the average Gentile woman. Even to this day they are faithful to the sacred trust enjoined upon them.

But how different with us Gentiles. We find ourselves living in a day when too frequently fathers and mothers count it not a sin to destroy their unborn children, and a virtue to prevent conception. And others who have not gone so far in their hardness of heart, mourn their condition, are fretful and angry; the man because he fears he shall have more than he can provide for; and the woman—ah, we can exercise tender consideration for her! Those daily rounds of household duties are so hard to perform while in pain and weariness. There is little wonder she is nervous and irritable. And besides the daily suffering, she is constantly stared in the face with the crowning ordeal, from which there is no escape, and which is so acute, so severe in its nature that her heart quails and her blood runs cold at the thought.

I question if such suffering should continue with those who have obeyed the gospel. A multiplicity of pain and sorrow was the penalty of disobedience. But the promise is that those who believe and obey shall be saved. And if obedience will save from the penalty of a broken law beyond the grave, will it not be as effectual in this life if we exercise faith therein? I believe it will, and also that the Saints ought not to suffer as those in disobedience. But one of the conditions of being "saved" is to believe. Faith is pleasing to God, and he invites his children to require at his hands the promises he has made. I believe this phase of life should also partake of the restoration, and believe, too, that it will, as soon as husbands and wives put themselves in a position to receive and govern their lives by the instruction that has been and will be given.

Sisters, why is it that our faith is not sufficient to trust God in all things, in this hour of pain as in other sickness? And why do we not have some from among the experienced sisters who seem to be adapted to the work, set apart for the purpose, as did the Hebrew women, and employ them? If such were practiced in faith among us as a church I am ready to promise that the results would be highly satisfactory.

In a former article I expressed a few thoughts on the rise and progress of the work of the sisters. Its slow but sure development suggests the inquiry if the Lord has not a purpose in bringing about this work? We understand there is to be a righteous generation raised up, prepared to meet Christ at his coming. These are the days of God's preparation, and by a thoughtful observation of some paragraphs in the Doctrine and Covenants we will find needful instruction for the preparation for this great work. The "word of wisdom" is preëminently so. It contains two applicable promises; viz., health, and "the destroyer shall pass by" those who observe it. And again, in keeping the "word of wisdom" one brings his tastes and appetites (or a better word for both combined—his desires) in subjection, and thus obtains a mastery over inclination. Constitutional drunkards are brought into the world through the unsatiated desire of their mothers for beer and strong drink before they—the children—were born. And again, to encourage such desire by pandering to it makes hereditary drunkards. So it appears that there must be a generation of self-conquerors before the righteous generation can be raised up. The self-conquerors are those who will deny themselves of anything that is hurtful to the body or to the preparation of a body—a tabernacle wherein shall dwell an immortal soul.

It has been said that "the prime factor of sorrow is perverted desire. In ignorance man is a slave of desire, and a more tyrannical absolute master is difficult to conceive of. Untrained and unchecked, desire runs the whole gamut of human experience and is the inciting impulse of all human action." This tyrant, then, desire, must of necessity be educated and brought in subjection to the dictates of the better judgment in order to spare ourselves from being assailed by it in an inordinate degree while the inward work of development is in progression. Wine, strong drink, and hot drinks the Lord has said are not good, and the only sure preventive from being assailed and conquered by those appetites while self-control is impaired, is to refrain from all strong drinks as a rule of life, and thus conquer the appetite for them while in health. Are the daughters of Zion of to-day ready for this part of their work in the days of God's preparation? Are they ready to not only set bounds to their tastes and their appetites, but when they are made aware that motherhood is dawning upon them, to array themselves in light, loose garments? to be plain and simple in their habits? and, above all, to welcome the approach of every little stranger who may seek admittance into their families, and rejoice in it as did the Hebrew mothers? And are the husbands prepared to extend such welcome to each helpless little one sent to him for protection and care for a few years? Are they ready to make sacrifice, if need be, that their wives may be as tenderly cared for at those times as the Jewish women are? If so, both parties are ready to enter upon the work of preparation.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

"If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's working see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key."

"But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart.
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold."

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. LEENA SAUER requests your faith and prayers in her behalf, that she may be restored to health.

Letter Department.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—I have just arrived home from my field of labor. It will be four months to-morrow since I left home, and to my great surprise, on my arrival I found a little girl who has come to stay with us, and on account of her good looks and genteel manners we have concluded to adopt her as one with us and subscribe her name Rachel, and our prayer is that our heavenly Father's blessings may attend her as one of old; and, the man who gets her will have to work fourteen years for her. Sr. Tomlinson and family are as well as can be expected. Since my appointment in 1894 I have endeavored to confine myself to my field of labor assigned me by the president of mission, Bro. J. H. Lake. I have baptized seven, and others have baptized a number in my field; so the good work rolls on. We need more laborers in the vineyard here. Truly the harvest is ripe and laborers few, and we hear the prayers of the Saints all over, "Lord, send more laborers into the vineyard," and we see that God is answering their prayers by calling and setting apart his servants for that purpose. Now, we hope the Saints will do their part and pay into the Lord's storehouse their tithings and offerings, that their prayers may be more fully answered. We have heard Saints say that there was something wrong in this church; that they did not receive the blessings to the same extent as those in the old church. Well, dear brethren and sisters, did we ever stop and think of the sacrifices the Saints made in the Old Church? They not only paid their tithings but consecrated their all for the sake of God's work, and many laid down their lives, suffering death and martyrdom for the sake of their Master, Jesus Christ. Are we willing to do so to-day? "Be it unto thee according to thy faith," our Master has said. Have we faith in him? Do we love him? "If ye love me, keep my commandments" says Jesus. (See John 14:15.) Now as tithing is a commandment, let us show our love to him by paying our tithing. Tithing is a law of God. (See Gen. 14:20; 28:22; Lev. 27:30-32; Deut. 14:22; Prov. 3:9; Mal. 3:8-11; Luke 11:43; Book of Mormon, Alma 10:1; Jacob 2:5; Mosiah 9:9; Nephi 11:3-7; Doctrine and Covenants 64:5; 106:1.) Read also Proverbs 28:9; also Isaiah 59:2; then examine yourselves and see if this might not be the reason we do not receive the desired blessings. God says in Malachi 3:6: "For I am the Lord; I change not." Now, dearly beloved brethren and sisters, you who have not complied with the temporal law, try him. He has blessed others in their obedience to this law, and he will bless you, not only in this present world, but in the world to come.

On our arrival home we were made glad by the smiling face of that good old apostle, John, who had arrived in town just a little while before us. Next night being prayer meeting night, a number of the Saints gathered, and we had a time long to be remembered. Elder Lake exercised the gift of tongues calling Bro. George C. Tomlinson to the office of elder, Bro. Alexander Sinclair to the office of priest, and Bro. William Anderson to office of deacon. May the good Lord enable them to be humble and patient for he has promised them great blessings on those conditions. We felt to rejoice to know God does remember his people as those officers were much needed.

S. W. TOMLINSON.

BOYNE CITY, Mich., Sept. 17.

Editors Herald.—The two days' meeting at this place is over; we had a grand, good time. Elders C. G. Lewis, F. C. Smith, Robert and William Davis, and myself were present. Brn. Davis, Smith, Washburn, and self did the preaching. The testimony and preaching meetings were grand. The Saints are mostly young, up in these parts, but are growing in faith and understanding of the faith of Christ. Boyne City is the county seat of Charlevoix county, twelve miles from the East Jordan branch. Everything seemed to work in our favor. The Saints were brought in by boat from East Jordan on Saturday, also on Sunday, and the boat waited on the Saints and friends until after the evening meeting, and then took them all back. A special car with engine also waited on them, and after the evening meeting took them to Boyne Falls, to connect with the main line of the G. R. and I. R. R., taking the midnight train, leaving them off at Elmira, South Boardman, etc., as many had to be at their business early on Monday morning.

We used the church which has been used hitherto by the Methodists, as they are about to leave it and move into another larger one which they are building. They have tried to sell the old one, and got into much dispute over the matter, when the Saints offered to take it at their own figures; so to settle the dispute one of their members purchased it and sold it to the Saints. The papers are not yet made out, but the brethren have the money for the first payment, and we were told to go in and occupy. Saturday was our first use of it. It is a nice little place and very cheap—four hundred dollars; one hundred to be paid down, and fifty dollars per year with interest. It is seated with chairs, an organ in it, with a good bell on top. Their minister seemed to lament because the "old bell that had rung for Methodism so long was going to ring now for another doctrine," and that the people who were going to have the church "did not believe in Christ." But they have made so many such like statements to people who are willing to hear the other side that to such their words have no weight.

The work commenced here about twenty months ago, and there are now about thirty-five members. Bro. R. W. Hugill and family have also moved up here. He is an elder, and presides over the branch, and is of great strength to the Saints. Bro. Hugill also assists the Saints at Elmira by spending one Sunday each month with them. Bro. George Washburn, a priest, is trying to do all he can, preaching the gospel to others as circumstances permit. Nearly all are doing all they can. Several have been baptized into the church since the last General Conference. Although there are but few laborers, as near as I can tell there has been about one hundred and forty-five baptized since last April in this district. The Saints are rejoicing, and the work is onward.

J. J. CORNISH.

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 18.

Editors Herald.—It has seemingly become fashionable that we elders of heavy caliber should make long and elaborate reports of our great deeds, sermons, discussions, baptisms, with the many calls for preaching and the wonderful interest among the people, with the great expectations for a future ingathering. It is also slowly but surely becoming fashionable for we elders to mix these good things with wordy descriptions of scenes, persons, and places, and also with a lot of taffy for those with whom we have associated, and in this way occupy from two to three and a half columns of our church paper, with the great probability of shutting out some short, pithy, and pointed letter for the lack of space. This should not be, for we long range and heavy caliber guns should do to other guns as we would have them do to us, and give them a chance to shoot, realizing that many little guns do greater execution than one loud-mouthed cannon. Let us big guns think of these things.

The other side: It is not fashionable, nor is it likely to become so, for we elders to tell of the many blunders, poor sermons, and failures; and of the twos, fives, tens, fiftens, and twenties that have come to our meetings; and of how many times we have given offense, not only to our brethren and sisters, but to those whom we were trying to reach with the gospel, and how little we see ourselves as others see us, and as God sees us. This is some of the other side. We elders should think of it and always draw a true picture, because we must meet both sides at the great day of reckoning. Now I believe that an ounce of example is worth more than ten pounds of precept; I therefore shall not enter into a long, elaborate, taffy report, for I believe it would be an insult to the intelligent brethren and sisters among whom I have been laboring, and to the readers of the Herald, and especially to the church, for putting them to the expense of printing something unnecessary; because I believe every intelligent brother and sister expects a higher reward than taffy for doing his duty, for he realizes that the reward comes with duty alone and not in we elders' taffy.

Since May 1, I, with assistance of Brn. Daniel Brown, J. H. Lawn, and E. Burton, have held seventy-eight meetings. Sixty-five of these meetings were held in tent; nineteen in Fresno City, twenty-five in Tulare, and twenty-one at Cross Creek. At Fresno our attendance was small on account of the strike; at Tulare and Cross Creek our attendance was good, far exceeding our expectations. At all of these places we had the very best of attention, with no disturbance whatever. We did not baptize any, because we did not think it wise to push some that were near into the water. The Saints in the district did well, and I have no doubt that some did more than their duty, while others did what they conceived to be their duty, while some were negligent. I pray God to bless and reward them all. We were blessed with good liberty according as we lived for it, and the way was opened before us wonderfully, but I find the interest must be worked up, especially in California and Oregon. I am more and more satisfied that the tent is the way to reach the people in California under proper circumstances.

In bonds,

A. HAWS.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, Sept. 18.

Editors Herald.—We are still on the move, trying to do the best we can. Our work in this district is prosperous; about forty have united with us by baptism this summer. Our camp meeting was a success, as stated by others; nine were added by baptism, and one to be baptized on the following Sunday, made ten in all. A more quiet, peaceful time we never experienced. The Saints were gratified and felt highly honored with the cheerful response of the elders who attended by request. All were pleased to see Bro. A. H. Smith, our worthy missionary in charge; but all remember with gratitude to God Bro. J. R. Lambert, who by his wise counsels and logical, inspiring sermons cheered our hearts in days gone by. All the elders in attendance did well, for which we ask them to accept our sincere thanks.

In the Nodaway district the brethren are doing well. Brn. J. R. Evans and M. P. Madison, assisted by Bro. James Thomas, have been doing very good work with the tent, removing much prejudice in the towns of Stanberry and Barnard, and we all hope to be able to do more in the future than in the past.

We hope the Saints in these two districts will not forget to come up to the help of the Lord financially. If you have but little, give as freely of that as though you had in abundance, and God will reward according to your liberality, and bless you spiritually and temporarily.

Don't, dear brethren and sisters, slacken your hands in this matter because of poor crops this year, but do your best, and trust God for his promise, in order that the richer blessings may be yours to enjoy in the years to come, and God will open the windows of heaven and pour such blessings upon you both spiritually and temporarily as you have never before witnessed. Try him, and receive what he has promised.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

HENRY KEMP.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Sept. 21.

Editors Herald:—The work is still moving onward in this and adjacent vicinities. Bro. J. S. Roth baptized eighteen here since district conference, including one rebaptism, before he went to the reunion at Logan. On Sunday the 16th inst. I had the pleasure of baptizing two more, both past middle age, heads of families. I think others are near the door of the kingdom.

The field is enlarging hereabout, in nearly all directions; calls for labor are more than we are able to respond to. I believe if the brethren appointed to this field (district) can labor at some of these openings now presenting, while roads and weather are good, great good will result. Twenty added here in less than a month; and the great work is moving so grandly all along the line, thrills me with joy. Praise God! Pray for us.

Your brother,

C. SCOTT.

GLENVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 10.

Editors Herald:—It is probable that the effort in Cleveland will cease after next week, or end with the present month. It will be too bad, however, and I am sorry, as interest in our work manifests, though a slow, yet I believe stable growth that augurs good for the church's interest. That a mission ought now to be sustained in the city of Cleveland is quite clear to my mind, for many reasons which I think I might be able to give; but times are hard, money scarce, although our collections Sunday evenings have exceeded expectation; but means to sustain a capable minister are wanting. The district is already in a crippled and destitute condition, so far as ministerial work is concerned, Bro. Powell having retired from the field, a sorry thing for us.

Our late conference at Conneautville, Pennsylvania, was generally voted to be a success, the attendance and spiritual power being above the average expectation; but the general district representation seemed to be very poor, and as revealing an undesirable condition of affairs, four out of eleven branches I think only sending any report at all. But there seems to be a desire to construe the last revelation into an abandonment of the church's welfare or interest so far as organized branches are concerned, and sometimes I think irrespective of a proper interpretation in the light of that which we have read as the counsel of God before. The law provides, as I understand it, for the welfare of a branch that has demonstrated its inability to take care of itself and at least hold its own as against the disintegrating forces that beset this supposed representation of the kingdom of God.

Alas, how sad it seems to me to be the necessity for apostolic and able ministerial work in nearly every branch in this district; There is a provision and counsel that the world be warned in the last revelation, but that this cannot and ought not to be done in as effectual manner through the aid and help of an organization whose very existence is not known by multitudes in cities and in larger towns where they exist, not to speak of partial and incompletely organized and officered branches in small places where as often a misrepresentation of our claims are had through inefficiency, etc., as anything else, I do not believe. "Feed the flock of God over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." But supposing that shepherd which the law concludes is wanting, and one is not to be found who is capable of fulfilling this office,—shall we leave this excuse of an organization in its weak and imperfect condition to stand alone against the foes which we know in all reason will not fail to attack and bring it into contempt in the eyes of intelligent and well-disposed people? "Feed my sheep;" "Feed my lambs." That also is apostolic work, in my opinion, the necessity for which is everywhere apparent to thoughtful minds; and he who ministers this precious bread of life must be that pastor and shepherd whom God has seen to be possessed of intelligence and a disposition to faithfulness enough to warrant his ordination "according to the gifts and callings of God unto him," and to whom Jesus Christ through the Holy Ghost in its profitable ministrations hands down to this faithful and wise steward that bread and water of eternal life that will superinduce a growth into life, and not an administration—maladministration, or entire neglect of ministration—that serves to kill a branch and the whole neighborhood.

Nothing is being done, to the superficial gaze, unless somebody is being baptized; while we forget that ability to coax or persuade somebody to get their head under water is a small part of that work referred to by the Master when he said, "I will build my church." There are baptisms and there are immersions. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." To get people into the water may insure a good report in this present time, and relieve us of this too oft man-made pressure that nothing is being accomplished unless that kind of a report appears; but "except a man be born again," not only of water but of the Spirit, the work is vain, superficial, and testified to by broken and dead membership all over the land. Nay, this is not enough; a growth through supply of proper nourishment to the new born must be kept up and maintained or the kingdom of God will never appear! "Able ministers," not only of the letter, but of "the Spirit," whose apostolic care either through him or his subordinates "of all the churches," especially until such pastors as the law provides for are furnished, are needed everywhere to destroy the misrepresentation that abounds. Faithful, vigilant, courageous, wise watchmen to guard the interests already secured, are everywhere needed. When these are found, the work grows toward permanency, profit, and honor among the people; where they are wanting, the Devil is having high carnival, and the kingdom of God does not appear.

My heart is in this great latter-day work, and I desire nothing more than its permanent establishment.

May God bless this people, is my prayer,
M. H. BOND.

ROXBURY, Va., Sept. 8.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing the enemy has been busy with his dirty, cowardly, sneaking work. The last night I preached at Roman there were two men besides myself present, and eight or ten women and children; and before service closed a number of persons assaulted the church house, firing fifteen or twenty shots, throwing in stones and clubs, and with rails or chunks of wood battering in three windows, breaking all the panes except ten. They then fled in the dark, so we could not learn who they were. I have written the Bishop to know how to proceed. Some who were baptized at Roman have turned away from the truth, after testifying to the truthfulness of the work, and have joined the enemy, and the enemy is quite daring; and, I being the one who opened up and established the work at Roman, the Devil and all his force there seem to be quite bitter against me. A few years ago a woman was baptized there who was not living with her husband (and, brethren, we ought to be very careful in regard to receiving such into the church, and the Lord has told how to act); and she being poor, the brethren (officers at Roman) undertook to provide for her to some extent, and she finally began to act unwisely, as adjudged by the Saints, and when it was demanded of her to desist, and the brethren ceased to provide for her, then the trouble began; and I think this was the opportunity that the enemy was waiting for; and he secured the services of two or three of the members, and so is working hard for the overthrow of the work there. Think of a cowardly set of men sneaking in the dark, firing revolvers or guns, and hurling clubs and stones among women and children.

There are a few Saints there are who are trying to honor the work and who have not in any way incited the enemy to his deeds of evil. But we are made to know that trying times are at hand; and, dear Saints, it certainly behooves us all to live pure, humble, devoted lives; and instead of going to places of mirth and engaging in things unseemly for Saints of God, would it not be better to be assembled together for prayer for the success of the work and for the peace and blessing of God to be with the ministry who have to go forth and preach the gospel among demons who thirst for their blood? Saints, how would we feel if while we are gathered at a place of mirth and to some extent were forgetful of the great work intrusted to our care, should we be made cognizant of the fact that Saints at another place were hemmed in by a howling mob and being pelted with stones? Think of the many weary, lonely, anxious, restless hours the elders' wives have to endure. Surely the signs of the times tell us in thundering tones that the end is near. And shall we be of the wise whom Daniel speaks of who shall understand?

After leaving Roman I went to New Hope, where I held six services to small but attentive audiences. The two or three Saints there are in the faith. While sojourning with Bro. and Sr. Coffman we went to hear a Dunkard professor preach. He said many good things, but among the, to me, not good things he said that "men cannot prove one word or principle of the gospel, but that he had to just receive it by knowledge." Well, I wished for the opportunity to tell them of the test rule that the Savior gave, and to invite them to try it and see if they could not prove the gospel. They kindly gave out my appointment for three p. m. at Bro. Coffman's, and three of their members were present.

I am now comfortably domiciled at Bro. and Sister Herrick's and Bro. and Sr. Barnett's, near Roxbury, Charles City county. The few Saints here are doing what they can to get their neighbors to hear the message of life. To-night I am to begin meetings in New Kent county, where at one time Elder J. L. Goodrich preached a few times. The people speak well of Bro. G. The brethren are trying to secure a church house at Providence Forge, built by a gentleman now residing at Washington, D. C. I expect to remain in the State till the last of this month or the first of October, thence to the West Virginia district conference at Centerville; then if arrangements are completed will likely go to Blaine, Kentucky, to try the steel of a Baptist divine upon the merits of the Baptist claims to being the true church, as well as the claims of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. I feel hopeful in the conflict, and pray that the good Father may open up the way for the preaching of the gospel, and that Zion may speedily be built up, and that the Lord whom we seek may suddenly come to his temple.

JAMES MOLER.

KNOX, Ind., Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—The two days' meeting at Hartford, Michigan, was a success. Six were baptized, the branch more fully organized, the Saints strengthened, and others almost persuaded to obey. All is not well at Hartford, however, and there is need of more charity, forbearance, and forgiveness on the part of some. May the Spirit of the Master help them.

Four were baptized at the two days' meeting at Galien last Sunday, and a good time had. Bro. Scott baptized one at Coldwater last Sunday. Eighteen have been baptized in our district during the past two weeks.

Bro. Scott and I came here yesterday; he to look after Clark Braden, and I to act as moderator if a discussion occurs. We aim for him to affirm time about with Bro. Scott this time, or back down. He has lectured here the past week against the Saints, but, from what we hear, he has hurt himself worse than he has hurt the Saints. We are very busy; no time for rest, although we feel that we need it very badly. Health ordinary. Perhaps I have written before of the Hartford meeting.

ISAAC M. SMITH.

LAMONI, Iowa, Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—Leaving Lamoni direct for Maysville, I was permitted to spend but one day there, sickness in the family preventing me reaching there sooner, and previous appointment hindering a longer stay. Partook of the hospitality of Bro. T. Hinderks and family, and enjoyed the short stay very well.

At Little Sioux our Sunday school convention and conference both proved a decided success. It was said that the programme of the former was more nearly responded to than any since the first, a good indication. At the latter the business passed without a jar, and four were baptized. Never saw a better, and he who could find fault would certainly prove that he was a chronic grumbler.

During the following week I preached at Moorhead and Brown schoolhouse and found an excellent interest. Enjoyment at the reunion was marred by sickness in the family and the very serious illness of a sister residing at Galland's Grove. Left for home during the afternoon of the last day, on account of two of our children being sick. To those who were so kindly solicitous I will say that home was reached to find a favorable turn in this direction. By their expressions of sympathy the burden of suspense was made the easier to bear. They proved a desire to obey the injunction, "Bear ye one another's burdens." To God be praise for kindly watchcare, and to all who (and they were many) offered a benedictory farewell, our gratitude is thus publicly expressed.

LINDSAY, Ont., Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—As you made a mistake by saying I had preached a week in the Methodist church in Grand Valley instead of Fort Erie, as it should have read, I think the mistake occurred by my signing my home address, though I had headed it "Fort Erie," where I wrote from.

Just after our June conference I was called to London to meet in an elders' council, on July 17; but owing to one of the elders concerned not being present, by consent of President Lake I went to St. Mary's for a week, but most of that time I was so sick and suffered such pain that I was unable to do much missionary work; but I was kindly cared for at the home of Bro. G. C. Tomlinson, who with the other Saints there have my sincere thanks for their kindness. On the 24th I returned to London and left on the 28th for Fort Erie to baptize two Methodist people, who had been convinced during our services in the Methodist church, as above stated. I had to wait for a train in St. Thomas, and had tea at Bro. Samuel Johnson's, and afterward administered to Grandpa Johnson, and by Grandma Johnson failing to awake me before three o'clock in the morning as per contract, I got left, so it fell to my lot to lead prayer meeting at ten a. m. and preach at eleven, assisted by Bro. Daniel MacGregor. That evening I reached Niagara Falls and led their Bible class. Next day I walked to Stamford and visited our aged sisters, Siggs and Smith. That evening a few Saints gathered at Bro. Place's where a social time was had, singing the songs of Zion and conversing on the gospel. Next day, after administering to some sick, I went to Fort Erie and preached that evening at the home of Bro. Albert Martin, and continued there three evenings. On Sunday I had the privilege of preaching twice in the colored people's church, as well as of baptizing Bro. and Sr. Richard Martin. Five Saints from Niagara Falls, two from Low Banks, and one from Buffalo, favored us by their presence and acted as choir by playing and singing at the above services. The songs from the Saints' Harp and the music from the Harmony seemed to have a very impressive effect. I spoke there again on Monday night, with an invitation from the trustees to come again and promise that the church would be at our disposal at any time.

I was in Toronto from August 7 to 25. Spoke a few times in a public hall, and the rest of the meetings were held at No. 66 Euclid avenue and No. 69 Strachan avenue. Some are believing there; others are interested. On the 26th I preached twice in Cameron. We had quite a large gathering of outsiders in the evening. On the 28th I began meetings in Fenelon Falls, where Bro. Felix A. Northey (who was united in marriage to Sr. Maggie Jane Braden last March by the writer) secured a hall for five nights. The attendance was small; the "Kickapoo Indian Medicine Company" by their free open-air concerts took the crowd. The last evening being Sunday, there was quite a good gathering; and some are interested and others expressed their regret that meetings closed so soon. I baptized two while there. I began meetings here September 6 at the home of Sr. Hill who formerly lived in Toronto and then moved to Carberry, Manitoba, about a year ago, and with her husband (who is not a member) and family returned here this last spring. We had a good attendance here and some very worthy people are investigating, one a man who has been one of the town fathers for some years. Last evening I baptized a Mrs. Cunningham. I leave this afternoon for Irondale and Monmouth branches. Still trying to keep and further "the faith,"

Editors Herald:—I left home and loved ones August 30 to reënter upon this mission. My first effort was at Manti, San Pete county, where I preached a few times, and one was baptized. There are now nine members at that place, and others are near the kingdom, I think. Bro. S. P. Rasmussen, who used to live in Missouri, has located there, and has been a helper in effecting an opening there. Last Sunday I preached to the Saints in Provo and was pleased to meet some who rejoice in God's truth, while I was pained to learn that some had turned away from the same, and that a spirit of lethargy had taken possession of others. Indeed, so far as I can now see, the outlook for the work here is not flattering. The people, as a rule, faithfully heed the instruction of their leading men to let us "severely alone," making it difficult to reach them. Were it not for the sake of the few here already in the church it looks to me as if it would be policy to leave them undisturbed for awhile. However, I intend to toil on this fall and winter, trusting in the Lord. I shall be pleased to hear from the scattered Saints in this mission and from others interested in the work. Letters addressed to me here will reach me.

In bonds,

H. N. HANSEN.

CENTERVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—I am here on my way to Kentucky. I left home on the 7th of this month to preach my way through West Virginia to Blaine, Lawrence county, Kentucky, where I will remain until our district conference which will meet at this place on the 13th of October, and will say to those wishing to attend our conference to come to Catlettsburg, Kentucky, on the morning trains on the 12th of October and take the evening train on the Chataroi railroad up Big Sandy to Lockwood station and Bro. W. R. Odell and others will meet them there with conveyance, out to Centerville.

Our district is not in very good working condition. There has not been any preaching done in the district since last winter, except what I have done myself. Still, the Saints are strong in the faith and are willing to do all they can to forward the work, but the hard times pinch all pretty much. When I have the means to ride from one place of preaching to another I do so, and if I do not have it, I walk; and I will still do so, for I intend to sound the warning voice as long as God gives me strength. If I do have to walk, it is no more than my blessed Master and his apostles did. I am hopeful in the work and expect to push it vigorously on to the end.

Your brother,

G. H. GODBY.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 9.

Editors Herald:—I herewith write you a singular dream I had on the 4th of August last. I saw a train of covered wagons loaded with sacks of wheat. The train extended across this continent from east to west. The western part became separated from the eastern part, which appeared to be about one third part of the distance or territory on which the train appeared to be located, and leaving quite a gap between the eastern and western part of the train. I was standing with the western part and could see the eastern part at a distance towards the east; and as I was looking round about where I was standing I beheld that some of the wheat had leaked out of the sacks that were in the wagons and was scattered around on the ground. When I saw the wheat on the ground, I called out to the captain of the train, who was with the eastern part to come and gather up the wheat that had leaked out. He came to where I was standing and gathered up some of the cleanest part of the wheat, for some was settled down in the dust, which made it apparently unfit for use. I said to the captain, "Can I gather up what is left?" He replied, "Yes." I then gathered up enough of the wheat that was lying in the dust to fill one sack, and when done and had hold of the mouth of the sack and was looking into it the wheat became splinters of kindling wood, and I looked at it with astonishment. At this juncture I heard a voice over my head which said: "God will judge these people."

The meaning of the dream is this, in brief: The train loaded with wheat represented the Church of Jesus Christ, such as claim to be Latter Day Saints. The eastern part of the train represented the Reorganized Church who have kept the faith and maintained the purity of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The western part represented those who followed Brigham Young to the Rocky Mountains and became separated from those in the East, both in practice and organization, through corrupt practices, the gap made in the train showing that fact. The captain of the train represented the President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ and his right of presidency over the whole church, as seen by the call made on him to gather up the wheat—the people—from the western part of the train, that was separated from the eastern part. The sack of dusty wheat that became kindling wood are those of the followers of Brigham Young who will not forsake their evil ways, and who are becoming ripe for the burning, and who will be brought to judgment for the abominations they practice before the Lord.

Yours very truly,

SIMON SMITH.

IS IT WISE TO CONDEMN BEFORE A HEARING?

IN published minutes of the Far West district conference, Herald issue for September 26, 1894, I notice an open attack upon the Bishop, intended, doubtless, for the purpose of "steading the ark" and improving the finances. The debut, however, having been so widely advertised, justice requires that the examination be alike before the people.

As I know of but one elder's family in the church, whose allowance is fixed by the Bishop, to wit, that of himself, an explanation will be necessary on the part of those making the charge before proper answer can be given.

The law relating to the supply of the Bishop is explicit: See Book of Covenants, section 42, paragraph 19. I have never claimed this for myself, however, but have labored without remuneration under the rule of the elders.

It ought to be fairly supposable that if the Bishop does not show a partiality toward his own family, when he might do so in keeping with the law, that partiality is not likely to be found in his work in dealing in conjunction with his brethren of the Presidency and the Twelve in supplying the families of other elders.

The families of those sent into the ministry are to be supplied according as they severally need. I grant that mistakes may be made, but prefer to know where to locate them. There are persons receiving various amounts, but it is owing to circumstances, and not to individuals.

Sometimes the circumstances are caused wholly on account of the fact that the treasury will not warrant more, but if not, the elder does not have to accept. In such case the law fully releases him to look after his own family.

Will those making the charge, please name the instances to which they refer, and, at least, give an opportunity of turning on the light.

Respectfully,

E. L. KELLEY.

THE HIGHER CRITICISM.—No. 6.

BY T. W. WILLIAMS.

PROPOSITION SEVENTEEN:—

"God commands, approves, and delights in burnt offerings, sacrifices, and holy days."

Exodus 29:36, Leviticus 23:27, and Exodus 29:18 are quoted, and need no explanation. "God disapproves of, and has no pleasure in burnt offerings, sacrifices, and holy days."

For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices.—Jer. 7:22.

This is a fact; God did not command them about these things when they first left Egypt. But what did he do? Verse 23:—

But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.

Now why did God command burnt offerings? Verse 24:—

But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward.

This agrees with Paul's statement, Galatians 3:19:—

It [the law—that including burnt offerings] was added because of transgressions.

Your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me.—Jer. 6:20.

What kind of offering and sacrifice was this which was not acceptable? The context says:—

To what purpose cometh there to me incense from Sheba, and the sweet cane from a far country? your burnt offerings are not acceptable, nor your sacrifices sweet unto me.

Had it been the people of God bringing a sacrifice in the way specified of God, he would have accepted it. The sacrifice of animals was never as acceptable with God as the sacrifice of a broken heart and a contrite spirit, but God accepted it for a time because of Israel's failure to live up to the higher law.

Will I eat of the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats? Offer unto God thanksgiving; and pay thy vows unto the Most High.—Ps. 50:13, 14.

Verse 8, preceding, says:—

I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt offerings, to have been continually before me.

Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with; it is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. . . . To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts; and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hand?—Isaiah 1:13, 11, 12.

The author has transposed and made this passage do service in a way so far foreign to what it was intended that it ought to make every honest infidel blush when compared with the true rendition. The author would have us understand that this language was given to the nation previously commanded to offer up burnt offerings, when it was not spoken to them at all. The previous verse reads:—

Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom. Give ear unto the law of God, ye people of Gomorrah.

These were the people whose offerings were not acceptable and who were commanded to, "bring no more vain oblations." We challenge the infidel to show where God even commanded men to bring, or was pleased with, "vain oblations." The new moons and appointed feasts of the Sodomites were not acceptable to God because they were not in harmony with his commands. I am surprised that you ever quoted and used a passage as you have this one. Such glaring perversion is inexcusable, even in a "hero for liberty and fair play."

Proposition eighteen:—

"God forbids human sacrifices."

A part of Deuteronomy 12:30, 31 is quoted. It would have been better had they quoted the verses entire, but as we affirm that God forbids human sacrifice in its general application, we will examine the second clause of the proposition.

"God commands and accepts human sacrifice."

No devoted thing, that a man shall devote unto the Lord of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the Lord. None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.—Lev. 27:28, 29.

Here the skeptic plays upon the use of a word irrespective of its connection. The Scripture throughout condemns human sacrifice. Leviticus 18:21; 20:2; Deuteronomy 18:10; Jeremiah 32:35; and Ezekiel 23:36, 37 all preclude the possibility of human sacrifice being acceptable. What devoted thing did God here decree should die? Every man who had been devoted to God's service? No; but nothing "devoted of men [that is, his possessions] shall be redeemed; but shall be put to death." The word devote in this connection is taken from the Hebrew charam, meaning to devote to God or destruction. According to the Jewish custom that which was devoted to God was appropriated to his service, either in the religious rites of the time or in sacrifice. The above passage was given to cover the things devoted for sacrifice, and not that devoted to God's service. Samuel was devoted to God when a child by his mother, but he was not killed. If it was intended that men devoted should be sacrificed, why is it that there is not a case on record where God accepted it?

The king [David] took the two sons of Rizpah . . . and the five sons of Michal. . . . And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill before the Lord. . . . And after that God was entreated for the land.

You have taken a long stretch to make the connection from the ninth to the fourteenth verse. Other things were done besides the hanging of these men, and how you can construe it to be a sacrifice, I cannot comprehend. Please give chapter and verse where hanging was counted a sacrifice. The Gibeonites who had been wronged through the bloody works of Saul, Israel's king, made a demand that these of his "bloody house" should be hanged, and David granted their wish.

Verse fourteen says:—

And they performed all that the king commanded. And after that the Lord was entreated for the land.

Not only in yielding to the wishes of the Gibeonites, but in doing all that was commanded.

And he [God] said, Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah, and offer him there for a burnt offering.—Gen. 22:2.

You will please notice the heading of this proposition: "God commands and accepts human sacrifice." Will you please cite the chapter and verse where it states that God accepted Isaac as a sacrifice? Why did God command Abraham to offer up Isaac as a sacrifice? Because he delighted in it? No. Because he would accept it? No. Then for what purpose was it? To try Abraham's faith, for after Abraham had made everything ready and was about to strike the knife into the heart of his son, the angel of God appearing said, "Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him." This is the only passage that gives a shadow of proof that God commanded human sacrifice, yet it was given with a full design that it should not be fully accomplished, the purpose being not for a sacrifice but to try Abraham's faith.

And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's and I will offer it up for a burnt offering. So Jephthah passed over unto the children of Ammon to fight against them; and the Lord delivered them into his hands. . . . And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him. . . . And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains. And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed.—Judges 11:30-32, 34, 38, 49.

There is not a verse, a line, a word in this whole chapter that shows that God commanded or accepted this sacrifice. Jephthah made the vow himself and carried it into effect without one statement from God. He made the vow conditional, providing God would bless Israel in battle. Would the infidel have God forsake Israel in battle and permit hundreds to be killed in order to avert Jephthah fulfilling his rash vow? We have nothing to show that God approved of it, and taken in connection with other passages we are assured that he did not. The act of Jephthah was something like the acts of some Christians (?) to-day. They make a proposition to God that if he does certain things they will do so and so. If it occurs as they wish, they take it for granted that the proposition they make is right, while it is highly probable that God would do the very same, proposition or no proposition. It is evident that God would have succored Israel without the sacrifice of Jephthah's daughter. The success of Israel at that time was of such importance that God would not permit the rashness of one man to intervene and bring disaster to them.

Proposition nineteen:—

"God tempts no man." James 1:13 is quoted.

"God does tempt man":—

And it came to pass after these things, that God did tempt Abraham.—Gen. 22:1.

The Inspired Translation renders it try instead of tempt. God tried Abraham but did not tempt him. The author seems to confound the words try and tempt. To tempt is to induce; to offer attraction or to influence by coercion, detraction, or seduction; while to try is to put a man in a condition where he is not influenced by the one trying him; that he be permitted to exercise his individuality in a selection of good or bad. God here tried Abraham's faith; he gave him a command and left it to his option whether he would comply or not. There was nothing wrong in this command of God; for, remember, there is nothing wrong only that which brings wrong or evil. We have no record that God had ever given any law about human sacrifices before this. He was breaking no law when he made the demand of Abraham, and as good accrued from the act, it must have been good.

And again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah.—2 Sam. 24:1.

This writer makes the antecedent of he to be God. Let us read Chronicles 21:1:—

And Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

The first passage does not say that God influenced David to number Israel, and the second passage says that Satan did. So you have gained nothing here.

But the Lord said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he holdeth fast his integrity although thou movest me against him, to destroy him without cause.—Job 2:3.

This passage has no connection at all with this proposition. It does not show that God tempted Job, but rather that the Devil wanted to destroy him; but God would not, neither did he, permit Satan to destroy him. It is possibly a mistake (?) of the printer that this passage got into your little work.

O Lord, thou hast deceived me and I was deceived [marginal reading, enticed].—Jer. 20:7.

This is merely a recital of Jeremiah's fears, but if you will read the tenth and eleventh verses the explanation is given:—

All my familiars watched for my halting, saying, Peradventure he will be enticed, and we shall prevail against him . . . But the Lord is with me as a mighty terrible one; therefore my persecutors shall stumble . . . O Lord of hosts, that triest the righteous, . . . let me see thy vengeance on them.

The Lord had spoken through Jeremiah, and it seemed for a time as though his words would fail, and Jeremiah commenced to be fearful and gave vent to his feelings in the above language; but he was soon shown that God was true to his word. Suppose the Lord did deceive him, has that anything to do with this proposition? Why, you might prove that the entire Bible was false and that would not prove that God tempted man. "Deceive" and "tempt" do not mean the same at all.

Lead us not into temptation.—Matt. 6:13.

The Inspired Translation says:—

Suffer us not to be led into temptation.

Proposition twenty:—

"God cannot lie." (Num. 23:19; Heb. 6:18.)

"God lies; he sends forth lying spirits to deceive":—

Ah, Lord God! surely thou hast greatly deceived this people.—Jer. 4:10.

It seems that Jeremiah had been soliloquizing. He knew that many prophets had come crying peace, and now the opposite was portrayed through him. He knew that if the others had prophesied aright, then he was wrong, and vice versa. The Lord explains the matter in the sixteenth chapter and thirteenth verse. Jeremiah continuing the subject says:—

Then said I, Ah, Lord God! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you assured peace in this place. Then the Lord said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name; I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

The matter was clear to Jeremiah. God had not deceived them, but they had deceived themselves.

Wilt thou be unto me altogether as a liar.—Jer. 14:18.

No such passage is found in this chapter! We find a similar one in the fifteenth chapter, but it proves nothing. The one speaking had received promises from God, and it seemed that they would not be fulfilled, hence this question. In the succeeding verses we discover that God reconfirms his promises, thus showing that although men thought he might lie, he assured them he would not. Why do you not act honorably in this matter? You knew it was a question when you inserted it? You are the first individual I ever knew of who converted a question into proof. Such ability applied in law might (?) bring you money, even if compelled to relinquish fame.

For this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie.—2 Thess. 2:11.

It will serve our purpose to quote the context:—

The Lord, even Jesus, whose coming is not until after there cometh a falling away, by the workings of Satan with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness.—2 Thess. 2:9-12, I. T.

The Bible throughout conveys the idea that all power emanates from God and that no individual in heaven, earth, or hell has any power granted save from God. The Devil can do nothing save he be permitted by God. The Bible portrays God as the author of good; the Devil the author of evil; thus there is but one way in which God could send strong delusion, and that would be by withdrawing all light and truth and permitting Satan to operate. Man's agency could never be demonstrated save by the privilege of selection, and they must have something to select from; that is, good and evil. God sent them good and they rejected it, now he sends (permits the Devil to take) delusion.

Now therefore, behold, the Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy [Ahab's] prophets, and the Lord hath spoken evil concerning thee.—1 Kings 22:23.

Why and how had God done this? Micaiah was a true prophet of God. He prophesied evil upon Ahab and the people because of their sins, and this did not suit Ahab. He wanted a prophet that would always prophesy good. He got a number of them, and Micaiah tells him how it occurred; see verse 21:—

And there came forth a spirit [evil], and stood before the Lord, and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets.

The Lord permitted that spirit to go forth; he did not sanction nor approve of his method, but as Ahab wanted deception, he permitted him to have it by giving the false spirit permission to deceive him. The explanation of the last passage will apply with equal force here. The purposes of God are that man shall have the right of choice. He sends the good and, if he refuses that, then he sends (permits) the Devil to bring evil and strong delusion that in the acceptance of them they may demonstrate their inclination to evil and place themselves in a position to be disposed of according to their acts.

Then God sent an evil spirit.—Judges 9:23.

This has nothing to do with the proposition. The proposition reads: "God lies; he sends forth lying spirits to deceive." Will you please show us where the above evil spirit lied? You cannot do it. You read the word evil and you immediately associated it with the word lie. Let me assure you that there are a good many evils in the world besides lying, and misrepresenting another, but this is bad enough.

And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing: I the Lord have deceived that prophet.—Ezek. 14:9.

The Inspired Translation says:—

I the Lord have not deceived that prophet.

Proposition twenty-one:—

"Because of man's wickedness God destroys him."

And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. . . . And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created.—Gen. 6:5, 7.

The reason for the destruction of man is given in the fifteenth and sixteenth verses of this chapter:—

For it repenteth Noah that I have created them, and that I have made them; and he hath called upon me, for they have sought his life. . . . And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence, and behold, I will destroy all flesh from off the earth.—Inspired Translation.

"Because of man's wickedness God will not destroy him":—

And the Lord said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth; neither will I again smite any more every living thing.—Gen. 8: 21.

The Inspired translation renders it:—

And Noah . . . said in his heart, I will call on the name of the Lord that he will not again curse the ground any more, etc.

This was a prayer of Noah and not a decree of God, and we have no proof that it was ever granted.

Proposition twenty-two.

"God's attributes are revealed in his works":—

For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead.—Rom. 1: 20.

The Inspired Translation reads:—

For God hath revealed unto them the invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, which are clearly seen; things which are not seen being understood by the things that are made.

We say that all God's attributes are not revealed in his works.

"God's attributes cannot be discovered":—

Canst thou by searching find out God?—Job 11: 7.

In the wrong application of this passage will you plead ignorance or willful perversion? If you were ignorant, I pity you; if you were willful, I pity you more. This was the statement of one of the men who were tantalizing Job because he trusted in God. It is neither a statement of God nor of Job, but is only a question propounded by a man who was trying to destroy Job's hope, but who offered nothing in its place. If he had lived in our day he would have been called an infidel. Please do not try to palm infidel sayings off as coming from God. I suppose before you get through you will be quoting some of the Devil's statements as found in the Bible and charging them to God.

There is no searching of his understanding.—Is. 40: 28.

How could God's understanding be reached by man? If our God was no greater than yours, we might comprehend (?) his understanding, but as he is greater, we maintain that the finite cannot wholly grasp or comprehend the infinite. We expect some day to see as we are seen and know as we are known; to see God face to face; no contradiction here.

Proposition twenty-three:—

"There is but one God." (Deut. 6: 1 and 1 Cor. 8: 4 are quoted.)

"There is a plurality of Gods":—

And God said, Let us make man in our image.—Gen. 1: 26.

This proves nothing. Had it read, "And the Gods said" you might have used it to advantage, but it does not. God (singular) said to some one else, "Let us make," etc. Please prove from Scripture whom God was speaking to, before you make your assertions. Your friends may be credulous enough to believe you without proof, but my Master has told me to "prove all things." Please prove that there was a plurality of Gods in the creation and I will accept.

And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us.—Gen. 3: 22.

By turning to the first chapter of John we discover that Jesus Christ the Son of God was present at the creation, and that all things were made by him; that is, the Son of God, and not another God.

And the Lord appeared unto him [Abraham] in the plains of Mamre, . . . and he lifted up his eyes and looked, and, lo, three men stood by him: and when he saw them, he ran to meet them from the tent door, and bowed himself toward the ground, and said, My Lord, if now I have found favor in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.—Gen. 18: 1-3.

Surely you can see a point! If this is pertinent, then I cannot see it. Why did he not say, "My Lords" if more than one was worthy of it? The Inspired Translation substitutes "My brethren" for the term "My Lord." We do not believe that either of these men was God. The first statement is that God appeared to Abraham. Then it relates another event where three persons came to him.

Verse 23 of Inspired Translation says: "And the angels which were holy men." So it has no reference to God or Gods. Well, let us try again:—

For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost.—1 John 5: 7.

You must have been reading between the lines when you found a plurality of Gods here. Whatever any other passage of Scripture says, this one does not apply. Why did you not quote the remainder of this verse? Because it was against you, eh? It reads: "And these three are one." No, you wanted to convey the idea that there were three Gods. But if it takes these three to constitute the one as applied to the Godhead, then your assumption is vain. One God the Father, one Jesus Christ the Son, one Holy Ghost, forming one Godhead. You may (?) be able to prove from Scripture that there are more true Gods than one, but this passage forever precludes the thought of more than one. It would have served your purpose admirably if we had all been dupes and accepted your rendition of the scripture without comparison. Should any representative of my faith resort to such unfair and biased means in dealing with another's views, infidel or other, I would disown him as a brother. My religion tells me to treat an infidel as I would have him treat me. Is that the principle that moves you? Would you have me resort to as unfair methods in dealing with the writings of your chiefs, Thomas Paine, Voltaire, R. G. Ingersoll, and others?

My religion teaches me to treat you right even if you are my enemy. Have you such a principle moving you? I fear not, for when I take up a copy of one of your standard periodicals I find the terms, "knave," "villian," "fool," "fanatic," as common epithets applied to those who differ from you. You find fault with God calling the man a fool who denies his existence and urge that it is poor argument, and at the same time use it as one of your chief weapons. Of course it is wrong for God, who knows what he is talking about, to call a man a fool; but it is all right for the man who "does not know" whether he is the fool or the other man, to denominate the other man the fool.

With this proposition we conclude the first division of the book, "Theological Doctrine." The next division is "Moral Precepts." It will be impossible to touch upon every passage quoted in this series of articles, hence we will treat those which have seeming show of contradiction.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, August, 1894.

STOCKBRIDGE TRIBE AGAIN.

ON August 24, 1894, I was in Cincinnati and made a search from page to page of Mr. Boudinot's work, "A Star in the West," by Elias Boudinot, L. L. D., published by D. Fenton, S. Hutchinson, and J. Dunham, Trenton, New Jersey, 1816. I again failed to find the quotation I before wrote of; viz., "An aged Indian of the Stockbridge tribe," etc. 'Tis true I may have missed it again, but rather think not.

On page 99 Mr. Boudinot says:—

The late Rev. Dr. Jonathan Edwards, of Connecticut, son of the late President Edwards, who was a man of great celebrity, as a well-read, pious divine, and of considerable erudition, was intimately associated with the Indians at Stockbridge, of the Mohegan tribe in that State from the age of six years.

Speaking of the number of Indians, Mr. B. says, on page 125:—

But to form some general idea of them, by reasoning on the subject, we will give the numbers of the nations that have come to our knowledge at different times.

Then follows the table of tribes occupying five pages, but failing to mention a Stockbridge tribe.

On pages 132, 133, the phrase, "Stockbridge and Botherton Indians" occurs, but refers to location and not tribe.

I have italicized several words to call attention. I asked the librarian if there was a later edition but could not learn of one. Brethren, still search and write. "Try, try again."

Miscellaneous Department.

NOTICE OF APPOINTMENT OF BISHOP'S AGENT FOR KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE DISTRICT.

The Saints of the above-named district will take notice of the resignation of Bro. P. B. Seaton of the office of Bishop's agent, and the appointment of Bro. David W. Cook to act in his stead. It is hoped that all will take notice of this change of appointment, and assist the new agent in forming a complete record of all members in the district, as every name should appear upon the agent's books with whatever offering it is in their power to give for the spreading of the gospel work. If every one will see that his or her name is properly enrolled with their mite, it will be of great advantage to the work and give confidence to the church beyond the borders of the district of the determination of the Saints there to make a progressive warfare in the spread of the gospel.

We extend special thanks to Bro. P. B. Seaton for his patient and careful work in the department in the past, trusting he may be blessed of the Lord in whatever department of church work he may be placed.

Ever working for the interests of the cause of our Redeemer, I am,

Very truly and respectfully yours,

E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

They stayed at Salt Lake until 1866 and then went to Malad City, Idaho, where they remained only a short time and then went overland to Gallatin county. From there they moved to Radersburg, Jefferson county, but left that place in 1876, and located at Butte City. Sr. Bowen was the mother of eleven children, of whom six survive her and are residents of Butte. ITEMS OF INTEREST.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 23.—A cyclone Thursday night laid waste a narrow strip of country 200 miles long in Iowa and Minnesota. The telegraph wires are down at many points, but the most authentic reports indicate a loss of life that may reach seventy-five, with possibly 300 people seriously injured. The property loss cannot now be estimated, but will be heavy. The cyclone struck at and near the towns of Westley, North Cerro Gordo, Britt, Osage, Iowa; and Locey and Spring Valley, Minnesota.

LOCEY, Minn., Sept. 22.—Locey presents a scene of grim desolation to-night. Cyclone and fire mowed the heart out of it last night, and people are dazed by the picture of devastation around them. With scarcely any warning the storm struck the town at 9:40, and in a half minute three lives were destroyed and $100,000 worth of property. It is a staggering blow, for the chief business houses are in ruins and the greater part of the residence district.

The storm twisted off huge oak trees as if they had been reeds and tossed the timbers of the demolished buildings about in hopeless confusion. The contents of the 819 residences which stood on the main street are mingled together over a mile of territory, and the people this afternoon are wandering about seeking to recover clothes enough to keep out the cold. They are not giving way to despair, but are working like slaves to repair as much as possible.

The above is a sample account of the storm's destructive work.

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 22.—A cyclone that originated last evening directly north of Omaha in Plymouth county, Iowa, swept clear across the State in a northeasterly direction, rushed across the line into Southeastern Minnesota, tore through that section, and spent its force in Western Wisconsin. Thousands of dollars' worth of property have been destroyed and probably fifty lives have been lost. The full extent of the disaster is not yet known, as telegraph communication is almost destroyed. According to a telegram twenty persons were killed at Emmetsburg, Whittemore, Hobart, and Algona. The cyclone burst in all its fury upon the residents of north Cerro Gordo county. The little town of Cylinder was literally swept away. Nineteen funerals were held at Algona, of victims of the cyclone. Much damage was done to farm property and crops and people killed and injured in country districts.

The President of the French Republic is in constant receipt of messages threatening his life.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Prince Albrecht of Prussia, Prince Regent of Brunswick, has declared his intention of investing large sums of money (up to 1,000,000 marks or more) in the development of the German colonial possessions in Eastern Africa. He will begin by buying up large tracts of land there for the purpose of starting coffee and indigo plantations. Prince Albrecht is the wealthiest of the Prussian Princes.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Once more has a public utterance of Emperor William created a deep impression through the empire. This time it is his emphatic reiteration of his Koenigsberg utterances addressed to the Prussian nobles and others; his majesty evidently desired that people should not be mistaken as to the attitude he has assumed towards those who oppose him, consequently in replying to the speech of welcome of the Burgomaster of Thorn, West Prussia, to day, the Emperor said he was rejoiced that Thorn had always retained the German spirit. He had, however, unfortunately, found that the conduct of their Polish fellow citizens had not been such as he desired and he, the Emperor, wished all to remember his words—to fight against the parties of revolution. Only those who fully and completely considered themselves German subjects could hope for his royal favor.

Emperor William concluded by saying: "Let us stand firm against all hostile schemes. All my subjects must stand firm at my back. Trusting that Thorn will ever be the stronghold where this is borne in mind I bid you lebewohl."

Bulgarian elections resulted favorably to the government.

A sensation has been caused in Italian army circles by the discovery that two officials of the Ministry of War offered to sell to a foreign power, plans of the documents referring to the mobilization of the Italian forces. An inquiry has been opened.

VIENNA, Sept. 24.—Telegrams received from Cracow and other places state that the Czar had a fit of apoplexy during his stay at Bjalowesh, which left him weak. His real condition is kept secret. It will be impossible for him to leave Spala.

Forty persons were injured in a recent railroad accident near Valencia, Spain.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 24.—Canada's total foreign trade has fallen off by $4,500,000 for the first two months of the fiscal year. The decline in exports alone is $3,822,000. The average duty on dutiable goods imported in August was over 30 per cent. The customs duty on coal oil amounted to over 90 per cent. The figures are: Value of oil imported $27,030; duty thereon, $24,830. The duty on cotton clothing was 33 per cent.

The Simmons Hardware Company of St. Louis has employed Rev. E. E. Duckworth, formerly of Milwaukee, to engage in institutional work for the benefit of the employees of the company.

WARSAW, Sept. 25.—Sixty houses in the City of Blasseki, in the District of Kalish, Russian Poland, where the cholera is making fearful ravages, were set on fire last night and completely destroyed. A number of the inmates of these houses who were suffering from the disease and were too weak to make any effort to save themselves were burned to death.

President Diaz of Mexico is said to favor the union of Central American States in one republic.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—A dispatch to the Times from Rome says Premier Crispi is ready to make any concessions to the church compatible with the maintenance of Italy's sovereignty over every foot of the soil. But, the correspondent adds, Italy will not concede the temporal power of the Pope.

LOURENZO MARQUEZ, Delagoa Bay, Sept. 25.—Several thousand Kaffirs are threatening to attack this town. The government has distributed arms among the white population for defense. Serious trouble is expected.

A French statistician estimates the crops of 1894 throughout the world to be 35 per cent in excess of the world's demand for consumption and seed.

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—Dispatches have been received from Vladivostock confirming the report that a Chinese mob had attacked and plundered a Siberian railway station in the Province of Ussuria, and that eight Russians who attempted to defend the station were killed by the mob. Russian troops have started in pursuit of the marauders, who have crossed the Chinese frontier.

The Brazilian government has abrogated its reciprocity treaty with the United States.

Eleven persons were drowned on Lakes Huron and Michigan during heavy gales on the 25th ult.

Indians and cattlemen engaged in a bloody battle in the Cheyenne country, west of Kingfisher, Oklahoma, September 25, as a result of Indian raids. Three Indians were killed.

Thirty persons among a gathering of 500 were injured by the collapse of a grand stand, while witnessing horse races at Worthington, Minnesota, fair grounds, September 25.

LOURENZO MARQUEZ, Delagoa Bay, Sept. 26.—The situation of affairs here is growing worse. The outlying detachments of Portuguese troops, which were hastily called in to take part in the defense of the town, were so closely pursued by the natives they were compelled to abandon their arms and ammunition. The total strength of the Portuguese troops available to defend the town is only 320 officers and men, and the Kaffirs threatening to attack it are estimated to number 7,000.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Joseph Chamberlain, speaking at Leeds last evening on the question of the abolition of the House of Lords, said he would favor any reasonable proposal to strengthen the House of Lords by giving it the authority and power derived by the United States Senate from the representative principle.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 26.—The expected hurricane from the West Indies struck Jacksonville at eleven a. m., with the wind blowing forty-six miles an hour and rain pouring down in torrents. Business is paralyzed. The Everett, the largest hotel in the city, is unroofed and flooded with water. The unfinished Union Depot is blown down. The loss is $20,000. A number of people are injured, but none killed. There is no communication with South Florida, but it is expected that many orange groves are totally ruined and crops damaged incalculably. The streets of Jacksonville are flooded. The river is three feet above the normal. The wind at the mouth of the river recorded sixty miles an hour, and Mayport is flooded and several houses inundated. Up to eight o'clock tonight ten inches of rain had fallen during the last twenty-four hours.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 26.—Everything now points to the storm equalling, if not exceeding, in violence the destructive cyclone of August, 1893. At Tybee the wind ranges as high as seventy-five miles an hour. The ocean is steadily encroaching on the island and it is thought it will be submerged completely. Those on the island will have to take refuge in the lighthouse and Martello Tower. The quarantine station, hotels, and cottages there appear to be doomed. Big loss of life on the Sea Islands is feared. The highest velocity of wind was forty-six miles an hour. The rice crop not harvested may be entirely destroyed by an inrush of salt water. The cotton fields along the coast probably are also nearly destroyed.

MASSILLON, O., Sept. 23.—By refusing to yield and rejecting the operators' compromise of a 65 cents' rate the Massillon miners have closed their case and orders have been sent to Birmingham to forward the negroes. Four hundred have thus far been engaged. The time limit for accepting the compromise offer closed at noon. Every arrangement for housing and guarding the new men has been completed with military exactitude.

TOKIO, Japan, Sept. 9, via San Francisco, Sept. 24.—China is willing to agree to a compromise, according to well-authenticated rumors, but Japan insists on war. A great fleet of transports, carrying 40,000 troops, is to sail in three days from Japan. Its destination is a carefully guarded secret, but there is a rumor an attempt will be made to march direct to Pekin from some convenient point on the Chinese coast. The Emperor will start September 13 for Hiroshima, in the inland sea, the new war headquarters. All news relating to movements of the army or the navy is rigidly suppressed here, but troops are marching night and day to the various rendezvous and a military railway system connecting the principal arsenals and forts is being built hurriedly.

A treaty has been signed between Japan and Corea. The agreement is as follows: 1. This alliance has for its objects the expulsion of Chinese troops from the Corean borders, the strengthening of the independence and self-government of Corea, and the furtherance of the interests of Japan and Corea. 2. While Japan shall wage war, offensive and defensive, against China, Corea shall render every facility for the movement of the Japanese troops and the preparation of their provisions. 3. This treaty shall become null and void as soon as peace is concluded with China.

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 9, via San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 24.—The Foreign Department of Japan has this day given notice that duly accredited newspaper correspondents may hereafter accompany the military forces of the empire and will receive all consideration that can reasonably be given by commanders of troops.

The murder of the two missionaries by Chinese soldiers has been followed by the assassination of the French customs officer on the frontier of Tonquin. These acts of violence are greatly embarrassing to Pekin authorities and it is announced reparation will be offered in the case of the Rev. Mr. Wylie by executing his assailants, rebuilding the wrecked chapel, and paying a sum of money to the family of the victim. The unprecedented step may be taken of expressing regret in an imperial edict.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 147 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplemental chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

The work of strengthening the defenses along the Chinese coast is continued mainly by posting floating batteries at points of supposed danger.

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 24.—A rescript has been issued convoking an extra session of the Japanese Parliament at Hiroshima, October 15, for seven days. A letter received here from Tien Tsin says the Chinese fleet landed 7,000 troops on the banks of the Yalu River in spite of the attack of the Japanese squadron. The letter adds that the Chinese ships engaged in the battle fought off the Yalu River were short of ammunition. They were ordered by Col. Van Hannekin to ram the Japanese vessels, but the order was given too late, as the Japanese were already retiring.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 27.—Capt. Onslow, late commander of the flagship of the British Asiatic squadron, who was a passenger by the Empress of India, en route home on sick leave, says, although the Japanese have the better of the fight so far, he thinks China will ultimately win. Native enthusiasm, he says, in Japan is most intense, and not only are large numbers volunteering for active service, but private subscriptions to a large figure have been contributed by rich and poor alike. Capt. Onslow says Japan's army is one of the best disciplined he has ever seen.

Inhuman barbarity marks the course of the Chinese army. The Chinese Taotai of Formosa offered a prize for Japanese heads. Koreans have been enlisted, and three Japanese heads transixed on spears are reported to grace the walls of Pyong Yang, and the hands of five of their foes were nailed to gates of Whang Ju by Chinese.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 27.—The reported plan of Mexico to unite all the Central American States in one great republic is doubted at the Mexican Legation here.

TOKIO, Japan, Sept. 14, via Victoria, B. C., Sept. 26.—Details of an attempt made by Li Hung Chang to sound Japan on the question of arbitration without committing himself were heard this morning from high authority.

Lord Li got no answer. All attempts to bring about arbitration now will fail. Japan wants to fight. It has new arms, modern tactics, and handsome European uniforms. The atmosphere is electric with the spirit of war. The army is mad with enthusiasm. The government is drunk with egotism. So magnificent is the vanity at this moment that a war with England would be popular. No one dreams of defeat. It is only a question of the date when the Japanese army will camp in the streets of Pekin and the Son of Heaven will humbly sue for peace.

Should the time arrive when arbitration would be possible both China and Japan probably would name as arbitrators the United States, Belgium, and Switzerland. England has no standing in Japan. Its attitude recently has been that of a bully. Admiral Freemantle has addressed letters to Admiral Ito couched in the most insulting terms.

There are rumors that Li Hung Chang has secured several new ships and has managed to get large supplies of modern rifles since the war began.

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 27.—Dispatches from Chicoutimi and Bay St. Paul, east of here on the north shore of the St Lawrence River, report a light earthquake shock at eight o'clock this morning, lasting thirty seconds.

President Cleveland has issued a proclamation granting full amnesty and pardon to all Utah Mormons now suffering deprivation of civil rights who have been convicted of violating the laws prohibiting the practice of polygamy, unlawful cohabitation, plural marriage, etc., on condition of abandonment of polygamy and obedience to the laws of the United States.

A "congress of arbitration" will be held in Chicago, November 13 and 14.

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 27.—A furious storm is raging to-night along the Virginia coast and it is feared there will be a great loss of life and property. The tide is higher at Norfolk and Newport News than it has been in many years and is still rising.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The West Indian hurricane is making its way steadily in this direction. Early in the day it was off the coast of South Carolina. It is traveling slowly in a northeasterly direction with a rotary motion describing a circle of about 2,000 miles in diameter.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 27.—Forest fires this afternoon laid waste a large portion of the southern and eastern parts of Crow Wing county. Driven by a fierce gale the flames traveled with lightning rapidity. Many farmers have lost all their crops and buildings, but it is impossible to-night to get anything like an authentic estimate of the loss. No fatalities have been reported yet, but grave fears are entertained for the safety of many families known to have been in the fire belt.

Bishop Keane, of Washington, lately returned from Rome, is quoted as saying that the Pope's forthcoming encyclical letter to American prelates would set forth certain important enlargements in the functions, authority, and dignity of the apostolic delegation in the United States, over which Mgr. Satollí presides. It is probable the jurisdiction will be so enlarged that the Alegate's authority will be supreme in this country and will not be subject to appeals to Rome. The supreme authority of the Alegate would extend to cases of dispute, and would be in the nature of a supreme court, subject, however, to the papal power on all questions outside of those of church discussion and procedure.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28.—The report of the Third Auditor of the Treasury for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894, shows the total disbursements at pension agencies on account of pensions for that year have been $137,636,981.

SHANGHAI, China, Sept. 28.—It is reported that the Japanese have succeeded in entering the Chinese Province of Manchuria, and that they are advancing on the capital, Moukden. It is also said fighting has taken place between the invaders and the Chinese at a town between that city and the frontier. The engagement is said to have ended in a decisive victory for the Japanese, who established themselves in the position previously occupied by the Chinese troops.

The Emperor is dissatisfied with the course events are taking and affairs are gradually working toward a coupé d'état. The Chinese war ship Kwang Chan is reported to have been lost while running from the fight off the mouth of the Yalu River.

It is reported that the Emperor has granted Li Hung Chang's request to be allowed to take the field in person.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 28.—One hundred and ninety-seven persons have been arrested for being implicated in the riots of the last four days. Italian and Portuguese houses have been fired. The police and marine are active. Many cries of "Death to the tyrant" were heard. Troops are here in barracks and sailors with boats are ready to land. President Peixoto announces that aid from foreign war ships is necessary.

Massillon, Ohio, miners have agreed to abide local arbitration of their differences with operators. Over two thousand will resume work October 2.

JOSEPHS WITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

COMPARATIVE THERAPEUTICS.

A CHICAGO publication furnishes the following statement: "Cook County Hospital is located in Chicago, and is one of the largest in the world. It contains from 800 to 900 patients all the time. Dr. Streeter has furnished the following statistics for the past five years.

"The total number of patients admitted to the hospital during this time was 43,598. Of those 28,121 were assigned to the Allopathic school, 8,509 to the Homœopathic school and 6,968 to the Eclectic. The total number of deaths in the hospital during this time was 4,774. Of the Allopaths' 28,121 they lost 3,340, a death rate of 11.88 per cent. Of the Homœopaths' 8,509 they lost 766, exactly 9 per cent. Of the Eclectics' 6,968 they lost 668, or 9.56 per cent. Thus it will be seen that, while the entire death sum total is 4,774, if the Allopaths had treated all the patients in the hospital for five years the number of deaths would have been 5,179, or would have cost the country 405 more lives to have had the institution altogether under Allopathic control. Another way of putting it is this: While the death record shows 4,774 losses, if the Eclectics had treated all of the patients the number of deaths would have been 4,167, and if the Homœopaths had treated them all it would have been but 3,923."

The statistics as they are given are valuable in a comparative sense, although it must be said that to reflect upon them in the manner indicated by the writer in the closing lines of the paragraph savors much of the ad captandum. It is but reasonable to admit that we can scarcely compare cases of illness or disease, although coming under the same diagnostic class, as we would pumpkins or gooseberries, and draw absolutely true conclusions from their mortality; nevertheless showings of the kind given must have a derogatory reflection upon the less successful methods. There is one class or school of therapeutics, however, that we should like to have seen represented in such a competition, viz., the hygienic, for we believe that with a fair opportunity it would show to our Homœopathic and Eclectic contemporaries, some advantage in the mortality rate over them. What "experimenting" there has been in hospital service in the hygienic or hydropathic line by physicians, for the most part by no means well equipped for the work, has obtained results very prejudicial to the common drug method. When, however, the question is asked why the hygienic procedure is not adopted since its effects are so far superior to the other? we are met by the answer—quite impracticable to introduce it generally.—D. in Phrenological Journal.

RULES IN SPEAKING.

- Speak in chest tones.
- Pronounce vowel sounds correctly.
- Say "It is I," and "He went with me."
- Speak distinctly, but softly and slowly.
- Pronounce the o in "stone" like that in "go."
- Give each syllable its proper value or length.
- Say "waistcoat" and "trousers," and not "vest" and "pants."
- Say "memorandum" in the singular and "memoranda" in the plural.
- Avoid coarseness and rudeness of speech, and language and harsh laughter.
- Pronounce the letter r in words where it occurs, as in "arm," "girl," "rubber."
- Lower the voice and speak slowly when one wishes to enforce one's authority.
- Train children carefully to read aloud, both for the sake of the voice and the pronunciation.
- Avoid the overdelicacy of language and affectation of precision which belong to persons of narrow culture.
- Say "sir" or "madam" if one have occasion to address a stranger, using the word "madam" for a single as well as for a married lady.
- Pronounce correctly, studying not only the dictionary but the language of living speakers who are entitled to speak with authority.
- Pronounce in English fashion the names of foreign places and persons which have become Anglicised, as Paris, Vienna, Napoleon.
- Teach children to say, "Yes, mother (or father)" and "No, mother," and to say "Yes, sir (or madam)," to old people or to those who adhere to the old ways of speech.
- Remember that slang is unmeaning as well as inelegant and that words like "jolly," "beastly," etc., used in season and out of season, soon lose all their meaning.
- Use words of Saxon rather than of Latin origin whenever it is possible to do so, thus gaining terseness and vigor rather than a large number of syllables with diminished force.

Use the words "man" and "woman" in many instances where formerly one would have said "lady" and "gentleman," the latter words having largely lost their significance from excessive use—or abuse. The phrase, "Mrs. Ames is a charming woman" would now be preferred to "Mrs. Ames is a charming lady."

"Progress of the World," the editorial department of the October Review of Reviews, covers the following topics of national and international interest: "The Bryant Anniversary," "The Elmira Reformatory," "Education for the Bar," "American Explorers in Ancient Fields," "Our Arctic Parties," "The Northwestern Forest Fires," "Drouth and Irrigation in the West," "The Struggle Over Corea," "Nicaragua and the Mosquito Coast," "Venezuela and British Aggression," "The Nicaragua Ship Canal," "Mr. Depew on the State of Europe," "Postmaster Dayton on the British Postal Service," "Mayor Gilroy on Municipal Government Abroad," "The Movement Against Tammany," "The Elections and the Reactionary Drift," "The New York Republicans," "Peace, War, and Christianity," "Industrial Warfare," "A Wet Harvest in England," "The Lords and the Irish," "Another Irish Land Bill," "Perils of the Rosebery Ministry," "Labor and Liberalism," "The Eight Hours Day in England," "Continental Politics," "British Holiday Parliaments," "Enfranchised Woman in New Zealand," "Australian 'Notions,' Political, Agrarian, and Industrial," and the deaths of the Count of Paris and Professor von Helmholtz.

A paper which will be sure to attract the attention of all college men and graduates, as well as others interested in the social movements of our day, is Carl Vrooman's "College Debating" in the October Arena. This article is more important than its title at the first glance indicates. It is a description of an entirely new force and movement in college life, one which will put the men into touch with the social problems of the world for which they are preparing to take an active part for good or evil. The old college debating societies have been revived and an Inter-collegiate Debating Union has been formed, in which every club is to discuss a certain programme and then meet for parliamentary debates. In this connection the college debating societies are to discuss the same topics as the Practical Progress and kindred societies, and so they will possess an educational and practical value for the colleges equal to almost any prescribed course in the curriculum.

Dr. Heinrich Hensoldt's third paper on "Occult Science in Thibet" appears in the October Arena. This series of articles has created a great deal of discussion. Some writers are violently opposed to Dr. Hensoldt's statements and refuse to consider them seriously; others regard them as of the greatest importance and value.

A Mexican named Modericos died at Ingram, near Kerryville, Texas, September 23. His relatives and intimate friends assert most positively he was 150 years old. He has been married five times, marrying his first wife 150 years ago. He had three grown sons in the war of 1812.

Strangely enough the busiest tongues are generally responsible for the most idle words.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit of Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

THE GREATEST MEN

IN THE

WORLD'S HISTORY

Have had remarkable memories. The stories of great captains who knew names or faces of all the men in their commands, or of merchant princes who could instantly quote the prices in the principal markets of the world, are familiar. A slight investigation will show that the most successful business men are possessed of wonderful memories. The leaders of finance rarely seek assistance for a figure or a name, and are thus able to act and to win while other men are investigating. It is this power which enables millionaire operators, merchant princes, and railroad kings to surprise the world by the transaction of an apparently impossible amount of business during the short hours of a working day.

The demands of commercial life are daily becoming onerous; more details must be mastered, more facts and figures remembered. Only the possessor of a powerful memory can win and hold a chief position in the world of work.

The autobiography has been revised by Bro. Luff since its publication in Autumn Leaves, and a large amount of doctrinal matter has been added in appropriate places. TWO SERMONS, one on the "Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of Man," and one on "The Modern Stumbling-Stone," have been added also, making it just the kind of a book to have in the family.

OBLATIONS.

THOU shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High.

To secure a uniform observance of this commandment of the Spirit is the object of what shall be written herein. Quite frequently we are appealed to for counsel regarding the best plan to adopt, and as often we are offered suggestions by the inquirers.

By some the term oblations is held to mean money contributions alone; by others simply prayer, song, and testimony, or either of these separate. Under the Old Testament regime sacrifices enjoined of the Lord, such as fruits, cereals, flesh, etc., were called oblations and were associated with the services of the altar by which sometimes the sinner was released from condemnation. The words offerings, vows, sacrifices, and oblations, are used synonymously in various places and include in their meaning everything connected with human duty under the law.

