The Decatur district conference will convene at Lucas, Lucas County, Iowa, October 24 and 25, 1896, at ten a. m. A good representation from all the branches is desired. Branch presidents will see that their reports are forwarded to the secretary, Bro. B. M. Anderson, at Lamoni, Iowa, no later than the 17 of October, if practicable. All the ministry will please have written reports stating what they have done and what they are willing to try to do this coming winter. There is plenty of labor in the district for those that are willing to work. Come everybody that can, to Lucas, and bring the spirit of your first love for the gospel with you and we will have a good time. If there is any good to be done either for this life or the one to come without effort and sacrifice, we have not found it out yet. We expect that a vice president will be elected. Presidents A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert are expected to be present.

WM. ANDERSON, Pres.
B. M. ANDERSON, Sec.

The district conference of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district will be held one month sooner than the time appointed by the conference, for the reason that we have no district president and there is a great demand for such an officer and the Cleveland saints can better provide for the visiting saints the forepart of October than a month later. Hence the conference will convene on October 3, 1896.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

The conference of the Southern Nebraska district will meet with the saints of the Palmyra branch October 18 and 19, 1896. Remember we are now working under the delegate system, and all branches in the district are requested to send delegates and instruct the same as to their wishes. We wish a full report from each branch in the district, also from each one of the ministry who have labored in the district.

The district Sunday school convention will convene at same place on October 17, 1896.

Send all reports to
J. L. DIEFENDORF, Dist. Sec.,
Care of W. M. Self,
Bennett, Neb.

LINCOLN, Nebraska, Sept. 20.

The Northern Michigan district conference will convene at Freesoil, October 24. Our district Sunday school convention meets (so I understand) on Friday, the 23d. We expect a large gathering and an enjoyable time as usual. Brethren, send in full reports. May the Spirit of our God meet with us.

J. J. CORNISH.

REED CITY, Michigan, Sept. 17.

The Northeastern Missouri district conference will convene with the Salt River saints in our district tent about seven miles southeast of Macon, Missouri, at ten a. m., October 17, continuing over Sunday. Teams will leave the Hannibal and St. Joseph depot for tent ground promptly at 8:30 a. m. and 3:30 p. m., Saturday, the 17th. The teamsters will be designated by blue ribbon on coat lapel. Branches and ministry will please forward reports to Sr. Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri. We expect Apostle J. R. Lambert and M. M. Turpen and T. W. Chatburn of Seventy to be with us.

J. A. TANNER, Pres.

The Nodaway district conference will be held in Guilford, October 16-18, 1896, Sunday school convention the 16th. Let all interested in the Sunday school come and take part. We hope that all will be interested as this is the first convention of the kind held in the district. Don't forget the date.

J. N. BYERGO, Sec.

GROVE MEETING.

The Central Nebraska district will hold a three-days' meeting in the grove of Bro. J. H. Smith two and one half miles northeast of Clearwater, beginning October 2, at eleven a. m. It will be a camp meeting if weather permits. One session at least will be devoted to Sunday school work. Those who come not prepared to camp on the ground will be provided for. Wood and hay will be furnished free. All come who can. Elder J. F. Mintun will be present, and, if possible, Bro. A. H. Smith and the Bishop will attend.

W. M. RUMEL, Pres.

DEDICATION NOTICE.

We will dedicate our church building at Porcupine, Pepin County, Wisconsin, October 18, 1896, at eleven a. m. Those desiring to attend will please remember the date. We expect a number of the ministry present and expect to continue meetings the following week. All are invited.

A. V. CLOSSON, Branch Pres.

NOTICES.

The committee on reunion of the Northern Minnesota district consists of the following named brethren: I. N. Roberts, Thomas J. Martin, W. W. Gould, Will Oaks, W. W. McLeod, and are requested to meet at the quarterly conference of the above-named district on the 10th and 11th of October in the town of Girard, at the residence of Bro. Ed Anderson.

I. N. ROBERTS, Pres. Dist.
And one of Committee.

THE STATE CELEBRATION.

RAILROADS MAKE ONE-FARE RATE TO BURLINGTON—SOME FEATURES.

Recognizing the State-wide interest in, and importance of, the Semi-Centennial Celebration to be held in Burlington, October 1-8, the Western Passenger Association has ordered a special rate of one fare for the round trip. This should be inducement enough to send crowds of people from this locality.

The opening day will be Governor's Day, when Governor Drake and Staff, attended by a battalion of the National Guard, will be features of a parade which will include also a representation by floats of the material progress of the State since the day its virgin forests and waving prairies were won from the savage. All the living ex-Governors of Iowa will be present, as also the chief Executives of surrounding States. At night there will be a wonderfully beautiful River Carnival.

BORN.

KECK.—The home of Elder Adam J. and Sr. Agnes E. Keck was blessed on the 26th of June, 1896, by the advent of their firstborn, a son. Elders W. Vickery and A. J. Keck officiated in confirming upon him the name of Merrill Bryant, and invoking the blessing of Him who said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

LUDWIG.—To Bro. and Sr. William Ludwig, at Fairbank, Iowa, May 14, 1888, a son named Clifford George. July 22, 1889, a son named Clyde Edwin. October 7, 1890, a son named Leroy Sylvan. November 7, 1891, a daughter named Edna Pearl. All blessed September 12, 1896, by Elder J. S. Roth.

SHIPPY.—To Bro. and Sr. Charles Shippy, near Oelwein, Iowa, March 13, 1896, a son and named Chester Allen. Blessed September 13, 1896, by Elder J. S. Roth.

PERRY.—To Bro. Zenos and Sr. Florretta Perry, of Ardmore, Missouri, February 23, 1896, a daughter, and named Ann Elizabeth. Blessed August 30, 1896, at Bevier, by Elders J. A. Tanner and Charles Perry.

LAWRENSON.—To John and Jennie Lawrenson, September 3, 1893, a daughter. She was named Jennie and was blessed at the saints' church, September 6, 1896, by J. M. Terry and R. A. Marchant. This darling child was left motherless in infancy and was tenderly cared for by her grandparents, Bro. and Sr. William Lawrenson.

MORRIS.—To Bro. and Sr. Louis Morris, of Agen, Missouri, a daughter, and named Jennetta. Blessed at Montrose, Iowa, August 30, by J. S. Roth and others.

MARRIED.

SUTTILL—TALBOT.—At the home of the bride's parents, at Lucas, Iowa, September 16, 1896, Bro. Priestly Suttill, of Johnston, Rhode Island, and Sr. Elizabeth J. Talbot were united in the bands of wedlock, Elder Robt. M. Elvin officiating. This couple will go direct to their home in Rhode Island. May peace and blessing abide with them in the journey of life.

DIED.

GOLDSTONE.—William Thomas, husband of Sr. Mary Jane Goldstone, of Sydney, Australia, died July 13, 1896, aged 57. Deceased was born in Essex, England, from whence he emigrated to Australia in 1864. The year following he married his present wife, who with seven sons and daughters remember with sadness the interference with life's probation. The burial and funeral service was conducted by Elder G. R. Wells from the residence, No. 3 Wentworth Street, Balmain.

HOOPER.—At Hiteman, Iowa, August 2, 1896, of summer complaint, Elvin, the infant child of Bro. John M. and Sr. Sarah Hooper. This little bud of promise passed away at the age of ten months and 17 days. Funeral sermon by Priest Morgan D. Lewis.

FOSTER.—At Lucas, Iowa, August 22, 1896, Sr. Mary A. Foster. She was born near Untontown, West Virginia. Her earthly pilgrimage was 80 years, 6 months, and 6 days. Baptized September 28, 1876, at Chariton, Iowa, by Elder John Watkins. Funeral August 23, 1896, at saints' chapel in charge of Elder John Watkins, sermon by Elder Robt. M. Elvin, from John 11: 25, to a full house of attentive listeners. A faithful mother in Israel awaits the first resurrection.

WILLIAMS.—At the home of his son, near Cushing, Oklahoma, June 29, 1896, Elder Charles Williams, aged 85 years, 8 months, 25 days. He was ordained an elder in the Reorganized Church October 10, 1861, at Fox, Illinois, by Brn. W. W. Blair and J. Blakeslee. He remained firm in the faith and bore a strong testimony until the last. Thus one by one the saints are called to their reward.

GOODRICH.—Mary Clarinda Goodrich was born in Champaign County, Illinois, August 30, 1883; died August 9, 1896. Clara was the only daughter of Bro. V. M. Goodrich, of Byer, Ohio. She requested her father to pray that the angels would come and take her, and said she wanted to go. She was anxious to be baptized. Funeral at the residence in charge of T. J. Beatty.

HAMMOND.—Near Wirt, Indiana, August 27, 1896, Elsie, youngest daughter of James and Carrie Hammond, aged 2 months and 5 days. Father, mother, five sisters, and three brothers mourn. Funeral at the saints' church, near Wirt; sermon by Elder William C. Marshall, to a fair-sized congregation of relatives and friends.

JAMES.—At Flagler, Iowa, June 7, 1896, Bro. John S. James. He was born in Tredegar, South Wales, August 2, 1819; was baptized in the early days of the church, also ordained an elder. Joined the Reorganization early in the sixties, and many times bore his testimony to the truthfulness of the latter-day work. He was married to Sr. Harriet Davis in Pennsylvania, February 18, 1850. Wife and two children mourn his departure. His counsel to them was to live righteous lives in all things.

HEARD.—At Burtville, Missouri, May 28, 1896, Sister Lydia Ann Heard, wife of W. E. Heard and daughter of Bro. S. J. and Sr. Irene Madden; aged 20 years, 2 months, and 24 days. She died about five hours after the birth of a daughter; mother and child both buried in one coffin. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. Wm. Wier. She has been a member of the Reorganized Church for ten years.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

And still the wonder grows how the Chicago Times-Herald, a paper of large circulation and necessitating quick mechanical handling therefore, can be made so attractive in appearance. THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL; WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush.....25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding.....35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

INTELLIGENCE OF THE LOWER ANIMALS.

It is generally admitted nowadays that the higher animals possess intelligence; it is rare, for instance, to find a man who would maintain, as used to be maintained, that the dog or the horse is a mere automaton. But regarding the lower orders of the animal creation, insects for example, there is still much difference of opinion. In a letter to the Revue Scientifique (Paris, June 27) M. G. H. Monod relates some facts that lead him to believe that their mental equipment differs only in degree, not in kind, from that of their brethren higher in the scale of creation. Says M. Monod:—

"M. Delbœuf has recently published a very interesting study of the psychology of lizards, a study that has led him to the conclusion that there exist among these creatures veritable 'sentiments that we find among all the superior animals; love, friendship, hate, anger, devotion, courage, defiance, jealousy, craft, fear, malice, and even pity.'

"These very interesting notes recall some observations that I made in 1893, not on a lizard, although a lizard had something to do with them.

"One of our comrades had brought to the Marseilles Scientific School a lizard, an individual of the genus Lacerta, those great lizards that reach 30 or 40 cm. [12 or 15 inches] in length, colored with many brilliant hues and banded with blue, green, and gold, which are so abundant in the South of France.

"When the lizard was given to us, it had not eaten for several days. I thought that I would collect different insects for it to eat, especially some of the cockroaches so numerous in moist cellars and in kitchens.

"The lizard, as may be imagined, did not hesitate to accept this offering, and the terror of the cockroaches was great. They cast themselves, in their fright, in all directions in the glass case where the saurian was confined. And we could observe in the insects real sentiments—the sentiment of fear; that was not difficult to recognize; it is found also among all animals, and perhaps is often confused with the instinct of self-preservation; the sentiment of craft; also the sentiment of pity, as M. Delbœuf observed in the case of lizards, and as a consequence of this sentiment of pity, the sentiments of devotion and courage.

"This is how we were permitted to show the existence of these last sentiments:—

"We had placed in the reptile's glass prison a porcelain cup full of water; we did not wish our guest to suffer from thirst. Now in their confused movements it happened several times one of the cockroaches rested on the edge of the cup, and in his haste lost his balance. We saw him tumble into the water, almost always on his back.

"The poor insect then presented a lamentable spectacle; stretched out in the water on his back, terrified by the thought that the lizard was so near him, he waved his six legs in the air despairingly.

"This accident happened at least five or six times. And each time, without exception, some of the other cockroaches, interrupting their flight, went to the edge of the cup to aid their companion; forgetting their own danger they actually succeeded in saving him, aiding each other in reaching their unfortunate brother and always showing the same agitation.

"We tried the experiment several times and always observed the same facts.

"One day a fly fell into the water. Some cockroaches approached the cup, but at once went away, not caring to risk their lives for a stranger.

"Is it not truly remarkable to find such an unmistakable degree of thought in creatures so low in the animal scale?

"But have not facts just as conclusive been observed in other creatures of the same rank? The economy and the labor of the ant; the aid that ants of the same anthill give each other; the terrible combats that black ants wage with red ants; the incredible sagacity with which they make use of the sweet secretions of the plant lice; in a word, all that Forel has told us of these wonderful insects. The respect of bees for their queen, the only inactive one amid the laborious ardor of the hive. And, amid fishes, the willingness of the Lophius piscatorius (the angler-fish), who buries himself, leaving only a long thin piece of skin which he agitates above him, at the extremity of his first dorsal fin, to attract the little fishes on which he preys. And do not many other facts also demonstrate to us that animals, even inferior ones, can reflect?

"We often hear it said that animals have neither sentiments nor thoughts. Some go so far as to say that even the dog acts only by instinct. Nevertheless, it is generally held that the superior animals possess intelligence.

"But if we accord thought to certain animals, how can we refuse it to others under the pretext that their organization is not so high? Their sensibility will then perhaps be more blunt, but it will none the less exist. The opponents of our theory generally take refuge behind their eternal, their only argument—instinct; the instinct of preservation, of the necessities of the organism, of maternal love, of jealousy, etc. We shall not strive to prove the contrary. We could cite many other examples; but have we not said enough already?

"I believe that we can boldly conclude that animals think and feel. When we cannot see proof of this, it is our own power of observation that is at fault."—Translated for the Literary Digest.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THAT CHANGED DOCUMENT AGAIN.

In the Deseret Evening News (Brighamite) for August 8, 1896, appears the following production over the signature of F. D. Richards. We reproduce it, not for the merit it contains, but that our readers may know just what he did say and that they may see him just as he is. We regret that instead of publishing our last, thus enabling his readers to get at the true status of the controversy, he was content to publish short extracts out of the connection in which they were used, and thus mislead. However, if he is willing to resort to that sort of controversy we will do no more than to let our readers see just what he has done. Here is his article:—

CARPING CRITIC ANSWERED.

The Saints' Herald (Josephite) for June 3, 1896, contained an article entitled "An Important Document Changed," in which it was charged that a liberty had been taken "by some parties in changing and corrupting the words of Joseph Smith since his death," and the responsibility was inferentially placed upon the undersigned, and it was intimated that as editor of the Millennial Star, in 1855, he had "willfully and maliciously put into the mouth of our martyred dead words which were never used by them." A complete answer to these charges was published in the Deseret Evening News of June 27, 1896, and the anniversary of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. That reply showed:—

That the full text of a letter from the Prophet Joseph Smith and others, as published in his history in the Millennial Star in January, 1855, was copied verbatim from the Deseret News of January 26, 1854.

That the letter as it appeared in the Deseret News was taken verbatim from the manuscript history of Joseph Smith, written in Nauvoo, the volume containing it dating from November 2, 1838, and closing with July 30, 1842, that volume with other records having been brought to Utah and carefully preserved.

That the original letter written in Liberty jail, March 20, 1839, had also been preserved, and was on file in the Historian's Office, bearing the personal signatures of Joseph Smith, Jr., Hyrum Smith, Lyman Wight, Caleb Baldwin, and Alexander McRae.

That critical comparison of the original letter with the copy in the Deseret News and Millennial Star showed them to be essentially the same, the only differences being in the spelling of a few words.

It was admitted that the letter as it appeared in the Times and Seasons of May, 1840, was abbreviated and edited, but it was not admitted that the editors of the Times and Seasons had a desire to "willfully and maliciously" corrupt the words of Joseph Smith; that probably the changes were made for prudence' sake, and the abbreviations to save space in a small periodical. That, however, was a mere matter of conjecture.

But it appears that these proofs do not satisfy the editor of the Saints' Herald. In the issue of July 15, 1896, a lengthy response appears, in which it is argued that a sentiment in the original letter, as published in the Star, contains just eighteen words, while as it appeared in the Times and Seasons it has just nineteen words, and the objector indulges in an attempt at sarcasm over the great condensation exhibited in the change.

All that is necessary to say in reply to this small quibble, is that the abbreviation claimed was not in reference to a solitary sentiment, but in reference to the whole letter, which the editor of the Herald admits contains in the Star "about six hundred and sixty words more" than in the Times and Seasons.

He complains further that an important doctrinal point was also changed. He says:—

"In the Star, and if Mr. Richards is right, in the original letter, these words are used: 'In the midst of the council of the Eternal God of all other Gods, before this world was,' etc. In the Times and Seasons it is given thus: 'In the midst of the council of heaven in the presence of the Eternal God before the world was.'"

[1.] Supposing that to be correct, the responsibility for the change does not rest upon the editor of the Star or the editor of the Deseret News, who published the letter as it appeared in the original. Possibly it was one of the changes made for prudence' sake, at which the Herald editor jeers so flippantly, the doctrine of the plurality of Gods not being then so fully and publicly proclaimed as it was subsequently by the Prophet Joseph Smith.

At the April conference of 1844, the minutes of which appear in volume 5 of the Times and Seasons, and at a meeting in the Grove, Nauvoo, June 16, 1844, Joseph Smith explained this doctrine, quoting from the Hebrew, and showing that the beginning of the Bible reads, "The head one of the Gods brought forth the Gods." In the translation of the Book of Abraham, published in the Times and Seasons of March 15, 1842, the plurality of Gods is set forth in unmistakable language.

This was published, not only in the lifetime of the Prophet Joseph, but under his direct and personal editorship, as appears by the following in that paper, page 710:—

"TIMES AND SEASONS.

"Tuesday, March 15, 1842.

"To subscribers.

"This paper commences my editorial career. I alone stand responsible for it, and shall do for all papers having my signature henceforward. I am not responsible for the publication or arrangement of the former paper; the latter did not come under my supervision.

"JOSEPH SMITH."

The editor of the Herald says the charge of "cowardice" is implied in the supposition that some things contained in the original letter from Joseph Smith, et al., were withheld for the time being for prudential reasons, declares "the very mention of it is contemptible," and further says, "We are not converts to the theory that prudential or other reasons justify the suppression of truth."

[2.] Is it not about time that the writer of those sentiments became converted, not only to the doctrine of the wisdom of withholding advanced truths till the time is ripe for their publication, but also to many other doctrines promulgated by Joseph the Seer?

Were not the firstelders of the church commanded "to hold their peace" concerning many things that were revealed until the time should come when they could be safely proclaimed? For instance:—

"And I command you that you preach naught but repentance, and show not these things unto the world until it is wisdom in me, for they cannot bear meat now, but milk they must receive; wherefore they must not know these things lest they perish."—Doc. and Cov. Sec. 19, v. 21, 22.

Again:—

"Thou shalt ask and my scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety; and it is expedient that thou shouldst hold thy peace concerning them and not teach them until ye have received them in full."—Doc. and Cov. Sec. 42, v. 56, 57.

And again:—

"And let all my people who dwell in the regions round about be very faithful and prayerful and humble before me, and reveal not the things which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed."—Doc. and Cov. Sec. 125, v. 23.

Does not everybody suppress the truth when prudence dictates? Do parents tell their children all the truth when asked questions not proper to answer in full?

[3.] The editor of the Saints' Herald offers another objection. He wants to know why Joseph Smith and his companions "would write from jail where all documents written by them were subject to official inspection, things not prudent to make public?"

If he were more familiar with the history of the church and of the time when the prophet was in prison, he would perhaps understand that the communications sent to the church and to friends at that period were not submitted to official inspection, but intrusted to safe hands for private conveyance.

There are some other puerilities in his article which require no attention, but he returns to his former spirit of accusation, and says:—

"In so far as the editor of the Millennial Star copied from the Deseret News in good faith, supposing the News to be correct, he is excusable, and can only be charged with carelessness."

That is to say, when the editor of a periodical copies an article, verbatim, in good faith, from another publication, supposing it is correct, he is to be charged with carelessness.

But changing his tone while maintaining the same spirit, he exclaims:—

"After the death of an author to go back of his published work and hunt up a manuscript that has subsequently been revised and corrected, is questionable journalistic courtesy, whether the Millennial Star or the Deseret News is responsible."

On this theory it is a violation of journalistic courtesy, when publishing a letter written by a prominent church leader and signed by himself and four others, to take the original document as copy instead of an abbreviated and modified version. The conception of "journalistic courtesy" with which the editor of the Saints' Herald appears to be pregnant, is so great that he rushes into print with an accusation against the editor of the Millennial Star, of changing and corrupting the words of Joseph Smith since his death; of willfully and maliciously putting into the mouths of the martyred dead words never used by them; of using duplicity and deceit. When proofs are given that the editor of the Star simply copied from another periodical in good faith that which appeared absolutely correct, the accuser, instead of acknowledging that these charges were unfounded, continues his attack, and virtually repeats his charges, and then talks about "journalistic courtesy."

[4.] Respecting the original letter in dispute, the request is made that a committee, appointed by the editor of the Herald, shall examine the document and the signatures it bears. Without replying to his attorney-like queries, I will say, that I am willing to submit the document to the inspection of any gentleman possessed of ordinary courtesy, who may be appointed by the president of the "Reorganized" church for the purpose, if the object is to obtain information; the letter to be examined in the presence of others, and a faithful and correct report of the investigation to be made. This, however, is not to be considered as a precedent for the exhibition of historic documents and relics and records in the possession of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

FRANKLIN D. RICHARDS,
Historian and General Church Recorder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

There are a few points in the above that may require notice.

1. Two references are made to prove that Joseph Smith indorsed the plurality of Gods theory. Joseph Smith translated the Book of Abraham and published some extracts from it; but does not Mr. Richards know that a translator is only responsible for the correctness of his translation, and not for the truth of the doctrine it contains? The other article referred to was not published until after the death of Joseph Smith, and only purported to be a synopsis of the discourse. No evidence is given that a verbatim report was made at the time, so the extract published must have been made from memory, or at best from notes.

But the question is not, Did Joseph Smith believe or teach the doctrine of plurality of Gods, but, Did that letter written in Liberty jail say the one thing or did it say the other? If it did contain the words, "In the midst of the council of heaven in the presence of the Eternal God," etc., then it did not contain the words, "In the midst of the council of the Eternal God of all other Gods," etc., and no amount of dodging will destroy the fact that the document has been changed by some one.

2. The instruction to the elders to "hold their peace" concerning certain things is not a parallel case. To keep a matter to one's self is one thing, to put another matter in its place, representing it to be the original, is entirely a different thing. While a parent might be justified in withholding some truths from a child, he would not be blameless in substituting an error for that truth and thus misleading the child. It may have looked a little harsh to intimate that any man would willfully change a document, but when a man responds by saying, "possibly it was one of the changes made for prudence' sake," etc., and justifies the procedure, does it not prove that our suspicions were not without foundation?

3. The editors of the HERALD are not ignorant of the fact that some documents written in jail were not inspected, but still insist that they were subject to inspection. Whether this particular document was inspected or not we do not know, but the prophet had no assurance when writing it that an inspection would not be demanded.

4. However, as we have asked permission to examine the history containing this document, and also the purported original letter, and Mr. Richards is willing to grant the request, we will accept the conditions and endeavor to make the requisite arrangements, when convenient.