The New Testament writers enjoin the offering up of "spiritual sacrifices." By one we are counseled to present our bodies as a living sacrifice. By others thanksgiving, faith, and praise are referred to as sacrifices. Paul acknowledged the gifts sent him by the Philippians by the hand of Epaphroditus, as a sacrifice well-pleasing and acceptable to God. All these were oblations in the proper sense, having become a part of the service at the altar of "spiritual sacrifice."

In the section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants from which the quotation introducing this article is taken, we have all these things included as parts of acceptable service. It reads:—

Wherefore I give unto them a commandment saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. . . . Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things. Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit. And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord.—D. and C. 59: 2.

Here we have the words "vows," "devotions," "sacraments," and "oblations" used in such connection as to warrant almost a single interpretation—the word "sacraments" being in the plural, may indicate more than merely partaking of bread and wine—and all being associated with confession of sins committed, as was the case in Old Testament times. To a believer in the necessity for financial aid to support the cause, there should be no difficulty in concluding that the law pertaining to temporal things is a spiritual law, hence whatever is done under that law in either tithes or free-will offerings, is a part of the "spiritual sacrifices" enjoined and may be safely included in the meaning of the word "oblations." We are informed in the word that all God's laws are spiritual and surely by this the law that calls for financial support is declared to be spiritual.

We believe that Saints are thus obligated to offer up the evidences of their affection in prayer, praise, faith, confession, and money, to the extent that their ability and the necessity may reach or demand.

In some of our large branches a collection is taken up at each sacrament meeting, either immediately after the opening services, or immediately before or after passing the emblems. We see no reason why either of these practices might not obtain, as the branches may severally appoint; but we see good reason why no branch should ignore the provision for oblations any more than that which they understand to refer to the bread and wine. All should be carefully observed, and the nearer we can approach uniformity of observance the better will the general results be.

All Saints should operate in the interests of harmony, and it is better to observe all that may be possibly enjoined in an obscure statement, when it is found to be in accord with the provisions of law separately recorded elsewhere, than to fail without ample reason, and take the risk of dishonoring a divine appointment.

We believe that the passage referred to authorizes all we have enumerated as details of service, and we exhort all Saints to pay their oblations in the way and at the times stated. Peace, good will, and prosperity will follow its observance, and surely this is "a consummation devoutly to be wished."

PATHS TO HIGHER DESTINIES.

THE spirit of the gospel is a broad one, as broad as the universe itself. It must be and is as comprehensive as the character of God. It overlooks the wellbeing and rights of none; it seeks the good and perfection of all. Its presence in individual life is designed to be constant, abiding, that there may be constant, abiding enlightenment, purity of heart, and nobility of purpose; and that every principle essential to perfection may be strongly affirmed, maintained. He who is sufficiently influenced by it becomes capable of discerning the good existing in anyone or anywhere. He recognizes it, and in the nobleness of his nature and goodness of his soul finds genuine satisfaction and pleasure in noting and crediting the presence of good, and is thus further broadened by such liberality in recognition. He observes and credits the existence of good, because he is seeking good. While he observes the evil or faulty so far as necessary, his observation of them does not lead him to surmising, to suspicion. He perceives the evil only from necessity, for protection; in a secondary, not in a primary sense. His sense of seeing, his developed powers of observation, his gift of discernment, cause him to see things as they are; but he is looking for good; and possessing or having partaken of the divine nature, is enabled to descry whatever degree of good exists. He can thus judge righteously, so far as his knowledge permits him to judge, and be charitable and just. He who cultivates the virtues of generousness, charity, forbearance, brotherly kindness, etc., finds therein lasting and deepening pleasure, surpassing immeasurably the enjoyments of lesser things. The truer the virtues attained, the deeper, the purer the satisfactions of the soul. Too many drink from surface springs; the still waters of life run deep, and the clear light is hidden save to those who seek carefully and thoroughly, and whose hearts are pure and true enough to receive and sense their sacred purport. A man may have the calm of conscience and the reign of peace within though all about him be in conditions of disquiet and unrest. God is the author of peace, and he who dwells in God has peace in his heart and is calm and unmoved by fear, or by ordinary causes of apprehension or trouble.

"Fervent charity"—strong, living love—the apostle admonished the saints to put on, to have, to possess. Those who have it gladly welcome the evidences of goodness and excellence in others, and are slow to suspicion or condemn any who give evidence of love of the truth and desire to do right. They are above the low desires and base designs that make another's virtues less.

It is a dangerous thing to assume to pass unto the exercise of judgment upon individuals in cases or conditions where God has reserved such judgment to himself. It in itself justifies a presumption of spiritual pride, and harshness, and narrowness, and causes loss to those who permit themselves to so assume and judge. It is unjust, cruel, and merciless.

If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

God is "faithful" and "just" to his children when they confess and make amends. Confession, and repentance, and correction, and overcoming instance love of the right, and indicate strength of character. This God accepts; mortals should not presume to do otherwise. It is only when evidence of unwillingness to confess and rectify is manifest that condemnation is justifiable. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." Saints are called to the high purpose and mission of sustaining, encouraging, and helping; not to the exercise of unjust judgments and use of harsh, undermining, disheartening criticisms.

Where a spirit of justness prevails there will be unity, confidence, and progress, and prevailing causes of division will disappear. Commonly existing errors and petty littleness cannot long thrive among people when the many discourage the nurture and growth of such elements. "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith," is the true method. Distrust should not prevail without clear, unmistakable evidence of unworthiness; when the evidence of lack of sincerity and integrity warrants withholding of confidence and requires careful, protective scrutiny to guard against deception and hypocrisy.

No soul can be narrow and yet be great; no one can be little, contracted, and accomplish much for humanity. The instruments to be used for good must rise to the occasion, must meet the demand; must love much, must have a breadth of sympathy that will go out to all humanity and encourage all who elect to be just and true, and all who can be induced to amend their ways.

The Spirit of God is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the hearts of all. It recognizes and appreciates nobility of soul wherever found. It also pities littleness, narrowness, or anything bordering on the Pharisaical. The spirit of our work is one with the true spirit of our national institutions—it is a declaration of complete independence from bigotry, injustice, and narrowness in every form and in every place.

Generous, honest, independent-minded men and women are the noblest works of God. They are master spirits through whose potent influence a grander humanity is being developed in the world, and in which men and women are to become free indeed. Let us have this spirit prevailing everywhere among the people of God, and we shall have what the church is designed to be—the strongest organization in the world because representing and exemplifying all truth; an intelligent, pure, and compact body that will be recognized by all who love truth and are not afraid to affirm it, but whose souls will rejoice in the genuine satisfaction of standing by it, frankly, independently, steadfastly.

Rigidity, narrowness, or undue formality will dwarf and hamper any soul. We must free ourselves if we would rise to the higher atmosphere where the purer air is breathed, where the vision is clear and more extended, where the impulses of mind and heart are broadened and strengthened, and the paths to higher destinies lie open before us; the way to the healing fruit of the tree of life and to God.

No one should permit suggestions of evil, injustice, harshness, nor any negation of the law of love and kindness to find place in the heart. Individuals who live in the high planes of life are safe from wrong thinking, from wrongdoing, from the warping influences of narrowness, and from deception.

WHY BE TROUBLED?

"WHAT we shall be" in the future "doth not yet appear."

Thus wrote the Apostle John to the church, after which he added the comforting words:—

But we know that, when he [Christ] shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.

To Saints who believe this announcement and who are carefully heeding the suggestion that follows, to purify themselves, "even as he is pure," there need come no worry of mind regarding the details connected with God's part of the work of transformation in us. Outside of the rightful discharge of the obligations imposed upon us by the Lord, whose likeness we are hereafter to bear, we need not burden our minds with anxiety as to the process by which that image is to be secured. It should be enough to know that it is a part of the pledge our Father has made, conditionally, that we shall be like Christ and "see him as he is."

The evidences received by us here confirmative of the gospel's truth should be a sufficient guarantee that the promises relating to the after life will be as literally realized. A divine pledge holds good wherever it applies if the conditions upon which it is based are honored, and if heaven has not proven neglectful of the details that contribute to a fulfillment here, it is safe to hope that the future will not reveal any exception to this order. Those without the fold, to whom the "word" has not been "confirmed" by "signs following," may to themselves appear consistent in doubting the promises of a resurrection to after life; but with Saints it is different. They see in the experiences now enjoyed the evidence that thousands of years, in their passing, have not changed the purpose, or dulled the memory of the God in whom they trust; and by this they have assurance that "all his promises are yea and amen." Though many thousands more of years shall be required in which to completely unfold and consummate his design, there will be no inaccuracies or failures even in the minutest details that relate thereto.

Our gospel enjoins no necessity upon its believers and advocates to apologize for divine procedure in the past. With pride we point to a host of recorded doctrinal and other items for which no place can be found in human systems; but which adjust themselves so admirably and harmoniously to the machinery of the church as re-established in this generation as to demonstrate their divine pre-ordination to such place and service. By this we employ the same method as did Jesus when he quoted the words familiar to his hearers, "the stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner." The stone was divinely appointed and prepared, but there was no place for it in human structures where its functions could be properly performed, hence it was rejected and dishonored. The development of the heavenly plan revealed its place and necessity, at length, however, and God's wisdom was magnified while human wisdom was put to shame. All the creations of God are part of his design. Till we see the associate parts and witness their cooperation, we may question the wisdom of the creator; but the "gathering together in one" that has been going on since the angel message was first sounded, has helped many a murderer to learn doctrine and admire the beauty of divine prearrangement. A place has been found in religion for much that seemed like waste creation before, and faith has thus been created in promises and offices that relate to future life—even the resurrection of the dead itself—within the minds of many who once “erred in spirit.”

What grander assurance need the trustful Saint ask that his or her resurrected body will be fully adapted to the estate it has prepared itself to inherit, than is found in the body now occupied. If infinite wisdom is voiced in providing a body here so wondrously adapted to the conditions of earth life, and this life is but a probation, or has been ordained as a means to an end, does not faith, by investigation, grow into knowledge, when we see the marvelous accuracy with which every organ and member has been created and arranged? If all this care—this divine wisdom and skill—has been exercised in providing for the temporary condition, will there be less revealed in the work of adapting us to the higher conditions to which we tend?

Paul the apostle once wrote to the Romans that “the invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made.” If this be true then surely the ground of our hope is safe, and Saints may rest the matter of their coming forth, without fear in the hands of him who hath given such evidence of wisdom, love, and power, in the provision made for this estate upon which we have already entered.

John wrote truthfully: “It doth not yet appear what we shall be;” but it is enough to know that we shall be like Christ. Little matters it to the true believer whether the literal and identical particles of his present body are preserved or lost, whether he shall go to the grave in full flesh or emaciated, whether his physical parts have been buried together or thousands of miles apart, whether in rising he shall have the flaxen hair of his boyhood, the denser color and growth of his manhood, or the white locks of his advanced age, whether he shall be tall or short, or plump or slim, or what the tinge of his complexion may be. It matters not whether his bones have been preserved in some sacred spot, or his ashes from the altar that consumed them have been blown abroad by the winds of heaven. He whose pledge stands good in this life to those who keep the law of life, will maintain the righteousness of his purpose and prove himself a redeemer indeed of pledges and of men, when the hour for our appearance is announced. In that hour “we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.” Glorious hope, indeed. If at that day the processes by which the varied transformations have been wrought in our physical appearance are explained, we shall be content to listen and shall doubtless find therein cause for praise, and wonder, and delight. But we expect to find more cause for praise in the moral changes wrought by which our characters have been made to bear his likeness. In this we confess deep interest now, hence are anxious to listen further to the apostle, and confess his wisdom when he says:—

And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

We have this hope, hence need this purification, without which the hope must forever fail of fruition.

SECOND SCOTT-BRADEN DEBATE.

THE following clipping from the North Judson, Indiana, News, of September 27, and the statements of Bro. I. M. Smith which follow it, contain news so far received from the second Scott-Braden debate. An additional report will probably be sent us after the discussion has been concluded:—

Elders Scott and Smith, well known and highly respected representatives of the Latter Day Saints, came to the city Monday, putting a stop to unkind utterances to the effect that they were afraid to show themselves. This fight began in a friendly discussion between Revs. Faunce and Scott, and would have so ended, but when the curtain lifted on Clark Braden, who might be termed “the Chicago rag masticator,” he began a dirty, nasty, foul-mouthed, egotistical, and personal attack that has caused old-time friends to become slanderous enemies, and changed genuine love into a feeling of hatred that will never die down. Most of his tirade upon the Saints is pronounced by those outside of both churches and by some members of the Christian Church as ungentlemanly, unchristian, untrue, unprofessional, and decidedly un-Christlike. No minister of God’s word should pause to reply to it. A howling Chicago alderman would find it more in his regular line of business. We are sorry for Mr. Faunce. He is a good, Christian man, and we have so much confidence in his sincerity as to firmly believe that he is heartily ashamed of the present religious crisis at Knox. May God’s infinite goodness teach the younger element of church workers here to forsake this path of petty, narrow contractedness and live a higher and nobler life; a life that will crown them with palms of glory in the land beyond, where men who try to spread such a malady as is now prevalent in Knox will be “dumped” through the skylight. BUSH.

Bro. Smith’s card is dated Knox, Indiana, September 28, and is as follows:—

Will you please give place for marked extract in North Judson, Indiana, News, of the 27th. We don’t know who wrote it but it expresses the prevailing sentiment in this town. The Rev. Faunce referred to is the Disciple minister of this place. Mr. Braden had lectured against our faith about one week before we arrived, and yet when he got up to make his last speech the first night of the debate (he being in the negative) nearly one third of the congregation got up and left. The Saints, however, staid with him.

During the first quarter of 1894 the marriage of 93,336 persons is registered in London.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

WE publish Bro. M. H. Forscutt’s dedicatory hymn “Evanelia,” which was sung at the dedication of the gospel boat. Writing from San Francisco under date of September 25, Bro. Forscutt says:—

The Evanelia was dedicated; that is, services were held by her side and prayer offered upon her on Sunday last, the 23d. A goodly number were present.

We learn from Bishop Kelley that the Evanelia has attracted much attention in San Francisco and vicinity, and has been a means of widely advertising the church and its faith.

President Joseph Smith wrote from Little Sioux, Iowa, September 29, as follows:—

I have spoken every night since leaving Logan, but two, Sunday evening at Woodbine, where there was a mass union service in the M. E. church, and Wednesday evening of this week, when I attended the prayer service here. Am feeling quite well. I will be here till Tuesday. Go to Moorhead tomorrow for the morning service. Will go from here to Council Bluffs. Had full houses at Moorhead and here, excellent liberty and good attention.

Australian news: Bro. Richard Ellis, writing to Bro. John Scott, from Sydney, September 2, says:—

Bro. Kaler is here for a short time while waiting for Bro. Butterworth from Victoria. They are going up country to open new places, and Bro. Gomer Wells will go to Victoria to take the place of Bro. Butterworth. A young man, a brother from Victoria, was taken very ill with mental derangement and had to be sent to a hospital. He was administered to and got but temporary relief, so the Australian Saints fasted and prayed in his behalf on Sunday, August 19, and he received the blessing—was restored to soundness of mind, but was very weak in body.

Bro. John Kaler wrote from Tuncurry, New South Wales, September 2:—

Bro. Wells is now in Victoria, and Bro. Butterworth will soon be here to labor with me for six months. We hope and pray for a future increase.

Bro. R. M. Maloney was at El Reno, Oklahoma, the 1st inst., whence he wrote:—

Interest on the increase. We commence at the “sod schoolhouse” on the first Sunday, to continue a couple of weeks. Prospects are more encouraging in this field than at first. We look for a good harvest. Several are near where I have lately labored. We will return in a few weeks, and hope to see many added to the fold. Very dry and dusty.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

CONFERENCE of the Northern Illinois district will convene at Plano, Saturday, October 13, at ten a.m., instead of at Mission, as appointed; see notice of Bro. F. G. Pitt, district president, elsewhere. Diphtheria prevails and increases at Mission, and threatens to stop public gatherings.

Brn. A. H. and F. A. Smith returned to Lamoni on the 1st inst., from the Nauvoo and String Prairie district, where both have been laboring of late.

Sr. Lydia Hoag, No. 108 Winter street, Grand Rapids, Michigan, requests resident members of the church to call on or write her.

Letters are received from Bro. C. Edwards, Zonker, Missouri, and Sr. H. Morris, Xenia, Illinois. Sr. Morris regrets the death of one of the workers among the Saints, but is hopeful that the loss will stimulate others to greater activity; that the ranks may be kept compact, and continue to advance.

Bro. N. R. Nickerson of North Plymouth, Massachusetts, wrote under date of the 30th ult., reporting local labor done at North Weymouth, where faithful Saints welcome the laborer and have influence for good among the people. Prospects were good.

Bishop E. L. Kelley is again at headquarters, having returned from Independence on the 2d inst.

Bro. A. S. Cochran started for El Dorado Springs, Missouri, on Friday the 5th inst., to attend the South-western Missouri reunion.

Bro. J. W. Wight went to Woodford, Iowa, October 3, to enter upon the fall campaign in Western Iowa.

The Upper House of Hungary has passed a bill granting liberty of worship to all religious denominations. A Protestant church flourishes in Catholic Spain, though the Primate of the State declares it an invasion of the rights of the Spanish Episcopate. With the dawn and state recognition of religious liberty in the ultra Catholic countries of Hungary and Spain, the final prevalence of religious and civil liberty throughout the world need not be doubted. God reigns, and is overruling the developments of the world for good.

EVANELIA.

TUNE, NEW YEAR, PAGE 179.

Written and sung at the Dedication of Evanelia, built for the purpose of Mission Work of the South Sea Islands. By Professor M. H. Forscutt.

We thank the Lord that we have lived to see
The Evanelia launched upon the sea
Whose islanders await God's sons to hear;
Go, Evanelia, go, convey them there.

The deep blue waves of old Pacific ride
In calm security, for God will guide
Thee on thy gospel mission, souls to save,
For whom the dear Lord Christ his life's blood gave.

Tahiti and four hundred islands pray,
The Georgian, Friendly, and Paumotu's say,
"Come, Evanelia, come, God's servants bring,
To ransom us from error and Death's sting."

America, we hail thee! Friend to all;
Thy faithful sons and daughters heard our call;

They built thee, Evanelia, we desire
God thee to bless, and them: We but aspire
To reach Truth's eminence, successful be
And set each South Sea Isle from error free;
The men of every hue to Jesus win;
Go, Evanelia, go,—the work begin.

Dear Evanelia, thee we dedicate
To Jesus Christ, his ministers thy freight,
Upright and holy men, none can condemn,
Thy cargo ever be, Amen, Amen.

To guide the pencil, turn the tuneful page;
To lend new flavor to the fruitful year,
And heighten nature's dainties; in their race
To rear their graces into second life;
To give society its highest taste:
Well ordered home man's best delight to make;
And by submissive wisdom, modest skill,
With every gentle, care-eluding art,
To raise the virtues, animate the bliss,
Even charm the pains to something more than joy,
And sweeten all the toils of human life;

HELPING HAND.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER EIGHTEEN, HINTS
ON CHILD TRAINING.

CULTIVATING A CHILD'S TASTE IN READING.

AS THE body is benefited by exercise, so the health of the mind is invigorated by proper reading. But there is reading that debilitates and debases the mind, and instead of forming a basis for knowledge, lessens the desire for knowledge. The habit of reading is usually formed in childhood, and parents are directly responsible as to whether their child's taste in reading takes the right or the wrong direction; and it is their duty to shape and cultivate that taste.

A child ought to love to read books that will help his growth in character and in knowledge. And a child will love to read such books as his parents permit or cause him to find pleasure in. The parent settles this question, and the child reaps the consequences of the parent's action or inaction in the matter.

A child's reading need not be limited to those books alone which add to his knowledge or tend directly to improve his morals. Amusement and some play of imagination are as legitimate in a child's reading as are recreation and laughter in his physical training.

"Books should to one of these four ends conduce,
For wisdom, piety, delight, or use."

Reading which merely delights for the time may help form a character that includes wisdom, piety, and useful knowledge. But no child should be left to his own untutored taste in his choice of reading; neither should he be made to read any books as a dry task. His taste should be so cultivated by the judicious and persistent efforts of his parents that he will enjoy instructive books as well as amusing ones.

"Nonsense songs" and "Mother Goose melodies" have their place, which is to amuse and attract toward early reading. But these should be regarded only as aids toward something better. So, also, with the better class of fairy tales. They meet a want in a child's mind, in the developing and exercising of his imagination; but here is only the beginning of a good work in a child's reading, and the parent should see that it does not stop here.

There is a place for fiction in a child's reading. Good impressions can be made on a child's mind, and his feelings swayed toward the right, by means of a story that is fictitious without being false. But fiction ought not to be the chief factor in any child's reading, nor can influence and impression take the place of instruction and information in the filling of his mind's treasure chambers. To read even the best religious story books alone will not develop a child's highest mental faculties or foster his truest manhood. He needs also to read that which adds to his stock of knowledge and which gives him a fresh interest in the events and personages of the world's history.

A child is naturally inclined to prefer an amusing or exciting story book to a book of straightforward fact. But that is no reason why he should follow his own tastes in the matter any more than that he should be allowed always to eat cake in place of bread, or candy rather than meat or potatoes. Parents must cultivate in their children a taste for right reading of every sort if they would have them attain to the best that is possible for them.

A wise parent can train children to an interest in any book which ought to interest them. He can cultivate in them a taste for history, biography, travel, popular science, and other useful knowledge, so that they will find these books more satisfying than do their companions the exciting or delusive stories of fiction or fancy. There are boys and girls of ten and twelve years of age whose chief delight in reading is in the realm of instructive fact, and who think it beneath them to spend time to read fictitious story books—religious or sensational. And there would be more children with such elevated tastes in reading if more parents did their duty in the matter.

But it is no easy matter for a parent to do this duty. He must first see the importance of his work and then give himself to it from his children's early years until they are well established in good habits of reading. He must know what his children ought to read and what books ought to be kept from them. Then he must set about making the good books attractive while he shuts out all the harmful ones. This takes time, thought, patience, determination, and intelligent effort, but it will pay beyond its greatest cost.

It is of peculiar importance to keep out that which is evil, for if a child once gains a love for exciting fiction it is doubly difficult to bring him to love narrations of sober, instructive fact. High colored and overwrought works of fiction in the guise of truth—with or without a moral—should be permitted to form no part of a child's reading, however good the source from which they may come. Neither fancy nor fiction is to be tolerated in a form to excite a child's mind, or vitiate his taste in reading. No pains should be spared to guard the child from mental as well as physical poison.

A child must be led to have an intelligent interest in books that may be helpful to him. The parent must find good books and give them to the child with such explanation and commendation as will make the child wish to know of their contents. The conditions and tendencies of the child as well as the circumstances of the hour should be kept in mind in choosing and presenting a book for a child's reading, and such consideration will have an effect on the mind of the child.

For instance when the Fourth of July is brought into notice tell a child briefly about the American Revolution and give him a book about the Boys of Seventy-six. A picture of London Tower may be a good starting point from which to interest him in some of the more impressive stories of English history. From some object of nature, a shell, a crab, a rock, or a tree, he may be interested in a little book of natural history or woodcraft.

From some mention of Jerusalem, Athens, or Rome, a child may be pointed to the story of the Children's Crusade, or to some of the collections of classic stories for children. Africa, India, or the South Sea Islands being referred to, a talk about the missions in those parts of the world may serve to interest a child in some of the more attractive books concerning missionary heroes.

A parent ought to be always watching to suggest suitable books for his child's reading, and to interest the child in them. Reading with the child and questioning him concerning his reading will increase his interest and enjoyment in his reading. A child needs help in this sphere and will welcome it when given. If proper help be given, it will add to his pleasure, and his taste in reading will be steadily and effectively cultivated in the right direction; but if he goes on without help, he is liable to go astray, and to be a lifetime sufferer in consequence.

C. B. S.

HARDY, Nebraska.

Dear Sisters:—I hardly know what those who are so far away from the Saints would do if it were not for the Herald, Autumn Leaves, and other periodicals. I have not heard a sermon preached by a Latter Day Saint elder for over a year, but have read all the sermons that come with the Herald, and O what a world of good one receives by so doing! I do not think there is a Saint besides myself near here, and do not think there are any near us that ever heard the word preached as we believe it. Sometimes it seems hard for me, but I am not alone. God is my helper, and of him I ask daily for grace and strength to help in time of need.

We have Union Sabbath school in a schoolhouse a mile west of here, and sometimes preaching by Methodist and Lutheran ministers. They come from Hardy, a distance of five miles, and do not get out very often. The last time the Lutheran minister was out, after the sermon he came and asked me if I was a church member. I told him I was. He asked what church I belonged to. I told him the Latter Day Saints. He said, "O well, it will not make any difference to God when we get to heaven, for there we will not be known as Methodists, Latter Day Saints, or any denomination."

I do not think he knows much about the Saints, but hope he with others will investigate. You do not know how happy it made me to be able to say that I was a Latter Day Saint. I think we should always be ready to confess that we are followers of Jesus. For is it not written, "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels?" If God be for us none can be against us? But we must not think that we can be church members just because our names are on the church record. Merely that does not constitute a Christian. "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."

How I hope and pray that an elder will be sent to us soon. I think much good could be done. Only yesterday a young lady came to me and said she wished we could have meetings evenings at the schoolhouse, and several had spoken the same thing to her. I long to have an elder of our faith nearer so we could have preaching evenings, and as I write I think perhaps some one will come anyway. Anyone coming would receive a hearty welcome and be well cared for as long as they wished to stay with us. If any elder or elders wish to come let them write to me and I will give them full particulars. I feel impressed that God will send some one to do the work that is waiting to be done, for I feel that he has caused me to write for help.

I wish to tell Sister Emma and Sr. Lillie Flowers how grateful I feel to them and how happy it made me to know that they had tried my plan of studying the Scriptures. I felt well repaid for the time spent in writing to the Leaves, even if only two were benefited thereby. Let us each do all we can to help each other. When our souls are filled with the love of Jesus we can do anything, everything for his cause and the good of the world that is placed before us to do. Even if we be far from Saints and friends we can still do much good. I always pray for all that are engaged in the latter-day work, and especially those who have left home and dear ones to go to foreign lands to carry the glad tidings. How it must comfort and cheer them to receive words of encouragement from us and to know that we always remember them in our prayers.

I have seen nothing from Sr. Richards of North Platte lately. Let us hear from her and many others.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion I am,

Your sister,

JENNIE BARRETT.

SANTA MARIA, Cal., Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—This is my first communication to you, not because I was not interested, but because I thought there were so many others far more able to write. However, I recognize the claim to be just that the body has a right to know of the labors of those they are supporting.

After our reunion it was decided that Bro. Dana and myself should go to the northern part of the district and labor until conference, or longer as wisdom directs. The query was, how to reach there. The distance was great and in order to reach many places we would have to use the stage, a very expensive mode of traveling in California. However, that difficulty did not trouble us long. Bro. Will Mills donated a neat spring wagon, showing that the spirit of the father is transmitted to the son; and Bro. E. J. French furnished us with a good horse and harness, thereby evincing the fact that his interest in the gospel and his desires to forward it are as great as ever. We went first to Long Beach, where we baptized two, thence to Los Angeles, and from there on north; first to Hueneme, where we tarried a day with Bro. and Sr. Livingston; from there to Nordoff expecting to meet with Bro. Albert Starke; but he was not at home, so next day to Santa Barbara, where we met with Sr. Mellie Cahoon and her mother, and were kindly entertained by them and materially helped on our way. From there we went to Santa Maria to the home of Bro. John Houk where we found him and family well and as strong in the faith as ever; we also noticed that he must have been blessed, for a large house with all modern improvements stands close by the first little house that they made their early struggles in. We found there a home indeed, and were made to feel that of a surety we were among brethren. And there is one fact I notice; that although the times are hard and work scarce, yet there is not a Saint in this district in wants; and although some may not be able to say they have much laid by in store, yet their heavenly Father is giving them each day their daily bread.

The conditions for preaching were never more favorable: we have calls in every direction, with good interest, which in our humble way we are endeavoring to fill, presenting the word to them as the Spirit gives utterance, willing to leave the result with Him who has promised that his word shall not return unto him void, and we can say with the rest of the brethren, that of a truth the Lord God is with us. The work in this district has prospered as never before; the Saints seem to have realized the necessity of the command to come up higher, and are earnestly endeavoring to heed. May God aid and help us all to fulfill all our covenants with him. With best wishes for the work,

Your brother,
CHARLES BALY.

BAY PORT, Mich., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald.—I came home September 1 to rest up a little from the summer's labor. During the month of August I was in company with Bro. William Davis, making new openings. It was oppressively hot and the dust was something terrible, but we held meeting every night, I think. We were nearly worn out, or I was at least. I lost some seven pounds during that month; so I thought for a change I would take the hammer and saw and resume my old occupation for a few days, and as I am in need of some clothing I can play the part the Apostle Paul did when he labored with his own hands to supply his wants. On the 7th I sat on an elders' court in Lapeer county. On the 10th I was called by telegram to Sanilac county to preach the funeral sermon of Floyd, son of Bro. and Sr. Fred Stevins. After the funeral I baptized and confirmed two, both heads of families; and so the good work goes on. I returned home on the 13th and have since spoken several times in Bay Port, so I feel I have not been entirely idle in the Master's cause. I expect to leave home again next week for Sanilac and St. Clair counties, and thus resume my labor for the Master. Your colaborer,

J. A. GRANT.

SOUTH BOARDMAN, Mich., Oct. 3.

Editors Herald.—I left Elmira this morning, and came here, intending to go on to Fife Lake to put in a few sermons there. In Elmira we have had a lively time since I last wrote. The U. B. minister and an infidel and company combined to fight the latter-day work. It seems that the preaching of Bro. George Washburn and myself has roused them up, and the minister did not seem to have the courage to take it up, so he arranged to help the infidel out by furnishing books and other matter.

The infidel (who has two wives, or had, both living) claims to have "whipped out all the preachers." We divided the time one evening. Then he gave out a lecture on Mormonism. I took notes and replied another evening. At the close of his meeting he told the people that he could get a lot more books and other works and could keep it up two or three more evenings. But at the close of my lecture, when I told the people I should follow him right up, and that I had still abundance of proof, and as they could see that his arguments were nothing compared with those we had produced that night, and that so it would be all the way through the contest, he said, "It will be no use to give out for any more lectures," and that he "had no more to say," and went away very angry. The next day (yesterday) we baptized four more, and we feel that it was a complete victory on our side. Others are believing there.

Very truly,
J. J. CORNISH.

YONKER, Mo., Sept. 7.

Editors Herald.—As I know the latter-day work is true, I wish to bear my testimony, thinking it may encourage some one. I was a spiritualist for six years and had seen the power of spiritualism manifested in many instances; and as I was a medium, I can speak a word of warning to the world, and especially to the Saints: Beware of spiritualism!

While I was a medium the spirits manifested themselves through me, yet when they would leave me I knew no more about the origin or source than I did before they came to me; and they only led my mind further in the dark. When I was under the power of that spirit my consciousness was gone and I would be drawn into an unnatural shape, so much so that very often they said my hand would touch my elbow; and my health began to decline with my first experience with spiritualism, and at the time I denounced it I was not able to sit up long enough to nurse my baby, or to eat a meal's victuals.

And now I will tell you how I became acquainted with this latter-day work. Bro. Ward came into my father's settlement and preached a short series of sermons, and my father, mother, and sister were convinced of the truth of his message and were baptized, and I wanted to be baptized too; but owing to my connection with spiritualism he thought I had better read and pray our Father-in-heaven for more light; so that set me to thinking in a different direction, and I began to pray earnestly for more light; and as I was almost blind I could not read, but had others read to me from the church literature and the Bible: so in about one year from the time he set me to seeking for light I sent him word to come and see me, that I wanted him to baptize me. But the answer Bro. Ward gave me was that he never would baptize me until I severed my connection with spiritualism and repented of all my sins. About fifteen months had passed away since my first introduction to the work and Bro. Ward was holding another meeting a few miles away, when I sent him word again that I wanted to be baptized, and he said to come and he would have a talk with me, and if he found me a fit subject, then he would baptize me. I will now leave this part of the subject, and tell you how badly I was afflicted, and how I was healed; and I ask all who read this to join me in praise to God for the restored gospel, and the blessing he has bestowed upon me. I had been a sufferer from inflamed sore eyes since I was three days old, and at the age of fifteen a scum came over one of my eyes, and I have never seen a ray of light with that eye for over seventeen years, and could see but little with the other, until the 13th day of last July, at which time Bro. Ward buried me with Christ in baptism, and when I came up out of the water and dried my face and looked out upon the shore the people looked the brightest I had ever seen. I was confirmed in my wet clothing, sitting by the water's brink, and had my eyes anointed with holy oil, and the prayer of faith ascended in my behalf, and now my eyes are cured of all inflammation, and the eye that was blind seventeen years is restored to sight; now I can see. O how thankful I am to our Father in heaven for sending the true plan of redemption, and redeeming me from spiritualism and darkness, and planting me in his kingdom where the light of his Holy Spirit shines upon the meek and humble, to enlighten the mind in spiritual things, confirming the soul in knowledge that the work is true! I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may be faithful.

Your sister in the faith,
MARTHA A. ROBERTS.

ATCHISON, Kan., Sept. 16.

Editors Herald.—I wish to correct an impression that has and will be formed from a letter from the pen of J. A. Davis of this district. I do not believe he intended to leave the impression that I had laid down the armor, but in his letter of August 31 to the Herald he said "I baptized two in this city," and then adds, "it would be well if an elder could be here continually;" leaving the impression that the city was without anyone to defend the faith. Bro. Davis should have said he baptized two, the fruits of other men's labors.

I want to say, for the benefit of those in the district who might be interested, that there is an elder here continually, and has been for four years or more, namely, the writer; and I have not kept silent. I am and have been conducting a Sunday school and preaching continually with increased liberty and am having an increase of attendance. Now, if anyone asks, Why do you not bring fruits of your labor in the way of baptisms? I answer, Because the writer sowed the seed only and the traveling ministry did the watering. You all know there is a belief extant that special blessings are conferred by the traveling minister. I only write this so my friends may know that I am still alive in the gospel covenant. C. E. GUINAND.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 11.

Editors Herald.—Detroit, Michigan, again has a Sunday school. Its reorganization took place Sunday, September 2, and it now meets regularly every Sunday at ten a. m., and continues until 11:15. The place of meeting is in Chene's Hall, on Monroe avenue, near Chene street. The officers chosen are: Superintendent, Bro. John Glazier; assistant superintendent, Bro. A. B. Hanson; secretary, Sr. Davison; assistant secretary, Bro. Rourk; treasurer, Bro. Thos. Miller; chorister, Elder W. J. Smith; assistant chorister, Sr. Frone Shinnick; organist, Sr. Adelaide Hanson. Classes organized and well filled are: Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Intermediate, and Primary. The outlook is good for a profitable and pleasant school. All are anxious for the accomplishment of good, and are confident that nothing else will result from this step. Wishing for the progress of the gospel until all shall come to a knowledge of God, I remain,

Your brother,

A. B. HANSON.

OVERBROOK, I. T., Sept. 29.

Editors Herald:—I am a reader of the Herald and like it very much. We came here last January and I have not heard of any latter Day Saints close around here. There has never been any preaching of our elders here. The people say they never heard of Latter Day Saints before. When I get through reading the Herald and Ensign I take them to my neighbors, who seem to take interest in reading them.

Any elder coming this way I would be glad to have stop and preach here. He will find a welcome at our house. We live five miles south of Ardmore and about two miles north of Overbrook. We live about twenty rods from the railroad. I have two little children and ask the prayers of the Saints that I may rear them in the admonition of the Lord, and that my husband may obey the gospel.

Your sister,

MARY WELBORN.

OTTO, Ark., Sept. 23.

Editors Herald:—This leaves us rejoicing in the triumph of truth. A four days' debate between Bro. J. D. Erwin, representing the Saints, and W. Jones, of the Campbellite order, has just closed. Mr. Jones came into our country this summer, and blowed around, and challenged the world to meet him; so I told him if he wanted a debate I would get him a man. Propositions were agreed upon, and the debate set for September 18, at Shady Grove. I wrote Bro. J. D. Erwin to come and debate with him. Mr. Jones had created quite a stir in the country; he had baptized about one hundred and fifty people. Bro. Erwin came, and the debate commenced in due time. The first proposition was affirmed by Mr. Jones; namely, that the church with which he was identified was in harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ and his apostles, both in respect to doctrine and organization. Bro. Erwin affirmed the same of our church as the second proposition. Mr. Jones started out to establish the church on the day of Pentecost. Bro. Erwin showed that Mr. Jones would have to prove he was a member of that church before he could claim any connection with the church established or existing in the days of Pentecost. Bro. Erwin proved by Hayden's "History of the Disciples of the Western Reserve" that the Campbellite Church saw daylight for the first time in 1827. He also showed from Barton W. Stone's history that it was started on the little crooked word "if:" If we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize. So the work commenced. Mr. Jones, poor fellow, went down never to rise. He lingered around Pentecost and tried to show harmony, but failed in every attempt. Bro. Erwin showed sixteen plain differences between the Campbellite Church and the Church of Jesus Christ as existing in New Testament times; so Mr. Jones failed to sustain his proposition.

On the last two days our proposition was reached. Bro. Erwin read our "Epitome of Faith and Doctrine," then showed that we harmonized with the Scriptures. He showed the apostasy and restoration of the everlasting gospel. Mr. Jones passed all this unnoticed; he could not wade into the deep water, but kept near the shore. Bro. Erwin established his proposition beyond a doubt. Mr. Jones had blowed about his scholarship; he could speak several different languages. He used a Greek word or two, but Bro. Erwin finally pulled out a Greek Testament and asked Mr. Jones to read a certain passage he had disputed. Gracious! you never saw a man change color and humble down so! A grand victory was scored for the truth, and prejudice melted like snow before the summer sun.

Bro. Erwin has baptized five, and four more have given in their names to-day, and will be baptized this evening. Many others are convinced, and some are ready for baptism. We number eleven here, and prospects are good for several others. The elders must not pass us by, but call on us when they can. Bro. J. D. Erwin is with us yet, preaching to the people, and gaining many friends.

In bonds,

J. S. MOORE.

PROSPERITY, Mo., Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—Although one of the weakest of God's children, my soul is made to rejoice while reading the many incontrovertible testimonies of my brethren and sisters in favor of this great latter-day restoration, introduced through Joseph the seer.

In looking over memory's pages I find I am not left without witness that God is in this work, and feel that I have great cause to be thankful for his many mercies to me. Blessed be his holy name.

I remember attending General Conference at Independence, in 1888, and during one of its sessions, an epistle from the Twelve was read, which caused some very peculiar thoughts to pass through my mind, one of which was, that if they should wait until I quit using tobacco before recommending me for missionary appointment, they might have to wait a long time, there not being anything very enticing in these appointments. While these thoughts were passing through my mind, and not saying a word to anyone in regard to the matter, I was caused to suffer a sharp rebuke through the Spirit; that my thoughts were not pleasing to our heavenly Father and that the "Twelve" were stating in that epistle things which they considered were for the good of the cause, aiming to elevate the standard of the representatives of this latter-day work.

Now I had been a user of tobacco for near thirty years, but had always felt a self-confidence that I could cease using it whenever disposed so to do, as this had been my past experience; and when I started to that conference I had thought to never use the weed again. But after hearing the epistle read, this good intention seemed to be forgotten, anyhow for some time to come. From the adjournment of that conference until the first Sunday in February, 1892, I tried several times to lay aside the weed, but found I was unable to do so.

The first Sunday of February, 1892, I came eight miles to attend sacrament service, and was requested to assist in the service. Another was also requested to assist in the administration, who seemed to be highly perfumed with the aroma belonging to old tobacco pipes, and when shaking hands with the brother the aroma was so fragrant that the sensation to me (having come to this service fasting) was one of nausea and disgust. In fasting I find it consonant with the idea to abstain from tobacco, as well as from chicken, roast, beef, etc.

On Tuesday morning following, in the Franklin Zinc Company's office where I was engaged as secretary, while standing behind the desk engaged in getting ready my weekly reports to send by mail to president of the company, I had run out of tobacco, and thought I would go to the store and get me a piece before finishing my reports. The thought also came that this was another good opportunity to try and quit using the weed, and I was discussing this matter quite freely in my mind, how many times I had tried to quit using it since that conference, but had been unable to lay it aside for one week, and I felt determined (as I was ashamed) to not ask God to take the desire from me when I had read that he had said that tobacco was not good for man, even before I had obeyed the gospel, and when it was in my power to quit before the habit had gotten so firm a hold upon me. While thus musing, an audible voice said to me, "If this be your desire although not free from temptation, strength shall be given thee to overcome," and let me tell you, the voice appeared so real and like the voice of a near friend that I turned around to see who it was that spoke, and though I did not see his form, I seemed to feel his presence, and made answer, "My desire is to overcome."

From that time to the present, your humble servant has not used tobacco. But I have many times felt the inclination and temptation come upon me, when it would be hard to resist; but the words of that pleasing voice would seem to vibrate in my mind, "If this be your desire, . . . strength shall be given thee to overcome," and I would answer within myself, "This is still my desire;" then the temptation would cease, or rather the strength imparted was so great that the temptation seemed to be forgotten.

Some time after obeying the gospel I had some doubts in regard to my acceptance with God, and had the following dream: A personage of noble countenance appeared at my bedside, and bade me arise and follow him. I arose, and appeared to step from my bed into a beautiful country, and followed my guide seemingly a long distance, when all at once we stopped at the bank of a swift flowing river. He then took from under his left arm a small casket, which he opened, and it appeared to be nearly full of little rolls like parchment. He informed me, "These are thy sins" (or a record of them), and handed one or two of the little rolls for my inspection; and when I read the record they contained, it made me feel very sad to think that I was guilty of so many little misdeeds, and I confessed to him my guilt and acknowledged his record to be true. I then handed back to him these rolls when he placed them back in the casket and closed the lid tightly, then raising his right hand said, "In the name of Him who liveth forever, thy sins, which are many, are all forgiven, and I will remember them against thee no more." He threw the casket into that fast flowing river, where it immediately disappeared from view.

O that we might ever prove faithful and retain this remission of our sins. There certainly is remission of sins accompanying this glorious gospel of Jesus.

While postmaster at Lehigh, Missouri, I had the following dream: A carrier came after the mail, which I handed to him. He then proceeded to assort the mail, when I asked him why he was separating the letters when they were all addressed to the same place. He informed me that the letters which he placed in sack No. 1 were special, and those he placed in Sack No. 2 were regular. He said, "These are the prayers of Saints," and I noticed the address on each letter was, "Our Father who art in heaven." He then took the two mail sacks and disappeared. Yes, our prayers are much availing, "when we walk upright and just." Is the thought agreeable to gospel law that special petitions may receive special attention, even in the courts of heaven?

OTTO, Ark., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me well and rejoicing in the work. I surpassed anything of my ministry this evening; baptized fourteen, all the leading people of the country, making eighteen since the debate with the Campbellite. We number twenty-three here now, in all. About six hundred people attended the debate, and I believe about two thirds were convinced that the latter-day work is true. The Spirit of the Lord is working with the people. I am preaching every night to many interested people.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 4.

Editors Herald:—The work in Eastern Nebraska is progressing well. The few laborers we have seem to be making their best efforts. The local elders as a rule are responding nobly to the demands made upon them for assistance in the work, and the prospects are good for future labor and development. A conference has lately been held at Valley in the Northern Nebraska district, which Bro. Whitman informs me was well attended, and a good interest manifested by those present; and at the close a gentleman formerly identified with the Christian Church requested baptism, which was administered the following morning. We are gathering in members in all parts of the field where labor is being performed, and we have men who are coming to the front as workers.

The work in Omaha is not advancing in the same ratio as it is in other parts of the district, but I have faith in the final outcome of the labor being performed at that point. Chronic diseases are not cured in a day. There are a number of good people here, and they are beginning to see the dawn of a brighter day, and with careful work they will come out of the spiritual darkness that has enveloped them and yet be a power for good in Eastern Nebraska.

The Zion's Religio-Literary Society of Omaha held a very interesting and instructive session at the church under the leadership of Bro. Barber on the evening of October 2 at which some good papers were read, speeches made, and music rendered. We wish the young people success, not alone at Omaha, but throughout the church. I never felt better in the work nor had greater confidence in future advancement.

Your brother in Christ,
C. H. PORTER.

LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD.

BEING one of the laborers in the eleventh hour, or harvest dispensation, this subject has pressed itself upon my mind of late, especially in the last year, as I see the preparatory work being done all around me, not only in the church, but also outside of the church. For I see many different kinds of bundles being bound together, and their bands being made strong by secret oaths and covenants by which they are held and by which they are hindered from receiving the truth in several ways.

First, They belong to so many of these covenant and oath bound bundles, both men and women, that they neither have time nor inclination to seek for the truth; for the great majority of the people are satisfied with the excitement and the food that they are fed upon in their societies; and second, They say if we can only live up to our oaths and covenants we will be all right, for all of our societies are religious and are doing good. They, also, say that their oath bound organizations have more true religion and are doing more good than the covenant bound bundles (the churches); for there is less hypocrisy, contention, and division than in the churches.

These conditions with the perilous times and the enormous preparations for war and destruction with many other things are conclusive evidence that the harvest, or end of the world, is nigh, even at the door. In the harvest, or eleventh hour dispensation, there were to be laborers hired and sent into the vineyard, and there were to be stewards set over them; for he says to his steward, Call the laborers. Now we, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, claim to be the eleventh hour laborers, and our elders and members testify before high heaven and the angels that the Master of the vineyard hired and sent them into the vineyard. This is all true, and we know it.

This knowledge is what is troubling me, for if I were only hired by men I could give an account to men. But the very fact of knowing that the Master has hired and sent me and other laborers into the vineyard forces itself upon me and I ask myself (and now I ask others), what kind of seed-sowers, diggers, pruners, and harvesters are we, and are we working the fields into which we are sent systematically and as wise laborers, or are we like unwise laborers who would go into a new field or vineyard and plow a little here and a little there, and sow a little here and a little there, or prune a little here and a little there, or reap a little here and there, and run over thousands of acres in this way, not even sowing the seed well, neither binding the bundles, nor housing the harvest, but leaving the seed uncovered to be devoured by the birds, and the sheaves scattered over the ground to go to waste? Query: What would the Master of the vineyard do with such laborers? Would he give them their hire, a penny? Echo answers, No.

But to better illustrate the thought and bring this matter home to ourselves, let us make a parable. A very rich man has tens of thousands of acres of fine land or vineyard. It is the eleventh hour, or very late in the season, and he must have laborers and stewards to do his work. Into the market place he goes and finds idle laborers, who, by accepting of the hire and going into the field, show that they claim to be competent workmen. He then puts wise stewards over them and sends them into the fields and vineyards, and they commence by plowing a little here and a little there, and by seeding a little here and a little there, and by gathering a few bunches of grapes here and a few bunches there, and by reaping a few bundles of grain here and a few bundles there, and in this unwise and unmechanical way running over the vast fields; not even housing and caring for that which had been harvested, but leaving it to be devoured and carried away by thieves and robbers who had unlawfully climbed into the vineyard and claimed to be called laborers in the harvest. These unlawful laborers showed even more wisdom and more cunning craftiness than the lawful harvesters, because they were after the pelf.

These two illustrations bring the stewards, the laborers, and the present condition of the work home to us as laborers in the vineyard. In the past circumstances and the inevitable decree that we must learn by the things we suffer, have seemingly forced both the stewards and the laborers into this unwise and loose way of sowing and harvesting. Neither the stewards nor the laborers that are in the fields all the time are wholly responsible for the ineffectual labor done, in the past, but the whole body; and the lack of means to support the laborers has forced them to run from place to place. But the time has now come that our past experience, the perilous times, the ripe and critical condition of the vineyard, and the finances of both the church and the world demand some radical changes in the ways of plowing, sowing, harvesting, and caring for the grain.

The ways and means employed in the past, are inadequate for the present, not but that we have done a great work and overcome many obstacles and hindrances that were in the way. This had to be done as a preparatory work, that the vineyard and the laborers might be prepared for the greater work of the present and the future. Stewards, laborers, and all can see that the grapes and the grain are ripening very fast, and that the laborers are far behind the wants of the harvest. The Lord told his disciples:—

Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9: 38.

But, brethren and colaborers, I, for one, must confess that I cannot exercise much faith in the Lord calling and sending more laborers into the vineyard as long as those who are in the vineyard run from place to place, spending means and time unwisely, as I and many others have done in the past. This kind of labor and laborers must be stopped.

I am well aware that the stewards whose duty it is to oversee the work, will have to run more or less from place to place, but this privilege and duty, like others, has been abused in the past. All of these errors of judgment in the way of working the vineyard must be corrected or they will correct themselves to the great detriment of the church both spiritually and financially and in the confidence of those who labor and sacrifice to furnish the finances which enable us unwise laborers to run as above described.

I would not be surprised if some of my wise brethren will find fault with me for writing in this way, but I think an open confession is good for the soul and that a wise man will see, solve, and forsake his errors before they solve themselves with loss to himself and others. This is applicable to us laborers in the vineyard, and this coming conference should see to it that these runabout laborers who tell of the wonderful interest they have worked up, and the crowded houses, and the many calls for preaching, and the many who were just ready for the water; but just at this juncture there was a call in some of the old branches or some other place, and away they went leaving this good interest, and the work they had done, and those so deeply interested to be caught by wolves in sheep's clothing. Now this class of laborers (I do not care who they are or what their office or calling is) should be taught the lesson of either staying, praying, and persevering with these big interests, or staying at home.

In conclusion let me make a few remedial suggestions to my fellow laborers and to the General Conference through them. First, Let our laborers be sent according to the command, two by two, with the strict injunction that they go into new fields, as far as practicable, and work all of the ground carefully, leaving the old places to be worked by local laborers; and that the proclamation may reach every creature the church should provide tools and means as far as possible. Then each laborer should be required to visit every vine (or house) in his part of the vineyard, and pray with it and for it, and prune and dig about it with tracts, talk, and good example, and an invitation to come to the tent or meeting place and hear the gospel. In this way more ground will be worked, more prejudice allayed, more converts made, and at a much less expense.

Second, The best and cheapest way to accomplish this is to provide tents for the summer season and put apostles, seventies, high priests elders, priests, and others, two by two, as wisdom shall dictate. Each tent should be supplied with two able representatives of about equal ability. These tents and laborers should not depend wholly for their supplies upon local organizations nor upon the free-will offerings, but all deficiencies should be supplied from the church treasury. In this way our laborers can go into any part of the vineyard and labor effectually and independently during the tent season, and thus prepare the way for the balance of the year in houses where prejudice has been allayed by the visiting and the preaching in the tent, and in this way stop the just complaints that are made all along the line by those laborers in the vineyard who are working and sacrificing financially to keep up this unwise and unlawful running from place to place.

Brethren, sisters, and colaborers, if any of these coats or clubs as you may call them fit or hit you put them on and wear them, and gracefully accept the hit like a good Christian and don't be vexed with Bro. Haws, for I am shooting to hit and to bring about a reform and to advance the great work that we all love and are making sacrifices for. I write these suggestions, hoping that the wise stewards whose duty it is to assemble together soon to provide labor and laborers for the vineyard, will see to it that the evils spoken of be remedied by these or some other wiser means.

Brethren, do we truly and in fact realize that there is a day of burning not far hence, in which all of our works will be tried? Brethren, let it not be sung of us:—

O reapers of life's harvest,
Why stand with rusted blade,
Until the night draws round you
And day begins to fade?
Why stand ye idle, waiting
For reapers more to come,
The golden morn is coming,
Why sit ye idle, dumb?

Thrust in your sharpened sickles
And gather in the grain,
The night is fast approaching
And soon will come again.
Your Master calls for reapers,
And shall he call in vain?
Shall sheaves lie there ungathered,
And waste upon the plain?

Come down from hill and mountain,
In morning's ruddy glow,
Nor wait until the dial
Points to the noon below;
And come with the strong sinew,
Nor faint in heat or cold,
And pause not till the evening
Draws round its wealth of gold.

Then we will get our golden penny.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON INFIDELITY.—No. 3.

FANNIE JONES.

AGAIN, you laugh at the idea of a self-existent God, and yet, are so inconsistent as to believe in a self-existent universe, which is more difficult to conceive of than a self-existent God. Valentine says:—

For since something now exists, something must always have existed, for it is impossible that something should arise out of nothing, or that being should spring uncaused out of non-being. Present existence is full proof that something has existed from eternity.

The question therefore resolves itself into this: Which is the most reasonable supposition, that unintelligent force or matter has produced this universe of worlds and moral beings, or that one intelligent, self-existent, Almighty Being has planned and created it all.

To substitute a self-existence of the universe, with its incalculable multiplicity of parts and interdependences, and countless human personalities for the self-existence of God multiplies the mystery a thousand fold. The self-existence of God therefore offers less difficulty than the self-existence of the world.

Infidelity cannot help but admit that the Bible theory is the best and most reasonable.

When we investigate the results of infidelity we find that atheistic opinions practically tend to relax the moral life. They cut the nerve of conscience; the theoretical atheists of a community are never its moral glory, they do not carry its inspiring or uplifting forces. The French Revolution appalled mankind, and it came from the uplifted banner of atheism. Whenever materialism or other theories have overthrown belief in God, demoralization sets in like fast rot. Valentine truly says:—

The doctrine of God affords the most direct interpretation of all the phenomena of nature, for you, atheists, have never found the origin of life, consciousness, neither found nor shown a bridge of transition from lifelessness to life, from mere matter to sensation, from sensation to free will and the appearance of self-determining personality.

Infidelity cannot believe that Christ made water into wine, but can believe that a tadpole made himself into a monkey. It cannot believe that God made the world, but can believe that it made itself. Infidels laugh at the idea that God could cause the sun to stay in its course, but they can believe that the sun and all the hosts of heaven, not only made themselves but also set themselves in motion, and have kept whirling from eternity with no one to start them or keep them in motion. O consistency, thou art a jewel!

Infidelity cries out, that if God had made the sun stand still, it would have thrown all the other planets into disorder, just like stopping a wheel in a thrashing machine when in full motion, which would result in a serious break. This is true, but if the whole machine were stopped when one wheel was made to stop there would be no damage done; and God could have stopped the movements of the whole solar system and then there would have been no confusion in the heaven, and we would like our infidel friends to prove that he did not do so. Infidelity as long as it depends upon Christianity for every privilege it enjoys, should hesitate a little before it seeks to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of its faith in that Savior who alone has given to man a hope of eternal life and robbed death of its terror and the grave of its gloom.

In regard to miracles infidelity claims that when this higher power produces a miracle, it abrogates, or interferes with, or changes the force of nature. Lambert in his "Tactics Of Infidels" answers this question well:—

God in working miracles does not change, abrogate or interfere with the force of nature. He simply intervenes by his power between the action of those forces and their results, or does directly what those forces could not of themselves do.

He intervenes between the forces and their results. I will make this clear by an illustration. I hold in my hand a pound weight. By thus holding it I do not interfere with the force of gravitation, for the force still acts and presses on my hand, to the extent of a pound. I do however intervene between that force and its results for I prevent the weight from falling which would be the result if I did not intervene. Do I abrogate or change the laws of gravitation? Certainly not, for whether I hold or let fall the weight the law continually and uniformly asserts itself. Do I vary the result? Yes, for I prevent it from falling. Now whether I lift the pound weight or the Almighty lifts the Rocky Mountains from their bases and holds them suspended in space the law of gravitation is not varied or abrogated; but the still more general law of force is affirmed, namely, the law that force yields to superior force. The first would not be a miracle because the force I wield is in nature. The second would be a miracle because the force manifested is evidently above nature. But in neither case have we any evidence that the law is changed or abrogated.

Infidelity asks, If God is so just and wise, why does he allow so much suffering and misery to exist? We admit that evils exist, but do not admit they are the result of the designs or plan of God. Man has a free agency and crime and suffering are the results of this liberty because man has abused it and produced discord. Man was untrue to this trust and thus became a victim of the discords he himself produced. Lambert says:—

Evils that are the results of man's perversion of liberty, cannot be attributed to the designs of God; and those who so attribute them are as reasonless as the shipwrecked mariners who condemn the captain for the sufferings which they brought upon themselves by their disobedience to his commands, or as the criminal who attributes his punishment to the judge, when it is the result of his own crime.

Infidels say Christians are sharp, for they try to make their theories plausible by saying, "Although there are miseries in this life God gives an opportunity in another world to be happy." Thus they have invented the future state to get out of the dilemma that God is unjust.

When infidels assert that Christians invented the future state they show a lamentable ignorance of history, for the Egyptians, Persians, Hindoos, Chinese, both Brahmanists and Buddhists, all believe in a future state. There is not an ancient nation or tribe, so far as we know, that does not believe in a future state. We admit the notions of some are very vague and unsatisfactory, but they all give evidence of an internal consciousness of the insufficiency of the present world to satisfy their souls; and yet infidels have the audacity to say Christians invented the future state so that God would not appear so cruel.

Infidelity says that if we believe the Christian religion to be of divine origin we will be compelled to throw away our reason, the fruit of all experience. The impression you wish to leave, is, that if a man is a Christian he must throw away his reason. Reason is a gift of God, and God requires us to use it, and at the judgment day he will require us to give an account of how we have used it. Lambert says:—

When you make reason the result of experience you destroy its proper entity. Experience is impossible without something that experiences. Reason? No; for if reason is the result of experience (as you say) it cannot exist until after the experience has been completed. What then is it that experiences? The individual? But the individual minus reason is incapable of apprehending experience. What then is it that experiences? There must be some being that experiences, for experiences cannot exist without a subject. The mind? But mind and reason are identical. Reason is the mind, in action. The fact is, human reason, or conscious mind is that which experiences; it is, therefore, prior to experience; and since it is prior to experience, it cannot be a result of it. Without reason experience is impossible, and therefore when you make reason the result of experience you throw away both reason and experience. This is the logical result of your proposition.

"If your God was so wise what made him give the ten commandments to the Jews when he knew they would never keep them; for the commandment, 'Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image or any likeness of anything that is in the heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth,' would, if observed, be the death blow to all art." We turn to one of the old translations of the Bible and read the rest of this commandment, "Thou shalt not adore them [images] nor serve them." This explains all, for it clearly shows, that it was not the making of images, but the making gods of them that was forbidden. If we take any other view of it we make the Bible contradict itself, for in Numbers 21:6-8 we find where God revealed his will in regard to Solomon's temple and there were in it two cherubim of olive tree, ten cubits high. (1 Kings 6:23.) All the walls of the temple round about he carved with divers figures and carvings. This proves that God did not want to kill art, but did not want them to adore these things and make idols of them.

The churches teach that all should live a life of morality and control all their lusts and yet your God gave captive maidens to gratify the lust of captors. A fine God he is to be the instigator of ruining sweet, innocent maidens.

We think it would be well for you to study the Bible a little more before making this charge, for by looking at Deuteronomy 21:10-14 you will discover that a soldier was obliged to make the captive his wife, or to respect her person and honor. None of the licentiousness of the "Reign of Terror" was seen among them, for the Hebrew laws kept the soldiers in restraint. Even in those early days the Jews were far ahead of other nations in regard to such matters, for the pagan nations of that time allowed every familiarity with captives, which was strictly for-bidden by the Hebrew law. What shameless misrepresentations you, infidels, make!

What right has God to heap maledictions and curses on those that do not serve him?

God, as the Creator of the universe and of all men, has the right to threaten and punish those who disobey him, for men owe him their allegiance and obedience, and if they do not obey him God plainly tells the punishments which will be inflicted on the transgressors. Our own government has passed laws in regard to the punishment of the murderer, thief, etc., but these laws have no terror to the citizens that do not break them, and neither does God's threatenings produce fear in those that are serving him.

WAS IT PREACHED BY THE GIFT OF TONGUES ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST?

READING Bro. Gomer Wells' letter in May number of Autumn Leaves, prompted me to offer a few thoughts on the second chapter of Acts. I have about concluded that the gospel was not preached through or by the gift of tongues on the day of Pentecost, if the Apostle Peter preached the first gospel sermon after the bestowment of the Holy Ghost.

I think a careful examination of the above-named chapter, together with the knowledge we have of the manifestations of the Spirit, and the order of meetings in the church to-day will bear me out in the conclusion. By reading the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth verses of the first chapter of Acts, we learn that after the execution of our Lord, the apostles, women, and Jesus' brethren abode in an upper room. These all continued steadfast in supplication and prayer, the names of the disciples together being about one hundred and twenty:—

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.—Acts 2: 1.

And when the Holy Ghost descended filling the house, "cloven tongues like as of fire" rested upon each of them, and they "began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." Now when this remarkable meeting of the Saints "was noised abroad, the multitude came together," among whom were those "devout men, out of every nation under heaven," spoken of in the fifth verse, who were dwelling at Jerusalem:—

And [they] were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language, . . . saying one to another. Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

Possibly it was only the Twelve who were thus speaking, but the word says:—

They were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak,— a very natural testimony meeting. The house of God is a house of order. The Holy Spirit is not the author of confusion and it reigned supreme there. The word shows plainly that a number of persons were heard to speak in tongues—"all these which speak."

But it would not be in harmony with the order of the house of God for a number to occupy as preachers on the same day—or rather hour—nor for all to speak at the same time, though a very large number might bear testimony in three hours, and were it one of the apostles preaching and each of those different nationalities hearing in his own language, then the gift would be with the hearers, and not with the speaker; which is not presumable, seeing they were not believers.

And again, for one to preach to a multitude of so many languages, and all to hear in their own tongue wherein they were born, he must needs speak awhile in one tongue and awhile in another, which would be giving only a fragment of the sermon to each. But when we view the whole transaction as we would a similar occasion in the church to-day, we will conclude that at an early hour, like a nine a. m. prayer meeting, the disciples being with one accord in one place engaged in "prayer and supplication" before God, and when the Spirit was poured out upon them, they all—one after another—spoke in tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance, bearing testimony the same as we would hear anywhere in the church now when the Spirit of God is poured out upon the Saints. And it seems more evident that such was the nature of their meeting, because they spoke "the wonderful works of God," instead of reasoning from the Scriptures as did Peter when he stood up to preach to the multitude after that they had heard the speaking in tongues. Nor was it the speaking in tongues of the wonderful works of God that convinced, or pricked them to their hearts, but Peter's sermon. If all were filled with the Spirit, and all spoke, it would not be difficult for each of those different nationalities to hear in their own tongue, provided they did not get there till the meeting was half over, since there was only eighteen nationalities, and one hundred and twenty disciples.

But how about Peter's sermon? seeing the multitude he preached to were the same that heard the speaking in tongues, and his sermon was understood by them all, at least by the three thousand who were "added to the church," and it is not reasonable to suppose that he preached it in eighteen different languages or dialects (tongues), nor is there any record that he exercised the gift upon that occasion while expounding the Scriptures. The inferences are that he did not. First, because Luke, the sacred historian, gives a synopsis of the discourse but nothing is given that was spoken in tongues. And again, Peter first endeavors to convince the multitude that those whom they heard speaking were not drunken as they supposed. To do so, he must necessarily address them in a sober language; if in tongues, they would only include him with the drunken ones. What looks very reasonable and evident is, that Peter upon that occasion preached his sermon in the language commonly understood and spoken in Jerusalem and all Judea, for he addressed himself to the "men of Judea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem."

We conclude that there was a language—whether Greek or Hebrew I know not—that was understood and spoken alike by scribes, Pharisees, Galileans, the "Nazarenes," and also the multitudes who followed him, for when Jesus taught the disciples, the multitude heard and understood. And when the Pharisees questioned him the disciples understood. And the same language was probably understood by those dwellers at Jerusalem, though it was not their mother tongue. It is commonly supposed, or has been, that those "devout men out of every nation under heaven," had only come to Jerusalem to worship, and keep the feast. But "dwelling," means permanently staying, and is so applied in the Scriptures. The disciples abode in an upper room, but they did not dwell there. The Psalmist says:—

Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?

[JUDICIOUS criticism invited.—Ed.]

WHO OR WHAT IS THE ROCK?

WHEN Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am? And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.—Matt. 16: 13-18.

But after all, who or what was the rock? Was it the Son of man, or faith in him? Was it the Apostle Peter, or the revelation of Christ to him?

Fear not, little children, for you are mine, and I have overcome the world, and you are of them that my Father hath given me; and none of them that my Father hath given me shall be lost; and the Father and I are one; I am in the Father and the Father in me; and inasmuch as ye have received me, ye are in me, and I in you; wherefore I am in your midst: and I am the good Shepherd (and the stone of Israel: he that buildeth upon this rock shall never fall).—D. C. 50: 8.

As Christ is the rock on which we must build in order that we may never fall, and as those that thus build are necessarily the constituents of his church, therefore is he the rock on which his church is built.

Behold, verily, verily I say unto you, this is my gospel, and remember that they shall have faith in me, or they can in no wise be saved; and upon this rock I will build my church; yea, upon this rock ye are built, and if ye continue, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you.—D. C. 32: 3.

In this case, is Christ the rock, or is it faith in him? As he could have no church, were there none to have faith in him, therefore, neither is he alone, nor faith in him alone, the rock on which he builds his church, but both together.

And I also say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.—Matt. 16: 18, 19.

Had Christ been going to say that the Apostle Peter was the rock on which he would build his church, could he have said so in plainer terms? Or, if he meant not so, what use was there in the saying, "Thou art Peter"? Or, why should it be thought more out of the question, that he should have built his church upon that apostle, than that he should have given unto him the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and caused that whatsoever he bound on earth should be bound in heaven, and whatsoever he loosed on earth should be loosed in heaven?

But how about the saying: "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." The Roman Catholics say the Apostle Peter was the rock on which the church was built. Which shall we adopt? If that people teach thus, well; but if they make that apostle only the rock, and therefore that Christ was not that rock, that is where the wrong comes in. But do they teach thus? We leave it to those who know, to say.

But, as the truth that Jesus is the Christ, was revealed directly to the Apostle Peter, why not say that revelation was meant as being the rock?

Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

As a church always ceases to be the true church when Christ totally ceases to reveal himself from time to time to any of its members; and which is equivalent to saying that as long as a church builds upon revelation it is the true church; therefore, revelation is the foundation of the true church.

But may not the rock on which the true church is built be one thing, and the foundation thereof another? And again, why make the rock upon which it is built, first one thing and then another? If revelation is the rock, why not let it rest that way?

But if the true church is built upon a rock that is so everlastingly secure, that rock must be its foundation. Were a house built upon a solid rock, and one of sufficient area to contain it, that rock would be its foundation; nor would any foundation different from, or in addition to this foundation, be necessary, so far as security is concerned.

But, if according to the Apostle Peter himself, the saints in his day were so many "lively stones" built into a "spiritual house," and as he himself was of course one of those lively stones, how could he have been also the rock upon which the whole structure was built? But was this more impossible, than it was for the Apostle Paul to have been one of those lively stones, and at the same time to have been one of its "wise master builders," as he represented himself?

But if the rock upon which God's spiritual house is built, is more than one thing, why not state what those things are, and there let the matter rest? As Christ is that rock through faith in him, and as the Apostle Peter was that rock through the revelation of Christ to him, therefore was Christ, faith in him, Simon Peter, and the revelation of Christ to him altogether, the foundation of God's spiritual house.

But how about that spiritual house now? Must that house now have for its foundation some man in common with Christ? that is, some one donned with official vicegerency, and infallibility, a religious boss, and therefore one that can make precepts and interpret the word divine, none daring to question or criticise. But although usurpers and man-made vicegerents must, from the very nature of their profession, practice bossism to a greater or less degree, does that argue that Christ shall now have no vicar of his own choosing, and therefore no one officially infallible, to be with him in the foundation of his spiritual house? Hasn't the world had enough of this official infallibility, and shall the Latter Day Saints be the first now, to add to the accursed thing? Yes; but if in the days of the Prophet Joseph Smith and in the sense of Doctrine and Covenants 19: 2, his people were to receive his words and commandments, just as though those same words and commandments had proceeded from the mouth of Christ, what was that but clothing him with official infallibility. Or, if in those days, in the sense of Doctrine and Covenants 80: 1, the keys of the kingdom of heaven were given to him; and if in those days, in the sense of Doctrine and Covenants 90: 9, power was given to him to bind and to release on earth, what did all this make him? less than the vicar of Christ? or less, therefore, than the foundation of his church in common with him?

But how are we to know him that might impose himself upon us? Is it not risking too much in our time to accord to anyone possessed of flesh and blood official powers in common with Christ, seeing how easy it is under the forces that may be brought to bear, to change from grace to imposture. Judas Iscariot was once a good man, and so was Brigham Young; but how was it to be known just where the one or the other changed from being an earthly angel to a human devil? Is there anything that saintly duty can do, that a fallen Lucifer cannot imitate?

But while it is true that impostors and those that set themselves up, may by far excel the gifted Saints in wisdom and prudence, in elegant prayers and attractive sermons, and in all that glorifies fallen humanity, yet is there a way to try those who say they are sent of God and are not, and to prove them to be liars:—

Thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars.—Rev. 2: 2.

As this was said to certain of the former-day saints, and as there is no reason nor revelation, why the Latter Day Saints should not be able to make the same test, therefore if we are deceived by the pretensions, it is our own fault. But how did the former-day saints try those that said they were apostles and were not? and after they had found them to be liars, what did they do with them? and what should we do with them, should such be found amongst us?

Although we have the same rules that were given anciently, by which to know those church officials who have come down from the true standard, and also those who have never attained to it, yet as such knowledge leads to no church action, but is acquired and designed especially for the protection of the possessor of it, it is therefore insisted, that if we are deceived by such, it is our own fault. Each one to his own master stands or falls in regard to this thing.

But, if after I have applied the test, some one is found wanting, shall I seal up the testimony and therefore give warning to no one, not even to the innocent and confiding? Yes; give warning to no one. Inasmuch as those rules by which deceivers may be known, are so plain that none need err therein, therefore, those who will not give heed to them, should be allowed to suffer the penalty of their own folly. Nor would such give heed if they were warned. They would only regard him that might sound such notes as being himself deceived, or else a willful disturber of the peace.

But what is the tendency? Are we to be more liable to have dishonest ministers amongst us than we have been? If we may write the prophecy of cause and effect, it is, that just to the extent that we gain favor with the people of mystery, Babylon the great, just to that extent will we partake of her leaven; and just to the extent that we partake of her leaven, will we have official wolves amongst us, and sheep that will come at the call of strangers.

SHINN-ROBERTS DEBATE.

A discussion between Elder D. L. Shinn of Adamston, West Virginia, and Elder W. W. Roberts, Earnheart, West Virginia, representative of the Disciple Church, was held at Bethel church, near McArthur Junction, Ohio, beginning September 16. The first proposition was, "Resolved that the church which I, W. W. Roberts, represent is the Church of Christ in faith, organization, and doctrine." Elder Shinn chose the writer as his moderator, Elder Roberts chose Elder Seth Sharp to represent him, and Rev. M. B. Cooley a Presbyterian minister of McArthur, Ohio, was chosen as chairman.

Elder Roberts in his opening speech said he was not there to represent any denomination; did not belong to any church; the Church of Christ never was a denomination; that he had a right to define his own position, and not to defend any doctrines presented by other men, Bishop Campbell included. That Campbell had never organized any church, but had called the people's attention back to the way in which they could get into the church. The church was organized on Pentecost day, in the city of Jerusalem, and existed in its fullness on this side of the cross; existed only in process and prospect the other side. When Pentecost day was "fully come," the church was organized, and had never been disorganized since, "Joe Smith to the contrary notwithstanding." The church was governed by divinely inspired men in the beginning, and is yet. Whenever two members meet, there is the Church of Jesus Christ. The identity of the Disciple Church and the primitive church was shown by comparison to be the same. They both believed in hearing, believing, repenting, confessing, baptism, and the Christian graces—a Godly life afterward. Because they both believed in this, the identity was complete. Any church organized since Pentecost day was too young for him; any organized before that date was too old. No man on earth has the right to preach the gospel, only to re preach, reproclaim, reaffirm the truths contained in the writings of those inspired men, who were authorized to preach, proclaim, and affirm the gospel.