We apologize to our readers for taking so much valuable space in publishing Mr. Richards' evasive article, and promise them that unless he is willing that both sides of the controversy should go before his readers we will trouble ours no further.

CHARACTERISTIC ACCUSATION.

WE learn that one, formerly a local elder, charged with a serious crime against the moral code, and because of which he fled from the indignation of public sentiment, leaving his home for a time, but having returned, has announced himself a Hedrickite and has asked the brethren where he resides for use of their chapel that he may publicly present reasons why he now thinks Joseph Smith to have been the author of the polygamy revelation.

Brigham Young, when the practices of himself and coworkers could no longer be concealed, openly charged Joseph Smith with being the instrument through whom said revelation authorizing polygamy was given. Why is it that almost all persons who deny the faith by unhalloved practices become enraged at Joseph Smith and want to make of him a scapegoat, or to appear guilty as they are? It is that class of transgressors more than any others who have heaped obloquy upon the name of the Seer. Their own guilt has seemingly caused them to pour forth the spirit of their wrongdoing in maledictions upon and base charges against Joseph Smith. And, their slanders and charges have been refuted, time and again.

It is not difficult to determine that no credence should of right be given to the statements of such parties; nor is it difficult to detect the animus that inspires them. Those most guilty of violations of the moral code and of breaches of trust against the faith and the church have been the leading spirits in misrepresenting the character of the Martyr.

This man of whom we write, however, is not an advocate of the principle of polygamy, but confesses disbelief in it. However, the spirit of malevolence against the Seer appears in his course of conduct just the same. Whether having made a public profession of Hedrickism or not we cannot say, but it is apparent which organization has been the gainer by his action. We do not know what course the Hedrickite faction pursues in accepting members, whether or not it is "careful with all inquiry" to learn the moral status of professed converts; nor do we know that some who have claimed membership there after falling into moral disrepute for which proceedings were instituted against them elsewhere, have actually been received by the Hedrickite organization. It does seem, however, that a cardinal principle of both the Utah Church and the Hedrickites is to misrepresent and do injustice to the loyal first president of the church, Joseph Smith, the Martyr. Both organizations are one in spirit in this respect. Though the Hedrickites disbelieve in polygamy, they yet unite with the Brighamites in charging the prophet with its authorship. They call him "a fallen prophet;" the Brighamites believe in polygamy as a principle, hence so charge the Martyr with being a fallen prophet, a transgressor.

It is not difficult to see the true and manifest consistency of the position occupied by the Reorganized Church, the membership of which stands for the vindication of the faith restored through the instrumentality of the Seer. Herein is the patience of the saints, notwithstanding the contradictions of sinners whose course is at variance with the statute books—the ark of the covenant—to modern Israel, and by which those who are not apostles and prophets are being tried and made known. These points are not new to many, but it is well to note them in passing, that their direct application to present existing acts and conditions may be seen and noted.

FOR LIBERTY IN CHINA.

MONARCHICAL dynasties continue to tremble before the increasing sentiment demanding popular rights. New York Chinamen hint at the organization of a far-reaching conspiracy which has for its ultimate object the overthrow of the Chinese dynasty and empire and the establishment of a republic. It proposes for the present to content itself with an agitation looking to the betterment of the Chinese people. Its president is a Chinese graduate of Stanford University and his principal colleagues and advisers are Chinese graduates from Yale, Harvard, and other American universities and colleges. They propose an incursion of schoolbooks and the Bible into China, and have secret emissaries well supplied with literature and arguments among the Chinese to arouse them to the necessity of a new order of things.

The report, taken in connection with internal discontent in China, and dissatisfaction caused by the inability of the government as shown by results of the late war, seems plausible. It serves also to show the missionary influence of American institutions, the effects of our political example, and the attainments and privileges of Americans under a government of the people.

The leaven of civil liberty and intellectual freedom is at work universally. China evidently is not yet prepared for a republican form of government, but she is prepared for an advance step that the way may be prepared for still further advancement. It is well that her people are being taught to look upward and forward, a course essential to any and all progress.

The work of American missionaries has been thought to be practically useless by some. Doubtless they have done much good work in educating the people, preparing them for better conditions of life here, and laying the foundations of liberty and intellectual progress, if they have converted but few to the spiritual principles of Christianity. The signs of the times are indeed interesting and the outlook promising for the race.

EVANELIA LOST.

FROM a letter written from Oakland, California, September 23, 1896, by Elder J. F. Burton, to Heman H. Smith, son of Elder Heman C. Smith, we make the following extract. This confirms the report found elsewhere. The news will be received with deep regret by many who have considered the Evanelia's future with anxious interest. We feel resigned to the loss, assured that God reigns, and that no seeming loss is a permanent one.

OAKLAND, Sept. 23.

Dear Brother Hale:—To-day I got a letter from Papeete, Tahiti, from a sister there, telling us of the loss of the "Evanelia."

The letter says: "The Evanelia is a complete wreck and is sunk out of sight in the sea between Rairoa and Tiki hau at the pass—it is completely gone, not so much as one twig of pine of the Evanelia remains. No persons were drowned. They were taken aboard of the boat named 'Temere.' Both the boat and the Evanelia left the same day and if it had not been for the boat, the people would have been drowned—on the 18th of July. The matter is being considered by the great judges in Tahiti, but I do not know what is the result. You tell the conference of the saints in America. The church have great and measureless regret for the fate of the Evanelia."

So write the saints from Tahiti, and so we also feel. Sister Burton and myself are all ready and waiting for orders to sail to Tahiti, but now we feel heartsick, but if we go we will be taken care of by our heavenly Father.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

CAN some of the Iowa brethren respond to this call for labor? We have forwarded tracts. The letter is from Miss Lizzie Larsen, whose address is care of Charles Swensen, Buffalo Center, Winnebago County, Iowa, and addressed to the Herald Office. We gave the address to Bro. E. A. Stedman, but doubt if he was able to stop this side of his Minnesota field:—

I have become very much interested in the church of the Latter Day Saints. While on a visit in Fayette County, Iowa, I met one of your elders, who explained enough to arouse my interest. I couldn't stop long enough to get a real understanding; but have no rest till I know all. I have two sisters and a brother who are also interested. Could it be possible for you to send some one here to preach? There is no branch near here. Myself and one of my sisters are going to California soon and would be so glad if we could hear the gospel preached by one of your ministers before going. My sister lives four miles from Buffalo Center, and if you send some one they will be welcome here. Please let us know as soon as possible. Yours in search of truth, etc.

Bro. Henry Hart, Broughton, Kansas, the 23d:—

I have just returned home from Blue Rapids, where I have been helping to get the branch in better working order. Prospects are bright there now for better times spiritually. We ordained Bro. W. H. Eivins priest, and James Scott teacher and they were chosen and set to work by the branch.

Bro. J. F. Burton, writing from Santa Cruz, California, the 18th:—

Our reunion is proceeding beautifully; great unity, peaceful spirit, and happy saints. About eight persons to be baptized tomorrow. Bro. Luff fairly well and delighting saints and making sinners tremble with his forceful expositions of truth.

Bro. W. E. Peak, Netawaka, Kansas, 22d inst.:—

I arrived home on the 20th. Had a splendid time with the tent at Eagle and Panama; we held seventeen meetings in the first and twenty-one in the last-named place. The mission is in a good condition considering the number of laborers. Crops are good, but because of failures in the past, and low prices, times are very hard. We hope for the best.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Union, of the 17th, published at Albia, Iowa, contains a defensive article setting forth the position of the church on the marriage question, from the pen of Bro. R. M. Elvin.

Brethren and sisters who attend the Pittsburg and Kirtland district conference are requested to take notice that "The hall in Cleveland Ohio, where conference meets October 3, is located at No. 485 Pearl Street, not No. 445 as Bro. Griffiths has it in notice." Thus writes one of the brethren.

A San Antonio, Texas, paper, of the 17th, informs us of the marriage of Elder H. P. Curtis to Sr. Cora McRae, on the 16th, the ceremony being performed by Bro. L. L. Wight. The HERALD extends congratulations.

Sr. Sarah E. Haney, of Monroe City, Missouri, requests that elders who can labor at that point will call on Mr. James Foxall, who can readily be found. She would be pleased to hear from brethren who may preach in the city of Hannibal.

Bishop E. L. Kelley went to Woodbine, Iowa, on Tuesday, the 22d inst., to be present a portion of the time at the reunion.

Bro. H. A. Stebbins arrived home from his ministerial tour in Kansas on Wednesday, the 23d.

The labors of Brn. Parsons, Moler, Kelley, Smith, and others in the city of Philadelphia have not been in vain, judging from the growth of the branch there, the general revival of the work among the members, and the notices in the public press. The Post, of Camden, New Jersey, in its issue of the 21st, describes the baptism of four persons by Bro. William

A. Smith, of Iowa, now laboring in the Philadelphia district. The city of brotherly love furnished hundreds of converts to the latter-day work in past years, and the region adjacent to it thousands. Why not again? Success to the laborers there. May the good work go on.

Berrien County, Indiana, is credited with a religious sensation caused by one William Gouche, a farmer, whose visions and revelations have caused him to predict the end of the world for October 1. He has some followers who have disposed of their property and effects. A similar excitement was reported from another point by the press a short time ago. We note these predictions as showing the influences at work among the people and which tend to cause discredit of and disbelief in an authentic message of preparation and warning. It is significant that divine revelation has declared that no man knoweth the day nor the hour, etc. The Lord has provided that no one need be deceived by fanatical and visionary lo heres and lo theres. The conditions and events of the times connected with the work he has to do, are so manifestly apparent and so wisely provided against, that sound judgment and consistency are apparent and demanded in the work of preparation connected with that work. To "stand in holy places and be not moved until the day of the Lord come," means to be steadfast in faith, in judgment, and to make preparation in heart and conduct. This means more than the preparation of an ascension robe or other vain imagining. It means service for good to the world and individual righteousness and consistency. It means also the sacrifice of time and of substance by the children of God that the world may be warned by the preaching of the gospel. All conspiring events serve to emphasize the duties of the saints, who have covenanted to sacrifice that the demands of the work may be met, and it not hindered.

An event of importance is the present attitude of the Sultan of Turkey toward the Armenians and the attitude of the great powers toward the government of the Ottoman Empire. Armenian outrages by the Turks have become so numerous and the inhu-manities and butcheries so frequent and appalling that the civilized world is rising up in protest, and demands that other governments shall interfere and control or dethrone the Sultan and civilize and govern his domain. Russia so far refuses to interfere, but proposes to prevent any other power from possessing Constantinople and other portions of Turkey, long coveted by her. France, in general alliance with Russia, refuses to act. Great Britain's government hesitates to plunge the nation into what may prove a gigantic war with odds possibly against her, as do also other governments. The English and American people, friends of the oppressed, urge action conjointly with Italy and other nations. It is rumored that American and Italian war ships have been ordered to points adjacent to Constantinople, also that the Sultan threatens a general massacre of foreigners, especially of all Armenians, if war ships force the passage of the Dardanelles. It is also said that large bodies of Armenians have recently been deported and drowned and otherwise disposed of by wholesale. Altogether the prospects for European peace are not favorable. Turkey is doubtless nearing the end of its rule among the powers. The partition of the Sultan's empire will prove a cause of dispute and of war among the great powers of the East. It is doubtless but a question of time until the long anticipated struggle will begin in earnest.

Dispatches say a Russian squadron will be sent to Shanghai as a result of an agreement between China and Russia. The Chinese are fortifying and coaling Port Arthur, which is attributed to Russian policy and control in the far East.

A terrific gale swept over Great Britain on the 23d, also one on the 25th, doing damage along the coast and ashore.

Russia and England, it is said, will permit Greece to annex Crete, long under subjection to Turkey and of late the scene of an uprising against Turkish rule.

On the 23d of the present month good Queen Victoria's reign became the longest in English history. Loyal Englishmen are to celebrate a formal jubilee on June 20, 1897, when the Queen, should she live, will have completed a full threescore years of honorable and beneficent reign. The importance of the event is worthy of more extended mention than our space permits.

Dr. Herzl, of Vienna, it is stated, has stirred up a great interest among Orthodox Jews the world over in favor of the reestablishment of a Jewish State in Palestine. Difficulties in the way of the project are recognized, but faith in the movement is inspiring and directing international efforts among Jews and many Christians in its behalf.

At a late State conference of the Methodist Church, in Illinois, we think, the admission of women as delegates was favored by a very large majority.

H. Dharmapala, Buddhist missionary and present at the late World's Fair Congress of Religions, has come to America on a missionary tour to preach the brotherhood of man. Had Christianity, pure and simple and undivided, been presented at the late congress, perhaps the Heathen would not have thought the American people in need of another form of faith. The divisions of sectism have no doubt been a cause of encouragement to the religious moralists of heathendom to cling to their own religious principles.

We are not aware that we have ever spoken of such a character as Bro. Steele describes as "a very good man." In noticing the death of Elder A. H. Cannon we said he "impressed us with his sincerity," and we also said: "We admire a man whom we believe to be honest." At the same time we said: "We could not indorse all his teaching." The HERALD editors recognize the fact that a man may be sincere and honest in the wrong. Besides we were not affirming that Mr. Cannon was either sincere or honest, but simply giving expression to our impression and belief. In this we may have erred, but we then preferred, and do now prefer to make a mistake in that, than in the opposite direction.

San Francisco advices from Tahiti via the brig Tropic Bird report the loss of the Evanelia, the Gospel Boat, which according to the news item sent us went down in a recent storm, the missionaries and crew aboard all being saved after drifting about for twenty-six hours in an open boat. This news comes to us in an item published in the San Francisco Post (date not given) sent us by Bro. C. A. Parkin, in a letter dated the 24th. The report lacks confirmation; we sincerely hope it is not true.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., reports the late conference of the Southern Indiana district to have been an excellent and satisfactory meeting. Brn. E. C. Briggs, G. H. Hilliard, and S. W. L. Scott were present.

Bro. E. C. Briggs' address for the time being is No. 773 Sixty-sixth Street, Englewood, Illinois.

ANOTHER characteristic result of the use of tobacco very seriously affects family life, whatever its heredity effect may be. We refer to its deadening family affection and rendering its user careless concerning the comfort of others. No matter how gentlemanly and considerate he may be in other respects, he stifles all these fine feelings when they interfere with his favorite indulgence. He would carefully avoid passing before you, but will puff his tobacco smoke in such a way that it blows directly into your face. He comes into the room with his clothes so saturated with smoke they nauseate you, without even an apology. Gradually his moral and emotional nature becomes deadened, and this disregard for others' feelings shows itself in various ways.

A pitiable example of this has been going on under my own eyes for years, and a broken-hearted wife has confided to me as sad a story as we often hear in the home of a drunkard. Her husband was of a fine-strung, nervous organization, just the one to suffer from nicotine poisoning. He learned to use tobacco when a boy, but on his marriage gave it up, promising his wife never to touch it again, but not long after their marriage recommenced its use, and for years has been a perfect slave to it. In his early manhood he was an earnest Christian, an efficient worker in the church and Sunday school, a devoted husband and father, and a genial companion. Now he is sorrowfully changed: at fifty he looks at least sixty-five; his interest in church and Sunday school is gone, he never attends either; his family altar is broken down, wife and children never hear a loving word from his lips; at home he is gloomy and silent, while he who used to be the life of the social circle utterly ignores all his friends, never going out to meet them, and when they go to his home avoiding them, or treating them with scant civility. His whole social nature has suffered a transformation "into something sad and strange." His son, who is a noted physician, traces these results to the use of tobacco, and no one can discover any other cause. His domestic relations are the same as when he was the life of the family circle, his wife and children just as devoted to him; his business is just as prosperous; the only change is in himself. His body suffers as well as his mind and heart; his son warns him that unless he gives up tobacco he will soon die, but this does not influence him. He gloomily replies, "Then I must die, for I cannot stop using it." He seems to have settled down into the grim certainty that this is to be his fate, and is awaiting it with dogged resignation; and the whole family sit under the shadow of death, the joy of their home life destroyed by it. Are not the rights of those children ruthlessly violated? Over every home where passion and appetite hold sway might well be inscribed, "For death is come up into our windows and is entered into our palaces to cut off our children." It is only by living pure lives, by obeying God's laws, that parents can secure to their children their first right, the right of a healthy soul in a healthy body.

Next in the list of children's rights we rank the right to be loved and to know they are loved. We have spoken of this in regard to Babyhood and Childhood; we wish here to emphasize the fact that the right to be loved does not cease with childhood, nor does the need cease then; it rather increases in intensity. We plead not so much for love—since parental love is not often lacking—as for the expression of it in the family circle. Do not be afraid or ashamed of being thought sentimental because your feelings find expression in loving words and actions. The kiss which Garfield gave his mother at his inauguration thrilled through Christendom. The atmosphere of home should be ever so loving and sympathetic that a kiss never seems inopportune. We know such families, and we know that every one of them is a place wherein souls can grow.

In many families there is a strong, deep undercurrent of love constantly flowing, but it never makes itself visible on the surface. Repression has been the rule of their lives, a rule having good foundation in the desire to train to self-control; still, it often prevents family life from being the bright, joyous thing it ought to be. Were we called to choose between the genuine feeling hidden ever so deeply and the thoughtless expression of its counterfeit, we should choose the feeling a thousand times; but there is no necessity of forcing us to such choice. We feel no less deeply because eye and lip give expression to the feeling.

Closely allied to this is children's right to the companionship of their parents. We have referred to this repeatedly; but it cannot be emphasized too strongly. Children absorb character from those around them. If they are left to the companionship of ignorant servants, rude street boys, or silly, frivolous girls, they have very little chance of growing up wise, noble, and pure. The companionship they have a right to claim from you is something more than your mere presence. It is the hearty entering into their life, its joys, its sorrows, its work, and its play. Your duty to them in this direction is not performed when you have conscientiously devoted so many hours a day to their instruction; have, indeed, done everything you deemed necessary to their welfare. Children are perverse enough to appreciate more highly things done for their gratification than what is done for their welfare. Who shall say that this is altogether perversity, that it is not the working out of that hidden principle we shall discover in the chapter on "Work and Play," by which the child instinctively feels that what his parent does for his gratification comes more directly from the heart than what is done for his welfare? The latter may be done from a sense of duty, the former springs from pure love, because he need not have done it unless he wished. This explains the fact that a child is apt to feel a closer companionship with his parents when they play with him than while working together. Many an earnest Christian parent has never learned this fact, and so has gained no hold upon his children but the constraint of duty. He wonders at and envies the influence he sees worldly, frivolous parents have over their children, the loving sympathy which evidently exists between them. A little girl struck at the root of the matter when she said, "Oh, I suppose papa is good, but I do wish he was good and funny too!" Standing on the same plane is necessary to companionship; the child has not yet reached the plane of abstract goodness; if his father stands always on that, there is little fellowship; but they can meet on the funny plane, and meeting thus the parent can gradually lead the child upward.

Anthony Trollope gives this grim picture of his childhood: "From my very babyhood I had to take my place alongside of my father as he shaved, at six o'clock in the morning, and say my rules from the Latin grammar, or repeat the Greek alphabet, and was obliged at these early lessons to hold my head inclined toward him, so that, in event of guilty fault, he might be able to pull my hair without stopping his razor or dropping his shaving brush. Of amusement, as far as I can remember, he never recognized the need. I cannot bethink me of aught that he ever did for my gratification; but for my welfare—for the welfare of us all—he was willing to make any sacrifice."

Better is it for the child to have, instead of such a memory, a picture hung on memory's walls like that of David Copperfield's of his pretty young mother dancing with him in the firelight. Best of all is the mingling of the two—a memory which brings back what our parents did both to gratify and to benefit us, and of sweet companionship in both work and play. It is a sad thing when a child's memory of his mother is only of a fretful, over-anxious presence, ready with expressions of fear or displeasure over wet feet or imperfect lessons, but with nothing to say when he bounds in, full of eagerness to tell of the good times he has had. As another has aptly said, "Make and mend for them, wash and iron for them, teach, correct, and admonish them we may, but just as surely as we pray with them must we laugh and play with them, thus showing them not that we love their welfare less, but their gratification more."

There will come a time when the salvation of your boy and girl may depend upon the closeness of the union between their hearts and your own. Temptation may assail them, evil counsels make themselves heard in their hearts. If your children turn to you in that full confidence which springs only from close companionship with you, they are safe; if they seek this companionship among evil associates, and follow their counsels, they are lost. They surely have a right to be guarded against this danger.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

OUR FATHER.

"O Thou whom we are taught, in faith, to call
Our Father, glad in our dear right we come
With mind, with soul, with spirit, bringing all
To learn accord with thee—life's perfect sum;
Not as a slave, but as thy child, we hear
Thy voice, and find in perfect love no fear.

What could we call thee by thy works alone?
Science stands mute before them, known in part,
'Tis love hath made the high prerogative our own
To say, "Our Father who in heaven art!"
Heaven is thy kingdom that shall rise within
When hearts elect to let thy reign begin.
Dear name that binds us to the Infinite,
That grants us heirship to a grander life!
It holds us safe, even while we whisper it,
And hushes into peace all sense of strife.
Our Father cares for us, O restful thought,
A breath of balm, with heavenly healing fraught."

Thursday, Oct. 8.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—1 John 4: 7-13.

Thursday, Oct. 15.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 4: 7-10.

Thursday, Oct. 22.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Micah 4: 1-7.

Thursday, Oct. 29.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Joel 2: 21-32.

GLEANINGS FROM THE BOSTON CONVENTION. TO HAVE been at the great meeting of Sunday School workers at Boston would have been a rare treat, indeed. And those of us who are striving to learn the best methods for teaching God's little ones, the plans and suggestions of the many talented workers there would have given a new inspiration and enthusiasm as well as intelligence for our work.

While but few of us were present to hear the words of Mrs. Crafts, Miss Vella, Mr. Black, Miss Hall and the other leaders in this work we may still receive many of the good things of this convention from the most excellent reports given in The International Evangel.

In the report of an address by Miss Annie Harlow on "The Primary Teacher a Shepherd," many helpful suggestions are given.

After mentioning briefly the attractive primary room, with its carpets, beautiful pictures, piano, blackboard, sand maps, comfortable chairs and cabinet of objects and symbols used in teaching, she said: "I heartily recommend your tools, and wish that every other teacher had the same wonderful helps. With all the marvellous modern appliances for Sunday school work, and with the abundant supply of lesson helps, we are in danger of forgetting two things; namely, our dependence on the Holy Spirit, without whom all this is as machinery without power; and the need of the scholars of that personal attention, which cannot be given in the class in company with other children, and in one short hour of the Sunday school session, and without which much of the power of teaching is lost.

The sheep may have a strong, safe fold, the fields may be green and rich, the waters abundant, pure, and sweet, but the flock will surely suffer without the personal care of a shepherd, and will fall into many a pit, and stand in constant danger from which they might be prevented.

In every flock there are wayward ones that need watching, and weak ones that must be carried in the bosom.

A good shepherd knows each of his flock by name, and the traits which belong to each, and he metes out his care according to the needs. We, as primary teachers, are called to give this same kind of shepherding care to our children. No two of them are just alike, nor can they be wisely treated as if they were. We can never know the peculiar temptations and the peculiar difficulties that surround any child, till we know him in his home. Is the child nurtured in a Christian family; or are his parents indifferent to his spiritual welfare? What are his inherited tendencies? Are we to cultivate these, or are we to try in some way to overcome them? Our power for good over any child will be very much strengthened when we establish pleasant relationships with his home.

It should be the primary teacher's constant thought: How can the ties that bind the school and the home be strengthened.

Each strand that makes the cord may be small and weak, but many combined make a mighty cable.

A birthday letter sent to the child may seem to us a small thing, but a little pebble thrown into the water starts the ever-increasing wave in motion, and the result we cannot measure.

The little message sent to an absent or sick scholar, or the lesson paper coming into the home shows the child's absence was noted.

Another strand which we might weave into this cord binding school and home is Parent's Day, when all the mothers and fathers, not otherwise connected with the school, together with the tiny children not old enough to be away from the mother, should be invited to attend the special services of Review Sunday.

We as under shepherds surely cannot feel that we are doing our part, unless we, at least once a week, pray for each child by name. If prayer means anything, and if God's promises are true, there must come great results from this. "Ask, and ye shall receive."

When Christ was about to ascend to heaven, having finished his redemptive work on the cross and having proved his resurrection by many infallible proofs, his thrice repeated parting injunction to the forgiven Peter was that which comes to us. "Be the shepherd of my sheep. Feed the flock of God, which is among you, and when the chief shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

In one of the discussions Miss Mabel Hall, of Chicago, gave the following beautiful thought which she has used as a motto for her little ones:—

The suggestion came one Sunday from the text, "Follow thou me," when the Master told his disciples how to become fishers of men.

So teach his little disciples how they could be little fishers of men.

Miss Hall drew a line on the board reaching up to represent a fishing line, and the children called it the line of prayer, which they must throw up to God.

Then God drops the line where he knows the fishes live, but the children must have a hook to catch their fish. The beckoning finger, which means "come" must be the little hook and the bait a loving little smile to go with the beckoning finger. So many little fish have been brought into the school by this means. Last Sunday one little fisherman brought in seven little minnows. One little fellow remarked that "minnows was't good for nothing but bait," but the thought was quickly given, "Ah, but bait may bring in a big papa and mamma fish." Miss Hall then sang the little fishers' song, which they always sing when any little fishes are brought in.

The above are only a few of the thoughts given by some of the workers in the primary department of Sunday School work as reported in the International Evangel.—Selected.

"Why should not each church appoint a board of practical housekeepers to look after its domestic economy?" asks The Congregationalist, and adds: "If this were done, we believe that the poor ventilation and unhygienic conditions now tolerated in many imposing structures would speedily disappear."

SELKIRK, Ont., Sept. 17.

Editors Herald:—Last Monday I returned home from a week's visit in the capital of our Province, the historic city of Toronto. I went during the great annual industrial exhibition which lasts for ten or twelve days, taking advantage of the reduced fare to see the saints, renew old acquaintances, as well as to attend the exhibition, which is perhaps unrivalled if not unequalled by any in the world, or at least in America.

Toronto is a city nice to look upon. It is also one historic to our church as well as to the world. It is there where some of our ablest men have first learned of this glorious work, or where some lived who became members of this church. Among them was John Taylor, who was converted under the ministration of P. P. Pratt in that city. He was called to the ministry and made president of that branch, and in 1835, I believe it was, Joseph Smith came to Canada chiefly to visit the branch over which Taylor presided. Afterward Taylor was called to the apostleship and sent to Europe on a mission. The work he did there, the zeal with which he labored, the preachers in France which he sent to unreplied silence by his profound reasoning, leave an unfading impression on the walls of our history.

I had a pleasant visit with the Saints while in Toronto, notwithstanding a severe cold contracted just before leaving home.

While there I was honored with the invitations to preach once, preside over a social service, and assist in another preaching service, to all of which I heartily complied. I also had the pleasure of becoming acquainted with our new missionary to this mission, Elder J. C. Foss. He has been laboring there for a few weeks. I noticed that if he has his way the Herald will not suffer for want of subscriptions. This I think should be the uniform effort of all missionaries. Patronize chiefly the paper to which you look for free copies and the office where you look for free tracts.

Selkirk branch has a membership of about twelve. We are presided over by Elder M. F. Derby, formerly a prominent one among the Disciples.

Editors Herald:—There seems to be quite an interest here. I have been quite discouraged at times to think that not a soul has come into the church here in the six years I have striven to magnify my calling, but I still love this work dearly and have been much encouraged of late.

I was permitted to attend conference at Fulton and was much benefited. I thank the saints for their kindness to me and my cousin. She enjoyed it very much.

I hope some of the ministry can call on us soon. Inquire at the post office for me or Mrs. E. Grayliss.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 31.

Editors Herald:—The discussion on the seventh-day Sabbath between Elder Ostrander, pastor of the Adventist faith of this city, and the writer, closed Saturday night, there being five nights occupied instead of four as pre-arranged.

Bro. Ostrander is a gentleman in discussion and seemed thoroughly posted along the lines of Adventism, but unfortunately for him, as an exponent of truth (so called), we tore the bottom out of his Sabbath theme, spilled his arguments, and made an exhibit of the bone of contention as simply a skeleton of what was once a live man, having his birth with Moses, Deuteronomy 5:1-5, and death at the cross, Colossians 2:14-17. I will give a few of the arguments in short as they were used.

Bro. Ostrander argued that in the days of creation when God made the heavens and the earth, he worked six days and rested on the seventh, and because he had rested he blessed and sanctified that day and made it holy; therefore man must keep that day holy by resting, for no other day would do as well, as that part of time was holy, and must be kept just as God made it. I said I was sorry that Sabbatharians could not do all they wanted to, but unfortunately for them Satan had plotted against their theme successfully when he made men subject to death, as the day God rested was a thousand years of our time, instead of twenty-four hours. Bro. Ostrander said those days were literal days, twenty-four hours long, as the evening and the morning were the first day. But here was where trouble began for him. I showed from the account given of the creation, that the sun, moon, and stars were not made until the fourth day, that it was quite evident that the sun did not rise and set before it was made or had an existence, that the first three days came and went without being measured by the rising and the setting of the sun; hence there was no proof that they were literal days at all. The psalmist David said in his ninety-third psalm, that a thousand years was as yesterday in the sight of the Lord. Peter said in his second epistle, third chapter, eighth verse, that a thousand years was as one day with the Lord, and one day was as one thousand years with him. God said to Adam, "The day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die," yet Adam lived to be nine hundred and thirty years old; nevertheless he died before the day closed, it being a thousand years of our time. Bro. Ostrander made a wonderful attempt to prove that God meant Adam should die spiritually, and that he did die the very minute he ate of the forbidden fruit.

I asked him how Adam came by the natural death if God meant he should only die spiritually, if it was an accident on the part of Adam to die naturally. If so, why the accident was inherent to the whole human family if God did not mean anything of that kind. Besides all this, Adventism did not believe that man had a spirit, hence he must explain to the audience how a man without a spirit could die spiritually.

Furthermore, if the rising and the setting of the sun was the only rule by which a day could be measured, and that every time the sun rose and set it was a day, in heaven, on earth, and everywhere else, was it not a fact that at the north pole where the sun rose and set only once a year, that the day there would be a year long, there being six months light and six months darkness. At this juncture, facts had arisen to such a height that Bro. O. concluded the very best way was for him to pick his way around these rocks of truth, and accordingly did so, firing a few shots at other things as he went.

There was another hard thing to be understood, and that was just how Sabbatarians would manage it to all keep the same time with the Lord and the angels, when they were scattered all over the face of the earth. If the Lord and the angels and Bro. O. were to commence to keep the Sabbath here in Grand Rapids at exactly sundown on the sixth day of the week, it is a well-known fact that Bro. B. over in Australia would be just twelve hours out of the way, because sundown would not reach him until just twelve hours later, it being sunrise there when it was sundown here. The best then that Bro. B. could do, would be to keep twelve hours with the Lord and Bro. Ostrander. But what about the third party three quarters of the way around the earth from where the Lord starts to keep the Sabbath? Why, the best he could do would be to keep six hours of holy time with the Lord. Does not the Sabbath close out twenty-four hours from the time the Lord started to keep it? Yes. Well what about that third party who had to start three quarters of the way around the earth from where the Lord started? Why, he would have to keep just eighteen hours of the first day of the week to finish out the twenty-four hours he started to keep. And suppose my opponent should happen to be at the North Pole where the sun sets once a year, there being six months day and six months night. How would he manage to start there, and when? And if he started at all, which party would he start with, the one here in Grand Rapids or the one in Australia, there being twelve hours difference in the time they start? Beautiful! Here the thing fizzles out entirely. Think of a man's salvation resting on such uncertainties! By this time matters got pretty interesting for the seventh day fellows and there was a good deal of talking in the audience.

I then proved that the Sabbath given in the Decalogue was only a shadow of the Sabbath of the Lord, which was another thousand years, (the millennium reign,) which would commence with the coming of Christ and the binding of Satan, and close with the loosing of him as recorded in the twentieth chapter of Revelation. I also showed that Israel could keep the Sabbath all right in the land of Palestine where they were all located on a small space of this earth's surface, and all could start at once and stop at the same time.

The hall was literally packed with attentive listeners all during the discussion, with an overflow on the outside listening as best they could. Many said to me that they were highly pleased with my arguments.

Even the Methodist preacher said it was the best he had ever heard on that subject.

So goes the battle. In bonds,
R. E. GRANT.

A VISIT TO THE WESTERN WALES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Editors Herald:—By the kind invitation of the president of the Western district of Wales, Elder E. R. Dewsnup, the writer attended the semi-annual conference which was convened on the 5th inst. in the saints' chapel, Llanelly, near Swansea, South Wales. The opening services were appointed for six p. m. of the day named above, but the meeting was somewhat delayed by the absence of the president and the writer; not from any fault of their own, but through the lack of punctuality of the railway car. However, after a journey of over two hundred miles we arrived at the place about one hour behind our time, for which we were at once forgiven, seeing that the fault had not been our own; and we were welcomed heartily by the cheery, honest faces of the president of the mission, Elder James Caffall, and the presidents of the Morrision and Llanelly branches, Elders J. R. Gibbs and John Edwards.

After the interchange of the usual saints' greetings, the conference was called to order by the president of the district, who after the opening exercises moved that Elder James Caffall, president of the European Mission, and Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., president of the Manchester district, be invited to preside over the conference as president and assistant president respectively. This was carried by a unanimous vote, after which the business of the district was proceeded with and dispatched in a most businesslike manner, and was adjourned at something after ten o'clock the same evening. On the following morning—Sunday, the 6th—a few of the saints were out to early morning sacrament, prayer, and fellowship meeting, in charge of the president of the Llanelly branch, Elder John Edwards. Quite a number of soul-stirring prayers, testimonies, and spiritual songs, both in Welsh and English, were given, and a very pleasant spiritual season was enjoyed. At eleven a. m. another meeting was held, the writer in charge. Elder James Caffall dispensed the word of life unto those present, and as usual with the speaker, the discourse was replete with sound, practical advice to the ministry and saints, and was listened to by those present with the deepest of interest. At the close of this service a short business session was held for the transaction of one or two items that had been left over from the previous evening.

The saints and friends assembled again at 2:30 p. m. for fellowship meeting, President Caffall in charge. This meeting was a repetition of the saints' meeting held in the early morning, with one exception; that is, the sacrament was not again administered, but there was an additional supply of the Spirit, and a larger number of saints and friends were present. At six p. m. the meeting was called to order by Elder James Caffall. Quite a number of Saints and friends were present.

The writer was called upon to dispense the word of life, and in so doing felt blessed of the Spirit; had much liberty, and those present seemed deeply interested in the subject, which related to the first principles of the gospel of Christ. This service was brought to a close at 7:30 p. m. Afterwards the Saints and friends adjourned to hold outdoor services in the Presbyterian Square, one of the main thoroughfares of the town. The writer was in charge. Elder Reece Jenkins, of the Llanelly branch, addressed the people in the Welsh language. There were quite a number present and many of them seemed to be much interested in the arguments of the speaker, who seemed to have much liberty given him. At the close of the meeting it was announced that Elder James Caffall would deliver a course of lectures on special subjects in the saints' chapel, Island Place.

Thus was brought to a close what the writer feels persuaded was an epoch-marking conference in connection with the work in South Wales. The writer bade good-bye to the saints so soon as the day's services were over, remaining at Swansea that night, returning to his home on the following morning, well repaid for the extra toil and exertion required in the effort he had put forth to meet with the saints in the Western district of South Wales.

During my short stay with the Welsh brethren and sisters, I have been treated with the greatest consideration and respect, Saints and friends vying with each other to cause me to feel that I was among not only friends, but brethren and sisters whose hearts on gospel matters throbbed in unison with my own. Bro. and Sr. Evan Davis made my night requirements their special care; and I cannot help but mention Mrs. Davies, the wife of one of the large hotel keepers in the town, who made Elders Caffall, Gibbs, and E. R. Dewsnup, and myself her special guests to dinner and tea on Sunday; and while in her house we had the pleasure of meeting with her sister, a Mrs. Parry, of the same town, who with herself had as children been trained up in the doctrine of the church by a pious father, a faithful old-time saint, who has gone to his rest, leaving to his daughters the heritage of a spotless reputation which is deeply enshrined in their hearts, creating a pious love and sympathy for that dead father and his faith that may peradventure yet lead them back again to the same source from which he received his hope and consolation, even in death. Both of these ladies have, I believe, been baptized in their youth, prior to the public introduction of the pernicious doctrine of polygamy, by Brigham Young, and are more or less in sympathy with the God-given work of the Reorganized Church. Mrs. Davies and niece, a young lady who is resident with her, have, I learned from themselves, frequently attended our meetings in the "Island Chapel."

There has been marked improvement in the position and condition of the work of the church in this district since my visit to a conference of this district about ten years ago. The young element that has since come to the front, have, I believe, a better understanding of their duties and responsibilities than had some of those I became acquainted with during my former visit. At the same time I wish it to be understood that I do not, neither have I ever intended to cast any reflection upon the many noble men and women among my brethren and sisters in Wales who have consistently and persistently sought to raise the standard of purity in the church by a consistent walk and conversation as becometh the true saint of God. To mention the names of such in this letter might appear invidious to some. I therefore abstain from so doing, but God knows them and he will give them their reward. I believe that both young and old with very few exceptions are at the present time striving to honor their calling as saints of the most high God. This striving is already clearly resulting in the widening and deepening of their spiritual life, creating a more intense love in their hearts for Christ and his gospel.

From what I can learn there are many of the lost sheep of the house of Israel scattered throughout this principality, many who have been left without a shepherd since the dark and cloudy day, when iniquity was brought in like a flood, when apostasy put on its brazen front and said, "Follow us and we will save you." When we find such, we ought in a kindly manner to make clear to their minds the difference between the doctrines of that apostasy, and the primitive doctrines of the church as presented by the faithful ministry of the Reorganization; for such people, or many of them, may easily be brought into sympathy with us when they learn that we are standing in the way and pointing out to them the "old paths."

To my mind the outlook in Wales is full of encouragement. The branches, so far as I am acquainted with them, are fairly well officered. The district presidents are men of intelligence and probity; the membership are, generally speaking, honest and intelligent people, willing to be governed by the law and authority of the church; and therefore I say that with a united coöperative movement, all along the line, we must and will succeed in accomplishing great things in the best interests of the church. The solution of the problem, "Is life worth living?" is in the hands of the people of God, and there are thousands of people everywhere who will be glad to learn that "life is worth living," and will be made a pleasure and a joy when lived in harmony with the law of God as revealed in his gospel.

RHODES, Iowa, Sept. 19.

Editors Herald:—Another one has been called from his post of duty—our beloved brother, Elder William Thompson, of Centerville, Iowa. His appointment was by General Conference in 1895 to the Des Moines district, and by request continued for 1896. He died September 17, 1896, at Colo, Iowa.

His faithfulness in his arduous work of love to his fellow man brought to him the esteem of them that knew him. As far as we have learned him, he was a man that did not feel at ease with nothing to do, but wished to improve his time at something useful and profitable, whether conversing or laboring otherwise; a man that we fully believed could be trusted in anything in the line of his calling as a servant of God, strictly attending to his business as he understood it, made him the more esteemed to us. We miss him, Oh, we miss him!

His last labor was with the tent at Nevada, in Story County, where he labored all alone and also wrote an article for the Nevada paper. I did not get to read it, but heard it well spoken of. From there he came to Colo, where ended his labor of earth life. The Christian people of that place kindly offered him the house, in which he spoke until the 7th of September. The writer went on Sunday, the 13th, to assist what he could in his meeting, but found him in bed. We attended to the ordinance, as James describes, but he was relieved only a little while, as he stated to the writer. After some time elapsed we were alone, when he grasped my hand firmly in his and said, "Thank God for a true brother!" Then he prayed the most inspiring prayer it was ever my privilege to listen to. In the petition were himself, then his dear family, the saints, and the work engaged in; and he ended with the most affectionate, sympathetic words as only one can having the Spirit of Christ to a great measure: "But, holy Father, not my will, but thine be done." We are pleased to state that although the dear brother was among strangers, there was all done that kind and willing hands could do for him. The Doctor, we believe, put forth every effort to do him good. Among those kind hands we would mention Mr. and Mrs. Parker and a young man staying there. This family agreed to board Bro. Thompson. The worthy young brother, Frank J. L'hommedieu, of Colo, who made the request for the brother to preach at that place, was very faithful to make it comfortable for the elder. Also Bro. William Hyde, of Boone, and Bro. and Sr. Hardin, of Nevada.

During the last day of his life he was permitted to see his dear wife and two of his children whom she brought with her.

On the next day they started with the remains of her dear husband to Centerville. We intended to go with them to take charge in the changes to the different roads, but could not on account of bad roads, but we must submit.

We desire also to be ready when the roll shall be called.

May our Father look with tender compassion upon the ones that are left to mourn the loss of a kind husband and father; and give them comfort as no one else can.

Yours in love for truth,
WILLIAM C. NIRK.

GLENWOOD, Iowa, Sept. 18.

Editors Herald:—We are glad to read the joyous news sent forth through the precious columns of the Herald. It cheers our hearts to know that the Master owns his people and sheds forth his Holy Spirit upon them when they walk in the line of duty. He has graviously come to our help in this district. We have been blessed beyond our expectations, and souls have been added to the church as seals to the testimony of the earnest labors of his faithful servants who have labored with us locally. There is a good spirit in the district. We are solicited from every part of it to come and preach.

We have just made a tour among the scattered ones and find them mostly strong in the faith. Have held forth in the different schoolhouses and in private houses where such reside, and have realized that God has been with us, blessing us greatly according to promise. We are unable to fill one third of the calls for preaching, so hope the saints and friends will be patient, bearing in mind that there is but one in this field devoting all of his time to the ministry. We are doing the best we can and believe that most of our brethren are doing the same. Our late reunion was all we could ask or wish for. Thirty-five precious souls in all were added to the church by baptism, such as we trust will be eternally saved.

Now let me admonish you, dear saints, both of this, and the Nodaway district, not to forget by any means that you can be loud preachers of the gospel and be instrumental in the hands of God in bringing souls into the kingdom who will rise up and call you blessed, if you will but contribute of your means as the law directs. "Great shall be your reward in heaven," by so doing you will "lay up treasures" "where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt." I know that many think they are unable to do anything in this direction because of the hard times; but, my dear brethren, should all think so the preaching of the gospel would stop, except only what could be done locally; and besides, if we as a people fail in this regard, great will be our condemnation and loss eternally. Then let us not forget, if we want to be blessed of God, and prospered spiritually and temporally. As God shall prosper us, so let us liberally contribute, for this is one of the essential features of the work.

We wish to say to our fellow-laborers in the Nodaway district, Don't forget the time of the conference as decided upon at your last conference to be held on Saturday and Sunday, October 17 and 18, at Guilford, Missouri. We earnestly request all the elders and branch authorities especially to be present, as on account of the demise of our dearly beloved brother and fellow laborer in the Lord and president of the district we shall be under the necessity of electing another in his stead. We deeply mourn his departure, and keenly feel our loss, but are comforted in the thought that it is his gain. We sincerely condole with his beloved wife, father and mother, sister, and near relatives and friends. May the loving Father bestow his Holy Spirit upon us to help us to order our lives aright and faithfully discharge the duties incumbent upon us, that we may be prepared to enter with him into the joy of our Lord and be made partakers of all that is promised, is the prayer of your unworthy brother.

IONE, Cal., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—My health the past summer has not been good, having been sick once with pneumonia and three times with malaria fever, and my home is broken up. My faith in the work is the same as it has always been for the past twenty years, and I have been trying to help get the gospel before the people in my way; that is, by selling and loaning books and papers. Yet I had little success lately. Pray for me and my beloved children.

BURNSIDE, Mich., Sept. 15.

Editors Herald:—On August 29 and 30 Bro. A. Barr and the writer conducted a two-days' meeting at Shabbona, Sanilac County, which was well attended. We felt blessed in presenting the truth, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves. In attendance was my wife and sons, which brought an additional joy to me. On Monday, the 31st, I bade my wife and babes good-bye, committing them to our Father's care to guide them safely home, while I went in the opposite direction to a place called Smith's in St. Clair County, to relieve Bro. Davis in tent work, which indeed was a relief, he having been with the tent the greater part of the summer alone. I arrived in time to preach in the evening, and was greeted with a nice, attentive audience. On Tuesday Bro. Davis went home, leaving the writer to continue his effort alone as best he could. Well, I lost no time, but held meeting every evening and twice on Sunday, for a week. A cold wave struck us which made it too cold to hold forth in the tent part of the time; but Mr. Hone, one of the merchants, threw open his hall to us free of charge. We had a good audience all through. Some seemed quite interested; so much so that they bought the church books so to further investigate.

On September 7 we loaded the tent on Bro. Harrison's wagon and started for the above-named place. We arrived about ten o'clock in the evening tired and weary. On Tuesday we reared the tent and on Wednesday evening preached the first sermon to about one hundred of an audience. On Thursday evening the numbers increased nearly one half and we felt blessed in presenting the good old story of Jesus and the cross. On Saturday and Sunday we held a two-days' meeting, one of the best held in the district this year. It was estimated that four or five hundred were present on Sunday of which about eighty-five per cent were outsiders. The tent was full and many on the outside. We were ably assisted by Brn. F. M. Cooper and William Davis. It looked so encouraging to see hundreds coming out to hear the gospel that we thought best to continue here for a time, and pray God to water the seed sown, but we can only say yet, What shall the harvest be? Bro. Boyl's folks are the only saints living here, but they have spared no pains to make our effort a success, and he has been ably assisted by his kind neighbors. I mention the name of Mr. Bruse, one of the merchants here, who gave us the use of the ground to set tent on and has furnished lamps, etc., for the tent.

Prospect looks bright for missionary work in this county. There have been several requests made already to move the tent to other points; and so we feel that the Lord is truly opening up the way. I hope to visit several branches before our fall conference, which convenes at Bay Port, October 10 and 11. And so we are doing what we can to keep pace with the great work we are enlisted in. Ever praying for the final triumph of truth,

GARDNER, Kans., Sept 18.

Editors Herald:—Elder Arthur Allen and myself have been busily engaged since Tuesday morning, the 15th, in a debate with Elder Albert Brown, of the Church of Christ (Christian Church) near Gardner, Kansas, in a grove. We have had very pleasant weather all week, except to-day we had to find shelter in a barn, which was tendered us through the kindness of one Mr. Ramey.

Glorious was the triumph of truth as it greets our ears from every quarter. We have but one member in this section of the country, but about four weeks old in the gospel, and of course we had all of the prejudice of the "Christian Church" to meet; but with all that the invariable answer of all parties not members of that church is, that we have reaped a complete victory. We heard some expressions as follows: "You are on top yet;" "There is more in that Bible than we thought;" "I have been telling everybody I meet that you have got the best of them." Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Dunkards, and Brethren, and some of their own members say they cannot claim any victory at all.

On some occasions the Lord blessed Bro. Allen wonderfully with his Spirit, and every point that Elder Brown urged against us was completely demolished; and at the close of the debate, Elder Brown could not claim one point.