Elder Shinn in his reply showed that Roberts had gone back on his proposition by denying that he represented any church, which changed the proposition to one of the following propositions: "Resolved, that I, W. W. Roberts, am the church of Jesus Christ," or, "Resolved, that the church of Jesus Christ is the church of Jesus Christ;" which last proposition he would not deny, and was therefore compelled to argue from the first one. He proceeded to show that the church was fully organized prior to the crucifixion of Jesus; was fully equipped for missionary work—proselyting; and they had a forty days' rest from the time the taking away of one Comforter, Jesus, until the giving of "another Comforter," the Holy Ghost. In vain he challenged Elder Roberts to show the similarity of his church and the primitive church in its ecclesiastical makeup as enumerated in 1 Corinthians 12 and Ephesians 4. He did not deny the similarity of some of the doctrines of the Church of Christ and the Disciple Church; but no organization under the sun, so far as he knew, would deny any of the points itemized by Elder Roberts; that is, hearing, believing, obeying, and the Christian graces of a godly life. He showed that any two objects might compare in a few, or even in a great many points, yet the differences be easily distinguishable; and illustrated the point by an anecdote of the twins who looked alike in every particular, except one had teeth, and the other did not; the only way to distinguish them was to put your finger in Lem's mouth, and if he bit you, it was Dave.

On the second proposition, "Resolved, that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the Church of Jesus Christ in faith, organization, and doctrine," Elder Shinn showed the faith of the primitive church to be that, it was the kingdom of God; the one body, the bride; and that it believed in faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, etc. (Hebrews 6: 1, 2), and that its organization was apostles, prophets, pastors, evangelists, teachers, etc. (1 Corinthians 12; Ephesians 4.) He then showed from the Bible, the apostasy, or "falling away," and the necessity of a restoration instead of a reformation. He showed from prophecy that the time was at hand; then by comparison showed the similarity of the church of latter times with that of former days. As Elder Roberts had asked that the full name, "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" be found in the Bible, he would ask as an equal favor for the brother to show the name Jesus Christ in any prophecy of the Old Testament relative to the mission and work of the Messiah; or, he would be more liberal with him: to just find either the name "Jesus," or "Christ" in the prophecies or historical matter of the Bible, as referring to the Messiah. He showed that the name "Christian" only occurred three times, and then as a nickname, while the word "Saint," as applied to a child of God, occurred nearly one hundred times.

Elder Roberts objected to the name of the church; place of organization; person who organized it; creed. It has a wrong spirit, and has nothing divine in its organization. It was on this proposition that the venom was spit and the serpent's head and cloven hoof were manifest. His opening words being, "I propose to show before this discussion closes that Joe Smith was a liar, a thief, a murderer, and that the spirit of murder exists through the whole organization; that Joe Smith was killed by jumping out of a window from a mob, while his wife stood at his back and urged him not to run, that if he was a prophet they could not kill him anyway; that Emma Smith apostatized from the faith, married a Gentile, and made a very good landlady, and did not care when Joe was killed anyway." However, to the credit of Elder Roberts, I will say that he never referred to the matter again. He claimed he laid on hands when he baptized, not because of their sins being remitted, but "in order to" the remission of sins, it being impossible not to lay on hands in performing the act of baptism. The oil of James 5:14 was the "oil of gladness" that Jesus was anointed with (Hebrew 1:9), and the sickness was sin sickness, or the backsliding of a disciple; while the "raising up" was to take them out of the mire and place them back on the Rock, Christ Jesus.

The third and fourth propositions are similar, so I will not give the arguments separately; but the main arguments of each will be noticed. The questions were, "resolved, that the New Testament is the last revelation from God to man." "Resolved, that the Book of Mormon is a revelation from God to man."

Elder Roberts said: "Human testimony will prove human propositions, but it requires divine testimony to prove a divine proposition." He used 2 Peter 1:3, Colossians 1:23, James 1:25, as proof texts to show that church was perfect as left by Jesus Christ, and asked that a silver dollar be made more perfect. He claimed that the Reorganized Church is from the old Mormon root. The name "Book of Mormon" was not in the Bible. He tried to show that the Saints do not believe the Bible, and in reading from Elder Etzenhouser's "The Books and Utah Mormonism in Contrast" pages six and nine—the statement to the effect that the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants contain our faith, he omitted the words "the Bible." He did this not only once, but five times, and would have left it in this shape had he not been called down by the writer and made to read it correctly; but even then he inserted parenthetically, "that means the Mormon Bible." He used nearly the whole time of two speeches in reading from Beadle's so-called exposure, rehearsing the Spalding story and its variations. He read Beadle's extracts from P. P. Pratt's "Key to Theology," showing that we believed in the procreation of spirits, but on this Bro. Shinn called him down on a point of order, but the chairman of the moderators having left, Elder Sharp and I could not agree, and there being no one of another faith present, I chose Elder D. B. Dye of the Disciple Church to the chair, agreeing to leave it to any fair-minded man; and Elder Dye decided that it was inadmissible, as we denied that belief (procreation), and P. P. Pratt was not a member of our church when he wrote the work. This decision was arrived at by Bro. S. J. Jeffers being present with a letter from Hon. J. S. Robinson, Secretary of State of Ohio, stating that we had no connection with the Utah Mormons.

Elder Roberts made no attempt to answer the scriptural argument of Elder Shinn, with the exception of Isaiah 29, which he dismissed by saying that every part of that was fulfilled in the first coming of Christ; that not a prophecy of the Bible extended in its fulfillment outside of Palestine except John's queer beast with the wings of an eagle, face of a man, etc., which referred to America.

Elder Shinn showed that a dollar could be improved, demonetized, or called in, changed by the authority that created it—Congress. He showed that there were errors in the Scriptures so far as mistranslations, inaccuracies, interpolations, are concerned, and read in support of this from the "Emphatic Diaglott." Read from Campbell, Wesley, Stone, and others, on the necessity of a new revelation. He showed that Revelation is not the last book of the Bible as to date of writing. Elder Roberts had read from Doctrine and Covenants page 103, section 20: "Behold, I have caused all old covenants to be done away in this," and then built an argument that we did not believe the Bible, that it was the old covenant, hence done away in the new or latter-day covenant. He substituted the words "Book of Mormon" after the word "this" and stopped. He had first inquired if any Doctrine and Covenants were there, and as there were not, he thought he had a cinch on the matter; but Bro. Shinn telegraphed, and had one for the next session, and showed up the reverend gentleman's fallacies. Bro. Shinn did not think Elder Roberts would have been guilty of this kind of work, but was led into it. This was correct; Elder Sharp, his moderator handed him the quotation, and as Elder Roberts admitted he had never read the Doctrine and Covenants, he was led into a trap, and that by a friend. Elder Shinn showed the Spalding fraud, and no attempt was made to answer him.

NOTES.

There were about one hundred Disciples, and three to five of us. We were in their stronghold, but were treated the best in the world. At the lunch hour we had our spreads near each other and passed the "goodies" all around. We heard some of the younger indulge in expressions like these: "Let's get 'em to do a miracle;" "have them prophecy who hid the melon that was sent over to the disputants," etc. I think a better feeling exists between our people and theirs than ever before. I am satisfied with the result, and but for the occasional show of venom manifested by Bro. Roberts towards the Smith family, everything was as pleasant as could be.

Elder Roberts is an abler speaker than Elder Shinn on account of Bro. Shinn's throat, but he rarely ever used all his time, but took up about ten minutes of every speech in praising the Bible and advising his flock to be satisfied with it and nothing more.

In one speech Elder Roberts in speaking of the "sincere milk of the word" remarked that they had the cow (referring to the Bible), and that she was fresh. When on the Book of Mormon question, he dashed the Book of Mormon down on the table and called it a "calf." He forgot no doubt that a "calf" is the legitimate offspring of a cow. See?

Elders Roberts and Shinn had been acquainted with each other twenty years and each publicly spoke well of his opponent.

Views of hearers:—

Disciple: "Your man would not stick to the question. If I were moderator I would hold him down. He don't answer Roberts' statements."

Saints: "Roberts went back on his own church. Shinn could not answer slanders relative to Joseph Smith; that question was not up for consideration."

Rev. Cooley, Presbyterian: "I came down expecting to hear something from the Bible, but only hear slander and vituperation. The character of Smith has nothing to do with this discussion. Shinn shows more of a Christian spirit than does Roberts."

Rev. Dennen, Bible Christian: "Elder Roberts is a good debater, but is not fair in religious discussion. He denied saying things that I have written down in my book in black and white. I am disappointed."

Presiding Elder Deaver, U. B.: "I say amen to what Elder Shinn says about not going back on his church. If I were a member of Roberts' congregation I would ask for a letter of removal."

Rev. Runyan, U. B.: "I think Shinn is a Christian gentleman. I hope the other man is, but his arguments are untenable."

Rev. Charles, U. B.: "The old gentleman (Shinn) showed a Christian spirit, while Mr. Roberts went square back on his church when he said they were not a denomination; for they could not hold property if they were not incorporated under some name."

Rev. Wright, U. B.: "The Mormon was too heavy for the Campbellite."

Yours for truth,

NOTICES.

Church publications will be offered at the Spring River district conference, November 10, 1894, at catalogue prices, by A. H. Herke.

At the reunion at Brush Creek, Illinois, November, 1893, there was a committee appointed to raise money to purchase a gospel tent. At the reunion at the same place in September, 1894, when inquiry was made as to what had been done it was found there had been but very little done in this direction. The old committee was discharged and a new one appointed. The money collected by them in the effort to buy a tent the past year was to be committed to them. Anyone knowing himself to be a part of the old committee, having circulated a paper in the interest of said tent, having received any money or promise of any, will please turn what he has over to this new committee. This notice appears from the fact we do not know who composed the old committee. The names of those acting on the new committee are, J. T. Curtis, John Bass, Wm. S. Miller, J. F. Thomas, Henry Rankin, Wm. A. Kelley, J. D. Stead.

By order of the committee,
J. D. STEAD, Sec.

REUNION NOTICE.

We wish to say to all who expect to attend the reunion at Vale's Mills, commencing October 26, that they will notify Jasper Bowen of Vale's Mills, or S. J. Jeffers of Arbaugh, Ohio, so we can make arrangements to meet all at the station. All coming on the C. H. V. and T. come to Radcliff, and on the C. and M. to Carpenter. Now be prompt in letting us know in time if you want us to wait upon you. Come as many as can, and let us have a time of rejoicing together.
S. J. JEFFERS, By Order of Com.

MARRIED.

MILLS—VAN FLEET.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. Nelson Van Fleet, near Downey, Los Angeles county, California, Bro. Frederick Mills and Sr. San Van Fleet. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Mark H. Forscutt on August 30, 1894, amid a vast concourse of Saints and friends, whose presence and wedding testimonials gave evidence that they indorsed the many statements made that bride and bridegroom represented, and worthily so, two of the best families in that region, both as citizens and as Saints. D. S. Mills and wife, and N. Van Fleet and wife, gospel pioneers whom hundreds love, are well represented in their children. So far as the adornments of the parlor, where the wedding took place, and the bowery were concerned, the bowery erected in the beautiful orange grove outside where the wedding feast was given,—nothing short of such a land of sunshine, fruits, flowers, and semitropical plants, as Southern California is, would have been adequate to meet the demands which were made upon it, especially the bowery, fitted to represent that Edenic bower of luxurious beauty which poets have delighted to picture as the place where earth's first wedding was honored by "Our Father" as celebrant. The best wishes of those who know them go with Frederick and Sarah.

DIED.

VARLAND.—Truman Roy, son of Mr. Andrew H. and Sr. Carrie M. Varland died September 21, 1894, aged 2 years, 5 months, and 17 days. As we stood by the open grave and looked for the last time at the beloved little form sleeping so sweetly in his snowy bed, ready to be hid from our earthly gaze forever, it seemed so hard; but when we remembered our Savior's words, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," we felt he knew best and all was well with our darling boy. Funeral at the Danway church.

Truman dear, thy days were few,
Laden with precious morning dew.
Sad were our hearts when earth ties were riven;
Thou but budded on earth, to blossom in heaven.

DEWITT.—At Independence, Missouri, October 1, 1894, after several years' illness from consumption, Sr. Louis A. DeWitt. She was born at Manti, Fremont county, Iowa, March 7, 1858; was married to Mr. Frank E. DeWitt April 13, 1875; was baptized by Elder T. W. Smith, June, 1875, in Becker county, Minnesota. She was a patient sufferer; but passed away peacefully and in hope of a better and more enduring life. Funeral sermon by Elder Joseph Luff on the 3d inst.

HOLCOMB.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, September 18, 1894, Sr. Memento, beloved wife of Bro. Chauncy S. Holcomb, aged 46 years, 3 months, and 12 days.

Her death was peaceful and triumphant; and the large concourse of people attendant upon her funeral, the 21st ult., gave evidence of the high esteem in which she was held by those who knew her. Funeral sermon by Elder W. W. Blair, assisted by Rev. J. Yackey, from Psalms 116: 15: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." The remains were interred in the Holcomb cemetery.

HOLCOMB.—At Galland's Grove, Iowa, November 5, 1892, Carl Larette, son of Bro. and Sr. C. S. and M. Holcomb, aged 14 years, 5 months, and 15 days, of diphtheria. Prayer at the residence of the parents was offered by Elder Ralph Jenkins, and the remains were interred in the Holcomb cemetery the 6th inst.

SHEPHERD.—At Deer Isle, Maine, September 25, 1894, Bro. Peter Shepherd, aged 64 years, 9 months, 15 days. He was baptized June 28, 1868, by Elder Otis C. Eaton, and has ever lived a consistent Christian life. Funeral service by Elder William G. Pert.

ANDERSON.—At Omaha, Nebraska, September 24, 1894, Mr. David Anderson, son of Elder Jens Anderson, aged 22 years, 4 months, and 20 days. Deceased was not a member of the church, but expressed a desire during his illness to be permitted to discharge his duty in this respect, but it was not so ordered. He was a young man of good habits, had been married about six months, and his early death is sadly mourned by loving parents, wife, two brothers, and a sister, besides many friends not so closely allied by kindred ties. Elder C. H. Porter conducted the funeral services at the home of his parents October 1, after which the remains were interred at Forest Lawn cemetery.

MORRIS.—At Brush Creek, Illinois, Bro. Joseph W. Morris. He was born March 18, 1860, in Wayne county, Illinois. Was baptized by his father, I. A. Morris, January 13, 1879. He was ordained to the office of teacher, March 8, 1891, and died September 25, 1894. He leaves a wife, two children, father, one brother, and four sisters, with other relatives, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. He was Sunday school superintendent and all the neighborhood feel deeply the loss. His only regret, expressed by himself, was, that he had not paid his tithing. Funeral sermon by Elder G. H. Hilliard.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Sixteen Utah elders have been sent to Honolulu to do missionary work in the Hawaiian Islands.

A Jacksonville, Florida, telegram of September 29 reports great damage by the late West India cyclone at Tampa Bay, Fernandina, St. Augustine, and other points, and at sea, many vessels being wrecked along the coast. At St. Augustine the waves dashed over the sea wall and made rivers of the streets. Many wharves were blown away. Between Green Cove Springs and Palatka, on the St. Johns, twelve wharves have completely disappeared. Between Jacksonville and St. Augustine not a telegraph pole was left standing. The damage to the orange growers is incalculable. In the large groves the ground is completely covered with green oranges. The loss is fully 20 per cent. The east coast is still cut off from communication below St. Augustine and Palatka.

Wellman, the Arctic explorer, is determined to renew his polar explorations. He is convinced that his plan for reaching high altitudes will be successful, and will organize another expedition.

Chicago, New York, and Jersey City clegymen, assisted by others, have inaugurated crusades against gambling and illegal liquor selling in their respective cities.

European correspondents report dissensions in Lord Rosebery's government; that the silence of the Premier on the Home Rule and House of Lords questions is the cause of trouble.

Mr. Gladstone has reannounced his adhesion to the principle of local option, and expressed the wish that more than its mere enforcement may be done to cope with the frightful evils brought on by drink.

One result of the agitation for the protection of young girls against procuresses and decoys, who have lately been operating in England and on the continent, has been the combination of a dozen or more societies in London and the European centers, with a view to coöperation in pursuing an effective system against the evil. The plan includes the formation of a staff of detectives to watch incoming and outgoing steamers and railway trains and to track procurers and their agents to their headquarters.

MADRID, Sept. 29.—The Primate of Spain is about to issue a pastoral protest against the recent consecration of a Protestant Bishop and church in Madrid. He maintains that these acts are an aggression of the rights of the Spanish Episcopate and declares that he will agitate the matter before the Cortes.

The German Government is having trouble with the Polish subjects. The movement in favor of the reestablishment of a Polish kingdom has gathered great strength within the last four years. The Lemberg Exposition has shown that plainly quite recently, and a number of significant incidents must be similarly construed. During the recent Kosciusko anniversary public speeches were made in the Polish districts of Prussia inciting the people to disloyalty and rebellion. A wealthy and influential Polish magnate while addressing his countrymen urged them to look for a kingdom of their own and be prepared to defend their nationality. Attacks and numerous assaults by crowds of Polish peasants upon German travelers are again becoming alarmingly frequent. Under Bismarck's administration a repressive policy was pursued with the Poles, which was relaxed when Caprivi came into office. A Prussian official says severe repressive measures are henceforth to be adopted.

Socialists have met with great success in elections for the courts of industry in Berlin, Erfurt, Mulhausen, and elsewhere.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A new celibate order of laymen in the Protestant Episcopal Church will be instituted to-morrow at St. Chrysostom's chapel at Seventh avenue and Thirty-seventh street, by the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter, Bishop of New York. The order will be called the Community of the Brothers of the Church, which has been founded by Russell Whitcomb, lately a student in the General Theological Seminary. Mr. Whitcomb will take the vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, and will become Brother Hugh, the head of the new community of monastic laymen. Their work will be largely among the children in the Sunday schools and in their homes, where the advantages of Christianity are lacking. The habit of the brotherhood is the long, brown cassock with a brown cross on the breast and bound with a girdle. For street wear the cassock will be made shorter. At the end of five years the vows may be renewed.

VIENNA, September 30.—The socialists of this city to-day held a demonstration in the Ring Strasse in front of the House of Parliament. A labor song, the chorus of which demanded universal suffrage, was sung. The singing had the effect of rendering the crowd restive and the police intervened and dispersed the meeting. Fourteen of the leaders were arrested.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30.—Dispatches from Batavia announce that the Dutch, after eight hours' hard fighting, captured Mataram, the stronghold of the Balinez rebels. The Dutch loss was one lieutenant and twelve privates killed and four officers and forty-five privates wounded. The Balinez lost heavily.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 30.—The Fairhope Industrial Association of Des Moines, Iowa, has determined to establish a colony based on Henry George's single tax theory in Baldwin County, Alabama. The lands are located between Daphne and Battles, on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay, and officers of the association will be here shortly to start things moving. Twenty-five families will come as soon as preparations are completed, and this number will be increased to 100 by spring. They will engage in trucking, fruit growing, and small manufacturing.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Sept. 30.—The elections which took place in Norway last week resulted in a victory for the Conservative party. In the Stavanger district fifty-one Conservatives and only eleven Radicals were elected. The Akershus district elected forty-eight Conservatives and eleven Radicals. The party of the Left was victorious in the Kristian district.

The large Skonvik sawmills, near the city of Sundsvik, were burned the other day. The laborers' cottages were also destroyed by fire and hundreds of people were made homeless.

Pure food exhibits have been opened in the cities of Boston and Chicago.

Train robbers held up a Southern Pacific train and secured a considerable amount of money, near Maricope, Arizona, October 1.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The Debats has a dispatch from San Domingo, stating that half that town was destroyed by the recent cyclone.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Oct. 1.—The project of a Central American union has been dropped for the present.

Heavy storms did much damage along the North Atlantic coast from Atlantic City to New York on the 1st inst.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 2.—A terrible cyclone struck this city this evening and almost devastated the business portion of the city. Several people are known to have been killed and injured, while it is feared scores of others have met the same horrible fate. The main portion of the business center, bounded on the south by Third street, on the north by river front, on the west by Center street, and on the east by Commerce street, is practically in ruins and the amount of damage is incalculable.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 3.—Never in the history of Little Rock was there such a scene of wrecked and ruined buildings as was presented this morning. The streets were almost impassable, and great yawning chasms in brick fronts told of the fury of the storm. The damage will aggregate almost $1,000,000. The only insurance held by the sufferers amounts to $2,500.

The death list now known is not so large as was expected, but there are several persons missing and their names may yet be added to the roll of the dead. So far as reports received now indicate, the dead number 4, the injured 34.

Almost every building between Main and Markham and Third and Main streets was unroofed, and in numerous instances entire fronts were leveled to the ground. On East Markham street the destruction of property was greater than elsewhere. Several large buildings were leveled and not one escaped injury. Windows and doors were blown out, tin roofs carried away, telephone and electric light wires blown to the ground, and poles twisted off at the curbing.

At the insane asylum the most complete wreck was to be seen. The buildings were erected by the State at a cost of $300,000. The ruin was not complete, but the damage is estimated at from $75,000 to $150,000.

The storm did damage at the State Penitentiary estimated to aggregate $30,000.

Fully 200 citizens escaped death in a most miraculous manner.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 2.—The tornado which played leap frog through the northern part of the city last night fortunately confined itself to damaging property and left humanity alone. Buildings of all kinds were demolished, twisted out of shape, and removed from their foundations, yet their occupants suffered no harm outside of bruises and scratches, and not a single fatality accompanied the destruction to property. From here the twister lifted and disappeared to the northwest.

Pawnee, Nebraska, reports damage done in that vicinity by a tornado, on the 2d inst.

Advices received by several great financial houses in London are understood to confirm the worst in the reports of the condition of the Czar. These advices state pretty plainly that his Majesty's case is hopeless and that his death cannot by any possible means be delayed more than a few months.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A special dispatch to the Times from St. Petersburg says the Czar has lost in weight enormously during the last few weeks. He suffers great pain and looks exceedingly ill.

A rumor prevails to the effect that the Czarowitz has been appointed Regent of the empire.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 30.—The Chinese Government, after a delay of more than a month, has finally ratified the treaty with the United States providing for the exclusion of Chinese laborers from this country and recognizing the validity of the Geary law and other statutes relating to the Chinese immigration.

TIEN TSIN, Oct. 2.—It is announced officially that 5,000 Japanese troops have arrived close to Passiet Bay, near the Russian frontier. Previous to this announcement it was reported here that a Japanese fleet had been sighted September 28 ten miles from Shan Hai Kwan, 200 miles from Peking.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 3.—It is reported that the Japanese have captured Kiu Lien Cheng on the eastern side of the Yalu River. One hundred and fifty thousand men have been gathered at Peking for the defense of the city, but of this number only 7,000 are effectively armed. Only 50,000 soldiers are available for the defense of the province of Chi Lu Ku, and these are raw levies. A Japanese army has landed to the north of the Yellow River in the southern part of the Gulf of Pe Chi Li, to intercept the transport of troops from the south via the Grand Canal to Tien Tsin. A Japanese fleet of seventeen ships is now blockading the Gulf of Pe Chi Li. French troops are massing in Tonquin. The Governor of Kirin, Manchuria, reports that the Japanese have effected a landing in the rear of Lan Chun. The whole province is in a state of consternation, but measures for its defense are being adopted. Another heavy levy has been made upon the Chinese merchants in order to meet the expenses of the war. The native papers confirm the report yesterday that 5,000 Japanese troops have landed in the northeastern portion of Corea.

Washington advices say Prince Kung, a Ex-Chinese diplomat, has been restored to the imperial favor and placed at the head of the Privy Council. His restoration is taken to mean the ascendancy of his aggressive party and policy over Li Hung Chang.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The blockade of Madagascar by the French and the hasty summoning of the British cabinet, created considerable consternation in public circles, but confidence was restored when the nature of the summons became known. It is learned that the Ministers regard the outlook in China, in view of the probable complete rout of the Chinese forces and the resultant crisis in Peking, with the utmost apprehension. It is considered likely that Russia will make the adoption of protective measures by England an excuse for intervening in behalf of the other side, in which case a serious difficulty may arise.

In fact in ministerial circles the Chinese situation is regarded as offering a much greater menace to peace than any difficulty with France. The absence of the Czar from the helm at St. Petersburg, his pacific disposition being well known, adds another element to the danger of the situation, as it gives a comparatively free hand to his Ministers, whose aggressive designs in the East he has checked repeatedly.

A New Zealand government representative is at Washington, endeavoring to establish a steamship line between that country and the United States.

Insurgents are again at war against the Brazilian government.

KEY WEST, Fla., Oct. 4.—Fifty bodies, victims of the wrecks occurring on the reefs during the recent storm, have been washed ashore on the islands around Key West. The dead, it is said, are evidently sailors.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The Evening News publishes a sensational statement that the cabinet council was called to consider reports from Peking, that Russia was intriguing to assist China against Japan in return for certain ports in Corea.

The cabinet council decided to send troops to China to protect British interests. It is probable additional ships will be sent to strengthen the fleet in Chinese waters. It is also said the British legation at Peking will be guarded by British blue jackets and native Indian soldiers.

Japanese officials at Washington point to these things as indicative of demoralization of the people of China and its inability to afford the usual protection to foreigners. The Chinese officials attach little importance to China's request to foreign powers. They say it is a usual step at a time of great internal disturbance.

Later cablegrams on the Madagascar affair say that France has not blockaded the island but has merely taken measures to prevent landing of arms and ammunition for the Hovas. France is evidently on the eve of another Colonial war. French reports say that conditions in Madagascar have become unbearable; that French settlers and merchants and all under French protection are systematically abused.

BUDA PESTH, Oct. 4.—In the Upper House of the Hungarian Diet yesterday debate was begun on the bill granting liberty of worship to all religious beliefs. Cardinal Schlauch opposed the ecclesiastical proposals of the government, declaring that they would be the ruin of society and the State. The Servian Patriarch, the Roumanian, and the other Bishops expressed similar views. Count Ezaky, the Calvinistic Bishop Souz, and others spoke in support of the bill.

The marriage of the Czarowitz has again been postponed.

Amsterdam, Berlin, Paris, and London cablegrams of the 5th inst. report alarming rumors of the Czar's failing health.

TIEN TSIN, Oct. 5.—Reports have reached here that a rebellion has broken out in the Province of Mongolia. Troops from Peking have been sent to quell the uprising. Serious troubles are said to have arisen within the palace at Peking.

In the Upper House of the Hungarian Diet the bill granting liberty of worship to all religious beliefs was adopted by a majority of three.

The Manchester, England, Guardian, announces that Great Britain and Russia have agreed upon an international conference for the adjustment of the Oriental war. Other powers will be asked to join the undertaking.

ABSTRACT of EVIDENCE TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

This work is an abstract of the sworn testimony of both Plaintiff's and Defendant's witnesses in the suit of the Reorganized Church versus the Hedrickites (a faction from the Original Church) for title to and possession of the Temple Lot at Independence, Missouri. The testimony of old Latter Day Saints who were with the church in its early days, and who are now in the Reorganized Church, and in the Utah Church, besides that of leading officials of both churches, and the testimony of members of the Hedrickite organization, is given; also the statements of said witnesses under cross-examination and recross-examination.

Evidence from the three standard books, and from the publications of the Original Church, and the Reorganized Church, the Hedrickite faction, and from those of the Utah Church, is presented in support of the claims of the Reorganized Church to be the successor of the Original Church, showing it to be the authorized and identical continuation of said Original Church and entitled to its property, while all other factions have departed from the Original Church in organization, in teaching, and in practice.

The arguments of counsel for Complainant, three pamphlets, now in print, accompany the Abstract until the supply is exhausted.

A valuable volume of evidence for ministry and laity; useful in refuting the many misrepresentations of the early church and its ministry and membership.

A limited edition has been published. Price, bound in law sheep (Counsel's argument in separate binding), $3.00. Bound in cloth $2.50.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844. Muslin binding 70

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD;

THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resume or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc. Price, $1 25

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

ECONOMY IN EATING.

DR. MARY E. GREEN, of the National Household Economic Association, at the Pure Food Exposition, Chicago:—

The first demand made by aboriginal man upon the earth and the elements about him was for food. The first, last, and most particular requirement of his civilized brother to-day is that food be supplied him. Primitive man probably ate his food on any and every occasion when it was to be procured. He was no epicure in his selection of meats and was guided in the selection of non-poisonous herbs and vegetables by the preferences of the animals which he observed. All the invention of modern science has been unable to improve, in point of healthfulness, nutrition, and economy, upon the simple method devised by aboriginal man, the slow boiling of meat in a clay pot over a fire, and the whole science of cookery is coming back at last to something like that one simple process, excepting in cases where economy and nutrition are not considered. People in this age require composite cookery, and among certain classes the demands of a cloyed sense and a satiated appetite have created most elaborate and useless dishes. Now, for health's sake, we are awakening to the value of primitive methods again.

Popularly speaking, our table foods may be divided into four classes—the aqueous or watery, saccharine or the starches and sugars, the oleaginous or fatty, and the nitrogenous or flesh-forming elements. Scientists are now telling us how much and what sort of food is necessary for people of different occupations—laboring man, child, and scholar. They are teaching us not only the science of nutrition, but economy in the purchasing and the use of foods. One class has too much food and is surfeited, and the other too little. We are becoming accustomed to the demands of the poor and the laboring classes for higher wages. The social problem will never be solved by that means. High wages are of little benefit as long as the poor man's wife does not know how to cook or market.

She buys a sirloin steak, which is largely wasted, at twenty cents a pound, oysters at thirty cents a quart, crackers and baker's pastry instead of oatmeal for her children. One factor in the solution of this great problem will become potent when she buys a cheap cut of beef for stew, when she discards the excessive use of potatoes (which are far from nourishing and low in strength-forming elements) and buys oatmeal instead, when she buys split peas at five cents a quart instead of cucumbers at five cents apiece, and when she learns to make a delicious soup out of left-over vegetables, scraps of bread, and seasonings. Poor selection and the injudicious use of foods among the well-to-do will produce discomfort, frequent "bilious attacks," and all the aches and pains due to malnutrition.

Professor Atwater says: "We waste foods in two ways. We eat more than we need and a great deal is thrown away. That which we consume in excess of our needs is worse than wasted because of the injury done to health." Prof. Atwater has completed tables giving the nutritive value of different foods, and hopes ere long to have them so perfected that they will be suitable to hang in every kitchen. Of course he upsets many of our pet theories. We are accustomed to believing that an egg for breakfast is as satisfactory as a piece of beefsteak, while eggs contain forty per cent less nutrition than round beefsteak. In the expensive sirloin steak you get tenderness, a surplus of fat and bone which is wasted, and for the same money one can get several times as much nourishment from other parts of the beef, and proper cooking will render these as nutritious and almost as delicate as the best sirloin. Of grains, oatmeal is most nutritious, with wheat next. Of vegetables, peas, beans, and lentils take first rank, while potatoes contain less than is of nutritive value. Prof. Atwater learned from personal investigation that the average man requires daily twenty ounces of bread, eight ounces of beefsteak, thirty ounces of potatoes, one ounce of butter, a quart of water, or the equivalent of the in other foods.

Dr. Green then made a comparison showing that Americans consumed more than the other nationalities, and that Americans are the most extravagant eaters. In the older countries the people have evolved some national dish which nearly always contains just the elements suitable to their climate. She gave the foods of all countries and showed that Americans are extravagant and poor cooks and are lacking in the national dish.

"The tenement house classes must learn," she continued, "that oatmeal is better and cheaper for their children than fine white bread and pastry. And, best of all, the luxurious classes must be taught the morality of economy and the religion of plain and simple diet."—Ex.

WHEN A MAN IS A SUCCESS.

Let a man in business be thoroughly fitted for the position he occupies, alert to every opportunity and embracing it to its fullest possibility, with his methods fixed on honorable principles, and he is a successful man, writes Edward W. Bok in the October Ladies' Home Journal. It doesn't matter whether he makes one thousand dollars or a hundred thousand dollars. He makes a success of his position. He carries to a successful termination that which it has been given him to do, be that great or small. If the work he does, and does well, is up to his limitations, he is a success. If he does not work up to his capacity, then he fails, just as he fails, too, if he attempts to go beyond his mental or physical limit. There is just as much danger on one side of a man's limit line as there is on the other. The very realization of one's capacity is a sign of success.

OF ASIATIC ORIGIN.

For centuries yet to come will discussion be held as to whether the origin of the first inhabitants of the American continent is not due to Asia. Dr. Brinton is pretty sure of the long-past relations between the East and the West, and, as far as that, so is Dr. Tyler. Our leading American authority declares that there is not a dialect, a tool, a weapon, a symbol, a game, a domesticated plant, or an animal in use in America at the time of the discovery that does not show its original Asiatic origin.—Ex.

Prof. Robert S. Ball, F. R. S., Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge University and formerly Astronomer Royal of Ireland, thinks that all modern scientific research tends to a belief in the possibility of human existence in other worlds than this terrestrial ball of our own.

IN THE
WORLD'S HISTORY

Have had remarkable memories. The stories of great captains who knew names or faces of all the men in their commands, or of merchant princes who could instantly quote the prices in the principal markets of the world, are familiar. A slight investigation will show that the most successful business men are possessed of wonderful memories. The leaders of finance rarely seek assistance for a figure or a name, and are thus able to act and to win while other men are investigating. It is this power which enables millionaire operators, merchant princes, and railroad kings to surprise the world by the transaction of an apparently impossible amount of business during the short hours of a working day.

The demands of commercial life are daily becoming more and more exacting; more details must be mastered, more facts and figures remembered. Only the possessor of a powerful memory can win and hold a chief position in the world of work.

TWO SERMONS, one on the "Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of Man," and one on "The Modern Stumbling-Stone," have been added also, making it just the kind of a book to have in the family.

GIFTS AND FRUITS.

BOTH of these are mentioned in connection with the gospel. The former are given to and the latter demanded of the Saints. Where the soil is fully consecrated the latter inevitably follows as a result of the former. Sometimes, however, the graveness of the responsibility attaching to the receipt of gifts of the Spirit is not sensed by the one seeking them, and as a consequence the fruits do not appear. In such cases and to such a one shame instead of honor, and condemnation instead of approval must finally accrue. God stands acquitted in having given all the necessary help, and man stands condemned and without excuse in having consumed that favor upon his lusts.

The garden that is richly favored with sunlight, and rain, and dew, and the cultivator's diligent toil; yet yields no more of cereal, or fruit, or vegetable, nor less of weeds and thorns than the distant field which has been less highly favored, should never point to the favor it receives as evidence that it is of greater worth than the other that receives less. The barren fig tree mentioned in the Savior's parable in Luke 13, had its stay in the vineyard continued another year, that extra care and labor might be bestowed upon it, that something beyond the ordinary might be done for it—not because it had proven itself more worthy of that unusual attention than the rest; but because it had utterly failed to yield anything, and unless extraordinary effort should stimulate it to fruitfulness, it would have to be cut down and burned. All the other trees were receiving but ordinary care and yet were yielding satisfactory returns in fruit. Their right to remain was not questioned—they were filling their mission and entitling themselves to continued care and place in the vineyard.

Quite often we give to those who have not earned and who are not in every sense worthy of our consideration. These services are called acts of charity. They are not performed to express approval of what the receiver has done, but to save him from starvation, and with a view to giving him courage and stimulus to do better. We deal with his needs and not with his deserts in such a case.

May it not be that within the church some are receiving more abundant honor or favor from heaven because of dire necessity rather than as a reward of faithfulness? Are those who receive most abundantly of the outward or visible gifts always superior in point of moral uprightness to those who enjoy less of such manifestations? If not, why do they receive more? Are such persons always the most affectionate, forbearing, sacrificing, and scrupulously exact in righteous deportment that we have among us? In other words, do the "fruits" abound more plentifully with such than all others? Love, peace, longsuffering, meekness, gentleness, brotherly kindness, and charity are among the fruits enumerated by inspiration. Where these are not the soil is barren, and the more gifts such persons receive, without changing the results, the more loudly is the barrenness proclaimed.

It is a truth well attested that many of those within the fold in whom those fruits abound, have not been the recipients of outward or visible gifts to a large degree, but have partaken of those silent and hidden gifts of wisdom, knowledge, or faith. By wisdom some have been enabled to apply themselves judiciously in directions that have brought returns in accumulated strength and prestige. They have avoided the necessity for miraculous external display in their deliverance from disease by keeping themselves free from such indulgences as they knew would entail physical disorder and distress. By faith others have been enabled to uncomplainingly endure suffering when deliverance was denied, and have braved the furnace and flood of affliction, carrying with them an undying confidence in God, notwithstanding he permitted them to be stripped of everything earthly that once was theirs. By knowledge others have been enabled to comprehend the invisible through the visible, the eternal through the temporal. Their powers have been enlarged so that the reality of such gospel excellencies as lap over into the life to come have been voiced in and certified to by the things that now are and thus they are enabled to "endure as seeing him who is invisible."

Each of these have grown with the growth of the body and upon them, as members of the body, as great dependence can be placed as upon those otherwise endowed. They are as stalwart defenders of the truth as can be found among us. In their lives we trace the development of holiness and in the well-guarded soil of their characters the "fruits of the Spirit" abound.

We are assured by all we hear, and see, and feel, of the divine procedure within the church, that supplies are meted out according to necessities that exist. All will receive, in natural or supernatural, visible or invisible, ordinary or extraordinary communication, the measure and kind of grace essential to fruitfulness. Though in seeming it may be little or much; though in kind it may seem ill adapted to the end sought; it will nevertheless be sufficient to leave all men inexcusable should the peaceable fruits of righteousness fail to abound within them.

It is ours to acknowledge the wisdom of God in what is sent, and proceed to a righteous use thereof. If the fruits that result from thus occupying are the full measure of what was possible, the returns will be accepted and the laborer crowned. None will be required to answer for what they did not receive, and none will have occasion to glory in the abundance received, if the fruitage made possible thereby has failed to materialize. Let us not pray for less of gifts but earnestly labor for more of fruits.

THE GOSPEL BOAT, ETC.

BROTHER and Captain Joseph Burton, writing from San Jose, California, October 6, said the Evanelia was then ready for her voyage except the getting of supplies on board. He has a good word to say for the gallant little ship, in his animated description of her trial trip, etc., given below. A few weeks' "life on the ocean wave and home on the rolling deep" will do the brethren good and invigorate them for missionary labor. We never knew a jack tar who was not a jolly old salt, and we congratulate the crew in having so genial a captain. We wish them Godspeed and a prosperous voyage:—

I feel a little impatient to get off, as we now have a spell of good northerly weather to get off shore, and good moon, and we are ready and anxious to get off and back again; but of course will wait till all who are going get on board. The men will have to sign articles as sailors and stand watch four hours, except the dog watch—of two hours, from four to eight, evening. I was astonished at the peculiarities of the mind as one thing after another would be presented to my mind while making up the list of necessary things; that had lain unnoticed for a quarter of a century; but when on the bay last Thursday I was at the helm and the breeze blowing freshly, the little boat doing her best, and throwing the spray half way up her masts, I felt altogether another being and caught the fire of my former life and reveled in the hour's enjoyment, and laughed in my "sleeve" when the pilot said, "We better go back or reef the sails." I answered, "Neither; let her go; see how nicely she behaves; let us try her good;" and so we kept on closehauled. The heavy sea in Golden Gate gave us a good chance, and when we got nearly over to the shore we tacked and ran back, the boat doing excellently. But my mind brought back all my life of former days, and I was Captain Joe Burton again, fairly reveling in the delights and excitements of the life of a sailor, in a good ship and a roaring breeze. And now I am as quiet in mind as a good elder should be with no sailorlike inclinations except when I think of the Evanelia.

Bro. Hubert Case and wife of Moorhead, Iowa, will go to the Society Islands as missionaries. They were to leave on the 8th inst. for San Francisco to sail on the Evanelia. Of them and the Northern California reunion Bro. Burton also writes, as follows:—

It would have been very nice to have had our new missionaries with us at our reunion. It is progressing nicely. Brn. Forscutt, Clapp, and Daley are here with quite a number of our local ministry and a good interest is maintained and some excellent sermons are delivered. Am glad you have found so good, intelligent, and capable young people for the islands.

THE GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.

THOSE who paid ten cents for the Senior and five cents for the Intermediate Gospel Quarterlies for September and October (the first of the two months' issues), will also receive the November and December issue—without added cost. Beginning with 1895 the Quarterlies will again contain lessons for three months. This, in answer to numerous inquiries by mail.

Schools not using the Quarterlies should begin them with the new year. As these Bible studies proceed they will include lessons of Old and New Testament history, prophecy, and doctrine, in systematic form and in comprehensive arrangement, with lessons on "temperance," and many other features and helps essential to intelligent study of the Scriptures. What the lessons have been in the past is their recommendation for the future. Competent judges have pronounced them to be the best Sunday school lessons ever issued, and results so far reached have evidenced the correctness of their conclusions. We hope to make a more complete and detailed statement of the benefits derived by use of the Quarterlies and the adoption of other features of the methods adopted by the General Sunday School Association.

It is hoped that every school in the church will note the benefits that accrue from taking up the Bible studies issued under the auspices of the General Sunday School Association, and the necessity of unity and general concert of action. The Sunday school work grows steadily and is being improved as rapidly as conditions and developments permit. No school can afford to lose its opportunity in this respect.

Subscriptions for the new year may be sent in at any time. The prices of the Gospel Quarterlies for the coming year are as follows: Senior Grade, ten cents per quarter; thirty-five cents per year. Intermediate and Primary Grades combined, five cents per quarter; twenty cents per year. Should a separate Primary Grade be issued, it will be announced in due time.

For complete list of Sunday school supplies, see catalogue of Herald Office publications, mailed free to any address on application.

THE CHILDREN OF TWO COVENANTS.

A BROTHER suggests the following as a subject to be investigated:—

The children of the two covenants are pre-figured by Esau and Jacob, and Ishmael and Isaac, and the two sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh. The younger supersede the older, just as Jacob did Esau, and as Isaac did Ishmael; and just as the children of the new covenant superseded the children of the older covenant. If these are types then the children of the old covenants are the antitype of the older son, and the children of the new covenant are the antitype of the younger son; as it is written, "Jacob have I [God] loved; but Esau have I hated." Now, if the antitype brings the type to an end, then they that are baptized (and they only) shall be counted for the seed of Abraham; for "In Isaac shall thy seed be called."

PROF. DAVID SWING'S CHURCH.

WITH the death of Professor Swing it is feared the church which he built from heterogeneous elements will disintegrate.

After the withdrawal of Prof. David Swing from the Presbyterian Church one of the secular papers of Chicago, where the trial of the Professor for heresy took place, stated that in the "defection of Professor Swing the Presbyterian Church had lost a good gospeller but the cause of Christ had gained a minister."

Whether this was satire on the church which tried the Professor, or was the real sentiment of the man who represented the public in the paper in which the statement occurred, we have no means of knowing; but it had a strange look to us at the time, and has since, in the light of the work done by the man since his departure from the church. The admirers of Prof. Swing among the public men of the city built a hall, in which he has ministered from the time it was ready for occupation, and in which the congregation won to him by his defection from Presbyterian dogmas, and his worth as a man, met him in worship, and to be fed on his thought and speculation—a sort of higher criticism—in place of churchly rule and organized philosophy.

The eulogies pronounced upon Prof. David Swing in the pulpit and the forum of Chicago by Rev. J. H. Barrows, Drs. H. W. Thomas, Bristol, and many others, leading men of thought, would lead one to think that he will not be replaced; and it is a sad conclusion to reach that the man was the coherent property in the association that resulted from the heresy of Prof. Swing and his trial by a popular theological institution of the period, and that now the man is gone the life of the church built up by him is to die from spiritual inanition—better it had never lived, if there is life in Christ and in his church, wherever that may be. Was it in Prof. Swing's church, as it was called?

CONSIDER HIS CIRCUMSTANCES.

ONE of the brethren in the missionary field, a portion of whose time is spent in pastoral work in one of our large cities, writes, requesting that we call attention to the demands made upon him and other ministers by friends—Saints—who ask favors, which to grant requires expenditure of means that is not remitted nor repaid. This elder, like many others, left a lucrative business and placed himself at the disposal of the church, receiving support for his family on the "ministerial basis," which necessitates economy and frugality in living, and which is insufficient for additional expenses, however willing the man so placed may be to grant the favors referred to.

We have known elders to be called to preach funeral sermons, administer to the sick, join persons in marriage, and perform other duties involving travel and expense, who received not a cent to repay them for the outlay of means or time,—and that, too, when business interests were left,—and by persons who were abundantly able to defray the expense incurred. In some instances it is caused by thoughtlessness, but more often, we are compelled to believe, by neglect. We are well aware that in some cases persons are unable to pay. In that event the elder will evidently see the situation and expect nothing; but those who can should see that the laborer receives, or is not required to pay for another what is justly his, and what he needs. The Master commended his diligent servants to the considerate care of his people, instructing them that the true disciple would not neglect to provide for their necessities. That being true, those to whom it may apply will not object to a reminder to be more thoughtful in the instances to which the brother calls attention. We publish his note, in this connection:—

Would it be asking too much to ask you to call the attention of the Saints, by editorial note, to the necessity of inclosing the necessary expenses when writing to elders in the field for favors? I don't know how it is with others, but I know that my pocketbook is taxed beyond its limits many times by the demands made upon it in the way of favors, such as calling on friends, visiting the sick, hunting for lost friends, purchasing small articles, passing judgment upon others, looking up situations, and even looking up real estate, etc. So that sometimes almost an entire day is consumed in answering correspondents, to say nothing of the time consumed in trying to comply with a few of these requests. And yet it is very seldom that so much as a two cents' stamp is inclosed for reply, to say nothing about street car fare, which is no small item in a city like ——. I know that this is not because the Saints are mean, but it is simply thoughtlessness on their part. It would hardly do to call the attention of each one to this personally; a brief editorial note in the Herald might do good.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—If Jesus is to be our pattern in all things, why are we commanded to instruct our children so that they may be fit subjects for baptism at eight years of age; when Jesus "began to be about thirty years old" when he was baptized?

Ans.—We do not know why the Father did not require baptism of Jesus at an earlier time; but he was about his Father's business when disputing with the doctors in the temple in his twelfth year. Besides this he was taken to the temple when he was but a child by his mother to do for him according to the law, which shows a preparation. Nor could he be baptized till John was sent. But the chief reason why we should so instruct our children is, because Jesus commanded it. Our experience confirms the wisdom of the command.

Q.—Please explain the following verse: "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die."—Romans 5: 7.

A.—It is a common fact that few men would care to suffer death in defense of, or for a righteous man, one who kept the law rigidly; and that for a man loved by many because of his goodness some would be willing to stand by and suffer death with and for him. The contrast with this sentiment of mankind is the fact that Jesus died for all, the righteous, the good, and the wicked, that all might have life that would.

It was intended as dignifying the love of Jesus above that of man.

ANOTHER EXPOSE OF SPIRITISM.

THE spirits seem to make some queer mistakes at times; see what follows, taken from the Chicago Herald of October 9:—

SPIRIT MADE OF FLESH AND BLOOD.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Oct. 8.—The whole of Jacksonville is in a broad grin over the clever expose of a noted spiritualist last night. The visitor had converted R. C. Smith, a very intelligent and cultured gentleman, whose studio was used for the seances. The spirits were evoked in the usual way from a cabinet in a dark room and would flit noiselessly among the people of the inner circle, who were supposed to be soundly converted, while the probationers were on the outside. Professor Rayhill and William Ellicock decided there was something wrong, and pretending great faith they worked themselves into the inner circle.

Last night when the ghost appeared Mr. Ellicock reached out and grabbed it, and it proved to be Ed Majors, clothed in cheesecloth, with some sort of illuminating substance which made him look as if he had a crown of light on his head. Women screamed and fainted and there was a great commotion, but Professor Rayhill struck a light as quickly as possible and the whole thing was laid bare.

The following is significant, in this connection:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 11.—The national spiritualistic convention closed to-day after the adoption of resolutions reaffirming the platform of principles adopted at Chicago last year. The convention adopted a resolution making it incumbent on local societies to offer moral and substantial support to mediums arrested or prosecuted.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. W. BLAIR, writing from Sandwich, Illinois, October 8, says:—

I attended three good meetings at Plano yesterday. The Lord was good to us, and his Spirit blessed us richly. The Seventh-day Adventists for the past three months have been bombarding the town with soul-sleeping doctrine and the law of Moses. To-night I begin a series of sermons in advocacy of Sunday being divinely appointed for rest and worship, and trust all will work well for the truth of God as we hold it. I am glad I came here, for two of our members had become troubled and doubting through the false teachings of Elder Scoles.

Bro. Heman C. Smith was at Memphis, Tennessee, October 8. Of the condition of the work in his field he wrote as follows:—

Prospects are encouraging and reports favorable. Bro. T. C. Kelley begins a debate with a Campbellite to-day at Bald Knob, Arkansas. Bro. J. D. Erwin recently held a debate with the same people in Faulkner county, Arkansas, and baptized twenty-five there since. I go to Alabama on Thursday the 11th.

Bro. W. S. Macrae, El Reno, Oklahoma, October 5:—

We close a very interesting meeting eight miles north of El Reno to-night. People very busy, but interest good. We go to Snyder on Sunday.

Sr. M. A. Asa, Cisne, Illinois, September 28:—

As long as I am able to work I shall have the Herald. Some say they cannot take the publications, so I have often thought I would write how I take them. I have paid for the Herald ever since it was a weekly. I weave for my money, and am aged fifty-two. If one cannot weave he can do something else—leave off one ruffle, a piece of lace, or wear a dress twice; and one will soon save enough to pay for the papers, and be just as well off.

Of the Curtis-Moore discussion, of which Bro. M. T. Short gives an account in this issue, we have the following additional word from Mr. Samuel E. Flannigan, an attorney of McLeansboro, Illinois, who wrote under date of September 19:—

I have just returned from "Unity," a church in Flannigan township in this (Hamilton) county, having listened to a debate between Rev. Emsley Curtis of the Reorganized Church of the Latter Day Saints and Rev. Moore of the United Baptist Church. I regret my obligations here (professionally) prevented me from hearing the brothers to the end of the debate. The debate is exciting a widespread interest, there being from three to five thousand people at each day's attendance. Brother Curtis is intently earnest, and is exceedingly popular with the people. I predict a large branch in old Flannigan for the Reorganized Church. All I can say is that I earnestly pray God to enlighten the world, and if Joseph Smith was truly a prophet and has been the instrument by which the world is to be blessed in these latter days, I sincerely hope that the light of heaven is about to break in upon us hitherto benighted Egyptians. May God bless the truth.

Of the work and its prospects in the city of Chicago, Bro. F. G. Pitt wrote as follows, under date of October 10:—

We are getting along nicely in the city. I think our branch is in excellent condition. All works like clock work. I do not hear a murmur of complaint. Our meetings are well attended and a good spirit is manifest; new members are coming in gradually. We have now passed the one hundred mark, and prospects for the future were never better. I dislike to leave the city work, but the demands of the two districts prevent me being here half the time. Bro. J. S. Patterson is a good help during my absence. His labors are well received. His restoration has proved a decided benefit to the branch thus far.

Bro. W. C. Cather, at Jacksboro, Texas, the 8th inst., reported the baptism of two. Of his labors in general he wrote:—

The Lord is blessing me both in dispensing the word and administering to the sick. I am anxious to do my part in pushing forward this great and marvelous work.

Bro. W. S. Macrae is well pleased with Oklahoma as a field, so far as prospects are concerned at least. We summarize the leading points of his letter dated Okarche, October 6:—

Bro. Maloney has baptized two. We spent part of two weeks near Ehrens. I left Bro. M. there and went to a new point near by, where I was well received. With one exception we have found a live interest in Oklahoma, and prospects for a strong hold are flattering. The desire to hear the word is ahead of boasted Southwestern Missouri. The country is new and "Babylon" has not had time to get the people "grabbed." Now is the golden time to work Oklahoma. Every new experience in this work gives me confidence in its final triumph. The promise that the way would be prepared before us has been verified to my satisfaction. We are not getting over very much territory, but are trying to be thorough. I have but little confidence in the world ever being evangelized by the "two-or-three-sermons-in-a-place" plan. My experience has been, that the people just begin to get fairly interested in a week's time, and if followed up, it would result in some good. We are feeling well in the work, and encouraged with the prospects before us. There are no branches in Oklahoma but we look forward, when at no distant day there will not only be a branch, but districts. As an agricultural center she is fast coming to the front, and her educational advantages are by no means in the rear. Our address till April 1, 1895, will be, Box 96, Okarche, Oklahoma.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy, Malone, New York, October 4:—

I am here preaching every night to attentive audiences.

Bro. H. Salisbury, Benan, Iowa, October 8:—

Bro. John Rounds has been here and preached twelve times. The congregations have been increasing and the feeling among the people is excellent, more so than for two years past. He stirred up the brethren and left them in good condition. The brethren and outsiders think the preaching was extra good. One man from Clay county offered to pay his way if he would go and preach for them.

Bro. F. C. Smith, Farwell, Michigan, October 9:—

I baptized four more at Lake Ann. Bro. J. L. Bear has also baptized some four or five of late. I made a new opening at Burdickville, a good one. I never saw so many Bibles in all my meetings. I see some of the elders are getting rough usage as well as myself; I have been roughly handled of late. The work is onward and the enemy becomes more and more enraged.

Of the termination or aftermath of the second Scott-Braden debate, Bro. S. W. L. Scott wrote from Hibbard, Indiana, the 11th inst.:—

As a fitting climax to Scott-Braden debate at Knox, Indiana, many, very many friends were made to the cause. The citizens' committee presented us twenty-five dollars in public, and this morning we baptized four persons into the kingdom of God. Victory perches high on our banner. Am enroute to Coldwater conference.

Bro. J. B. Roush, Norway, Illinois, October 9:—

I just closed a ten nights' series of meetings at Piper City. I had large crowds and good attention; was also blessed with good liberty in presenting the word. Some said at the close, with tears in their eyes, "I want to become one of these peculiar people." Would have continued longer but must attend conference at Plano.

Bro. Joseph Ward, Burnham, Missouri, October 10:—

I have been busily engaged in the ministry since General Conference and have opened up some new places: have baptized twenty four. I will leave for Northern Arkansas, where I will labor until the holidays. The work in Southern Missouri is flourishing.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A GENERAL Conference resolution prohibits the publication of citations to trial in the HERALD. Brethren sending us such citations will please take notice. We suppose the conference action was based upon the conclusion that injustice might be done individuals who might be innocent, and that certainty of reaching them was not assured by publication.

Bro. H. N. Davis of Earling, Iowa, who also was to sail on the Evanelia, will join the missionary force in the islands at no distant day.

Sr. Fannie Morris of Sweet Home, Oregon, writes of the labors of Bro. Holt in that field, which he has already narrated. Sr. Morris, like many others, accepted the work in the face of opposition of relatives and friends, and is seeking to live and work for its interests. Because men and women of like character have received the gospel and stood by the church it has thus far been established and extended and will continue to extend through the representation of it by men and women who love the truth above all else. She hopes to see relatives, friends, and others accept it. A true character includes and combines strength and love. By both these virtues is the faith accepted and affirmed, and presented to others that they also may have light and life.

President Joseph Smith reached home on the 9th, from Western Iowa, and departed on the 12th for Eldorado Springs, to attend the Southwestern Missouri reunion.

Advices from Bro. J. R. Lambert indicate that he has been quite busy in the field since the reunion adjourned, having spoken, once at Logan, six times at Magnolia, six times at Missouri Valley, six times at Pleasant Valley schoolhouse, and had baptized three. He finds great demand for labor, and the audiences that attend are unusually attentive.

Bro. E. T. Atwell, located at Rich Hill, Missouri, reports himself and the local ministry in that vicinity actively engaged in the interests of the cause. Twenty-seven have been added to their number by baptism since March; others have applied. Their greatest success has been in the country districts; this because of some hindrances which detract from entire success in their branch. He writes in hopeful spirit, expressing the wish that the sincerity of all the members may always be expressed by proper conduct.

Bro. A. L. Whiteaker wrote from Twin Lakes, Wisconsin, October 6. Bro. J. S. Hackett had assisted him in a series of meetings at Tillinghast, where they were well received. He reports a friendly reception wherever he had labored, and is encouraged to continue. The people were more ready to receive than the laborers were able to supply. He had baptized four. He expected to labor a portion or all of the coming winter in Vernon, Crawford, and Richland counties.

Bro. J. C. Foss, wrote from Rockland, Maine, the 6th inst. Bro. M. F. Gowell, who had been ill, was better, and would leave for Kansas City on the 15th if able to travel. Bro. S. O. Foss had been rendering good aid, and had baptized two. The force in Maine were trying to keep the camp fires blazing. Bro. Foss expects to visit West Ellsworth, Surry, Cranberry Isles, and other places before cold weather sets in.

With shortening days for work and lengthening nights for reading, those who contemplate self-improvement will do well to carefully select their reading matter, their mental aliment. We present the HERALD, the church publications, and list of regular literature issued and for sale by the Board of Publication as worthy of special consideration by those who would store their minds with lasting treasures of knowledge. What one reads should be worthy of his time and thought. Indeed, "as a man thinketh so is he." No one can afford to read useless, trashy literature. Get the best, and store the mind with good things.

The addresses of officers of the General Sunday School Association are as follows: G. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Michigan; Sr. M. Walker, Assistant Superintendent, Lamoni, Iowa; W. N. Robinsor, Secretary, Independence, Missouri; Sr. C. B. Kelley, Treasurer, Lamoni, Iowa.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith left home on the 12th inst. for Wisconsin. He expected to attend conference at Plano en route.

Bishop E. L. Kelley started from Lamoni on the 10th inst. for the Southwestern Missouri reunion.

Bro. J. W. Peterson, of the Wisconsin missionary force, addressed the Saints of Lamoni, on Sunday, the 14th inst.

THE LANGUAGES OF PALESTINE.

As regards the languages spoken in Palestine in the time of Christ, much that is of high importance has resulted from recent exploration. A dedication to Herod was written both in Aramaic and in Greek, and there are a great many Greek texts of this age in all parts of the country which show us that the old Canaanite religions had not yet died out, but were mingled with Greek mythology, so that the names of native and of Greek deities stand side by side. The region where the Greeks were most numerous was apparently Decapolis, east of the Sea of Galilee, and it seems to me probable that the people of Gadara, who kept swine, were Greeks, for the pig was regarded as an unclean animal by the Phoenicians and other natives as well as by the Jews. It has often been disputed whether the gospels were originally written in Greek or in Aramaic; but it has now been rendered certain by exploration that Greek was very widely used in Palestine at this time, and that it was understood by the Jews as well as by others. We have recovered the stone, written in Greek, which warned the Gentiles not to enter the inner court of the temple, and have found early Jewish bone-boxes on Olivet inscribed in Greek.—Contemporary Review.

Senator Plumb, shortly before his death, made the prediction that the time was not far distant when every acre of corn land in the United States would be worth $100. While the wheat growing area of the world is as wide as the circuit of the globe the corn belt is clearly defined by certain conditions of soil and climate which bring it within a fixed limit.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

MY MASTER'S ORDER.

Go work and pray.
That was his order yesterday;
And should I dare to disobey?

Now his command
Is wholly changed; he bids me stand
Aside, and watch his working hand.

To-day his will
Is spoken in these words, "Lie still;"
And shall I not his wish fulfill?

"Lie still—and pray:"
That is my Lord's command to-day:
And I will do his work his way.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.—No. 2.

THERE are various ways in which cruelty to children is practiced, as well as to animals—acts of omission as well as acts of commission. We essay to draw a few pictures from scenes on life's canvas, that have passed before our vision.

We have noticed that an infant of only a few months feels the force of an unkind word, or even a cross expression, and what is the result? It makes an impression on its plastic mind, even as impressions are made on material by instruments, and in like manner will become more visible as each stroke is added. Kind thoughts and kind acts are to the pure spirit of the little child, like the touch of the skilled artist's brush to the pure white canvas: every touch adds beauty till the work is accomplished, and the perfect picture is fitted for the picture gallery of the king.

Whatsoever ye do unto one of those little ones is done unto the Father of spirits. How then can one be so cruel, or we would say, be so piratical, as to delight in inflicting severe punishment on those little tender bodies intrusted to their care? Such cases may be rare, but several have passed under our observation, and many of cruelty by neglect of duty. O Father, forgive such people and help them to realize their true position in thy sight, and endow them with zeal and knowledge to do their duty in a manner that is pleasing unto thee.

By the time children are a year old they will begin to imbibe the influences around them. Poor little things, perfectly devoid of knowledge, and obliged to learn just what is placed before them. They will learn, and they must learn—that is what they were placed in this world for; and it seems more easy for them to learn evil than it does good. Then are they to blame for speaking profane or obscene words? If they had never heard them, they never could have said them. O what cruelty to stain their purity with one's own sinful practice and then, perhaps, only in the presence of visitors, check them in thunder tones or by blows. O, God help such parents to govern themselves, or to discipline themselves by thy law, and then they will not have such a cruel work to undo!

Ofttimes children have been sent on errands, or set to do a little job of work, and because of apparent unfaithfulness have been harshly treated; were not allowed to give a fair statement of their case. How would those having the care of them like such treatment from those holding authority over them?

We had an experience of the kind, when young, and shall never forget it, although our dear father has been gone many years. Our cows ran on the common more than a mile from home, and I was sent for them. I searched diligently for them as far into the wood as I dared to go, and in every direction in the pastureland till the setting sun suggested "go home;" I could not even hear the bell.

I felt exhausted (as my experience through life has always been) by the exertion, so was obliged to walk slowly, and besides, feared a scolding, and that, too, tended to slacken my speed, and consequently I did not escape the much feared result. My father's verdict was: "You have not been after the cows. You have been off to play with some of the young ones," etc. But I had not so much as seen one of them, in my absence, and had been just as faithful as a child could have been under such circumstances, yet I was not allowed to state the facts of my case, or even to say a word, so went to bed and enjoyed my fatigue and scolding severely. My father went in search of them the following morning, but could not find them, and I was glad he did not, but did not dare to say it—have said it in after life though, as an illustration. Mother went in the afternoon, and they had strayed away in an opposite direction, at a long distance from where they were expected to be. Not a word of apology was made to me, and I always felt that it was cruel, so have tried to be mindful of the feelings of children when circumstances required, but probably I have not always practiced the golden rule.

A boy was sent on an errand (and there have been many similar cases) and commanded not to stop, with the promise that if he did he would get a good whipping—that must be an improved kind. He had frequently disobeyed in that respect, but this time he would not escape without a "good whipping." He stopped a little longer than was thought necessary, and on his return was greeted by high-sounding words tinged with anger. He attempted to make an explanation, but was called a liar and silenced. He was commanded to take off his coat and receive his good whipping. Our eyes did not behold the scene, but our ears heard and our heart was deeply pained at the time, and ever since have had pity for the little fellow. We distinctly heard the many blows and the cruel words from the punisher, but only a few from the boy. He was not allowed to speak for himself what that person would have said in similar circumstances. Many children have been driven away from home by such a course, and was there ever one made better by unreasonable punishment or by an excess of scolding? It tends to cultivate an antagonistic spirit in the child, if not a revengeful one.

Much such work is done to gratify one's temper; then what must be the effect on the mind of the actor? A development of cruelty. What will be the feelings of such in the reckoning day? We fear they will call on the rocks and mountains to hide them from the presence of Him who intrusted those children to their care.

MOTHER.

Thy tender eyes upon me shine,
As from a being glorified,
Till I am thine and thou art mine,
And I forget that thou hast died:
I almost lose each vain regret
In visions of a life to be:
But mother, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

The springtimes bloom, the summers fade,
The winters blow along my way;
But over every light or shade
Thy memory lives by night and day;
It soothes to sleep my wildest pain,
Like some sweet song that cannot die,
And, like the murmur of the main,
Grows deeper when the storm is nigh:
I know the brightest stars that set
Return to bless the yearning sea,—
But mother, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?

I sometimes think thy soul comes back
From o'er the dark and silent stream,
Where last we watched thy shining track,
To those green hills of which we dream;
Thy loving arms around me twine,
My cheeks bloom younger in thy breath,
Till thou art mine and I am thine,
Without a thought of pain or death:
And yet, at times my eyes are wet
With tears for her I cannot see:
O mother, art thou living yet,
And dost thou still remember me?—Sel.

ELLENSBURG, Washington, Sept. 8.

Dear Sisters:—I have been failing in health for several months. Am in such feeble health at present that I can hardly do the work for my family. Since uniting with the church thirteen years ago my trials have been many. I have always thought that perhaps things would change for the better, but I am now so discouraged that everything looks dark to me.

I am subject to nervous spells, and it seems that every one I have I am less able to bear. I have a desire to live in a way that is pleasing to God. I cannot, however, get my husband interested in spiritual things. I have tried to get him to set our house in order and have family worship for the sake of the children. And I fear that unless we do there are worse trials awaiting us than we have yet endured. For this reason I ask you to make special prayers that we as a family may be brought into the light of the gospel and may be led to serve God; and that if it is God's will I may be restored to health. I would like to correspond with some one who can write good, encouraging letters, for I am so lonely, and would feel so much better if I knew some one was interested in my welfare.

Your sister in the gospel,

MRS. M. DAWSON.

[WILL not some of the sisters respond to the request of writing? Loneliness bears heavily upon anyone, but especially upon those who, like Sr. Dawson, are not physically strong. "Bear ye one another's burdens" is the law of love.—Ed.]

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

SR. ELIZA BRACKENBURY writes: "I have been reading 'The Happiest Christmas.' I think it very nice. Why not some of us older children learn a lesson from it, and instead of looking altogether to making our loved ones happy, try to make some others happy too? Perhaps some have grown cold and discouraged, and are almost ready to give up trying to live to this work. Invite them to our homes on Christmas and other days when everybody is expected to enjoy themselves. By so doing we might help some to gather new strength and hope. With God's help I mean to try it. I think the Daughters of Zion a grand work. I hope and pray that they may succeed. I would enjoy the privilege of attending their meetings, but do not have it. Am sorry to say I am one of those spoken of in the leaflet as not having words at my command to teach my little girls all that I feel I must teach them, but with God's help I mean to try to do my duty. I want to say from experience that if we strive to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God, keeping the Word of Wisdom to the letter also, that it will be possible for us to bear our children almost without pain, and those who will do this will not need the instruction of man. Try it and see."

Sr. Lettie Dunn of Tama, Iowa, writes in reference to the effect of food and drink upon the nerves and is firmly convinced that not only many a severe headache but also much irritability is chargeable to rich or improper food, together with the use of tea and coffee. Nor do the evil effects stop with the mother. Nervous irritability renders her unequal to the proper care of her children, especially to the exercising of that loving, patient forbearance which childhood demands. She has proven in her own case that her nerves are stronger when she lives upon plain, wholesome food, and strong nerves fit her to bear her trials and perplexities with greater patience. Children will not always be little and yield to the guiding hand of parents. How all-important, then, that we strengthen our influence over them from day to day, keeping them near to us and not driving them away from us because we cannot bear the noise of their childish plays.

God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart.
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold."

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. F. G. PITT requests your faith and prayers in behalf of Warren N. Brown, son of Jacob Brown (we think of Chicago), that he may be restored to health.

Sr. Swalun of Oskaloosa, a worthy and aged sister, requests the faith and prayers of the Union in her behalf, that if it is God's will, her affliction may be removed.

Sr. Jennie Page of Evergreen, Alabama, also requests your faith and prayers in her behalf as she is greatly afflicted.

Sr. Ellen Baker desires your prayers that the Lord may open the way for her to make her home with the Saints, as she is very unpleasantly situated where she is.

Letter Department.

MARSHALL, W. Va., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—Acting upon instructions of the missionary in charge, I left my mission in Ohio August 22 and came into this State to do some branch work and look after the needs of this district. I entered very reluctantly upon this duty, for I have always preferred to do missionary work; but it seemed that there was need of work being done in order to regulate some of the branches. Since beginning here I have felt blessed in my efforts, and feel that some good will accrue. I labored over two Sundays with the Mount Zion branch in Ritchie county, preaching every night, and left the Saints seemingly encouraged.

From there I went to the Cabin Run branch, in Doddridge county, and labored nearly a week. As I was leaving there on my way to the Fairview branch in Calhoun county I received word that my little boy was badly hurt; so I at once hastened home. After remaining a few days, and seeing that the little boy was out of danger, I returned to my work in this State. I visited the Fairview branch, and while there baptized Bro. John Leeson, who has been badly afflicted for several years and is now almost blind. Although he had been confined to his bed most of the time, he rode over two miles on horseback to his baptism. After baptism he sat up the rest of the day, and rode another mile to preaching that night, and said he did not suffer at all. His wife, who has been a member of the church for some years, is greatly rejoiced at her husband's acceptance of the gospel. The branch at this place was not in good working order, as is the case with most of the branches of the district; but I tried to explain to them their duties as set forth in the word, and hope they will do better in the future. To-night I commence work in the Buffalo City branch. I was brought on my way hither by Bro. J. G. De Pue, and was met by Bro. M. V. Hickman, who conveyed me on to his home. The distance between the two branches is nearly thirty-five miles.

I find most of the branches in the district in a languishing condition. Out of the seven that comprise the district there are five that hold or have held no regular meetings for over a year, and some for a longer period; yet there are many good Saints throughout the district. But it seems that there is a lack of energy and zeal on the part of many. Leaders—officers—are often too easily discouraged, and neglect to labor with the members as they should. This district in reality should have a good, energetic, humble, and spiritual man to labor in and around the branches for a year. Many do not understand their duties, and need teaching. I go from here to the Union Grove branch, and from there to the West Virginia conference, which convenes October 13 and 14, in Wayne county, with the Wayne branch. From there I go home, and will remain near there till after the Ohio district reunion, which begins October 26. May the Lord bless his people and the laborers in the kingdom of God everywhere. Yours in the gospel,

H. E. MOLER.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Oct. 7.

Editors Herald:—The work is opening up grandly here, at least as far as the demand for preaching is concerned. We hear of requests from neighborhoods that the Latter Day Saints come over and preach in their schoolhouses, but personally I can't preach in two at a time; so some of them will have to wait. There are other parts of the field where labor is wanted too, but to me it does not seem wise to leave here when there is such a demand for preaching, the interest having been awakened, and go somewhere else to awaken it, until the demand here has been satisfied.

Bro. Kephart has just located his family here, coming from Osterdock. Expect to hold meetings each night this week in Runnells, where there is a good interest. At a schoolhouse called Shakerag, where Brn. Hand and Scott had done preaching, we were challenged for discussion by Campbellites on two occasions. Thinking perhaps they meant business I told them I would meet their minister at a fixed time and place to arrange questions for discussion, but he didn't come, and the next I heard from them was that "if you tackle the Devil you are sure to get the worst of it,"—and they had decided to let us alone for this time; but "if they get too bold I will have to go down and look after them" the preacher said. The cause is gaining friends and believers.

I preached the funeral of old Sr. Newell, who had passed her ninetieth milestone, yesterday. There is a great deal of sickness here and the Saints have not escaped. Viewing the work in this field through the eyes of a missionary we can say, "All's well here."

BATTLE LAKE, Minn., Oct. 4.

Editors Herald:—We are just about holding our own here. I see by the Herald and Ensign that a good many are coming into the fold in other places, which causes us to rejoice, to see the truth prosper.

None of the conference appointees have done any preaching in this branch since our June conference; but the local elders, Brn. William Barnhard and Alonzo Whiting, have not been idle. Bro. Whiting has baptized eleven since our last conference, nine heads of families and two children. More will obey in the near future. There seems to be more interest manifested of late,

We have in Alonzo Whiting an earnest and able elder, and he ought to be in the field all the time; but he works hard through the week. This is the Union branch, in the Northern Minnesota district, and includes territory about twenty-four miles long. We hold meetings in three different places, which we have to do in order to accommodate all. We have a Sabbath school at one of our places of meeting and a good interest there. Although you do not hear from us often, we are trying to keep the camp fires burning; for we know we have the truth, and that our prayers are heard, and that the Lord continues to bless us with his Holy Spirit.

The signs of the times indicate the near approach of the second coming of Christ, and it is my prayer that every Saint will be ready. I can look forward to that time and feel that our trials will then be over.

GALESBURG, Ill., Sept. 10.

Editors Herald.—Our two days' meeting at the Forest Flower schoolhouse closed last night. Saturday morning from eleven to twelve was devoted to short talks by officers and members, in which Brn. D. S. Holmes, J. W. Terry, E. E. Wheeler, William Willetts, William Most, Sr. Isabel Glass, and others participated. In the afternoon a beautiful grove near the schoolhouse was selected as the place for future meetings. Willing hands went to work and a temporary pulpit and seats enough to accommodate about two hundred people were erected in short order. On Saturday evening the meeting was called to order by Bro. Terry, Bro. Willetts of Kewanee being the speaker. He is a young man, a priest, and this was his first outdoor effort; but the Spirit of the Lord was upon him and the effort was a success. It was characterized by the spirit of meekness and humility, and the subject was ably handled and the points clearly made.

It makes me rejoice to know that God can do his work in his own way, and that he chooses the unlearned and weak ones to accomplish his eternal purposes. The idea that prevails with many in the church that the work must be done, especially in cities and little one-horse towns, by the leading men of the church—by men who have a world-wide reputation as fluent speakers and orators, is a curse to the work. How can the orators and fluent men get around to all the places? Why does God not call men of learning and large brain and the best qualifications as speakers if all the important work must be done by that kind of men? I have not time now to tell you why I detest this principle, but I may devote time to it hereafter. Sunday the 9th was clear and bright: a beautiful day to worship in the grove—God's first temple. The Saints met for prayer and testimony at nine a. m. The Spirit was present and the testimonies were stirring, earnest ones, peculiar to Latter Day Saints. It was a good meeting. At 10:30 preaching meeting began in charge of Bro. William Allen, the writer being the speaker. The hearing was quite large and order and interest good. Many of the Saints and friends had come with well-filled baskets and dinner was served in the grove. It was a repast fit for a king. At two p. m. the meeting was called to order by Bro. Willetts; Bro. D. S. Holmes was the speaker. The crowd was large, the attention and interest of the very best, and the sermon just grand. I only wish it could have been taken in shorthand. To my mind this was the best meeting of the day. The writer was the speaker at 7:30; subject, "Justification by faith." A large crowd was in attendance, but not of the staid, sober kind that came in the day; still there were many who came to hear. Thus ended a pleasant and we trust a profitable time. The word was freely dispensed, the Saints did all they could to contribute to the success, and the people were kind and respectful. May the Lord bless the effort to his glory and the salvation of souls. The Saints there are few, but they entertained royally, as also their relatives and friends. Bro. Jacob Brown, president of the Henderson Grove branch, brought Bro. Terry and me here to the College City, and we are on our way to Canton.

GLENVILLE, Ohio, Oct. 9.

Editors Herald.—It has been thought best to continue our effort to reach the people with the restored gospel in the city of Cleveland. We are not turning the world upside down, but are, we believe, making slow, though substantial progress. Our meetings are certainly attended with the divine manifestations and encouragement. Indeed, this has been the thing that has led us on through discouragement in the past. September 17 Mr. John Shannon was baptized. Others are about persuaded, including Mr. Shannon's excellent wife, an intelligent lady, once a member of the Romish Church. She had outgrown that and was "on probation" with the Methodist people; but it is safe to say that that is as far as she will ever go in that direction; and that she with others will bid good-bye to Babylon in the near future seems to be among the moral certainties.

Sunday afternoon we were called upon to assist in the funeral service of the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Culp. She was a good and religiously inclined girl; would have been baptized had not sickness and death intervened. The use of the first Congregational Church for the funeral occasion was had through the kindness of the pastor, Rev. Malcom. The blow to Bro. and Sr. C. is a severe one, but there are reasons to believe that the decrees of a wiser providence than our wishes, hopes, or fears, have obtained even in this affliction.

Last evening we spoke by invitation to quite a goodly number in one of the missions upon the west side with excellent liberty, a thing which does not always happen, in our experience. There is usually such a pressure of opposition and religious zeal, which upon examination turns out to be opposed to the knowledge of God as revealed in the Scriptures, that the open or subtle forces of opposition which the servant of Christ is liable to meet in the exercise of his calling, make things chilly and oppressive. But things seemed to come our way last evening. Perhaps the presence and prayers of several of the faithful Saints had something to do with the success. Who knows? Should time, opportunity, or means allow, an attempt to open a nightly mission on the west side, where the glorious banner may float unrestricted and unhindered by the doctrines, inventions, or precepts of men, may be successfully accomplished. We hope so, and believe that with proper exercise of wisdom, caution, and a spirit of self-sacrifice, may be; especially should the general work be continued in the city.

M. H. BOND.

BAY PORT, Mich., Oct. 4.

Editors Herald.—We have been trying to keep up our meetings; but on account of so many moving away and some growing cold, the attendance is small: but in fulfillment of things revealed by the Spirit there are some trying to be faithful. I had the pleasure of uniting in marriage Bro. F. Miller and Sr. Margaret Miller, both of Bay Port. They were married on the Fair Ground at Pigeon, the prize being a new cooking stove; and we think it will be the means of doing some good, as we tried to tell the assemblage some of our views in regard to the marriage relation, and of Bro. Dickhout's trial in the Canada courts, and to get them to hear the ceremony. The band favored us with music, and the directors tried to keep the best of order. One reason why I think it will be the means of doing good is that in a few minutes after we got an appointment to preach the next Sunday night in a new place.

I have thought for some time that I would be able to sell my place so I could spend more time in the field, but was disappointed; but I intend to do what I can the coming winter. I ask the Saints to pray that the Lord will give me better health.

I see by Bro. F. H. Brook's letter that the enemy gave him some quite strong points, but I am pleased that Bro. B's points proved the most successful, as he has baptized so many.

Since I began to write I see others are thinking about the liquor question. I have great reason to think about it to-day, for last night one of my neighbors fell into a cattle guard at Pigeon and was killed by being the worse for liquor; and in our own little town, with Sunday excursions, and dancing, and drinking, and other amusements that attract attention, and in spite of all we can say against them, there has been a damage to our branch; and what seems worse, when we tried to stop the excursions we could not find laws to do it. Now, I honestly think, dear Saints, that every Latter Day Saint should stand for prohibition. I would wish that every Saint could read in Zion's Ensign of August 25 an article entitled, "A terrible charge;" and I don't think the picture is overdrawn. Some will say, "The liquor tax, and high license help the country so much," but they never seem to think of the crimes caused directly or indirectly by liquor, and the expense those trials bring on the country. And besides all this, all the tax and high license that ever were could not bring back my brethren, or children, or neighbors, if they were brought to ruin through liquor. The more I write the more comes to my mind. If this has a tendency to encourage the right and discourage the wrong, I will feel repaid.

FALL CITY, Oregon, Sept. 30.

Editors Herald.—At last writing I was at Waterloo. From there I moved the tent into a large hop field, near Scio. Wife and I picked hops during the day, Willie and I preached at night. We held twenty-one meetings, which were well attended. From the time we commenced meetings in the tent and the laying of it up was fifty-nine days, during which time we held fifty-seven meetings in it, with an average attendance of about seventy; but it will be nine long months of rain and mud before it can be used again. Sr. Holt has gone home and I am a wanderer again, and I may as well confess, a little homesick. This horrible weather would make an angel homesick.

I cannot help thinking of the Saints in reunion at San José and wishing I was with them, but this work cannot be one of pleasure to all; some have to toil, but the toilers are comforted with the thought that a time will come when the reunion will include all. How I wish it would convene next year, but God knows best when to call it. Patience is one of the virtues we must acquire. One week ago to-day we pulled up tent stakes, hauled the tent to Bro. Morris', and I came here, and commenced meetings yesterday in a hall. Am stopping at the comfortable and hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Forshey, noble Saints, converts of Brn. Haws and Daley. We had very good attendance yesterday, and much of the good Spirit present. The "Free Methodists" have, of course, commenced their opposition meeting, which will keep some away. I will continue as long as the interest justifies.

This place was opened by Bro. Daley last year, or rather he did the first public speaking; the real opening work was done by Bro. Forshey and wife. What good the Saints can and do accomplish by living their religion! Bro. Daley left an excellent name and impression here.

I intend to go from here to Portland, from there to Baker City, Oregon. Will work most of the winter in Eastern Oregon, and perhaps Washington. Hope to do some work in Southern Oregon as I go home in the spring. Will be pleased to hear from the Saints, especially those wanting preaching.

Bro. William Rozell was with me during the tent season and gave valuable assistance. He is a fine young man whose daily walk is that of a Saint.

LOVE.

A NEW commandment I give unto you, That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another; By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.—John 13: 34, 35.

Now, dear readers, here is the test given by Christ Jesus by which all are to be known, whether we be really and truly the disciples of Christ, if "ye love one another as I [Christ] have loved you." How did Christ love us? We read that he so loved us that he was willing to lay down his life for us. Can any man do more? Have we the same love? I sometimes fear not, not even love and sympathy sufficient to visit those in distress, as Jesus did when he went to Mary and Martha, the sisters of Lazarus:—

When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in the spirit, and was troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see. Jesus wept. Then said the Jews, Behold how he loved him.—John 11: 33-36.

This is but one instance in which the love and sympathy of Christ was shown. Dear Saints, do we show forth our love by visiting those who are in distress, those who are poor, or sick, or afflicted in any way, and try to administer words of comfort and consolation, by our prayers if no more, and if possible lend a helping hand to those who are in need? If we do not, how can we show forth that we have that love for one another that Christ had and likewise commanded his followers to have? Our love should and must be made manifest by our works:—

Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love.—1 John 4: 7, 8.

How can we be acknowledged of God, if we do not love one another?—

In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us.—1 John 4: 9, 10.

God has promised to dwell in us and to give us of his Spirit if we love one another.

If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?—1 John 4: 20.

Read First John fourth chapter carefully and it will be easy for us to see how much of the "love of God" dwelleth in us. The Apostle Paul says:—

Let love be without dissimulation. Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love: in honor preferring one another.—Rom. 12: 9, 10.

Again he said in writing to Timothy:—

Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart.—1 Tim. 1: 5.

We see that this true charity is the pure love of God. If we read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians we will find out more about this charity. I learn there that without it, "I am nothing." How can we be true Latter Day Saints or true Christians without it? We cannot. "Charity thinketh no evil," but we find this a day of evil surmisings; hence we are destitute of this one virtue which we should continually pray for. We as a people are often heard to say, "We have the pure and undefiled religion of the Lord Jesus Christ." So we have, but do we live it in every sense of the word? James said:—

Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—Jas. 1: 27.

O, dear Saints, how much of this religion have we? Do we do as we have been commanded? Do we visit the poor and needy, sick and afflicted, the widows and orphans as we ought? I think I hear some say, "I haven't time, I have too much of my own to attend to, and charity begins at home." Granted, but it should not stay there, else would the world be in a sorer plight than it is to-day. Shall we allow the world to excel us in every good work? We, of all people, should be clothed upon with every kindly virtue, having the pure love of God in our hearts, being affable and kind to all, showing no respect to persons. But if we have not this love in our hearts, we will say to the man that comes into our assemblies with a gold ring and goodly apparel, "Sit thou here in a good place. O yes, come up here in the highest seat, brother, we are so glad to see you, and indeed we wish we could have you here with us all the time," but to the one who is not so gay, or so brilliant and has on poor clothes, "Sit thou there, anywhere in the congregation, it makes no difference about you, any seat will do." Is this not showing partiality and respect to persons, albeit the poorest one is called of God, just as much so as the more brilliant and eloquent one? With God there is no partiality or respect of persons, everyone that loveth him will be respected and accepted of him, whether they are accepted of us or not. It would be well for us to remember what Christ said:—

He that receiveth you receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.—Matt. 10: 40.

We read again:—

He that heareth you heareth me; and he that despiseth you despiseth me; and he that despiseth me despiseth him that sent me.—Luke 10: 16.

It therefore behooves us to be careful how we treat one "sent of God" lest we despise (ignore) God himself. How can we expect God's Spirit to dwell in us, when we reject those whom God has sent, because he is not quite so talented as some others?

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth me; and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me.—John 13: 20.

Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God.—1 Peter 2: 17.

How can we be the children of God or the children of the light, if we love not one another?

He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now. He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him. But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because darkness hath blinded his eyes.—1 John 2: 9-11.

O brethren and sisters, I pray we may be the children of God in very deed and not in name only, but that "we love one another as God loved us," showing our love by our works; being courteous and kind to all, high or low, rich or poor, shutting not up our bowels of compassion to the needy when it is in our power to bestow, for otherwise how dwelleth the love of God in us. That we may go on to perfection in every good word and work is the prayer of your humble brother,

JAMES KEMP.

THE CURTIS-MOORE DEBATE.

OUR elders have been holding forth occasionally of late in the vicinity of the "Unity Baptist church" three miles from Walpole, Hamilton county, Illinois. Some good, honest souls, who had been awakened on the great subject of religion to the surprise, disappointment, sorrow, and mortification of the Baptist brotherhood, did actually hear the truth gladly, and embraced the old Jerusalem gospel.

Some of their church members openly and most publicly avowed that the Saints must be met in discussion or they could, and would no longer fellowship the institution. Other some declared they did not want, could not support, and would not have an investigation. When the battle was voted, the offish wing, or the rule or ruin portion, grew angry and ordered their names erased from the church book of membership. The local body lost one of the best paying members, and perhaps his family, too, as well; but his threats to withdraw, kill, etc., were burnt powder indeed.

Some of our religious neighbors might have been perfectly willing to see these contestants destroy each other, just like the "Kilkenny cats," but the healthy majority was doubtless greatly in love with the doctrine of "fair play." Being in the midst of a large church, and adjacent to other faiths, behold, there was a kind of a noise and a shaking among the dry bones before the bugle blast had fairly sounded. Orthodox nerves were strained, conjectures were rife on every hand, and expectation was on her tip-toes, while hearts beat wildly. Bro. and Sr. Davis seemed so overjoyed to see us put in our appearance on time that I was afraid, as they used to say, that they would "jump out of their skin."

The exercises began about on time the morning of September 17, and lasted six days. Each day they held a fore and afternoon term of two hours—four thirty minutes' speeches. The moderators had an easy time of it in the main, for the belligerents acted honorably. I was on my feet only a few times, and the other governor ball did not dissent, so the chairman, though unsophisticated, did fairly well.

The entire session was held in a nice grove. The seats of the chapel were in use as also chairs, carriages, wagons, etc. For three full days Bro. Curtis affirmed that our church "bears all the Scriptural marks of the church established by Christ." He expressed the happiness of his heart on having the privilege of meeting so many under such pleasant and favorable surroundings. He esteemed it a blessing to meet with the people and labor in the interests of truth. He was pleased with the arrangements, and felt honored to work for the welfare of all. Though laboring under physical disability, our brother complained not, but went on and right forward with his work, and came out far better than when he went in. He laid out a broad platform, and stated the leading features of our faith and doctrine. He never even mentioned the church of his opponent while in the affirmative, but maintained and defended the true gospel. Precious little witticism, and no sarcasm, irony, ridicule, nor invectives did Emsley use as stock in trade, but in the stead thereof, logic, reason, fact, history, and much Scripture.

Mr. Moore is a highly educated man, has good native ability, is energetic, quotes readily, reads fluently, and articulates well. He originally, or at first, was a Campbellite. In his first reply he stated that it was the doctrine, faith, and practice of the Latter Day Saints, or Mormonism, and not other isms, that was on trial. He thought the elder was not specific enough in defining whether the church meant the building, the whole body, a certain locality or body, a people, or a denomination; but concluded he referred to the last-named. He acknowledged that to have all the Scriptural marks is to identify the church. He claimed to agree with our brother that there was a Christian Church established during the personal ministry of our Savior; that it had certain laws, the Scriptures, and certain officers; but when that is said it is about all said. He thought his opponent was here to "let it down easy, for it cannot stand, but I am here to let it down hard so that you can hear the ring of it; for, I say it is a counterfeit, and a fraud, and I will detect it."

He put in almost the whole of his first half hour reading from "McClintock and Strong's Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge." After repeating the ecclesiastical history as given by Orson Pratt, (which, by the way, is beautiful and true,) he went on to con over what the editors had to offer in regard to Solomon Spalding furnishing the groundwork for Mormonism. Of course that old, stale, threadbare, wornout fable was successfully met and squelched. He was told where he could easily obtain the defunct divine's "romance," and he already had the Book of Mormon.

Curtis anticipated him on the polygamy charge that is falsely sought to be fastened on the church we love and on the work in the time of the first apostle of Latter Day Saintism. Mr. Moore said: "He knows polygamy will come, and O. Pratt's works you rely on," etc. "Joe Smith did not restore the gospel; he did not get a revelation; did not have the plates; and all this howling is simply to throw dirt in your eyes, and he knows it," etc.

To try to make it appear that we, that is, the world, had the gospel in its fullness, and the true church and kingdom of Christ, the gentleman quoted Isaiah 9: 6, 7; Daniel 2: 44; and then asked if Elder Curtis would give the lie to the word of God. He quoted and relied almost wholly upon the Romanist's favorite text, Matthew 16: 18: "I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The "it" upon which the meaning of the whole hinges and hangs is the all-important fact that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, and the means of obtaining that truth, which is evidently the adamant rock of revelation. In Christ's humiliation and death he was not wholly prevailed against, but simply temporarily overcome; so, in like manner, did the church succumb for a season.

The man thought and often asserted, in the absence of proof, and in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary, that there was only a partial apostasy, and that the true and faithful spouse, the bride, while in the wilderness, was hiding in caves, dens, and catacombs, from persecution. He loudly vociferated that we had enough and a perfect revelation in the Bible, and we did not need, neither would we have, Mormon revelations; but still he finally clamored for more, and sought a sign.

He objected to who, when, and how our church was founded; alleging that Christ alone, and during his personal ministry, set up and established his church once for all. He stoutly denied the forthcoming interpretation of Isaiah 11 as maintained by the affirmative. He supposed our brother sought to literalize a spiritual truth, and that the language was figurative; that it was all fulfilled in the apostolic age or time of Christ. The physical changes to be wrought on the land and water, the people and climate, the bestial train, the poisonous reptiles, and the atmosphere, and every living creature, were all spiritualized away, till, forsooth, it meant nothing, absolutely nothing.

The "woe" and "ensign" of Isaiah 18: 1, 3, all referred to Israel's Assyrian captivity, and not the angel bringing back the gospel to Joe Smith, and his Mormon revelations. The kingdom of Daniel 2 was to be cut out without hands, and that did not mean "Joe Smith's hands!" In Mark 1: 15 and Luke 16: 16, you can learn of time, place, and by whom the kingdom was formed; but the Doctrine and Covenants, page 93, says no; it was founded in New York, April 6, 1830, by Joe Smith, and not by Christ. Mormonism is wrong on time and place, and the founder and lawgiver the lying prophet usurped; so it is a counterfeit and a fraud. "In the days of these kings," meant the Roman Cæsars; and "this young man" of Zechariah 2: 4, means Zechariah and not this latter-day work and Joe Smith.

When you read notice the connection: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God, speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem," was the mission of Christ when he came as the great religious leveler to destroy the sacerdotal order, or priesthood. Jesus Christ was the last priest and the only head over all things to the church.

Mr. Moore continued in the above strain, declaring that the elder had not brought a scintilla of Scripture to his rescue, but that he had overthrown his argument. He disavowed the countenancing of mob violence, but thought the murder of the Smiths was not persecution; and apologized for the brutal crime by comparing the ungodly, bloodthirsty event to the taking off of some Chicago anarchists. He stated time and again that the prophet never got a single revelation, and that he sanctioned polygamy. He read copious extracts from the Encyclopedia Britannica in the which the word "Mormon" is said to be of Greek origin from Mormoan, and it means something frightful; a bugbear, etc. He claimed that all God's people were saints, but tried, in vain, to impeach the testimony of the three special and eight general witnesses to the Book of Mormon. Joseph Smith, Jr., came in for his share of damaging comment, in contradistinction to Joseph Smith, Sr., howbeit he had nothing to say about Simon Bar, or son of Jonah. He made war upon the terms "head," and "heads of the church," as also their calling.

This young, ambitious, energetic adventurer allowed that he could knock out the theological brains of Elder Curtis with Beadle's bundle of absurdities, but he would not introduce this questionable work. He had copied a vast quantity of Clark Braden's thunder, that had been duly refuted by E. L. Kelley, and read it to the amusement of the Christian Church folks and the laughingstock of the masses. Because our man quoted some scripture that Kelley made use of, he tried to make it appear that he was using the same language.

He said the Jews always hated the Egyptians and would not use their speech, howbeit Moses was schooled in all the wisdom of the Egyptians; hence the most profound Egyptologist the ancient world ever beheld—Solomon—made affinity with Pharaoh, and princes and noblemen entered into league with the monarch of the Nile to resist the Babylonian monarch and army. Ptolemy Philadelphus, a ruling sovereign of an illustrious dynasty and lineage, had the Hebrew race to translate their Scriptures into the language of the courts; that is, the Greek tongue. He made the unsupported, harsh, false statement that the Bible carries an overwhelming, internal weight of evidence of its divinity, while that of the Book of Mormon forever damns it as a plagiarized and lying fraud, a base counterfeit, etc. The usual tirade about errors in grammar was freely indulged in, and the absurd inference was drawn that all imperfections in verbiage were not the mistakes of men, but the blunders of the Mormon God. St. Paul of olden said we "know in part" and "prophecy in part;" but Saints' inspiration must be plenary at all times, or, zounds! a fraud.

He thought it perfectly horrid for Nephi to kill Laban by the commandment of God, but kept as still as a mouse about the Prophet Samuel hewing Agag to pieces when he was a subdued and defenseless prisoner. The miraculous ball and spindle was the butt of ridicule of him that loves the blessed Bible which tells of how one Joseph of Egypt divined on a silver cup. He objected to Israelites becoming two great nations, and erecting a temple like that of Solomon so soon; and scouted the idea of the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit; all miracles and inspiration nowadays.

The Devil and his emissaries have denied the birth or baptism of the Spirit, except at Pentecost, and at the house of Cornelius, and have cried out that it is a promise and not a command so long—as also that the miraculous power passed from the hands of the apostles to the next party and then ceased by limitation—that it has the orthodox stamp and ring to it; so this scholastic divine grabs up the old rusty cow bell and gives it a faint shake or so, as a death knell dirge.

He guessed that Joseph Smith must have been a Nephite, or an Indian, and if he was not from Ephraim, but from Manasseh. When Israel said, "Let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth," the two houses were coupled together in this prophetic blessing. Furthermore, "Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the people," says Hosea; and, "their seed shall be known among the Gentiles," says another prophet of the Bible. The American seer does not necessarily need to be a Nephite, or an Indian to be from the loins, or of the blood of Ephraim.

At the crucifixion of Christ the Nephite record says there was darkness all over "the land," or this land, for three days. This savant said the Bible claimed the darkness was for three hours, hence a conflict. The "two sticks" of Ezekiel 37, he said, did not mean records, or books, but powers. He thought it passing strange that the Israelites on this continent would keep the law of Moses and understand the doctrine of Christ at the same time, but Jesus taught and observed both till the faulty covenant came to a complete end at the sacrifice of the cross; so his would-be objections are ethereal indeed. His remarks in regard to the revelation of the late rebellion, given December 25, 1832, and read from Bro. I. L. Rogers' "Pearl of Great Price," published in 1851, at Liverpool, England, were that other men had conjectured and foreseen that such a war would come; so the facts were at his command. Abraham Lincoln had forecast what trusts, rings, syndicates, and combines would do for the United States. Certainly anyone can tell that there will be political corruption and trouble all along the march of nations; but to make known the full particulars of complex events, and make no mistakes in detail, takes the power, blessing, and foreknowledge of God.

He claimed to not oppose prophecy, but he took no stock in these modern "frauds." To down the doctrine of continued and new revelation he made a stand upon 2 Peter 1: 3, and 2 Timothy 3: 15, 16, where it is said that Jesus our Lord "hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness;" and, "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." His dogmatic logic and antiscrptural conclusions would bar out all the writings of John the olden apostle, so that which proves too much, reacts like a boomerang.

He averred that the Book of Mormon did contain quotations from Shakespeare, Addison, and Pope; which is false. Solomon said there was nothing new under the sun; so if words, phrases, and brief sentences were found, it does not argue a verbatim copying or quoting. He supposed miracles were a means to an end, even to the attestation of revelation, or the ratification of God's completed word; but, for all that, he tauntingly asked our brother to go out and get a revelation to straighten up matters. He ridiculed the thought of our people praying for and anointing the sick, and laying on of hands, and gritting our teeth, rubbing, etc., and then when nature, aided by mind, brought relief and cure, to call it a miracle, or say when the scale turned the other way, "They died unto the Lord." He vehemently denied the priesthood after Christ's time, and then "right about face" and said they were all priests to offer spiritual sacrifices of praise and their own bodies, etc.; so now you see it, and now you don't see it. It was delightful to see how easily and masterly the affirmative held the fort and swept away the transparent travesty of this controversialist.

When W. J. Moore of Raleigh, Illinois, affirmed that "The Missionary Baptist Church, of which I am a member, bears all the scriptural marks of the church established by Christ," he quoted again Matthew 16: 18; Isaiah 9: 6, 7; Daniel 2: 34-44; also Ephesians 1: 21, 23; 4: 15, 16; Colossians 1: 18; Mark 1: 14; Luke 16: 16. He reasserted that the church was established by Christ the living head once for all, or to stand forever. He said it was foreign to the question to trace a historic line of succession, but that "it could be done, and the opponent will strive to draw me off of the main issue and throw dirt in your eyes; but there has always been a true people, the true doctrine, and true witnesses." He noticed the restoration of the gospel as provided in Revelation 14: 6, 7, and then boasted that he had knocked all the wind out of miracles, and exploded spiritual powers, but had all in the Bible. Because the government was to be upon Christ's shoulders, and he was to be head, and it was God's work, he alleged that there was no room for man, or any human intervention.

When Elder Curtis proved beyond the power of successful contradiction, and from their own standard authors, that Roger Williams established the first Missionary Baptist Church in America, at Providence, Rhode Island, 1739, he railed like a madman and went square back on the history they had made. John Clark of London, had brought it over and set up at Newport, Rhode Island; the Welsh had it, and brought over a whole church on a ship; the Anabaptists of Germany held the true doctrine; "the Mennonites of Russia, were orthodox;" and, of course, the Waldenses, from Peter Waldo of Lyons, France, were all right. But further, he saith not. "If," saith the man, "we behold Christ and the church in Galilee, and a great abyss with nothing more than the Baptist Church and the Bible, now that would be all sufficient to defend our plea; for therein we have apostles, prophets, miracles, and inspiration enough." He tried in vain to show that the Corinthian church held erroneous views about the continuation of spiritual gifts, the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and extraordinary powers, signs, and gifts of the Spirit, "just like Elder Curtis and the Latter Day Saints." So Paul sought to set them right in pointing out "a more excellent way." Then he retouched 1 Corinthians 13, laid stress on the abolition of prophecy, tongues, and all knowledge of an inspired kind, jumped to the conclusion that the "perfect" had already come, and "now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three." Of a certainty it greatly difficulted him to show just when, where, and under what circumstances "that which is perfect" had come; and, forsooth, the next chapter "sawed off the limb that he was sitting on," and our brother let the poor man down "hard." The Missionary Baptist Church was built by Christ; he was their only head; and the Bible alone is its infallible law, rule, and guide!

Repentance, faith, baptism, and the Lord's supper are the ordinances thereof; and the officers and laity are all on a level, and hold equal rights, privileges, and powers. Salvation through faith alone is a tenet, and baptism, while not essential, should be complied with to obtain full fellowship and have access to the eucharist or communion, etc. The neophyte or newly pledged beginner, not only denied the birth or baptism of the Holy Spirit and the gifts and manifestations of the same, but asserted that the apostles alone had the right to lay on hands for this sealing power and adopting Spirit of God whereby we can cry, "Abba, Father." Acts 2: 38, "For the remission of sins," did not mean "in order to remit," but eise here translated "for" should be rendered "because of," he declared, to agree with "by grace are you saved through faith," and thus be prepared for heaven; howbeit he did know that anyone had to be immersed to be a member in good standing, of the Missionary Baptist Church." Dr. D. B. Ray of St. Louis, Missouri, in his famous work on "Baptist succession," compares the original Church of Christ, with all its belongings, officers, law, order, and the entire equipment, to a well-arranged train entering a tunnel, and coming out as she entered, with all the Scriptural marks. Bro. Curtis discovered the wreck in the tunnel and made it appear quite evident that nothing had got through save a faint sound of the whistle of distress and despair. The Doctor's illustration is good, but his conclusions are false.

When Bro. Curtis proved, beyond the power of successful contradiction, that there had been a direful, a wholesale, and a universal apostasy from the faith once delivered to the Saints, and that such an event made the restoration of the pure gospel a necessity, the Roger Williams affair and all false claimants looked contemptible indeed, and "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," as demonstrated by this arch-heretic in scandalizing "these signs," all "spiritual gifts," the baptism and office work of the Holy Ghost, miracles, healings, tongues, and the great sisterhood of blessings from God the giver, and which was heaven-daring and diabolical in the extreme.

Without flattery or undue praise, I will say, in justice and for the truth that the elder maintained and defended his proposition easily, masterfully, and in a gentlemanly way, and refuted the other proposition to the ecstatic delight of the honorable majority. About a thousand attended the debate, and behold, a vast amount of prejudice is allayed, doors for preaching the word are ajar all around, and the brother has endeared himself to the people by his untiring, humble, bold, yet meek service.

A number were heard to say that they wanted nothing more to do with the Baptist Church; and Bro. Slover is still in that vicinity proclaiming the gospel. Elder Curtis hied away for home to recuperate, see after the health of his family, and look after some business matters for a brief while. I came over from my field proper to attend the late reunion and the theological war. I am preaching and getting acquainted, but will return to Indiana in a very few days. Opportunities for preaching throughout this region are getting more numerous. The work here at Springerton, also elsewhere, is coming to the front.

I do not look for any debates soon, around here, but the Christian Church in Indiana are talking about more fight, I challenged the whole fraternity between the two oceans and in all zones, so I am liable to be summoned to the arena of combat. Bro. Daniel is to enter the gladiatorial ring, figuratively speaking, right away; so the conflict is on and we will carry the war into the enemies' territory.

May our Israel bud, and blossom, and fill the world with fruit unto life eternal.

M. T. SHORT.

THE LAW MUST BE OBSERVED.

It is desired to call attention to a few items of law that appear equally binding upon the elders, members, and such as are seeking to become members of the church. It is a principle of law that whatever is not done according to the rule and letter of the law is of no binding force, in fact is not done at all. Ignorance is no excuse. Authority to act does not legalize the act unless done in accord with the spirit and intent of the law. The divine Lawgiver has positively stated:—

I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.—D. C. 81: 3.

In another revelation the Lord says:—

Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called; behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and have all things right before me. . . . And ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple.—D. C. 41: 1, 2.

Again I say unto you, Hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you.—D. C. 42: 1.

Again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon . . . and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them . . . and all this shall ye observe to do as I have commanded.—D. C. 42: 5.

Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church, and he that doeth according to these things, shall be saved.—D. C. 42: 16.

In these books is found the word of truth, the plan of salvation for the race. In these are given the rules that must govern both those that teach and those that are taught: it is highly important that the candidate for membership should have an intelligent understanding of his duty, his thoughtful reasoning powers should be brought into a condition to understand the requirements of the gospel plan. Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," but to believe implies more than the assent or consent of the mind: it implies the intelligent, anxious inquiry, "What shall I do to be saved?" It is the question of one who gives credit to the truth of the Scriptures as the word of God and the plan of salvation, willing to accept Christ and his teaching as the way of life and peace. I have failed to find in the books any warrant given of God or the church to baptize those that have arrived at years of accountability unless they so believe and repent.

The prophets of the Old Testament and apostles of the New Testament were very decided in declaring the whole counsel of God in this matter, and the law as renewed and given to the church in our day seems to come with still greater force and plainness:—

All those who humble themselves before God and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism, into his church.—D. C. 17: 7.

This law still remains on our statute books and there is no promise made to any that have not so believed, so repented, so humbled themselves, and so witnessed before the church. This is a positive command of God and no authorized minister for Christ can afford to ignore or deviate from this rule. If the candidate for baptism has not been properly taught, he may fail to obtain what has been held out to him as a remission of sins and he not only loses confidence in the gospel, but in the man who baptized him; through lack of proper instruction he is liable to look upon the whole scheme as a fraud. How many have split upon this rock? Then I would say, Let us, as coworkers with God for the salvation of man, as ministers for Christ having received authority to officiate in his name, show our allegiance to him by teaching mankind to observe all things that he has commanded. I am well persuaded that this is the only way to save ourselves and those that hear us.

There is a responsibility upon the hearer, but I think a greater responsibility upon the elder or minister. He has been called of God as we have seen in the quotations from the records, to him the law has been given; it was given that he might know how to teach, what to teach, and how to govern those that were willing to be taught; he was authorized and instructed to see that the law was kept. And be it remembered that our official acts are only legal when in harmony with the rule. The law is our only safeguard; within its protection we can safely rely upon the Holy Spirit to guide us into the truth. Our sympathies and emotions may lead us astray, and by giving vent to our feelings we may say things that are not warranted in the law of God. We then open the door to seductive influences and sometimes speak in the name of the Lord when the Lord has not spoken. These seductive influences are at work, not alone among the Saints, but among the elders as well, and their blighting effect is eating like a cankerworm into the vitals of the Saints and destroying their confidence.

We are not justified in going beyond what the Lord has promised or ignoring anything he has required. "He that saith he receiveth it [the law] and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple," no matter what his position in the church or how high his attainments. He may speak in tongues and prophesy, but all these are uncertain guides outside the law given of God. I do not write to disparage the proper and legitimate use of the gifts when given in meekness and mildness by the power of the Holy Ghost, but having witnessed the sad consequences, the blighting, withering disappointment to some that have received these deceptive manifestations as if from God, I realize the necessity of the admonition, "Let no man deceive you."

Hearken unto me saith the Lord your God, . . . for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.—D. C. 77: 1.

The voice of the Spirit in the last revelation to the church says the laws referred to are of the same binding force as if they were given to-day. Let us study them more fully and practice them in all our official duties. In a certain revelation it is said:—

And now I give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life; for you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. . . . And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation.—D. C. 83: 7, 8.

From the above we find that they had treated the word and will of the Lord lightly. Let us profit by the experiences of others and the lessons of each day and try to come to a higher standard by searching and obeying the commandments which the Lord has said are true and faithful.

We have heard of a colored tenant who had engaged to give the owner of the land the fourth part of the crop. After hauling three wagon loads of his own home the tenant returned the information that there was not any fourth part left. The moral of the incident is, that in times of financial pressure we should not permit the stringency to cut off the Lord's part. Let there be a fair and honest division. And let us see to it that in curtailing expenses we do not commence at the Lord's house first.—Sel.

THE KINGDOMS OF THIS WORLD.

In the first chapter of the Divine Revelation, God declared his purpose concerning his earthly creation and its government:—

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.—Gen. 1: 26-28.

Thus the dominion of earth was placed in the hands of the human race as represented in the first man, Adam, who was perfect and therefore fully qualified to be the lord, ruler, or king of earth. This commission to multiply, and fill, and subdue, and have dominion over the earth was not to Adam alone, but to all mankind: "Let them have dominion," etc. Had the human race remained perfect and sinless, this dominion would never have passed out of their hands.

It will be noticed that in this commission no man is given dominion or authority over his fellow men, but the whole race is given dominion over the earth, to cultivate and to make use of its products for their mutual good. Not only its vegetable and mineral wealth is thus placed at man's command, but also its teeming millions of animal life are at his disposal and for his service. Had the race, as it grew in numbers, remained perfect and carried out this original design of the Creator, it would have been necessary for men to consult together, systematize their efforts, and devise ways and means for the just and wise distribution of the common blessings. And as it would have been impossible, in course of time, for all to meet and consult together because of their vast numbers, it would have been necessary for various classes of men to elect certain of their number to represent them. And if all men were perfect—mentally, physically, and morally; if every man loved God and his regulations supremely, and his neighbor as himself, there could have been no friction in such an arrangement.

Thus seen the original design of the Creator for earth's government was a republic in form, a government in which each would share, in which every man would be a sovereign amply qualified in every particular to exercise the duties of his office both for his own and the general good.

This dominion of earth conferred upon man had but one contingency upon which its everlasting continuance depended, and that was that this divinely conferred rulership be always exercised in harmony with the Supreme Ruler of the universe, whose one law, briefly stated is: Do right.

Concerning this great favor conferred upon man, David, praising God, says:—

Thou hast made him [man] a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands.—Psa. 8:5, 6.

This dominion given to mankind in the person of Adam was the first establishment of the kingdom of God in the earth, man exercising dominion as God's representative. But man's disobedience to the Supreme Ruler not only forfeited his life, but all his rights and privileges as God's representative ruler of earth. He was henceforth a rebel condemned and dethroned. Then speedily the kingdom of God on earth ceased, and has not since been established, except for a short time in Israel, in a typical manner. Although in Eden man lost his right to life and dominion, neither was taken from him suddenly; and while the condemned life lasts man is permitted to exercise the dominion of earth according to his own ideas and ability until God's time; when he whose right it is shall take the dominion which he purchased.

The death of Jesus redeemed or purchased not only man, but all his original inheritance including dominion. Having purchased it, the title is now in him; he is now the rightful heir, and in due time and shortly he will take his purchased possession. (Eph. 1:14.) But as he bought man not for the sake of holding him as his slave, but that he might restore him to his former estate, so with the dominion of earth; he purchased it and all man's original blessings for the purpose of restoring them again to man. Hence the rule of Messiah upon earth will not be everlasting, it will continue only until by his strong iron rule he shall put down all rebellion and insubordination, and restore the fallen race to the original perfection, when they will be fully capable of rightly exercising the dominion of earth as originally designed. When thus restored, it will again be the kingdom of God on earth, under man—God's appointed representative.

During the Jewish age under Moses and the Judges God organized that people as his kingdom,—a sort of republic,—but it was typical only. And the more despotic rule afterward established, especially under David and Solomon, was in some respects typical of the kingdom promised when Messiah should reign. Unlike the surrounding nations, Jehovah was the king and Israel's rulers nominally served under him, as we learn from Psalm 78:70, 71. This is quite definitely stated in 2 Chronicles 13:8 and 1 Chronicles 29:23, where it is called the kingdom of the Lord, and where it is said that Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord, instead of the throne of David his father, who sat upon or exercised the rule of the same throne for forty years previously, following Saul their first king.

When Israel transgressed against the Lord he chastised them repeatedly, until, finally, he took away their kingdom entirely. It was in the days of Zedekiah, the last of the line of David who reigned that the scepter of royal power was removed. There the typical kingdom of God was overthrown. God's decision relative to the matter is expressed in the words:—

Thou profane, wicked prince of Israel whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end, Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until he comes whose right it is; and I will give it him.—Ezek. 21:25-27.

In fulfillment of the prophecy, the king of Babylon came against them and removed their king, and took the people captives. Though afterward restored to national existence by Cyrus the Mede, they were subjects and tribute payers to the successive empires of Medo-Persia, Grecia, and Rome, down to the final destruction of their nationality, A. D. 70, since which time they have had no national existence, but have been scattered among all nations.

The kingdom of Israel is the only one which, since the fall, God ever recognized as in any way representing his government, laws, etc. There were many nations before theirs, but none other could rightfully claim God as its founder, or that their rulers were God's representatives. When the diadem was taken from Zedekiah, and the kingdom of Israel overturned, it was decreed that it should remain overturned until Christ, the rightful heir of the world, should come to claim it. Thus inferentially all other kingdoms in power until the reestablishment of God's kingdom, are branded "kingdoms of this world," under the prince of this world; and hence any claims put forth by any of them that they are kingdoms of Christ are spurious. Nor was this kingdom of God set up at the first advent of Christ. (Luke 19:12.) Then and since he has been selecting from the world those who shall be accounted worthy to reign with Christ as joint heirs of that throne. It is not until the second advent of Jesus, that he shall take the kingdom, the power, and the glory and reign Lord of all.

All other kingdoms than that of Israel are scripturally called heathen or gentile kingdoms—the kingdoms of this world, under the prince of this world—Satan. The removal of God's kingdom in the days of Zedekiah left the world without any government which God could approve, or, whose laws or affairs he specially supervised. The gentile governments God recognized indirectly in that he publicly declares his decree (Luke 21: 24) that during the interregnum between the removal of the diadem from Zedekiah and the giving of it to Messiah, the control of Jerusalem and the world shall be exercised by gentile government.

This interregnum or intervening period of time between the removal of God's scepter and government and the restoration of the same in greater power and glory in Christ, is scripturally termed, "the times of the Gentiles." And these times or years during which the kingdoms of this world are permitted to rule, are fixed and limited, and the time for the re-establishment of God's kingdom under Messiah is equally fixed and marked in scripture. Evil as these gentile governments have been, they were permitted or ordained of God for a wise purpose. (Romans 13: 1.) Their imperfection and misrule form a part of the general lesson on the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and prove the inability of fallen man to govern himself even to his own satisfaction. God permits them, in the main, to carry out their own purposes as they may be able, only overruling these when they would interfere with his plans. He designs that eventually all shall work for good, and finally, even the wrath of man shall praise him. The remainder that would work no good, serve no purpose, or teach no lesson, he restrains. (Psalm 76: 10.)

Man's inability to establish a perfect government is attributable to his own weakness in the fallen or depraved condition. These weaknesses which of themselves would thwart man's every effort to produce a perfect government, have been taken advantage of by Satan, who first tempted man to disloyalty to the Supreme Ruler. Satan has continually taken advantage of man's weaknesses, made good to appear evil and put evil for good, misrepresented God's character and plans, and blinded men to the truth. Thus working in the hearts of the children of disobedience, he has led them captive at his will (Ephesians 2: 2) and made himself what Jesus and the apostles call him, The prince [or ruler] of this world. (John 14: 30; 12: 31.) He is not the prince of this world by right, but by usurpation through fraud and deception; yet by divine permission. It is because he is a usurper that Jesus will summarily depose him. Had he a real title as Prince of this world, he could not be thus dealt with.

Thus it will be seen that the dominion of earth, as at present exercised, has both an invisible and a visible phase. The former is the spiritual, the latter the human phase—the visible earthly kingdoms measurably under the control of a spiritual prince, Satan. It was because Satan possessed such control that he could offer to make our Lord its supreme visible sovereign under his direction. Had Satan not possessed such power, his offer would have been no temptation to Jesus. When the times of the Gentiles expire, both phases of the present dominion will terminate, Satan will be bound, and the kingdoms of this world will be overthrown.

The fallen, blinded, groaning creation has for centuries plodded along its weary way, defeated at every step, even its best endeavors proving fruitless, yet ever hoping that the golden age dreamed of by its philosophers was at hand. They know not that a still greater deliverance than that for which they hope and groan is to come through the despised Nazarene and his followers, who as the sons of God will shortly be in kingdom power for their deliverance. (Rom. 8: 19, 22.)

In order that his children should not be in darkness relative to his permission of present evil governments, and his ultimate design to bring in a better, when those under his overruling providence shall have served the purpose for which they were permitted, God has given us, through the prophets, several grand panoramic views of the kingdoms of this world, showing each time, for our encouragement, their overthrow by the establishment of his own righteous and everlasting kingdom by Messiah. That man's present effort to exercise dominion is not in successful defiance of Jehovah's will and power, but by his permission, is shown by God's message to Nebuchadnezzar, whereby God gives permission to rule until the time for the setting up of Christ's kingdom, to the four great empires, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia, and Rome. (See Daniel 2: 37-44.) This shows where this lease of the dominion will end.

As we now glance at these prophetic views, let us remember that they begin with Babylon at the time of the overthrow of the kingdom of Israel, the typical kingdom of the Lord.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI REUNION.

The Southwestern Missouri reunion is now in session, and although it has had an existence of only a few hours, things around the camp have already assumed a dignified appearance. The "big tent" from Logan is waving proudly in the breeze and serves as quite an attraction to the people of this famous health resort. It was secured by the committee for the benefit of the reunion as also the coming debate, which is to be held at Lowry City, beginning October 16.

El Dorado is twelve miles from Harwood, the nearest railroad station, and one would be inclined to suppose that this would diminish the attendance somewhat, but it is probably not so. The principal part of those attending come in covered wagons, bringing their "camping outfit" with them prepared to "look out for number one."

Friday the 5th was a busy day generally, pitching tents and making preparations to camp. No services were attempted until evening time, when the camp began to assume a businesslike appearance. The genial countenances of Brn. I. N. White and T. W. Chatburn were to be seen among the anxious throng, while the patriarchal face of Uncle John Thomas presented a striking picture of ripened years and evidences of long, hard service for the Master. Brn. Sparling and Spurlock from the Southern Missouri district were also among yesterday's arrivals. The weather was chilly for camping but a goodly number were out to the evening service—two hundred or more. Elder C. R. Duncan was the speaker; subject, Water baptism. The speaker showed that Christ commanded his disciples to teach and baptize all nations. That none were exempt from this gospel requirement. That no scripture could be produced in defense of sprinkling. That some people urge pouring as baptism in consequence of the statement of the Prophet Joel, "I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh." The speaker showed that if this figure was carried out that we must also carry out the one found in Acts 2: 4, where "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." It took "much water" in ancient times to baptize. (John 3: 23.) They were baptized "in the river." (Mark 1: 4.) "They went down into the water." (Acts 8: 38.) "Buried by baptism." (Rom. 6: 4 and Col. 2: 12.) "They came up out of the water." (Acts 8: 39 and Matt. 3: 16.) That it is for remission of sins. (Acts 2: 38; Mark 1: 5; Luke 1: 77.)

Saturday morning was cool and threatening storm, but as the day advanced the clouds rolled back and the warm sunshine caused the sisters to lay aside their heavy wraps and wish for a parasol. At nine a. m., a business session was held. Elder I. N. White was selected to preside, with privilege of choosing his assistants. C. R. Duncan was chosen secretary, Robert Reynolds as policeman, F. C. Keek and Richard Walters as committee on finance, Brn. Evans and Willie Manering as ushers, Arthur Mills chorister, Peter Crayne janitor, and F. C. Keek and E. W. Lloyd as a reception committee.

Eleven a. m., preaching by Elder C. J. Spurlock; subject, Laying on of hands. The speaker showed that all men were entitled to a portion of God's Spirit to lead them into all truth. That it might be given even before baptism as a temporary visitor, but as an abiding Comforter it can only be received through obedience to the gospel principle of laying on of hands. That if we receive the same Spirit that the ancients received it will produce the same results.

At 2: 30 p. m. Elder Henry Sparling was the speaker. His subject was faith. Men must not only believe that God was but also that he is. He showed how that faith in God had caused him to rejoice while in the Methodist Church. How that he often prayed for an afflicted friend and wondered why the healing power was not still manifest in the world. How this faith had led him out of the Methodist Church into the fullness of the gospel, and gave in detail some of the very forcible, personal evidences he had received of God's approval of the latter-day work. That in such cases faith develops into knowledge, yet faith could not be left behind even though we obtain that knowledge. Many Latter Day Saints had faith to put the Lord to a practical test in spiritual things, but lacked faith to test God's promises with reference to temporal matters. The sermon was full of excellent pointers. He urged parents to send their children to Sabbath school, even if it be conducted by other denominations. He also dropped an excellent pointer for the ministry with reference to baptizing people before they are properly converted.

Saturday afternoon brought a number of new arrivals, fifteen or twenty, from Lebanon, Kansas, branch, and other places. Brn. Joseph Luff, Asa S. Cochran, R. Etzenhouser, and A. H. Mills also put in an appearance in time for the evening service.

At 7:30 p. m. Elder T. W. Chatburn was introduced as the speaker. His text was Revelation 14:7, "Worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters." Bro. T. W. felt just like talking, and he gave that vast assembly of fully one thousand persons a good, sound, logical sermon on the nature of the Deity. He said that he was once a Methodist preacher and that he carried a Discipline which said, "We believe in a God without body or parts." He had frequently doubted such theology as this, and when he questioned other ministers they would simply reply, "Behold, how great is the mystery of godliness." "It is done away," etc. The time now is when the prophet's words are fulfilled, "Our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit." God is a personal being. He is a Spirit. So are you and I. There are embodied and disembodied spirits. In no place is God represented as a disembodied spirit. Men have seen God. He has hands, feet, eyes, ears, etc. The Son is in the express image or form of the Father. God is not omnipresent, as he changes his location—went up, came down, passed by. If God is everywhere we might as well pray, "Our Father who art in hell." In 1 Kings 19:11, 12, we read, "God was not in the wind," nor "in the fire," nor "in the earthquake." God's dwelling place is in heaven, the Son sitting upon his right hand. The Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are three personages. They are one in spirit, in mind, in purpose—one firm doing business together in unity.

HYRUM O. SMITH, Pres.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, October 5.

PASTORAL.

Having been appointed in charge of Arkansas and Indian Territory in the Southern mission, I wish to give notice to the Saints and ministry that I expect to begin labor in that field about the second week in November. I wish to hear from the Saints and ministry in regard to the needs of the work in the different localities of the mission. One of the first lessons I would teach is the necessity of loving unity of purpose and action that we may have the direction of the Holy Spirit in all our work, for if this is had success will be secured.

I enter upon the work with anxious care, feeling the burden of responsibility and desiring to be sustained by your faith and prayers. My address for the present will be Webb City, Missouri, in care of O. P. Sutherland.

Your brother in bonds,
GEORGE MONTAGUE.

During the twenty nine years of their married life there were thirteen children born to them, seven of whom remain to mourn the loss of a good mother. In early life Sr. France united with the Protestant Episcopal Church. About the year 1847 she first heard the gospel preached by the Latter Day Saints, and her husband and herself united with them, being baptized the same year. They lived faithful to their covenants in the church till about 1852, when they severed themselves from that body. When in 1867 they heard the elders of the Reorganized Church they knew the voice of the Good Shepherd and embraced the gospel once again and lived faithful till death called them to separate. Subsequently she married Bro. Wm. France, who remains to mourn.

MCCALOB.—Almira P. McCalob died October 3, 1894, aged 41 years and 21 days.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A London cablegram dated October 6 repeats the rumor that the European powers had responded favorably to the suggestions of the British Government looking toward concord of action in protecting foreign residents in the Orient. The British Minister to China had reported the inability of the Chinese Government to protect British subjects at treaty points, hence Great Britain had suggested cooperation of other governments in landing troops at treaty ports for the protection of foreign residents.

A Berlin dispatch of the same date states that Great Britain has decided to not interfere to prevent the overthrow of the present dynasty in China.

Nationalists in India desire to associate their agitation with that of the people of Ireland with a view to securing the equivalent of home rule or self-government.

MADRID, Oct. 6.—According to advices received here from Lisbon the greatest excitement prevails at the Capital of Portugal. It is stated that a large number of Portuguese naval officers, aggrieved at a certain passage in the speech which the king recently made at the opening of the Portuguese Cortes, drew up a manifesto in the form of a protest, addressed to the nation. No names were attached to this document, but its authors are known to be men of high position and influence.

PANAMA, Oct. 6.—Word comes from Bogota that the remains of a prehistoric city have been discovered near the crater of the volcano of Purace, in the Andes Mountains. The buried city covers hundreds of acres and contains the ruins of great buildings with immense granite columns. Remains of an aqueduct in an almost perfect state of preservation have also been found.

BUDA-PESTH, Oct. 8.—The House of Magnates to-day rejected by a vote of 109 to 103 the government bill providing for legal recognition of the Jewish religion. The bill dealing with the religion of the children of mixed marriages was finally adopted. The government has again introduced in the House of Magnates the bill relative to religion formerly rejected by the House. Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian Prime Minister hopes, in view of the great majority obtained for the measure in the Lower House of the Diet, the House of Magnates will abate its opposition.

ROME, Oct. 9.—The Papal encyclical to the American Bishops will be published in Washington to prevent incomplete summaries from appearing in the newspapers. It is said the Pope is preparing a special appeal to the clergy of the Anglican Church on the subject of reunion between that and the Roman Church.

A general strike of New York cloakmakers has been ordered.

Citizens and clergymen of various religious beliefs, including Protestants and Catholics, joined in the celebration of "temperance day" at Chicago, October 10, and instituted it as a day of observance for all who opposed the liquor traffic. It was observed under the auspices of the Chicago Temperance Union. It began with a street parade and ended with a mass meeting at night. Leading Catholic prelates and other clergymen and citizens delivered addresses. Archbishop Satolli sent a message as follows:—

"I am pleased that my recent decision [against saloonkeepers] has produced so happy an effect. It is a matter of deep regret that so many Catholics are engaged in the saloon traffic, which by its abuses is the cause of so much harm to their fellow men and scandal to our non-Catholic brethren. Fondly trusting that this abuse may be mitigated, if not obliterated, and this cause of reproach may be removed from the Catholics of America, I remain very sincerely in Christ."

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 8.—A storm of great violence has been raging over the South Louisiana and Mississippi country. At Mississippi City a Methodist church and several outbuildings were blown down. At Horn and Ship Island everything is reported as blown ashore. The Norwegian bark Trisal, the American bark Caria Capon, and the British bark Orlovie and a number of lumber lighters were washed ashore at Ship Island.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The cyclone that has been sweeping north from the gulf region acquired a force by the time it reached this city and vicinity in the early hours this morning that made it one of the most disastrous storms in recent years. Buildings were overturned, electric wires were blown down, yachts and small crafts were caught and hurled against the coast, and several lives were probably lost.

Six persons were killed in this city, eleven were injured, and four missing men and women are believed to be buried by a partly finished seven stories' factory building which fell upon and crushed to the ground a smaller adjoining house. The wind caused the disaster, but bad workmanship, it is believed, the result of parsimony, is mainly responsible for it.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 10.—Articles of incorporation for a Civic Federation were filed with the Secretary of State to-day. The name of the organization is "The Citizens' Federation of the City of Toledo." The object is to promote good citizenship to encourage the enforcement of national, State, and municipal laws, and to close the gambling halls and wine-rooms, with which the city is overrun.

Citizens of Richmond, Virginia, have also begun an aggressive campaign against municipal and moral evils.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Oct. 10.—At a mass meeting of students of the Purdue University to-day a resolution was adopted condemning all hazing practices and the participants therein. This is an indorsement of the action of the faculty in dismissing the twelve students yesterday.

The remains of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes were laid to rest in Mount Auburn cemetery, Boston, October 10, Edward Everett Hale conducting simple funeral ceremonies.

The funeral of Ex-Governor Curtin, war governor of Pennsylvania, took place at Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, October 10.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 8.—Count Benken-dorff, Grand Marshall of the Czar's household, has started for Corfu to prepare for the Czar's reception at that place. The Queen of Greece, a cousin of the Czar, will accompany the Russian imperial family to Corfu. It is probable that the Czar and his party will leave Livadia in three weeks.

BRESLAU, Oct. 8.—The Schlesische Zeitung publishes a dispatch from St. Petersburg which says a sudden change for the worse has taken place in the condition of the Czar. The Minister of War has ordered prayers for the preservation of his life to be offered up in all the garrison and regimental churches. This order is said to be due to a telegram received direct from Livadia that the Czar's illness has taken a disquieting turn. Fainting fits are reported to have supervened and to have rendered an operation immediately necessary. The court dignitaries and other high Russian officials have hurriedly started for Livadia.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—A dispatch sent from Shanghai Sunday says Prince Kong, the Emperor's uncle, who was recently called from retirement, and to whom was intrusted the conduct of the war with Japan, remains in Peking, where he is occupied with providing defenses for the capital. He is, however, in communication with Viceroy Li Hung Chang, who is at Tien Tsin. Li Hung Chang has sent another body of 8,000 men well armed and passably well drilled to Peking. His best regiments remain at Tien Tsin. The dispatch adds that 4,000 rifles were landed at Taku from a Hamburg steamer last week.

Masters of Chinese junks report seeing a Japanese fleet proceeding northward from the Gulf of Pe Chi Li. It is supposed to be the Japanese fleet and transports with the expeditionary force of 30,000 men.

A dispatch from Tien Tsin dated Saturday says that the Japanese are pursuing the campaign towards Moukden cautiously and are avoiding any dashing enterprises. Their cruisers are closely watching the Chinese fleet in the Gulf of Pe Chi Li. The dispatch adds that fugitives from Ping Yang describe the Japanese tactics as most scientific, while their weapons are perfect. On the other hand the Chinese operations are said to be conducted in an antiquated fashion and there is considerable disagreement among the Chinese generals. The Japanese are gaining the sympathy of the Korean people by paying for their supplies and maintaining strict discipline. The Chinese were in full retreat from Moukden.

A dispatch from Berlin to the Times says that the negotiations mentioned yesterday by the semi-official Cologne Gazette, looking to the adoption of joint measures by Great Britain, Germany, and other powers for the protection of their subjects in China, are quite distinct from any eventual interference between the belligerents with a view to limiting the duration or area of hostilities.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 8.—To check the depredations of the Chinese marauders the Russian Government has decided to send promptly to the frontier five battalions of Siberian troops, two sotnias of Cossacks, and three batteries of artillery, all under the command of Gen. Neschenk.

CRONSTADT, Oct. 8.—The Russian cruisers Djigit and Vladimir Moromach have been ordered to proceed to the far East.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 9.—It is reported here that the Japanese have captured Che Foo.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9.—A second Japanese army is reported to have crossed the Yalu River and to be advancing upon Moukden, which, it is believed, will soon fall, as the Chinese are reported to be in a condition of demoralization. The Chinese have blockaded the mouth of the River Min, leading up to Foo Choo.

Italy will maintain a policy of strict neutrality concerning the war in the Orient.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 11.—It is rumored that 40,000 Japanese troops have landed near Shan Hai Kwan, on the boundary between the Chinese provinces of Manchuria and Chi Li, at the eastern end of the great wall which traverses China. The telegraph wires have been cut, thus hindering communication with that district. A report, which is classed here as unreliable, says the Japanese have effected a landing near New Chwang, Gulf of Loao Tom.

Shan Hai Kwan is directly on the railroad building from Tien Tsin to Moukden and is of great strategic importance. The opinion has been expressed if Shan Hai Kwan is captured there is nothing to prevent the Japanese from marching on Peking. It is reported that several Japanese warships have been sighted off Takuar. A report reaches this city that after a skirmish north of the Yalu River yesterday the Japanese outposts were driven back across the river. Advices here from Port Arthur say the repairs to the Chinese fleet engaged in the battle of the Yalu River have been completed and that the fleet will proceed to sea to-day.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 11.—The Norwegian Radicals have failed to win the election at Stavanger, but the Unionist majority at that place is very small compared with the majority given in 1891. The election of members by delegates has already opened in several districts. Most of the members of the late Radical administration have been returned. Ex-Prime Minister Steen has been elected senior member from Fronchjen. An outspoken separatist has been elected to represent Konigsburg.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Oct. 11.—A northeast gale of exceptional force swept over this island Tuesday. The storm was very severe at St. Pierre, Miquelon, where thirty lives were lost and great damage was done. A very heavy sea was running in the harbor. All the vessels at anchor there put out extra anchors and took other measures to extrude the gale, but notwithstanding this the maritime casualties were many. Not less than fifty vessels dragged their anchors or parted their cables and were thrown upon the shore. No assistance could be rendered the shipwrecked men from the shore. The wrecked vessels were part of the fishing fleet that had put into St. Pierre from the banks to repair damages they had sustained during the heavy storm of Sept. 30. Although there were nearly 300 vessels at the port not a single one escaped without sustaining some damage. Several of the fleet are missing and grave fears are entertained that they foundered during the night.

New England ports report severe damage to vessels by this storm.

One thousand cloakmakers have joined the strike at New York. Cleveland, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and Milwaukee cloakmakers are also preparing to strike in favor of demands similar to those made at New York.

New Bedford cotton mill operatives have mostly resumed work.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 12.—The bandits who held up a Southern Pacific overland train a few miles west of Sacramento late last night and looted the Wells-Fargo company express car secured over $50,000. They seem to have eluded the officers and escaped with their plunder, which was nearly all in gold coin, and consequently a heavy burden. The astounding success of the hold-up was not known until this afternoon.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 12.—A rumor is current here that the Chinese Government has commenced negotiations with Japan for peace. China, it is said, has offered to acknowledge the independence of Corea and to pay a war indemnity to Japan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 12.—The State Department has not received any advices confirmatory of the rumor coming from Shanghai that China has sued for peace, and the report meets with little credence, being regarded at least as premature.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 12.—M. Otori, the Japanese Minister to Corea, has been recalled owing to his failure to carry out reforms. Count Inauye will proceed to Corea as M. Otori's successor.

The Czarowitz, accompanied by his fiancée, Princess Alix of Hesse, will accompany the Czar to Corfu, and will probably be married in November, the Czar desiring the event to take place soon, in view of his approaching death.

CEDER KEYS, Fla., Oct. 12.—Ceder Keys has just experienced the most disastrous storm which has visited here for twenty-five years. The main business street is filled from one end to the other with debris. The damage and loss of property are great. The Florida Central and Peninsula railroad is a heavy sufferer. A number of business and swelling houses were swept away. The city hall has the roof blown off and one entire dide knocked out by logs. The city jail cannot be found.

APPALACHICOLA, Fla., Oct. 12.—Never before in the history of this town was so much havoc and destruction played by storm and tide. Two residences were carried half to three-quarters of a mile and placed in the marsh near Cypress mill uninjured. All the docks were totally destroyed, houses were unroofed, and fences scattered everywhere. Families sought safety on the hills, only to be routed by the terrific gale.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archaeology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resumé or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

EXPLORATIONS IN PALESTINE.

THE Land of the Bible can tell us of the Bible. This fact led to the organization of the Palestine Exploration Fund, which has for twenty-nine years been searching for the ancient monuments of Bible times. Major C. R. Conder, D.C.L., in a most interesting paper in the Contemporary Review, September, tells of some of the great results which have been already attained, and prophesies that "there remains still much more to be found than has yet been discovered."

"The first great result was the discovery of the Moabite Stone. This monument proved that, in the Ninth Century, B. C., King Mesha revolted from Israel, as we are told in the Bible that he did revolt. It showed that Israel then worshiped Jehovah, and that Omri and Ahab had ruled in Moab. It showed that the Moabite language was a dialect not unlike Hebrew, and that the art of writing was known thus early, even in this remote corner of the deserts beyond Jordan, far away from the highways of trade and civilization.

"The next result, due to the perilous excavations of Sir Charles Warren, was the recovery of the Temple area, and the unearthing of a monument more interesting than the Scæan Gate—the 'great tower that lieth out' on Ophel, which Nehemiah rebuilt. Then followed the discovery of the Siloam inscription, hidden in the dark aqueduct which Hezekiah hewed, from the 'upper Gihon,' when preparing to defend Jerusalem against Sennacherib. This monument showed us that in Hezekiah's time the ordinary language of the city was that pure Hebrew in which Isaiah wrote, and placed before our eyes the very characters in which his scrolls must have been penned.

"Quite recently we have had further light thrown on the ancient civilization of Palestine, through excavation at Lachish. The discoveries of Mr. Bliss have shown us the language of the Canaanites in Joshua's time, and the characters in which they wrote. They have proved the early communication with Egypt, by the recovery at this site of Egyptian remains as old as the fifteenth century, B. C. They have shown us how different was the language of the Canaanite and of the Hebrew, and how close was the connection between Chaldeans and Canaanites—just as the Bible also told us before. And, in addition to these most valuable discoveries, we have now two hundred letters found in Central Egypt, written to Amenophis III. and Amenophis IV., by Philistines, Amorites, Phœnicians, and Hittites, which describe the great rebellion against the Pharaohs in the age when, according to the Old Testament dates, the conquest by the Hebrews took place."

Major Conder shows how much is yet to be done from the fact that of all the ancient ruined cities, only Lachish has been excavated, and that not thoroughly. In regard to texts believed to be hidden under the great mounds in all parts of Palestine, he says:—

"When the Palestine Exploration Fund was first started, there was nothing which could confidently be pointed out to show how reasonable was the expectation of such results. All the known inscriptions—except two or three from Phœnicia—belonged to times after the Christian era. All the known ruins were of late character. It was possible to assert, without fear of contradiction by fact, that the ancient civilization of the Hebrews was mythical, and had no existence before the Greek or the Persian age; that they could not write, and had consequently no books; that they were merely savage tribes under petty leaders, wandering like the desert Arabs, and despised by the surrounding civilized peoples. Such things were actually then said; but he would be a bold man who repeated them to-day. When Sennacherib describes his unsuccessful attack on Jerusalem, before he was driven home across the Euphrates by Tirhakah, king of Egypt, he says that Hezekiah's tribute included 'Thirty talents of gold, eight hundred talents of silver, woven cloth, embroidered scarlet, precious stones of large size, couches of ivory, thrones of ivory, hides, and precious woods—a great treasure of every kind.' If Sennacherib is to be trusted, Jerusalem, in Hezekiah's time, must have equaled other famous cities in wealth and in art. The Assyrians carried captive two hundred thousand people small and great, horses and mares, asses, camels, oxen, and sheep; and no less than twenty-six strong cities of Hezekiah were besieged with engines of war besides Jerusalem.

"But it may be said that no one disputed such a condition of affairs in the eighth century, B. C.: that it was only in the times of Moses and of Joshua, and yet more in Abraham's days, that Palestine and Syria were wild countries, without civilization, and where writing was unknown: that the Law could not have been carved on tables of stone by Israel in the fifteenth century, B. C.; that Abraham could not have bought the field at Hebron with 'current money of the merchants;' that there were no carts or chariots in Palestine in Jacob's time, or merchants who could have carried Joseph to Egypt, or 'iron chariots' of the Canaanites in Joshua's age, or 'Babylonian garments' in Achan's tent. Three years ago, all this might be argued, but now these objections also have been answered by the explorer. We know that even before the time of Abraham the Akkadians, from the lower Tigris, hewed granite in Sinai and carried it in ships by Aden to the Persian Gulf. The statues carved of this granite are in the Louvre; and the texts upon them speak of gold and precious woods brought from Upper Egypt, of mines in Phœnicia whence precious metals were dug out, of cedars hewn in Lebanon, of a widespread commerce uniting Africa and Chaldea, and having its highway through Palestine; of Chaldean invasions similar to that of Abraham's time, when Arioch, king of Ellasar (the historic Eriaku of the Larsa monuments) marched even to Edom."

In concluding his paper, Major Conder points to the high importance of the exploration regarding the languages spoken in Palestine in the time of Christ; and emphasizes the fact that the exploration has demonstrated that Greek was very widely used in Palestine at the time of the writing of the Gospels, and that it was understood by the Jews, thus throwing some light on the disputed question whether the gospels were originally written in Greek or Aramaic.—Literary Digest.

JOSEPH LUFF CORRESPONDING EDITOR.

LAMONI, IOWA, OCT. 24, 1894.

AT EL DORADO.

THE words El Dorado mean the "region of gold," or the "golden country." The place referred to in the above caption is in Cedar county, Missouri, and has been described by Bro. C. R. Duncan, in a letter in a late HERALD.

The editor reached the camp the evening of Friday, October 12, and by request spoke to the tent full of people who had assembled to hear.

The meetings continued during Saturday and Sunday, with an unabated interest. Bro. T. W. Chatburn, Joseph Luff, E. L. Kelley, R. Etzenhouser, and the Editor occupying.

In one respect this meeting at El Dorado was the most excellent one we ever attended. It was in a region where but a few years ago there was hardly a single family of Saints; now, through the work of Bro. I. N. White and others, there are several hundred worthy and faithful people. They came from all over the Southwest Missouri district, and represented many branches, scattered here and there over a wide territory of good country.

The tent was filled each evening and all day Sunday, at every service, with attentive listeners, who paid attention to what the preachers had to say. There was nothing said or done of a disrespectful character that we saw or heard. There was no gathering into knots for gossip near the tent during services; no loud or boisterous talking; no swearing nor shouting on the road home after night services; and though there was quite a number of young fellows came to the grounds on horseback, these dispersed after service quietly and in good order. In fact, the meetings from first to last during our stay were of the most orderly kind, fully up to the best we ever attended.

The citizens of the place, a town of some twenty-five hundred, were most kind and respectful, treating the elders and Saints hospitably and kindly.

We took especial notice of the demeanor of the town's people during Sunday, and take pleasure in stating that there appeared to be a quietude and staidness of purpose over all, indicating a respect for the day seldom seen in towns of its size. Credit is due and we cheerfully give it.

Our people at the close of the Sunday evening service adopted a vote of thanks to Mr. Harmen, the owner of the grounds on which the camp was held; and to the citizens of El Dorado for their uniform kindness and civility of treatment; and we are sure that the vote was a hearty and feeling one. We came away much impressed with the occasion and its surroundings.

OFF TO TAHITI.

BRO. HUBERT CASE and wife, Alice, the daughter of Bro. George Montague of Moorhead, Iowa, left Council Bluffs for the Evanelia and the islands, Monday, the 8th instant, happy and confident, though not unduly enthusiastic.

We believe these young missionaries to be well fitted to do good in the field to which they are going; and we bade them "Godspeed" with gratitude to Him who sends men into the field for so capable a pair.

For reasons that are good Bro. Oscar Case and wife do not now go, Bro. Oscar reserving the right if conditions become favorable to go at some future time. Bro. Henry N. Davis was chosen to go, also, but could not get ready to sail with the Evanelia, and will probably go as soon as he can make arrangements to do so.

REUNIONS.

THE influences exerted upon the communities where the several reunions of the church have been held this fall have been of the best, so far as may be judged from present indications. The one at Logan was very largely attended, and the sermons, so far as the editor heard and can speak of, were more than ordinarily good. The tent, large as it is, was altogether too small, the lowest estimate placed upon the attendance on Sunday, September 16, being five thousand. It was put higher by some. The moral effect wrought on all the surrounding country is decidedly good, and seems to be more and more widely spread, as the years pass; very many hearing the word preached who by reason of unfavorable conditions do not hear it elsewhere. Besides this, the effect of large assemblies of the sort is to impress the lookers on with the evidences of the sobriety, strength, and determination of the people holding them, as well as to teach them their faith.

On Sunday, the 16th of September, the crowd was so large in the afternoon that Bro. J. W. Wight found a hearing of hundreds if not of thousands, in an overflow meeting held almost within ear shot of the big tent, in which effort Bro. Wight did most nobly.

There was an afterglow following the Logan meeting that radiated to the extreme places from which the Saints came to be present at it; and though the conditions of the country in many places were not encouraging because of the drouth, the Saints were strong in their spiritual natures, by reason of the godness of the good Father, to them as a whole.

We labored at Woodbine, Moorhead, Little Sioux, Council Bluffs, and at Omaha, from all of which places members had attended the meetings, and at all of them we found the excellent fruits resulting from the blessed associations of the reunion. Some forty-two baptisms occurred, which may serve to note the fact that the seed sown by the sowers had some of it fallen on soil favorable to growth, at some percentage at least.

The reunion at Maysville, Missouri, and now the one at El Dorado Springs, were equally potent for good to the cause, each in its time, place, and sphere. All have left an impression that will not soon be effaced.

Bro. I. N. White and his noble band of coworkers, named in the regular report of the reunion at El Dorado, are entitled to, and do receive much credit for the management of their work, to make it the success that it was. Bro. White's remark, "We just wanted you brethren of the north to know that we of the Southwest Missouri were neither dead nor sleeping." And indeed they are not.

It now remains for the army of occupation, the cohort in the field, to keep the ground won. There will be decided and strong efforts made to prevent fruition coming to the church from the preaching at El Dorado, inasmuch as there are many who heard who are disposed to believe. The effort will be to throw discredit on the workers, and to raise the dust of prejudice to blind them that heard and are likely to judge of the work favorably to both the teachers and the doctrine. In this crisis it will be necessary for the elders to bear in mind that they cannot afford to forfeit the good impression made; and in order to retain it, they must constantly remember that they are Christian gentlemen of the covenant of peace.

Bro. Leonard Scott is to debate at Lowry City, a few miles from El Dorado, with one Elder Briney, of the Disciple Church; and much may depend upon the keeping of temper in just bounds. An angry man is never a safe one, hence it is always the true policy for brethren to hold themselves within the bounds of sobriety, avoiding anger under all circumstances. A man may be very earnest and forcible without being angry, or overvehement in speech.

TEA AND COFFEE, AND GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

A GERMAN physiologist, Schultz-Schultzenstein, Zeitschrift für Physiologische Chemie 18. I., subjected chopped boiled egg to artificial digestion with hydrochloric acid, adding in different cases pure water, tea, and coffee. The percentage of albumen digested by the pure acid was 94, with the water 92, with the tea 66, and with the coffee 61. Thus the addition of pure water affected the digestion little, but the tea and coffee lessened it very materially. In this experiment the egg was chopped into millimeter cubes. In a previous trial, in which the egg was not chopped so fine, the presence of tea and coffee was even more unfavorable.—Literary Digest, May 12, 1894.