He suggested for Bro. Allen to drink some poison and work a miracle that we might believe. Bro. Allen said: "That was what Satan did when he took Christ upon the pinnacle of the temple and said, 'If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written,' etc., and that as Jesus hung upon the cross the Jews stood by and wagged their heads and said: 'If thou be the Son of God come down from the cross,' that they would then believe him. Now I do not want to accuse Bro. Brown of being a child of Satan, but if he is not he should not mimic him so much."

The Lord is surely working in this part of his vineyard and will raise up a righteous people here. More anon.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 16.

Editors Herald:—Just closed a very interesting meeting at Blendsville. Two were baptized. The Saints at that point are wide-awake, and especially the Ladies' Relief Society, which is a great help in lifting the burden off the shoulders of the brethren.

To say I enjoyed my visit would be putting it very mildly, and I trust all were benefited by my visit. I straightened out a great many on the law of tithing, and took in a little.

I commence tent meeting at this point tonight on Dale, between Pierse and Kellett Avenues. We expect to organize here before I leave. Those that live close here and wish to become members of this branch must get their letters of removal and forward the same to me, to No. 1920 Pierse Street, Springfield, Missouri.

BELL GROVE, W. Va., Sept. 13.

Editors Herald:—After the conference at Goose Creek Bro. Ullom and I went to Carthage, where lives Elder John L. Williams and family, several of whom are married and now in the church. We found several ready for the water. I baptized five while there. Bro. W. baptized one; so were added unto us six more souls at Carthage.

We had a discussion there with the Missionary Baptist, Rev. C. E. Shafer. He is a man of no mean ability, but not equal to the task laid upon him by his church. He made choice of a Rev. W. A. Cadle for moderator who seemed to lend all the aid he possibly could; nevertheless he deputed himself in a gentlemanly manner.

Shafer undertook to run the Baptist Church back to the apostles, but instead, he run it quite into the ground, and standing on the rigging of the old wreck made a futile assault on the Book of Mormon, leaving the question at issue, to which the chairman, Mr. Reed Lewis, objected, stating that the dodge, if continued, would lead away from the proposition and place the affirmative disputant in the negative. He read the rules we had adopted, and which Mr. Shafer had signed before the debate commenced. But Shafer appealed to the house and gained his point by the vote of an old Baptist sister who knew only the one side, much after the fashion of a juggler. In fact, the Baptists are all that way. Then Shafer proceeded to pick faults with the stick of Joseph.

Shafer was once an Adventist and in his criticism we distinctly recognized the work of one Sheldon, who was scorched out of the controversy by Bro. Blair. We were told that the Christ of the Mormons was not the Christ of the Bible, because the one was born of Mary at Jerusalem and the other of Mary in Bethlehem of Judea. The one was born six hundred years future from the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah, King of Judah, and the other five hundred and fifty-three years after the beginning of the reign of the said king. Again we learned that Mosiah said (Mosiah p. 200, B. of M.) that the people were scattered abroad from the great tower, even till the creation of Adam. "So that according to the Book of Mormon, Adam and his boys were running about over the earth two thousand years before they were created." We had only to read Mosiah chapter 12, paragraph 4, to give the lie to all such statements and representations.

Again we heard that the God of the Mormons was a God of flesh and blood. "And he saith unto the Lord, I saw the finger of the Lord, and I feared lest he should smite me; for I knew not that the Lord had flesh and blood." Without reading further this afforded strong proof, you see, and was perfectly conclusive. When called upon to read the whole passage, he skipped six or eight lines and began at the words: "And when the Lord had said these words," etc.

Suffice it to say that his deceitful methods were fully exposed, and with these few samples of his garbling we turned to our affirmative arguments and told the chairman to "give him rope." We compared the former-day saints with the Latter Day Saints in faith, doctrine, organization, and practice, and found them identical. This fact was never met, nor can it be, and the discussion was, upon our part, (the Lord be praised,) a success.

We have a good opening here and expect much good to be done.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 3.

ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.

BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.

EPHRAIM AND MANASSEH'S ADOPTION; WHY?

We have before noticed that Reuben and Simeon had lost their birthright by transgression, and that Jacob had two sons by the wife of his love and choice, Joseph and Benjamin. It will be seen by perusing the history of these lads that neither corruption nor "instruments of cruelty" were in their habitations. We find also that God's design in separating Ephraim and Manasseh from their fellows and removing them to "the land shadowing with wings," was that he might raise up a righteous branch, and in order to do so must have a righteous seed to start with. Men do not "gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles," and so Joseph's separation from his brethren, in his childhood, by their perverseness, became, in the hands of the Lord, the means of their salvation in those early days; so likewise will Joseph's seed, by the same overruling providence, be the means of their salvation in the last days; hence their adoption into the family of Jacob and becoming Israel, "the rod or branch of Jacob's inheritance." They were no longer to be called the children of Joseph, but the seed of Jacob, and they are to inherit the birthright; and Joseph's issue, which he shall beget after them, shall be Joseph's and shall be entitle to their inheritance.

And now thy two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt, before I came unto thee into Egypt, are mine; as Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine. And thy issue, which thou begetteth after them, shall be thine. . .

By careful study, the forty-eighth and forty-ninth chapters of Genesis will be found to be of the nature of a command, prophecy, revelation, and blessing. In the forty-eighth chapter and fifth verse, after rehearsing to Joseph the appearing of God to him [Jacob] at Luz, he claims Ephraim and Manasseh as his sons:—

As Reuben and Simeon, they shall be mine.

"As," in this case, must not be taken in the sense of like, but, in the stead of; for "they shall be mine." They are to take the place of Reuben and Simeon, and in the blessings which follow it is evident that the inheritance, so far as posterity is concerned, was not counted in either Reuben or Simeon, but rather an annulling of the blessings which otherwise would have been theirs to enjoy, but now instead thereof a curse rather. (Gen. 49: 3-7.)

We find in Deuteronomy 33, where Moses prophesies of the blessings of the twelve tribes, that he gives Reuben a very meager portion, scarcely more than a recognition in the line; while Simeon, no doubt on account of blood-guiltiness, is left out altogether. Surely "the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright." We find, then; that the reason for Jacob's disinheriting Reuben and Simeon and adopting Ephraim and Manasseh was, that a necessity had arisen for it; viz., the twelve tribes of Israel, which are typified all through the dealings of God with his church, must be maintained, and that too with some degree of holy dignity, not merely as an office, as that of the apostles; but through or by that office as a means of grace, dignity, and authority, which might inure to the great good and blessing of the race, and not to the aggrandizement of a few, as favored sons of a prophet, priest, or king. This leads us next to consider,

WHO, AND WHERE IS EPHRAIM?

In Zechariah 10: 6-10 "it is written":—

I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the Lord their God, and will hear them. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, . . . their children shall see it and be glad. . . . And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember me in far countries: and they shall live with their children and turn again [to the Lord] and he shall pass through the sea. . . .

Another class of the seed of Ephraim will the Lord gather out of the countries near at hand; viz., out of Egypt and Assyria, whither also they have been scattered; but we find that a portion were to "pass through the sea." We read also in Micah 5: 3, 7, that near to the time of the second coming of Christ, and after that he shall "have given them [a portion of the house of Judah] up" (to the destroyers for a time), and after the church again shall have travailed and brought forth; then the remnant of his brethren (for he was of the tribe of Judah) shall return unto the children of Israel. And then, at that time, "The remnant of Jacob [of the tribe of Judah] shall be in the midst of many people, as a dew from the Lord, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men."—Verse 7.

This remnant we claim will be a portion of the house of Israel, according to the tribe of Judah, who shall be gathered from portions of both the eastern and western continents, and securely settled in the land of Palestine under the protection of the Most High. But another remnant also shall exist in the world at that time, who shall not yet have returned unto the children of Israel (or their place); nor are they near unto the "land of assyria," or the "land of Nimrod;" but they are a remnant of Jacob according to Ephraim, who, "shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people, as a lion [and not as a dew from the Lord or as showers upon the grass, but as a lion] among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep," and not like the other remnant, neither as to location nor disposition. The first remnant would distill upon the surrounding people "as the dew upon herbs," but the second remnant would be among the people as a mighty destroyer, "who, if he go through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces and none can deliver."

That there are here two remnants of the same parental stock distinctly mentioned and clearly identified by different locations and attributes, we think none will attempt to deny; that the first remnant is of the tribe of Judah according to the text in question (Micah 5: 2, 3.) we think none will be willing to dispute; and the identity of the second remnant can be as clearly pointed out in Ephraim and Manasseh as the first in Judah. We have already shown that God has covenanted to Jacob, through Joseph's posterity (Ephraim and Manasseh), a greater possession than to Abraham. (Gen 49: 26.) Jacob says in his dying blessing:—

The blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.—Gen. 49: 26.

In Genesis chapters 15 and 17 the inheritance (landed estate) promised or covenanted to Abraham and Isaac was the land of Palestine; but Jacob here claims a greater possession for the seed of Joseph, even to "the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills," and of such an extent that in it Ephraim may become a "multitude of nations." Certainly this could not have been in Palestine, for room would not have been sufficient there; and we have already shown that in America was the promised possession.

Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia.—Isa. 18: 1.

A more graphic picture of America could not, even at this time, be given, than "the land shadowing with wings." And where was it? It was beyond the rivers of Ethiopia—westward from where Isaiah was when he made the declaration of "woe to the land," or to the inhabitants of the land, as he could see with a prophetic eye the evil that would befall this western world. These calamities referred to by Isaiah are shown in the Book of Mormon, and in no other book extant. The prophet appeals to "all the inhabitants of the world" and notifies them that when an "ensign" is lifted up on this land, where a nation had been meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers (nations of Europe) had taken as a spoil; that before "the harvest," or end of the world, which, it would follow, would then be near at hand, he would cut off the sprigs and cut down the branches of the sour (wild) grapes, or, in other words, all who are not of the true vine, by adoption into the household of Jacob or Abraham.

Another feature in this prophecy is peculiar and conspicuous; viz., that "in that time ["afore the harvest," after the ensign, Book of Mormon, has been lifted] shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people scattered and peeled [American Indians], . . . a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land [the land covenanted by God to Ephraim, and not to Great Britain or any other European power] the rivers [nations] have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the Mount Zion," or, to the western part of Missouri. And it is a notable fact that to the time of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon the American Indians were not molested beyond the western limits of what is now Missouri.

Having learned who Ephraim is, and where the land of his inheritance is located, we are prepared to understand to whom God wrote the great things of his law, which were counted as "a strange thing." (Hosea 8: 11, 12.) We learn from Psalms 78: 10, 11, that Ephraim kept not the covenant of God and refused to walk in his law, therefore God refused the tabernacle of Joseph and Ephraim. (Verse 67.)

Hosea 9 says that "as Ephraim has forsaken the laws of God, he has cast them off and has cursed them with the dry breast and barren womb, and made them "wanderers among the nations." They have been hated, shot at, and sorely grieved, and have become the roving bands of Indians that now inhabit the three Americas from the Arctic Ocean to Cape Horn. But still their bow abode in strength. (Isa. 43: 1-7.) But though Ephraim, like Judah, has been cast off for a season, even "until a present be brought from a nation scattered and peeled," the seed of Ephraim (Isa. 18: 7), what has become of the "great things" of God's "law" unto "Ephraim"?

NECESSITY.

The necessity then for the "Book of Mormon," or some such volume or sacred record, becomes apparent to the careful student of the Bible, from several important considerations. First, the Bible itself demands such a book in unequivocal terms, clearly setting forth the nature of the book, the manner of its development, the time of its appearance, and the results that should follow the promulgation of its contents. And we find this necessary complement in the Book of Mormon, and in no other book extant is this want or lack supplied.

In Ezekiel 37: 15-21 "it is written" that

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land.

Now, anyone at all acquainted with the ancient custom of keeping records on parchment, well knows that they fastened a stick on each end of the parchment for the purpose of rolling and unrolling as they read, and that hence records came thus to be called sticks. And Bible readers as well know that our Bible all came to us through the kingdom of Judah, and that hence it is called the stick of Judah. Hence, we perceive that the great things of God's law to Ephraim here on this continent, his covenant possession, would be the stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim, and that God has positively declared that he would put it with the stick of Judah, the Bible, and make them one in his hand.—Introduction to the Book of Mormon by Z. Brooks.

The question then arises, and gravely demands our consideration, Has such a record ever been brought forth claiming to be the stick of Joseph, in the hand, lineage, or seed, of Ephraim, and bearing all the marks of identity of holy writ, being the "Thus saith the Lord" to his ancient prophets? If there is such a work to be found in the archives of the world, except the Book of Mormon, let it be produced. If such a book is not extant, bearing all the marks as to matter, manner, and time of publication, it is now too late for its development, and but for the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the only work of its kind, the Bible, or stick of Judah, would be sadly deficient in one of its most important features, and, as the word of God, a failure. But if the book is what it purports to be, then the word of God to Judah and to Ephraim alike is verified, and they become one in the hand of the Israel of God to the confounding of false doctrine and in the building up of the kingdom of God in these last days; and "what God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

And when the people say, "What is the need of this, and what is to follow?" say unto them, "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather thee on every side, and bring them into their own land"—the very thing the Lord has been bringing to pass ever since the publication of the Book of Mormon in 1830, not even excepting the late Russian persecution of the house of Judah. Again, "it is written" by Isaiah:—

Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field [after the coming forth of a book]? . . . And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed. And the book is delivered unto him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned.—Isa. 29: 17, 12, 13.

In the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon it is a notable fact that a small portion of the book was copied in the original characters and sent to Professor Anthon, of New York, and he pronounced them genuine Egyptian characters, and said he would translate the book if it was delivered unto him. Upon being told that the book was sealed and could not be delivered unto him, he said, "I cannot read a book that is sealed." The unlearned man, Joseph Smith, was then directed to read the book, but he acknowledged his ignorance and inability to read the characters, whereupon the book was translated by the gift and power of God, in exact fulfillment of the prophecy in Isaiah 29: 9-17. And did it lack this important feature, the manner in which no other book has ever been produced on the earth, it would be sufficient ground for its rejection. But being fulfilled together with the fact that it was taken from the ground, as a buried relic or history of a former chosen people of God, prophesied of in both the sacred record that demands such a work as its compliment, and also made mention of in the coming book in such a manner as to completely harmonize with the foregoing record, the Bible, it must at once address itself to the unprejudiced mind as being one of the most important and peculiar books of the age.

The judgments and mercy of God upon the posterity of his chosen people are prophesied of in Isaiah 29: 4:—

And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust.

This declaration is corroborated in the eighty-fifth Psalm:—

Truth [the word of God] shall spring out of the ground.

In Isaiah 5: 26-30 we read that God will "lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss unto them from the end of the earth. And this is to take place in the last days, as will be seen in verse 30: "And if one look unto the land, behold darkness and sorrow, and the light is darkened in the heaven thereof."

This is more clearly portrayed in the Book of Mormon itself:—

And now my beloved brethren, farewell, all those who are of the house of Israel, and all ye ends of the earth. I speak unto you, as the voice of one crying from the dust. Farewell until that great day shall come; and you that will not partake of the goodness of God, and respect the words of the Jews, and also my words, and the words that shall proceed forth out of the mouth of the Lamb of God, behold, I bid you an everlasting farewell, for these words shall condemn you at the last day.—Page 111, 112.

And the Lord shall say unto him that shall read the words that shall be delivered him, . . . I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people; yea, a marvelous work, and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise and learned shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent shall be hid. . . . I will shew unto the children of men that it is not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field; and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest.—Ibid. p. 101.

And it shall come to pass that the Lord God shall bring forth unto you, the words of a book, and they shall be the words of them which have slumbered. . . . But the book shall be delivered unto a man, and he shall deliver the words of the book, which are the words of those who have slumbered in the dust; and he shall deliver these words unto another; but the words which are sealed he shall not deliver, neither shall he deliver the book.—Ibid. p. 100.

It is a remarkable fact that when the Book of Mormon was published in 1830 (bringing to light these two prophecies) that the land of Palestine (Lebanon) was considered almost as a desert; but shortly after the coming forth of the book the "early and latter rains" returned, and Lebanon is already esteemed as a "fruitful field," in striking fulfillment of the prophecy, both as to the mysterious advent of the book, the only corroborating testimony as a competent witness and the welding link in the chain of prophetic evidence; and at the same time the herald of returning fruitfulness to Palestine after centuries of barrenness.

A CRITICISM ON "THOUGHTS ON THE GATHERING."

"A COMMON SENSE VIEW."

THE article above referred to says:—

Two kinds of people will doubtless be first to gather to the regions round about. One class are the most spiritual ones in the church . . . whose hearts are pained to behold the wickedness around them. . . . The other class are those who cannot agree with their neighbors, . . . but quarrel over trifles.

The writer then proceeds to designate these latter ones as those who indulge in "slander, evil surmisings, fault-finding, back-biting, worldly pleasure, and impatience."

God knows that this is a true report; but of the first class he says:—

But the fire represents the first class who are too fiery. Having more spirituality than wisdom. . . . There never could be strife or contention with only one party concerned, etc.

He then proceeds to speak of "the most spiritual ones in the church" as religious zealots. Now, dear brother, and readers, do you not see where this kind of reasoning leads to? Can you imagine a neighborhood where none reside except slanderers, evil surmisers, fault-finders, back-biters—those who are impatient and lovers of worldly pleasure, and who expect perfection in every one except themselves, and find only peace in such a community? Will it of necessity take a few of "the most spiritual ones in the church" to stir up strife and bring out all these evils spoken of in this community? Do you think that God's Spirit promised unto us—the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost—will give us any less wisdom? Is there danger of the Spirit that was promised to guide into all truth making us "too fiery?" Then shall we make the distinction that says that one class in the church is "the most spiritual" one; "those who cannot agree with their neighbors, saints, or others," and still another class "the true saint," who comes last into these "regions round about"?

Are we to understand that because Paul spoke in tongues more than all the others that he had any less wisdom? Yes, as viewed to-day, perhaps he lacked, as he did not keep out of persecution but finally gave his life for the truth that he "contended for." While "wisdom is the principal thing," yet I know of no source of wisdom as available and sure to the saint of to-day as that which was promised—"the Spirit;" neither do I believe that this Spirit will ever lead us into contentions otherwise than to reprove the world (and the church) of sin; and Christ said that the world hated him because he reproveth the world of sin, or words to that effect. The Spirit of God will never prompt us to "try to get into Moses' seat," neither will the "most spiritual ones in the church" be found trying to usurp the power or authority in this work, although this very spirituality may be the means of detecting and thus antagonizing these evil doers, and so bringing their wrath and accusations upon the heads of "the most spiritual ones."

And I want to ask further, Can we who go out preaching that "ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost" afford to speak of those to whom this promise has been fulfilled in this slighting manner? Shall we discredit those whom God designs so to bless and then wonder and mourn that the saints have "quenched the Spirit"? God forbid. While we are to "try the spirits," let us still pray to God that he will pour out his Spirit upon us. And I do not mean only upon the ministers, but "would God that all God's people were prophets" and had this "testimony," that the dross might be burned up by this fire unquenchable.

Praying God that he will give us more of this Spirit and the "wisdom that is first pure, then peaceable," I am,

Your brother in Christ,

A. M. CHASE.

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Conference met at Moorhead, Iowa, September 5, at eleven a. m., G. M. Scott president, C. Derry assistant, and A. M. Fyrando secretary. Reports of Woodbine, Missouri Valley, Persia, and Little Sioux branches read. Ministry reporting: Elders C. Derry, J. C. Crabb, J. W. Wight, F. Hansen, D. R. Chambers, A. M. Fyrando, William Cowlishaw, S. B. Kibler, O. Case, G. M. Scott, D. A. Hutchings, M. Jensen, W. R. Davison, J. C. Johnson, George Outhouse, R. Farmer, and A. Johnson; Priests R. A. Ballantyne, F. E. Cohrt, Edmund Hall; Teachers E. C. Outhouse, H. J. Marthéna, James Case. Following questions were referred to the conference and answered. (1) Is it necessary for a member or officer moving from one branch to another to produce a letter of removal? (2) Would a portion of a branch isolated from the main body have the right to appoint an officer to preside over their prayer meetings? These were answered by the following resolutions: Resolved, (1) that it is the sense of this conference that a letter of removal should be presented; (2) that only under the direction of the branch officials. The recommendation of Union Center branch, requesting the ordination of Ole Amundson to office of priest, was received and he was ordained by A. M. Fyrando and G. M. Scott. Preaching during session by James Donaldson, C. Derry, and A. M. Fyrando. On motion adjournment was had to meet at Little Sioux, first Saturday and Sunday in December.

Conference convened with the Delano branch, Saturday and Sunday, September 19, 20; W. E. Summerfield in the chair, C. P. Faul secretary. Branch reports: German Stewartsville 71. Pleasant Grove 88. Delano 107. St. Joseph 342. Stewartsville 113. Kingston 106. DeKalb 45. Wakenda 50. Elders: J. M. Terry baptized 8, W. Kinney, F. C. Graham, T. T. Hinderks, M. M. Turpen, Wm. Lewis, W. E. Summerfield, A. W. Head baptized 1, J. T. Kinnaman baptized 5, T. J. Mauzey, D. J. Flanders, L. L. Babbitt, J. C. Elvert, Ben Dice baptized 1, C. P. Faul baptized 6; Priests Charles Householder, William Duncan; Teachers Robert Garlich, M. F. Beebee, J. F. Friend; Deacon W. W. Head. Committee appointed on the matter which came up for consideration at last conference in regard to Dr. W. C. Hamilton reported. Report adopted, committee continued. Committee on the Pointer vs. Burlington-Winning matter reported. Report adopted, committee discharged. The district tent was placed in the care of the president and vice president. Present district officers reelected and sustained, together with Bishop's agent, for the ensuing quarter. It was resolved that the president and vice president confer with J. R. Lambert, missionary in charge, as to the advisability of organizing a branch at Spickard, also at Gospel Hill church, near Maysville, Missouri. Brn. M. M. Turpen and J. M. Terry were the speakers. Adjourned to meet with the German branch, Saturday, December 12, 10:30 a. m.

POTTAWATTAMIE.

Conference met at Carson, Iowa, September 5; John P. Carlile presiding, assisted by Senterlow Butler; J. Charles Jensen secretary. All the branches in the district were represented by delegates and statistical reports. Bishop's Agent Carlile reported: Received since last report $180.75; disbursed to the ministry $160; poor $13; due agent $6.76; on hand $0.99. Audited and found correct. The Carson church building committee reported: Total cost of building and seating $907.24; cash donated $559.04; labor donated, estimated $150; lot donated, estimated $100; leaving $98.20 assumed by the committee, which, with heating apparatus still needed, at a cost of about $40, leaves $138.20 still to be raised. The request by last conference to the branches met with response from only three with an aggregate of $7.04. The committee again appeals to the members and friends in the district to come to its aid that this obligation may be reduced. Please forward means to the treasurer, S. Wood, Carson, Iowa. This property has been deeded to the church and the deed recorded. Owing to the expected departure of H. N. Hansen for Utah, he was released from this committee and J. P. Carlile substituted. J. P. Carlile reporting $5.60 remaining from collections for expense of delegates to last General Conference, it was ordered into the general church fund. The following was adopted without dissent: Whereas, the treasury of the church is low in funds, and whereas, Bro. H. N. Hansen is already in this field, and is badly needed, and can be kept without additional expense, therefore be it resolved that the Pottawattamie district petition the missionary in charge to endeavor to secure the continuance of Bro. H. N. Hansen in this district for the remainder of this conference year. The submission and district president were authorized to provide for two days' meeting if thought best. Elder T. W. Williams was requested to look after the work in Carson. On request from Council Bluffs the district president was authorized to appoint a court of elders for that branch. All elders and priests in the district were invited to labor under the direction of the district president. On separate motions the following were sustained: John P. Carlile president and Bishop's agent, J. Charles Jensen secretary, Elders T. W. Williams and Senterlow Butler missionaries in the district.