A German professor has been investigating in elaborate fashion the effect on processes of digestion produced by the use of tea and coffee. He prepared an artificial gastric juice and mixed it with coagulated egg albumen with and without additions of tea and coffee infusions. While the gastric juice by itself was able to digest 94 per cent of the egg albumen in the space of eight hours, when tea was added the proportion digested was reduced to 66 per cent. When a decoction of coffee was mixed with the albumen the gastric fluid was only able to digest 61 per cent or less than two thirds of the albumen. The digestive power of the gastric juice appeared to vary with the strength of the infusion, the disturbing effect being less when the solutions of tea and coffee were weakened. The professor is of opinion that the deleterious effect produced is due to the tannin which is extracted during the process of making and not to the presence of thein and caffeine, and he mentions that tea which has not been allowed to stand more than three minutes is less injurious because a smaller quantity of this undesirable ingredient, tannin, has been produced than when it is boiled up or left in contact with the leaves for a considerable length of time.—Ex.

We publish the foregoing for the information and consideration of those who have claimed that tea and coffee were not included in the "strong" or "hot" drinks referred to in the Word of Wisdom. We have always understood the Word of Wisdom to warn against and admonish disuse of all drinks that were "strong" or "hot;" that tea and coffee came under its prohibitions, because of the evident ill effects such beverages have upon the system. We have also understood that in the giving of the word referred to, as also in the giving of the general law of the church, each separate evil was not specifically pointed out or enumerated, but that the law of the Spirit was to be written in the heart; was to teach, lead, and guide into all truth; to enable the disciple to grow in ability to discriminate between right and wrong, between truth and error, the lawful and inexpedient, the wise and unwise, etc., leaving to him the right of choice, the consequences of such choice being manifest in the good, the preservation that results from obedience to law; or the opposite resulting from disobedience or disregard of any principle of law.

We have understood the covenant pledge of the gospel to require that the one making it was obliged and privileged to walk in the fullness of the light, to constantly advance by being obedient to every principle of right of which he received an understanding and which he could discern by earnest, sincere seeking; by "hungering after righteousness"—rightness; by seeking to conform to all the principles governing the various phases of being. This, to us, required discrimination and a willingness, a desire, to become free from whatever the written law, or the law of observation and experience—the unwritten law—showed to be absolutely wrong, or injudicious.

For instance; gambling, dancing, horse racing, and many other evils and wrongs are not specifically named in the law; but God's people have been admonished "to forsake all evil and cleave unto all good." The Lord has also said:—

Behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things, for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward. Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, etc.—D. C. 58:6.

Where there is no exercise of discretion, or of enlightened individual judgment, there is little or no growth, and little accomplished by the individual. The testimony of the Spirit of truth confirms not only in force and power to the emotional nature, it reaches both heart and mind, and teaches, unfolds, and gives understanding of principle, of theory, and doctrine. It rightly directs and develops all the faculties of the mind, enabling the recipient to comprehend, to know the things of God; to understand the principles and powers of Godliness. The Word of Wisdom is a portion—not all—of the wisdom of God. Its statements while specific in some respects, are also general, leaving room for the exercise of personal discrimination within the scope of its spirit and the spirit of the general law—the one Spirit—with the promise of "health," "wisdom," "and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures," with other blessings of like precious nature, to those who observe it and keep the commandments. No one can afford to ignore its requirements nor evade its evident meaning. Its promises are great; it shows forth the "order" and "will of God" concerning the temporal and spiritual salvation of his people.

Some may find difficulty in freeing themselves from the hold that habit or habits has fastened upon them. For instance, it may cost one a severe struggle to cease the use of tobacco, to abstain from wine, from the use of the flesh of animals in warm weather, from tea, coffee, etc.; but success will follow a persistent, faithful effort. Individuals have learned that injurious things once liked and indulged in afterwards lose their hold upon them; that the taste or inclination for them disappears. The body as the mind can be educated and disciplined; and, after all, wrong is always weaker than right, other things being equal. In other words, let a true nature be awakened to love and cling to the right—to be constantly hungering and thirsting and seeking for the right—in the spirit and forceful power of the right—he is then growing away from the wrong, learning to see its undesirable character, its evils, its imperfections, and growing constantly into an appreciation of the right, the true, the ennobling, the pure, the strong, the refined, the good. True natures love the good, and complying with it, evil, imperfection, loses and finally ceases to have any hold upon them. They are not attracted by the erroneous, the evil, or the imperfect. They constantly enjoy and are enlivened by the good, the true, the pure, the perfect, the exalting and exalted, in all the principles and works of God. To them are opened the real enjoyments of the spirit of all true principles. They become both strong and tender; powerful, forceful, yet forbearing; patient and loving by nature; sympathetic, but not weak; true, and just, and humble, and loyal—loyal to truth—faithful to God and to one another. Such characters live in life; not in partial life, but in life complete—eternal life. They attain, they comprehend; they become in fact complete in knowledge by comprehending and by doing the will of God in its completeness. They become the elect, the sanctified, the redeemed of God. The Spirit of truth is constantly disclosing to them the purposes of God. They are so in harmony with him that they are prepared for and take up the higher developments that the Almighty designs to or does reveal for the salvation and elevation of man to his destined sphere.

The church in Enoch's day after severe trial and testing reached this exalted condition. Past evils were forgotten and eclipsed, as they will be to all the faithful, in the strength and fullness of their joy and salvation. And we are persuaded that the church of the present culminating dispensation is to reach it ere the Lord brings to pass his strange act and makes bare his arm before all people—to demonstrate to the world that he is the solver of all problems, the perfecter and redeemer of humanity, and his church a demonstration of the possibilities of truth, and of man's capacity—aided by him—to attain to it in fullness.

Law is the expression of God's methods. God's methods are the only true methods; the only laws applicable to the universe of mind and matter governed by them. God expresses himself in law. "O God," said Kepler, when he discovered the laws of planetary motion, "I think again thy thoughts after thee." His laws are the "absolute necessities," and cannot be evaded without loss. Jesus himself did not ignore, nor did he claim to be independent of law, though he was with the Father in the work of creation, and "all things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." He recognized, and understood, and was perfected by the strength and beauty of law. He was true to law, to truth.

Individuals may rise higher and higher, if they will, by endeavoring to comprehend and conform to law in the highest and truest sense. There are fundamental or basic laws, and there are higher or advanced principles of law that carry the individual onward and upward and bring about perfection—life unceasing, eternal. The one who attains it builds solidly from the foundation up. His character is rugged in its strength. It is laid, cemented, firmly fixed, in strong, complete adherence to first principles. Nothing is slighted; he builds solidly, for strong, massive foundations are essential to substantial structures. He passes by no necessary feature of life. While he sees the higher and grander possibilities beyond, he does not ignore the realities and necessities of the present. He is endeavoring always to lift the present to the true conditions of future developments. He does not get above a conception of humanity's needs and has sympathy for its woes and ills. He can reach down and lift up while he points forward and upward. He has the inspiration of strong common sense and practical talent that makes him useful in his sphere as a servant of God—male or female, potent and valuable to the cause of truth in his sphere of action.

The Lord has designed that his Saints shall "inherit," "partake of his goodness;" that while they ask they shall make preparation to receive; shall make it possible for him to answer. Many principles necessary to the salvation of God's people remain yet to be revealed, but cannot be obtained without the preparation of "observing all things" commanded. This is enjoined and required by the admonition, "Come up higher." Shall we not heed the invitation? Shall it be forgotten or disregarded? If not, let the beginning be made now, in little things as well as in greater. We require and must have all good if we "would be perfect"—"perfect and entire, wanting nothing."

Tea and coffee are not the "mild drinks" to be made from "barley," and "other grain." The German physiologist has demonstrated that tea and coffee are to be classed with "strong" drinks—with alcoholic compounds—as neutralizers of digestion; hence their use is injurious, therefore wrong, and prohibited by the laws of nature. They should therefore evidently be classed among the list of things against which the word "warns" and "forewarns." It is well known that the use of both the beverages named is a prolific cause of bilious complaints and nervousness. Coffee and tea are responsible for the headaches and wakeful, restless nights, and irritability of temper of many; of some naturally strong men and women.

Salvation, as we understand it, is a salvation of the whole man; spiritually, morally, and physically. Health is the normal condition, disease is abnormal. Health is essential to clearness of mind, to success; hence obedience to the laws governing it is necessary, is implied in the gospel; in the admonitions, prohibitions, warnings, and promises of the Word of Wisdom, and under the admonition that "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

To users of tea and coffee it may safely be conceded that the term "hot drinks" is prohibitory of the habitual use of any hot liquids. Physiologists have demonstrated that habitual use of liquids of extreme temperature—cold or hot—vitiates the saliva and impairs digestion.

We append a few statements from "Science in the Kitchen," a work written by Mrs. E. E. Kellogg, A. M., "Superintendent of the Sanitarium School of Cookery," "and Chairman of the World's Fair Committee on Food Supplies for Michigan," etc. They are but a few of the number of similar import that might be adduced:—

The use of beverages in quantities with food at mealtime is prejudicial to digestion, because they delay the action of the gastric juice upon solid foods. The practice of washing down food by copious draughts of water, tea, or coffee is detrimental, not only because it introduces large quantities of fluid into the stomach, which must be absorbed before digestion can begin, but also because it offers temptation to careless and imperfect mastication, while tea and coffee also serve as a vehicle for an excessive use of sugar, thus becoming a potent cause of indigestion and dyspepsia. It is best to drink but sparingly, if at all, at mealtimes. Consideration should also be given to the nature of the beverage, since many in common use are far from wholesome. Very cold fluids, like iced water, iced tea, and iced milk, are harmful, because they cool the contents of the stomach to a degree at which digestion is checked. If drunk at all, they should be taken only in small sips and retained in the mouth until partly warmed.

Tea is often spoken of as the "cup that cheers but not inebriates." "The cup that may cheer yet does injury" would be nearer the truth, for there is every evidence to prove that this common beverage is exceedingly harmful, and that the evils of its excessive use are second only to those of tobacco and alcohol. Tea contains two harmful substances, theine and tannin, from three to six per cent of the former and more than one fourth its weight of the latter. Theine is a poison belonging to the same class of poisonous alkaloids, and is closely allied to cocaine. It is a much more powerful poison than alcohol, producing death in less than one hundredth part the deadly dose of alcohol; and when taken in any but the smallest doses, it produces all the symptoms of intoxication. Tannin is an astringent exercising a powerful effect in delaying salivary and stomach digestion, thus becoming one of the most common causes of digestive disorders. It is also a matter of frequent observation that sleeplessness, palpitation of the heart, and various disorders of the nervous system frequently follow the prolonged use of tea. Both theine and tannin are more abundant in green than in black tea.

The dependence of the habitual tea drinker upon the beverage, and the sense of loss experienced when deprived of it, are among the strongest proofs of its evil effects, and should be warnings against its use. No such physical discomfort is experienced when deprived of any article of ordinary food. The use of tea makes one feel bright and fresh when really exhausted; but, like all other stimulants, it is by exciting vital action above the normal without supplying extra force to support the extra expenditure. The fact that a person feels tired is evidence that the system demands rest, that his body is worn and needs repair; but the relief experienced after a cup of tea is not recuperation. Instead, it indicates that his nerves are paralyzed so that they are insensible to fatigue.

Some people suppose the manner of preparing tea has much to do with its deleterious effects, and that by infusion for two or three minutes only, the evils resulting from the tannin will be greatly lessened. This, however, is a delusion, if the same amount of tea be used proportionate to the water; for tannin in its free state, the condition in which it is found in tea is one of the most readily soluble of substances; and tea infused for two minutes is likely to hold nearly as much tannin in solution as that infused for a longer period.

Tea is not a food, and can in no wise take the place of food, as so many people attempt to make it, without detriment to health in every respect.

Coffee, cocoa, and chocolate rank in the same category with tea, as beverages which are more or less harmful. Coffee contains caffeine, a principle identical with theine and a modified form of tannin, though in less quantity than tea. Cocoa and chocolate contain substances similar to theine and equally harmful, though usually present in much less proportion than in tea.

Custom has made the use of these beverages so common that most people seldom stop to inquire into their nature. Doubtless the question arises in many minds, If these beverages contain such poisons, why do they not more commonly produce fatal results?—Because a tolerance of the poison is established in the system by use, as in the case of tobacco and other narcotics and stimulants; but that the poisons surely though insidiously are doing their work is attested by the prevalence of numerous disorders of the digestive and nervous systems, directly attributable to the use of these beverages.

Both tea and coffee are largely adulterated with other harmful substances, thus adding another reason why their use should be discarded. It is stated on good authority that it is almost impossible to obtain unadulterated ground coffee.

"The nervousness and peevishness of our times are chiefly attributable to tea and coffee. The digestive organs of confirmed coffee drinkers are in a state of chronic derangement which reacts on the brain, producing fretful and lachrymose moods. The snappish, petulant humor of the Chinese can certainly be ascribed to their immoderate fondness for tea."—Dr. Bock.

"Dr. Ferguson, an eminent physician who has carefully investigated the influence of tea and coffee upon the health and development of children, says he found that children who were allowed these beverages gained but four pounds a year between the ages of thirteen and sixteen, while those who had been allowed milk instead, gained fifteen pounds in weight during the same period."

LEND US YOUR EAR A MOMENT.

For the lack of money is the root of our apprehension, and delinquents cause perplexity of spirit.—Herald Office proverbs for 1894.

The above is written under inspiration resulting from an inspection of our Herald Office accounts and the consideration of the unpaid bills that haunt by day and night; and never was heart moved more fervently to appeal for relief to those from whom help is due.

It is one thing to intrust men with the management of an important business such as connects with the Board of Publication, and quite another thing to support them in their endeavor to carry out our wishes.

At best, and when the conditions of trade throughout the country are prosperous, it is about all the Herald Office can do to balance accounts and preserve credit, for the reason that it has not the reserve capital to publish large editions of its works and wait for gradual sales, therefore must purchase in smaller quantities the material requisite, and often repeat the work of printing; and for the further reason that its free circulation of tracts and added improvements to the periodicals, exhausts the revenue that might otherwise accumulate. It has not sought to hold money in reserve, but to invest every incoming dollar in a way that would help extend the work.

Hence, when times of financial depression, such as have for a couple of years frowned upon the country, come, they fall with painful heaviness upon an institution that is dependent almost every month upon the income of that month. Then it is that its absolute reliance upon the interest of its individual supporters is demonstrated. Any relaxation at such times, or any failure to keep individual accounts with the office square, is almost fatal to the institution, as it has no other recourse except to go into debt. The Herald Office has already gone far enough in that direction.

We have felt reluctant to call upon the Saints in this way, but the present conditions are such as to render this appeal unavoidable.

If every subscriber who is in arrears and all who owe on book and tract accounts would make a special effort just now and pay up, it would add a leverage to their prayers for our success that would pry us out of the mire of despondency and set the office square with its creditors.

Will the office agents and the ministry generally not interest themselves in this matter and help by special effort to dispose of church publications and secure a settlement of accounts due the office? Will not those who know themselves to be indebted to the office put forth in faith, an extra effort to liquidate their present indebtedness and thus relieve the office management?

This appeal is not born of desire but of pressing necessity, and all failures to respond will prolong the perplexity of those in charge and inflict upon them a humiliation that should not be added to their present burden of unselfish toil and sacrifice. Come up to our help, Saints, and come quickly.

OFFERING MISSIONARIES.

THE following brethren sent their names stating their willingness to take the Sandwich or the Society Islands Mission, if their services were acceptable and the Spirit, or the Master said "Go;" and suitable arrangements made them available.

Elder W. Corbett of London, Ontario; Daniel McGregor of St. Thomas, Ontario; Frank J. Pierce of Lee's Summit, Missouri; H. N. Davis of Manteno, Iowa; Brn. Hubert and Oscar Case of Moorhead, Iowa; G. F. Albertson of Fairview, Michigan; F. J. Potter of Clinton, Iowa; Jasper H. VanMeter and Sherman Wightman of Lamoni, Iowa; Adolph E. Madison of Underwood, Iowa; V. W. Gunsolley of Des Moines, Iowa (at school); Harry M. Atwell of Rich Hill, Missouri; and William Young of Oconto, Nebraska. In connection, the name of Bro. Jonas Drury of Brownville, Nebraska, was suggested by two of the brethren by his knowledge, as we understand it.

We are much pleased that there was so hearty a response to the call, and assure the several brethren that when the matters connected with the missions shall be finally settled upon, correspondence will be entered upon, and the selection made as wisdom and the Spirit shall direct.

It is evident that at present all cannot go, and when any one or more shall be chosen, it must not be taken amiss by those not selected that they are not the ones sent. The Lord is surely preparing means to send his truth abroad, and we must be ready to do what we can—which we believe all will say amen to.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. F. G. PITT wrote from Chicago, of the late Plano conference:—

Our conference at Plano just closed. A very enjoyable time was had. Brn. W. W. Blair and A. H. Smith were with us and rendered excellent service. Bro. Smith leaves tomorrow; Bro. Blair remains a few days to answer an Advent, who has been making it lively here on the Sabbath question. I leave tomorrow for Peoria to organize a branch in that city. All is well.

Bro. Blair was at Plano, Illinois, October 15, and had presented and defended the present usage of the church in the observance of the Lord's day, as a rest day in three discourses, which were listened to by houses full of interested hearers. Rev. Scholes of the Advent Church was to review, and Bro. Blair would remain to look after the work. He wrote:—

Had excellent conference here the 12th to 14th inst. Saints are joyful and resolute, and prospects are good all through this district. Will remain here over the 21st inst., preaching the word, God willing. Bro. Alexander came Saturday and feels joyful and strong.

Bro. M. M. Turpen wrote from Garland, Alabama, the 15th inst.:—

District conference just closed here; one baptized, and there was a splendid attendance. It was estimated that about five hundred were present on Sunday. Bro. Heman had splendid liberty in preaching. We think good was done.

Bro. J. M. Terry, St. Joseph, Missouri, October 15:—

Had splendid meetings yesterday and quite well attended: so the work moves.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ACCORDING to the Knox correspondent of the North Judson News Bro. S. W. L. Scott was successful in defeating Clark Braden on every proposition in the late discussion at Knox. Items in the News of the 4th and 11th highly commend the gentlemanly conduct of Bro. Scott, while the course pursued by Mr. Braden is severely condemned and ridiculed. It requires courage, and forbearance, and wisdom to refute such malicious attacks upon the faith. We are pleased to see the brethren exercise the virtues named in maintaining the honor of the cause and the dignity of the ministerial office.

The Toronto Mail of the 8th inst. and the London Advertiser, of the 8th and 9th, leading newspapers in Canada, contain quite full accounts of the semi-annual conference of the Chatham district. The Saints and brethren of the Dominion have labored faithfully to advance the interests of the cause, to give it the prestige its worth deserves. Its representation in them has secured for them and the church grace and favor in the eyes of the Canadian people. May continued success attend their labors.

Those brethren who offered for the Islands' mission, all expressed an entire willingness to go if the Lord might so appoint. All were devoted to the Master's cause, being desirous that the word be made to prosper without regard to selfish interest or purpose. The spirit breathed by them in their letters was a good one, indicating faith and trust in the Lord and the cause.

The gospel boat, the Evanelia, continues to attract considerable attention and has already been an excellent advertisement of our work. The Pacific Commercial Advertiser of October 4, published at Honolulu, Hawaii, has a column article, with double column illustration, of "the missionary schooner Evanelia." We are indebted to Bro. G. J. Waller for the Advertiser.

Letters are received from Bro. F. M. Slover, Rector, Illinois, and Sr. Carrie Maughan, Providence, Van Zandt county, Texas. Sr. Maughan wished to hear from Saints in Van Zandt, Wood, or Titus counties, and to see missionaries there. She recommends that region for homeseekers. Will answer inquiries.

In addresses of General Sunday School Association officers given in last issue read, E. A. Blakeslee superintendent.

Bro. George Montague expects to start for his mission south on the 25th inst.

Orders for the seventy-five cent edition of the Saints' Harp can be filled at any time.

Read the article, "Differences in human nature," in this issue. It sets forth the basic principles of a broad, liberal education.

Arrivals and departures: President Joseph Smith, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and Bro. A. S. Cochran from the El Dorado, Missouri, reunion on the 16th; Bro. J. R. Lambert from Western Iowa and Bro. I. N. Roberts from Minnesota and South Dakota on the 17th. Brn. F. A. Smith, C. Scott, and F. M. Weld to the Des Moines district; Bro. and Sr. William Anderson and Bro. C. H. Jones to St. Louis, and Bishop Kelley to Dow City, Iowa, on the 19th inst.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Loving words would cost but little,
Journeying up the hill of life,
But they make the weak and weary
Stronger, braver for the strife.
Do you count them only trifles?
What to earth are sun and rain?
Never was a kind word wasted,
Never one was said in vain."

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.—No. 3.

WE knew a woman who never learned to write, and why? The balance of her head was superior to the average, but her advantage for learning was limited, and besides her teacher discouraged her. A teacher should realize that a pupil must have practice in any branch of study in order to be skillful in it. Children in her day were not taught to write as young as at the present; were not allowed to make their first attempt until ten or twelve and perhaps older. She was embarrassed, consequently her hand could not move with ease. Her teacher noticed her movement and exclaimed: "How awkward you are! Why don't you go to work as you ought to? You don't know a pen from a sled stake!" His words and manner of speaking brought such pain and bitterness into her soul she could not make another effort in writing, and the wound was never healed while she lived.

Her sister, a girl about fourteen, ripped her brother's cap that was defaced, and turned it, then cut and made one for her father, by permission of her mother. She was much elated with her success, so took it to her oldest sister's home expecting a word of praise from her as well as from her mother; but instead of the coveted praise she received censure. She did not understand how to set the crown in even, so it was too full on one side. Not one word of praise was given, but the defect was pointed out in a cold tone and by unfeeling words. She took it home feeling disappointed and sad, but her father wore it all the same, and that revived her courage. Many, very many similar instances transpired in that girl's youth, but they did not crush her ambition, only checked it for a moment, then in nearly every case a stronger desire to excel was the result. She resolved to become more skillful in all kinds of sewing than that sister was. No one knew of her determination till after it was accomplished. As soon as age would permit, she obtained a chance to partly work her board, and gave time and work to learn how to make clothes for men; later learned to work on dresses, after which she did some work for that sister and her child free of charge. Such was the result of discouraging words in her case.

We know a boy whose father almost invariably scorned his ideas and efforts in work or play, which is a child's own work, and kept it up till he was a man. Such a course of treatment created doubt and fear in his mind, which crushed his ambition and aspirations in such a degree people often spoke of his stupid, indifferent appearance. Only his nearest connections knew the facts of the case, till he was out from his father's influence, and time and opportunity broke the fetters of his mind. His acquaintances were surprised and pleased with his success, but the writer was not at all surprised, for she saw the cause in its first stage, and feared the result, and she also believed that when the chain was broken he would manifest his ability in work and business, and his manifestation was superior to his father's. 'Tis a narrow-minded person that will try to check the proper ambition or pure aspirations of the young. Where would be the improvements of our age if every father had confined his son's mind in a nutshell?

We have given only a few cases out of the many that have come under our observation, and they have been given in very pale colors; and only one out of our abundant experience, and we wish to say to the young, right here, that in nearly every instance when opposing forces arising from either friend or foe, met us, we have, after regaining our minds' balance, carried out our plan according to our judgment,—and in some cases it was superior to the judgment of those who dictated to us. The reader can see that the discouraging talk in the cases mentioned did not have a similar effect. The critics in either case did not think of results, but spoke from impulse and habit. Encouraging words must have been of great worth to the actors in the first and last instances, and they could not have injured the girl who made the cap.

Some people take pleasure in showing up to the young their imperfections, and never give an encouraging word in regard to their good qualities. Such a course will tend to excite a spirit of opposition which will cause a habitual contention between the old and the young. Thus has many a childhood been blighted.

We say to all connected with children, Give them as happy a childhood as the circumstances will possibly admit; 'tis only one that they can have, and that will quickly pass. Each can draw rich lessons from personal experience that will benefit the rising generation—gather up the crumbs that nothing be lost.

SR. ALMIRA.

Dear Sisters:—As I have been separated from the Saints a greater part of the time for several years, how much good I have derived from your various words of comfort and admonition none but myself can ever know. This Sabbath afternoon my family have gone to Sunday school (which is four miles), and not being able to accompany them I write a short communication, hoping it may cheer some one.

I feel that I am one of the weakest of the Saints. I have been an invalid for the past five years; but O what a light shining in darkness has this gospel of the kingdom been to me during these long months and years of trials and affliction! How the tears of joy and gladness have coursed down my cheeks at various times as I have read the words of comfort and cheer from our dear mothers in Zion! When weighed down with afflictions, and having a family of quite small children needing a mother's care, and being poor in this world's goods, sometimes in human blindness I have felt my lot was hard. But when stopping to consider I would think, Hard indeed would it be were it not for the cheering rays of the gospel to illumine the pathway. For I do know, in sickness or in health, the darkness only comes when we cease to do our duty, when we cease to trust our heavenly Father as we should. Then, and then only, will the true saint of God feel he is groping his way instead of walking in the light of God. We may not know or understand why continual fasting and prayer upon our part and oft repeated prayers on the part of the Saints in our behalf do not have the desired effect (to remove our afflictions), but we do know that God in his infinite wisdom does all things well. So we continue to pray for a faith that will endure to the end and not be shaken by any earthly woe.

You who have health and strength and oft-times think the pathway hard, just stop for a moment and consider. Might it not be harder were you compelled to lie upon a bed of sickness for months at a time, and perhaps not walk a step without the aid of crutches? or again only able for weeks, yes, months, to go from room to room as you are drawn in a chair by some other member of the family? I know things usually go well when mother is able to attend to the every want of the household, but when she becomes the care of the family things have quite a different aspect. Yet, if we are trusting in the promises given to the Saints we can pass many pleasant, yes, happy, hours, under such circumstances. We can teach our children many beautiful lessons which perhaps no one but a mother could. We can teach them many useful things, and especially teach them the Sabbath school lesson, hunting up all the other scriptures throwing light upon it, thereby getting them thoroughly acquainted with it, and storing their minds with both good and useful knowledge. And while so doing we are refreshing our own minds and oft-times learning things we did not understand before. For as surely as we are trying to help others along we are advancing ourselves.

I shall give one bit of my past experience, hoping it may benefit some young mother. I think it was seven years last April when I received some Heralds from a sister living in Lamoni, and while looking them over I saw an article in the Home Column written by an older sister (her name I have forgotten) admonishing the younger sisters to pray for and with their children while they were small, as the task would be much easier if begun then than to wait until they were older; and if at times we could not see that much good was being accomplished, yet it would bear fruit; if it were after we had passed away from earth, the prayer of faith would be answered. I stopped and reread and pondered carefully the matter over; and my mind went back to my childhood and to the mother whom I had so often heard sing the good old hymn,

"In seasons of grief to my God I'll repair,

When my heart is overwhelmed with sorrow and care."

And although she has long since been laid away from earth's cares, I could yet in my fancy hear her praying for her children as in days of yore, who, I fear, were more often willful and disobedient, and perhaps caused her many a pang of sorrow. I thought, Why have I neglected my children, my own little ones, whom I love so dearly? Did I not love to hear mother pray? Why have I been too timid to pray with my children, although I daily pray for them? I resolved from that time forward to pray at least once a day with my children. So I arose, called them to me, and retiring to a small bed room, for the first time in life asked the blessings of God upon my little ones in their presence. Small as the task may seem, to me it was quite a trial, but after continuing in this for some time I concluded to erect the family altar which, considering my extreme youth, was another trial (as I was but twenty-two, having married when little more than a child). But having once begun, day by day grace sufficient for my need was given, and I still continued until my health was such that I could no longer kneel. But O what a consolation to have the children (though none of their ages exceeded eleven years) keep up what I had begun in weakness, and many were the prayers offered up around my bedside for God to spare mamma. Moreover, my husband, who so sorely persecuted, at first, has gone into the watery grave, coming forth to walk in newness of life, thus bringing joy unspeakable to my heart. He has since told us it was only our persistence in prayer that caused him to yield to the better promptings of his heart. Dear sisters, let us strive earnestly, prayerfully, and patiently, for we know not the good we may do. I ask to be remembered in the prayers of all the faithful that I may endure to the end.

Yours in love,

ADRIA ELLEN.

ARGENT'S HILL, N. S. W.

Dear Sisters:—We feel very thankful that we are still permitted to live in this day and age of the world and have the privilege of reading the glad news in the Herald which comes from every quarter of the globe.

I was baptized by Bro. J. F. Burton November 21, 1886. I was eleven years old. My parents both belong to the church, and three of my sisters and two brothers. I hope to see all join in the near future.

My dear father was taken with a paralytic stroke five years ago. He was administered to and was healed. He was taken again two years ago, and we sent for the elders and he got well again, but eleven weeks ago he was taken again, and lost all the use of his limbs, and his speech, too. We had to drag him about for about a month. Mother had to look after him like a child. He has improved wonderfully these last few weeks; can walk a little, and can feed himself sometimes. I know it is by the power of the Lord that dear father is restored to his strength. Both father and mother are firm believers in this latter-day work, and I hope they ever shall be.

We had Brn. Kaler and Wells with us three weeks. They left us this morning and we feel it very lonely. It was two years last January since we had a missionary here, and that is a long time. I hope it will not be so long again. Bro. Wells baptized four last Sunday morning, three girls and one boy. There are quite a number in this branch now, and there seems to be a great interest. If we are not left too long for it to go down again I believe there will be more join very soon.

I have been reading one of the last month's Heralds, and my heart swells with gratitude to my heavenly Father when I see the progress that is being made in this glorious work, and that his people and ministers are beginning to find favor in the sight of men. O that the people in this country would throw aside their prejudice and investigate the principles of this latter-day work. We hope that we may ever stand firm as the everlasting hills to the covenant we have made with Christ which we have never regretted, but can truly say that we are very thankful we ever heard the sound of the everlasting gospel. It appears to us by the signs of the times that the approach of the Son of man is near, even at the doors. Let us all strive diligently that we may be worthy to go out to meet him lest another take our crown. May God bless the effort that is put forth by the dear brothers and sisters of Zion. I ask an interest in your faith and prayers, that dear father may still keep getting stronger, if it is the Lord's will. With best desire for Zion's welfare I remain, your sister in the covenant of peace,

EMMA ARGENT.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

"If we could push ajar the gates of life,
And stand within and all God's working see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery could find a key.

"But not to-day. Then be content, poor heart!
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white, unfold;
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart.
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold."

Thursday, Oct. 18.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 4: 8, 9.

Thursday, Oct. 25.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Romans 11: 21-23.

Bishop William Boyd Carpenter of Ripon, England, is the court preacher. A story is told of him that when he was asked how he managed to address so exalted a personage as the sovereign and yet maintain his composure, he replied that he never addressed her at all. He knew there would be present the Queen, the Princes, the household, the servants down to the scullery-maid. "And," said the Bishop, "I preach to the scullery-maid and the Queen understands me."

They who treasure up the words of Christ as found in the three books will not be deceived.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—I am laboring in Crescent and vicinity every Sunday. One gave his name for baptism two weeks ago; thus one by one they come; there are others near the kingdom. I felt cheered and comforted at the World's Reunion at Logan. Bro. Joseph Smith's presence at the reunion did the Saints much good. I attended the Brighamite conference held here, some three weeks ago and heard Mr. Hall of Temple Lot suit fame give his reasons why he left the Reorganization and joined the Utah Church. He endeavored to slander Bro. William Marks and others of the Reorganization and to misrepresent facts. We felt to pity the poor soul, knowing he was wrong. The Reorganization needs no such falsehood as he presents to sustain it. The law and the testimony of God's Holy Spirit bear witness of the truth of the calling of Young Joseph (the name by which we called him twenty years ago) to the prophetic office. I wanted to ask Hall some questions at the close of the meeting. The president said they were in the habit of answering questions, but it was late; they would have to withhold the right to-night; and, farther, the heads of their church counseled their elders not to discuss with others. How the mighty have fallen!

Bro. Joseph Smith gave us three good discourses last week, an especially good one last Sunday night. A very large number of people came out to hear him. I have heard a great many outsiders speak very highly of his preaching. Come again, Bro. Joseph; many of the old Latter Day Saints' children live here. They love you, and speak kindly of you, and wish you well. Bro. T. W. Williams is here and doing well. He is very well liked by those out and in the church. I think he is doing a good work.

Yours in bonds,

D. K. DODSON.

LOGAN, Utah, Oct. 11.

Editors Herald:—I arrived at this place on the 6th inst., being sent for to preach the funeral sermon of our aged Sister Johanson, who had passed away. I found the Saints in the faith, but was sorry to learn that jealousy and hard feelings had marred their peace; but I hope their trials in the past may serve as a lesson for them in the future, and be sanctified for their good.

I had an appointment at Lehi to preach there on Sunday night, September 30, Bishop Cutler having beforehand promised me the use of the tabernacle at that time; and, more than that, had said he would so announce in their meetings and I would have a good congregation. I, however, feared that he might forget, and advertised in the local paper, the Lehi Banner, and spread the news as best I could. But the Bishop, or whoever was in charge, did not forget; but instead of announcing as was promised, told the people that I would not preach, leaving the impression on their minds that I had sent word that I would not be there. I received a letter from the Bishop informing me that the tabernacle would be otherwise engaged and for that reason I could not use it. I was on hand, however, to see what important matter was going on to cause the Bishop to go back on his word and to seek a chance to make an explanation if I found a gathering there. I only found about a dozen persons who had met to transact business pertaining to Sunday school work. But the Banner gave me a chance to explain the matter in its columns for which I feel grateful. I was also pleased to find that the action of the Bishop was disapproved of by many. I intend to labor around here for a time, then to work my way southward again. I do not believe in running over so much territory. The scattered Saints want to be visited and often wonder what the elders are doing unless they come around once in a while. Yours for the right,

H. N. HANSEN.

DOWNEY, Cal., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—Having waited patiently for some more able pen than ours to inform your many readers how the gospel wins its way in this Southern California country, and having seen nothing from here for some time, we will now try to perform the duty we owe one other, as I love to peruse your pages, to learn of the work in all countries and climes; and I think if I could only afford one paper in my house, you should be that one before all others. I have been a reader of your pages for, I think, about thirty years, and my interest in your welfare has increased with the years we have worked together. I certainly cannot see how it is possible for any that claim to be interested in the church and its welfare to be without your pages to inform them of all important things taking place both in and out of the church, with which your pages are replete.

There has been a series of meetings of four weeks' duration held in Los Angeles since our reunion here. The tent used to hold the reunion in was moved from this place to Los Angeles, a distance of twelve miles, and placed in the suburbs of the east side of the city, and our beloved brethren, M. H. Forscutt and Joseph F. Burton, commenced labor and continued a week or more together, when Bro. Burton was called by Bishop E. L. Kelley to assist in fitting out the gospel boat to be sent to the Islands, while our worthy Bro. M. H. Forscutt continued the preaching, with the assistance of D. L. Harris, our district president, which has resulted in the addition of nine more by baptism to our branch in Los Angeles, and there are two more to soon unite by baptism. So your readers can see that gospel labor faithfully performed by God's servants has resulted in good here. And I wish to say, that if it had not been for a tent we could not have had so much preaching; and I might say none at all in the city, as we could not get halls to preach in. We are not able to afford to hire a hall all the time to be at our special command, so by the use of the tent good has resulted, and just how much, time alone can tell.

We of Los Angeles branch feel a deep sense of gratitude to our heavenly Father for permitting so able and efficient a servant as Bro. M. H. Forscutt to assist in accomplishing the work that has been done, and trust that his life may be spared and health and strength be given him to accomplish much more in this great work that he has been engaged in so many years and for which he has sacrificed so much. We have long been acquainted and are growing old together with many others, whom we knew when our hair was not streaked with silver threads; and our interest and friendship for those associated with us in early days in this greatest and best of all works has not lessened, but has increased, the same as it has for you, dear Herald; and we desire the ultimate success of all God's children in righteousness. And to such as may have grown weary and have been overcome by the cares of life, so that the word has been choked that it has not been as fruitful as it should have been, we say, Renew your covenant with God and increase your diligence. Do not lay by your armor, for the time draws near when our sorrows will be turned into joy and the cause we were willing to sacrifice the pleasures of earth for will triumph.

Dear brethren and sisters, press on to the mark of eternal perfection, determined to reap the celestial reward, that you may come forth in the first resurrection and feast at the supper of Jesus the Lord. That this may be our happy lot is the prayer of your brother and sister in the gospel of God's dear Son,

NELSON and ABBIE VAN FLEET.

BOYNE CITY, Mich., Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—It has been a long, long time since I wrote a letter to the Herald. It seemed that I could do so little good, but when I read the letters of other sisters it makes me more anxious, and gives me a greater desire to do more and to be more conformed to the divine will of my heavenly Father; and to-day finds me striving to learn more, and to let my light shine so that others of my neighbors may come to this glorious light of God and be partakers of it. We are colored people. I do thank God that we heard the gospel preached in its purity, and that he gave us hearts to obey it. O, my prayer to God is that more and more of my race may hear this gospel and obey.

ELIZA BRACY.

ELLINWOOD, Kan., Oct. 18.

Editors Herald:—The work in this part of Kansas is improving slowly. I am greatly encouraged with some new openings that I have made recently. The Lord is truly leading me in this missionary work for which I feel to adore his holy name. I am working alone; no help whatever, only what I receive through the aid of the blessed Spirit. I am meeting with better success than I expected, for I have allayed mountains of prejudice and brought some into the fold. Last Saturday the water was troubled again and an intelligent lady took passage on board the gospel ship. Two weeks ago I baptized in the Arkansas River.

I have had the pleasure of leading eight precious souls into the waters of baptism since the General Conference, and I pray that they may remain steadfast unto the end and merit the reward of the faithful. I start to-morrow for Beeler, one hundred and twenty miles west. I was there in August and preached some seventeen times in the country, and by the urgent request of the Saints there I return to labor with them a month. Yours in bonds,

J. M. BROWN.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—I had the satisfaction of baptizing two into the Blair branch at De Soto last Friday. On Saturday I came here to attend district conference which convened on Sunday. The district Sunday school association held two sessions at the church on Saturday. A good programme was rendered to a well-filled house in the evening, and all seemed pleased with the efforts made. The services of the conference were well attended, and good interest was manifested. The business of the meeting passed off pleasantly, and good feeling prevailed. A goodly number of visitors were in attendance, and all enjoyed the occasion.

By invitation of the branch president (Bro. Armstrong) I occupied the pulpit on Monday and Tuesday evenings, and discoursed the gospel to good and attentive congregations. The calls for preaching are numerous, and we are responding to them as fast as practicable. The official members are responding well to the calls made upon them, and seem determined to make greater efforts for the accomplishment of good. I go to Union today and shall hold a few meetings at the Ervin schoolhouse.

Your brother,

C. H. PORTER.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—From week to week I greet your "Herald of truth" with joy, and am refreshed in spirit by its perusal. It does me good to read of the different brethren baptizing their twos, fours, sixes, or eighteens. Such reports indicate advancement numerically. There is another species of advance equally important, if not more so, even growth spiritually; and I am glad to note this also, and to report the same for St. Joseph. While we have our incumbrances, yet grace to bear, and labor, and advance is afforded.

We had a little touch of that old-fashioned back-woods persecution at one of our suburban missions on last Tuesday night. Bro. S. Brooks attended in a buggy and hitched his horse at the side of the house; but in a few minutes he discovered his horse was loose, and upon examination found that the line with which it was fastened had been cut. It was an act of pure persecution, and it made us feel glad to think we were worthy of it. We were glad, too, to see Bro. Brooks take it so good naturedly. We have some sickness, but blessing almost invariably follows the ordinance.

Bro. John W. Peterson was with us a few days, enroute northward. We wish him great success in his mission field. Bishop E. L. Kelley looks in on us occasionally, but that is about all; too full of important business to tarry long at a place. With praise to God for his benefits,

Your brother in Christ,

J. M. TERRY.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kans., Oct. 18.

Editors Herald:—After the reunion in August I went home the 21st of August to stay for a few weeks, and while there was taken with chills and fever, which detained me from my field about one month. I left home for my field on the 11th of October; went to Atchison on that day; preached in the Saints' church on the night of the 12th. I heard of one ready for baptism, and it was said he wanted me to attend to it; but I thought best to leave it to local authority lest I might gather in others' fruit. From there I went to Netawaka, where I found quite a number of Saints gathered for conference. We had a very good session. I spoke twice and enjoyed myself very well among good Saints.

I am now in my field ready to do work for the Master. I have been improving in health since I left home. There is considerable sickness around my home, two miles south of Richmond. Six children have died of diphtheria in two weeks, and Sr. Framton also died during that time, from some kind of fever. I shall preach here for a few nights; will go then to Hollis, Kansas, and other points as the way may open. I will say to the Saints of Northwestern Kansas district that if they wish my labors in their neighborhood they can address me at Blue Rapids, and I will render all the assistance I can.

Yours,

R. L. WARE.

AMHERST, N. S., Oct. 7.

Editors Herald:—I am to-day comfortably domiciled at the pleasant home of Sr. Quigley and her charming family, expecting to speak this afternoon and evening. My congregation will no doubt be small, on account of the prevailing sentiment that we are the "making of a bad lot." We shall keep on telling them, however, that it is possible for good to come out of Nazareth.

I have just come from Williamsdale, where we held a number of very interesting meetings. The attendance was good, and the interest never better. The good will toward this work in that place is remarkable. Their hospitality and kindness can hardly be excelled. And no home can be made more agreeable for the elders than that of Bro. and Sr. Hazen Johnson. May the good Lord reward for all their trouble, as well as all others who seem to think it a pleasure to provide for the comfort of the traveler. I cannot name them all, but may they know that I appreciate it all, and, what is far better, that there is a "book of remembrance" kept. I wish to acknowledge the receipt of a purse of over twenty-two dollars presented to me from the Saints and friends at this time, also about seventeen dollars, the result of a pie "social" for the benefit of Bro. U. W. Greene and myself some three months ago.

If space would permit I could write more particularly concerning Bro. Greene's visit among us last summer. Suffice it to say that his labors were well accepted in all the different places he visited. He also made many friends for himself. At Williamsdale there were six baptized: Bro. and Sr. Watson Felmore and their daughter-in-law, Etta, of Amherst; Bro. William Payne, Sr. Bertie Taylor, and Lois Graham of Wentworth, the latter now teaching in Williamsdale. I could speak in the highest terms of all these, but it is not necessary. It is refreshing to know that they are striving to let their light shine by faith and good works. I also baptized two brothers (not of the flesh) this last time, whom we have been looking to see obey for a long time, having given the work a thorough investigation; namely, Thomas Murphy and Hazen-Johnson. Others are very near. They all seem determined to keep the work moving.

I go to Rawdon next week, where we hold a conference and Sunday school concert; then, according to instructions from our missionary in charge, will proceed into Maine. The work is slowly onward in Nova Scotia; the whole province seems to be encased in cast iron bands of priest-begotten prejudice that will take years to break. Of course it will break sometime, and then those that suffer long and patiently for conscience' sake can breath freely. O, what a huge fraud "modern Christianity" is! However, we look for the time when the world will be no longer cursed with it. In the meantime it is our duty to show a better system, both in theory and practice. I feel encouraged to go forward and am striving for the mastery.

Yours,

H. J. DAVISON.

FOR SLEEPLESS ONES.

If you fear a sleepless night undress in the dark. Light stimulates and arouses the activities. Darkness is supposed to produce drowsiness. Put some chopped ice in a rubber bag and place it at the lower extremity of the spine. This is particularly quieting to the nerves. Do not use anything except a rubber bag, or you will surely have a damp cloth and rheumatism by morning.

Do not use a pillow. Relax every muscle as far as it is possible. Sprawl over the bed with arms and legs stretched out. Take a sponge bath with tepid water just before going to bed.

Lie on your face instead of on your back. That is the way babies sleep and their methods are scarcely to be improved upon in this particular. All pressure is removed from the spine by this means and a delicious feeling of restfulness ensues.

Make up your mind that you want to keep awake long enough to hear some one come in to outline the next day's work. You will drop asleep immediately.—New York World.

AN EXPERIMENT IN CO-OPERATION.

Agneta Park near Delft, in Holland, is the result of an interesting experiment in co-operation. A tract of ten acres has upon it one hundred and fifty houses, each with its little garden and with certain common buildings and common grounds. The houses are occupied by the employees of a great distilling company, who form a corporation which owns the park. Each member owns shares in the corporation and pays rent for his house; the surplus after expenses are paid comes back to him as dividends. If he wishes to go away or dies, his shares are bought up by the corporation and sold to the man who takes his place.

Original Articles.

THE RESURRECTION.

I HAVE read with some interest the recent articles in the Herald on the resurrection. I do not wish to become a party in the controversy, but to put my thoughts in the form of a question or questions. We are commanded to study these problems, and promised the aid of the Spirit in doing so. I know of no better way than to ask questions and compare ideas. I fully endorse the policy pursued by the Herald in this regard.

Whether there is a difference between what the brethren call a literal and a spiritual body, does not alter the fact that both (if there are two kinds) are indestructible, this we learn from Book of Mormon, Alma 8: 8, 10, 11:—

Now this restoration shall come to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, both the wicked and the righteous. . . . I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; that is from death: even from the first death, unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption.

Here it is clearly stated that all, wicked and righteous, are to come forth with bodies that shall never be destroyed, with bodies called "immortal" and "spiritual." From this it would seem that an immortal body is not necessarily a glorified body, and immortality not always a condition of happiness, the same with regard to a spiritual body. Are these conclusions correct?

Farther: If wicked spirits are to possess such bodies that cannot be destroyed, what is the second death? If it be held that the wicked will thus inherit bodies and life that cannot be destroyed, will they not be precisely in the condition that God made arrangements to and did prevent in the garden of Eden, "lest he put forth his hand . . . and eat, and live forever"? Turn on the light, brethren.

HIRAM L. HOLT,

FALLS CITY, Oregon, 1894.

THE DANIEL-WILLIAMS DEBATE.

ON October 2, in the village of Shelburn, Sullivan county, Indiana, the above-named parties met in debate in the Christian chapel. The contest lasted four days, with both morning and evening sessions of two hours each. The war waxed warm from the first meeting; the interest increased from the word go. The attendance increased, and remarkably so in the evenings, till the last nights, when they jammed and overflowed, looked wishfully in at the windows, and many were turned away. We were at first annoyed in obtaining a suitable chairman, when finally the pro tem abdicated in favor of a Baptist preacher, who did fairly well. The congregation kindly furnished the singing. We had the devotional part in our care half of the time, as also I was our brother's moderator.

When the reverend adventurer ran wild, ridiculous, and too far away from the truth, I was found on my feet in order to call him to time a little. Considerable side issues were sprung, and much sparring and sharp-shooting were indulged in. The litigants were both given to too much caricaturing, personating, ridiculing; as well as sarcasm, irony, and witticisms; by times bordering on to buffoonery, in my humble opinion. They appeared to be deeply in earnest, however, and perhaps these slight deviations from staid sobriety were intended to give variety of expression, zest to the entertainment, the exposition of error, and the elucidation of truth in the rough.

Elder Williams, of the so-called "Church of Christ," was as loquacious as a trained parrot, as jovial as an Irishman, as dogmatic as a coxcomb, as unscrupulous as a horse jockey, and as persistent as the ebbing and flowing tides of the deep. Tell it not in Gath that he actually had the presumptuous hardihood to affirm that "The church of which I, W. H. Williams, am a member is the church founded by Christ and the apostles in teaching and doctrine." Our man in lieu thereof maintained that "The church of which I, L. F. Daniel, am a member is the Church of Jesus Christ in organization and doctrine."

E. G. Denny, the person our brother crossed theological swords with last March, was the other controversialist's referee, or second. The Christian brotherhood took their medicine, but not until they had been unmercifully trounced, severely chastised, and completely flogged, and then they shabbed off and made wry faces, etc.

While this pseudo-minister was in the affirmative he read and gave some definitions of the term "church," and told how many times the word could be found both in the plural and singular numbers. He laid down the eight unities, principles, or planks as set forth in Ephesians 4, and then begged the question by assuming them and the very things in controversy. He then denied that his thing that he dubbed as "the church" was the institution with a succession of popes, cardinals, bishops, or ordinances, or anything of the kind. He was loud to let us know, in his own mind, that they abandoned all creeds. In his judgment they had run the old Jerusalem survey, and thereby had found the ancient landmarks, and had planted the seed of the kingdom, which is the word of God. He claimed that "the Church of Christ" was set up on the day of Pentecost, averring if before that event the kingdom existed it would be destitute of a king; or, "should you find a church it would be acephalous, or a body without a head."

Our brother swept away these unsupported and groundless statements by showing the remote antiquity of the gospel, and that God was no respecter of persons; and that Christ was in the church away back in Moses' time while it was in the wilderness. He also demonstrated that Jesus Christ had his church on foot and in motion, and that he was the head thereof, before the tragedy of Calvary.

Instead of sowing and reaping the good old gospel wheat, this vain toiler was scattering broadcast the degenerate and sooty cheat of old Babylon. He quoted voluminously, and tried to make Daniel 2: 44, 45, refer to his makeshift of a church of Christ. He denied the well-authenticated facts of true history; that is, that Alexander Campbell organized, set up, established, and set in motion his church. He said if Elder Daniel could find where "repentance and remission of sins" was preached before Pentecost, he would yield the floor and this debate would come to an abrupt close. He denied the operation, power, and inspiration of the Holy Ghost before that auspicious day, as also the remission of sins; the coronation of Christ; his glorification, salvation, and about everything else. In his blind, reckless, heartless zeal to maintain his shabby hobby he alleged that we tried to have a church "before Christ existed." The baptism of the Holy Ghost he limited to their high day, and the household of Cornelius, just as smart Alex. and all his imitators did and still do, to be true to their parentage. Since the apostles died all miracles, signs, and revelations ceased, and that was the end of the "inspired age;" therefore "all the old prophets are dead, and the new ones are liars."

Matthew 16: 18, he repeated frequently, as well as Ephesians 4: 5. It might be said by Jesus, if he was here now, "I have been, and am building, and will so continue to build 'my church'!"

This litigant, instead of rearing the temple of strong, affirmative argument, asked to have a great batch of irrelevant scripture replied to, and indulged in threats, bombastic boasts, sarcastic flings, and damaging criticisms on our holy faith, and that too while he was supposed to be in the lead. As the climax of his absurd arrogance, and the towering acme of his preposterous presumption, he quoted Paul the apostle; viz.: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed;" and applied this anathema to what he was pleased to call "Mormonism"!

After trying to prove when and where the church and kingdom was first established, he "committed theological suicide" in admitting that the gospel and kingdom were both preached prospectively and incipiently, but not in fact, till after the resurrection. Campbellites have the gospel in homeopathy, allopathy, and hydropathy; but "the gospel of Christ which is the power of God unto salvation," is the true, sole, and only "perfect law of liberty." It comes not as an ecclesiastical fossil; but in word, in power, in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance. (1 Thess. 7: 5; 1 Peter 1: 12.) After informing the vast audience that we need not look for another flood, or a whale to swallow a Jonah, or the dead, Lazarus-like, to arise, and that miracles had served their purpose; and that a wicked, and an adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, he, zounds! asked for a wee wonder and he would then cease his opposition and espouse the cause. "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," impiously called the Christian religion, with a loud profession and with his flock of gullibles that have made that "noble confession," is it at all to be wondered at that he would urge to have his lame thumb straightened, or give us a tongue, as they are for unbelievers! He, blind guide he is, declared time and again that he would be obedient if he could only hear a tongue, although the Lord said they would not hear him, and that his law was perfect, converting the soul, and the statutes to make wise, etc.

"All flesh" of Joel 2: 28, and restated by Peter Acts 2: 17, meant Jew and Gentile, and was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem; howbeit the Gentiles were not present, nor yet did the Jews do the first solitary things that are to characterize the stirring, yea thrilling, events of "the last days." The Corinthians, this logician thought, had erred, like the Mormons, in regard to the use of spiritual gifts, as shown forth in the twelfth chapter. He supposed their immediate abolition was taught in the following under the head of "the more excellent way;" but of the next succeeding one he said never a word, lest peradventure he might run across the most excellent way and lo, that would ruin his "private interpretation." He would often turn to our brother and ask, "Can you raise the dead?" "Have you been baptized with the Holy Ghost?" "Can you work a miracle?" "Can you heal the sick?" "Can you prophesy?" and the likes. He would avow that Christ alone had power to confer the Spirit, and then, perhaps in the next breath, declare that the apostles could lay on hands for this miraculous power, but they lived in the days of inspiration. He would not allow that anybody could be a witness for Christ and his resurrection now only as taught by the record abridged. Paul's "so great a cloud of witnesses," and his "all scripture given by inspiration of God," and Peter's "all things that pertain to life and godliness," were enough for this reverend; nevertheless, John the beloved disciple wrote thirty years after.

This prevaricating squibbler laid many things to the opponent that he never dreamed of saying. He had faith, repentance, confession, and baptism, as the initiatory rites of the gospel, whereas Paul has faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands as principles of the doctrine of Christ. Three out of the four citations he gave on confession referred to people already in the church and not to aliens seeking to be adopted into the one body. (See Matthew 10: 32, 33, Luke 12: 8, 9; Romans 10: 6-10; Acts 8: 36-38.) Devils believed, trembled, and confessed that Jesus is the Christ, and stayed out of the church, while Jesus witnessed "a good confession before Pontius Pilate;" and, behold, he is the ever living head! On the new name "Christian," he strained, perverted, and ruthlessly slaughtered Isaiah 65: 15; 62: 4; and on church organization he did not have any of the original officials at all. All that he made a weak attempt to vouch for were elders that have no "oil," nor prayer of faith to heal the sick, and deacons to act as sextons only, unlike those of Bible times.

He stoutly asserted that "Jesus alone" was the administrator of the Holy Ghost, and that none besides did or could baptize with the Spirit. Some ex parte texts might bolster up the above theory, but it is quite evident that our Savior did nothing alone but that God the Father through his obedient Son, his holy apostles, and others of his servants, performed those and similar works as saith the Scriptures. "The works that I do he shall do," and "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you."

This wily foe had the face to state that his opponent said, "What you have been giving this people is from the Bible; but what I have been giving them is from heaven." If he would do this, and other like tricks, in the presence of our brother, and where it was duly detected and pointedly rebuked, pray tell me what will he say and do when we are not around and he has everything in his orthodox favor? This savant claimed as usual, that the apostles alone had the authority to lay on hands for the miraculous power of the Comforter. Inasmuch as Philip, who was at one time evidently a deacon, and after an evangelist, had power to heal the sick and afflicted, he alone, or in conjunction with the brethren, Peter and John, could lawfully lay on hands for the reception of the Paraclete, as Ananias did. (Acts 9: 17.) He objected to the Doctrine and Covenants in that it stated that "the Spirit and body is the soul of man;" howbeit his infallible guide states that eight souls went into the ark, and that seventy-five went down into Egypt. The priesthood with its grand divisions of orders and officers his royal highness could not see. Like Israel of old they were a kingdom of priests, but, unlike the type, they all, including men, women, and children were priests and kings, hence a holy and a royal priesthood. (1 Peter 2: 5-9.)

The only objection to organization, as portrayed by Bro. Daniel, was an insipid criticism where the plural for "seventy" was inadvertently used, as also some slurs about counselors, high councils, General Conferences, etc.

When children had been brought up in the nurture, fear, and admonition of the Lord, and expressed a willingness and a desire to be baptized, he thought it wrong to so receive them, vainly supposing that it would be adverse to the doctrine of free moral agency, and the dogma of individual accountability.

The belief set out in 1 Corinthians 15: 29, and restated in the Doctrine and Covenants, came in for a full share of his theological rancor and sarcastic ridicule. His ecclesiastical ingenuity and spread-eagle bombast were taxed to the very utmost. He also made a great ado about miracles, "Except it be required of you by them who desire it," and then as a sign seeker said, "I require and desire it." Read the connection and sense the meaning. (D. C. 23: 6.) He tried to make it appear that the Doctrine and Covenants licensed stealing, or connived at sin; but to his own shame and hurt. He made many other would-be objections to the above-named work, and a few faint attempts against the Book of Mormon, all of which fell flat and powerless, and withered at the touch of truth through our gallant defender of the faith and organization of the Latter Day Saints.

The people at large, save a part of the most obdurate Campbellites, saw Mr. Williams go down in the fray and lie low with the uncircumcised of heart and brain. To unhorse this warrior in his own castle, try him before the bar of scrutiny, find him guilty on many a count, give him a drumhead courtmartial, and muster him out in disgrace, was the work of truth. Another Balmaceda is overthrown, so let us give him a rest.

The work had never been introduced in that vicinity before, therefore the whole affair was providential. With churches all around to second and back him, with madame rumor, misunderstanding, ill advice, ignorance, and prejudice all in his favor, perhaps the gentleman thought he would have an easy walk over and a most glorious victory. The best of the whole community become our fast, substantial friends, and more than cared for us during the pleasing sojourn. The Baptists threw open their commodious chapel for six consecutive services. Elder E. G. Denny called in his standing appointment at Bethel church, and ran an opposition protracted meeting, but we had the crowd all the same. The bell rang, the house was duly lighted and cleansed, and the choir and organist did well. On Sunday night about one hundred and fifty could not get in, but listened patiently at the windows while I was on the mountain height. I trust the opening wedge has entered, and the good evangel will spread far and wide. The Lord raised us up many warm friends. Quite a number were in attendance from the region of country where last March the first engagement in Sullivan county was had.

Bro. L. F. Daniel and I will return to those parts a short while after the quarterly conference here at Byrneville, the good Lord willing it. Other debates were talked of between my former opponents, W. J. Perkins and W. H. Williams and myself, but not both at once I judge. The Lord bless Zion's standardbearers, I do devoutly pray.

THE PHYSICAL BASIS OF KNOWLEDGE.

THE surface of the brain has many centers upon it whose functions have been carefully studied. In addition to these centers, there are tracts of nerve matter connecting them with each other, so that an associated or concerted acting of the brain centers becomes possible—indeed, is of constant occurrence. One hears the word "rose" spoken, and immediately the image of a rose is recalled; there is a recollection of its odor, of its color, of its size and shape, and a stimulus goes to the proper centers, so that the word "rose" may be spoken or written, if it is so willed. It is these tracts or paths of nerve matter that enable the brain to build up our complex ideas. It will be seen from what has been said that the word "rose" carries with it many elements, such as color and shape, learned by experience through the eyes; taste, by the tongue; odor, by the nose; weight, by the hands. But all these qualities of taste, color, odor, weight, etc., go to make up our complex idea of what a rose is. These varied primary or elemental ideas have reached the brain by separate channels, have formed memory pictures on the centers, which, in turn, have become associated by means of the intercentral nerve paths into complex ideas.

In addition to the impressions reaching the brain through the nerves of hearing, sight, taste, and olfaction, there is a constant stream of sensations pouring into the brain along the nerves of feeling. It has now been pretty well settled that some of the nerve fibers conduct sensations of heat, others of cold, some of pain, and still others that sensation known as muscular effort, or the muscular sense. All these are carried to different parts of the brain and there registered. From this registry they can be called up as a memory of past experiences. It will now be clear that there is a constant stream of sensory currents or sensations coming into the brain from all parts of our bodies. These sensations have their mental accompaniment. When a current escapes from the brain, and goes outward for the purpose of moving some muscle or group of muscles, there is also a mental accompaniment. It is in this way that we are aware of how we are acting and being acted upon. These constitute states of consciousness. The conscious personality, or conscious ego, is the sum of all the states of consciousness at one time existing.

In a moment, by disease or injury a man may lose the power to speak, and yet be able to read and write; or he may be unable to read, and yet hear what is said. Some may have the center of hearing so damaged that the power for music is gone and still be sound in every other respect. Some, again, may lose the power of recalling words. They know them when written or printed; but they cannot speak, because they cannot recall the words needed to express their thoughts. Enough has been said to show that the brain and all the nerve tracts leading to it and from it are the physical basis of knowledge. Derangement in these is followed by derangement in the mental powers. Insanity is only disease affecting the brain so as to derange and pervert the thoughts, language, and actions of the person. This view of insanity has done much good, as it has led to a better method of dealing with insane people. The anatomical and physiological study of the brain shows that it is the organ of the mind; but further observations made in cases of disease and injury of the brain, as well as in cases of insanity, go to establish this doctrine beyond all dispute. Illusions, hallucinations, and delusions owe their origin to some derangement in the sense organs or in the perceptive centers in the brain. Following upon this, the conscious ego is no longer in its true relationship to its environments, and there is, as a consequence, derangement of conduct, as the result of the physical disease.—John Ferguson, M. D., in Canadian Magazine.

DIFFERENCES IN HUMAN NATURE.

ONE of the most striking things in all nature is the difference that exists between the various individuals of the same class. It is said that if our power of vision were sufficiently acute, we should perceive that no two blades of grass, no two grains of sand, no two drops of water were precisely similar. We know this to be true of everything which comes within the scope of our observation, both in the organic and inorganic world, and it is only reasonable to believe that the same law reigns through the entire universe. These differences become more obvious to us as we become more familiar with the type. We easily recognize the variations in the trees of the forest, in the birds of the air, in the beasts of the field, in the features and forms of the men and women who surround us, and the oftener we observe them, and the more closely we scrutinize them, the greater is the diversity that we discover between them. When we know a person well it is impossible that we can mistake him for anyone else; his peculiar expressions of face and form and manner are stamped upon our memory and excite our instant recognition.

No two minds run in the same channels, or think exactly each other's thoughts. Truth is many-sided, and multitudes of men and women stand still, viewing continually but one of her phases. Did they but move around her, changing their respective attitudes, they would appreciate one another far better. Excellent people sometimes regret that there are so many differences of opinion upon a single subject. If all were agreed, they say, how smoothly and harmoniously might all work together for the general good! They forget that, were this possible, there would be no consensus of truth, no gathering together of its many features, no comparison of its many aspects. It is just this mingling of sincere convictions that enables men to correct their fallacies, to retrieve their blunders, to arrive at something like wise judgment and correct conclusions. Yet we chafe and fret at these very differences, and attribute to them many of the evils which really belong to our unwillingness to recognize and accept them. Too often irritation, ill feeling, and even anger arise from this innocent cause. Interchange of opinion, whether in ordinary conversation or in discussions and debate, is among the most instructive and valuable means of forming true opinions, yet often it is poisoned by a dogmatism that will brook no contradiction and a temper which regards all dissent as a personal affront.—Philadelphia Ledger.

the sentiments of which were much appreciated. The legality of the conference of 1893 and the resolutions passed (viz., resolutions 4, a, b, c, d, e, f.) having been questioned, it was decided upon motion "that a committee be formed to revise the rules of said conference as found in Herald for week ending January 31, 1894, and that they be instructed to define the powers of such conference under the rule of the church and report to conference of 1895." The question was asked, "How long a time should elapse between baptism and confirmation?" which was answered by President Caffall that whenever and wherever practicable, confirmation should follow immediately after baptism. Bishop's agent's accounts read, England and Western Wales. The following resolutions were passed: 1. Resolved that petition of the Sheffield Saints to hold the conference of 1895 in that city be complied with. 2. Resolved that C. H. Caton, A. H. D. Edwards, J. D. Howell, and J. Resolved that we sustain J. D. Howell as secretary of the mission, and that our best thanks are due to S. F. Mather for his industrious assistance in the secretarial work. 10. Resolved that our best thanks are due to the brethren and sisters of the Manchester branch for their kindness in looking after the interests of the visiting brethren and sisters, and that we duly appreciate the efforts of C. H. Barton and his assistants or caterers, to look after their comfort, and also that we highly esteem John Foden's services as chorister. Joseph Dewsnap, Sen., was ordained a high priest. An effort was made to bring about a Sunday school union in the mission, but no satisfactory end was accomplished. Preaching by Elder James Caffall.

There is no condemnation to them who do not condemn others. They who forgive others will be forgiven of God.

They who have of this world's goods and are willing to give, such will be prospered, receive spiritual strength and comfort.

They who make it an everyday rule to speak ill of no one, will have power to overcome, to endure.

They who use the Holy Spirit to live peaceable, meek and humble, sober and quiet, shall obtain a part in the first resurrection, and an inheritance on the earth, a blissful rest to their souls, for "glorious is the fruit of good labors." W. C. L.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF EVANELIA.

We have had the gospel boat, Evanelia, photographed in two sizes; 6 x 9 and cabinet size, and we want to sell all we can at 50 and 25 cents each, to help the cause financially. Please inclose the money with the order. This is no personal speculation; all the profit goes to the boat fund.

NOTICES.

To the Presidents of Branches in the British Isles Mission; Dear Brethren:—In order that the work of this mission may have every facility to go forward—and thank God it is going forward, slowly perhaps, but nevertheless surely—it is absolutely necessary that we practically demonstrate our love for the work of Christ, by putting our shoulders to the wheel. It was our intention to supplement the conference notice by a letter to each branch president personally, drawing special attention to resolution 3, (see minutes of conference of August, 1894), but in order to save expense we have decided to adopt this means of communicating with you. Plain facts will not hurt anyone and we feel that no harm can be done if we suggest that if we are to help forward the work here, we must do it practically and not by talking only. It is necessary that a place be appointed for the servants of "our Father" and we appeal to you to help us in this matter. We know that you cannot do much, but can't you do a little? Will you just try, brethren. Every little helps, and if you do your best you may rest content that no one can expect you to do any more. The responsibilities in connection with the work do not devolve upon one man, but it is a matter in which we are all concerned, and although we do not desire to solicit your aid by promises that God will reward you for any effort that you may put forth, we are firmly convinced that he will not be in your debt. If every member in our respective branches in the British Isles mission would only give one penny per week, our difficulties would be got over, and we want you please to do your best to endeavor to get the brethren and sisters in your branch to give a little for the purposes of the mission fund. Tell the flock over which God has placed you overseer, of the necessities of the mission and please act in accordance with instructions as per said resolution if any moneys are placed in your hands in response to your appeal; that is to say, send monthly to Bro. Thos. Taylor, 2 Sun street, Bristol Road, Birmingham who will duly credit your branch with all remittances sent. May God help you to understand the spirit in which this appeal is made.

Yours in the interests of the kingdom,
J. D. HOWELL,
Secretary British Isles Mission.

SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI RE-UNION.—CONTINUED.

Sunday, Oct. 7.—The morning was cool and cloudy with some rain. The showers were of short duration, however, and a goodly number were present at the prayer service at nine o'clock. Nine prayers were offered and twenty-nine testimonies. A very excellent feeling was present and all seemed to enjoy the occasion.

At eleven a. m. Elder R. Etzenhouser was the speaker. Proverbs 21:2 was selected as a text. The speaker showed that man may suppose himself to be right, and be perfectly conscientious, and yet be wrong.

At 2:30 p. m. Elder Joseph Luff addressed the vast throng, taking for his theme the unchangeable nature and work of God. The Herald reporter got interested in the discourse too much to try to take notes so as to make a fair report of it. Those who have heard him in the past can guess about what could be expected when his mind is illuminated with heavenly light and his power of reason and force of logic is brought to bear against sectarian unbelief.

At 7:30 p. m. Elder F. C. Keck was the speaker. His subject was "The kingdom of God." He set forth the organic form of God's kingdom in a plain and forcible way. Many of his old friends and neighbors were present who knew him before he obeyed the gospel and it seems very marvelous in their eyes that a man who is without education—a plain farmer—can in so short a time become an able preacher.

The day was profitably spent in the service of the Master. Most all can now see that October is too late in the season for comfortable camping, yet hope is entertained that the weather will warm up somewhat. Many of the people of El Dorado are hearing the gospel in its purity. There are probably two hundred Saints in attendance from various places, who are camped on the ground, or lodged in rooms in town. Thus far Spring River district has only a few representatives on the ground. This causes us to ask ourselves the question, "Why not make an effort to divide this annual gathering into districts, thus giving all a chance to attend?" They might as well have a good lively camp meeting down about Webb or Joplin once a year as not. We learn many things by experience, and while we are now having a first-rate time let us look out for pointers where we can make improvements.

The St. Louis papers have reporters on the ground but it is doubtful if any great benefits will come to us from it. They are limited to a few words, which go by telephone and telegraph, and which are finally whittled to pieces and boiled down and printed under a heading that even makes the reporter ashamed of them. We will use all diligence to get a fair representation from them.

Monday, Oct. 8. At the morning prayer service the ordination of Elders F. C. Keck and Henry Sparling to the office of seventy, as authorized by last General Conference, was attended to by Brn. Luff, Chatburn, and White. The Spirit of the Master was present in power. During the progress of the meeting the gift of tongues was manifested much to the edification of those present. Some very excellent testimonies were presented showing the mercy and love of God to his people in these last days.

The sermon at eleven a. m. was by Bro. Henry Sparling. He chose for his theme the restoration of Israel. The subject though generally understood by Latter Day Saints, was presented in such a way as to be of especial interest, some points being presented which were new to most of us. The weather was too cool all day for comfort. We had our first heavy frost the night before.

At 2:30 p. m. Bro. T. W. Chatburn was the speaker. His text was, "Remove not the ancient landmarks." He likened the Savior and his apostles to a surveying party, acting by authority. They made certain landmarks on the way which no man dare remove. The law of the land makes a man a criminal to move the landmarks made by officers of our government; then how much more strict should men be not to remove the landmarks made by these heavenly surveyors.

Half past seven found a large audience present to hear Bro. I. N. White. He used a chart of his own make illustrating his subject "From Adam to Christ." His chart shows the various dispensations—Adam, Noah, Moses, Christ, and the present one. Adam represented the time in the parable known as "early in the morning," Noah "about the third hour," Moses "about the sixth hour," Christ "about the ninth hour" Joseph Smith "about the eleven hour." The writer does not feel able to do justice to the discourse in a brief synopsis. It was very entertaining.

Tuesday, Oct. 9.—At nine a. m., prayer service. The morning was frosty but some warmer than the day before. As the day advanced considerable comfort could be had where the warm sunshine would strike.

At eleven a. m. Elder C. J. Spurllock occupied the stand, speaking principally to the Saints as to their duties, how they should live and walk together, as well as how they should conduct themselves before the world.

Elder C. R. Duncan was the speaker at 2:30 p. m., text, "Enter ye in at the straight gate," etc.

At 7:30 Bro. I. N. White continued his sermon from the chart, showing how God visited the earth in the eleventh hour. The speaker occupied a little more time than preachers usually do, but all the grumbling we heard was about the cold.

Wednesday, Oct. 10.—At the nine a. m. prayer service seven songs, thirteen prayers, and twenty-one testimonies were noted down by the reporter. The weather was pleasant all day.

At eleven a. m. Elder Asa S. Cochran of Lamoni, Iowa, was the speaker. His theme was, "Christ and him crucified." To preach Christ was to preach his doctrine. His doctrine contained certain unchangeable principles which have been known and observed in all ages where God has had a people.

The afternoon hour was occupied by Elder E. T. Atwell of Rich Hill, who came in Tuesday morning on his bicycle from Rich Hill, a distance of forty miles, arriving in time for the morning prayer service. His text was, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." The speaker discussed the claims of the various reformers, showing that many of them were of the opinion that a greater work than they were doing would some day be done. That some of them were ahead of their day in their views. He quoted extensively from their writings showing them to have been in harmony on many points with the Latter Day Saints.

In the afternoon Bro. A. White arrived, also Bro. William White, our blind brother, accompanied by his wife. Bro. and Sr. Higdon and Sr. Leaton also came in from Lebanon, Kansas, branch.

The speaker for the evening was Elder R. Etzenhouser. Revelation 22:18 was selected as a text. The sermon was characterized by good liberty and plain logic, the subject being present revelation. A large audience was present.

Thursday, Oct. 11.—Nine a. m., prayer service. About the usual number of prayers and testimonies were offered. The day was cloudy and threatening rain, but not enough fell to lay the dust.

The sermon at eleven a. m. was by Bro. A. White. The reporter was not present but heard it well spoken of by others.

At 2:30 Elder F. C. Keck was speaker. Subject, "These signs shall follow them that believe." The gospel was preached to make believers. The speaker showed from the Scriptures as well as from personal observation and experience that signs will not make believers. Strong delusion was to be sent in latter days and it would be manifest in the way of "signs and wonders." If people wanted such to base their faith upon it might be found in modern spiritism.