Adjourned to meet at Hazel Dell, at 10:30 a. m., November 28.

For the work,

T. A. HOUGAS, Supt.

The convention of the Sunday School Association of the Spring River district convenes Monday following district conference, October 19, at 9:30 a. m., at Blendsville, Missouri. Will the Sunday school superintendents please see that the reports of their respective schools are on hand in time, and that delegates are appointed. The same rule as last quarter, in regard to program, is good this quarter. Remember that each school prepares and chooses its own program, and committee. Try and see if your school cannot win the banner for best program. Come one and all.

MIRTIE B. BROWN, Sec.

The Sunday school association of the Nodaway district will convene at Guilford, Missouri, on Friday, October 16, at two p. m. There will be another session in the evening at seven o'clock. Let all the schools in the district be well represented at this our first meeting. Bro. T. A. Hougas, superintendent of the General Association, will be with us and many matters of interest relative to Sunday school work will be discussed.

E. S. FANNON, Dist. Supt.

Miscellaneous Department.

SANTA CRUZ REUNION.

The fact that many of the saints arrived on the grounds from one to two days prior to the opening of the reunion, gave evidence that they had been anticipating a grand time; and conversation with different ones revealed the fact that from some cause, many, if not all, were expecting an unusually successful reunion. The desire uppermost in each heart seemed to be that we should have a time of rejoicing and receive such instruction from God's servants and his Spirit as would greatly comfort and strengthen and make it a time long to be remembered.

On Friday morning a goodly number assembled in the pavilion in business session with Joseph Burton as temporary chairman. Brn. Price, Putney, and Parkin were chosen presidents of the reunion, and authorized to appoint the speakers and determine the order of the meetings. Bro. J. W. Gilbert was chosen secretary and reporter; Sr. Patterson organist and chorister with power to choose her assistants. A committee was appointed to meet trains and take care of arrivals. The reunion indorsed the branch locating committee, Srs. Clapp and Moser. The reunion ordered one thousand invitation cards to be printed and distributed over the city. This closed the business portion of the session, and the chair called for short speeches from different ones. Bro. and Sr. Devore were called upon to take seats upon the platform and give their experience in the work in the Society Islands mission. Each spoke at length of the work and its outlook in the islands of the sea, and in a way that convinced all of their sincerity and love for the work and those brethren and sisters in the islands with whom they have labored for nearly six years. Sr. Devore's earnest and touching rehearsal of her experiences and sacrifices left but few dry eyes. All were intensely interested. Bro. Gilbert also talked upon the Island work. In the afternoon there was a prayer service, Brn. Price and Putney in charge.

Up to the present the speakers have been Elders L. R. Devore, J. W. Gilbert, Thomas Daley, D. L. Harris, J. F. Burton, J. B. Price, Joseph Luff, A. Haws, E. Holt, and Wm. Newton. The meetings are well attended. Many grand testimonies are given to the truthfulness of the work, prominent among which is that of our aged sister Cooper, from Santa Rosa, who said that she had been a member of this church for sixty-three years, and in a short time will be eighty-seven years old. She said she asked Sr. Emma Smith if Joseph ever had more than one wife or believed or taught polygamy, and she said, "No."

During the first few days of the reunion the weather was cold and the forenoons foggy, but now the weather is ideal and it is having a good effect upon the campers, and all are enjoying themselves. Bro. Luff's health is not so good as we would like; however, he has been able by the help of God to deliver two excellent sermons that cheered and strengthened the saints, and made them feel thankful indeed that we have living apostles in our day, "for the perfecting of the saints," "for the edifying of the body of Christ."

If the reunion continues to grow better at the present rate, the desires of all will have been fully realized.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Northern Minnesota District:—Our conference will be held in the town of Maine, at Bro. William Barnhard's schoolhouse. All are cordially invited to come. This change is made for reasons over which we have no control. October 10, 11 is the date.

I. N. ROBERTS, Pres.

Conference of the Fremont district will convene at Plum Creek church, near Thurman, Iowa, Saturday, October 10, at ten a. m. The brethren will please keep in mind their reports, also branch reports, and mission reports, and send them in time to Bro. William Leeka, Thurman, Iowa. The Sunday school convention will begin on Thursday evening at 7:30. This requires you to come but one day earlier to get all of both convention and conference, so come for both. A profitable time is anticipated. See program in another column.

T. A. HOUGAS, Sec.

The conference of the Massachusetts district will convene in Fall River, Massachusetts, October 10, at 2:30 p. m., in saints' chapel, on Clafin Street. Take electric car for Flint Village.

F. M. SHEEHY, Pres.

MYRON C. FISHER, Sec.

The Massachusetts district conference will convene October 10, 11, 1896, 2:30 p. m., Clafin Street chapel, Fall River, Massachusetts. Let all come prepared for a good spiritual feast. Many of priesthood expected to be present, among which are Elders E. L. Kelley, W. H. Kelley, and H. J. Davison. Branch clerks and the priesthood will please take notice that resolution was passed at last session, that all reports were to be forwarded to the district clerk at least ten days prior to convening of conferences. Address me at 9 Robin Hood Street, Dorchester, Massachusetts.

MYRON C. FISHER, Clerk.

BORN.

WASSON.—To Mr. Elmer and Sister Ida Wasson, September 5, 1895, a daughter named Eva Grace. Blessed August 1, 1896, by Elders T. A. and D. Hougas.

BARTLETT.—To J. A. and Sister Grace Bartlett, of McPaul, Missouri, July 5, 1896, a son. Named Juleas Adelph. Blessed by Elders H. Kemp and W. D. Ledingham.

GRAVES.—Near Troy, Kansas, July 29, 1896, to Mr. William D. and Sister Etta J. Graves, a daughter; named Gladys Muriel, and blessed at Fanning, Kansas, September 20, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and P. Cadwell.

DIED.

MOORE.—Sr. Martha J. Moore, wife of Mr. Henry Moore, and daughter of Elder John

Lambert, of Montrose, Iowa. She was born April 11, 1877; baptized by Elder James McKiernan, June 3, 1888; died September 13, 1896. Since her marriage she has resided in Burlington. She was visiting at her old home when she was stricken down. She was a woman of splendid principles and her only desire seemed to be to do right. The bereaved ones are father, mother, sisters, brothers, husband, and a babe nine months old. May peace and blessing such as God alone can bestow rest upon those that mourn. Services from the saints' church, Montrose, in charge of Priest D. Tripp; sermon by Elder J. R. Evans.

KILE.—Elizabeth Kile was born October 13, 1866, at Montrose, Iowa. Died September 2, 1896, at Jacksonville, Illinois. Was baptized by Elder J. F. McDowell, July 4, 1880, at Montrose. She was the daughter of Bro. L. McLinthen. Besides her husband, she leaves father, mother, three sisters, two brothers, and an adopted daughter to mourn. Funeral services at the saints' church, Montrose, in charge of Priest Daniel Tripp, sermon by Elder J. R. Evans.

POTTER.—September 13, 1896, Elder William Potter, aged 79 years, 9 months, 3 days. Funeral on the 15th; sermon by Elder C. A. Parkin. Bro. Potter was baptized in the days of Joseph the Martyr, and held an elder's license given by him, of which he was very proud. He was a great sufferer, having been confined to bed since the early part of June. He bore his suffering with fortitude becoming a saint. He was a dearly beloved husband and leaves a devoted wife. He was the sunshine of her life. He died in the hope of a glorious resurrection.

HARGER.—At Algansee, Michigan, Andrew Harger, eldest son of Sr. Lucinda Corless (now deceased), and brother of George Harger, of Lamoni, Iowa, aged 47 years. He leaves three brothers and one sister, and many friends to mourn his departure; also two little nieces whom he cared for. He did not belong to any church, but was one of the honorable men of the earth and respected by all who knew him. Who shall say that he will not be rewarded?

ROSS.—At Cow Creek, Kansas, August 7, Rebecca Ross, wife of Melvin Ross. Was born December 6, 1818; joined the church in the year 1838, and cast her lot with the Reorganization at Gallatin Valley in the year 1866. Sr. Ross was confined to her bed the last three years, but she never murmured. Her faith was unshaken in the restored gospel. Her aged companion, three sons, two daughters, seventeen grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren were present at the funeral. Services at the home of her son-in-law, Bro. John Thomas.

CRAVENS.—Azal P. Cravens, was born to Bro. Elkama and Sr. Rebecca Cravins July 20, 1896, at Wakenda, Ray County, Missouri. Blessed at the Wakenda church September 14, 1896, by J. M. Terry and James N. Cato. This is a grandchild of Father Cravens of renown in that region.

J. M. TERRY.

HINDERKS.—Hulda Hinderks, Stewartsville, Missouri; born February 21, 1879, died

August 26, 1896, aged 17 years, 6 months, and 5 days. Was baptized June 29, 1890. Just before the final departure a heavenly vision was presented to her in which she saw the heavenly ones ready to accompany her to the beyond. Funeral services conducted by Wm. Lewis, sermon by T. W. Chatburn from Job 14: 14 to a large concourse of people at the German church, after which the remains were laid quietly to rest in the cemetery close by to await the resurrection of the pure and the good.

GARNER.—Bro. John H. Garner died August 22, 1896, at Santa Ana, California. Deceased was born January 26, 1850, in Ogden, Utah, and baptized March 13, 1869, by W. W. Blair. Funeral sermon was preached in the Baptist church, Santa Ana, by Elder A. Carmichael. The overflowing house attested the fact of the esteem in which the brother was held by his fellow citizens. At the time of his death the brother was city councilman from the fourth ward of Santa Ana City. As a mark of respect the business houses were closed during the funeral sermon. The brother was interred by the Maccabees and Foresters, of which orders he was a member.

MCCLAIN.—At Coalgate, Indian Territory, September 5, 1896, Sr. Amanda S., wife of Deacon H. T. McClain. She was born in Ashville, North Carolina, September 22, 1847, so was within 17 days of 50 years. Was a faithful member of the Campbellite order some fifteen years; but on hearing the fullness of the restored gospel soon obeyed. Was baptized and confirmed by Elder J. D. Erwin in Arkansas, 1891.

SHAW.—John W. Shaw was born May 6, 1827, in Cumberton, Dunburtonshire, Scotland. Came to America June 20, 1868. Lived seven years in Arnot, Pennsylvania, when he moved west to Scranton, Kansas, and died August 7, 1896. Was baptized June 13, 1893, by R. L. Ware, and has been firm in the faith of the Reorganized Church. Services in saints' church, Scranton, were conducted by Elder J. B. Jarvis, assisted by Elders J. A. Davis and William Menzies.

HOLDSWORTH.—At St. Louis, Missouri, September 7, 1896, John William Holdsworth. Was born in the city of Leeds, Yorkshire, England, April 1, 1857. Came to America in 1863. Was married June 16, 1881, to Miss Margaret Davidson, who, with the three children—daughters, survive and mourn their sudden and great loss. He was an honest man, a man of good report as husband, father, citizen, and friend. Though not a member of the church or of any church, his wife a Catholic, yet our service was preferred and requested. A large concourse of relatives and friends were in attendance at funeral services which were conducted by Elder M. H. Bond, and with service at Bellfontane cemetery by the Knights of Pythias, of which order he was a member.

HEATH.—Bro. Joseph B. Heath was born January 10, 1822, in the town of Fox, Pennsylvania, and died September 1, 1896, at his home in Frankfort, Wisconsin. He was married to Elizabeth Weller, March 10, 1850, and to them were born seven children, six of whom are now living. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church July, 1852, at Fox, Pennsylvania, by Elder Rowland Cobb. Funeral sermon by Elder A. V. Closson.

ALFORD.—On July 23, 1896, Alma W. Alford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alford, of Worthington, Minnesota. The deceased was just completing his seventeenth year when disease laid its wasting hand upon him. He was laid to rest in the beautiful Worthington cemetery, on Saturday evening, July 25. His early departure is mourned by many friends, both young and old. For one who has suffered from disease, death came as a minister of mercy and relief.

MILLER.—Elizabeth Miller, familiarly known as Aunt Betsy, daughter of John and Elizabeth Southern, at Millersburg, Illinois, September 13, 1896. She was born in Giles County, Virginia, March 23, 1820. With her parents moved to Tipton, Iowa, in 1840. In January, 1841, she was married to Floyd Duncan and the same year they came to Duncan Township, Mercer County, Illinois. To them were born three children. It was but a few years until the beloved husband and father was called to rest. On August 20, 1848, she was married to Michael N. Miller. To them were born seven children of whom two preceded her to the spirit land. She was baptized March 11, 1863, by J. W. Gillen, and has lived a patient faithful Christian life to the day of her death. Funeral service was held September 14, 1896, at 2:30 p. m. in the saints' chapel at Millersburg, Illinois, James Terry in charge. Elder James McKiernan delivered the address. Interment in the Millersburg cemetery.

AN IRISH GENTLEMAN.

The seats were all full and one was occupied by a rough-looking Irishman. At one of the stations a couple of well-bred and intelligent looking young ladies came in to procure seats, but seeing no vacant ones were about to go into another car when Patrick rose hastily and offered them his seat with evident pleasure. "But you will have no seat for yourself," responded one of the ladies with a smile, and with truest politeness hesitating to accept it. "Never ye mind that," said the Hibernian, "yer welcome to it. I'd ride upon the cowketcher any toime from here till New York for a smoile from such gintlemanly ladies," and retreated into the next car amid the applause of those who witnessed the incident. Perhaps the forgoing hint to many ladies will show that a trifle of politeness has often a happy effect.—Selected.

Dr. Benjamin Labaree, for many years a missionary in Persia, writes to The Evangelist of the new Shah of Persia: "The mild disposition of the new sovereign, his distaste for the cares of government, and his lack of government, and his lack of vigorous, physical health do not augur favorably for a reign of prosperity like that of his father's." Rev. S. G. Wilson writes of him: "He is a man of faith, and free from the nationalistic tendencies of some of the ruling class. He is devout in his fulfillment of religious rites, and a total abstainer from intoxicants. He has a humane and sympathetic nature. He is a friend of education."

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

And still the wonder grows how the Chicago Times-Herald, a paper of large circulation and necessitating quick mechanical handling therefore, can be made so attractive in appearance. It is a pleasure to look at it, a privilege to read it, and it is doubtful if the poet Keats had in his mind anything more inspiring when he said that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. JAMBERT.

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

The chapters contain subheadings for ready reference.

Indexed; 126 pages. In paper covers 25 cents; in cloth 40 cents.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

CONTEST BETWEEN CHURCH AND STATE IN HUNGARY.

FOR quite a time past the relations between the Roman Catholic Church and the political authorities in Hungary have been strained, and a rupture could be expected at any moment. The liberal policy of the state, especially in reference to the control of the schools and to civil marriage, aroused a decided protest on the part of the Church people. Now the crisis has come and the Church has thrown down the gantlet to the political authorities. The Vienna Vaterland was the first to publish the program of the Vatican Congregation in its aggressive warfare now to be waged in Hungary. The leading data of this official pronouncement to the Hungarian bishops are the following:—

“The bishops are to concern themselves particularly about the life and habits of the clergy and see to it that these are model in every respect. Catholic societies are to be founded throughout the kingdom. The teachers of religion in the gymnasia, or colleges, are to show special zeal in teaching the youth the doctrines of the Catholic Church and have their pupils connect themselves with the congregations. Special efforts are to be put forth that also the teachers of secular branches impart their instruction in the spirit of the Catholic Church. The bishops are to insist upon the right of selecting textbooks also for the secular branches of study. They are also instructed to use all their power to get control of the University of Pest and make this a Catholic institution. In the meanwhile lectures are to be delivered every Sunday to the academic youth of the University in which special attention is to be paid to those doctrines of the Catholic Church which are most frequently attacked, especially if such attacks should be made public lectures. Academic societies with pronounced Catholic tendencies are to be established, and these shall coöperate for the welfare of the Church. False ideas concerning patriotism are to be corrected in harmony with the teachings of the Church. The Hungarian language is to be introduced in non-Hungarian sections only where the bishops and priests are convinced that this will be to the welfare of the Church. Throughout the country Catholic papers are to be published and spread. Every representative and member of the Roman Catholic Church is to do his best to carry out these orders; any laxness or carelessness in this regard is to be punished by the ecclesiastical authorities.”

Comments on this ecclesiastical declaration by Hungarian and other European papers agree that it is a bold defiance of the state authorities and portends a greater struggle than would seem to be the case at a superficial glance. The Frankfurt Zeitung, an exceptionally well-informed journal, says;—

“Strictly to carry out the injunctions of this decree would divide Hungary into two camps engaged in a life-and-death struggle with each other, namely, a Catholic-Rumanian party and a Hungarian-Protestant party. Every single item in the decree is fraught with danger to the state and to Protestantism in Hungary. Even that point which seems the most harmless, namely, the injunction that bishops are to watch over the lives and morals of their priests, means much for Hungary. Clerical fanaticism has hitherto not been thriving very noticeably in Hungary, because the priests have heretofore not been hindered by their liberal congregations from living with their wives and children. Cases are known where Catholic priests have not hesitated to appear on the streets with their wives and children, and no particular offense was taken.”

Other papers draw attention particularly to the demand that all of the educational interests are to be put under the control of the church. It will be remembered that this was the bone of contention in the great Kulturkampf between Bismarck and the Vatican in Germany that was waged for nearly a decade and only ended with the recall of the famous Falk laws. The demand that the University of Pest shall be made entirely Catholic on the plea that it was so originally will be fought to the bitter end. The determination that the church authorities will retard the introduction of the Hungarian language in non-Hungarian sections of the country is a direct declaration of war on a pet policy of the state. The Zeitung already quoted says:—

“There is no doubt that the state will answer the challenge of the church and will fight the decree all along the line.”

A new Kulturkampf in Hungary is thus seemingly a certainty.—Literary Digest.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days,—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

THE EVANELIA.

THERE is little room to doubt the rumor concerning the loss, by foundering at sea, of the Gospel Boat, for which so many of the saints, young and old, contributed so freely of their moneys to build and equip. She has paid the final tribute of those "who go down to the sea in ships." It is a great loss to the church aside from the dollars and cents of her valuation.

The following from the Post, of San Francisco, September 24, will give the news, so far as we have it:—

News has been received here of the loss of the schooner Evanelia.

The brig Tropic Bird which arrived here on Monday brought information that the missionary vessel foundered at sea in longitude 147 west, latitude 14: 30 south, on July 26th last.

The Evanelia was constructed on the coast about two years ago by the Josephites, disciples of the Mormon Joseph Smith, for a missionary tour of the South Sea Islands. The building of the boat and fitting her out cost about $40,000, most of which was contributed in small sums by the members of the society who afterward, it would seem, had considerable trouble over their missionary venture.

It was charged that after he had been in the South Seas for some time Captain McGrath of the trim little craft did not direct his attention exclusively to the conversion of the island natives to the Josephite doctrines, but with several of those on board the schooner entered into the trading business, which proved quite profitable to those concerned.

According to the advices brought by the Tropic Bird, the Evanelia was sailing between Pomuto and Tahiti on the 19th of July last when she encountered a severe storm which lasted for several days.

Early on the morning of the 26th of July the Evanelia became helpless and began to fill rapidly with water.

Realizing their danger Captain McGrath, his crew and the missionaries took to a small boat and had hardly got clear of the disabled schooner before the latter sank out of sight.

The occupants of the boat floated about on the ocean for about twenty-six hours, when they were picked up by a south-bound ship and safely landed at Tahiti.

So hasty had been their escape from the foundering schooner that the boat's occupants had no time to secure water or provisions, and they were in great distress when picked up.

For some unexplained reason every possible effort was made to keep the fact of the Evanelia's loss from reaching this country.

Of course the saints will be surprised to learn that the Evanelia cost them so much as stated by the Post, when the Bishop has given the cost of boat and fitting out at about five thousand dollars; but newspapers frequently make mistakes. There are two at least in the Post account; that of the cost of the boat, and that of the attempt to keep the report from reaching the United States. There can hardly be any good reason why the loss of the vessel should not be reported by Bro. McGrath and those with him, who came so near going down with it.

When it was talked of to make the Evanelia a trading vessel, the Presidency thought it not best so to do, and Bishop Kelley being of the same mind, wrote to the brethren not to do it. But his instruction reached the Islands too late, the arrangement by which the vessel became a trader having been already consummated before Bishop Kelley's letter could have reached the brethren there.

We do not know the particulars of the foundering of the Evanelia, and so do not speculate about it; being contented to bear with the church, with as good grace as is possible, the loss and regret which such sad ending of the mission of the Gospel Boat will inevitably inflict.

We counsel the utmost patience, and the exercise of that excellent virtue known as faith which "endureth all things" and is steadfast.

WOODBINE REUNION.

THE late Reunion at Woodbine was one of the best and most successful ever held by the Reorganized Church. Forty-one were baptized, but this does not measure the benefits resulting to the church. The extreme unity of spirit which pervaded the meeting from the opening service to the close marks an era of spiritual enjoyment never surpassed by the church.

The preaching was uniformly good, the prayers full of desires for good, the testimonies edifying and strong, the song service joyous and full of pleasure to all.

The weather was wet and cold the first two days, after which it was pleasant, and the closing day was an ideal western "fine day."

The attendance of the saints was not quite so large as last year and the year before at Logan, but the attendance of those outside of the church was larger, and far more attentive. The order was good, respect being shown generally by all to the rules of good behavior, as people should do at such meetings.

The opportunities of the location where the big tent was pitched were better than it was supposed by many that they would be, the ground being as dry as any other spot could have been this rainy fall. The spaces for the big tent and the tents for campers were quite level, and in condition to be easily drained in case of a hard rain. The water supply was excellent, and the facilities for obtaining it good, for the use of both campers and for their teams. We regret that rumors had been spread by some that the grounds selected by committee were low, overflowed, and wet, which were not true. The rumor, while not true, kept many from making an effort to be present. We regret the rumor more because we had already stated in HERALD that we had visited the grounds and were satisfied they would prove to be sufficient and suitable for the meeting. This statement is verified by the fact that the vote to meet again at Woodbine was practically unanimous, two only voting "No."

For the good done we are thankful. More people heard the efforts of the elders at this reunion than at any other held during the last five years, as we fully believe. Some two thousand five hundred or three thousand listened to the sermons on Sunday, the 27th, all three services being largely attended.

GENERAL MILES ON THE INDIAN.

MAJOR GENERAL NELSON A. MILES, the present commander of the United States army, and noted Indian fighter, has written a book involving the leading events in which he participated during his eventful military career, in which he devotes considerable attention to the Indian.

Inasmuch as the Indian problem has been a vexation to the nation, and as the Indian has been adjudged by many as unworthy the efforts to civilize and redeem him, the testimony of General Miles, annexed herewith, will prove interesting to and worthy of note by all who are hopeful concerning the future of the Red Man. We quote from a review of his book, published in the Chicago Tribune of September 10.

To those who believe that the Indian has been unjustly dealt with and that there is much to be admired in the Indian character, General Miles' tributes to his worth will prove valuable and confirming. His lengthy experience in fighting the Indian has been such as to place the Indian in such light that to do justice he is both obliged and strongly prompted to speak favorably of him.

William Penn found no difficulty in maintaining friendly relations with the son of the forest. While it may not justly be claimed that all who had occasion to deal with him would have found him peaceably disposed, it is true that the necessities awakening him to self-preservation, broken treaties, and other fraudulent practices of the white man, made the Indian worse than he was when found by the Spaniards and others of the white race.

The Book of Mormon and the revelations to the church promise a final future of good to the Lamanite—the Indian. To attain this there must be inherent good in him, and of this and of some of the means employed to educate him the review of General Miles' book speaks:—

Over half of the volume deals with the North American Indians, their characteristics, their relations with the whites, the author's campaigns among Indians, the present problems which the presence of the Indians in American civilization present, and the probability of trouble with Indians in the future.

GOOD WORDS FOR THE INDIAN.

In reviewing the character of the North-American Indian, of whom few are better qualified to write than he, Gen. Miles says:—

"He has been condemned as a malignant fiend, incapable of the better impulses of humanity, and unworthy of admission to the brotherhood of man.

"I have no sympathy with the view, which has been crystalized into the brutal epigram falsely attributed to Gen. Sherman, "The only good Indian is a dead Indian.

"I hope, before I am through with this work, I shall be able to show much that is good may be said of the Indian. I shall speak of him as a diplomatist, a statesman, and a warrior. I shall, to some extent, describe his industry, his music, and his art, for there is much of art in his decoration, his blending of colors, his pottery, his feather work, and his bead, basket, and blanket work."

The systems of government, domestic affairs, and religious beliefs and observances of the various tribes of Indians are fully treated and illustrated, a number of the pictures being by Fredrick Remington.

The Indian uprising in Minnesota during the civil war, and other engagements with Indians about the same time are treated mostly through quotations from, and references to the works of other writers. Gen. Miles, however, goes on record with reference to what is known as the Chilean massacre, or Sand Creek massacre in the following language:—

"The Sand Creek massacre is perhaps the foulest and most unjustifiable crime in the annals of America. It was planned by and executed under the personal direction of J. N. Chiverton, Colonel of the First Colorado Cavalry, on the 27th of November, 1864, at a point in Colorado about forty miles from Fort Lyon. The details of the massacre are too revolting to be enumerated, and I dismiss the matter with a statement for the benefit of those who would care to look into the details that three letters from Helen Hunt Jackson appeared in the New York Tribune, January 31, February 22, and February 28, 1880, reviewing the official testimony, and presenting such facts therefrom as could be printed. But for that horrible butchery it is a fair presumption that all the subsequent wars with the Cheyennes and the Arapahoes and their kindred tribes might possibly have been averted."

The history of the important campaigns of the United States soldiery against Indians of various tribes is fully entered into, involving a description of the condition of the country at the time, its stage of development, and the condition of the people who were then pioneers in a new land.

The history of the origin of the Indian school at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, is given in the narration of an incident of the campaign against the Comanches in 1874, in which the author says, referring to the passage of a band of Indians through Fort Leavenworth:—

"One of the principal chiefs asked me to take his son, young Minimic, and teach him the ways of the white men. I appreciated the sentiment, but at the same time I realized the futility of trying to accomplish any good results with but one Indian, and without any system for general improvement. Thinking the matter over I was prompted to urge upon the government as strongly as possible that the Indian youths be given an opportunity to improve their condition, and in my report of that expedition and its results I urged an entire change in the system of government and management of these Indians. Wherever the suggestion has been tried it has been eminently successful. Out of Capt. Pratt's judicious management of this body of wild, savage murderers has grown the great industrial Indian school at Carlisle, Pennsylvania. The tribes from which the children have been taken to be educated have been benefited to an incalculable extent."

The following press item is opportune in this connection. It justifies General Miles' opinion of the Indian and affords additional ground for hope in the future progress of the remnants of that race:—

ASHLAND, Wis., Sept. 11.—This afternoon the Sioux and Chippewa Indians held their great peace jubilee. The deadly enemies of centuries past buried the hatchet and smoked the pipe of peace. The exact time and place of the ceremony was not generally known and there were few present except the one thousand Indians who had gathered for that purpose.

The Chippewas were headed by Chiefs Buffalo, Bashanakwad, Mikinak, and Wishkob, and the Sioux by Chiefs Rocky Elk, Flat Iron, and Bloody Bear.

Five hundred Chippewas, headed by their chief, and Lieut. W. A. Mercer, United States army, approached the tepees of the two hundred Sioux without any demonstration, carrying white flags. After shaking hands they delivered well-prepared orations through interpreters, couched in the ancient form of Indian diplomacy, but as the ceremony progressed they seemed to grow more earnest, throwing off all restraint.

A singular feature remarked by Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," who was a spectator, was that the Indians seemed to have for the time abandoned Indian customs and taken up the civilized methods of arbitration. They exchanged pipes and gave each other trinkets. Finally in the midst of a group of chiefs representing both tribes a little Chippewa boy of four and a Sioux maiden of three years plighted their troth.

The jubilee occurred near the tents of the Wild West Show, after the afternoon performance, and the flags of all nations floated about the Stars and Stripes in the foreground. Representatives of many different nations were present. The Indians sat for nearly an hour scarcely saying a word. When they left there was another hearty handshake all around; but nothing said.

Col. Cody declares that in all his experience with Indians he never saw them so much affected and dead in earnest. The peace jubilee occurred near the spot where many fierce battles were fought between these two powerful tribes a half century ago. Chief Wounded in the Knee of the Sioux had to leave as his father was killed by the Chippewas in the memorable campaign of 1842, and he seemed to be affected in recalling the event.

The jubilee effectually explodes the theory of Indian revengefulness in this generation at least. Lieut. Mercer called it "United the Yellow and the Yellow." It is believed the action of the peace offering to-day will soon be officially ratified by all of the tribes of the Sioux and Chippewa nations, and has created a rivalry between them in the progress of civilization.

A NOBLE AMBITION.

ALL men of noble instincts and sentiments are more or less ambitious to leave some mark in the world they have occupied, by which they shall be known, respected, or loved after they have done with life and its efforts. This ambition is laudable, and if the thing chosen to be done or said by them, by which their character, or reputation is impressed upon those around them, is creditable in itself, or productive of good to others in proportion to the ambition that prompts the word or deed, by so much will the memory of them remain after they are gone.

No more worthy desire, other than to "preach the word," can be entertained by anyone than to leave as a monument of enduring fame, an institution for the benefit of the aged, infirm, or unfortunate among men, or an institution of learning, an educational one. Measured by many things which men have done and said through which they have achieved renown as heroes and benefactors of mankind, and their praises been sung by those following after them, an institution where the rising men and women of the period may be helped to educate themselves preparatory to lives of honorable existence and occupancy among the citizenship of the state and world, a college, or other educational institution is among the noblest and best.

In order to keep in touch with the moving events for good among men, the church by its assembled representative men has given an opportunity for those who really wish to place their names in a monument of usefulness, to testify of them to after generations in an effectual way as having been moved by a spirit of philanthropy and regard for the good of mankind.

In thus presenting Graceland College, the work of the church, to the readers of the HERALD, we are prompted by two desires; one, to secure the means to finish the building and provide a fund for incidental running expenses; the other, to call the attention of the saints to the first opportunity offered to the church membership to enroll their names on the records of an educational enterprise suited to the needs and wishes of the people.

Armour, Rockefeller, Carnegie, and others of late renown, Johns Hopkins, Stephen Girard, and others of former times have added their thousands to found schools and colleges, libraries and universities, and secured the gratitude of many. We do not look for such great largesses as these men have bestowed; but we do hope there may be some who may have hundreds to place in such a work. The college needs instruments and books; a library has been started, and needs enlarging. It also needs an established fund for guaranteeing running expenses.

DISASTERS IN JAPAN.

IN connection with other signs of the times referred to in this issue, we note the following concerning recent disasters in Japan. We shall not apologize for devoting some space to brief notices of passing events. They are important, and need to be known that the predictions of the prophets and the developments of the latter days may be compared and comprehended—that the evidence supporting the statements of the sacred word may be seen and understood. Many of our readers do not have access to these important items, hence we refer to them, but briefly however:—

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 23.—The city of Kobe, Japan, was recently wiped out by a disastrous conflagration, and on August 26 floods, and storms, and earthquakes caused the loss of 2,500 lives and the destruction of millions of dollars' worth of property in Northern Japan. The steamer Doric brought news of catastrophes that have befallen the Midado's realm that are unprecedented in its history. In Gifu Prefecture 4,300 homes were blown down, and along the Haji-Gawa 400 persons lost their lives. The great flood was preceded by severe earthquakes. Then followed a downpour, such as has never before been experienced on the islands. The European residents were panic-stricken, and sought shelter on the high lands. The Minatogawa overflowed its banks at midnight of the 26th inst., and the waters invaded streets and fields, sweeping away 300 houses and drowning 200 persons at Kobe.

TORNADO, TIDAL WAVE, AND CLOUDBURST.

A DESTRUCTIVE West India storm struck the coast of Florida on the evening of Monday, September 28, and swept the entire peninsula and eastern portion of the State, destroying many lives, and property valued at millions of dollars. The town of Cedar Keys was almost totally destroyed, a tidal wave adding to the destructive force of the windstorm. Other towns were completely obliterated. The same storm struck Savannah, Georgia, and other points along the coast.

A cloudburst in Arizona the same date wrought havoc at Benson and elsewhere.

Floods at Staunton, Virginia, caused a lake to burst its banks and to overflow the town. Much property was destroyed and some lives lost.

We republish some news reports of the above. The peculiarly distressing character of these visitations and the terrible distress and ruin caused indicate the fearful conditions that such calamities are bringing upon the people. Truly "perilous times" have already come. The news item is but a brief statement of the ruin wrought:—

JACKSONVILLE, Florida, October 2.—Reliable news of the storm from the western part of Levy and Alachua Counties has just reached Jacksonville. Not less than two hundred families are left destitute.

Scores of injuries have been reported with over thirty fatalities in Levy County.

The town of Fannin has been destroyed with the exception of one small house. The town of Needmore was demolished. Every house at Yular, Judson, and Chiefland was destroyed with one or two exceptions, killing people of both the former places. The people of Bronson have issued an appeal for aid for the destitute.

Reports from Baker, Suwanee, Nassau, and Columbia Counties confirm the story of death and destruction. The death list has been increased by nearly a dozen.

Columbia County fared badly. All the country south of Lake City is devastated. . . .

At Lake Butler, further down the line, the destruction was almost as great. La Crosse was almost wiped out of existence. Numbers of injuries and fatalities are reported from the vicinities of these various localities, but the news is not of a definite character. Along the Florida Central and Peninsular, from Lake City to MacClenny, the damage was great, that section taking the center of the storm.

The cotton crop, or that portion of it still in the fields, is vastly damaged and in many places almost destroyed. Sugar cane everywhere is prostrated, and damage of every kind has resulted on every hand. Much stock and cattle were killed. It is said that there are twenty-two turpentine stills, with their equipments, camps, and teams, between Lake City and Cedar Keys, and not one of these will ever run another charge, all the timber being destroyed. This throws out of employment many people, leaves the mules idle, the camps deserted, operators ruined, and factories hit hard.

Exclusive of the hundreds of spongers supposed to have been drowned off Cedar Keys the death rate in the State proper bids fair to reach one hundred, and the property loss will run into the millions.

The people seem to be paralyzed by the calamity that has overtaken them, and this is reflected in the accounts sent in of the storm's work. In the majority of cases nothing like a detailed description is attempted, and in but few instances are the names of the dead given.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 2.—Reports received from Cedar Keys tell a story of great damage to property and loss of life there from fire and flood.

Bodies are being recovered from along the coast, and many fishermen who went out on Monday night have not been heard from since they left. It is feared that fatalities will exceed the number already reported. All the wharves at Cedar Keys were washed away, several houses were blown down, and six were destroyed by fire.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 1.—The worst of the tornado news from this city has been told. The number of deaths reported up to this time is twelve, and there will probably be no other bodies found. The city has recovered entirely from the blow and business is now going on without interruption.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH F. BURTON wrote from Santa Cruz, California, September 18:—

Our reunion is progressing beautifully; great unity, peaceful spirit, and happy saints, about eight to be baptized to-morrow. Bro. Luff fairly well, and delighting saints and making sinners tremble with his forceful expositions of truth. The saints are delighted with him. We are looking for Bro. Clapp to-day from Oregon. Bro. Price is taking hold fine. Bro. D. L. Harris is improving fast; is a strong, safe defender of the faith. Bro. Gilbert expects to go to his appointed field, Kansas.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

It is stated that when the Russian Government took the monopoly of the liquor traffic recently in Southwestern Russia, it began by having all the liquor storehouses and the vessels in them blessed and sprinkled with holy water by the clergy in full canonicals. Some called it "the benediction of the Devil in solution." Whether true or false concerning the clergy, the action of the government—religious and political in character—in assuming management of the traffic and becoming a producer of liquor, is about as bad. Perversions of ecclesiastical functions in this case are about on a par with sale of indulgences, if not with those acts authorizing the inquisition.

Bro. E. L. Page has volumes and numbers of the HERALD for the years 1869 to 1896, complete volumes of certain years, partial volumes of others; also an unbound Volume No. 14 of the Millennial Star, and odd numbers of the Advocate; all of which he offers for sale. Address him at Lamoni, Iowa.

The fall term of Graceland College began on the 16th of September and will close December 23. The winter term will open January 24. Those who expect to enter upon the winter term would do well to begin earlier, as time is required to adjust one's self to surroundings and studies.

Bro. Frank Criley arrived in from the Woodbine reunion on the 28th. He left for Cleveland, Ohio, on the 1st inst.

Sr. M. E. Hulmes, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, one of the industrious workers of the branch in that city, returned east via Independence, Missouri, on the 1st inst., after a brief visit to Lamoni, and attendance at the Woodbine reunion. She was accompanied by Sr. H. S. Warnock, of Washington, D. C.

Bishop E. L. Kelley will attend the following district conferences in October: Fremont, Nebraska, 10th and 11th; Guilford, Missouri, 17th and 18th; Lucas, Iowa, 24th and 25th.

Bro. J. W. Barr, of the stereotyping and press department of the Herald Office, and Sr. Chloe A. Hawes, of the bookbindery department, were united in marriage on the evening of Wednesday, the 30th ult., Pres. Joseph Smith officiating. The Herald Office force extends congratulations.

President Joseph Smith and Bishop

E. L. Kelley returned from the Woodbine reunion on Tuesday, the 29th ult. They both left home on the 3d inst. for points in Nebraska.

Minnesota saints should take note of change of time, etc. of their district conference, according to notice from their district secretary, which see elsewhere in this issue of HERALD.

Original Poetry.

NAUVOO.

BY DAVID H. SMITH.

Farewell to Nauvoo!
Farewell ere I leave thee
To roam the dark wilderness through.
Scarce knowing my duty
All weeping I go;
Sweet City of beauty
Farewell unto you!

O sad for Nauvoo!
The oppressor has risen,
Her prophet and patriarch slain;
And no more in her glory
Our home shall we view.
O sad is thy story,
Beloved Nauvoo!

CHRISTIAN POSITION OF WOMEN.

I HOLD, further, that the intellectual and moral standards should be the same for both men and women, and that each should be rightly held to an equally rigid conformity thereto. Having the same standard of weights and measures for liquids and solids does not mean that both are to be measured by a yard stick or weighed by Fairbanks. Each has a special method, but the standard is necessarily the same. What you want to determine for the man is whether his power is adapted to and capable of his purpose. And you want to determine the same thing for a woman. In equipping either for life in their world, you want to develop the powers adapted to the best achievement of their common destiny along the lines they are specially qualified to operate. The destiny is common, but each has a particular contribution to make; and the destiny is affected by this, whether each makes its own particular contribution in the best way and of the best quality. The standard must be equally high and the demand for conformity thereto must be equally rigid for both men and women. You cannot lower the standard or slacken the demand out of consideration for the more refined but less vigorous or more vigorous but less refined quality of either the one sex or the other. Each must measure up to the same high standard. The value of every means and the standard of its judgment are found in its adaptedness and sufficiency for the specific end proposed—not how nearly or how completely it can be brought to achieve some other end. You do not want to see how fine a gentleman a woman can become, nor how elegant a woman a man can become. You want to train the woman to make the highest quality of woman as you want to train the man to make the highest quality of man. Your standard is the same and your operative force is the same, but your method is and must be different.

And my contention is that the prescribed spheres of man and woman, the mutual relations of the sexes, and their common relation to God as declared by the Apostle Paul, is a broad view of human nature and history and was not only inspired by God, but is confirmed by a "wide and comprehensive view of the facts of life."

And I agree with a recent writer in the Contemporary Review when he says: "Surely all deference to authority ceases entirely when we cease to regard opinions which were formed in such a way by so great a teacher, and which history has so far confirmed."

Putting aside all questions of usurpation and subordination of superiority and inferiority as not relevant to my contention, I hold that the age-long effort of mankind to accomplish the destiny with which it was divinely burdened, along the lines that define distinct spheres of operation and different duties for men and women, is a correct apprehension of the facts of nature and a correct interpretation of the meaning of God.

The present position of influence and power held by woman in Christian civilization is unquestionably both great and beneficent. Were our women not what they are it would be impossible for men to be what they are. Even where their influence is not beneficent it remains great, for it is too often true that the words of "a ruby lip outweigh the resolves of a furrowed brow."

To this great place woman has not soared on strong wings, nor attained it by a swift race. It is the labored result of human coöperation with God, and of endless sacrifice of passion and power on the part of man.

Under the guidance of God man learned that human nature could not be elevated so long as one half of the race, and that the finerfibred half, was held subject to man's unlimited power and unbridled lust. Woman's quality was as divine and as distinctly marked as man's; her duty was as imperative and her discharge of it as necessary to the welfare of the race. So long as she was man's slave or man's plaything mankind remained without much achievement in the art which brings out in human nature the lines of the hidden image of God. The spiritual and intellectual education of woman was, under God, seen to be a condition precedent to the development, elevation, and perfection of the human race. Her influence on the moral nature of the sterner half of mankind is the subtlest and most abiding of all earthly influence to which man is subjected. It was an absolute necessity that her moral nature should be afforded the fullest opportunity to develop its peculiar quality and power, if the human race would achieve and crystallize its moral possibilities into permanent forms and permanent passions.

Out of this necessity and under divine guidance grew the family with all its meaning and in all its extent. And woman is at her best where the family is most respected and all its interests best conserved—that is, within the limits of Christian civilization. Woman, then, has not won her present commanding position by the unaided exercise of her moral genius. She is the product of an age-long coöperation of God and man—the threefold God and the twofold man. She could no more have achieved her place alone than man could now stand in his place alone. The conditions that created the necessity for woman's elevation in order to make possible the achievement of man's highest destiny remains to make necessary the maintenance of her place and power in order to preserve the civilization of which she is one of the essential factors.

Woman's moral quality cannot be diminished without infinite danger to our whole civilization. Nothing can now diminish her power and influence, and if her power and influence remain while her moral quality is debased, mankind will have made a long stride toward the deepest hell. The same care and the same labor and the same sacrifice and the same coöperation which wrought the grand result of our highest civilization are as necessary to maintain and preserve it as they were to produce it.

Any tendency or influence which attacks woman's present commanding position is an enemy, the more fascinating the more dangerous. It required the best powers of the best men in the past coöperating with the highest and best womanhood to withstand the effect on our race of the depressing moral influence exerted by unworthy men and unintelligent women, and intelligent but immoral women on careless and indifferent men. That coöperation must continue or we will not be able to move onward and upward. All women who love honor and love humanity should set their faces steadily in opposition to every custom and tendency which attacks woman's better influence with men, or man's profound respect for woman. I do not care how universal may be the custom and how apparently innocent may be the tendency, if they even squint towards a result that lessens a man's respect for woman as woman, every wise woman will set herself in opposition to it—determined and invincible opposition.

Whenever men can say of any such custom that they have no objection to other men's mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters to indulging in it, but they do not want their mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters to indulge in it, they mean that those women who do indulge in it do not command their respect. And our women cannot afford to forfeit the respect of right thinking men unless they are ready to overturn civilization—or are indifferent to it. The common judgment of sober and thoughtful men should make our women pause and ponder. Bonhomie and good comradeship are well enough in their way unless they tend to produce that familiarity which breeds disrespect; but the bonhomie or the good comradeship which lessens man's respect for woman as woman is an enemy of both God and man.

Human aspiration and effort have been at infinite pains to "show us how divine a thing a woman may be made." Let not an unholy desire for freedom of any sort or degree undo or attack and try to undo what has been done at such infinite pains. This is not a question of taste, although that is involved in it. It is a question of highest morality and civilization. Shall "earth's noblest thing—a woman perfected," be sacrificed on the altar of modern fads, and woman herself be both priest and sacrifice? May God forever forbid it!

I plead for a rule, not for an exception. As a rule—I quote from a Greek fragment—as a rule, "A woman should be good for everything at home, but abroad good for nothing." There have always been exceptions, exceptions made by hard necessity, but I am not dealing with exceptions. The mischief is made when you try to make the exception the rule. As a rule woman is at her best and does her best work in the world as mother, daughter, wife, sister. She inspires more good than she could ever possibly find either the time or the fitness to do with her own hand.

Let the exception be taken care of without sacrificing the rule in order to take care of it. Let the unfortunate and hard conditioned woman be granted freedom to make her fight in the world as best she can: but let us not for one moment pretend that hers is the freedom out of which the highest civilization can come and which ought to be given to all our women out of hand.

Men and women are fractions of one whole divine purpose. Hand in hand they have together reached the present high plane. If they would go higher their hands must remain clasped in the old union. If woman flips her fingers free from that clasp she will fall to ruin, and man will fall with her—for they are bound in an indissoluble and equal union—and once again will the crash be heard as after that first fall when

"Earth felt the wound; and Nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of woe,
That all was lost."

—Rev. William Hayne Leavell in The Pulpit.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. C. J. VANFLEET, of Waterville, Minnesota, desires that the saints will remember her husband and herself in their prayers. Her husband's eyesight is failing, and she is anxious about it. She would like if some one of the elders would visit them.

Brother and Sister H. H. Rose, of Beall, Indiana, desire your faith and prayers for the recovery of their health.

Sr. Lewis, of Aberaman, South Wales, requests your faith and prayers on her behalf, she having been ill for some months past. She believes that God will heal her through the prayers of the Prayer Union.

Sr. Alice Case, our missionary in the far-off islands, earnestly desires your faith and prayers in her behalf that God may restore her to health. She especially feels the need of this great blessing in her lonely situation with the care of her young babe.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

OUR FATHER.

"O Thou whom we are taught, in faith, to call
Our Father, glad in our dear right we come
With mind, with soul, with spirit, bringing all
To learn accord with thee—life's perfect sum;
Not as a slave, but as thy child, we hear
Thy voice, and find in perfect love no fear.

What could we call thee by thy works alone?
Science stands mute before them, known in part,
'Tis love hath made the high prerogative our own
To say, "Our Father who in heaven art!"
Heaven is thy kingdom that shall rise within
When hearts elect to let thy reign begin.
Dear name that binds us to the Infinite,
That grants us heirship to a grander life!
It holds us safe, even while we whisper it,
And hushes into peace all sense of strife.
Our Father cares for us, O restful thought,
A breath of balm, with heavenly healing fraught."

Thursday, Oct. 15.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Peter 4: 7-10.

Thursday, Oct. 22.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Micah 4: 1-7.

Thursday, Oct. 29.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

CITY OF JERUSALEM. ITS HISTORY.