At 7:30 p. m. Bishop E. L. Kelley was speaker. He chose Mark 16:15 as a text: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Some people have questioned the genuineness of this scripture, but Matthew confirms it by his testimony, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations." It has been thought by those not informed that we believe another gospel than the one preached in New Testament times—something called Mormonism. The word has been misapplied. It is understood to mean polygamy. If so, David and Solomon were Mormons. We have never acknowledged the name. We claim to be saints. A saint is not necessarily perfect, but has a perfect faith. Apostles, prophets, etc., were set in the church for the "perfecting of the saints." The gospel is calculated to make men better—to save sinners. Christ came not to call the righteous, but sinners, to repentance. It is the highest duty of man to open up his mind and think.

Friday, October 12, was Sunday school day. The morning was devoted to young folks' prayer meeting beginning at nine a. m. It was thought by many to have been the best meeting of the kind yet held. Brn. Willie Mannering and A. H. Mills were in charge. Of course some of the older ones "just couldn't keep still" and "added" a word now and then.

Eleven a. m. "Short talks to the young" was in order and Bro. T. W. Chatburn was introduced. He gave us some excellent advice on Sabbath school work. He spoke of his own experience in childhood in a feeling way. His talk was edifying and instructive. The audience would be in tears one moment and laughing the next. He was followed by Bishop Kelley who gave a good, sound talk to the young, mixing in enough of the mirthful to make it interesting for them. One thought which should be put on record was about as follows: The whiskey element are loud in denouncing temperance workers for infringing on their personal rights, but he could hardly go into a restaurant while in San Francisco but what he would find printed some place on the bill of fare, "Smoke — cigars," "Drink forty-nine whiskey."

The afternoon was quite well spent. At 2:30 we had a Sabbath school lesson, Bro. J. B. Goldsmith in charge. Several questions were presented and discussed with reference to Sabbath school work. We got several valuable pointers from brethren who have had an experience calculated to inform them. A chalk talk by Bro. T. W. Chatburn was appreciated by all.

Immediately following the adjournment of the Sabbath school exercises the reunion convened in business session, Elder I. N. White presiding. The reunion committee reported and their report was accepted. The committee was continued until the close of the present reunion. A motion prevailed to hold a reunion next year, and a committee consisting of Brn. E. W. Lloyd, J. B. Goldsmith, and I. N. White, was appointed to make preparations for next year. A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring committee, also to the Logan reunion for the use of their tent.

At 7:30 p. m. President Joseph Smith was the speaker, having arrived during the afternoon. The town people had been apprised of his coming and they just filled the seats full, some being compelled to stand. Bro. Joseph gave them a good, logical sermon on the "first principles." Those who may have thought that his principal forte is preaching to the Saints will no doubt be compelled to admit that he knows how to get down to the A B C when it becomes necessary. The speaker said he did not ask people to lay aside their prejudice. All he wanted was a hearing. God knew in the beginning exactly what it would take to save man and he believed that he had adopted the best course possible. Christ said, "My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me." Men frequently tell us if we preach doctrine it will cause division in the Christian world. Preaching the doctrine of men may do this, but it seems strange that Christ would preach and teach a doctrine which if taught by his followers would disrupt his church. The thought is inconsistent. If the gospel was to be preached in all the world we have a right to ascertain what it is and if it is properly affecting us. If there is an individual under the canopy of heaven that could claim exemption from baptism that individual was Christ; yet he was required to obey it to fulfill all righteousness. If baptism needs any indorsement it certainly received it when Christ obeyed it and the Father and the Holy Ghost from heaven indorsed it. Some people say they can enter the kingdom of God without water baptism. We leave them to furnish the proof. Christ said they could not. We prefer to believe Christ.

Saturday, Oct. 13.—At nine a. m. the usual prayer service was held. The weather was pleasant and warm. An excellent interest prevailed throughout. Bro. S. C. Andes and family of Mitchell county, Kansas, are attending the meetings, having arrived during the week. They contemplate making their home near this place in future.

Bishop E. L. Kelley was the speaker at eleven a. m.; he chose James 2:12 as his text. We should not only *spea*k right things but we should do right things. Christ's first advent to the world was not to judge the world but to demonstrate to us how that we should live. His word—the law of liberty—will judge us. The speaker referred to the phrenological development of man. Some men inherit certain traits of character which cause them to ride hobbies all their lives and they become actually crazy on that particular subject. A learned doctor had once said in his presence that "reform in man should begin fifty years before he is born." That may be the remedy from a natural standpoint, but not from the gospel standpoint. The gospel is calculated to restrain some faculties of the mind and stimulate others, thus giving man the proper development and education to make him what his Creator had designed that he should be. We must learn to correct ourselves and not our neighbors. The observance of the law in a temporal way is not always to benefit the church or to make heaven richer, but it is sometimes to benefit the man who observes it. A miserly man is not a fit subject for the kingdom until he has overcome that feature of his nature. Observance of the temporal law will aid him to thus overcome. God is sometimes more kind to us than we are to ourselves. A bushel of money would damn some men. Three were baptized at the close of the service.

Conference of the Clinton district convened at one o'clock. The minutes of the same will be reported by the district secretary in the usual way.

Elder T. W. Chatburn occupied the stand at 2:30 p. m. The writer was not permitted to be present so will not attempt a synopsis from "hearsay."

At 7:30 p. m. Bro. Joseph Luff was announced as speaker. He selected Matthew 27:22, "What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?" Pilate knew that in leaving this question for the mob to decide that it would be death to Jesus. From the few the cry now goes up, "What must I do to be saved?" The pulpit seems to be inclined to leave it to the people what disposition to make of the cross and the Savior. The name of Christ is too often used as a toy. Those who represent him should do so understandingly. That which was guaranteed to the hearer of the word anciently is guaranteed to us to-day. Christ was given as a leader, a commander, and a witness. Great stress is laid upon the cross, the blood, etc. These are all right in their place, but let us go to calvary and see the cross and the blood, and what do we learn of Christ as a leader and a commander? As a witness Christ certainly told the truth and the whole truth so it will not admit of any changes. God desires to convert the religious world, but the religious world is trying to convert God. They sing, "My God is reconciled." All we have to represent Christ to-day is his truth. The churches are crucifying his word, consequently are crucifying Christ afresh. Great consternation will seize upon the Christian world when they see the wounds in his side and the nail prints in his hands (made by crucifying him afresh) and hear him say, "These are the wounds I received in the house of my friends." It is impossible to give a correct idea of the sermon in a synopsis. It was one of the best we have ever heard Bro. Luff deliver.

The prayer service at nine a. m. on Sunday, October 14, was a very enjoyable occasion. Bishop E. L. Kelley spoke at eleven a. m.; 1 Corinthians 12:1-7 was his text. A manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man. We are told that there is already sufficient revelation given. They told Christ and the apostles the same. The Corinthians had at one time worshiped gods which Paul refers to as dumb idols. By reference to the 115th Psalm we find these dumb idol gods, who cannot speak, referred to. We should not worship a God that cannot speak. The speaker made a strong argument on the passage, "and yet show I unto you a more excellent way." Scholars insist on sticking to the root meaning of words in the original languages. This will not always do, as the books were not written in pure Greek or Hebrew. Christ and his apostles spoke as Galileans.

At 2:30 p. m. a vast multitude assembled to hear President Joseph Smith. His sermon was timely and well delivered. "The new covenant," was his theme. During the course of his sermon he referred to the work of his father, making some very timely remarks on the subject. The people of El Dorado seemed to want to hear something about it and much prejudice was certainly removed in seeing and hearing Bro. Joseph. Six were baptized at the close of the service, making nine in all.

At 7:30 p. m. Bro. R. Etzenhouser was the speaker. Sickness prevented the writer from attending. From what we learned Bro. Rudolph did not misrepresent himself or the work on this occasion.

Thus closed a successful reunion of Latter Day Saints. Of its effects we may have somewhat to say later on.

In bonds.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 14.—Elections for members of the Chamber of Deputies were held throughout Belgium to-day. The voting was under the new compulsory system, which provides severe penalties for nonvoters. The electors were divided into three classes: One year residents over 25 years of age, who were entitled to one vote; married men and widowers with families, who pay personal tax of five francs to the State, who had their votes; and priests and others of position and education, who had their votes. The clerical party, under this system, had great voting strength. The Socialists made a strong fight as the independent party. The Liberals are divided and are likely to show badly in the places where the Clericals and Socialists are in force.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 14.—A final count of the votes cast in the election here show that the Radicals polled 8,339 to the Conservatives 8,968. Thus each party will send four members to the Storting. Ex-Prime Minister Steen delivered an oration on the subject of Norway's future. The returns from the various constituencies in the country are incomplete, but figures already received are sufficient to show neither party will obtain a decisive majority in the Storting, which will probably consist of fifty-eight members of the party of the Left and fifty-six members of the party of the Right.

The government reforms would not check religious sentiment; on the contrary, it would tend to enhance it.

Advices from San Domingo say a cyclone has leveled 700 houses here and damaged the coffee crop in Hayti.

NAPLES, Oct. 18.—Prime Minister Crispi last night gave a dinner for Senor Castelar, the Spanish Republican leader. Yesterday the Prime Minister received Senor Castelar. Senor Castelar assured Sig. Crispi he warmly admired the Italians. He declared a republican form of government could not give Italy or Spain a more general liberty than a democratic monarchy.

Four men robbed a Texas Pacific passenger train near Gordon, Texas, October 13.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 19.—The Czar last evening suffered from a sudden spasm of the heart which compelled him to lie down. His condition became so critical that his Confessor, Father Yanischew, was hastily summoned. It is reported here that an imperial edict will be published Monday next intrusting the regency to the Czarovitz, Gen. Count Vorontsoff Bachoff, aide-de-camp to the Emperor and Minister of the Imperial House; K. P. Pobiebonostzoff, the Procurator General of the Holy Synod; Actual Privy Councillor Witte, Minister of Finance; Actual Privy Councillor Durnovo, Minister of the Interior; and Gen. Vannovski, the Minister of War.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—M. de Staal, Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, has now admitted that telegrams received at the embassy preclude any hope that the imperial sufferer would ever again rise from his bed. Baron Mohrenheim, Russian Ambassador to France, this morning furnished the Paris Figaro with the same unwelcome news. If this is not sufficient, the flight of court officials, the forced and hurried journeys of members of the Russian imperial family across Europe, the alarm of the various courts, the shivering bourses, and the prayers offered up in churches are irrefutable testimony of the fact that the Czar is dying.

SIMLA, Oct. 19.—The latest intelligence received here from Cabool is dated October 13. Then the Ameer of Afghanistan had improved in health.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 19.—The Novoe Vremya says in the event of the military intervention of Great Britain in Afghanistan Russia will be compelled to take similar action. This joint action upon the part of Great Britain and Russia will necessarily lead to the partition of Afghanistan between these two powers.

BUDA-PESTH, Oct. 19.—The Lower House of the Reichstag, by a large majority, to-day decided to recommit the bill providing for freedom of worship to the House of Magnates for acceptance unamended.

BARCELONA, Oct. 19.—Two dynamite bombs powerful enough to blow up the whole quarter of the city where they were found were discovered to-day near the engine of a large manufactory where a number of Anarchists were formerly employed. Fuses were attached to the bombs.

TIENTSIN, Oct. 19.—A dispatch received here from Port Arthur dated Tuesday last, October 16, says the Japanese have abandoned Thornton Haven and have proceeded to the Ping Yang inlet, which they are now said to be strongly fortifying. It is reported in native circles here that a great battle has been fought between the Chinese and Japanese forces north of Yalu River. The engagement is said to have taken place Monday last, October 15. No details are obtainable. The Chinese authorities claim not to have any knowledge of such a battle.

HIROSHIMA, Japan, Oct. 19.—A session of Parliament was held here to-day. The Mikado said he had decided to convene an extraordinary session and had given directions to his Ministers to submit a bill providing for increased expenditures of the army and navy. He said the war with China would not stop until Japan had gained its objects.

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD,

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resumé or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

THE BIBLE COMPARED WITH OTHER SACRED WRITINGS.

MAX MULLER is not generally known as a religionist, which fact makes his opinion of the Bible, as compared with other sacred writings, all the more interesting. He is, however, generally regarded as the foremost European student of Oriental literature, and his researches among the sacred writings of the East seem to have been especially prolonged. The Christian Commonwealth, of London, introducing the journalistic art of America into the religious field, sends an interviewer to invade the sanctum of the Professor and capture some of his views. This is the result of the foray:—

“Would you say that any one sacred book is superior to all others in the world?”

“It may sound prejudiced, but, taking all in all, I say the New Testament. After that I should place the Koran, which in its moral teaching is hardly more than a later edition of the New Testament. Then would follow, according to my opinion, the Old Testament, then Southern Buddhist Tripitaka, the Taote King of Laotze, the Kings of Confucius, the Veda, and the Avesta. But this is a very rough classification, and not likely to be accepted by others. There is no doubt, however, that ethical teaching is far more prominent in the Old and New Testaments than in any other sacred book. Therein lies the distinctiveness of the Bible. Other sacred books are generally collections of whatever was remembered of ancient times. For instance, in the Veda you get a description of the Flood, simply as a deluge; in the Old Testament it takes an ethical meaning, it is a punishment and a reward; there is the difference between the two; and that distinction runs through the whole of the sacred books. There is, of course, plenty of moral teaching in the other sacred books also, but the distinguishing feature of the Old Testament is that the Jews feel themselves the chosen people of God. That idea runs through the whole book. The Jewish people always referred everything that happened to them, whether happiness or misfortune, to a Divine government; it was meant for them; there was a meaning in it; they were made to feel that God was angry or pleased.

“‘Other religions,’ the Professor remarked, ‘have been fearfully degraded in the course of centuries, and at the present moment you see high, philosophical culture among educated Hindus, but the streets are full of disgusting idols. Enlightened people will say, ‘O we don't worship these idols!’ but still these disgusting representations are tolerated, and they ought not to be.’

“‘How would you explain the superiority of the Bible over other sacred books?’

“‘I don't explain it, I only accept it as a fact. I don't think you can go much behind it. All sacred books profess to be given by the Deity and to be inspired. Though the Koran was dictated by Mohammed, yet what he said was always revealed to him by the angel; and that idea prevails in all sacred writings. The book is sacred because it is the gift of God; otherwise it would have no authority. Teaching was in the hands of the priests, who had to reason with their peoples, and there are many things on which you can argue for ever so long without coming to a final result; so the priests cut it short by saying, This is Divine truth, given to us by immediate revelation of the Deity.’

“‘How about the Bible revelation?’

“‘With us things have taken a different shape; we say, not that revelation makes truth, but that truth makes revelation; the sense of truth within us is to us the sense of God; the voice of God is to us the Spirit of Truth. We do not say that the New Testament was handed down from the sky in any miraculous way. The Spirit of Truth speaks, and what is perfectly certain, what is more certain than anything else, that is to us inspired.’”—Literary Digest.

PROF. VIRCHOW AGAINST DARWIN.

PROFESSOR RUDOLPH VIRCHOW declared himself emphatically against the Darwinian theory of the origin of the species at the convention of anthropologists which met recently at Innsbruck. Virchow is considered by many competent judges the greatest anthropologist living. He has probably made more measurements of the representatives of various races and tribes than any other specialist.

In his address at Innsbruck Virchow did not mince words in his attack upon Darwin, whose theories, he said, instead of aiding the researches of anthropologists, had been hindrances to them. “Darwin himself,” he continued, “refrained at first in his explanation of his law of development, in the work on the origin of species, from applying it to human beings. There has been a long investigation of this theory. The attempt was made to solve the question by speculation, and the ‘monkey theory’ was set up. It would have been just as easy to come to a ‘sheep theory.’”

This “monkey theory,” as Virchow likes to call the ideas of Darwin, had been harmful to anthropology. Anthropology to-day, however, bothered itself little about this theory, which was started twenty-five years ago. Anthropologists had to accept the actual world, and the race question naturally appealed to them. It was impossible in Virchow's opinion, to say whether or not a colored race could descend from one not so marked; no positive example existed. Such a thing in the case of an individual was looked upon as a pathological event.

Metaplasia (change from one kind to another), Virchow declares, could not take place without anomaly. This anomaly could become hereditary. If that took place in a family, “we come upon the hereditary variation, and by multiplication we get the race. We know that a race can retrograde. Where we find an example of atavism we must ask the question, of course, whether this atavism is not a proof that the race developed from a being of that kind. It is almost always impossible to speak with certainty regarding the origin of a race or tribe.”—Tribune, October, 1894.

DEPARTMENT IN THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

DOXOLOGY AND OVERCOAT.

A NEW YORK clergyman, by an understanding with his organist, had the music suddenly cease in the midst of the final doxology. It was a grotesque scene which the sudden silence revealed. There was a man with his head under the seat looking for his rubbers; there another with arms outstretched working himself into his overcoat; there one reaching for his cane in the corner of the pew; there one stroking affectionately his beaver hat, and so on. The joke was quickly seen. The people who were in order glanced with pitying eye upon the friends whose dressing-room performances had been thus awkwardly arrested. A few calm words from the pastor sent the audience out with a new idea of the sacredness of God's house. The rebuke was deserved. Alas, we fear that in most of our churches the closing hymn has little of worship in it. Reader, think of this next Sunday when the concluding act of worship draws near. God is as worthy of the last act of worship as of the first. Wait till after the benediction before you begin your preparations to leave the sanctuary.—An exchange.

We indorse the sentiment so forcibly emphasized by this New York clergyman, most decidedly. We have often felt the blush and mortification of spirit caused by the acts of impatient thoughtlessness shown by Saints, elders, and lay members, in bustling and getting ready to move out, and even in going out during the closing hymn and before the benediction. Indeed, we have been made greatly ashamed by seeing leading elders guilty of this grave and serious breach of good manners, and disregard of the dignity of the church and the respect due to the Lord during the hour of service and worship. We once exhorted a congregation to be patient and wait for the benediction and chided them for the disrespect shown to the hour and the occasion, when, while yet we were speaking a prominent elder rose, took his hat and overcoat and walked the whole distance from the pulpit to the door before the sound of our exhortation ceased, or the "good word" of dismissal had been heard. We concluded then that either we were out of place in striving to secure a respectful and fitting close to the service, or this man's teaching by example was more powerful than our teaching by precept and example.

The true proprieties of the house of worship require the best of order and most circumspect deportment. There should be no such thing as flirting, laughing, whispering, writing of notes to and from persons in adjacent seats, (whether the parties be old or young,) no grimaces or contortions of face to cause others to laugh, no shuffling of feet, drumming on the seats or books with the fingers, or on the floor with the feet, and no moving about from seat to seat. There should be absolute quiet on the part of the hearers from the time of their entrance to the house of worship to the closing words of the benediction. No one should go to the meeting room who does not intend to stay until the services close. It is a sad breach of decorum and good behavior for persons to get up and go out during the service, no matter whether those who do it are young, middle aged, or old; unless there is an absolute necessity for such going out, it is an act of disrespect to both the minister and the people of the congregation, and to the Lord whose love, word, and goodness are represented by the being assembled together.

Common courtesy and decent civility, the respect which men of fair minds and good hearts should feel toward their fellow men, should characterize the conduct of those who attend worship in the house of God. Indeed the rule of right demands that those who enter the house where divine services are being held, should not interfere with the right of others to see, hear, and enjoy all the exercises, including the closing song and the benediction. The preacher, however humble his talent, or far he may be from the remotest seat in the house, may be disturbed by ill or disrespectful conduct, and is entitled to fair and courteous treatment, and has the right to be left free to express his thoughts, and discuss the doctrine he has to present without disturbance by either unmannerly interruption, studied and open disrespect, or thoughtless disregard of the rules of good deportment.

Every member of the congregation, whether rich, opulent, or humble and poor, richly or poorly clad, has the right to see, hear, and enjoy every portion of the service from opening to close, undisturbed by any act of those sitting near by, or remote from where he may be sitting, or standing, by which he may be annoyed, fretted, or in any wise be prevented from the fullest enjoyment of song, prayer, sermon, and benediction.

It would seem, sometimes, that the only rights to be exercised and respected in the house of worship are the rights which careless young people claim and use, to go to the place to sit together, whisper, converse, laugh, carry on their flirtations, pay no heed to the people near them, nor to the preacher—but just to have a "good time," and if spoken to, or rebuked, to get offended, become angry, feel insulted, and give the officers of the church and the church discredit for being harsh, unkind, and careless of the feelings and rights of the young.

We do not believe in, nor desire to exercise any right not properly belonging to us in the house of worship; and in this we write for hundreds of the Saints and those attending the public services held by the church; but we can see neither sense, propriety, nor right in the practice of those who, attending public meetings, pay little or no attention to the speaker, but talk among themselves, carrying their affairs into church to be talked over; chat and laugh with each other, often in a silly and giggling fashion, to the annoyance of those near them who desire to pay heed to the service; and to the annoyance, and sometimes shame of the officer in charge and the disgust of the preacher. The first rights in such places are those of the devotees and worshipers who come there to take part in the services as officers, speakers, and hearers. The rights of all others are secondary; and if anybody's rights are to be disregarded those of the last named should be the first.

There ought to be no necessity for question among Saints as to the kind of behavior that should be observed in the house of worship, the house of the Lord; neither should there be a need for persistent teaching, or urgent insistence upon the part of the elders and officers for the observance of good order, for both parents and children should take pleasure in yielding the most respectful attention to the preaching of the word, and the most graceful compliance with the rules of propriety that should obtain in the place and during the hours set apart for worship. It surely is not asking too much of our fathers and mothers, our brothers and sisters, our sons and our daughters to respect themselves, their parents, their relatives, their friends, their Redeemer, and their God while attending divine service in the house where prayer is wont to be heard. It is not asking too much of our young men and maidens, our elders, and everybody else, to come in good time so as not to disturb people in coming in, to behave with due propriety while present and to stay till the services close. The affairs of this life are really not so important but what our young people can put them aside for the hour devoted to worship and the preaching of the word; and, if they do not themselves enjoy the service let those who may be present and desire to do so without disturbance or annoyance by youthful indiscretion or folly.

CORRECTION.

IN Bro. Derry's sermon, published in the supplement for October 10, on first page near bottom of second column, the following language appears:—

And this is the only purpose for which God sent his Son into the world, that he might set an example of a holy life, etc.

Of this Bro. Derry writes us October 19:—

I do not understand that 'as the only purpose,' etc, by any means. And if I made such a blunder I wish to correct it, and am sorry it appeared in print. I do believe it was one purpose for which Christ was sent; but not the only one; I shall be pleased to see the correction.

We very cheerfully make the desired correction, though we do not know where the error occurred, the manuscript for the sermon having come to us from the reporter.

ONE MORE, GABRIEL.

WE received a visit on October 17 from one John Galbraith, who came from near Rochester, Cedar county, Iowa, who desired an interview. He was born in Wisconsin January 1, 1863. He stated that he was baptized in June, 1891, at Montrose, Iowa, by Elder J. H. Lambert. He claims to be Gabriel, of Daniel 8:16, also the man referred to in Daniel chapters 10 and 12; the Judge of Revelation 19; the chief Shepherd of 1 Peter 5:4; the "blessed and only Potentate," of 1 Timothy 6:14-16; the "righteous judge" of 2:6-8; and Matthew 25:32; and the "one" referred to in Revelation 2:26, that "overcometh."

We listened thus far and decided not to hear further, thinking that it would be without profit.

The man seemed to be otherwise quiet and harmless; but claimed that by virtue of the regeneration he was all that is named above. Our only object in referring to it is that should he call on the Saints anywhere they may know that he has been here.

We are willing to receive men as men, with all that they may justly claim to be, and brethren of the Lord without hurtful or doubtful controversy; but have no disposition to receive men as ancient worthies, or the grand characters of Holy Writ incarnated. We would not knowingly reject the humblest of the servants sent of God, but having to answer to the great giver of all good for our occupation of an earthly tabernacle as a man, having an identity and name specifically given, we expect to assume the responsibility of rejecting any who claim more than the testimony and the law warrants.

A JERUSALEM COLONY GONE WRONG.

THE famous Jerusalem colony of "Overcomers," organized and taken from Chicago to the City of Jerusalem in 1880, has collapsed. Mrs. Spafford, who, after her husband's death became the recognized head of the community, arrived here a few days ago and rejoined two other members who came here a year ago. The whole party is in dire straits for money, and the complete disruption and disorganization, amid the scenes of its organization, are apparently inevitable. The present headquarters of the organization are at No. 1084 West Monroe street.

The foregoing taken from the Chicago Tribune for October 18, gives the probable final fate of another attempt to force the coming of Jesus by human zeal, and misjudging fervor and devotion.

When will men learn that the Savior was telling the truth when he said,

This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world; . . . and then shall the end come.

This body of "overcomers" appointed the day of Christ's coming, and waited on Mount Olivet in ascension robes; but Jesus came not; nor will he until his words of prophecy have fulfillment. Not until then, O, men of the world; not until then!

POLYGAMY AND MORMONISM.

THE recent pardon by the President of all persons who have been convicted of polygamy under the teachings of the Mormon Church attests the conviction of the government that there is nothing left in Mormonism that is dangerous. Mormonism, as a form of religion, has never been persecuted in the United States. Only its unlawful practices have been interfered with. However false or defective it may be as a religion it has a right to exist under our laws. But polygamy has no such right. That has always been a criminal offense, the law insisting that one wife or one husband at a time is enough, and that a second shall not be taken until riddance is had of the first.

Now that Mormonism is finally rid of polygamy, it will be interesting to see what will be its future as a religion. Its doctrines, as given in the almanacs, are those of a church entitled to be called Christian, but whether, having lost its peculiar institution, it can show vitality enough to meet the competition of the other churches that are growing up in its old territory is a question. All the other peculiar sects, even the Quakers, seem to be dying out in this country.—Harper's Weekly.

Primitive "Mormonism," so-called, will live; that is to say, the principles of the faith taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from 1830 to 1844, as laid down in the standard works and the preaching of the elders, will continue to spread until Jesus comes to put an end to all dispute about the true faith.

BRO. T. W. WILLIAMS of Council Bluffs, Iowa, has arranged to meet Rev. C. W. Savidge of the People's Church, Omaha, Nebraska, in debate, to begin November 20, place not stated, but to be agreed upon later. The propositions are as follows:—

Proposition 1. "Resolved that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and worthy the confidence of all people." T. W. Williams affirms and Charles W. Savidge denies.

Proposition 2. "Resolved, that the church of which I, T. W. Williams, am a member, viz., the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is the church of Christ and identical in faith, organization, and worship." Mr. Williams affirms; Mr. Savidge denies.

Proposition 3. "Resolved that the church of which I, Charles W. Savidge, am a member, viz., the People's Church of Omaha, is the church of Christ and identical in faith, organization, and worship." Mr. Savidge affirms; Mr. Williams denies.

The debates are to begin Tuesday evening, November 20, at a place to be announced later.

The King James translation of the Scriptures shall be the standard of evidence, all other proof to be taken for what it is worth.

SR. FANNIE JONES of Webster, Nebraska, is much respected and esteemed by those among whom she labored as an Alliance and Populist writer. The Leader, published at Fremont, Nebraska, has this to say of her:—

We miss Mrs. Daniel Jones from the ranks of the Populists. We trust she will soon take up her pen for this cause, for she is one of the deepest writers this party has and has done a vast amount of good by her energy and vim. In all her moves for this cause success has crowded her efforts and we trust she will keep on in her good work; for when she was on the Tribune, Herald, and Star staff the cause progressed.

We hope Sr. Jones will be equally esteemed and valued as a worker in the cause of Christ and his church in which she is now engaged. We like to hear a good report from them that are without.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. E. PEAK, Broken Bow, Nebraska, October 18:—

The work is in as good condition as could be expected. The crops were an entire failure. I have seen only one Saint that raised enough to winter on.

Bro. T. W. Williams, writing from Council Bluffs, October 22:—

We are doing nicely here; full house last night. I spoke (by request) on the Sabbath question. I held forth in the M. E. church at Loveland on Saturday night and Sunday morning, and expect to go there every two weeks. Held meetings all last week in the Danish Lutheran church, in the south part of the city; audiences increasing each night and a good interest. I told the people our circumstances, that the church cost us seventy-five cents per night, and that we had come exercising faith in God and the people that the expenses would be met; and that while we did not believe in begging or exacting money from them, we would be pleased to receive whatever each felt free to give. The result is I have raised enough to pay the rent so far, and one night in advance. This is the way I expect to prosecute the work here.

The way adopted by Bro. Williams is the one used years ago when the work was first being planted in new localities and was very successful, the people being pleased to bear the expense when they understood the situation.

Bro. J. A. Currie, Jr., has some HERALDS for sale, of which he writes from Pipe Creek, Texas, as follows:—

If you will, you may say that I have *Saints' Herald*s for 1877 to 1888, nicely bound, and anyone can have them by paying me for the cost of binding and the freight or express of conveying to purchaser.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. RUSSELL ARCHIBALD writing from St. Louis, October 8. Bro. Bozarth was compelled to leave his field from throat trouble. The chapel on Elliott avenue is too small, and the brethren are contemplating enlarging it at an early day. The effort of Bro. A. C. Barmore, a young elder from Indiana, has been productive of good, his example inspiring emulation and confidence in the younger element of the branch. The Globe-Democrat notices our work favorably; clipping sent by Bro. Archibald.

Bro. A. C. Hart, writing from Vinita, Indian Territory, October 17, after being called home to attend the last hours of sickness and the death and burial of his mother, Sr. William France, states that he had baptized two since he wrote last. Sr. Grace Homer won the prize in a contest of addresses in a Sunday school convention lately held near their home. Bro. Hart states that the local brethren are all contributing to the success of the preaching of the word, in both precept and in means.

The Sioux City Journal, October 14, sent us by Bro. J. F. Mintun, contains an article on "the vanishing Morioris," of the Chatham Islands, near New Zealand. They are described as Hebraic in appearance. Their traditions account for the appearance of a great chief who taught them humane principles; of the promulgation of laws against war, the laying aside of weapons or turning them to peaceful uses; of a race division into tribes with the head of each a priest; of man made of the dust and a spirit placed within the body thus formed.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly reports, October 8, from the Southern Indiana district. The branches for the most part are in fair condition, though some cannot be so reported, for which he expresses regret. The local and traveling force are doing quite well; some twelve baptisms being reported. Prospects in some places are good, in others doubtful, though the brethren all seem to be hopeful for good. Bro. Baggerly mentions his coloborers kindly and worthily.

Letters are received from Sr. — Lester, North Branch, Michigan, and Bro. D. W. Shirk, Belmont, Nebraska.

Bro. M. T. Short was at Galena, Indiana, the 18th inst. He wrote of the Southern Indiana conference, reported by Bro. I. P. Baggerly.

We call attention to the card of the Lamoni State Bank, indicating a reorganization and change of officers. It is thought to be one of the strongest banks now in Southern Iowa.

Brn. J. I. Young and J. H. Terry were laboring at New Franklin, Missouri, a new place, where considerable opposition existed. Bro. Young was to join Bro. J. B. Gouldsmith at Stoutland, Camden county, on the 28th.

The cheapest is not always the best, but the best is the cheapest. A low-priced article may not be worth the amount asked for it because not what it represents itself to be, nor as represented by another, and incapable of the wear and tear required of it. A good article is the cheapest because it justifies the merit claimed for or expected of it. It is reliable, and does not disappoint the just anticipations of its purchaser. There are cheap goods and cheap friends, but neither stand the tests of wear and time. The colors of both run out when subjected to storm or light, and bleach and exhibit their shoddiness, their real character. He who selects the good is untroubled by disappointment.

Our next issue will contain the Autumn Leaves premium and clubbing list for 1895, when the magazine will be issued by the Board of Publication. Watch for the list. It will contain valuable and attractive premiums.

Bro. William Taylor of Drain, Oregon, writes of labor done at that point by Bro. Haws and others. He hopes for a visit from Bro. H. L. Holt when the latter returns to California.

Bro. Senterlow Butler, who has for some time devoted himself to labor at Fontanelle, Iowa, and vicinity, reports success in baptisms and friends being made to the cause. A branch was to be organized in Grand River township, one of his points of labor. Opposition to the work at Fontanelle had resulted in good and enlisted the interest of leading citizens in its favor. Bro. John Lents had faithfully aided him.

Pres. W. W. Blair returned home from Illinois on Friday the 24th inst.

Bro. T. W. Davis, Plymouth, Amador county, California, requests missionaries and those in charge to address him with a view to making arrangements for labor at Plymouth.

"It is not victory to win the field,
Unless we make our enemies to yield
More to our justice than our force; and so
As well instruct, as overcome our foe."

There was a time when New England orthodoxy was inclined to scout the idea of Emerson having a religion, and the term pagan was heard, but that day is happily passed and both Europe and America acknowledge that Emerson was the greatest spiritual teacher America has ever had. In the November Arena, the Rev. W. H. Savage discusses "The Religion of Emerson," and quotes from his poems and essays some of the most salient and profoundly religious of his utterances concerning the soul and immortality and the divine spirit of the universe. Thoughtful religious people will read this paper with the highest sort of pleasure.

The magazines and newspapers have given a great deal of space to the War in the East, but the views of representative Japanese have not been heard. The Arena for November gives the place of honor to Kuma Oishi, A. M., Ph.D., a famous Japanese scholar, who considers "The Causes which Led to the War in the East," from the standpoint of his nationality. Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"How easy it is to spoil a life—
And many are spoiled ere well begun—
In some life darkened by sin and strife,
Or downward course of a cherished one,
By toil that ro's the form of its grace
And undermines till health gives way:
By the peevish temper, the frowning face,
The hopes that go and the cares that stay."

BABY SWEETHEARTS.

"WELL, Floyd, have you seen your sweetheart to day?" asked Mr. Germaine of his four-year-old son as they sat at the supper table.

"Yes, sir," answered the little fellow gravely.

"Did you take her out riding?" queried Mr. Germaine with a quizzical glance at his wife.

"No, sir, we just played I was her beau like Aunt Vi and Mr. Miller."

Mr. Germaine gave a knowing look at his young sister and asked, still with gravity, of the child: "Well, was Nellie as coy as Aunt Vi is?"

"O Nellie isn't my sweetheart now. We had a quarrel. It is Bessie Brooks now that is my sweetheart."

"But Floyd," said his mother, "you don't know what a sweetheart is."

"O yes, I do," asserted the young gentleman stoutly. "You hug 'em and kiss 'em."

Mr. Germaine threw back his head in a peal of laughter that implied an enjoyment of his wife's discomfiture, of Aunt Vi's embarrassment, and of his son's precocity. But Mrs. Germaine, with no answering smile, turned the topic of conversation and it was not again alluded to until the husband and wife sat alone in the quiet of their own room."

"Will," said Mrs. Germaine, "it seems to me it is not right to tease Floyd so about his sweethearts."

"O it doesn't tease him, the little rascal, but it seems to tease some people older than he is," was Mr. Germaine's jesting reply.

"But, Will, I am really in earnest. I think it is teaching him wrong things."

Mr. Germaine looked at his wife in evident astonishment.

"Well, now, Tender Conscience, what is wrong in laughing at him and calling Bessie his sweetheart, I'd like to know? I don't see anything wrong in the children's being fond of each other."

"Neither do I. That is not my point. It is quite natural and right that they should be fond of one another if we only let them be so in their own childlike way, the same way that Floyd is fond of Harry and Percy. You don't tease him about their being his sweethearts."

"Of course not, they are boys."

"You mean they will be boys by and by. At present they are only children."

"Don't you think, little wife, that you are straining at a gnat?"

"No, Will, I do not. It seems to me a very serious matter."

Mr. Germaine looked at his wife inquiringly for a moment and then asked, apparently apropos of nothing: "Where have you been this afternoon?"

"I have been at a W. C. T. U. meeting."

"I thought so. There is where you get most of your cranky notions."

"It is true, Will, that I received much enlightenment there. Yesterday I would have laughed with you at the foolishness of what now looks to me of such great importance."

"Well, I knew the W. C. T. U. was capable of a good deal of nonsense, but I really would like to know what great sin they can find in the sweethearting of two babies."

"It is the fact that babies cannot be sweethearts, Will, that constitutes the evil. It is the placing of the association of babies on the level of men and women, and teaching them to do the very things for which we will want to punish them after awhile. There is no harm in Floyd kissing Nellie and Bessie now, but how will it be in a dozen years if he grows up with the idea that girls are to be thus treated?"

"Why, it will be right for him to kiss them then, if they will let him."

A pained look passed over Mrs. Germaine's face, and for a time she was silent while her husband again became absorbed in his paper. By and by she asked softly, "Will, do you love our little Helen?"

"That is rather an idiotic question, Kate; what is the hidden meaning?"

"When Helen is grown up to young womanhood how will you feel if you learn that the young men of her acquaintance are treating her with undue familiarity?"

Mr. Germaine threw down his paper and began to walk up and down the room.

"The young man that treats my daughter with indignity will have to settle with me," he exclaimed at length.

"But, supposing they claim that it is all right because she permits it?"

"But she won't permit it. She will be too well taught."

"How? By teaching her at three and ten that the boys are her lovers and may caress her as they please, and then at fourteen teaching her that all young men must be kept at a distance? Can you do it? And, Will, if it is right for Floyd to kiss any girl that will permit it, why will it not be right for Helen to permit any young man to kiss her? You see it is not altogether a question of our son and some one else's daughter, but also of our daughter and some one else's son. Don't you see that it is just here that we lay the foundation of that double standard of morals which works so much mischief? If we teach our own boys that they may treat girls with familiarity if the girls permit it, we must accept the consequences not only to our boys but to our girls as well."

Mr. Germaine seated himself with a thoughtful mien, and his wife continued: "This subject was discussed at the meeting this afternoon, and it placed matters in a new light before me, though even while I listened I was not fully convinced. But when Floyd gave so clear an idea of his understanding of what a sweetheart is, it came upon me like a revelation, and I seemed to catch a glimpse of the future of our children that startled me. One of our members had a scrap cut from a newspaper which said that cards were out announcing the engagement of Master Willie Scott, aged four, and Miss Mabel Perry, aged six, and she said that no doubt the friends thought that it was only 'cute,' and the children would be taught to call each other husband and wife; and she asked, What idea could those little ones have of the sacredness of love and the dignity of marriage when they had played with them as toys in their babyhood. One member read from an article in Babyhood which said: 'If we would have a pure maturity we must have a sexless childhood.' That is, the child must be allowed to develop according to nature which does not develop sex until the individual approaches maturity. By putting into the minds of the children the thought of sentimental relations with each other, relations which have their foundation in sex, we awaken feelings, thoughts, and emotions which would have no place in the consciousness of a natural child, and this precocity of development along this line is one source of the social evil which gives us so much anxiety. As I was walking home from the meeting, thinking over what I had heard, and not quite ready to accept it all, I chanced to pass two girls, one about ten, the other, perhaps, sixteen. Said the ten-year-old, 'Who is your beau?' 'O, I have none,' answered the older girl. 'Haven't any beau?' exclaimed the little girl in surprise, 'why, how do you get along without one? I have always had beaux, and it's awful fun.' I thought the dear child did not know how near she came to the truth in saying it was 'awful fun.'

"Do you suppose there is very much of such nonsense going on?"

"A school-teacher who was at our meeting told us we would be surprised to know how this foolish sentimentality pervades the school. The boys and girls are engaged, are writing love letters, are quarreling and making up, are holding clandestine meetings, and all to such an extent that study is interfered with, the children being in such a state of emotional excitement that they cannot do good, hard work at study."

"Well, wife, is not that an argument against coeducation?"

"That matter was discussed too, and the members generally thought that if boys and girls were permitted to grow up in good, frank comradeship there would be less of the evil of which we have been speaking, and they seemed to think that coeducation was one of the means to create this very comradeship. It is the girl, who in convent or girls' school, has no opportunity to judge of young men as they are, who invests them with ideal virtues, while the girl who sees young men every day and competes with them in study, learns to judge of them much more correctly."

"Doesn't your argument prove too much? It asserts that love is natural and you cannot annihilate it, however hard you may try."

"We have no wish to annihilate love. We only desire to dignify it and no longer make it a plaything for babies, who using it as a toy can never have a true appreciation of its worth. We believe that marriage will be placed upon a surer basis if it is founded on a thorough acquaintance. One of the ladies read a quotation from Malthus which I borrowed. Shall I read it to you?"

Mr. Germaine signifying acquiescence his wife read: "If violations of chastity were equally dishonorable in both sexes, a more familiar and friendly intercourse might take place between them without danger. Two young people might converse together intimately without its being supposed that they either intended marriage or intrigue, and a much better opportunity would thus be given to both sexes of finding out kindred dispositions and of forming strong and lasting attachments, without which the married life is more productive of misery than happiness."

After some moments of quiet thought Mr. Germaine asked: "Would you, then, have boys treat girls just as they do other boys?"

"I asked that question this afternoon, and the answer was that a boy should be taught to be polite to both boys and girls, and also to manifest a courteous chivalry toward women, because his mother is a woman. As the speaker enlarged on this idea she said that the child would not see all that this implies, but it means courtesy to all women and girls, because of the womanhood of the mother, and also because of the potential motherhood of the woman. The thought of motherhood should sanctify every girl and woman in the mind of man. Since we have been talking it has come to me that this foolish jesting about love and marriage degrades it in thought, and one reason why we have so much unhappiness in married life may be the fact that we began to undermine the foundations of morality in our teaching of our babies to play with the thought of the God-ordained relations of the sexes as with some trivial toy."

"I believe you are right, wife. At any rate, the boy that has been taught to honor womanhood and motherhood in this way will certainly be a worthy knight of the twentieth century and worthy of the hand and heart of the twentieth century woman."—Mary Wood Allen, M. D.

The French Academy of Medicine has taken up the question of the healthfulness of bicycling, and at a recent meeting decided to investigate the subject thoroughly. Besides a number of sudden deaths from heart disease ascribed to the practice, cases were reported of tuberculosis being reawakened by cycling, and of vertebral disease. The Academy resolved unanimously that till the results of the inquiry are known "the use of the bicycle (safety) should be permitted only after a careful medical examination of the individual."

Letter Department.

LAMONI, Iowa, Oct. 10.

Editors Herald:—I returned home last Wednesday evening. Had been gone since the reunion at Logan. Was able to do more within that period of time than I had been for a long time previously. I spoke six times at Magnolia and baptized two who were largely the fruits of others' labors. I enjoyed the support and blessings of the Master, together with the communion and kindness of old-time Saints and friends. Still, it only seems a few short days since we abode in their midst.

My next point was Missouri Valley, where I also spoke six times but did not enjoy as good liberty as I did at Magnolia; however, I feel grateful for the help afforded me by the Divine Spirit, and trust that the members of the church at Missouri Valley may soon learn more fully what it is to be Saints, and how to do the work required at their hands. So far as their treatment of me, individually, is concerned, I have no word of complaint to offer—far from it. If the branch succeeds it will do well under the circumstances; and it may be that the district authorities will need to extend help in more ways than simply in the preaching of the word. Is it a fact that our people are depending too much upon preaching, and not enough upon individual righteousness and other provisions of the divine law for the regulating and building up of the work?

October 1 found me at Woodbine, and on the 2d I opened up at the Pleasant Valley schoolhouse, four miles from Woodbine. I held four services at this place with very good results. (Four, not six, as reported in last Herald. Two of the six sermons referred to there were preached at Woodbine.) I was blessed with more than ordinary liberty, for me, in all the four sermons preached. After this I spoke four times in Woodbine. I tried to do the best I could, and was kindly treated by the Saints. Three times out of the four I enjoyed very fair liberty. President Joseph Smith preceded me at Woodbine, and his labors were well received.

October 10 and 11 I occupied in the Saints' chapel at Dow City, and I was not left alone. Saw some things to admire and some to regret. It is frequently the case that when Saints fall into evil and forbidden things, they try to hide them from old-time friends and coworkers; but how often this effort to hide is a failure! And if a failure when we try to hide from each other, what shall we say of the all-searching eye of God? Do we ever succeed in deceiving him? Dear Saints, let us quit at once the practice of that which is contrary to the pure standard of eternal truth as revealed in "the glorious gospel of Christ." Men and women have various and conflicting opinions concerning this and that, but with the Saints of God the pertinent and important question is, Does it agree with the standard? If not, it should not be indulged in by anyone who bears the name of Saint. If it does, then it should be accepted in good faith by all. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

What shall we say if they do not act "according to this word"?

On the 12th, 13th, and 14th I was in attendance at Galland's Grove conference. The sessions were peaceful and, with but little exception, harmonious. I met many old-time friends and enjoyed their society. Elders Turner, McDowell, and myself were the speakers. On Sunday morning, while preaching, and a short time afterwards, while meditating upon the blessing I had received, I had one of those grand and impressive experiences which we do not soon forget. To God be all the glory, for he is worthy. The Sunday school association occupied the time on Saturday afternoon and night, and they are alive in their work.

At this juncture, some old physical reminders impressed me with the necessity of seeking the rest of home, at once. So I was compelled to say "No" to a number of kind invitations to remain over another Sunday at the Grove, and to go and labor elsewhere.

I met numbers of Saints who seemed to be active and earnest in the faith. This was gratifying indeed. And when I stood before audiences composed partly of those who listened to my feeble efforts, at the same localities, from fifteen to twenty-one years ago, I felt grateful to God that I was able to look every man in the face with the full assurance that I had done nothing, knowingly, to injure any of my brethren, or to reflect discredit upon the principles of our holy religion. I make no claim of perfection for myself, nor for any of my brethren; but am sensibly conscious of a continued effort to do my duty, and properly care for the work, whatever might become of myself, so far as human agency might elect. Now, being conscious of all this, is it presumptuous to claim the promise which the Lord made in 1873? If so, for what purpose was the promise made?

"Verily, I say unto you, if these my servants will henceforth magnify their calling in honor before me, they shall become men of power and excellent wisdom in the assemblies of my people."—D. C. 117: 5.

From the adjournment of the General Conference till the holding of the reunion at Logan, I did all that my condition of health would permit, preaching more or less at Lamoni, Davis City, Leon, at four different places in Mercer county, Missouri, and at Allendale, Missouri, within which time I baptized three.

In 1892, I requested the First Presidency to either lessen my charge, or relieve me altogether, for a time, if they could do so in harmony with their best judgment and the mind of the Spirit. This was done wholly upon the grounds of continuously failing health, of which fact none was so conscious as myself. It seemed that the time had not come for me to receive any relief of this kind, for my charge was added to rather than diminished. However, I accepted my appointment in good faith and tried to do the best I could to honor it. In 1893 I was greatly relieved by the considerate kindness of the First Presidency in appointing Bro. Joseph Luff to share the burden with me. Last spring, when I referred to the request made by me two years previously, I was asked if I still felt in the same frame of mind, to which I replied that I did, if they could consistently grant it. It was done, and in my opinion, none too soon.

I do not believe (and you will please excuse me for my infidelity) that the right way to strengthen "the little ones" is to keep them in ignorance of the true character of any of God's revelations to us. This has been largely the policy of the "mother of harlots" and her daughters, but it is not, and never can be, the true policy of the Church of God. When the accepted revelations of the church are attacked by those without, we are expected to intelligently defend them. Can we do this if we never think, talk, nor write about them, as they appear to us? I grant that for any minister of the church to "criticise" the purported revelations of God, after they have been accepted by the church, from the standpoint that they are of human origin, is out of order; but when done from the standpoint of their divine origin, I claim that such discussion, though it may involve the necessity of pointing out what may appear to be their weaker points, is highly beneficial and conducive to the growth of the "little ones."

Your brother, in the one faith,
J. R. LAMBERT.

COLDWATER, Mich., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our conference just closed peacefully and profitably; attendance unusually large: many strange faces in the audience. Those who have been accustomed to face the Southern Michigan audiences of Latter Day Saints will note the contrast sharply. Many of the older, familiar, dear faces are gone; new ones have come in to take their places. God grant that these latter may fill the sphere of duty as well as those who have laid down the armor, covered with the dust of many a sharp encounter, and scarred with the wounds of many a hard fought fight. The old and experienced warriors are falling in the ranks, and the young and vigorous are coming to the front—the hope of our cause and nation.

One was baptized during conference, a Catholic lady from Angola, Indiana. She wrote me a letter while I was at Knox in the "fray" with Braden, which she kindly consented to let me send you for publication. I will inclose it with this. The lady is shrewd and intelligent, finely cultured, and will be a great help, no doubt, to the work. Saints are all encouraged and renewed in the work. The pace is rapid for the cause; we can all see the "hastening time," the "harvest" period, in which is crowded the measures and hoarded up resentments of six thousand years. At the conclusion, will I be ready? Pray for me. Respectfully,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

ANGOLA, Ind., Oct. 2.

Mr. Scott:—To whom shall I apply for baptism? Since attending the debate I have read "principles of the gospel" which has been of great assistance to me in studying God's word. I can truly say I believe with all my heart, and desire to obey the conditions that I may claim the promises. There are two others that I believe will obey when the opportunity is offered.

Perhaps you may remember me. I am the Catholic lady who spoke to you the last evening of the debate, but I can no longer be satisfied in the doctrine of a church which I believe to be an apostate from the "Church of Christ."

Among my acquaintances there is but one Latter Day Saint, and that one belongs to the Utah Church, therefore could be of no assistance to me. She gave me a book "Succession of the Presidency," but, "by their fruits ye shall know them;" and I cannot accept them, and as I know of no other person of whom I can ask, I make this appeal to you. We can come to Coldwater if more convenient.

MRS. CECIL CARRIE FLAGLER.

CANTON, Ill., Sept. 3.

Editors Herald:—As your columns are not flooded with news from this part of the vineyard it may be well to send a few items. But before I get around to local affairs I want to touch things up a little.

The editor of the Herald is a success as the prophet of God to the church in this dispensation. As a man of broad scope of understanding in spiritual things, of sterling integrity, and moral worth, and everlasting patience, he is a success. As an American politician and political economist he is not as great a success. But perhaps he may not have laid claim to this distinction. Judging from editorials in Herald on strikes and labor troubles, I think he does just a wee bit.

Now you know he has patience, or he would not stand such criticisms. I will not argue the question. It is wrong to disagree through the Herald, some say, especially with the President of the Church. What would an average elder do if he could find no one to "spute" with? I am neither a Democrat nor a Republican, but one of many that cannot go the editor's views on political economy, and don't like to see it in the Herald; that is, unless somebody on the other side takes hold and explodes it. But a political debate in the Herald is hardly the thing, so you are treading on our corns and out of delicacy and propriety, (what I have already said may not confirm this,) we don't like to talk back. What I have said on general topics I think will suffice me for some time.

I left home about six weeks ago for Henderson; spoke there five times, and then came on here, and in connection with Bro. J. W. Terry began outdoor preaching in a beautiful park. It was an experiment, but was our last resort to reach the people. On Sundays we had from two to three hundred (some think as many as four hundred) out to hear. I have never had better liberty, with few exceptions, in all my life. By the way, we had the apostles of the Flying Roll with us. They hail from Detroit, Michigan. The Flying Roll written by James J. Jezareel of England, a book about the size of Tullidge's history, is God's last message to man. The missionaries travel afoot, two and two, and preach in parks and on the streets, in churches, schoolhouses, and public halls. They take no collections, but throw themselves wholly upon the charity of the world. They seem very sincere, meek, and humble, yet courageous in admitting questions and defending their doctrine. Here is an example for the Seventy in the Church of Christ. But their doctrine is a strange mixture of truth and error. According to them there is a female spirit in the Godhead. In the end of days a new light was to break forth, and that's the Flying Roll. In order to become sons of God and obtain absolute salvation, the law, the gospel, and the Flying Roll must all be accepted. All sincere ones in the denominations will be saved with the common salvation and become as the angels, but not sons of God. Those who accept this last message will never die. Their message is largely to the ten lost tribes. Hell is the grave; the soul, spirit, and body, are three distinct entities: The soul goes to the grave with the body and will be resurrected; but the body will not. The second coming of Christ is near at hand. We came in conflict with them in one of our Sunday meetings. They held forth at 2:30 p. m., your humble servant at four, and 7:30, and they at 4:30. An immense crowd was out. We did not deflect much, but where our doctrine and theirs came in contact we drew the lines plainly, but in a kindly spirit.

This is a peculiar field in many ways. There is no opposition of the open, many kind. The priests of Babylon here are dumb dogs that cannot bark. All the opposition is of the underhanded kind. The sectarian priests are busily engaged drawing their salaries and keeping up the old spiritual stagnation of the dark ages. It is a mortal sin to argue; they would not do it for the world. The people are wealthy, and proud; and well satisfied with their religion, as a rule: yet there are many open, warm-hearted people here that will eventually obey if the work can be pushed. Many have been convinced, but few even of them obey. We will toil on as faithfully as possible, hoping for the harvest by and by.

E. E. WHEELER.

SULPHUR WELLS, Ind., Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—The district conference of Southern Indiana convened the 13th and closed on the 14th. There was a fair representation of the members and ministry. Several questions of importance came before us and were discussed and settled satisfactorily, which we trust will result in good to all, especially to this district. The preaching services were conducted by Brn. Short, M. R. Scott, L. F. Daniel, J. M. Scott, and W. H. Kelley. I was pleased to note an improvement in our ministry. There was quite a good attendance of the outside world who were favorably impressed, if their respectful attention is a criterion. The communion service was especially good and impressive in prayers, in testimonies, in tongues. The Byrneville Saints vied with one another to make things pleasant for all. Some things occurred during the conference that caused momentary sadness, but I trust the results will be increased understanding of the law of the Lord.

I was pleased to learn from M. T. Short and L. F. Daniel that the work was being favorably received in the northwestern part of this field. Brn. George Jenkins and J. M. Scott also report the outlook encouraging in the central portion. Our young brother, M. R. Scott, Jr., reports encouraging prospects from his field. Our untiring worker, A. C. Barmore, reports new openings from the southwest; and James M. Baggerly from his point of view feels exultant, and ready for the fray, after a brief engagement in school work. M. R. Scott, Sr., is looking to the interest of the work in his vicinity of country. Certainly with so grand a class of men, whom it is a delight to honor, this glorious cause will go forward and prevail. Myself and V. D. are holding forth at the Buckeye schoolhouse in Perry county, this week, with favorable prospects of additions to the church. Respectfully,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

BANDERA, Texas, Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—My last letter was from San Antonio. I left there on the 15th for this point, in company with Bro. and Sr. Wight and Joseph Manere. I labored here among the old Lymanites, visiting and preaching; but I find but few of the old stock left; Ezra Chipman, William Ballantyne, George Hays and wife, and her mother, Sr. Curtis. With my visiting and preaching among them and their posterity I enjoyed myself very much. Bro. Wight took me up to the head of the left prong of the Medina River to hunt out some of the lost sheep of Israel in a country you would least expect to find an Israelite; but to my surprise in these canyons, the valleys and hills were full of people, and I wondered where they came from. We labored over a week, then Bro. Wight left me in care of Father John Currie to go over the divide; but sickness prevented me from taking the trip, and the old gentleman and I, after three days' sickness, returned to Pipe Creek, to attend our conference which convened the 22d of September. Our business sessions went off pleasantly, the preaching being done by Brn. Sheppard, Wight, Father Currie, and the writer, Bro. Sheppard returning home to Oscar, Indian Territory, Bro. Wight to Beeville, and I to remain till Friday.

Father Currie was to take me down to San Antonio, to fill an appointment, but I was disappointed in this; for before we were to start I was smitten with erysipelas, for ten days suffering excruciating pain. After that I began to amend slowly. I was stricken down at Bro. Dunlap's. His wife was a Baptist saint, and to God be praise for the untiring zeal of this woman for my welfare. She nursed me as she would her own child. She is the kind of Baptist that believes in works. She recommended tar and grease, and that drove off the disease. Last Saturday Bro. Johnson went down with his hack and bed, and they lifted me in and I was brought here, not much the worse for the nine miles ride. I am now in care of Bro. Robert Chipman's family, who are doing all they can for my recovery. This is the twelfth day since I was taken down. I can get about some now with crutches.

Taking all things into consideration I think I shall return home when able to travel. My intentions were to labor about San Antonio this winter, but I find the climate no better here, as far as the erysipelas chills are concerned, than at home. Now, let this suffice for my return.

I must say I never felt better on any mission I have ever taken from conference. I know the good Spirit has been with me in my labors with Saints and others. Success to all lovers of truth.

JOHN HAWLEY.

AUBURN, Iowa, Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference closed at Galland's Grove, Iowa, the evening of the 14th inst., and we are glad to say that we had a profitable session. Elder Joseph R. Lambert was with us, and the Saints enjoyed his preaching there and at Dow City very much.

Reports show that our missionaries and local elders and priests are doing well. Three were baptized and an excellent young man, Bro. C. Joseph Carlson, was ordained to the priest's office. The good Spirit was with us during the entire session, and the Saints rejoiced.

In bonds,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Oct. 15.

Editors Herald:—I write just a few lines for the benefit of the many who are anxiously awaiting the time for the Evanelia, or gospel boat, to sail for the far-away isles of the sea. Some of the missionaries having given up going now, whose company would have been very acceptable to us, has rendered our journey thus far, somewhat unpleasant, as we so much expected them to go; but my wife and I have done as the darkey said to us on the train, "Just take your life in your hand and trust in de Lo'd."

Our attention was called most of the time to the beautiful scenery along the road, especially from Denver to Salt Lake City. Here we stopped over one day, viewed the city with its wide streets, beautiful shade trees, the temple, and many other attractive features to us, passed on to Ogden, thence west over the range, and once more were delighted with the scenery, especially along the Truckee River. I never could describe its grandeur either in word or with pen; but it far surpasses anything my mind had ever painted for it.

While I have viewed the beautiful scenery of the West I have been confirmed more firmly than ever before in the truthfulness of the historical part of the Book of Mormon in regard to the rocks being broken and the earth heaved in every conceivable manner, etc., and as I bid my native land farewell I do so feeling calm in my soul, and shall ever strive to say, "Father, thy will be done" and go and do at his command at all times, leaving the results with him and those unto whom I minister.

I feel to thank our Father in heaven that my name is written in the Lamb's book of life, and ask the Saints to pray for us that we may ever do good and labor for our Master, wherever our lot may be cast, and bless many with the fullness of the gospel, lead them out of darkness into light, and return with them in safety to ever be with the pure in heart.

San Francisco, Oct. 18.—I take pleasure in informing my coworkers in regard to time of our leaving port on the little gospel boat, Evanelia. We leave about one p. m. to-day. Have been delayed some on account of part of the missionaries giving up the voyage at present, and this morning on account of bad weather. We have a cozy little home in the cabin, as you will see by Sr. Burton's letter.

Bro. and Sr. Burton, Bro. Scott, Bro. Niemann, Mr. McGrath, and myself and wife are all on board and will set sail for the islands. We ask the Saints to pray for us that we may ever have the blessings of heaven with us.

Your brother in Christ,

HUBERT CASE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 18.

On board the Evanelia.

Editors Herald:—Elder Hubert Case and his wife arrived on Monday, and this morning we expected to go to sea in tow of the good tug Alice, but the reports by telephone from the heads certified that there was a heavy sea and southerly wind outside the heads, and as that wind is dead ahead we concluded not to go to sea; and this evening shows we did well not to start, for the weather is decidedly unfavorable; and now we will wait until our fair California weather comes and a westerly or northerly wind blows again.

On the 23d of September the Evanelia was dedicated to the service of our Master in the South Seas. Two hundred or more Saints and friends were present under the shed on the wharf at which the little schooner lay. Bro. C. A. Parkin, representing the Bishop, offered the opening prayer, after singing, after which Sr. Ida May Cooper, of Santa Rosa, sang a solo, and then, after singing by the choir, Bro. J. C. Clapp addressed the assembly, after which Bro. M. H. Forscutt went on board the gospel boat and in solemn prayer dedicated her to the services of the Lord. And after singing a hymn composed for the occasion by Bro. M. H. Forscutt, and the benediction the crowd dispersed, and all was again quiet on board the Evanelia.

The next week finished the main part of the carpenter work, and on Thursday with a pilot on board we went out on the bay and towards the heads, to try her, and also to get her into a quiet, clean place to lie where we could paint her and finish her all complete, while waiting for our missionaries, and while we attended the reunion at San Jose. As we got out towards the heads the wind increased, blowing quite fresh, but the Evanelia behaved splendidly, and although there was a heavy, short sea running against a strong tide, and the wind blowing strong, yet she tacked as nicely as a yacht would in a smooth sea, and behaved herself as a good mistress of the seas should; and Old Neptune will surely be proud of his new acquisition. After having tried her, tacking, wearing, by the wind, the wind free and winged out, we ran in to Sansalito and anchored among the yachts in a smooth, well-sheltered bay, where she received the finishing touches. And soon after reunion we ran back to San Francisco, and at section 4, sea wall, we are yet lying waiting now for wind and weather to change, everthing being all ready for sea.

Our crew consists of J. F. Burton master, Jephtha Scott mate, Fred Niemann second mate and cook, Hubert Case and William McGrath A. B's., or able seamen, and Srs. Case and Burton. The wind southerly, cloudy, and barometer falling, indicating bad weather, and we possibly may have to wait yet a day or two.

The islanders will certainly be proud of the gospel boat, and will ever hold in grateful remembrance the children and Saints of America and other places who furnished the means, and the good Bishop who has had built and furnished with so good an outfit the neat little craft Evanelia.

The report has just come on board that the weather is bad outside and the bar is breaking—it was best not to go to sea to-day. Bro. Parkin will send to Bishop Kelley a negative or two of those which were made of the boat with the missionaries on board all ready for sea, and very soon all the Saints can for a trifle see the Evanelia, as without doubt Bro. Kelley will have them for sale at the Herald Office, and the Saints of California can get some of the photographs which were taken on dedication day, by applying to Bro. C. A. Parkin, No. 3010 Sixteenth street, California.

Friday morning, daylight.—Fine, clear, westerly wind and weather. By seven a. m. we will be in tow of the Alice for sea. Will have a pleasant and quick passage.

All well; good-bye.

J. F. BURTON.

TAKAROA, Oceanica, Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—In my experience in this foreign land I have found that all beds are not made of feathers, and every reclining place does not prove to be among flowery beds of ease; neither are all meals eaten amid a dazzling array of silverware; also that in the Devil's going to and fro in the earth as a roaring lion he forgets not to give careful attention to these little islands as well as other places, tempting and leading astray the children of men. So vigorously is he at work that sometimes I think that if ever I get through it will be a narrow escape; at least I am often reminded that I have not yet put on immortality, and that if I would win, I must continue to grapple with the "law in my members," which is continually warring against the "law of my mind." My experience here causes my mind to revert to a sentence in a prophecy given me through Sr. France of Southern Kansas: "Many trials await you;" and I think, how true! By the grace of God I still strive to conquer and to do what I can to help roll on the work, and can give your readers to understand that here also the battle is on.

This island is the main stronghold of the Utah missionaries in this part of the world; but we also have a small branch here, and they are alive and wide awake. I arrived here yesterday and preached for the Saints this morning at seven o'clock. The president of the branch took notes during the sermon, and after the benediction, he asked questions on every point in the discourse, different ones in the audience answering readily, and giving every passage that I used, and in many instances quoting my own arguments verbatim. I was much pleased to see how thoroughly they canvassed my remarks, and to know that I made them understand.

Since April conference, and until I arrived here, I have spent the time about two or three hundred miles southeast of here, on the islands of Hikueru and Raroia, in company with a young native elder, who is proving to be a noble worker, and is improving rapidly, and is getting right into the true spirit of the work. He has been a great help to me in learning the language so far. With his help I can translate and get it into pretty good native. I first translate the best I can and then hand it to him for correction. Thus we have translated many passages of the Doctrine and Covenants that we wished to use. I translated the sixty-fifth section and gave it to him to correct, and was surprised when he told me it was "uo tano," all straight, and needed no correction. The natives copy with eagerness every verse we translate and are very anxious to have the book complete in their own tongue. I find translating is good exercise, and it puts me right on my mettle; it brings out wonderfully the half forgotten words.

While we were in Raroia, the Catholics challenged us for a discussion on the church question. We accepted, and made arrangements for Bro. Loui to meet them. When the appointed time arrived, the Catholics all came into our churchhouse, and commenced what they termed a discussion; but I have no better name for it than a good-natured wrangle, and will not attempt to describe it here, but reserve it for fireside chat when I return to America. Suffice it to say that for three days and from three to five hours each day they attempted to carry on a discussion after the manner in which they conduct lawsuits here; First, each party writing down the points he wished to canvass, then the most of the time was spent in trying to get the Catholic to bring out his argument, and in endeavoring to get them to permit Bro. Loui to bring in all his evidence. We could not get them to touch some of their weakest points, and finally let them go in order for Bro. Loui to bring in his argument; but while he was coming in on the home stretch and far ahead, they jumped up and objected to him bringing in any more. So, being thoroughly disgusted with such proceedings, I induced them to stop, for there was no good in it. I then challenged them to discuss on a different plan, on the question "Eaha vau e ora'i au?" (What shall I do to be saved?) After considerable arranging, we all met again to discuss the above, each to have one hour. I opened, and discoursed with liberty on the plan of salvation for just one hour. Then the Catholic (a native) got up and spoke seven minutes, and played out, saying that if any others of his brethren wished to say anything to do so. That was not according to agreement. However, I said nothing, as I wished to see what they would do. So one of their number arose with a question book and read from it until time was called, making a few comments as he went along.

His brethren were all out of sorts because he read from the question book, and I have no fears that any of our folks will apostatize because of what they heard that day, but were delighted with results. While the second Catholic was speaking or reading he made reference once to a passage in the Bible, and took up one to read. While he was reading a vision opened to the president of the branch; he saw the hand of the man who held the Bible pierced through and through as with a knife and the blood running profusely. All along he seemed filled with a desire to say something bad to us, but could not make it fit just right.

While we were in Raroia I baptized three. While at Hikueru I baptized eight, and Bro. Loui baptized eighteen; twenty-nine in all. Brn. Newton and Jansson while in some islands near there baptized twenty-three, and after Bro. Newton came back Bro. Jansson baptized more.

Our division conference meets in October and we want to make our way to Kaukura by the 6th. My colaborer is one of my counselors, or vice president, in my division. We have made arrangements with a captain of a vessel to take us from here in a week or so. I have been on ten or twelve islands and have had to pay but three dollars for traveling expenses so far. Several owners of vessels take us when convenient for them; that is, when our destination is in their course, and are very kind to us. I appreciate their kindness, I assure you.

I have not yet received the news of the April conference in America, and am about crazy to get my mail, and have no idea how long it may possibly be before I do. Lonesome is no name; if the friends who have written could only know how much good their letters do me, they would be content whether they receive answers or not. I am thankful to those who have written. I cannot answer all, but know ye assuredly, that every letter fills a mission, for each is like a refreshing shower to a famishing plant. Any of the Saints who will write me will be doing a good deed. I also ask you all to pray that I may be blessed of the Lord to do my work; for I love this work, and desire to do all I can to help enlighten these people. And were it not for the fear of God and love for his work and his people, I should speedily return to my own land; but I love these people the more, the longer I am with them, and my heart swells in contemplating their future under right conditions. If they could only have the helps necessary to bring them up, they would soon become a delightful people.

Have preached between twenty-five and thirty sermons in the native language up to the present. It becomes easier rapidly. O, how I wish the church would send a young man to labor with me who could rough it everywhere I can! Bro. Devore is an excellent companion but cannot stand the sea travel very well. "Two and two" is the command, and the sooner we "haapao i te reira" (keep it), the better it will be for us. It would seem like a new dispensation to me to have a colaborer in the work here, that is, of my own race. We have thus far scattered out in order to get more work done, but I am rather doubtful as to the results.

In hope of victory,

WOMAN.

THE first woman was created for the especial purpose of being the wife of Adam, and was crowned with all the honors and noble dignity belonging to that position. She was created for performing the duties which man could not fill, and for which he was not fitted; and she was no less his equal in carrying out the destiny for which the Almighty had fitted her:—

And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make a help meet for him.—Gen. 2:18.

Thus Adam was relieved of his loneliness, for if Adam had been permitted to remain in Eden with all its beauty and grandeur, with no one to share the good things by which he was surrounded, his life would have seemed one of exile. Therefore the purpose of woman was not to be the slave of man, but to be "a help meet for him;" and this was before sin had entered Eden and left its blighting curse upon the first home which God established upon this earth.

How changed the scene! Sin entered the world and left its poison upon all that it touched, and the wife or woman is made to feel the effects of its deadly embrace, and is compelled to listen to the mournful statement,

And thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee.—Gen. 3:16.

Because of this utterance man has sought self-justification for all the degradation and ruin that he has been the means of bringing upon woman, and has made of this a cloak to cover the multitude of his sensual sins, believing that God had degraded woman, and that he was pleased to have him complete her ruin.

But from this sinful condition there was to be a way of escape:—

For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.—Rom. 5:19.

The way of escape from this sinful condition was made known to our first parents by the revelation of the gospel and that by their restoration to God's favor should come all the blessings and privileges belonging to both.

It is a fact plainly manifest in the history of the race that woman has reached her highest and best condition among the nations that have recognized Jesus Christ and his gospel as the rule and guide of their lives; and God is teaching mankind that woman is man's equal in all that is good, virtuous, lovely, and pure.

All through the Scriptures the Lord recognizes the wife in her proper place as being coequal with man.

When Abraham was grieved at the conduct of Sarah his wife towards the bondwoman, the Lord told Abraham to "hearken" unto the "voice" of his wife (Gen. 21:12), thus showing that the wife had rights that Abraham should not abrogate, and that he should accede to her request. And when Miriam and Aaron undertook to interfere with the marriage of Moses, it profited them nothing. (Num. 12:1-15.)

In Judges 13 we are told how an angel of the Lord appeared to the mother of Samson and gave her advice in relation to the purity of her child and what she should do; that is, reminded her of the principle inculcated in the Word of Wisdom (D. and C. 86), which principle was as true then as now; and thus the Lord has always sought to honor woman in her place, and requires man to do the same. If she is the "weaker vessel," it is because man has sought to make her such, and prides himself upon his strength to lead her astray.

Listen to a few breathings of inspiration in relation to woman:—

A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband.—Prov. 12:4.

Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing.—Prov. 18:22.

A prudent wife is from the Lord.—Prov. 19:14.

These expressions show the estimation in which woman was held amongst God-fearing people. Therefore, with the restoration of the gospel, it is no wonder that woman is climbing higher; she is only seeking to occupy the place for which God has fitted her by her creation; and she is bound to reach her level, and none can hinder. We can no more stay her than we can stop the mad torrent in its wild rush through the valley, because the cry of inspiration with the latter-day gospel to manservant and maidservant is, "Come up higher;" and with this must disappear the false notion of the dark ages, that woman was "born to be a slave."

The gospel offers the best emancipation for woman the world has ever known, therefore the church cannot afford to turn a deaf ear to the Mothers' Society, Daughters of Zion, and other kindred organizations which are coming to birth in the church. It is God moving upon woman to help save the race from sensual degradation, misery, and eternal woe, and fitting her to occupy the exalted station in life which is her birthright.

When Jesus was amongst men he always treated women as well as men with respect, and never sought to belittle one at the expense of the other. After his resurrection he first appeared to a woman and sent a message by her to his disciples; and nowhere in the gospel is woman made man's inferior, but both are to be made better by obedience to its truths.

Paul in speaking of woman describes her true relation to man:—

The head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God.—1 Cor. 11:3.

That is, the woman bears a similar relationship to the man that Christ does to God. Christ does not surrender his individual liberty and become a slave, neither should the woman; but as God and Christ are one in purpose, so should the man and his wife be one, studying each other's welfare and interest:—

For the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man. Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man. . . . Nevertheless neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord. For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; but all things of God.—1 Cor. 11:8-12.

Herein is set forth the condition of mutual interdependence which each bears to the other. Both are the result of God's work, and man has no condition of birthright which would justify him in treating woman as his inferior:—

Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence; and likewise also the wife unto the husband.—1 Cor. 7:3.

Therefore, the disposition of some men to look upon woman as his inferior is not in harmony with the teachings of the gospel, but is a perversion of God's great truth, and largely the result of tradition and creeds, one of which we here insert. There are others like it, but one will suffice for our present purpose. In the English Episcopal Church marriage service, the minister says to the man:—

Wilt thou have this woman to thy wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou love her, comfort her, honor and keep her in sickness and in health; and forsaking all others keep thee only unto her so long as you both shall live.