NO PLACE on earth is so sacred as Jerusalem, the "Holy City." From remotest patriarchal times until the present, through a lapse of four thousand years, the most sacred associations cluster about it, and yet unfulfilled prophecy is pointing to it as a rallying place of God's chosen people, to be restored and redeemed by the long-rejected gospel of Jesus Christ. Next to Damascus, possibly even older than that "Pearl of the Orient," Jerusalem has held continuous place in the history of the world. This history may be conveniently divided into four great periods; viz.; the Patriarchal, the Jewish, the Provincial, the Christian eras.

1. Patriarchal era. The first mention of the city is in Genesis 14: 18, where it is named as Salem the city of Melchizedek. Again, it was in the land of Moriah (Gen. 22: 2) on the site of the temple, that Abraham's faith was tried in the offering of his son Isaac. In the time of the Judges, the city was the famous Jebus, a citadel of the Jebusites, who continued to occupy it in defiance of Joshua and his successors, until after a long period David captured it. (1 Chron. 11: 4.)

2. The Jewish Era. About 1050 B. C., David made it the capital of all Israel, enlarged it and built a wall about it, and removed to it the Ark. On the division of the kingdom at Solomon's death, B. C. 976, the city of Samaria became the capital of the Ten Tribes, and the glory of Jerusalem began thenceforth to wane. In B. C. 586 the city and temple were destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, and the leading citizens led away into seventy years' exile at Babylon.

3. The Provincial Era. From B. C. 586 until 70 A. D., Jerusalem was a provincial city, passing in turn into the hands of many conquerors, notably the Persian, the Grecian, and the Roman. It was partly restored by Ezra and Nehemiah at the close of the Babylonish exile B. C. 536, and the temple was rebuilt. Finally, after many changes and vast expenditures of treasure and blood, Jerusalem was wholly destroyed by the Roman armies under Titus, A. D. 70.

4. The Christian Era. The city remained a scene of utter desolation until the fourth century, when it was partially restored by the Romans, and its name changed in honor of a heathen deity. For a time Helena, the mother of Constantine, the converted emperor, made the city her special care and sought to discover and to mark the most sacred places. Julian the apostate tried vainly to rebuild the temple in defiance of prophecy. Saracen and Turk contended for the possession of the Holy City. The blood of the crusaders was shed freely in repeated endeavors to rescue it from its despotic conquerors. Finally and until now the city came into undisturbed ownership by the Turks. The present wall was built by them four hundred years ago. The Mosque of Omar stands on the ancient temple site since the seventh century. Jerusalem is now a Turkish city of 30,000 inhabitants, lighted partly by electric lights, and reached by rail from Joppa, with scarce a vestige of its ancient glory.

The New York Observer says: "A significant four-line paragraph came over the cables a few days ago. It announced that the Hall of Science in Old Hall Street, London, had passed into the hands of General Booth. The significance lies in the fact that for twenty years or more the Hall of Science was the London headquarters of an aggressive school of atheists, of whom the late Charles Bradlaugh, M. P., was the leader."

RHODES, Iowa, Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—Many of your readers no doubt will have heard of the death of our esteemed brother, William Thompson, ere this reaches you. He was one of our earnest, zealous missionaries in the Des Moines district. He had been doing tent work at Nevada for some time, where he said he had fair audiences and good liberty, and left some seriously thinking of this latter-day work. He went from there to Colo where by invitation he occupied the Christian church. After declaring this beautiful gospel of the kingdom to that people for about two weeks he made arrangements to move the tent to Collins, where he expected to labor until our district conference convened at Runnels, October 3.

But alas for human expectations! he was taken suddenly and severely ill with pneumonia, and ere he could get word to any of the saints he was too ill to be moved. There being no saints at Colo, he was stopping with a family of the Christian Church. There is one young brother living a short distance from town, but he is not permitted to entertain the servants of God at his home, on account of the blind prejudice of his father. He did nobly by our departed brother, however, and will receive his reward.

Bro. Thompson desired to get well that he might continue his work of winning souls to Christ, but he meekly bowed to the Master's will. On one occasion, after Bro. Nirk administered to him, he prayed earnestly for himself, then invoking God's blessing upon his family and upon the church he closed his prayer by meekly and humbly saying, "Father, not my will but thine be done." He manifested a spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion to the church to the very last.

When it was proposed by the friends to send for his wife, he protested against it, thinking of the expense to the church. They sent for her, however, and she with two of their little ones arrived some hours before he passed over the river.

He fell peacefully asleep in Jesus on Thursday, September 17, seven p. m., and while tears of sympathy and regret flow down our cheeks at the going out of such noble men from our midst, we do not think of them as dead or lost to us forever. For truly, as we sometimes sing,

"Some day, sometime, our eyes shall see
The faces kept in memory;
Some day their hands shall clasp our hand,
Just over in the summer land."

They have only gone from our sight for a little time; only been promoted to a higher sphere of labor; for who can say that with the going out of the spirit from this tenement of clay that our usefulness is ended, our work finished. We cannot believe it, but believe that with all the hindrances and perplexing environments removed life shall continue in a grander, broader sphere than ever in this life.

In the October number of Autumn Leaves there is a beautiful poem entitled, "After Death," which contains a grand thought in regard to the blessed state of the dead who die in the Lord. The following is an extract:—

"Farewell friends! yet not farewell;
Where I am ye too shall dwell.
I am gone before your face—
A moment's time, a little space.
When you come where I have stepped
Ye will wonder why ye wept.
Ye will know by wise love taught,
That here is all, and there is naught."

Then let us not question the wisdom and love of God, though we may not always understand the whys and wherefores of his dealings with us. By and by "when the mists have cleared away" we shall know and thank God for it all.

Bro. Thompson did not know why he should be called hence in the strength of his manhood and the day of his usefulness to the church, but he knows now, and understands that it was best. May we all be as ready as he was when the summons comes for us.

"They're fading from our sight away,
Those whom we here have loved to greet;
No more they'll cheer us on our way,
Their forms no more on earth we'll meet.

"Must sorrow ever dim the sight?
O! is there none to lift the gloom?
Yes, He can burst the bands of night,
Who rose triumphant from the tomb.

"There is a life beyond the grave,
'Twas Jesus that illum'd the way,
And we beyond the chilling wave,
May meet the dear ones passed away."

Your sister in the gospel,
MATTIE HUGHES.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—We have again set up the tent on Dale Street, and from the very commencement have had good turnout; many seem anxious to hear and some are very much interested. The chart preaching is just fine; it enables them to see the truth much easier and saves a great deal of wind on the part of the elder, which is quite a factor when one has to do all his own singing, and ushering, and preaching, and visiting, and talking all the long day. The prospect is good in this town, but it means work. I think with hard work there will be a large branch built up here. We had some of the best material the church had in stock to start with, and we have baptized some noble people, and more are to follow.

The preachers take quite an interest in us behind our back. Among the stories, one told to two (once part of his flock but now of us), that the saints he knew once wanted a revelation; they wrote a letter, sent a man up a tree with it, and then went under the tree to pray; and of course the man dropped the revelation; that was the way he knew the saints did at some place. So you see the work is on the move and some "imagine vain" things.

Bro. White will be here Saturday to see about the advisability of organizing a branch. The country around here has never had an opportunity of hearing the gospel, though many would like to.

In bonds,
HENRY SPARLING.

MAYSVILLE, Mo., Sept. 22.

Editors Herald:—I left home on the 12th inst. after a few days visit with loved ones, and came to Cosby, Missouri, to assist in tent work. On arriving there I found Brn. Geffries, Hailey, and Bear, with the tent, anxious to aid in the good work; but owing to the rains we only held four meetings there, but with the services held there by our lamented Bro. Madison we got our claims very well before the people. We left them feeling well, and they invited us to return.

From there I went to the Delano branch to attend the district conference, and notwithstanding the rains the day before conference convened a goodly number were in attendance, and a very nice time was had, and the Spirit was present in love, faith, healing, prophecy, tongues, and interpretation, causing the saints to rejoice, and the elders were encouraged to do more in presenting the gospel to the people. So I am glad to report the cause is onward in this mission.

I came here to hold a series of meetings at Gospel Hill church. A fair congregation was present last evening to hear me, and the Lord blessed me with liberty in presenting the word and I hope to report good results from our effort here. I never had better liberty in all my experience in the ministry than of late, so I feel encouraged to press on. May the Lord bless all who desire to assist in his glorious work, is my prayer.

In gospel bonds,
M. M. TURPEN.

PARK CITY, Utah, Sept. 6.

Editors Herald:—I feel sure that if anyone will take an interest in the church papers he will soon see the difference between the material that the Reorganized Church sends into the world with the gospel of Jesus Christ and that that is sent out from the Utah Church, especially when both claim to be the Church of Jesus Christ. I have often asked myself the question, Were the Jews that crucified Christ or the people in Utah that claim to be led and guided by this same Christ—which was the most wicked?

I have lived in sixteen States and in my own country—Scotland—until I was twenty-one years old, and I feel safe in saying that I have never lived among a more wicked people claiming to be followers of our Lord and Savior; and yet I sometimes see a letter in the good Herald telling us of the good people that are in the Utah Church; and sometimes I see the editors make the remark that Mr. C. B. died in Salt Lake, April 24; the deceased was a very good man, etc.; when perhaps I had read in the daily papers just before I got the Herald about the death of C. B. and that the good man was a true servant of God; that three wives and fifteen children were left to mourn the loss of our departed brother, etc.

Brother Editors, it makes me feel bad when I read of a true saint of God calling such a libertine a good man, because if any man has two or more living wives and he living with them at the time of his death, do you call such a good man?

I cannot see where any man can say that he believes in the Book of Mormon, and look upon a polygamist as a good man; and, Bro. Editors, the person who thinks that polygamy is done away with in Utah is only laboring under a mistake; and when any person thinks that an elder of the Utah Church will tell the truth when speaking of the Reorganized Church, its officers or members, he is laboring under as great a mistake. One of these elders at this place handed me the Deseret News of July 7 with the Herald editor's interview with S. G. Spencer. After I read it I told him, "That is not a true statement that Mr. Spencer gives;" and after one hour's talk the elder said, "I don't think it is a true statement myself." In the same paper there was a letter from Elder L. A. Colvin, of the Utah Church, telling how the elders of the Utah Church had made Bro. Scott back down like a little man. So I told my friend, "I will give you one hundred dollars if you will have your elder, L. A. Colvin, meet Bro. Scott in this city in debate and I will pay for the hall and all other expenses; and I could not tell the joy that the Herald of July 22 brought to me when I read Bro. Scott's letter in it. May God bless the Herald and his noble servants. Truth is mighty, and we have it. In gospel bonds,

W. R. STEELE.

[We are not aware that we have ever spoken of such a character as Bro. Steele describes as "a very good man." In noticing the death of Elder A. H. Cannon we said he "impressed us with his sincerity," and we also said: "We admire a man whom we believe to be honest." At the same time we said: "We could not indorse all his teaching." The HERALD editors recognize the fact that a man may be sincere and honest in the wrong. Besides we were not affirming that Mr. Cannon was either sincere or honest, but simply giving expression to our impression and belief. In this we may have erred, but we then preferred, and do now prefer to make a mistake in that, than in the opposite direction.—EDS.]

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—I have been here twenty-eight days. So far I have preached a sermon a day. Very good interest. Very good sized congregations for a city; very much larger in country places of course. Eight have been baptized since I came here; six by Bro. George Virgin and two by myself. We expect others to obey soon. Bro. Virgin is a good worker; he preaches every Sunday afternoon at Humber. I spoke there twice.

I expect to meet with the Saints in their conference at St. Thomas, October 10. I find the Saints of this place very good workers, and so far as I can learn are good livers—no trouble that I learn of. Old Grandpap Hatty is president of the branch. I see he is well liked. I can feel to offer my thanks for the kindness shown me by the saints and their hearty support. I have been stopping with Bro. Joseph Gillett and W. W. Ward. May the kind father bless them and their noble, saintly wives.

My address is Niagara Falls, Ontario.

TUNCURRY, N. S. W., Aug. 25.

Editors Herald:—The past twelve months has been a very busy time with me, hence have not written to the Herald; but my desires are to see all the church papers get along well, though I may not have time to contribute ought for them. Those who have the time and gift to write should remember this part of the church work, for it is a very important department. I wish I were able to give our good publishing house such an endowment as would cause her to never lack finances again, in order to send the truth abroad unto the nations. I was very much astonished to learn that the office had standing out twenty-five thousand dollars on books and subscriptions. This alone would make a nice endowment were it all paid in a few months. I marvel that our publishing house has been able to live at all with such discouragements to face. It can truly say, "I was wounded in the house of my friends."

We often meet with this excuse: "But the saints are all so very poor." Yes, and no wonder they are poor. If they would perform their heaven-born duties better they would be entitled to more wisdom which would enable them to manage things better and achieve more success in temporal things. I have known saints to let their Herald subscription go unpaid for years on the plea that they were "too poor," and yet would spend from twenty-five to fifty cents a week for tobacco or two and a half to five dollars to go out for holiday amusements, and then would have the courage to stand up in meeting and say, "I love this latter-day work because I know it is of God." And when an elder stands before them preaching "faith without works is dead and avails nothing" they nod "Yes," and say, "It's strange that the sectarian world can't see that, for it's so plain;" but the strangest of all is, that they can't see that it fits their own selves as much as the sectarian world.

I rejoice to learn that the church history is being prepared and will soon be on sale, if means to publish it is forthcoming. I hope and pray that it will not be delayed, for an authentic history of the latter-day work has been sorely needed these many years. I trust it will be especially clear and full on the latter-day apostasy, and church government. May the Holy Spirit bless richly in preparing this important work, is my prayer.

It is now three years and ten days since we first set foot on the Australian shore, but the time has flown so rapidly that it seems but a few months since we arrived; in fact it seems that we have hardly become acquainted yet, so your readers will see that we are not yet ready to return.

I never desired to leave my native land to preach the gospel, but when the Holy Spirit clearly revealed to me that my work was in Australia, I was willing to bring my desires in subjection to the will of Him who "is too wise to err." Before starting, Bro. James Kemp at Denver, Colorado, prophesied to me, wherein the Lord revealed that there were people here waiting for me to bring them the gospel and that they would praise the Lord for sending me. I have lived to see this and other revelations of the good Spirit clearly fulfilled, having been instrumental in converting and baptizing some who said they were waiting for some one to bring them the fullness of the gospel, for they knew the creeds were wanting; and my heart has been made glad to hear them praise the Lord in prayer and testimony for sending his servant to them with the fullness of the gospel.

My heart's desire has been to accomplish much more than I have, but we cannot run faster than our strength will permit. There are so many things in the way here, which makes evangelizing slower than in the United States. The field being so large and the laborers so few, necessitates a great deal of traveling, which consumes much time and money. Could we centralize our work more, I think better results would follow.

The last conference report gives Australia a net gain of seventeen, whereas seventy would be about correct, for Brn. Wells, Butterworth, and I baptized seventy as shown by our reports, besides local elders baptized as many or more than Bro. Stebbins recorded as expelled and died; so the net gain should be at least seventy.

The first of last March I went to Victoria and labored with Bro. Butterworth for a time, forming acquaintances with many of the saints, whom I shall never forget. May the Lord bless his people there, for they have a great work to perform in warning the inhabitants of that Colony.

On July 8 a baby boy came to our home at Tuncurry to cheer us when we return home, feeling weary from long journeys by sea or land. Wife and I are well and have many things to be very grateful for, especially the fatherly and motherly care of Bro. and Sr. John Wright, by whose kindness we have had a house to live in free and many other things too numerous to mention. While many have been brothers and sisters to us indeed, Bro. and Sr. Wright have been as our father and mother. May our loving Father in heaven bless them and all those who have so kindly administered to our wants and given us encouragement in hours of need.

The Lord said to the traveling ministry, "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward: and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple: by this you may know my disciples."—D. C., p. 229. When we have been so kindly provided for in the midst of hard times, we think it but right to express our gratitude, though we feel weak and unworthy.

Bro. Butterworth and wife are in Sydney, and Bro. Wells is going to Victoria for a time. I trust our cause will continue to prosper as it has in the near past. Some have obeyed of late.

Hastily,

JOHN KALER.

GALENA, Ind., Sept. 24.

Editors Herald:—The Southern Indiana district conference is over, Brn. E. C. Briggs, G. H. Hilliard, and S. W. L. Scott were present with a fair turnout of the officers and members of the district. Bro. G. H. Hilliard gave us a ringing discourse on the temporal law, plain and pointed. The question now is, Will we comply? Come to the front, elders and all; let us be consistent; don't say no but come to the rescue of God's cause.

Six Utah elders from Kentucky stopped over in New Albany the 18th inst. on their way to Taswell, Crawford County, Indiana, to hold conference. The Saturday Herald says of them, "A party of Latter Day Saints who discard polygamy were in the city on their way to Taswell, where they have a membership, to hold conference." How cunning they are. Do business on the good name of the Reorganized Church. Expose their trickery.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aug. 29.

Editors Herald:—By request of the missionary in charge I leave for Victoria to try and fill his place in his absence to New South Wales. (He and his family are now in Sydney.)

Before leaving New Castle we baptized eleven and left things all ablaze with gospel light. Further results will probably follow if the efforts of the past year are supplemented. The little chapel there was packed the last night. Trusting the local brethren will write you more particularly, will stop for want of time. I sometimes think the said brethren leave the reporting of events too much to the missionaries. Why not write up matters as they see them? We might color them unconsciously.

Yours, rejoicing in the light and much encouraged in our mission,

GOMER WELLS.

P. S.—It appears that all the district reports did not get into the office of Church Recorder in time to make a proper showing of the net increase of last year's work in this field.

LIBERTY CENTER, Iowa, Sept. 28.

Editors Herald:—By letter from Bro. W. C. Nirk, president of the Des Moines district, dated September 20, I am apprised painfully of the certainty of the death of Bro. William Thompson, one of the missionary laborers appointed by the General Conference to this district. He died at Colo, Iowa, September 17. He had been in charge of the district tent since the conference of June 1, and was smitten down with a fever, while at his duty's call, and from which he never recovered. His wife and two of his children had been summoned to his bedside ere he passed the mystic veil, and Brn. Nirk and L'Hommedieu were there to witness his departing. Bro. Thompson was resigned. We, here, were not apprised of his illness till the day of his death. At that date I received a brief letter from Bro. Frank L'Hommedieu, dated the 11th, at which date he was supposed to be better. We also received a postal from Sister Flora Hidy, of Boone, of a later date, informing us that he was not likely to recover.

Bro. Thompson had the respect and confidence of the saints of the district. He was a conscientious and diligent laborer. He was another of the Second Quorum of Seventy, who "fell at his post."

Bro. W. H. Kephart and John S. Roth join us in condolence to his bereaved wife and children. And we pray they may have the consolation of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ in this hour of deepest affliction. We miss him from our ranks as a laborer for Christ. May we emulate his diligence.

Bro. Kephart and I closed our tent meeting here last night with a crowded tent. The New Light people here would not let Bro. Kephart have their church (two and one half miles southwest of Liberty Center), so Mr. Grader let us put the tent on his land adjoining the church lot, and we held twenty-one meetings with only two evenings lost on account of bad weather. The M. E. minister at Liberty Center warned his flock not to attend our meetings, but quite a number of the people from there attended the services first and last. A number here are deeply interested, and some will unite with us in time.

The tent goes to Sandyville, this county, this week, where good Bro. and Sr. Joseph Knox reside, and are anxious to have the word delivered where the Disciples of Christ, so-called, the M. E. people, and the Seventh Day Adventists illustrate their respective ideas of the golden rule by closing their church doors against us, "for fear and for looking after those things [God's truth] that are coming!" But truth is mighty. Even the "golden rule" works strangely in the hands or heads of perversionists. I am glad of a probation after death, for those especially whose minds are so perverted by human theologies, that it will give them sufficient time to make progress sufficient to know how to repent. Time here is too brief for some.

I do not expect to do any labor there now till after the district conference, October 3 and 4, when we hope for weather sufficiently pleasant to do some tent work. In the meantime will invade the Decatur district for a couple of evenings this week, at the Curtis schoolhouse, in Lucas County.

Yours for the right,

C. SCOTT.

KALKASKA, Mich., Sept. 25.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here yesterday at one o'clock. We took the tent off the car and put it up and preached at night to about forty people who came out to hear. Bro. John Hanson and wife and Bro. Session live here, and have endeavored to let their light shine, and are of the opinion that much good will be done in this place. At any rate we are here and by the help of God we will explain this beautiful gospel to them. Kalkaska is a lovely looking little town.

We remained one week longer in Reed City than we at first intended, as the interest seemed good, and many urged us to stay longer. The tent was well filled the last meeting. Since last writing from Reed City I baptized six more, making twenty-four there in all. There seemed to be many others believing, some of whom I believe will in the future obey the gospel.

The weather has been rather against us for the past week and is still unsettled; but the Lord is helping us with his Holy Spirit, and we feel to press on until victory shall be ours.

J. J. CORNISH.

LLANELLY, South Wales, Sept. 7.

Editors Herald:—I left London on the 4th instant to attend the conference of the Western district South Wales, by special request. Conference convened on the 5th at six p. m. for business. Two preaching meetings, one sacrament, and a social meeting were held on Sunday, the exercises of the day closing with open-air services at 7:45 p. m. The sessions were peaceful and profitable. Elder Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., of the Manchester district, England, was present and preached a logical, effective gospel sermon on Sunday evening to a fair audience. Bro. E. R., youngest son of Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Sen., is located in Swansea, Wales, and has been appointed president of the above district. He is very able, and willing to exert himself as circumstances permit. He is very methodical and systematic in his movements; devoted, and earnest; and, so far as I have seen, evinces a great deal of gospel humility, and is fast ingratiating himself into the confidence of the saints in the district; and both officers and non-officials are evincing a willingness to cooperate with him for the betterment of the cause in a spiritual point of view, and the adoption of measures for the further extension of the work. So we anticipate better union and activity with the saints in the Western district, with good results.

So far as I learn the prospect is brightening under the presidency of A. N. Bishop in the Eastern district. Arrangements have been effected whereby Bro. J. D. Jenkins will devote his entire time in ministerial labor in the Eastern district. Bro. J. D. Jenkins can make himself pretty well understood in the English language, but by God's grace is powerful in his native tongue; and I believe if Bro. J. D. J. shall prove diligent the saints in the Eastern district will exert themselves to supply his dependents with life's necessities. I incline to the opinion that the appointment of Bro. Jenkins will prove a great acquisition to the Eastern district. So may it be.

The advice of our President as to the necessity of cultivating patience, etc., in this mission was stimulating; yes 'tis trying to labor hard and meet with but meager success; and, yes, there can be no possible excuse for indifference in any sense by any member, brother or sister, young or old, in the Reorganized Church; because years ago our President said, (and I am sure thousands believed him) that the Reorganization had come to stay a good long while; and while she stays, her success, stability, etc., largely depend upon the diligence, perseverance, endurance, fidelity, virtue, etc., of her membership. God help us.

Some of the brethren hereabouts are beginning to think seriously as to the propriety of having a small weekly paper started, part in Welsh and part in English. No action thought of yet, for it's only just being mooted; but the necessity therefor cannot be questioned, and five hundred subscribers might give life to such a penny weekly paper. Who is there among Latter Day Saints in Wales or England and America that wouldn't want to have a finger in such a prospect? The press is often mighty against us and with a paper of our own, though small it might be, would be effective in combating the opposition thus waged against us.

Doubtless something more definite on this project may develop in the near future. 'Tis no harm to think about something and to induce others to think, if nothing is done; but there is no necessity for true, wide-awake Latter Day Saints to fail in any sensible, practical, requisite, legitimate project for pushing the cause ahead. Those who think the gospel promises something for nothing may find themselves disappointed. Being a Latter Day Saint, means work, work, and work all the times, while the day lasts.

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

MAXWELL, Neb., Sept. 27.