The man shall answer, "I will."

Then he says to the woman:—

Wilt thou have this man to thy wedded husband, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy estate of matrimony? Wilt thou obey him, and serve him, love, honor, and keep him in sickness and in health; and forsaking all others keep thee only unto him, so long as ye both shall live?

The woman shall answer, "I will."

Why should the woman promise to "obey" the man and he be exempt from such promise? It is plain upon the face of it that God who created woman with rights equal to man, though tending in another direction, never could have inspired such a marriage covenant. If the woman is required to promise "to obey," the man should do the same; for he has no birthright by which he should lord it over her and she be his servant.

But, not satisfied with the pledge once, it is again repeated, and the man says:—

I, John, take thee, Mary, to my wedded wife and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I plight thee my troth.

Then the woman says:—

I, Mary, take thee, John, to my wedded husband, to have and to hold from this day forward, for better for worse, for richer for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love, cherish, and to obey, till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance; and thereto I give thee my troth.

"God's holy ordinance" does not require a one-sided contract, for in each instance of the above pledge, the woman is required to say, "I will obey," while the man is exempt from this obligation. Such an article must have been framed by those who believed that woman was man's inferior, and that the church was called upon to lend its influence to keep woman down in the social scale. Woman was created as man's equal in "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" and because man has hindered her in this pursuit, God is now pushing woman to the front, and in many instances in the race of life she is proving to be the "fittest." Marriage was never intended to cut off her chances for "life, liberty, and happiness," but was for the purpose of developing a truer manhood and womanhood by each respecting the rights of the other, each working in his place as one, in unity as "God and Christ are one," and not by a false interpretation of "they twain shall be one flesh," and that one the man, and the woman nothing only as her lord may permit her.

This one-sided marriage contract reminds me of a case reported in the papers from English, Indiana, April 8, 1894:—

Absalom Thayer and Miss Estelle Flagler stood up to be married here Friday night. When the minister turned to the bride elect and said, "You take this man as your lawful husband?" she answered, "No, sir, I do not; you're the first who asked my opinion on the matter. Mr. Thayer has been courting my mother for more than a year. I thought it was herself he wanted, but it appears that he only wanted her consent to marry me, and she concluded to compel me to wed him." The minister then said: "This ends it; I have no power to bind anyone against his or her will." The crowd broke up cheering for the girl.

There have been times when woman was compelled to marry against her will, but the inspiration of liberty is taking hold of woman and giving her courage to dignify her womanhood. In the marriage covenant adopted by the church (D. C. 111: 2) the rights of woman are on a par with those of man, and the contract is as binding upon one as the other, wherein they are asked to agree to the following:—

You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives.

In this agreement neither party swears away any of his rights; and when "God joins together," he does not degrade woman nor require her to be the meaner servant. I know there are those who will say that a woman cannot be governed unless she is kept in subjection, and so they repeat these words:—

Believe me as you may,
Believe me what I say,
You will always find it best
To let a woman have her way.

It is no more true than in the case of man, for he likes to have his way; for many like to say:—

I am monarch of all I survey,
My right there is none to dispute.

But it should be remembered that she whom you led to the altar has a right to dispute with you when you seek to wrong her. In the dark ages of the past it was the common belief that the Devil was only manifest in womankind; for in the punishment of witches in Salem, Massachusetts, it was chiefly the women who were put to death for witchcraft, and the sentence was passed upon them by the minister; but when the minister's wife was accused of being a witch, there came a change over the people, and persecutions for witchery became fewer.

Those who have been called leading lights in the world have not always accorded to woman her true place in their affections. The following is from Shakespeare's will:—

I give unto my wife my second best bed with the furniture.

Why should he give her only the "second best"? What use had he for his first "best" bed when he was dead? If he had honored her as his equal he would have unhesitatingly said, "I give my wife my 'best bed.'"

I now desire to call the reader's attention to a statement of one not of the church in relation to woman and her place. It is from Fowler on Marriage, page 32:—

Even among civilized nations, the doctrines of the Bible and the religion of Jesus Christ are the only infallible safeguards of the sex. They are like a strong fortress to guard and protect the weak and helpless.

When we learn that among the heathen nations, minds like those of Plato and Euripides, refined and cultivated by the discipline of the schools, possessing an ample acquaintance with all the learning and philosophy of their day, upheld and advocated the degradation of woman by countenancing polygamy, who can long hesitate in deciding the importance of our holy religion in the elevation of the female sex in society? It is a truth of no little importance to woman, that her comparatively exalted position and restoration to her proper dignity, are bounded by the influence of the religion of Jesus. Let her understand that man, in his natural character, unrestrained by a Savior's love, perpetually seeks the degradation of the female mind; and if there is anything in his history which stains his soul with blackness, and marks his footsteps with crime and blood, and which ought to make him blush and hang his head to think himself a man, it is the deep and foul indignity which he has offered to the gentler and more refined half of our race.

These words are as true as though uttered by inspiration. The only power by which a man can overcome this damning sin is a "Savior's love" and power as revealed in the gospel, and in this and this alone is the assurance that a person can have "his robes washed white in the blood of the Lamb." If we would look into the domestic life of a great many men whom the world calls noble, we would find that their nobility would "go through the eye of a needle;" and no man can be truly great who seeks to deprive woman of her proper place in life.

It is time that man should awaken to the fact that woman was not created to be a machine, to be turned as man pleases, but that she has creative rights equal to his for the purpose of carrying out God's great plan of life and it is no mistake that we must account to God for the proper use of our lives towards each other.

Peter the Great of Russia was so brutal towards woman that he is called a monster. The following is said of him:—

Incredible as it may seem, it is nevertheless well authenticated that one of his own sisters—it is said more than one—received one hundred strokes of the whip on her back in the presence of the whole court for sympathizing with Alexis. The Princess Golitsyn, the bosom companion of the Empress Catharine, was publicly whipped by soldiers.

And the account closes with these words:—

Nothing ever told of Nero is more horribly grotesque than this; yet this man, or monster rather, is paraded before the world as "Peter the Great."

There are others whose greatness becomes very small in their conduct towards woman. The following entitled "Woman's true kindness," from the New York Journal, by a traveler, is worthy a place in this article:—

Among the nations, women are ever inclined to be cheerful and modest. They do not hesitate, like man, to perform a hospitable or generous action. Not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious; but full of courtesy and affection; industrious, economical, ingenious; more virtuous, and performing more good actions than man. I never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer. In wandering over the barren plains of inhospitable Denmark, through honest Sweden, frozen Lapland, rude and churlish Finland, unprincipled Russia, and the widespread regions of the wandering Tartar, if hungry, dry, cold, wet, or sick, woman has ever been friendly to me, and uniformly so. And, to add to this virtue, so worthy the appellation of benevolence, these actions have been performed in so free and kind a manner that if I was dry I drank the sweet draft, and if hungry ate the coarse morsel with a double relish.

Such expressions reveal the true inwardness of woman's conduct towards suffering man in contrast to man's inhumanity to woman which makes countless thousands of them mourn.

It is evident from the Scriptures that marriage is a heavenly institution, and that Jesus Christ set the seal of God upon it when he said,

What therefore God hath joined together let not man put asunder.—Matt. 19. 6; Mark 10: 9.

Therefore, whether men and women believe in Jesus Christ or not, an account must be rendered to the Almighty for the proper use of our lives towards each other as man and wife, though some persons may never understand it until they are weighed in the balances of God's eternal adjustment, when he vindicates the saying of the Book of Mormon,

I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women.

While the church is called upon to be an example to the world in its individual religious life, so in its married and home life it should be "as a city set upon a hill," that it may be an object lesson to this generation, pointing them to that "better life" revealed in Christ,

That ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world.—Phil. 2: 15.

JOHN SMITH.

FALL RIVER, Massachusetts, August, 1894.

DENOMINATIONAL BARRIERS DOWN.

It would appear from a recent sermon, by the Reverend De Witt Talmage, which was published in the World Herald in its issue for May 1, 1894, that the reverend divine has much joy in witnessing the tumbling down of denominational barriers. He says:—

The world's prospects are brightening. The Church of Christ is rising up in its strength to go forth, "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners;" clap your hands all ye people, the day breaketh.

Now, who would be sad when the Reverend De Witt Talmage suggests a general jubilation. But listen and hear the assigned reason for clapping the hands, etc. In the effulgent light which the breaking of the day radiates, his soul seems aglow; he adds:—

The bigotries of the earth are perishing. The time was when we were told that if we wanted to get to heaven, we must be immersed or sprinkled.

Now will you, kind reader, pause a moment and inquire what of immersion and what of sprinkling; whence their origin, and what their design? You may not (or you may) think the writer presumptuous in claiming that the terms "immersion" and "baptism" are one and the same with the reader and believer of biblical doctrine; but be that as it may, I make the claim. Therefore the question, What importance is to be attached to immersion? is pertinent.

It will be seen that the reverend gentleman classifies immersion among the nonessentials; for he plainly says:—

The time was when we were told that if we wanted to go to heaven we must be immersed or sprinkled, or we must believe in perseverance of the saints, or in the falling away from grace, or a litany or no litany, or they must be Calvinists, or Arminians, in order to reach heaven. We have all come to confess now, that these are nonessentials on religion.

How many the reverend gentleman speaks for in saying, "We have all come to confess," etc., I would not attempt to decide; but certain it is that the reverend divine, with one blast of his modern orthodox breath, essays to sweep away the above referred to nonessentials, and it is quite as certain that immersion is classified among the nonessentials. The readers will therefore hardly charge the writer with misrepresenting the reverend divine. But if you be among those who hold the person of the Reverend De Witt Talmage in admiration, an attempt to offer anything savoring of criticism may look presumptuous, to say the least, in which event I would respectfully suggest, that whatever obtains publicity is public property, may be indorsed or denounced. Of immersion (baptism) the Scriptures teach:—

And [they] were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

Christ, our exemplar, requests baptism at the hands of John, the reason for which is by him assigned thus:—

For thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness.—Matt. 3: 15.

So, in language too plain to be misunderstood, we learn, that baptism is a part of righteousness; for were it otherwise, Christ's teachings as above are purposeless. But was this baptism an immersion? Let us see:—

And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matt. 3: 16, 17.

If the reader will pause and consider, three conspicuous facts will be made visible in the above quotation: First, Jesus, subsequent to his baptism, coming straightway out of the water: Secondly, the descending of the Spirit like a dove, and lighting upon him. Thirdly, the voice of God from heaven recognizing the Christ as his beloved Son, with the declaration, "In whom I am well pleased." And when duly considered, will you essay to find a basis for belief that baptism, or immersion, is a nonessential? Or, will you claim that forasmuch as God publicly recognized his Son, after being baptized, what evidence of this recognition would have been heard or seen, if Christ had failed to have been baptized? If so by what rule of logic, line of argument, or scriptural quotation could such a claim be made valid.

Further, as there is no guaranty of salvation to mortals save by a recognition of the the divinity of Christ as the Christ, and the belief of that divinity to be demonstrated by evincing our loyalty to God, by bowing to the decrees, conditions, etc., reflected by God's word, how then can we expect justification by, or from God, by classifying one ordinance that Christ obeyed and taught, among the nonessentials? Can you, kind reader, not see and understand, that in the repudiation of immersion or baptism, God's word is brought into disrepute, which is tantamount to denying God himself? Hence Christ says:—

He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.—Matt. 12: 30.

And emblazoned as with the fire of inspiration he said:—

The words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him at the last day.—John 12: 48.

And being thoroughly imbued with the inspiration which prompted Christ to teach as above, Isaiah declared:—

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.—Isa. 55: 11.

And as a climax of evidence as to the validity and therefore the imperativeness of the word, the following appears in Christ's prayer:—

Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.—John 17: 17.

For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them.—John 17: 8.

Nor do I learn from this that the word, or a mere recognition of the same, is the only one thing needful; so far from this that the word reflects conditions which the creature must obey; hence in this sense, the word is imperative, the word sanctifies, the word saves. To illustrate:—

Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it: that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word.—Eph. 5: 25, 26.

That is to say, the word reflects the method of washing; hence we look for the method:—

And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he [Philip] baptized him [the eunuch].—Acts 8: 48.

Do you not, kind reader, see the verification of the expression, "with the washing of water by the word," in Philip leading the eunuch into the water to baptize him? And can you not see that baptism signifies immersion? If not, do not stop here, but essay to brace up your theological nerves for another flash of light from the legitimate source. Listen:—

Buried with him [Christ] in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him [Christ] through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead.—Col. 2: 12.

What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead unto sin, live any longer therein? Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore, we are buried with him [Christ] by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.—Rom. 6: 1-4.

The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.—1 Peter 3: 21.

What think you, kind reader? Is there aught in the above scriptures condemnatory of immersion or baptism? If not, do they not teach immersion? And if so, is not immersion essential? And if essential has the Rev. Talmage the right to classify immersion with the nonessentials? What say you? But lest you, kind reader, in your studiousness, should think the writer attaches too much importance to baptism, or immersion, thus depreciating faith and repentance, I respectfully suggest that faith and repentance are prerequisites preceding immersion or baptism. Hence we read:—

And were baptized of him [John] in Jordan, confessing their sins. Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance.—Matt. 3: 6, 8.

I tell you, Nay: but, except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish.—Luke 13: 3.

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.—Mark 16: 16.

If those believest with all thine heart, thou mayest.—Acts 8: 37.

Repent, and be baptized . . . for the remission of sins.—Acts 2: 38.

The above are sufficiently explicit and authoritative to demonstrate the essentiality of faith and repentance as prerequisites to immersion—baptism—and it cannot be the work of a sober, God-fearing, biblical student to enlarge upon one doctrine set forth in Christ's gospel to such an extent as will depreciate or render useless another part of that doctrine. Such a procedure would evince the indiscretion of a foolish engineer essaying to give prominence to one part of an engine by taking from another part that which belonged to it in the design of the maker as a preventive to friction. Hence, as if to meet such an exigency, John boldly taught:—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.—2 John 9.

Paul presents a comprehensive and authoritative recapitulation of Christ's doctrine: First, faith; second, repentance; third, baptisms; fourth, laying on of hands; fifth, resurrection of the dead; sixth, eternal judgment. (Heb. 6: 1, 2.) Thus we find these several parts constitute a perfect system and no more authority exists to eliminate one of these parts than exists to eliminate the whole, for it must follow that he that offends in one point is guilty of the whole. For if God's goodness is evidenced in imposing on his creatures faith and repentance, it is equally visible in the introduction of baptism, the laying on of hands, resurrection, etc. It was therefore more consistent to reject the whole counsel of God thus evincing no faith in God's wisdom, than to attempt to discriminate between some integral part which God has revealed as necessary to constitute the whole; thus claiming a wisdom superior to that of God.

Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his counsellor hath taught him?—Isaiah 40: 13.

Moreover we learn that as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, so they which were baptized into Christ, buried with him in baptism, were raised to a life divinely new. Do you, kind reader, think, or believe that Christ would have been raised up by the glory of the Father if he had not died, and therefore been buried? If not, on what basis could you believe that those who were dead in trespasses and sin would have been raised to spiritual; that is, to a newness of life, if they had not been buried with Christ in baptism, since Paul says they were thus buried, and thus raised? Did Paul teach the truth when he said they were thus buried and therefore raised to a life divinely new? If so, could they have received the life without a consciousness of spiritual death? thus feeling the necessity of being raised from a spiritual death to a newness of spiritual life? If so, how sayeth the Reverend Talmage that immersion is a nonessential? Shall the saw boast itself against him that shaketh it, or the thing framed say, Why hast thou made me thus? Why, Robert Ingersoll only claims the right of condemning what he finds in the Bible contrary to his taste, sense of justice, propriety, etc. Why then is Ingersoll stigmatized as an infidel, and Talmage indorsed and honored as a model Christian and an incomparable preacher? But you, reader, may claim that Talmage accepts Christ as divine, which Ingersoll questions or disbelieves. Yes, I must admit that the Reverend Talmage claims to believe, and soars high, and delves deep to present Christ as divine. I would neither knowingly misrepresent one nor the other; but the Christ taught thus:—

Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. . . . And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. . . . Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition.—Mark 7: 7, 9, 13.

Query, Does God's word teach immersion? It does. Then is not the theory of immersion being a nonessential a theory or tradition of man's formulation? If so, does not God's word become void to those who accept such a theory in lieu of God's word which reflects and therefore makes immersion imperative? And in the light of Christ's teachings, is not such worship vain? and if so, how can God accept such worship? And if their worship is not accepted by God, can he accept their claim to belief in Christ's divinity?

Again:—

And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost: whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained.—John 20: 22, 23.

The above were among the last instructions Christ gave to his disciples previous to his departure, and which are certainly reflective of a method for the remission of sins. How shall we learn or know of this method? If God's word is deficient of instruction to enable us to learn of that method, then Mr. Talmage's theories are as valuable as those of the Roman Church, and vice versa.

But, in thought following the apostles to an upper room in or at Jerusalem, and after consulting the narration given of their doings, we would hear the inquiring multitude's question, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" thus answered:—

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

As God sent Christ, who in turn sent the apostles, the Holy Spirit being given as a factor under the direction of the Father and Son to guide into truth, sanctify, etc., under whose inspiration the Apostle Peter presented the method for remission of sins as above referred to, we are not left in uncertainty on the matter; but can only show ourselves in harmony with God by being in harmony with his reflected truth. The writer therefore reaches the conclusion that God has but one method by which to remit the sins of those people seeking remission.

And thus we learn the purpose and design of immersion or baptism, which forms an integral part of God's revealed plan, the gospel. Sprinkling I believe dates back to about the second or third century. Its design may be difficult to divine, but whatever it might have been the Scriptures maintain a deathlike silence as to its being a part of God's saving method. For as faith and repentance are indispensible as a preparation for scriptural baptism, Christ taught his disciples to teach, and baptize, teaching them (the baptized) to observe all things he had commanded. And as infants are not capacitated to believe, they therefore are not the proper recipients of baptism. Again, having no sins to remit, baptism is not applicable to them; for if dying ere they are capable of discriminating between right and wrong, they are saved in Christ. I therefore reach the conclusion that both the theory of immersion being nonessential and sprinkling are of human origin, wherever and by whomsoever taught; therefore, their advocacy, belief, and practice show a divergence from, instead of a walking, teaching, and practicing in the light of God. Let us be wise, inquire for and walk in the old path, and thus find rest for our souls.

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.

Convention met at Coldwater, Michigan, October 12, 1894; Starr Corless superintendent, S. W. L. Scott assistant; Mrs. W. A. Pierson secretary. Oral reports were heard from Galien, Lansing, and Coldwater, Michigan, and Clear Lake and Knox, Indiana, schools; and written reports from Galien, Coldwater, and Clear Lake were read by the secretary. McElhenie, Thomas Horton, Otto Storey, and Starr Corless and wife, delegates present to cast full vote of district. The entertainment in the evening was a success. All must have been made to rejoice to see the young manifest such interest in the Sunday school work.

MANCHESTER.

A convention was held at Manchester, August 4 and 6, 1894, on the occasion of the gathering of the British Isles conference. James Caffall and Joseph Dewsnap, Sen., chairmen, E. R. Dewsnap secretary. S. F. Mather represented Leeds Sunday school, Elder Hoole the Sheffield school. The original object of the convention was to organize the Manchester, Farnsworth, Leeds, and Salford Sunday schools of the Manchester district into a district organization. In the early part of the convention those assembled desired to enlarge the bounds of the proposed district to include the British Isles mission. For a time organization in this direction was proceeded with, but during the later sessions objection was raised to this being done without a more general notice of the assembling of the convention being issued to all the Sunday schools in the mission. The former proceedings were therefore annulled. The organization of a district embracing the Sunday schools of the Manchester and Sheffield districts was then accomplished, the understanding being that this district should hold a convention next August on the assembling of general conference, and that an invitation should be extended to all schools in the British Isles mission to amalgamate with the aforesaid district on that occasion. For the ensuing year S. F. Mather was elected superintendent, Wm. R. Armstrong assistant, E. R. Dewsnap secretary and treasurer. The following resolutions were passed: Resolved that the secretary of the British Isles mission conference in issuing his circular for the convening of the 1895 conference at Sheffield be requested to invite all representatives of Sunday school work in the said mission to be present with a view to amalgamation as the British Isles mission Sunday school association. Resolved that this convention express its thanks to the British Isles mission conference of 1894 for the privilege accorded of presenting its claims before this conference. During the convention the chairman, James Caffall, expressed his entire and hearty concurrence in the endeavors to form a district Sunday school association and accorded no mean share of praise to the Sunday school work in general. The ministry were well represented at this convention, between thirty and forty being present. The work done will undoubtedly result in good both to the Sunday school work and to the church generally in the British Isles.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Pacific Slope Mission, Greeting:—In the ordering of providence and with the consent of the leading authorities of the church, I have been assigned the duty of helping to get the gospel boat, Evanelia, from San Francisco to Papeete. As soon as this duty is performed I will return, and expect to do so by February, or sooner. In the meantime the missionary work will be in charge of the several missionaries in charge of fields of labor; to wit: Washington and Oregon, Elder H. L. Holt; Northern California and Nevada, Thomas Daley; Central California, J. C. Clapp; and Southern California and Arizona, D. L. Harris. Whatever portion of the work is properly assigned to me in the mission is safely referred to them until my return, myself and the church having all confidence in these brethren.

We will leave to-morrow morning, and on my return would like a report from the missionaries in charge. Ever praying for the blessing of our Master upon the Israel of God everywhere, I am,

Your brother in Christ,

J. F. BURTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 17, 1894.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICE.

To the Saints of the Northern Texas and Southern Indian Territory; Dear Brethren and Sisters in the Gospel Covenant:—Having been appointed Bishop's agent for this section of country, I feel it my duty to call your attention to the importance of keeping that part of the gospel law that God in his wisdom has ordained, that every financial need in the church could be supplied. We as a people are glad that we stand upon a platform that covers and is composed of every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. We delight to call the attention of the people to the grand fact that the gospel in its fullness has been restored, and that man should observe all things, and not a part only, of that which is written. As a people we never fail to teach the world that the system of religion taught by Jesus Christ our Lord is the only system given to man by which he can be saved in the kingdom of God. We are very careful to draw the line and show the world, wherever we present the gospel, that unless every principle of that perfect system is taught and observed, the same is perverted, and therefore falls short of accomplishing the work ordained of God. We all admit these facts. Then is not the law of tithing a part of the gospel and one of the essentials? The church so teaches. But we sometimes forget, after becoming adopted into the church by the perfect law of adoption, that God in his wisdom has provided all the ways and means by which his church is to be built up, governed, and guided, until the gospel has reached every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. How can this be accomplished, dear Saints, unless this part of the system be observed?

If the Lord had intended to carry on his work without financial assistance he never would have introduced the law of tithes and offerings. All are not called to go into the world and preach the gospel, but all can be instruments in the hands of God in sending the glad tidings by observing this financial part of the system. Luke 11:42 tells us that this part must not be left undone, and in Doctrine and Covenants 64:5 a grand and glorious promise is made to those who keep this command. We all believe that if a man wants the benefits to be derived from obedience to baptism he must be baptized, and if he desires the blessing of the gift of the Holy Spirit he must observe the ordinance of laying on of hands, and in like manner, if we want the blessing promised to those who pay their tithes and offerings, we should comply with that part of the law as well.

Some may say, "I always treat the elders well when they come, and give them financial assistance when I have it." This is good; but don't forget, dear Saints, that the elder may have a family hundreds of miles away who must have food and raiment, and if they are not thus provided for, can you expect him to give his time to the preaching of the gospel to others and let his own family do without his assistance? No, you do not. When the time comes when all men shall render an account of this life's work how many of us can truly say we have done all we could in sending the gospel to others? Everyone who has been brought to see the light of the true gospel should be glad and rejoice that God in his wisdom has so arranged this beautiful system in which each and every one can have a part in saving the world and receive their reward at the hands of a just paymaster when the work is over. May God help us as a people to understand fully, that we are saved by obedience to every word that has proceeded out of his mouth, each and every commandment being just as essential as the other at the proper time and place.

Praying and battling for the triumph of truth, I am,

Yours in gospel bonds,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

DEDICATION NOTICE.

The Saints of Acheson Junction, Missouri, will hold dedication services in their new chapel November 11, 1894. All Saints are invited. This is a small branch but well located—only one fourth of a mile from the railroad.

T. J. MAUZEY.

BORN.

GARNER.—At Fowler, California, June 13, 1894, to Bro. Daniel and Sr. Mary Cazaly-Garner, a daughter, and named Clara Hildegarde. Blessed August 22, 1894, by Elder Joseph F. Burton.

MARRIED.

PUTNEY—COCKERTON.—On board of the schooner Evanelia, Sunday, October 14, 1894, at ten a. m., Elder J. M. Putney and Sr. Esther Cockerton were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Elder J. F. Burton officiating. After partaking of a frugal lunch with a few Saints and the master builder of the gospel boat, Mr. D. J. Holder, the happy twain, now made one, with the captain of the schooner and wife, returned to the home of the bride, where a sumptuous wedding feast was prepared. After partaking of this all hands went, as good Saints should do, to church. May the angel of peace ever dwell in the hearts and abode of the happy couple.

DIED.

DOMONOSKE.—At her home near German-town, Glenn county, California, July 23, 1894, Sr. Clara Jane, wife of Mr. Henry Domonoske, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. J. B. Price of No. 1557 Eighth street, Oakland, California, aged 37 years, 6 months, and 7 days. Deceased was born in Provo, Utah, and came to California with her parents in the summer of 1869. She was baptized and confirmed a member of the Reorganized Church by Elder Hervey Green at Davisville, California, July 15, 1875, and remained a faithful, devout Latter Day Saint until death. A kind-hearted and grief-stricken husband, four beautiful little children, a father, mother, three sisters, three brothers, and many dear friends mourn her demise. A large gathering of sympathizing neighbors from far and near attended services at the family residence, and also followed the remains to their last resting place, the Willows cemetery, a distance of about twelve miles. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Mr. Farnham of the Methodist Church.

SANDAGE.—At Lone Rock, Missouri, October 19, 1894, Ella, wife of Bro. Emanuel Sandage, aged 20 years, 2 months, and 5 days. A husband and an infant babe mourn her departure. Funeral service October 20 by Elder H. N. Snively in the Saint's chapel at Lone Rock.

CLARK.—At his home at Echo, Indian Territory, September 17, 1894, Bro. Jerdon E. Clark. Deceased was born October 23, 1838, in Newton county, Mississippi; baptized April 24, 1882; ordained a priest in September, 1882. A wife, one son, and four daughters, remain to mourn. He died firm in the faith, well-known and highly respected. Funeral sermon to be preached by Elder A. C. Hart at Ballard schoolhouse, October 28, at three p. m.

BRUSH.—At Kenton, Tennessee, October 6, 1894, Sr. Nannie J. McNeely-Brush, aged 26 years, 5 months, and 23 days. She first saw the light of the gospel in 1893, at which time she was confined to her bed with consumption. She believed, called for the elders, who administered to her, and was so far relieved as to be able to walk some distance quite easily. Her especial prayer was that she might be upheld until opportunity offered to obey the gospel. The desire was granted and she was baptized in March, 1894, by Elder W. H. Griffin, and ever after bore faithful testimony to the work. But it was not the Lord's will to restore her to health. She fell asleep, commending her spirit to the Savior's care.

SKINNER.—Bro. John Y. Skinner died at his home in Lake City, Calhoun county, Iowa, October 14, 1894, aged 69 years, 8 months, and 5 days. He was born in Wayne county, Indiana; was united in marriage to Miss Nancy Haine in 1847, of which union three sons and three daughters survive. Sr. Skinner having died February, 1881, he married Mrs. Susannah Reems March, 1885, an excellent lady, loved by all who knew her. She was the sunshine of the home until February 24, 1890, when the angels carried her spirit to God. November 18, 1891, he was married to Mrs. Mary Cochran, who still survives him. By the two last marriages he became stepfather to ten children, and he was as kind and good to them as though they were his own; and, I believe, they loved him for his goodness. Bro. Skinner moved into Calhoun county in the spring of 1865, and was well and favorably known by many. In the early days of the Reorganization, when Elders Thomas Dobson and Wm. Jordan came and held services in the schoolhouse near his home and preached to a congregation largely composed of professed Christians, Bro. Skinner, though not a professor of religion, was the first man to furnish a home for our elders. Ever since that day he has welcomed our ministers to his home. He was baptized by Elder Charles J. Hunt November 8, 1893. Funeral services were conducted at the Union church, Calhoun county, Iowa, by Elder C. E. Butterworth, assisted by Elder W. W. Whiting, where a large and attentive audience listened to the sermon. The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery near the church to wait the resurrection of the just.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The campaign into which the Social Purity League has entered against the social evil, its causes and effects, is attracting widespread attention. It has assumed such magnitude that it is attracting the notice of everybody. The newspapers are devoting columns of space daily to the publication, together with their own comments, of communications of prominent members of the Purity League on the subject, as well as letters and interviews from persons and bodies opposed to the crusade. Local vestries, too, are passing resolutions in regard to the matter. The essentially religious bodies, notably the Wesleyans, are taking part in the movement in support of the Social Purity League, and the association of the clergymen of the Church of England has made an appeal to all ministers of the gospel to speak out plainly and refuse to allow the legitimate amusements of London to be conducted and regulated by libertines.

The Anti-Gambling League, with which a number of the prominent members of the Social Purity League are associated, has decided upon a bold strike in the furtherance of its aims. The members have resolved to make an attack upon the highest betting center in England, the Jockey Club, by taking action against three peers who are stewards of that organization. The ground of action is that the stewards are maintaining a gambling establishment at Newmarket. Eminent legal counsel has been engaged and they have advised their clients that they cannot fail to succeed. In addition to these proceedings it is the intention of the league to influence, if possible, the introduction in Parliament of a bill providing for the imposition of a penalty upon newspapers publishing the rates of betting upon sporting events. If such a bill should be carried through to the end of its becoming a law it would be the most effective blow to the practice of bookmaking that has ever been dealt.

The trouble between Mexico and Guatemala will be adjusted by an official apology from the latter.

General Booth of the Salvation Army is forming social colonies of workingmen in rural districts of England.

Representatives of British colonies have asked him to apply for grants of land on which to found colonies. The army has 102 institutions in England, including 64 slum post reserves, 48 homes for ex-criminals, 21 shelters, 33 labor bureaus, and 17 farm colonies. Of the women received into rescue homes, 70 per cent had proved faithful after a three years' test.

James Anthony Froude, the English historian, died October 20, at London.

A severe storm prevailed along the British coast on the 21st, doing damage to vessels at sea and to property on land.

The Cook gang of armed bandits robbed the express car and passengers of a train near Wagoner, Indian Territory, October 20. Indian police are in pursuit.

Mrs. Crittenden of Elyria, Ohio, enjoys good health at the age of 133 years. Her mother reached the age of 146.

Gueda Springs, Arkansas, was struck by a tornado October 20. Loss $100,000.

ROME, Oct. 22.—All the Socialist workingmen's societies throughout the kingdom were dissolved to-day by government decree. The offices and domiciles of the members were searched and some important documents seized. Several protests were made against the action of the government, but there was no disorder.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 22.—According to unofficial figures published here the recent elections for members of the Chamber of Representatives have resulted in the following distribution: Catholics, 194; Liberals, 19; Socialists and Radicals, 29. It is reported that M. DeBurllet, the Premier, has been defeated for reelection to the Chamber by a small majority.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The Figaro makes the assertion that Roumania has joined the triple alliance, composed of Austria, Italy, and Germany, and declares the visit of the King of Servia to Vienna and Berlin was in contemplation of a still further change in the Dreiebund.

Advices from Little Rock, Arkansas, dated the 23d, report the Cook gang of desperadoes as having instituted a reign of terror in Indian Territory. They boldly entered the towns of Watova and Tala, and robbed the stores and post offices, intimidating the inhabitants by firing of rifles and revolvers. The United States authorities at Washington have been appeal to for protection, and will probably take steps to exterminate the desperadoes. Bankers and business men of the territory are urgent in demanding the suppression of the outlaws.

Presidents of express companies in session at New York decided to urge the passage of the Caldwell bill for the suppression of train robbing.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The cruiser Gabes sailed from Cherbourg to-day and the Du Petite Houars from Toulon for Madagascar. The latter carries large supplies of war material, including 6,000 rifles. Mail advices from Madagascar report that the Fahavalos tribesmen raided a village near Majunga, attacked the French trading house and beheaded two agents there, one English, the other French. Soldiers belonging to the Hova tribe, the ruling tribe of the island, were close at hand, but did not interfere.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Numbers of leading English and foreign Anarchists are vacating their haunts in London and the majority are proceeding singly to America. The reason for this migration is the incessant harrasing to which they have been subjected by the police. Mowbray, the Socialist leader, will shortly return to the United States.

BERLIN, Oct. 23.—The Cologne Gazette says Chancellor von Caprivi has invited the leading ministers of the German States to a conference in Berlin to discuss the proposed anti-Socialist measures.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 23.—The Board of Trade has adopted a resolution calling for a fourteen-foot channel from the lakes to the ocean by the St. Lawrence route.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 23.—A very sharp earthquake shock drove the people from the large buildings this afternoon. No damage was done beyond the breaking of windows. A telephone message from Campo, a small town on the Mexican border, fifty-five miles east, says the shock was very severe there.

WARDNER, Idaho, Oct. 24.—In the Coeur d'Alene mining country within the last few days a mysterious plague has broken out and several hundred people have been stricken, most of them miners. Local physicians are baffled as to the origin or nature of the epidemic. No deaths have occurred.

Epidemics of diphtheria and typhoid fever prevail at points in Illinois and Kentucky, along the Ohio River, causing many deaths.

Yokohama advices of the 20th report an extensive naval engagement between the Chinese and Japanese squadrons at Yalu River, the latter attacking. A large number of vessels were engaged on each side. Both fleets suffered severely, three Chinese men of war being sunk, and several Japanese vessels disabled. The Japanese report a victory; the Chinese a repulse of the Mikado's fleet. Many were killed and injured on each side.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A dispatch received here from Shanghai to-day says, according to Chinese advices, a severe battle has been fought on the lower portion of the Yalu River. The Japanese are said to have crossed the river and to have attacked the Chinese, but, it is reported, after fierce fighting, the Japanese were repulsed. Both sides are said to have lost heavily. The Chinese do not claim a conclusive victory; but declare they still maintain their position. No confirmation of this dispatch is obtainable.

CHEMULPO, Corea, Oct. 22.—A detachment of 1,300 wounded Japanese has arrived here and there is a large number of wounded at Seoul. In addition 2,100 wounded Japanese have been sent to Japan. At Ping Yang there are 1,200 wounded Chinese in the hospitals. The rebellious Tonghaks of Southern Corea are restless and only the fact that they are not provided with arms prevents them from breaking out into open revolt and moving en masse upon Seoul. Many of them have started already. Four hundred Japanese soldiers have been stationed at the King's palace at Seoul, owing to the fact that the King's brother is believed to be leagued with the Tonghaks. The Chinese are mobilizing a great force at Kiren, and they are also gathering a strong force at Pow-Ting-Fu. The second son of the King of Corea left here October 15 as a special envoy to the Mikado to return the visit of the Marquis Siouyo, the Japanese envoy. The king's son took with him a quantity of presents.

TIENTSIN, Oct. 22.—It is stated from a reliable source that negotiations for peace between China and Japan are proceeding at Seoul.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A dispatch to the Times from Tien Tsin says the Chinese officials report that a battle occurred near Yi Chow yesterday and that the Japanese were repulsed southward, with a loss of 3,000 men on each side.

Japanese warships are reported to be cruising off the Shan Tung promontory, or to the south of it, the intention being to waylay Chinese transports. The Chinese fleet left Wei Hai Wei yesterday with orders to attack the Japanese squadron.

The Emperor of China, realizing the importance of the naval battle fought off the Yalu River as preventing a maritime invasion of China, has issued a decree awarding honors to the foreign officers who served on board the Chinese ships and bestowing three years' pay upon the widows of those who were slain in this action.

HIROSHIMA, Oct. 23.—The special sessions of the Japanese Diet closed yesterday. The bills introduced by the government to further the war were passed unanimously. The Diet presented a memorandum to the cabinet urgently requesting the government to execute the imperial declarations so as to achieve a complete victory over the Chinese and to restore peace in the East and achieve glory for the nation. The Diet also recommended that China be severely punished and in a manner which would not permit of its being able to again disturb the peace of the East; that the Ministers should let it be distinctly known that Japan will not tolerate any foreign interference which would prevent it from attaining the objects of the war.

HONGKONG, Oct. 23.—The captain and owners of the British steamer Tai-Yuen have demanded satisfaction for the action of the French cruiser Forfait, which summoned the Tai-Yuen to display its flag, firing guns to enforce the demand.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—A prominent Englishman who has just returned from Russia, where he was in close communication with government officials, talked of the outlook for peace to-day. He took the opportunity of inquiring from the best authorities what effect the death of the Czar could have upon the political and business future of the Russian Empire. He addressed his questions as well to prominent Russians outside of the government. He said:—

"The Czar's death will have little or no effect upon Russia. Russia was never in a better position than at present to withstand such an event. The autocratic rule of the Czar necessarily compelled a deputizing of power into the government departments, and these departments are now presided over by reliable, liberal, honest, and competent men who are undoubtedly the most trustworthy officials ever in the service of the Russian Government. This promises well for the general good, as these officials are not likely to be replaced for a time at least by the Regency. It is true the military party in Russia is the most powerful and it has the most interest in the active military regime. But the commercial interests of Russia are in hands so strong that the military party has little chance of having its way."

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 24.—A bulletin issued from Livadia at 8 p. m. and signed by the five doctors in attendance upon the Czar says:—During the day his Majesty showed no signs of somnolence. His appetite and spirits are better. The œdema of the feet has somewhat increased.

A dispatch accompanying the bulletin says the sacrament was partaken of by his Majesty Sunday, and this is taken to indicate that his condition is not as serious as would be supposed from a prior dispatch that the last sacrament of the church had been administered to him. The dispatch making this statement mentioned no date on which the sacrament was partaken of, and the supposition here now is that the Czar simply partook of holy communion Sunday, as is his custom.

An imperial decree was published to-day declaring Grand Duke Michael, the third son of the Czar, the heir to the throne in succession to his brother, Grand Duke Nicholas, the Czarowitz and present heir apparent. The Grand Duke George, the second son, has renounced his rights of accession in view of the fact that the condition of his health is considered hopeless.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A dispatch from Tokio says an earthquake occurred Monday in the province of Akita. It almost completely destroyed the town of Sakata. The loss of life was exceedingly heavy and the loss to property enormous.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—A dispatch to the Standard says sixty-two persons lost their lives through the explosions in the Anina colliery. Twenty-three of those who were rescued alive have since died in the hospital.

The Hawaiian government has declined the proposal for a conditional ceding of Necker Island to Great Britain.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.—Rooms are being prepared hastily at the Winter Palace for the Czarowitz. The work proceeds night and day. A manifesto already has been printed at the office of the Official Gazette for issue on the occasion of the marriage of the Czarowitz and Princess Alix. Two hundred thousand copies will be distributed on the wedding day.

BERLIN, Oct. 25.—The Cologne Gazette has the following dispatch from St. Petersburg:—

The Czar's strength is daily decreasing, but he awaits death with perfect composure. To counteract the depression of those about him, he has ordered that the band at the palace play during lunch time. The Czarina, though suffering severely, never quits her husband's side. She sits for hours beside the arm-chair occupied by the Emperor, and watches by his bedside when he is unable to sleep. The Czar, it is said, has made all his arrangements with a view to death.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Cologne Gazette telegraphs the Czar received with courage the intimation of his physicians that there was no hope of saving his life. A few days later, when he was feeling somewhat better, his Majesty remarked: "It is said a man of my years should not have to die, though, personally, I do not cling over-much to life. If God still deems my life of use to my dear country he will make me well."

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 25.—Three thousand houses have been destroyed by a succession of violent earthquake shocks. As far as known 260 lives have been lost and a large number of people have been injured.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 25.—It is reported here that the Chinese have evacuated Port Arthur. A report is also current that the Japanese have effected a landing at Talien Wan Bay on the Korean side of the Kwang Tung Peninsula, not far from Port Arthur.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 25.—It is reasserted here the army corps under Field-Marshal Count Oyama has effected a landing at Seikiosso, near Port Arthur. It is also again asserted the Japanese army under Field-Marshal Yamagata has crossed successfully the Yalu River and entered Manchuria. If the Japanese have been so uniformly successful in their operations against the Chinese, it is difficult to understand how they have so many of their soldiers wounded and already sent to the rear. It is figured that 8,000 wounded already are known to be at Chemulgo, and, it is presumed, the wounded in Yalu River bank battles have not been sent back yet.

MILAN, Oct. 25.—A manifesto signed by eight deputies of the Extreme Left has been issued protesting against the decree abolishing workmen's Socialist societies in Italy, and announcing the formation of a league for the defense of liberty.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.—Several heathen peasants of Staraja, Province of Viatka, will be tried soon at Sarapoul on the charge of beheading and disemboweling a man as a sacrifice to their gods.

One man was killed and eighteen entombed in an iron mine near Ironwood, Michigan, October 25.

Berlin dispatches of the 26th report the resignations of Chancellor Caprivi and Count Eulenberg, President of the Prussian Council of Ministers. For some time there has been considerable tension between the two ministers, the former favoring a moderate policy, the latter stronger measures before the Reichstag in dealing with Socialists. Eulenberg, Dr. Miquel, Dr. von Bennigsen, and Prince von Hohenlohe are mentioned for the chancellorship. It is reported that the emperor has offered the post to Prince Hohenlohe.

Latest Russian dispatches announce slight improvement in the Czar's condition.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 26.—Later dispatches from the Yalu River show that in the battle fought yesterday between the Chinese and Japanese 3,500 Chinese troops of all arms were routed utterly.

CHEMULPO, Oct. 26.—Dispatches from Wiju, dated midnight, give additional details of the battle fought between the Chinese and Japanese across the Yalu River: The Chinese fought desperately, but were driven from their fortified position. Their loss was 200 dead; the Japanese loss, 95 killed and wounded.

At Kuliencas it is expected the only really determined stand of the Chinese in Manchuria will be made. If the Japanese Field Marshal's plans are carried out in the manner indicated in the dispatches from the front it is probable the network of the invaders will be completed around the Chinese position by midnight Saturday, thus enabling the Japanese attack to be delivered at dawn Sunday. But if the Japanese columns succeed in occupying the positions assigned to them previous to midnight Saturday, it is believed that the attack will be delivered at the earliest possible moment. All reports join in saying the esprit de corps and health of the Japanese troops are excellent, and it is said to be the universal ambition of all classes of the service to capture Moukden before the birthday of the Emperor of Japan, which occurs November 3.

According to Count Rumford, the Bavarian wood-chopper, one of the most hardy and hard-working men in the world, receives for his weekly rations one large loaf of rye bread and a small quantity of roasted meal. Of the meal he makes an infusion, to which he adds a little salt, and with the mixture, which he calls burned soup, he eats his rye bread. No beer, no beef, no other food than that mentioned, and no drink but water; and yet he can do more work and enjoys a better digestion and possesses stronger muscles than the average American or Englishman, with their varied dietary.

It is related by a gentleman who had an appointment to breakfast with the late A. T. Stewart, that the butler placed before them both an elaborate bill of fare, the visitor selected a list of rare dishes, and was quite abashed when Mr. Stewart said, "Bring me my usual breakfast,—oatmeal and boiled eggs." He then explained to his friend that he found simple food a necessity to him, otherwise he could not think clearly. That unobscured brain applied to nobler ends would have won higher results, but the principle remains the same.

The wandering Arab lives almost entirely upon bread, with a few dates as a relish.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

The British Empire is a political creation unparalleled in the world's history, not only by its extent and population, in both which respects it is slightly surpassed by China, but because, with an area of more than 10,000,000 square miles and with 352,000,000 inhabitants, it is scattered over the whole globe. It embraces all zones from the icy wilderness of Hudson Bay to the tropical jungles of India and the mahogany forests of Honduras; there is scarcely a product which a British province does not bring forth in excellent quality, and not less various are the degrees of civilization of its inhabitants from the Kaffirs of the cape to the highly cultivated citizens of Toronto or Sydney. We find with Christians of all confessions 200,000,000 Hindoos, about 70,000,000 Mohammedans, and 8,000,000 Buddhists; and the Bible is printed in 130 languages and dialects represented in the empire, yet, notwithstanding such promiscuous elements, the government, with rare exceptions, maintains order and no sign of dissolution is visible.—Forum.

A German Evangelical Deaconess Hospital was dedicated at Jerusalem July 3. The edifice with the lot cost 300,000 francs. It has accommodations for fifty or sixty patients. The sick of any religion or nationality are to be admitted.

The process of bookmaking has, from time immemorial, been so cheap in China that a book of twenty-five or thirty pages is rarely sold for more than one cent.

GIRLHOOD'S CHARM IN WOMAN.

The woman who keeps the simplicity of her girlhood, its generous impulses and quick sympathies, and who adds to her natural gifts the enlargement of study and the crown of experience, is always at her best and never past it. When the exterior attractions of form and color diminish and depart, as they mostly do, the radiance of our inner illumination will more than compensate their departure. But, in order that this should be so, her moral must equal her intellectual gain. She must be willing to learn, not only her own powers, but her own defects also, and to court the good influences which can help her to escape from the delusions of sense and the fatal tyranny of self-consciousness. She must discard the petty measures of vanity and self-seeking, and learn to love her race, her country, and the humanity which she should help to adorn.—Julia Ward Howe in the November Ladies' Home Journal.

A woman is "at her best" mentally and physically, when she is "at her best"—and that is all there is about it.—Mary Mapes Dodge in the November Ladies' Home Journal.

JOSEPH SMITH THE PROPHET AND HIS PROGENITORS.

By Lucy Smith. This work is familiarly known as "Lucy Smith's History." It was written by the Mother of the Prophet, most of it previous to his death, and is said to have passed under his personal inspection. It is a book of 312 pages and contains biographical sketches and the genealogy of Joseph Smith and his ancestors. A history of the religious movement established under the ministry of Mr. Smith is given, with many remarkable incidents connected with the development of the latter day work not recorded in other publications. The reader is furnished a plain and truthful statement of facts concerning the Smith family, its origin, character, and history, in contrast with the mass of unreliable and untruthful accounts published and circulated by its enemies. It includes an account of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, in 1844.

THE RUINS REVISITED AND THE WORLD-STORY RETOLD.

Is a book of 240 pages, written by Elder Samuel F. Walker. The purpose of the writer is to show that the main facts of scientific teaching concerning the origin, growth, and development of the Universe, of human tradition and history, and the revelation of Christianity have a common origin, and are evidences of one design in the creation, and in the history and growth of the ages. Theological conclusions are reached from scientific deductions, and by comparison with human tradition, archæology, and other sources of information the writer aims to present a scientific defense of Christianity. The later chapters of the work contain evidences from American aboriginal traditions that Jesus is the Christ and was known and worshiped by the ancient inhabitants of the Western Continent.

PRESIDENCY AND PRIESTHOOD; THE APOSTASY, REFORMATION, AND RESTORATION.

By Elder Wm. H. Kelley. New, Revised, and Enlarged Edition. It contains 421 pages of closely written matter, with autograph and likeness of the Author, and is printed in good, readable type, with neat binding. The work is a library within itself; a marvel of trenchant criticism and logical deductions from historical facts; a key to the right understanding of the Bible and modern diverse systems of faith and worship. It discusses the issues of theology that are to the front to-day. It treats largely of Ministerial Authority as associated with the Melchisedek and Aaronic Priesthoods, and the Ideal Church of New Testament times is conspicuously set forth in striking contrast with the creeds and systems of church building since the days of the Apostles. Also the claims for the Restoration of the Gospel at a later day than the Apostolic age are critically examined in the light of prophecy and history, which is a subject of great moment to men of every faith. A historical resumé or brief is also inserted of the rise and development of the "apostate church," and an exegesis of the 29th chapter of Isaiah, the revelation of the "sealed book." Also the origin of modern churches and creeds, etc.

RELIGIOUS VIEWS OF GREAT SCIENTISTS.

IN considering the question whether the influence of culture is necessarily antagonistic to religion, a writer in the Lutherische Kirchen-Zeitung (Columbus, Ohio) cites briefly the religious utterances of great scientists of the past. There may be nothing new in the citations given, but their grouping lends new emphasis to the point the writer is striving to make. He says:—

“Copernicus, Kepler, and Newton, were earnest Christians, who saw the handwriting of God in the works of nature. Copernicus is the founder of our present astronomical system, but his gravestone bears the following inscription in Latin: ‘I do not expect the favor which thou hast given to Paul, nor the grace with which thou forgavest Peter; only the clemency which thou hast shown to the thief on the cross I beseech thee to grant me!’ Kepler closes his most important book with this sentence: ‘I thank thee, my Lord and Creator, for the joy which the work of thine hands hath given me. . . . If I have said anything unworthy of thee, or have sought to gain honor for myself rather than thee, graciously forgive me.’ Of Newton, the great English naturalist, it is said that, like the German poet Klopstock, he never pronounced the name of the Almighty without uncovering his head. The greatest of scientists, Karl Ritter, in his ‘Contemplation of Palestine,’ says: ‘The world is full of the glory of the Creator; where our ability and knowledge cease, revelation opens for us time and eternity. J. Liebig, the prince of German analytical chemists, says that belief in God makes one humble and modest. Faraday, the great English naturalist, was an earnest Christian. He went to service regularly on Sunday, and prized the Bible as his dearest and most precious book. He often explained the Scriptures in meetings and proved that he lived according to them. He sought Christ because he was humble, and found him because he was sincere. It is certainly the most touching part of the story of this ‘magnate in the realm of science,’ that he bent his knees before the King of Truth and Love. Professor Benzenberg, the founder of the Observatory of Düsseldorf, has laid down his creed in the following words: ‘I am a Protestant. As a Protestant, I read the writings contained in the Old and the New Covenant. These writings are my religion.’ The late Professor of Botany in the University of Marburg, Wiegand, desired on his deathbed, that the world should be informed that ‘a scientist had died who was a believer.’ And as we are speaking of botanists, another great savant, Professor Linnæus, whose name is a household word in the scientific world, said: ‘If we contemplate the smallest insect or the most gigantic of animals, the blade of grass in the field, or the great cedar of the Lebanon—they are works which tell of the glory of God!’

The writer concludes his article with the following caustic remarks:—

“Mercy! don’t accept as truth every statement made by a newspaper writer! Even if the statement that an educated man cannot be a Christian is made a thousand times, it is not proven any more than a statement that the heavens are green in color. If only the readers knew what unripe youths write for the newspapers, they would be ashamed to have paid any attention to their words. But countless readers seem to think that anything that appears in the papers must have a foundation. Such people argue in a curious manner. ‘An educated man has no faith,’ they say. Therefore they throw aside faith and fancy themselves educated.”—Literary Digest.

COMMUNICATION WITH THE PLANET MARS.

RECENT lights observed by competent astronomers on portions of the Martian disk where a natural explanation of them seems difficult, have revived the idea that the inhabitants of the planet are trying to signal to us, and have brought forth all manner of suggestions as to how these signals are to be answered. A writer in Cosmos, Paris, August 4, on this subject, remarks that the plan that seems at first sight the simplest—the reflection of the solar rays in the direction of Mars—is impracticable owing to the practical impossibility of directing them exactly to the planet. Mars has a diameter of only eleven seconds of arc at opposition, and the mirror would change position by this amount, owing to the motion of the earth, in an extremely short time. However, in the present state of the question, says the writer, I think that the best thing to do is to continue the study of all bizarre and unexplained appearances observed at the oppositions of Mars, until there is practical certainty that they are intentional signals. Probably then we will understand better than we do now how they are produced, and will be in a better position to respond to them. In finishing, the writer makes the novel proposal that a beam of electric light be directed toward the unilluminated portion of our moon. If it is admitted that the Martians could observe signals from the earth it must be granted that they see our satellite and its phases, and that an alteration in the brilliancy of the dark part of its disk would quickly attract their attention. Besides, owing to the well-known brilliancy of the electric light, which reaches one fourth that of the sun, in spite of the difference in area between the earth’s surface and our reflectors, another end would be attained. The ashy light of the unilluminated portion of the moon is not acknowledged by all to be due to sunlight reflected from the earth; its augmentation or diminution, therefore, under the influence of a more or less intense electric light, would greatly elucidate the question.

THE LANGUAGES OF PALESTINE.

As regards the languages spoken in Palestine in the time of Christ, much that is of high importance has resulted from recent exploration. According to a writer in the Contemporary Review, a dedication to Herod was written both in Aramaic and in Greek, and there are a great many Greek texts of this age in all parts of the country, which show us that the old Canaanite religions had not yet died out, but were mingled with Greek mythology, so that the names of native and of Greek deities stand side by side. The region where the Greeks were most numerous was apparently Decapolis, east of the Sea of Galilee, and it seems to me probable that the people of Gadara, who kept swine, were Greeks, for the pig was regarded as an unclean animal by the Phenicians and other natives, as well as by the Jews. It has often been disputed whether the gospels were originally written in Greek or in Aramaic; but it has now been rendered certain by exploration that Greek was very widely used in Palestine at this time, and that it was understood by the Jews as well as by others. We have recovered the stone, written in Greek, which warned the Gentiles not to enter the inner court of the Temple, and have found early Jewish bone-boxes on Olivet inscribed in Greek.

A Book for Everybody!
But Especially for the Boys!

The Struggles, Failures, and Successes in the Life of one who is now a Prominent Minister of the Church.

 Self-will, Honor, Devotion, and Sentiment,

 God in due time selected as an ambassador for Himself, and

Who To-day Stands as a Monument of Divine Grace!

The Book contains a history of his conversion to and from Methodism, his acceptance of the restored gospel, a dissertation on the leading features of the doctrine that moved him to obedience, his call as a minister and experiences as such, together with a recital of some striking incidents, showing divine interference and blessing. The autobiography has been revised by Bro. Luff since its publication in Autumn Leaves, and a large amount of doctrinal matter has been added in appropriate places. TWO SERMONS, one on the "Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of Man," and one on "The Modern Stumbling-Stone," have been added also, making it just

WHAT IS MAN?

BY ELDER J. E. LAMBERT.

Man's Nature and Destiny. The Spirit or Soul; Is it immortal? Does it Survive the Death of the Body in a Conscious State? The views of Mortal-Soulists Examined and Refuted. In two parts. Second Edition.

The author has closely examined the subject upon which he has written, both in study and in oral discussion, with those who differ from him in belief. The question is discussed from Biblical, Historical, and Scientific standpoints. Christ as the true type of man, in life and in death; his preexistence, life, and death considered; the nature of man; the intermediate state of righteous and wicked; consciousness between death and the resurrection; the second death or future punishment; and the final conscious existence of all after the judgment; are leading features of the chapters of the volume.

SOME THINGS TO THINK ABOUT.

BRO. C. D. CARTER wrote from De Kalb, Illinois, October 25, the following:—

The work is onward, Saints usually prosperous, and faithful to the teachings of the law. Many are becoming interested, and some others are ready for baptism. Our branch was organized about one year and a half ago with twelve members, but now numbers thirty, I believe. I feel well in the work, and am only sorry that business callings prevent me from doing more in the field; but I try to take the gospel with me into families where I am called to see the sick, and as a result have been called to administer to some who believe, and as they thus obtained the blessing of health without further aid from the doctor, my bill was made shorter and easier paid. But I would be glad to have all restored thus, to God's glory.

We have long hoped for such an expression as Bro. Carter has made in the foregoing. It has been said that scientific studies have a tendency to decrease faith in God, to diminish, or hinder, or destroy faith in the manifestations of Divine Providence in answer to prayer, and trust, and faith in God. But we have never been able to see why it should so be, inasmuch as God is the author or manifestation of truth; its preserver; the Creator and upholder of all things—not only of religious, spiritual principles, but of all things; Jesus Christ being the light and the life of all things—of things material and spiritual—if such distinction be allowable. Hence while some have forgotten or failed to discern the unseen, the "eternal" in the economy of nature, and have so limited their investigations as to rest almost or entirely upon the things that "are seen" by the natural man, hence have glorified "science"—so-called—or a limited phase of scientific knowledge, leaving unnoticed or unheeded the broader and higher field, they have in this been "unscientific," limited, forgetting the unity of all things God has created and ordained in the physical, moral, and spiritual world for the benefit of man.

We believe in physicians, believe in the study of man from a physiological standpoint; believe that the study of disease, its symptoms, and treatment, etc., is essential, at least for those lacking faith to be healed; but do not believe the science and practice of medicine is a perfect science. We believe in physicians among our people, who, with the advantages of education as such shall so comprehend and put in practice the principles of hygiene and proper direction of the forces of nature that the people shall be taught to observe the laws of nature and avoid disease so far as possible, by prevention; but who, when disease is present, will comprehend the application of necessary means and in their work "have faith in God;" work with God—do their part, and recognize that God has a part to do; that as he has provided "gifts of healings" as well as "nourishing the sick," etc., he be recognized, permitted, and invoked to do his part, by faith being instilled and encouraged in the hearts of the people.

The training of the average physician is in the methods of his school, apart from the special considerations of faith referred to. His "professional training" and "professional courtesy" while regarded as right from the ordinary worldly and business standpoint, are not broad enough. It is recognized and admitted by advanced, progressive physicians themselves that more can be done by hygienic measures that assist or restore normal action of the functions of nature than by drugging; that medical compounds have been too much relied upon; that while as remedies medicines have a place, it is by no means the chief place in the healing art; that they have been grossly perverted and misused, and that their use is largely experimental; that medicine does not of itself impart vitality.

It is also clear, to many at least, that other things being equal, the fitness and skill of the physician, etc., the less medicine and the more natural methods employed, the better the results that have followed.

We believe in having physicians and educated trained nurses in our midst as they were in ancient times and in the early days of the present church; but we believe that such individuals should base their work upon faith and practice that recognizes God as an essential factor in all that we do in any line of work, "doing all things for the glory of God and the good of his people;" consecrating their energies in the faith of the gospel according to the Master's admonition, "Have faith in God;" that God will then inspire the mind to do what human creatures should and ought to do for one another, while he supplies what neither they nor any science—any limited school of science—can ever furnish. It is our individual opinion that this is a truly scientific method because it is of faith—God's method. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin;" evidently this; that whatsoever is not in harmony, in intelligent, active sympathy with God, in enlightened harmony with him, is sin, because wrong. This is true, not simply of the physician's life, and profession, and objects; it is true of all—of the merchant, of the farmer, of the minister, the school-teacher, of the homekeeper, of every artisan; all are called to work with God, to cooperate with him, to ask and receive his aid—inspiration, light. When these principles, revealed by the Almighty himself, are recognized, there will be a higher order of things, less selfishness, more happiness and health, and greater good done for the church, and by the church, for itself and for the world.

We present these thoughts, disclaiming any intention of attack upon the doctors, without bias against the value of their services, and in spirit broad enough to recognize every phase of truth, in material as in spiritual things. We have included all classes, editors as well. We believe the ultimate development of man will be brought about by his learning self-help; not independent of God, but by learning to work with God; to comprehend the truth, the law, and to apply it to all the phases of life and being; this in harmony with this statement:—

And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willeth to abide in sin, ["Sin is the transgression of the law,"] and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore they must remain filthy still. . . . All beings who abide not in those conditions, are not justified; for intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraceth truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light; etc.—D. C. 85.

Men and women do not all occupy the same plane in life and work. Were it so we should have a one-sided economy, a poor, a topheavy affair throughout. Each has his place, and each fills his place by learning it and occupying in his appointed field. Why should "light" not be sought and sufficiently received to enable everyone who desires to properly consecrate himself to a useful sphere and to act in harmony with the needs of the great whole?

We have need for physicians, for trained nurses; and both are worthy, noble callings for men and women. To those who would take up such professions and who would labor therein without being governed and perverted by the prevailing passion to get wealth—to serve mammon, the god of this world, there is a useful and noble field of action among the people of God. We believe this field should be occupied among our own people, that it is important that it be so occupied by men and women of true, unselfish spirit. We believe that the professions of dentistry, of medicine, of various lines should be filled by men and women of such spirit, that there may be a fuller adjustment of the people to the truth, that the way may be prepared and the people be benefited and further conditioned for the equality under the law by which Zion shall be redeemed by judgment—by wisdom, truth; and her converts by righteousness—by rightness.

In the Book of Mosiah we are told that,

The laborer in Zion who labors for money shall perish.

Effort may be made to apply this to the spiritual laborer in the ministry only and to criticise him for the provision made for the "necessities" of his family. But that will not do. God's ways are equal; and the faithfulness, spirituality, and devotion expected of the minister must largely be developed, be duplicated, in all members of the church. And, the spirit of sacrifice must be cultivated and exhibited by all, if all would be redeemed, and saved, and sanctified.

Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice.—Ps. 50.

The laborer in Zion who labors for money shall perish!

These are impressive words. They mean very much to every man and to every woman. They mean that the motives, the thoughts and purposes of the heart, must be true, must be those that are like God; that if they are not, it is necessary that there be a cleansing process undergone, and that self-examination be made, be had, that every man and woman shall "cleanse his ways," shall "purify himself even as he [God] is pure."

With all that may be said, we must see the import of what the Master said; viz.:—

Blessed are all they that do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled with the Holy Ghost.

And, in harmony with this principle of hungering and thirsting, which signifies the heart's burning desire, the soul's incessant craving for the Holy Spirit, the desire to do and be led and guided into all truth, is the statement of the wise man, that if wisdom and truth be sought as men seek for gold and for silver, it may be had. Men seek earnestly for the wealth of this world. A like earnest, diligent effort is required to obtain spiritual life, light, and power; but higher purposes and different methods are necessary to their possession and use.

Men and women are apt to settle down comfortably and, in the ordinary sense of being "good," expect and await the Almighty to do wonderful things for them. They forget that he cannot do much with and for them until they awaken and do something for themselves; apply themselves to discerning the forces and powers within and around them, consecrating all energies and gifts, each in his sphere, to the glory of God and the salvation of man. God blesses and adds to when his people are ready, are prepared to receive and occupy wisely and in purity of spirit and purpose;

Because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received. For what doth it profit a man if a gift is bestowed upon him, and he receiveth not the gift? Behold, he rejoiceth not in that which is given unto him, neither rejoices in him who is the giver of the gift.

When men and women are intelligently enlisted in heart service to God, the forces of God, the means at his command, are augmented, increased, and more can be done to defeat evil and redeem man. But, so long as the people either openly encourage or indifferently or blindly permit, or suffer evils to exist, or wrongs, or improper, selfish, or self-serving, self-exalting purposes to flourish, so long will Satan prevail proportionate to what he is permitted to do and to reign in humanity, in individuals always ready to welcome the pandering methods he employs in winning over and using those governed by the lust of worldliness, the desire for self-exhibition and power. Persons have much to do in their own redemption. The field is wide and must be viewed in detail, comprehensively, and every safeguard be secured, every point of true vantage be intelligently occupied. God saves by means, and the means are all around as well as above us, awaiting proper applications, awaiting the discernment of those who may recognize and apply them.

Individuals who correct themselves and their methods cleave to truth and therein give expression to their true character. Individuals who fail, who refuse so to do, exhibit themselves in their true light. There is a probation of character in these things; the rule is plain. True men and women amend their ways as the light of truth flashes upon them and they see; false ones become angered and refuse to be governed by law. Hence all are open to the discerning eye of God and of humanity, when the latter have sufficient discernment to see. The truth cannot be evaded; the true spirit will not seek to evade it, but to adjust himself to it, and become symmetrical, and useful, and—"lowly in heart," like the Master, who labored for the common good of all. He who thus does also labors for his own highest good.

We have written what applies to all, not to any particular class alone, as that is not our intention; nor is it proper to be partial toward or against any class. We like the spirit of Bro. Carter's letter; its unselfish spirit and its rendering to God that due, which he is "worthy to receive." If what we have written is right, we believe it will be received by those who are right. If it be wrong, it ought not to be heeded by any. If it be not received by any whom it antagonizes in wrong, no matter.

We believe that as a rule—"as a rule," we remark—physicians and other professional men are overpaid; that they overcharge. There are honorable exceptions, but they are not the rule. All due regard for the true-hearted men who love mercy and pity the poor, and who exact of none more than their just dues. As for us, we believe the Spirit of the gospel is the spirit of coöperation, of coequality; in work, in responsibility, in duty, in blessing, according to the various "gifts" and "callings" in which God has placed each to act according to the eternal fitness of things. Let us all resolve to "come up higher" in purposes, in all the practical phases of life. In the details of life we find our opportunities of placing ourselves in harmony with God. We honor him when we comply with law, otherwise we do not. There can be no exception to the rule.

A SERIOUS QUESTION.

How far a religious teacher or leader may go in directing the members of his religious fold in regard to the temporal and political affairs of his life is an old, possibly a still unsettled question.

There is an extreme jealousy on the part of some toward any sort of interference by the leading minds of the church in the affairs of the people, outside of purely spiritual or religious themes, whether that interference be by an attempted dictation direct, or by teaching and advice, upon topics of a temporal and political nature.

Much of this repugnance to what is called priestly domination, has risen from acknowledged disasters to the church, which have been supposed to occur because of bad precept and ex ample in temporal things given by spiritual leaders; who, however gifted as preachers and guides in spiritual things had not wisdom in temporal things; and similar disasters are feared from similar cause.

It is not necessary for the purposes of the present writing to try to fix the time when and cause why the disasters referred to occurred, or place the responsibility for them; the needs of the hour and our work demanding something other than a wrangle over opposing opinions of what was done and who did it. Can the work now lying before us to be done, be accomplished without some one making an attempt to lead in the things that may come within the term "temporal things?"

There is a need of a Saints' Home; and while it is a spiritual need, so far as the welfare of such as might avail themselves of it as a home might be concerned, on the spiritual side of their natures; it is a practical work to be wrought in natural things, wood, bricks, iron, earth, and stone, to such effect that the bodies of those sheltered there for spiritual comfort may be made comfortable and at home.

It is not practicable that anyone, whoever it may be, shall be able to serve the general public of the church as to be absolutely free from the censure of all. Though he do never so well, some are sure to be displeased; and such will question the wisdom, possibly the entire fitness of the chosen instruments of the church to do the work assigned.

There is also a need, and we regard it as a pressing one, that the church should have somewhere within the widely spreading circle of its branches, a school, an institution of learning and instruction, to which the young men and maidens of the Saints may be sent to secure such further schooling as they may need, or desire, that the common school system where they reside does not afford them an opportunity to obtain.

There is an effort being put forth to secure both a college and a Saints' Home, and conditions have pointed to Lamoni as the place for both. But we learn rather to our surprise that some who may have been friendly to the enterprise for a school, now seem to think that as the temporal benefits of having such a school established will accrue to the town of Lamoni, therefore the town ought to build it. If it were a secular affair exclusively, the object being to reap money profits from it, there might be a possible justice in such a criticism; but as the object is known to be for the benefit of the Saints abroad as well as those dwelling at Lamoni, and the choice of location determined by favoring conditions, the criticism is decidedly unjust, and for that reason improper and unworthy of anyone professing a membership with the church. For while it is not intended that the college shall be one for the teaching of an ecclesiasticism, but for the purpose of a general and generous education, it is intended, and we hope to be fully realized, that the moral influences which shall prevail at Lamoni shall be helpful to a healthy tone in morals, religion, and politics, undisturbed by denominational philosophy or the interference of priestcraft.

The college committee will shortly make an effort to secure an additional and better financial support from the general church for the pushing of the enterprise to full completion; and we ask all to give the matter due thought; for at the risk of being thought to intermeddle in temporal things we counsel the Saints to rally their forces and build the college as a matter of policy as well as a needful thing for the good of all.

BUT I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished!—Luke 12: 50.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

It appears from the context that Jesus was teaching his disciples touching their conduct in the things of the world and the coming of the Lord; and in his discourse referred to the probable results that should follow his teaching and his death, the burden of which rested upon him; which included with the fact and the manner of his death made a baptism of trial and sorrow of such a nature that he was greatly straitened, or constrained in spirit until it should be finally consummated.

In his remark he evidently refers to the same conditions as are named by him in Matthew 20: 22 and Mark 10: 38, in the instance where it was requested for two of his disciples, James and John, the sons of Zebedee, that they should be permitted to sit one on his right and the other on his left hand in his glory; and to which request he replied:—

Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?

He then told those disciples that they should drink of the cup and be baptized with the baptism he should be baptized with; which was fulfilled in the cruel methods employed to put them to death.

There can be no other meaning safely applied to the passage, than the one that makes it refer to his passion, the extreme bitterness of soul incident to the betrayal by Judas, the forsaking of him by the disciples, the denial by Peter, the mocking of the trial before Pilate, the ignominious death to which he was condemned through the importunate demands of the Jews who should have been his friends, the journey to the cross, the last hour of agony when he felt himself forsaken of God—"My God, my God, Why hast thou forsaken me?"—bearing witness to the baptism of misery to which he was subjected. Well might he say, "How am I straitened until it be accomplished;" for not until then could he be satisfied whether he had endured worthily or not, and find his sacrifice successful.

THE GOSPEL BOAT AND HER VOYAGERS.

The following clipping from a San Francisco paper of the 24th ult. and letters from Bro. J. F. Burton give what news we have to date from the Evanelia, her passengers, and crew. A letter from Sr. Burton appears in the Home Column. Captain Burton and fellow voyagers have doubtless seen too many apparently opposing forces to be diverted by the incident of storm, and will doubtless sail soon when peace quiets the troubled waters:—

ALONG THE WATER FRONT, October 23.—The storm which played havoc with the shipping along the northern coast at the beginning of the month has returned with fury, and shipowners who have vessels at sea between here and the sound are beginning to feel anxious for their safety. The storm was reported to be traveling south, and the captains of the vessels in the bay or at the docks were notified to look out for dirty weather. Extra mooring lines were put out, and spare anchors on vessels out in the stream were got in readiness to be used at a moment's notice should the ships begin to drag. Early in the morning the wind at Point Reyes was skimming over the surface of the ocean at a great speed, and seas began washing over the rocks at Point Lobos with a swirl and boom that foreboded trouble. Later in the afternoon the bar began breaking, and a couple of square-rigged vessels that came in from the open sea in the tow of tugs were almost buried under the mountains of foam as they came over the bar.

Among the first of the vessels to run for shelter was the little missionary schooner Evanelia. She came in through the Heads early in the morning and anchored near Sausalito. She started on Saturday morning for the islands of the south seas with a crew of seven, who were going to preach the gospel among the people of the out-of-the-way corners of the earth. They were of the Church of Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ, and nearly all of the crew but two had never been at sea before. The others came from Lamoni, Iowa, where the church claims its greatest strength, and the experience of the missionaries with their few days at sea proved that they were better sailors on prairie schooners than on the ships that go down to the sea.

The decks of their craft were frequently washed by the angry waters and even trickled down into the cabin. The schooner was loaded too heavily forward to allow her to ride the seas well in a head wind. This will be remedied, and when fair weather prevails another start will be made.

SAUSALITO, opposite
San Francisco, Oct. 23.

Elder E. L. Kelley; Dear Bro.:—On Friday we towed to sea, and on Saturday returned to this place, where we yet lie at anchor. There was such a heavy chop sea on outside with a long, heavy southeast sea, and it blew so strong—we were not making a mile to windward; the wind was dead ahead, varying from S. S. W. to S. S. E., and our course should be about S. by W. for the first few days to get an offing.

The little boat behaved excellently, and after we double-reefed all the sails we moved along fully as well as the large ships we were in company with. It rained and blew quite heavy in squalls. At daylight we saw some vessels reefed closer than we were; some (two) ships with topgallant sails and courses furled, and moving along under their double topsails and staysails. It was quite hazy or foggy with the southerly wind, and at four o'clock I made up my mind to return and wait for a more propitious time to get off shore. I took the wheel at four a. m. and staid there until we came to anchor here at one p. m.

I am quite proud of the Evanelia as a good sea boat. She threw less water on deck than many large vessels would have done; but, as I judged, she does not do much in a heavy sea by the wind, as she is right on top of the sea and drifts quickly to leeward. Last night it blew a gale here and rained, S. E. wind; to-day, about S. S. W., rainy and squally. As soon as the weather clears we will be off, but I will wait until it does, so we can get off shore. We are all well, and everything is all right; anticipations bright.

In bonds,

J. F. BURTON.

Thursday morning, Oct. 25.

Elder E. L. Kelley:—The wind is westerly and northerly—baffling, foggy; but I judge I can get off shore all right, so I will start again unless the appearances in an hour from now are worse than now. The glass is falling, but is high enough for easterly weather, and the "weather probabilities" predict southeast storm again; but they do not always know. All hands are well, and we are all anxious to get off. I sent Examiner yesterday. The crew were not seasick. Bro. Case was not a bit sick; she and Sr. Burton were. I have tried my chronometer and find her all right. I got my longitude in the bay here within one half a mile; that is good as I had to take my sights in the boat, pulling a distance from the schooner so I could get an observation.

All hands are in good spirits, and we all have perfect confidence in the Evanelia's seagoing qualities. She is an excellent sea boat, and does splendidly, except by the wind in a heavy sea; and few vessels do well then.

We filled up the tanks again last night, and are all ready, so that if the sun clears off the weather, or it does not get southerly, we will be off soon.

In bonds,

J. F. BURTON.

THE brethren of the Northern Illinois district have succeeded in organizing a branch at Peoria, Illinois, with Bro. A. J. Keck of Plano as its presiding elder. He will hold meetings at Trades Assembly Hall, No. 123 South Adams street, at 2:30 p. m. each Sunday. Of it the Journal of Peoria for October 21, says:—

If the new church will result in the making of better citizens, better husbands, better wives, better mothers, fathers, and children, we shall bid it success.

The gospel ought to do for men and women what the Journal suggests; and let us hope that it will at Peoria.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. WHITE, El Dorado Springs, Missouri, October 26:—

El Dorado Springs is on fire, proverbially speaking. Your words in last Herald, "There will be decided and strong efforts made to prevent fruition coming to the church," were prophetic and had their fulfillment in the late effort of Clark Braden. In five lectures he poured out the bitterest wrath against the church that I ever listened to. But he run against a cyclone, when he attempted to butt "I. N." off the bridge. The tables turned, and in place of "Mormonism" getting "unmasked," "I, Clark Braden," got "unmasked." All the glory goes to God.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Prescott, Michigan, October 25:—

The Eastern and Northern district conferences are over; good meetings and crowds at each. Some were baptized at both places; and to-day at this place six more were baptized. Over two hundred have been baptized in the Northern Michigan district, since General Conference.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. ARTHUR JENNINGS writing from London, England, October, a long and pleasant letter, indicates that he though but young in the work is striving to let the gospel light shine; but finds it trying work indeed to stand for the faith alone at times in a city of five million of inhabitants. Wonderful city, still more wonderful gospel of truth. Stand firm, brother, 'tis God giveth the victory.

Bro. George H. Graves wrote Bro. Pitt, September 8; that he had opened three new fields and preached a few times in each; Macomb, Quincy, and Galesburg; had fair hearing and requests to come again. Prospects were to him brightening, for the preaching of the word.

Sr. Julia Burns of Machias, Maine, requests the prayers of the Saints in behalf of her husband, Bro. John Burns, who was wounded by a gunshot, that he may be healed.

Conference minutes of "Nauvoo and String Prairie" district published in HERALD for October 24 should read thus: "Bishop's agent's report: Total receipts, $92.60; paid out, $82.50; balance due church, $10.10. So writes the assistant secretary.

Bro. A. J. Myers has baptized two at Fairbury, Nebraska. The Saints there have secured a public house of worship. Attendance has increased and prospects have brightened in consequence.

Bro. J. P. Benson reports a good work being done at Rogersville, Missouri, by Bro. and Sr. Henry Sparling and the local Saints. He has received sample copies of the HERALD, which he orders for his family.

Bro. E. T. Atwell baptized one near Rich Hill, Missouri, the 29th inst.

Bro. John Rounds did effective labor at Missouri Valley, Iowa, of late, holding a series of meetings and baptizing five. He left the branch in good condition, with others believing. This we learn by letter from Bro. C. E. Heath, dated October 29.

Bro. David Dancer returned of late from a trip to Northern Illinois. Bro. J. R. Lambert departed for Adrian, Illinois, on Friday, the 2d inst.

By notice in the Ensign, we learn that the paper is now owned by Brn. Joseph Luff and William Crick; and that Bro. Crick would be the business manager. And also that the connection of Bro. Luff with it, will not interfere with his calling as an officer of the church, nor his labors in the field. This we are glad to learn for the harvest is already white, and the laborers so few that calls are made from every direction, asking for elders to come and minister the word. We presume that the Ensign will continue to bear the banner of Christ aloft, and maintain its integrity as a herald of the gospel.

Anyone having Nos. 7 and 10 of HERALD volume 1—July and October, 1860, or HERALD volume 1 complete; also Times and Seasons volumes 1, 2, and 3, please write the Herald Office, naming price.

Eleven were baptized of late at Galland's Grove, Iowa, the result of labor done by local officers, Sunday school workers, and missionaries.

With January 1, 1895, the HERALD begins a new volume. Subscriptions solicited.

Weary not through the heat of summer
Weary not through the cold spring rain,

ON BOARD THE EVANELIA.

OCTOBER 19, eleven a. m.—This morning at seven o'clock the towboat Alice came alongside to take us out to sea. The morning was beautiful; clear, fine, and still. All hands were in the best of spirits with the prospects of getting started on our long journey, and of getting settled down into order and quiet and be through unpacking lockers and baskets to get out one parcel so as to make room for another. We had intended to start yesterday, and many dear friends came—in the rain—to see us off. But the wind was south, weather foggy and threatening, so the captain concluded to wait till it cleared. Consequently no one knew just when we would leave, and I feared that at such an early hour there would be no one at the wharf to see us off. But I was happily disappointed, for, early as it was, Sr. Minnie Anderson from Oakland and Sr. White and daughter from the city came on board. But only for a few minutes. A word or two of greeting, a loving "good-bye," and they were ashore again. The Alice had already taken our line, and in a little while we were gliding over the smooth, glassy looking waters, down the harbor, waving our handkerchiefs in answer to those upon the shore. The indulgent captain allowed me to take the wheel, and more than once while going down the harbor, said, with a pat on the shoulder, "You are doing fine! A good helmsman." I was aware though, that the "wake" was not as straight as it might have been, but was ambitious for the record of steering the Evanelia through the Golden Gate and over the bar, so stuck to it though the swell was getting heavier all the time. When about half way across the bar the towline parted. I then resigned in the captain's favor. The sea was not breaking on the bar though there was quite a heavy swell on, and the sudden pitching of the boat was a little more than the order of Sr. Case's stomach could stand and it revolted.

When the tugboat cast off our line we were in parallel position with a large ship, and for awhile we gained on her, but the breeze was almost dead ahead and freshening and the ship gained on us. Sr. Case is seeking refuge from her feeling of nausea in a quiet sleep.

October 22.—I had little thought when writing the above sketch that our voyage would end so soon. Shortly after dinner on Friday the 19th the sky became overcast and assumed a leaden color. The sun came out bright for about an hour in the latter part of the afternoon then sunk into a bank of dark clouds and fog that skirted the horizon. This, together with a yellowish looking spot near the horizon, was plain indication of a storm which burst upon us before morning. The sea had been increasing all night. Our little ship behaved well and proved herself a good sea boat, still in that heavy, uneven sea she naturally pitched very suddenly but rolled very little. At about four o'clock in the morning the captain put her under close reefs, jib and all, and put back—still by the wind though—with the hope and belief that he could fetch into San Francisco Bay again. It was sailing more by faith though, than by sight, for he had been beating against the wind and drifting more or less with the tide all night, and even when daylight came nothing was visible through the dense fog by which to get our position. But to remain out would be to be driven on a lee shore before another twenty-four hours, and to go in we must needs cross the bar where the sea would be fourfold worse than where we were. This all on board knew, but none doubted the ability of our little ship to carry us through it. About eight o'clock in the morning the captain thought we must be near the bar, and his anxiety was greatly relieved by seeing a buoy loom up to view just a little on the lee bow, and in a few minutes we were on the bar. Our boat labored heavily but threw very little water for being "by the wind." To us women folks, who were in the cabin, the muffled creaking of the spars and timbers sounded as if they were being strained to their utmost. Nor were we over it after a few dips and plunges. It was a steady push of about three miles at our crossing.

I need scarcely say that the captain felt deeply the responsibility of his position while making the run in; being a stranger to the place, and the haze prevented him from seeing objects distinctly. But we came to anchor all right near three o'clock in the afternoon in Sausalito Bay. Thanks to our heavenly Father for his protecting care.

Shall I add that in the cabin things looked gloomy? Baskets, valises, shoes, and chairs that had to be crowded into every available place, were strewn about the floor in stormy weather disorder. Clothing and other things were all afloat in the lockers, and the water was washing about on the cabin floor (which is so near the bottom of the boat that a very little water comparatively will reach it when the boat is on her side so that the pumps won't work). The cook had to be on deck with the rest of the crew, so there had been no fire made, nor had anyone had anything to eat since supper the night before. Both Sister Case and I had been seasick during the night, so we did not attempt to get out of bed till in smooth water.

The prophecy uttered by Bro. J. C. Clapp on the day of the dedication concerning a storm she would encounter has been literally fulfilled. May God grant us more favorable weather when again we go forth on the great deep.

Our missionaries, Bro. and Sr. Case, are well and in good spirits, nothing daunted by their first experience on the sea. Bro. Case was not sick at all.

Heavy southerly weather still continues.

HELPING HAND.

SYNOPSIS OF CHAPTER NINETEEN, HINTS ON CHILD TRAINING.

THE VALUE OF TABLE-TALK.

As man rises in the intellectual scale, he looks upon the table not merely as a place for feeding the body, but also as a place for mental and moral enjoyment.

When the Perfect Man was here among men he showed that the household meal could be made the means of mental and spiritual improving. There are no deeper or more precious truths taught by him than the ones spoken to those who sat with him eating and drinking. The table-talk of great men has long been recognized as having freeness, simplicity, and forcefulness not to be found in their words spoken elsewhere.

In the ordinary household, all the members of the family are together at the daily meals. Everything else must be dropped by them all for the one duty of eating and drinking. Their work being all left behind them, they are in a state of relaxation and of kindlier feeling accordingly. Now, therefore, they are freest to speak on matters having a common interest to all, instead of being absorbed in the several special duties from which they have turned away or toward which they must turn at the close of the meal.

It is a fact that those who sit together at a family table learn to understand and to help one another as they could not without the advantage of this distinctive opportunity. It is also true that few fully recognize and make available the value of table-talk as a training agency. Yet he who would rightly train his children cannot ignore this important training agency without serious loss to them.

In England and in Europe children are likely to be by themselves with nurses or governesses at meal time rather than with their parents. But in this country, where at all times the children are brought to the family table, whether when the family is alone or when visitors are present, the table-talk is an important feature in child-training. This feature varies much in different homes.

Fifty years ago, a New England gentleman, a philanthropist, an educator, and an author, had a wide acquaintance with men in this country and abroad who were similarly occupied. His home was a resort for them. All of his large family of children were permitted to be at the family table when those guests were present, as at all other times. The table-talk in that home, between parents and guests, or between parents and children when no guests were present, was in itself "a liberal education." Now that those children are parents and grandparents they perceive that they were great gainers through the table-talk of their early home.

In another home where there was a large family of children and visitors were frequent among them, the utmost freedom of question and expression was cultivated in their table talk. The spirited discussions carried on there between father, mother, children, and visitors were highly instructive, suggesting further inquiry and stimulating and inspiring in many directions. The family table was the intellectual and moral center of that home. No one wanted to leave that table until he had to; and all who gathered there will say that no other training agency did more for him than the table talk of his childhood's home.

In the dining-room of one home there stands a book-rest which holds an English dictionary, a biographical dictionary, and a pronouncing gazetteer of the world. In the course of the familiar and profitable table talk, in which the parents and children engage, these books are referred to to settle on the spot every question which may arise as to the pronunciation or meaning of a word, the date of any personage, the location of any geographical site, or anything else of that sort. At breakfast in that home the father glances over the morning paper and gives to his family the main points of its news which he deems worthy of note in the family circle. The children tell of what they have studied in school or ask about points that have been raised by their teachers or companions. In such ways the children are trained to an intelligent interest in subjects that would otherwise be quite beyond their ordinary observation.

One father treasures up the best things of his experience or studies for the day and at the table in the evening or the next morning he brings these points attractively to the attention of his children. Another selects a special topic for conversation at the dinner table a day in advance, so that the children by thinking or reading may be prepared to share in the conversation. An item in the morning paper may suggest an inquiry about some noted man, and the father will say, "Let us talk about that man at dinner to-morrow. Learn all you can about him and we will help one another to a fuller knowledge of him." Thus the children are being trained to a broadening interest in men and things and to methods of thought and study.

There is no end to the modes of conducting table-talk as a means of child-training; and there is no end to its influence, however conducted. There is sure to be talking at every family table and this talk is sure to have its part in a child's training whether the parents wish it to be so or not. There are fathers whose table-talk is chiefly in complaint of the cooking or of the mother's methods of management. There are mothers who are more likely to ask where on earth their children learned to talk and act as they do than in what part of the earth the most important archaeological discoveries are now in progress. And there are more fathers and mothers whose table-talk is wholly between themselves except as they turn to say sharply, "Children, why don't you keep still when your father and mother are talking?" All this talk has its influence on the children. It leads them to have less respect for their parents and less interest in the home table except as a place for satisfying physical hunger. It is potent if not profitable.

Table-talk ought to be such as to make meal time one of the most pleasant as well as beneficial hours of the day to all the children. But in order to make table-talk valuable parents must have something to talk about, must be willing to talk about it there, and must keep the children lovingly in mind while they do their table-talking.

CLARK BRADEN AT EL DORADO SPRINGS.

LEBECK, Mo., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald.—Scarcely had the Saints folded up their tents and returned home from the camp meeting when the great "I, Clark Braden," made his appearance in El Dorado Springs and announced his intention to "unmask Mormonism." His first lecture was delivered on Thursday evening the 18th inst., continuing each evening until Sunday evening, delivering five in all, including one at three p. m. Sunday.

Well, the only change we can see in Braden is the footprints of old Father Time. Seven years have changed his beard from black to gray, but nevertheless he is Braden as of old. He tells those old, threadbare yarns with as much taste and enjoyment as though he really thought they were true. My father used to say he believed that a man could tell a lie so often he would really get to believing it himself. If that really be true, Braden is certainly to be pitied, for it would be a hard dose to swallow.

He still insists that Spalding wrote the historical part of the Book of Mormon; that Sidney stole it; that he visited Joseph Smith in April and September of 1827. Unfortunately, however, he omitted the tale about Sidney mounting King Ahasuerus' horse. "Shades of the Martyrs, what a name!" was altogether left out. "I do wish Sidney had given that man a name," never escaped him once. But that dear old story about the old sow after the man on crutches must not be left out. Mormonism isn't properly unmasked without it. "And they fit, and they fit, and they fit," repeated five times, was among the great things Rev. "I Clark" used to edify his audience.

It is not necessary to undertake to give a brief of his lectures, as all those who have heard him or read the Braden-Kelley debate know every point he presented.

We did not learn of his presence until Friday afternoon, but as soon as the news reached us at our home at Lebeck, we held a "council of war" with Brn. Keck, Walters, and others, and proceeded at once to El Dorado Springs. On our way we found Bro. I. N. White at Bro. Lloyd's, with drawn sword ready for the battle. This made our pulse beat a little more regularly, for we well knew that Bro. I. N. was acquainted with all the arts of war.

As our Latter Day Saint delegation marched in and found seats near the front quite a rustle was visible in the congregation, which plainly showed that they expected "something to drop." Braden caught the news that we were present, and he was decidely tame that evening. As the lectures progressed he became more bold and defiant. He read a challenge to Latter Day Saints for public discussion, framing it in his own cunning, deceptive way. He would only debate that question. He would permit no challenges to be presented to him except in private. If anybody had any questions to ask, they must be in writing, or be presented to him privately.

Of course this gave us no chance to say anything, so we quietly awaited developments. Sunday night came and we had kept perfectly silent. Braden knew something would be done, but of course had no idea what it would be. He was constantly watching to shut off every chance for anyone to attack him. At the beginning of the service the writer secured a seat in the corner near the rostrum, as directed by Bro. White. When the final "Amen" had been said and before confusion had ensued I sprang to the side of Mr. Braden and requested the attention of the congregation to announce that on Tuesday evening we would begin a reply to Mr. Braden, at the same time requesting the use of the Christian church in which to make such reply. Bro. White quickly followed with an earnest appeal to them for a fair show, but all in vain. They informed us that we could not have the house. Braden was decidedly nonplussed. He was not looking for such a turn. It had its effect with the people, and Braden could see it. With all his blowing and bragging he had been compelled to play coward and shut us out. Next day we made application to the churches of the city, but could not obtain the use of any building suitable to our purpose, so we secured the pavilion in the city park and fitted it up with our tent wall, thus making it comfortable.

A large congregation greeted Bro. White on Tuesday evening to hear his reply. Now the way he did take hold of Braden was remarkable. He showed him up in his true light just so everybody could see him as he was. He showed that Braden had misread and misrepresented the church books.

Our camp meeting, followed by this series of lectures and replies, has caused the greatest stir in El Dorado that has ever been witnessed there in religious circles. Of course Pilate and Herod can always make friends when there is a Christ to crucify, therefore all the preachers in town were out to do obedience to Braden. There is one preacher, however, that now wishes he had kept his mouth shut. Said preacher is a candidate for the State Legislature and several of the Latter Day Saints are members of his party. As the political contest down this way is decidedly three-cornered, it is a very unpleasant thought to a candidate to be in jeopardy of losing about twenty votes from his own party, all in one neighborhood. The poor fellow may feel sorry now, but deathbed repentance is decidedly below par with Latter Day Saints. "Old Tray" was punished for being in bad company, and candidates who affiliate with Clark Braden are in danger of a good scratching on election day in Latter Day Saint communities. More anon, HOWENSTINE, Ohio, Oct. 20.

Editors Herald:—With the able assistance of our worthy brother, Isaac True, I preached at this place eighteen times, and there are several beginning to believe, and three or four have announced that they do believe. I think some will come into the church before long. It was a new place. One singular feature about it is that from the time I began the audience increased in size until the house was packed every night, and that kept up steadily right through to the end. There was talk of "running me out," giving some eggs, and shutting the schoolhouse; but the Lord gave friends who stood by us, though Bro. True suffered a little from persecutions by the "baser sort."

I sent for one dozen copies of the Voice of Warning, and received them so that I offered them for sale the evening I preached the fifteenth time. Eight of the twelve copies were sold after meeting closed, in ten minutes. The next evening I sold the remaining four and two additional copies. I secured very fair statement of our faith inserted in the two dailies in Canton. I had no trouble at all to secure same. Some, even after the two weeks' meeting, expressed regret that it was at an end. They volunteered two collections for me. All treated me kindly.

You can imagine that that neighborhood is stirred on religion from center to circumference. One said I ought not to be allowed to preach. One of our friends asked, "Why?" "It divides churches," answered the objector; to which our friend replied, "The churches are getting into such a condition that they need dividing."

I am glad I see the blessings following the humble efforts of the elders. The local ministry cannot afford to be idle any longer. There is an army of them. Most good has been done by traveling elders at points where the local ministry are active and where the sisters talk gospel.

JOHN S. PARRISH.

BORDEN, Ind., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—I baptized two last week at Byrneville, Indiana, and am to go into the water here this week. We spoke several times recently at the old Mount Eden chapel. Vandalism has wrought sad havoc on the window panes. I also read in public the letter Harbert Scott wrote to the Herald in January, 1875, in regard to the healing of a twin daughter. She was and had been afflicted with spasms up to August 19, 1874, when she was relieved and healed through the laying on of the hands of the eldership, as testified to by a half dozen, as subscribed to in his communication.

Last evening was our first in a new hall at Borden. The lights were not the best, and the seats are temporary, but for all that the turnout was fair and the collection about cancelled the hire; so you see the outlook is rather flattering. The town has been injured by a flood and two terrific fires.

The Saints are usually well, hopeful, united, and comparatively happy. I confidently look for rich returns from this rugged land, if the ministry keep in their present frame of mind and all strive unceasingly.

Many, very many, are looking on, and watching the trend of thought that animates and develops. May the children of the holy covenant ever realize that they are ordained to be the light of the world. Let the mistakes of the past suffice, and work forward and look steadily to the front. All we need to fear, in a bad sense of the term, is to think wickedly and do wrong. May the regathering of good forces and a doubling of all diligence crown our labor with eminent success and the laurels of praise.

M. T. SHORT.

ROCKLAND, Maine, Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—I left the little flock here of late, and went to West Ellsworth, for nine days, and preached nine sermons and baptized three, leaving others very near the kingdom. Grandfather Hooper thinks he is doing more good to shoot away on the picket line than to fall back in the ranks of Israel. It is very true the dear old soul is loaded with hot shot and shell, and he never misses his mark. He drove sixteen miles last Sunday with his granddaughter to hear me preach, besides taking me over the same road the day before. I found the Saints enjoying themselves very well. The Baptists, who closed their house against the Saints, had a box supper on Friday night, but few were in attendance by the looks of our congregation in the schoolhouse. The Saints and friends kindly received me, and bore my expenses to and from their place. I leave on Thursday for Cranberry Isles, a new place. May God bless his people.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

FOWLER, Cal., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I saw anything from this part of the country concerning the work. I have been doing what I could, in preaching and visiting. I have distributed a good deal of reading matter such as Heralds, supplements to Herald, Ensigns, the Voice of Warning, the Book of Mormon, the Inspired Translation, History of Joseph Smith by his Mother Lucy, and a lot of tracts. They all have helped to put down prejudice and to better inform those who read in regard to the marvelous work and a wonder. There are some who do not want to be enlightened upon the subject, so close their ears and hearts against the truth, and will not be converted.

Brn. Haws and Brown held tent meetings in Fresno for about a month and reached quite a number of people. Bro. J. H. Lawn also assisted them, mostly on the street, where hundreds of people gathered to hear, and the police took pains to see that good order prevailed. I have been holding meetings in the Lone Star schoolhouse, a place where Bro. Haws spoke several times to attentive congregations. I preached twice and then organized a Religio-Literary society, with twenty-four members, nearly all strangers to me. They elected me president by a unanimous vote. We had good meetings, but alas! Satan came also, and through his servants we were informed (by a card pinned in our buggy) that we were not wanted there any more and in case we made our appearance the next Sunday evening would be treated to a dose of unmarketable eggs. This was the entering wedge which caused a split in their own ranks; for some denounced it, while others held their peace. It did not keep us from attending to our duty, for on the next Sunday morning we were in attendance at the Sunday school, took part in the exercises, and at the close spoke to them about the treatment received, and gave out an appointment for next Sunday morning after the close of Sunday school, subject, "What we believe." At night the house was full at the Religio exercises, and those who had made threats the Sunday previous seemed now to be our friends, and we experienced no further trouble from them; but they were the means of bringing out a larger crowd to hear "what we believe." The house was full and I spoke an hour and a half with good liberty; but the would-be pious ones stayed at home. We have made friends there of the most intelligent ones, and they were anxious that we continue our meetings. We made no enemies, for they were made before we went. How true the saying of our Savior, "My sheep hear my voice, . . . and they follow me."

We have had experiences since we came here that we have never had before, and they tend to strengthen us in the work. We have been in the midst of strangers almost entirely since we came, some of nearly all denominations. We have worshiped, by invitation, with the United Presbyterians, with the First Presbyterians, with the Christians (or Campbellites), Baptists, Congregationalists, and Salvationists. In these places I have borne my testimony to the unchangeability of God and his work, and I have been blessed in it. How true the words of the apostle, "The things of God knoweth no man, except he has the Spirit of God." A minister of the U. P. Church told me that they were "trying to get back in the old paths." Said he, "We have the form, but we do not have the power," the Holy Ghost. I gave him some tracts that would enlighten him; but the salary, that is the question. O, 'tis hard to give thee up!

We fully believed Bro. Kelley would make us a visit while on the coast. He passed within one mile of the house, but I suppose a press of business hindered him. I was glad to learn he had been successful in getting the gospel boat built. Bro. J. F. Burton called on his way to San Francisco, and stayed one day and one night. We enjoyed his visit, as we had not seen him before for several years. While here we informed Bro. G. W. Barr and family and they came over in the evening, and after singing and prayer being offered, Bro. Burton blessed our little daughter, Clara Hildegard, and I must say that while standing there with the little cherub in our arms that I never felt the solemnity of such an occasion before. I could see the tender little bud of promise as she lay in our arms, the many paths of sin which would lead astray, our own imperfect lives, and the great reward to be obtained. It made me shudder, and I prayed for strength that I might be given grace sufficient to be a help in time of need. We had a pleasant evening and parted about eleven o'clock. Next morning I took Bro.

Burton to the depot where we parted. He expressed himself as being glad that he had called: thought that there might be a good work done here.

There are so many different nationalities of people here. There is a family of six who belong to the Utah Church; joined it in Sweden, but now are about ready to unite with the Reorganization; and I think there will be others. They have expressed themselves as being well pleased with the doctrines of this church. I hope and pray the Lord will help us to gather out the honest in heart. There surely must be some here. It is our greatest delight to talk of our faith; it is meat and drink to my hungry soul. I have visited and talked for four and five hours at a time with the best liberty I ever had, and those who had gathered together to hear and visit have expressed themselves as being well pleased; "the most beautiful doctrine that I ever heard." These parties a short time ago would not associate with anyone who bore the name of Mormon, but now are our warmest friends. God has blessed me in a wonderful manner when I have been talking of the hope which we have. May he bless his Saints in every land and hasten the time when Zion shall be redeemed. In bonds of peace,

DANIEL GARNER.

MOOLAP, Victoria, Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—By arrangement of the one in charge I am trying a new field, while Bro. Butterworth goes to New South Wales, for several months. I arrived in time to participate in the business of the quarterly conference at Hastings, September 1. One item of some importance was the appointment of a deputation of five to wait on the Minister of Education of Victoria to ask a recognition of the constitutional rights of Bro. Ralph Leyland of Woodend. The Education Department of State schools, in which Bro. Leyland is employed as a teacher, has been placing restrictions on him for doing what they call "proselytizing." He is zealous and energetic, desiring to magnify his calling as a minister, and was in the habit of distributing tracts, also preaching and conversing, and all this out of school hours. A religious enemy reported him to the department, and after an investigation he was asked to desist from above actions, or be summoned before the Public Service Board, to be, probably, reduced in rank or expelled from the service. The officers of the department undoubtedly have a misconception either of our faith, or the broad principles of religious liberty which all other teachers in the department enjoy and act under, some of them preachers, too.

The deputation is waiting to be introduced, and we watch results with interest. If we lose, it means much; if we succeed, it will add another to the list of official recognitions of our rights as a church. The Kirtland, Temple Lot, and Canada decisions are powerful precedents, which we will use to good effect. The deputation is composed of Elders Butterworth, McIntosh, Trembath, Jones, and myself. Our progress is delayed by a general election in which a new Minister of Education is elected.

Dr. Talmage has come and gone. He met some sharp criticism from his religious ministerial compeers, on the lecture on evolution. One religious paper says if they want information on agriculture, they would not go to a chemist, and neither would they sit as a pupil at the feet of Talmage in matters of science. They agree that he might be a doctor of divinity, but deny his authority in matters of science. He seems to have made a mistake in coming as a lecturer. The Southern Cross (Presbyterian) says: "He flies across the Colonies in a brief lecturing tour, preaching only rarely, and the purpose of this visit is purely financial and personal. He is a preacher of the type which only America could produce."

"Methodist Union" is a new development among the Wesleyans, Primitives, and smaller bodies of that color; not as an accomplished fact, but one which seems probable. Nearly all of them favor it, in their conferences, and no doubt it will come. Australian Colonial Federation is again coming to the front in political circles and seems a live issue. This, it is to be hoped, will be accomplished.

Sad news lately reached me of the death of Sr. Amos Ballard of Argent's Hill, New South Wales, and Bro. Benjamin Wood of Laurieton.

Bro. Kaler lately had a debate with Rev. Watt of the Disciples, at New Castle. I am informed that when Elder Kaler stepped on the platform, Rev. Watt winked a knowing wink at his people in the audience; but that before the debate closed he was too busy to wink, and refused to debate the subject farther than one night. Elder Butterworth has gone to New South Wales and no doubt the debate will be followed by a series of sermons by him and Elder Kaler.

While "fossicking" around in the theological department of Cole's Book Arcade in Melbourne lately, I found a copy of Orson Pratt's works with "Pearl of Great Price" included. I purchased it on account of the prophecy on the Civil War of America (1860). Entries on the fly leaf show it was bought by some elder in England who moved to Australia, but am sorry his name is carefully torn out, else I might visit him and tell him about the good news of a Reorganization since those early times (1851), as well as call his attention to the fulfillment of the prophecy, which I see he marked.

Melbourne reminds me very much of an American city. We have five or six members there, amidst a population of some four hundred thousand who know nothing of our claims.

GOMER WELLS.

PORCUPINE, Wis., Oct. 27.

Editors Herald:—The organization of the Northern Wisconsin district was effected on the 20th inst., Bro. A. L. Whiteaker being chosen President, Joshua Hackett clerk, and Bro. Hayes of Chetek, Wisconsin, recommended for appointment as Bishop's agent, providing he will act. The attendance at the conference was light, but a good time was had. Bro. A. H. Smith is with us, and has kindly given us his labor all this week, and the crowded houses that greet him every night bespeak the gratitude and deep interest of the people in his efforts, so kindly made. We look for a rustling campaign this winter in the Northwestern district, as Bro. W. S. Pender will labor here; and as a laborer he needs no introduction to the readers of the Herald. We also have Bro. Joshua Hackett. Although young in the work, he is full of zeal and love. With an addition of one more and the writer, our battle line will be complete. And we expect to raise the gospel banner and blow the gospel trump over some of the hills and valleys of Northern Wisconsin. To-morrow we baptize again; and so the army still increases, and may still increase to the glory of our King.

Your fellow standard bearer,

H. P. CURTIS.

WASHBURN, Maine, Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—On the 13th and 14th inst. we held our Nova Scotia district conference at South Rawdon. The weather was stormy, but we had a fair attendance and a good time. The Saints are feeling well, especially the faithful workers. The young Saints and friends are doing well this summer. They have had a nice Sunday school and gave a splendid concert on Sunday afternoon, with a good, long programme well carried out. Those who were prevented from being there by the storm may well feel sorry. It seemed too bad that some of the best working scholars who had their part prepared were disappointed that way. The officers of the church should not underestimate the arduous duties and grand privilege of being permitted to help and train such a band of bright, intelligent young people. The business session as well as all the other services were characterized with the spirit of love and union. I look for better days for the work in South Rawdon. Faithfulness and a keeping of the law upon the part of the members will bring it about.

I arrived here a day or two ago, have been called upon by Mr. Lidstone, the M. E. preacher. Was asked to pray in his meeting, and had my services noticed very kindly by him, which shows a marked change in the social atmosphere since opening up this place two years ago. The outlook for work here is good. What the results will be, who knows?

The Saints are doing well, which augurs in favor of success greatly. In bonds,

H. J. DAVISON.

EUCLID, Ark., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—I am yet alive and contending for the faith once delivered to the Saints. The work is not very prosperous in these parts yet on account of slander and persecution. It seems that Satan has a good hold on this people and a down-hill pull. I have tried to establish the work here, but it seems the people are bound against it. I hope not; I hope the people in this country will yet see.

I have baptized two at Euclid, three at Ultima Thule, and five at Silver Hill, this conference year. Others have given their names for baptism. I have just returned from Corinth, Arkansas, one of the Campbellite strongholds. They say they are anxious for a debate, but have not got time for it now. They want me to preach nights, and let a man reply. I told them if they wanted to debate we would accommodate them, if they would sign a fair proposition. They said it was of no use to debate church propositions. They want us to affirm signs to follow and let them deny. I left them in confusion.

I go from here to Nevada county. If the Saints in Southeastern Arkansas need my labors please address me at Stoctown, Arkansas, and bear my expenses, and I will respond at once. I would like for Bro. J. W. Gilcoats to write and give me his address. I think he made a mistake in going to Texas. He is a man that would be of good use to the cause if he would labor where the church needs him. I hope the Saints of Southwestern Arkansas will learn their duty and do it, those who have not. We need more laborers and means to carry on the good work. Saints, pay your tithing, and the Lord will bless you.

In bonds,

J. W. JACKSON.

STILLWATER, R. I., Oct. 18.

Editors Herald.—I wrote you some time ago from Sheldonville, Massachusetts, where we were holding tent meetings. Sunday, September 9, I baptized Mrs. Webb, who is now rejoicing in the truth. Reluctantly we packed our tent in a wagon and started over the road toward West Dighton, because we did not like to leave such kind friends; but time is short, and there are so many places to reach that we do not wish to linger when work for the time is accomplished. There are times when one can get too much of a good thing, especially if their spiritual digestion is hampered by the traditions and creeds of men.

We arrived in West Dighton in the afternoon, and erected our tent, but did not begin meetings until the night following. The ground here was new, and much prejudice existed; but the people came out to hear and continued to come, giving us good audiences, and paying good attention. We preached about two weeks, then on account of cool weather we concluded to pack the tent away for the season. Sr. Clark, who kindly cared for us, is the only Saint in the place; but we have left friends there, and there are a number of houses open for the elders to preach in, or to stay, free of charge as long as they see fit. Thus has ended our first season of tent work in the Massachusetts district. It was an experiment; and while it seemed to work well in the "broad, free West," there were doubts in the minds of some as to the success of tent work in the conservative East. But practical demonstration is worth a deal more than theory, so now we can safely say that we have proven it that the tent work is a decided success. And of all the districts in the Eastern mission I do not think there is one that presents a more inviting field than this for the active missionary. Small towns and villages are almost numberless, and so close to one another that it is only a matter of a few minutes' ride or an hour's walk to go from one to another. It is true that the people are a little inclined to be conservative, but with a little wise labor the crust is broken, and then we find them as warm-hearted as those of any clime.

From West Dighton we went to Fiskville, stopping at Providence on our way and attending the Saints' prayer meeting Wednesday, September 26. Next day went to Bro. R. Searle's, and Bro. Blanchard preached in the evening. We continued the rest of the week at Fiskville, preaching at Providence and Woodville on Sunday; and continued meetings at Woodville until Thursday, then returned to Fiskville, and on Sunday baptized six, four adults and two children, my little daughter being one of them; returned to Woodville in the evening.

We had a little unpleasant experience at the above place resulting from a lack of understanding of God's law as revealed to us in the "books," but then we survived the shock and trust that all may learn the law of God before they seek to declare it.

Monday and Tuesday nights Bro. Blanchard preached at the above place. and Thursday night we opened up in a Baptist church on the Plainville pike, where we held three services, then came to this place only to find that we were preceded by an evangelist of the Baptist order. We kindly offered to hold union services with him, but he did not seem to think it would work well. He was afraid that if he did the committee would put us all out, so having about ten days to put in before conference we have started to hold meetings in private houses for this week and will probably have a church a few miles distant for Sunday. Bro. W. W. Blanchard has been laboring with me since September 1, and I have enjoyed his company very much. He is, for a young man, a wise servant, and endeavoring to be as harmless as a dove. I shall feel lonely when left to myself again.

Yours as ever,

G. W. ROBLEY.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 16.

Editors Herald.—At the Logan reunion I subscribed for the Herald, and I can truly say I am well pleased with it. Being a new convert to the latter-day doctrine, I feel that I need all the help I can get.

God has verified his promise in my case by confirming in many ways the truth of this work. After a man has been living on the husks of doubt and uncertainty, and wading through the slough of despond for so many years, he can appreciate the beauty and glory of this work. Those who have been in the full enjoyment of these blessings all their lives have a very meager conception of the struggles and conflicts through which a man must pass in order to divest himself of his former habits of thought, opinions, and prejudices. It cannot be done in one's own strength, but one must have the help of God: at least such is my experience.

I had believed for years that the gifts and blessings promised ought of right to be in the church, and enjoyed by God's people; but the Book of Mormon was my stumbling block, and continued to be until I went to God with my trouble. I said, "Lord, thy servant has done all he can do; and if this work is thine, let thy poor servant know it." And I rested on his promise to give wisdom to those who lacked and would ask for it. Blessed be his holy name, light began to dawn, and the dawn was soon superseded by the noonday splendor, and the evidence came in a way to leave no doubt in my mind. As I proceed in my investigation I find that I am able by the aid of God's Spirit to comprehend those things that hitherto have been as a sealed book. Now, as I drink at the fountain of truth, my soul exults in God, and my peace is as a flowing river. I am only sorry I did not embrace this latter-day work sooner; it would have saved many seasons of doubt and distress, and instead of being a mere babe in Christ I might have been able to teach others. Pray God for me, dear Saints, that I may grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. To God be all praise for his goodness.

Dear brethren, we have a daughter and granddaughter at or near Cushing, Oklahoma, who are Saints, and would rejoice to see any who may chance to pass that way. My daughter's husband's name is Traverse Dingman.

Yours in love,

J. S. STRAIN.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald.—On the 6th ult. I had the privilege of meeting with the Canadian brethren at the Petrolia conference in the city of derricks where thousands of barrels of oil are taken from the earth daily. And while J. A. Grant and the writer were kindly conducted from one department to another by a friend, and a proper explanation was given of each department, the thought impressed itself on my mind that God had intended that man should be a copartner in the oil department as well as everything else; for while he had made the elements in which the different oils existed, he had also left it for man to refine, separate, and purify, and make ready for use, which the Petrolia people are not slow in doing. The conference was a success, and many warm acquaintances were formed by the writer with the good brethren of Canada.

At the close of conference we started for Michigan, in company with Bro. J. H. Lake, to attend the Eastern district conference at Buel Center. On Friday afternoon the Saints began to come, and from that time until dark they poured in like pigeons until every house seemed filled. They were the happiest set of people I ever saw; peace, joy, and good will were pictured on every face. It seemed that each one had left his cares behind and had come to worship God with all his heart. My very being was filled with joy and my heart went out in prayer to God, feeling to thank him that my lot was cast among this people.

When we met in the evening for preaching the house was packed at an early hour. Bro. J. H. Lake was chosen to the chair to preside during conference. The speakers were Lake, Cornish, W. J. Smith, S. Brown, A. Barr, and others. Everything moved off without a ruffle or jar. J. A. Grant was chosen district president assisted by William Davis. Bro. Lake gave us much timely advice and truly we felt that apostles were given to edify the Saints as much to-day as in Paul's day. Approximating, about fifty have been baptized since June conference in the Eastern district.

The 20th found the writer at Whittemore, assembled with the Saints in the Northern district of Michigan for conference. A goodly time was had. Nearly two hundred baptisms were reported at this conference for the four months ending October 20. One would think that Michiganders go to the water like ducks, especially when "shood" along by a Cornish or an F. C. Smith.

My expectations are to assist F. M. Cooper for awhile at this place, and then go to the Eastern district. May the good work roll.

Your brother,

R. E. GRANT.

A REMEDY FOR EXISTING EVILS.

WILL I be considered an intruder if, again, I ask for a little space in your valuable paper? This is indeed an age of education and also a time of great agitation. There seems to be a settled conviction in the minds of a great number of people that we are approaching a crisis in our national history. It is folly for us to undertake to reason this away, as the indications of a coming revolution in our present social and political system are too plainly visible.

I wish at the present time to look at this matter from a social standpoint. There seems to be a great misunderstanding of the phrase, "unequal distribution of wealth." A great many writers waste whole pages trying to show that to divide up property and give to every one an equal share would be detrimental to the best interest of society; this fact is conceded. Labor applied to natural opportunities is the only source of wealth; so to take from an individual that has by his labor accumulated wealth and give to one who has not, would be robbery. The individual that finds himself placed here on this earth must obtain sustenance or accumulate wealth, if you please, in one of three ways; by his labor, by donation, or by robbery. If by labor, he must have access to the soil; if by either of the other two methods, others, from whom he obtains his living, must have access to the soil.

This conclusion defines pretty clearly the intention of the Creator in regard to the land; surely he did not intend it to be used for speculative purposes. This would bring us to conclude that private ownership of land is wrong. I know I shall be hooted at by a great many for making this assertion, but let us look at it from a common sense standpoint. Land is not wealth; wealth is only produced by applying our labor to land, and when we say produced, we speak metaphorically, for we produce nothing, we simply take what nature has furnished us in the rough and change it to meet our needs. Then, how much is necessary for each individual should be determined, not by the amount of these natural opportunities he can control, but by the amount he can successfully handle and make conducive to the happiness and comfort of himself and those dependent upon him for support.

It is unreasonable to argue that an individual whom God has placed here in this world should be obliged to buy the right to live here of somebody who happened to be here when he arrived. If the land was all in use it would be different, but such is not the case; men are playing "the dog in the manger;" they will not use the land, neither will they allow their fellow men to use it without a high rate of rent.

As lands become more valuable on account of the increase of population the tendency is for it to centralize into fewer hands, thus forcing people to pay whatever may be demanded for its use. If ten men could be placed upon an island where they could not escape, it would make no difference to one of their number whether he owned his nine fellowmen or owned the island on which they lived, the result would be the same. This condition will apply to the earth, and already its influence is being felt. At the alarming rate that mortgages are being foreclosed and the lands passing into the hands of the money power, a few decades will bring about a system of tenant farming as unremunerative as is being carried on in Ireland.

The object to be attained in this life is not (or should not be) to see how much wealth can be accumulated, but to benefit the human family by supplying the wants of mankind. If there were no wants to be supplied there would be no labor performed.

Now, as a remedy for the many existing evils, I advocate national ownership of all lands. I know I will be met with a terrible howl from all classes for taking the grounds I do on this question. Men that never owned a foot of land in their lives and probably never will, will raise the cry that this would interfere with our individual liberty. I do not believe this at all, as applied to the masses.

One man's liberty in regard to land would be just as perfect as the other. It is nonsense to argue that such is the case at present, for under our present system an individual entering the world now cannot so easily obtain a piece of land as a man who came here a few years ago; not that the land is all in use, but that it is held for speculative purposes.

Take, for instance, the mines of California in the early days. If an individual could have bought those mines at that time and used them as land is being used to-day, what would have been the result? The result would have been to have impeded progress to that extent that we would be groping along at this present time a century behind what we are now enjoying.

On the other hand, what would be the result of taking off the brakes from human progress by giving God's creatures access to natural opportunities? We would see poverty and misery eliminated from our midst, vice and crime greatly lessened, the overpopulated cities emptied of their miserable mass of suffering humanity, the sickly tenement houses, where thousands of children are born only to drag out a few years of miserable existence, would be a thing of the past, and all over this land would be a happy, contented, religious class of people. Would we like to see such a condition as this? Give God's creatures the right to use the soil and we will see just such a state of affairs existing.

It is the spirit of greed, this grasping after riches that is ruining men and the world. Men and woman professing to be Christians are brim full of it and are just as ready to raise a cry against a reform in this line as those not professing to be followers of any creed.

THE SIGN OF JONAS.

THEN certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.—Matt. 12: 38-40.

While a sign may be given to a people and at the same time not be perceived by them, it is also true that no sign can be given to a people unless they can at the same time be put in possession of the facts upon which the sign, as such, depends for its existence. The sign of the Prophet Jonas was given to those evil and adulterous Jews just as Christ said it should be. But how could it have been so given except they had been knowing to the fact just as they were knowing to the statement that Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly?

But admitting that Christ, in order to fulfill the sign of the Prophet Jonas, had to be three days and three nights preaching to the spirits in prison, would those evil and adulterous Jews have known of his having so done? As they certainly would not, and as they certainly had no knowledge of his having been with those prisoners at all, for any purpose whatever, some other solution must be sought. We must find some other way for the sign of the Prophet Jonas to have been given to them.

Was the Son of man three days and three nights in the heart of the earth in fact? Yes. Was he preaching to the spirits in prison during that three days and nights, or any part thereof? No. During the three days and nights that he was in the heart of the earth were those evil and adulterous Jews knowing to the fact? Yes. While it was a matter of authentic history with them that Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, it was also a matter of personal knowledge with them that Jesus, whom they despised, was three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. While Mother Earth certainly has her center, if that is the idea, and while she may have a heart in some veritable sense, yet where is the inspirational indorsement that her center or heart, either one, is the place where the disembodied prisoners are consigned? As the sign of the Prophet Jonas was to be given to those evil and adulterous Jews, and as the language concerning the matter was addressed especially to them, therefore wherever or whatever was the heart of the earth to them was fairly the place in which he who was the distress of their nation was retained a prisoner three days and nights, just as Jonas was retained a prisoner three days and nights in the whale's belly.

Where, or what was the heart of the earth to the Jews as a nation? What and where in fact is the heart of the earth to our nation? The city of Washington, seeing that within it the nation's life currents are not only concentrated, but are from thence also sent out to perfect, to perpetuate, and to build up the nation, and being, as virtually it now is, the center of the nation's hopes and fears, it must be its emotional center. But as Jerusalem, that most historic city of all the past, was most substantially the heart of all the earth to all Jews, whether at home or abroad, it therefore remains to be seen whether or not the divine man was in fact held a prisoner in that city three days and three nights, and which would mean that if he was so held, these evil and adulterous Jews knew of the fact, thereby showing that the sign of the Prophet Jonas was given to them in spite of their shrewdest equivocations.

Under the law how many days of unleavened bread were there? One, or more than one? While in Matthew 26:17 more than one is implied, in Exodus 12:15 there should have been seven, no more and no less.

Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover?

Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread; even the first day ye shall put away leaven out of your houses: for whosoever eateth leavened bread from the first day until the seventh day, that soul shall be cut off from Israel.

What was the difference between the feast of unleavened bread and the feast of the passover? While the feast of unleavened bread was intended to continue for seven consecutive days, the feast of the passover was intended to be observed at night and for one night only, that night being the night that followed the first day of unleavened bread:—

And they shall eat the flesh [of the paschal lamb] in that night, roast with fire, and unleavened bread; and with bitter herbs they shall eat it. Eat not of it raw, nor sodden at all with water, but roast with fire; his head with his legs, and with the purtenance thereof. And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning; and that which remaineth of it until the morning ye shall burn with fire.—Ex. 12:8-10.

In Luke 12:1 is not the feast of unleavened bread called the passover? While it may be that the Jews frequently called the entire seven days of unleavened bread the passover (and this for the reason that each and every one of those days were instituted in direct connection with the slaying and eating of the paschal lamb), it is also true that the paschal lamb, which was the passover proper, was to be slain only on the first day of unleavened bread, and eaten only on the night that followed.

At the time of the arrest and trial of the Son of man, on what day of the week did the first day of unleavened bread fall?

And it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings, he said unto his disciples, Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.—Matt. 26:1, 2.

As this was said on Saturday, as night be shown, and as two intervening days would have reached Tuesday of the following week, therefore, Tuesday was for that occasion the first day of unleavened bread, thus making Friday of the same week the fourth day of unleavened bread.

Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month [Nisan, the first month] they shall take to them every man a lamb according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house. . . . Your lamb shall be without blemish, a male of the first year: ye shall take it out from the sheep, or from the goats: and ye shall keep it up until the fourteenth day of the same month: and the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill it in the evening.—Ex. 12:3, 5, 6.

As the Jews were thus not to kill the paschal lamb until four days after the day of its selection, and as Christ was slain on Friday, or four days after the day on which he was permanently appointed to be led to the slaughter, therefore he was in his own death, in respect to this noted circumstance, the fulfillment of the law of the passover.

But was it, in fact, on the day before the first day of unleavened bread, that Judas Iscariot covenanted with the chief priests to betray him, which would have to be the case in order to mark Friday as having been four days after the day on which the said covenant was made?

And Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief priests to betray him unto them. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promised to give him money. And he sought how he might conveniently betray him. And the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover, his disciples said unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the passover?—Mark 14:10-12.

The Jewish passover, to be legally such, had to be slain in the evening. Was this condition fulfilled in the divine passover? As he was crucified according to Mark 15:25 at the third hour, which in our parlance was nine o'clock in the morning, and as he did not expire according to Mark 15:34 until about the ninth hour, which after our method was three o'clock in the evening; and as it cannot be said that he was slain until his life was extinct, therefore he was down to the very time of day, the fullness of the law of the passover.

In view of all this, why is Friday in John 19:31 called the "preparation of the passover" by which is meant, of course, that that day was the day on which the passover was killed, preparatory to being dispatched on the night that followed?

Under the probability that Nisan, the first month in the Jewish calendar, had two fourteenths, a Roman fourteenth, and a Jewish fourteenth; and under the probability that while some of the Jews held to the Roman fourteenth as being correct, others of them held to their own fourteenth as being more correct, and supposing that while Tuesday was the Roman fourteenth, Friday was the Jewish fourteenth, we can, to say the least, jump at the conclusion that there was not one, but two preparation days with the Jews at the time the all-prevailing passover was prepared.

And in truth, if he in person was to fulfill every jot and tittle of the law, how could he have so done in regard to this passover question, and not have been offered up just four days after the day on which he was sold to the Jews and also on a day that was to him and to the law, the day of the preparation?

But what has this matter of the passover and of the days of unleavened bread to do with the sign of the Prophet Jonas? Much every way. For, if the points proposed in regard to these things be correct, it is made necessarily apparent that he who was ordained to be the passover to the faithful of all nations, was an actual prisoner in Jerusalem three days and three nights, counting backwards, of course, from the afternoon of Friday to the fore part of Tuesday night. And as those evil and adulterous Jews were knowing to his having been a prisoner in that city for the said number of days and nights, therefore the sign of the Prophet Jonas was given to them whether they received it in that light or not.

BEING SUBJECT TO CHRIST.

BEING one of those who are not ashamed of the gospel, I wish to bear testimony of the goodness of God towards me since I have been a believer in it. After I was baptized and received the laying on of hands, I received the gift of the Holy Spirit which is promised; and I remember its teaching to this day. It taught me to walk in all holiness before the Lord; to subdue all the lusts of the flesh which dwelt in me. This was a hard thing to do for "the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." (Matt. 26: 41.)

The subject of reproducing the human species has been discussed more or less through the press and from the pulpit. Of course they fall back on the first chapter of Genesis, twenty-eighth verse, which reads:—

God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth.

God also told Noah the same thing. (Gen. 9:1.) Now the question arises, Does a command given to Adam and Noah necessarily apply to us in our day, when the earth is full almost to overflowing? Now, we read in Genesis:—

And the Lord spake unto Adam saying, Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up sin conceiveth in their hearts.—Gen. 6: 57. (I. T.)

Now, brethren, as children are conceived and born in sin, which includes all born into the world, are we in this age fulfilling the will of God in this matter? Was not the law of Moses given to Israel to act as a schoolmaster to bring them unto Christ? The Apostle Paul said it was. (Galatians 3: 24.) Surely, then, that which was given to Adam and to Noah and all others preceding Moses was of the same kind. It was given as the first lessons in a complete education. They were all given for specific purposes adapted to that age. We must rightly divide the word. Paul in writing to the Ephesian believers says:—

This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart. . . . But ye have not so learned Christ; if so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus: that ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts.—Eph. 4: 17-24.

Now this applies to the believers to-day as much as it did then. Let me refer you to another passage:—

But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her in his heart already. Behold I give unto you a commandment, that ye suffer none of these things to enter into your heart, for it is better ye should deny yourselves of these things, wherein ye will take up your cross, than that ye should be cast into hell.—Matt. 5: 30, 31. (I. T.)

Again:—

Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. For when we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. But now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.—Romans 7: 4-6.

Christ says:—

Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God.—Matt. 5: 8.

Paul says:—

Unto the pure all things are pure.—Titus 1: 15.

Now, brethren, we must purify ourselves and this we can only do by copying the examples laid before us in the Scriptures, to wit: David was a man after God's own heart, whose delight was in the law of God; and also Paul, who said:—

For I delight in the law of God after the inward man.—Romans 7: 22.

Now the last quotation expresses my condition exactly; my delight and desire is to do the will of God whatever that may be. I will make one more quotation in this connection:—

But behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that mine eyes are upon you; I am in your midst and ye cannot see me, but the day soon cometh that ye shall see me and know that I am; for the veil of darkness shall soon be rent, and he that is not purified shall not abide the day: wherefore, gird up your loins and be prepared. Behold the kingdom is yours and the enemy shall not overcome.—D. C. 38: 2.

And now this calling and commandment give I unto you concerning all men, that as many as shall come before my servant Sidney Rigdon, and Joseph Smith, Jr., embracing this calling and commandment, shall be ordained and sent forth to preach the everlasting gospel among the nations, crying repentance, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation, and come forth out of the fire, hating even the garments spotted with the flesh. And this commandment shall be given unto the elders of my church, that every man which will embrace it with singleness of heart, may be ordained and sent forth, even as I have spoken.—D. C. 35: 2, 3.

Now from the foregoing quotations we conclude that no person is qualified for this position or office except he has complied with these conditions; that is to say, he must first purify himself, then he will be in a position to do as the apostle said:—

And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh.—Jude 23.

I, for one, can state positively, with the Apostle Paul:—

But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection.—1 Cor. 9: 27.

The Apostle exhorted Timothy:—

Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner: but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God.—2 Tim. 1: 8.

My desire has been and is that I may be a messenger unto others. I would study to show myself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. (2 Tim. 2: 15.)

The natural man is an enemy to God.—Book of Mosiah 1: 15.

COST OF THE EVANELIA.

That the Saints may have a definite understanding of the cost of building a vessel that fairly passes the test of being "seaworthy," and also attest the expenditures of the Bishop in the building of the Evanelia, the following itemized report is hereby submitted as taken from the vouchers.

While those only who are well conversant with shipbuilding will be able to judge of any part of the work as being at a low figure or otherwise, yet all may properly and critically examine the account.

Experience in furnishing and outfitting shows that this is a good-sized item that was not reckoned on in counting the cost of boatbuilding; this is also presented, as per bills furnished by Captain J. F. Burton and C. A. Parkin, Bishop's agent, San Francisco:—

The contributions for the furnishing of the boat placed in the hands of the agent, C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, and some others have not been reported to me, but when so reported will be duly published through the Herald.

It will be observed from the account of the expenditures herein given, that the receipts for the boat service so far are far from meeting the expenditures.

The brethren of the islands where the boat is to be used, have agreed to meet all expenses in navigating the vessel there; and upon the return of Bro. Burton we shall know definitely how well they be will able to manage this, and shall then report upon the matter.

Respectfully submitted,
E. L. KELLEY.

NORTHERN AND CENTRAL CALIFORNIA REUNION.

Convened at San Jose, California, September 28 to October 7. For several days prior to convening, the committee in charge had been very busy, preparing the grounds, putting up tents, and making other necessary arrangements. On the evening prior to opening the reunion, a large number being gathered, a prayer meeting was held in the tent.

Friday, Sept. 28.—Morning prayer service at nine a. m.

At 10:30 J. M. Putney, chairman of reunion committee, presided. After some explanations he considered briefly the question, Why has this organization we represent been attempted, there being already so many churches and organizations in existence? He called for short speeches, and in response the following brethren spoke: Thos. Daley, C. Smith, A. Haws, and Geo. Daley.

At 2:30 p. m. the reunion was fully organized by electing the following officers: J. F. Burton president, J. M. Putney vice president, J. A. Lawn secretary, Sr. Clapp chorister, Fred Lawn and Geo. Daley ushers, E. Knight, T. Cook, D. Joice, and J. Driver police, A. Haws janitor. At the conclusion of business Bro. M. H. Forscutt was requested by vote to preach, which he did to the edification of all present.

At 7:30 p. m. J. H. Lawn spoke from 1 John 1:1: "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

Saturday, Sept. 29.—The morning prayer service was a meeting of blessed peace. Early this morning the rain began to fall, and continued almost incessantly until the following (Sunday) morning, when, at our prayer service, all joined with Bro. Burton in prayer to our heavenly Father to stay the rain for the remainder of our reunion. Before night the sky was clear and it continued fine weather throughout our meetings.

Eleven a. m., preaching by Fred Lawn. The speaker explained Christ's mission to earth. He showed that signs were to follow the believer and not to go before, and dwell at length upon the necessity of authority to administer in the house of God. At the close of this meeting President Burton appointed the following as finance committee: J. M. Putney, J. A. Lawn, Sr. Millgate, Sr. Knight, and Sr. Nightengale.

At 2:30 p. m. the sermon was by Bro. J. F. Burton. The superiority of man over the lower animals is in his power to reason and meditate. The greater the power of reasoning, the greater the man. The difference between men and angels is, no doubt that the minds of men are partially occupied with temporal affairs, while the whole duty of angels is to do the will of God and to meditate upon this law. We should not waste our time in "castle building," but rather deal with realities, and meditate on those things to which it is possible to attain. We should not be continually hunting for something bad, but rather search out the good and noble in life. If we search for the low and base it will naturally degrade us. What we look for we will surely find. A man's thoughts and life are manifested in his language. No man has ever yet lived who at his dying hour ever regretted having used kind words during his life. The speaker closed with a strong appeal to the Saints to think, showing it to be their duty to do so. We should compel ourselves to think; we should think rightly, nobly, and beautifully, think gently and kindly.

The evening preaching was by Thomas Daly, from Ephesians 2: 19, 20. If the foundation of any building is removed the building will fall. Those who work according to the pattern and serve God perfectly do not have to wait until the judgment day for evidence that their work is accepted. The building of Solomon's temple furnished a beautiful example of God's work and the setting up of his kingdom. The speaker dwelt at length upon baptism as a saving ordinance, and for the remission of sins.

Sunday, September 30.—The usual morning prayer service was held. The sermon which followed was by C. A. Parkin from Matthew 7: 7-27—a splendid sermon on the restoration.

At 2:30 p. m. preaching by M. H. Forscutt. If Christ was but a man his plan of salvation was but a man's, and is only superior to Luther or Wesley's or other men's as he was a better man mentally or morally than they. If there has been an apostasy nothing but God could restore it. If there has been no apostasy the Catholic Church is the church of Christ. God not only rules where mortals are, but also where the Devil is he has power.

At 7:30 p. m. preaching by J. C. Clapp.

Monday, October 1.—The usual prayer service at nine a. m. was a meeting of great spiritual strength. The sermon which followed was by A. Haws from 2 Corinthians 13: 5.

At 2:30 p. m., preaching by J. H. Lawn from Matthew 24: 37: But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. We should conform exactly to the pattern, not think some other way is just as good. As it was in Noah's time, even in the last days there will be but one door to the ark.

Preaching in the evening by J. F. Burton. As we cannot prepare a place for ourselves we must accept the Savior's statement, "I go to prepare a place for you." The question for us to consider is, How are we to bring ourselves from our condition here, to attain to the glory which he prepares for us? Man's salvation rests with himself. I cannot compel you, if I would; God will not if he can. We must never lose sight of the fact that Jesus is the one we shall believe and put our trust in. If Christ could not change the plan of salvation, how dare man change it? If you wish to be saved by some man's plan, then you must look to that man for salvation; but if you accept Christ's plan, then you have Christ to depend upon.

Tuesday, October 2.—Prayer service at nine a. m.

At 10:45 Wm. O. Clark discoursed, bearing a strong testimony to the work. He received his patriarchal blessing under the hands of the prophet's father sixty years ago. He closed with a strong appeal for the cause of temperance. At 2:30 p. m. the sermon was by J. C. Clapp, from Luke 7: 50. At half past seven M. H. Forscutt read Ephesians fifth chapter and preached an excellent sermon.

Wednesday, October 3.—Prayer service was held in the morning. The forenoon sermon was by A. Haws; text, Isaiah 1: 18. At half past two J. H. Lawn spoke from 1 Timothy 4: 16.

J. C. Clapp spoke in the evening from Jude 3. Men in objecting to preaching doctrines make that their doctrine or hobby. I seldom have found a man but he teaches some kind of a doctrine. The Monroe doctrine is said to be as good now as ever, for it is said to have been used very little by the American people. Some of the doctrines of Jesus Christ have had very little use in the last few hundred years. Some of the grandest truths the word has ever known have almost fallen because of unbelief in them. "When that which is perfect is come," etc. When certain means are employed to bring about certain results, those means must remain in force until those results are obtained.

Thursday, Oct. 4.—Prayer service at nine a. m. Tongues and interpretation were enjoyed. It was a meeting of great spiritual strength and faithful testimonies.

The sermon that followed was by J. M. Putney from Ephesians 1:9. The present time is a part of that wonderful period when God shall gather together all things in Christ Jesus. The men who framed the Constitution of the United States wrought beyond their knowledge and were certainly inspired or moved upon by the Spirit of God to bring about these things. God has so ordered that there shall be free religious as well as political liberty in the land of America.

At 2:30 p. m., preaching by M. H. Forscutt; subject, One baptism. We are living in a literary age; in fact, religion is becoming rather more literary than divine. Every Christian believes in baptism, so we will consider to-day what is baptism? Will the sponsors who assume for an infant at baptism, continue to be sponsors for it at the judgment? Baptism is not simply a burial with Christ, but also rising again like unto his resurrection. A tree is never planted, but is, when taken up, transplanted; it cannot be planted. The subject was most clearly explained, indisputable proofs being brought in a forcible manner.

In the evening J. F. Burton preached from Isaiah 52: 1-13. The time has come and now is when the creeds of the churches can no longer bind the people. The shackles are being broken by higher education and higher aspirations. Christ says, "I will build my church." He will do it himself—will not leave it to another. Great reformers from Luther to the present time have said the Christian church had departed from the original plan, and they have said it was best to return to the original plan in some way if possible.

The reformers tried to build the church of God, but none of them built according to the pattern.

Friday, Oct. 5.—Prayer service at nine a. m.

J. C. Clapp was the speaker at 10:45; subject, The kingdom of God; what it is and where it is; necessity of authority to officiate in the church of God.

The afternoon session was occupied in Sunday school work, and a joint Sunday school association was organized for the Northern and Central California districts.

At 7:30, preaching by M. H. Forscutt; subject, Presidency and priesthood; lesson, Hebrews 6: 7 to 7: 14. The discourse was a clear and lucid explanation of the subject treated.

Saturday, Oct. 6.—Prayer service at nine a. m. The meeting was one of sweet communion of Saints. Much of the Spirit was enjoyed. One tongue and interpretation, one spoke in prophecy, and another by the spirit of revelation.

At 10:45 preaching by T. Daley from 1 Thessalonians 1: 5.

At 2:30 business was taken up, J. F. Burton presiding. The finance committee presented the following report: Received in donations $52.60; expenditures $58.20; due committee $5.60. A collection was taken up and $11.60 was realized. The surplus of $6.00 was by vote turned over to the Central California district tent. It was decided to have a reunion in 1895, at Santa Cruz. The fixing of time for next reunion was left to the following general committee of arrangements: W. Scott, N. Moses, O. G. Lytle, and J. M. Putney. A vote of thanks was given to the committee of 1894 for their faithful labors. The business of reunion closed at 3:45 and the meeting changed to one of prayer and testimony.

The evening sermon was by C. A. Parkin from the text, "What must we do?" It is a very popular doctrine to-day that we have nothing to do. The lost condition of mankind is like a man in a deep well with sides so smooth that he cannot climb out. If a friend of his should come to the well and drop him a rope from the top he would still stay in the well if he did not take hold of the rope and help himself; or if a long ladder were handed down to him, he could not get out if he would not take the steps to climb the ladder. Error may be venerable with age, and may be popular by the number of its votaries, but neither age nor popularity can make it truth!

Sunday, Oct. 7.—The usual prayer service was held in the morning. The sermon which followed was by J. C. Clapp from Zechariah 3: 1-4.

At 2:30 prayer and testimony meeting. This was a lively meeting and very spiritual. One tongue and interpretation was given, and forty-eight spoke in testimony.

The evening and closing sermon was by M. H. Forscutt from Matthew 24: 29, 30, and was clear and forcible on the signs of the times; after which Bro. M. H. Forscutt and Srs. Ida Cooper and B. Hoppe sang, "God be with you till we meet again."

The next morning at nine o'clock J. F. Burton baptized two, Luella Lawn and Mrs. Rosanna Morss, who is a sister of R. Etzenhouser.

The reunion was a source of great spiritual strength to all who attended. Acquaintances were renewed, and all were made stronger in the work and in love for each other. Several were sick during the meetings but all left the camp comparatively well. It was the expressed desire of nearly all to attend the reunion at Santa Cruz in 1895. Although but two were baptized, still, as a result of the reunion, many are interested and some are very near the kingdom. Prejudice was allayed to a great extent, and the work was materially stimulated in these parts.

BORN.

ECKHART.—At Brush Creek, Iowa, June 6, 1894, to Mr. George H. and Sr. Mary Eckhart a son, and named Archie Garvin. Blessed October 21, 1894, by J. S. Roth and W. H. Kephart.

MARRIED.

ARCHIBALD—BURLINGTON.—At the residence of Bro. and Sr. Daniel Burlington, parents of the bride, in St. Joseph, Missouri, at 8:30 p. m., October 30, 1894, Bro. Coventry Archibald and Sr. Charlotte Burlington, Elder J. M. Terry officiating. After the wedding ceremony a sumptuous supper was partaken of by about sixty souls. Many elegant presents were bestowed on the happy couple. The wedding was largely Scottish and partook of that nature in the ceremony. Time was passed in singing Scotland's airs, and instrumental music to the joy of all.

ELDRIDGE—BURRIS.—At the church in St. Joseph, Missouri, in the presence of a congregation of friends and wellwishers, Bro. Harry H. Eldredge and Sr. Maggie Burris, both of St. Joseph branch, were united in marriage by Elder J. M. Terry, August 1, 1894. A supper and reception was given by the parents of the bridegroom at their residence in Wyatt Park, at which a large number of invited guests participated in the joys of the occasion.

DIED.

ETZENHOUSER.—At Independence, Missouri, October 23, 1894, Sr. Lucy A., wife of Bro. Henry Etzenhouser. She was born in Keen, Jessamine county, Kentucky, March 24, 1845, married her now bereaved husband July 14, 1884; was baptized by Elder F. G. Pitt at Independence, Missouri, August 23, 1885. Her illness, which lasted nearly a year, was very severe and painful, but her end was peace. She was buried on the day following her death in the Wood's chapel graveyard, about ten miles from Independence. The funeral sermon was preached on the following Sunday at the Saints' church. Elder J. A. Robinson conducted the services and Elder Joseph Luff delivered the sermon. A good woman has gone to rest. We shall miss her cheerful face and genial association in the assemblies of the Saints; but we rejoice in her escape from suffering, and in her entrance into rest and peace.

GILL.—Albert H., son of Bro. Andy and Sr. Lucy Gill of Wheeling, West Virginia, died October 12, 1894, aged 14 months and 14 days. Funeral services were conducted at the Saints' church at 1:30 p. m., by Bro. Geo. H. Hulmes of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, assisted by Bro. F. J. Ebeling.

Farewell, Albert, we will never
Press you to our heart again.
Yes, we know you are in heaven,
There in peace and love to reign.
Though our hearts are sad and lonely,
And your vacant chair we see,
Yes, we hope some day to meet you,
And your happy face to see.

CHAMPLIN.—William J. Champlin died at the residence of his son, J. A. Champlin, near Hanford, Kings county, California, Sunday, September 16, 1894. He was born in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, November 22, 1823 or 1824. He was baptized by Joseph the martyr. He had not identified himself with the Reorganization but had lived and died in the faith of the latter-day work. He was with his father's family in Missouri at the time of the Haun's mill massacre and saw the victims of that horrible tragedy. He left nine living children, three of whom are members of the church. Funeral discourse by Elder Joseph Flory from the words, "For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come."—Heb. 13:14.

KING.—Jacob Tolbert King, the president and priest of Washington branch, died at Tom's Hill, Indiana, October 27. "Toll King," as he was familiarly called, was born November 12, 1871. He was baptized by Elder L. F. Daniel, August 30, 1891. He was an ardent worker in the Sunday school cause, and president of the contemplated association of Southern Indiana district. He was a general favorite of the young, and universally loved. He has no peers or equals in all this section of the country, hence his untimely death is a sad blow to the work of God here. He was hopeful, humble, and as cheerful a toiler for truth and righteousness as ever bore the message of God. Elder Daniel and others of the household of faith hovered around the dying Saint, and beheld the fell destroyer, death, bear away a trophy on the ruthless, cold, dark tide. He also took charge of the obsequies, Elder M. T. Short pronouncing the funeral address. Sunday morning the 28th, at eleven o'clock the schoolhouse was full to overflowing, and a great concourse followed him to the Maysville cemetery and laid him away. A step-father, half sister, a mother, brother, and sister, other kindred, all Saints, and hosts of friends mourn their great loss, which, however, is surely his eternal gain.

PERKINS.—William Milton, eldest son of William and Linda Perkins, was born May 18, 1871, at Cedar Falls, Iowa, and was killed by an electric shock on September 23, 1894, at Council Bluffs, Iowa. He was buried from the home of his parents at Loveland, Iowa. He was a worthy young man. He was doing something around the dynamo and came in too close contact, the entire current passing through his body. He died with scarcely a struggle. His funeral was the largest ever held in Loveland, Elder T. W. Williams preaching the sermon, using as texts, Psalms 89: 45-48 and Isaiah 3: 10.

EGHOLM.—Torval, infant babe of Chris and Mary Egholm, was born November 22, 1893; died August 9, 1894. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams.

FARMER.—At Lamoni, Iowa, October 27, 1894, of paralysis, Sr. Alice A., wife of Bro. John T. Farmer, aged 72 years and 13 days. For nine months she had been helpless and speechless from the second stroke of the disease, the first having been six years before her death; the third one came two days before the end. She was born in Sydney, Australia, and in 1874, during the mission work of Brn. Glauod Rodger and C. W. Wandell, she believed, and was baptized a few days after her husband's baptism. They came to Lamoni in 1886, and here made their home. She was the mother of four boys, all but one dying in infancy; the other is yet in Australia. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Brn. A. S. Cochran and J. R. Lambert.

WATTS.—Bessie, infant daughter of Charles W. and E. M. Watts, born May 14, 1894, died July 30, 1894. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The Peer Premier of the democratic party of this kingdom to-night began the great battle to abolish the hereditary legislative privileges of his own order. It is fully within reason to say no event in the history of Great Britain has been more momentous to its people. If the reform is accomplished, it must work as great a relative change in the methods of English constitutional government as did the Bill of Rights or Magna Charta itself. As to its practical aspects and prospects of success, Lord Roseberry to-night put himself in line with the advanced radicalism of his party, which is in line with the world's progress, and if reports of his historical manner and methods to-night may be believed, showed himself to be a great orator and to have given a final proof of his equally great capabilities as a party leader. He seems to have met the opportunity and to have seized it for one of history's great episodes.

The victory of the Social Purity League before the County Council yesterday in the case of the Empire Music Hall is regarded as a prelude to a general attack upon all London music halls as well as upon other resorts. The proprietors and managers of these alleged breeders and fosterers of immorality are arrayed against the social puritans and a pretty fight is in prospect. The set headed by Mrs. Ormiston Chant profess to be firmly convinced that legislation is the most potent factor in the success of their crusade. They believe legislation can abolish the evil or at least hunt it out of visible existence. They have encouragement from many members of the House of Commons, who favor legislation to correct the evil.

Five hundred and fifty architects are already at work on plans with the intention of producing the crowning architectural glory of the century in the World's Exposition of 1900.

PERRY, Ok., Oct. 26.—A cyclone struck Tonkawa, a small town north of here, night before last. Several dwellings and stores were torn to pieces, but no lives were lost, and only a few slightly injured are reported.

TRIMBLE, Tenn., Oct. 28.—Forest fires are spreading ruin in this section. The long drought has made the timber and grass as dry as tinder and the flames spread with lightninglike rapidity. The valuable range in the Obion River bottoms has been swept bare, causing a loss of thousands of dollars.

CORINTH, Miss., Oct. 28.—Forest fires are raging in the vicinity of Corinth and dense smoke overhangs the town. Several cotton fields have been destroyed in the outlying districts, valuable timber ruined, and the country laid waste. Hundreds of farmers are fighting the flames.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 28.—A large Hungarian boardinghouse at Laurel Run, this county, was blown to atoms by dynamiters this morning and three of the inmates killed outright, four fatally injured, and a half dozen seriously hurt. The object was robbery.

Seventy peasants have been on trial at Kroski in Russia for resisting the Cossacks sent to close a Catholic church. Severe penalties were imposed in most cases, but because of the brutality of the Cossacks the Czar has been petitioned to commute the sentences.