Editors Herald:—I have not written, not because I have ceased to love this latter-day-work, for it is dearer to me than life, and my desire is to live faithful to the end and do all I can to teach my children the gospel, and help them to realize the responsibility that rests upon as saints of God. My husband and self and Bro. and Sr. Knap, attended the two-days' meeting at Eustis and had a time long to be remembered, though we were much disappointed in not meeting, Bro. Gillen and Rudd; yet we had the pleasure of meeting R. C. Porter, who is an able defender of the truth. The saints of Eustis are a noble people, and made all welcome, and spared nothing that would make the meetings a success. May God bless all his saints and help us to live worthy of a home in Zion.

Your sister,

E. A. PAYNE.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 29.

Editors Herald:—On September 14 I left Independence for Fairland, Indian Territory, where I was under agreement to meet Shick, Poplewell, or somebody else in debate. On account of bad train connection I had to lay over at Baxter Springs, Kansas for the night. On my way there I fell in with a young attorney from Rich Hill, Missouri. He was a congenial, bright, intelligent young man and "chuck" full of politics. We canvassed the "gold and silver" issue, but I kindly informed him my mission was not a political one. It seemed that everybody in the coach were arguing politics—even to some of the ladies. I was met at train by Bro. Chrestensen who had got that far on way to place of debate. I domiciled with Bro. and Sr. Doty finding them alive in the work. They knew of my coming and had circulated an appointment for me that night at the "Soldiers' barracks." I had excellent liberty for the occasion, considering the political whirlpool I had been in all day. Slept sweetly that night and dreamed the following dream: "I was in some great thoroughfare—a whole nation of people. On my west was an agitated stream of water running from northwest to southeast—but the water seemed at a very low ebb. Presently I saw a large puncheon probably eighty or one hundred feet long and three feet or more wide—thick and heavy. The west end of this puncheon tipped the stream of water along the west edge of the stream, but swayed around sideways first a few feet to north then to south and the puncheon seemed to be working upon a pivot, the pivot being about one third way from the east end of the immense plank; the east end protruding high in the air over on the east bank of the stream the pivot being about where the east bank was. On this plank just about one half way from pivot to east end was a large piece of gold looking exactly like a twenty dollar gold piece, but probably four inches thick and twenty-four inches in diameter. Seemingly this had some power over the puncheon and kept it moving at the other end (west end) up and down and sideways. Sometimes it would raise from the edge of the water several feet then at once drop back. The stream itself seemed to be agitated. Every eye was watching these movements. Presently the stream commenced to arise, following up the end of the plank as it raised. Up and up it came till the immense plank stood on a perfect level. I noticed the water commenced running along on the plank from the west till it reached the immense piece of gold and then a voice said, "This represents our nation, and the water the traffic and trade of the nation."

Presently the people commenced to scatter out and move forward, every man to his different calling, and occupation. I awoke and lo! it was all a dream. "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Next morning bright and early I took train on the new railway for Miami, Indian Territory, where I had held a debate with the Baptist last October. Here I was met by Bro. Briggs. Many friends that were made at the debate met me and gave me a hearty shake of the hand. The citizens were arranging for a grand jubilee that day over the entrance of the first railroad to their spirited little town. The Mayor prevailed on me to remain till later in the day and assist them in the exercises of the day. I opened their services by prayer in forenoon and Attorney McClure delivered a short address for the occasion. I was asked to deliver the afternoon address which I did to my own satisfaction and seemingly to the satisfaction of the crowd too, if hearty cheering is any proof of appreciation.

Ten miles further was made when I was dropped down in Fairland and learned that Messrs. Popplewell and Shick were there for business. Mr. P., my old opponent, was the man to "beard the lion in his den," as they put it. The fight commenced upon Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon; and to put it very mildly it was one of the most scurrilous efforts that I ever met. We commenced the fight with almost everybody against me. They had been paving the way for our defeat by nine lectures being delivered against us upon the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith. Revs. Carlin and Bandy of the Baptist and Shick of the Campbellite had all tried their hand at what they called Mormonism. These men had been at sword's points among themselves, but now they make friends to down the saints like Pilate and Herod did when passing sentence upon our blessed Lord and his doctrine. Prejudice! That word is hardly adequate to express the blindness the people had been led into against our people. We had but one and one part of family of saints in town. At first, as Paul would say, "No man stood with me." As the battle was carried forward the people commenced to see that there were two sides to what these men had called Mormonism. Popplewell turned to the Baptists almost with tears in his eyes pleading in trembling tones for sympathy, as he did not see them as he had once before, since he had learned how they had made such worthy efforts to put down this Mormon delusion that had been trying to intrench itself here at Fairland of late. "Our blessed old family Bible must never be trampled under foot to establish 'Joe' Smith and his infamous doctrine." I at once told him that I would expose him in his crocodile tears and hypocrisy to court favor with the Baptists, the very people that he hated as vile as he did somebody else, by reading a statement from his own pen in a paper edited by himself while writing about Rev. Bandy, the very man that the Baptists had here to expose Mormonism as they termed it. This read: "The above clipping was sent us, with a request that we make some comments. We will comply with the request that our readers may know of some of these blatant, brazen, bigoted Baptists who blasphemously attach 'Rev.' to their names that their hypocrisy may be more deeply hidden in their deceit and conceit. The first and second paragraphs of this fabrication of falsehoods, and rank raging of these revengeful statements are but silly subterfuges of this willful and knowing preverter of facts. A man who will thus stoop to mislead the less informed of his brethren, to gain notoriety, and knowing at the same time what he is writing for the public eye is untrue, is hardly worthy of notice in a respectable journal," etc. (The italics are mine.)

This was like a clap of thunder from a cloudless sky at noonday. But Mr. P. pleaded that if some of the Baptist brethren did do wrong occasionally they were a good people and preached the gospel. I read again from his own paper: "No Baptist was ever authorized of God either directly or indirectly to preach the gospel." Again: "They may join the Baptist Church or Methodist Church, but not the church of Christ of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named." This almost broke the camel's back, as Mr. P. was aware by meeting me twice before, that I knew from whom A. Campbell had received baptism and where he held church membership before he "conceived, organized, and made successful" this so-called church of Christ. Mr. P's objections to the Book of Mormon faded away so fast that he had to acknowledge that nine tenths of the book was stolen from the Bible by that infamous scoundrel, "Joe" Smith. In honor of Mr. P. and his cause, I will give a few of his "awful" objections and my answers.

Popplewell: "The Book of Mormon is a fraud because it says Christ was born at Jerusalem, when the Bible says he was born in Bethlehem of Judea."

Answer: Book of Mormon page 262, par. 1: "Now when Ammon and his brethren separated themselves in the borders of the land of the Lamanites, behold, Aaron took his journey towards the land which was called by the Lamanites, Jerusalem; calling it after the land of their fathers' nativity." Here we see, that the land of Palestine was called the "land of Jerusalem" by the Book of Mormon people. Further, Book of Mormon, page 526, par. 1: "For as Joseph brought his father down into the land of Egypt, even so he died there; wherefore the Lord brought a remnant of the seed of Joseph out of the land of Jerusalem," etc. Now these are plain facts; these people here called the land where our Lord was crucified, "Jerusalem,"—not saying anything about the city of Jerusalem. Now what have we? Book of Mormon, page 223, par. 2: "And behold, he shall be born of Mary at Jerusalem, which is the land of our forefathers," etc. It is not stated at what point in the land of Jerusalem that Christ was born. I could say that a friend of mine was born at New York, the land of my nativity. Yet, I do not say New York City, but it may be in Buffalo, yet in the land of my nativity. Hence Christ was born at the land of Jerusalem, in the town of Bethlehem of Judea.

Objection number 2: "And also to the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself to all nations." Book of Mormon preface. Mr. P. alleged that the Book of Mormon gives the lie to the Bible, in calling Christ the "Eternal God."

To more completely call Mr. P. out I quoted first from John 1:1: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." Jesus to Philip in John 14:9: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

Mr. P. then tried his skill in removing the difficulty in these two texts, when I opened fire again by reading: "Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."—Matt. 1:23.

Also: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isaiah 9:6.

Here I stated that the Book of Mormon and the Bible agreed all right, but it was Campbellism that was at fault. The Book of Mormon said he would be called "God," and the Bible says he was called "God." Hence if anybody was telling an untruth about this it was somebody other than the Book of Mormon. I also quoted I John 5:20: "And we know that the Son of God is come, . . . and we are in him that is true; even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life." The battle was over just at that point. But he comes loaded again from Book of Mormon, page 45. The Book of Mormon says, "The God of Israel was crucified!" I quickly rung off the alarm and said: "Great is the mystery of godliness," and quoted: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Popplewell was snowed under as the Bible needed more apologies on this line of thought than did the Book of Mormon. Mr. P. now has a little fun over the Mormon's God in repeating beautiful phrases to wit: "Manifest himself." (Book of Mormon, pages 26, 27.) "What a God!" etc. I read in contrast Ezekiel 43:11, showing the Book of Mormon used the phrase, "Manifest himself" only four times in thirty-nine lines and not one time could it be dispensed with and make sense; while in Ezekiel the word "thereof" was used nine times in twelve lines and the sense aimed to be conveyed would not be impaired by leaving out twelve words out of the eleven lines. Mr. P. sank again. Every pass that Mr. P. made against the Book of Mormon turned out fatal to himself when I turned in the light.

The next effort was to defame Joseph Smith's character. He was charged with all the crimes known in our law; polygamy headed it all. Whitmers' Address, Hedrickites' bombast, John D. Lee, Kidder, Beadle, Encyclopedias, Nauvoo Expositor (printed at Independence, under the holy (?) supervision of Hall, et al. of Joseph's friends (?)), the Laws and Fosters, Return, et al., were all made to do duty in defaming the fair name of Joseph Smith. Is it not astonishing that the assassins' hand that took Joseph's life in the 40's, have their abettors yet in the name of Joseph's friends! "Verily I say unto you, they have their reward."—Jesus.

Sworn (?) testimony was introduced from Kidder, that one Ingersol furnished a lot of white sand to "Joe" Smith, which Smith put into a clapboard box and put all into a pillow case and this was palmed off on the d—fools for golden plates! The next witness was also from Kidder and this time it was a Mr. Chase, "being sworn, do depose, etc., that Joe Smith had me to make him a chest to put golden plates in; and Joe told me that he was under strict promise not to show the plates to anyone. Joe was such a liar he could not keep his promises and I know that he (Joe) showed the plates to twelve different persons." I arraigned Mr. P. before the audience for reading his own witnesses between the lines. Here we have two witnesses from Kidder, both claiming to be under oath and one testifying that nothing but white sand in a clapboard box made up the "gold plates;" and the other man saying the gold plates were shown to as many as twelve persons. I branded the whole thing as a fabrication of falsehoods. At this juncture Mr. P. put up the howl that Mr. Kidder was a Methodist preacher and a fine man and White had called him a "black liar," (which was false as I never used such a term). "Will you Methodists stand that?" Here another plea was put in by Mr. P. for sympathy from the Methodists who he said were a God fearing and loving people. I here broke Popplewell's wing again by reading the following from his paper that he edited: "Brethren, I want to say in all firmness that I believe the Methodist denomination to be the dirtiest and meanest denomination now extant, Catholics not excepted. The Methodist church is a daughter of Rome and to-day is blinding more eyes in ignorance than all of Satan's host combined." The M. E's. commenced opening their eyes and looked around a little. I defended Joseph's character with such logic, setting aside all of Mr. P.'s witnesses as not worthy a place before a respectable jury, that the man was puzzled to know how he was to convict Joseph of the crimes he had charged him with. I showed that these "charges" had all been made against Joseph during his lifetime, and every one of them failed to be sustained; hence Joseph died out of the penitentiary, having to be mobbed by a blackened gang of fanatics, led and urged on by pretended ministers of the gospel, simply because they could not meet Joseph and his followers in argument and could not prove their allegations against him. To this Mr. P. replied: "The reason that they could not prove a case against Joe Smith was, that there was no law against fanatics." He cited a case somewhere in the west that he thought would cover the case. Said the people did right in killing Joe just as they did the outlaws of this Territory, when law would not reach them. So now, we have the solution of why Smith was not placed in the penitentiary or hung for his alleged crimes. Popplewell can never get back of his logic on this. I stamped it into the minds of the people so thoroughly that they can hardly forget it.

Mr. P., in defending his church proposition, drew a silver dollar from his pocket and slammed it down on the stand and said: "Show me, if you dare, where there is an apostle's office spoken of in the New Testament church and I will make you a present of this dollar." When "time" was called there was a chuckling among P's friends, thinking, Now, White is cornered. I had proven his church out of harmony with the New Testament church, because they continued to attempt to fill the deacon's and bishop's "office," with deacons and bishops, when these "offices" had been vacated just like the apostle's "office" had, which was in the church. I had argued that if the church had continued, the "office" of each officer must of necessity have continued. I presented our own government; for instance, we had a presidential "office;" a congressman's "office;" and on down to a township "office." To perpetuate the government was to perpetuate its "offices." When the assassin killed Lincoln, he did not kill the "office." The government still remained, and so did the "office;" but it was vacant. So I maintained that if the church of Matthew 16:18, was not to be prevailed against by the gates of hades, that all the "offices" that had been "fixed" or "set in" it would remain though the assassin did kill the occupant. When our government was "conceived" and "organized," it placed in it an "office" which it pleased to call a presidential "office."

George Washington was its first occupant. The government and "office" still remains and Grover Cleveland now occupies the same "office." The church of Matthew 16:18 had an apostle's "office" in it; Judas, by transgression, vacated that office, and Matthias was chosen — appointed — called to occupy the "office" made vacant by Judas' transgression. Thus the church was perpetuated. Bishops and deacons who occupied bishop's and deacon's "offices" (see 1 Timothy 3:1, 12) were vacated by death, etc., the same as apostles' "office." If the church remained—was perpetuated or restored—with bishop's and deacon's "offices" in it, where the Twelve's "office"? Mr. P. knew "I. N." too well; for no sooner did I take the floor than he covered his coveted prize with his hand. I read: "For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office."—Rom. 11:13. I reached for the dollar, but lo! Popplewell's word was of less value than the dollar.

We measured swords upon the grammar of Mark 16. It was amusing to see his blackboard diagraming, trying to establish "them" in verse 17 to be the antecedent of "them" in verse 20. He dropped "every" from before "creature" in verse 15, to prove "creature" was a singular noun; hence according to the laws of grammar, that a pronoun must agree with the antecedent in gender, person, and number, the "them" and "they" of verses 17-20 being plural, could not look to the singular noun "creature" in volume 15 for an antecedent, but to the plural noun "apostles"—the eleven. I took a nickel from my pocket and said to a boy sitting before me: "I will give a nickel to that boy in the house; how many boys do I mean? Answer, One. If I should say, I will give a nickle to every boy in the house; how many boys do I mean? Answer, All the boys in the house." By this simple illustration I easily established the "every creature" in the 15th verse a plural noun in the third person. Hyde Language Series says: "The form of a word used in speaking of more than one thing is called the plural form." I then moved upon the battle ground and carefully read the whole text, giving its proper bearing in gender, person, and number. I saw at once that I had struck the "keynote" and captured the situation. Mr. P. made some bluster over this and misrepresented us most woefully; and in one of his breaks says: "Did you ever hear of he being a generic pronoun? This sets Harvey, Pinneo, and Swinson in the shade." He presumed upon the ignorance of the people. I had said when quoting the 16th verse: "He [generic term, he who, or anyone who] that believeth [of every creature] and is baptized shall be saved." In my next speech (which was my last in the debate) I showed that Paul was the only man that is on record as having taken up a serpent as set forth in the 18th verse of the commission, therefore, Mr. P's logic and grammar of "They [the eleven then addressed] shall take up serpents," was a violation of grammar and good sense, and a libel upon the commission of Christ, as Paul was a violent persecutor of the church at the time the commission was given, and was no part of the "eleven" but was one of the "every creature," who was promised in the commission, "He that believeth," etc., "these signs shall follow," etc. I pursued the same course in Acts 19:6, also 1 Cor. 12, etc. Popplewell in his last speech had no constraint and "Joe" came in for such a tirade as seldom is heard from the mouth of man. "Joe Smith was an infamous scoundrel that died with a six-shooter in his hand, which he had just emptied upon his pursuers, shooting six men down in cold blood, and Joe got his just dues." Well, I did not scare at all of this, and can truly say my faith is immovable in the divinity of this latter-day work.

As Popplewell ended his tirade (I can't call it anything else better, and speak the truth) three or four Campbellite women threw him three or four bunches of flowers, and Shick, his moderator, arose and said: "On the part of Bro. Popplewell, I wish to thank you for the flowers which you have given Bro. Popplewell, in token of the respect you have for him, because of his efforts to put down this Mormon delusion." I want it rang along the line: That Mr. Popplewell on September 20, 1896, while making a speech in favor of his church proposition in the schoolhouse at Fairland, Indian Territory, challenged I. N. White to meet him in public discussion upon the Book of Mormon; and there and then, the said I. N. White accepted the aforesaid challenge with the understanding and agreement that Mr. Popplewell's church proposition which was then under consideration should immediately follow the Book of Mormon proposition.

PROPOSITIONS AND THEIR ORDER.

Proposition 1.—"Is the Book of Mormon of divine origin, and are its teachings entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people?" I. N. WHITE affirms.

Proposition 2.—"Is the church of which I, T. H. Popplewell, am a member, the true Church of Christ, and as such identical in faith, organization, teaching, doctrine, and practice with the Church of Christ as described in the New Testament?"

I. N. WHITE denies.

I do not remember of ever commencing a debate, where I had so many prejudiced against me. At the close I had many warm friends, though a number were timid to commit themselves. I give the propositions above because Popplewell declared vengeance against the church in Braden style. If the church says so, I hold myself ready to meet him upon these propositions, anywhere in the United States of America.

It may look unwise to burden the Herald with such a lengthy report of one debate; but the end is not yet. Opposition is moving all along the line and it must be cared for. Our elders will do well to always be on the side of the defense. Whatever may have been our foibles before, we should preach our doctrine without personally attaching others' doctrine, and arraying the different churches as "synagogues of Satan." In these churches we find the honest in heart and many are striving to obtain light.

We can preach and live the "golden rule" and not compromise the truth either; and often by this make friends in place of enemies. A messenger stood by me not long ago when I was in a boat trying to move it on a broken sea. He stood on the brow and handed me a long bottle of pure olive oil, and said, "Pour that out on the water." The water was dashed over into the boat that was rocking as though it might founder. I obeyed and things commenced to calm down; then I commenced to sprinkle the oil on it, and the messenger said: "Do as I tell you, pour it on or I will not be with you." I held the immense bottle out at arm's length, knowing that it was dangerous to disobey, and I poured, and presently I could see the oil floating on the top of the water all around the boat and the waves calmed down and the boat glided along smoothly. Can I ignore such a message? Never! Moving forward, I am,

Yours in gospel bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 4.

ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.

BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.

EPHRAIM AND MANASSEH'S ADOPTION; WHY?

THE validity of the Bible, itself, is as much dependent on some corroborative book to come forth in a specified manner, and at a particular and well-defined time, bearing all the marks and features of the predicted instrument necessary to make it eligible as a witness to testify to its validity as the word of God to Judah, as the major premise, as the book is to establish its own validity. For if the major premise fail, there will be no necessity for the support of the secondary proposition, or collateral evidence; but all must fall together, and the whole fabric will be proven a fraud unless the internal evidence demanded in the text of the major premise be supplied and supported by legitimate and concurrent testimony in harmony with it in the minor proposition. For, "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" And if the prophecies of the Bible have no counterpart in history, who can safely build on its teaching, or who need fear its edicts?

The Bible does declare by its internal record that it is the "stick of Judah;" it does declare that a similar record shall be kept by the seed of Joseph, and that they shall be joined together in one. The Bible does demand the coming forth of a book from the ground; it does demand that said book shall be the said record of the seed of Joseph; it does demand that said record shall become one in the hands of the Israel of God; that the house of Judah shall be ignorant of this stick until about the time of the return of Judah to Palestine; that the house of Judah shall be dispersed in heathen lands in every direction from Palestine at that time; that they shall begin to return to their own land soon after the said stick of Joseph is in the hands of the people with whom God will intrust those records; that the house of Israel at that time will be but one nation, or will be known among the Gentiles as but one nation or people. (Ezek. 37:18-24.) It demands that this book shall come at a time when there is no living prophet in Israel or Judah, when a deep spiritual sleep has fallen upon all nations and there is no prophet or seer among them, because such communion with heaven will, at that time, have ceased; that the words of this book shall be given to the learned and he shall not be able to read them; that the book itself shall be given to the "unlearned" and he shall have power to read it; (Isa. 29:11, 12); that this book shall come forth as a marvelous work and a wonder; that shortly after its coming forth, the land of Lebanon (Palestine) shall be considered a fruitful field (land); that the deaf shall be made to hear and the blind to see, a notable effect of the power of God attending the true church of God in all ages; that Jacob's face shall soon after cease to "wax pale" for fear of his enemies, and no one acquainted with the history of the world is ignorant of the fact that the Jew has, for the last sixty years, been rising rapidly in the scale of citizenship; no place is too exalted for him to occupy, and, financially speaking, he is the banker of the world. (Isaiah 29:9-24.) It also demands that it shall come at a time of the world's greatest mental activity, and when men shall hurry to and fro, and when knowledge and iniquity shall be increased, and the chariots, in the day of God's preparation, shall jostle in the highways and run like the lightning; that the gospel shall again be restored to the earth by angel ministrations; that this restoration shall be at the beginning of God's judgments upon the earth. (Rev. 14: 6, 7.) And who will close his eyes to the fact that the world has in the last sixty years made more advancement in the arts and sciences and achieved greater inventions; that thought has taken a deeper and more extended scope; that knowledge and iniquity have increased to an unprecedented extent; that Nahum's chariots smoke through the land or run with the lightning's power and with the roar of the whirlwind; together with the fact that the judgments of God are becoming more prominent than in any age of the past? As the complement to all this, and a vast amount beside, the Book of Mormon answers in every particular the counterpart demanded; and not only so, but promulgates the same and superior doctrines of morality in social life, reveals the long hidden "law of God to Ephraim," and verifies the fact that the doctrine of Christ and the law of God are one and unchangeable, to a "thousand generations."

As the Book of Mormon has come as the precursor of further marvelous works and wonders of God in these last days, bearing internal evidences of its own divinity and the strongest adducible testimony of the divinity of the Bible, and is attested to by the works of God in nature by the transformation of the seasons of Palestine and the return of fertility to her land, by earthquakes in divers places, fires, floods, whirlwinds, cyclones, moving pillars of fire, and on the earth, besides a great mental inflatus or diffusion of knowledge, distress of nations, wars, famines, pestilences, and the waves heaving themselves beyond their bounds; it only remains for the opposers of this work to accept the inevitable and admit the divinity of the Bible as the major premise, supported by the testimony of the Book of Mormon as the minor proposition, or, without it, show reasons why the Bible should be worthy of credence while these great prophecies have failed of fulfillment, and the possibility of their fulfillment forever barred by the testimony of nature. For the question of the validity of the Book of Mormon becomes a matter of only secondary importance, until the divinity of the Bible on these and other prophecies is maintained. And if the Book of Mormon is declared to be a fiction or a fraud, the necessity still remains for the advocates of the Bible to maintain the "divinity of the book," against the fallacy of its predictions as compared with the decrees of time fulfilled in the book of nature, or somewhere find a substitute for the Book of Mormon.

Third. The unsettled condition of humanity with reference to the teachings of the Bible, — the belligerent attitude of creeds denominated "Christian," all formulated from the same word of God, and all claiming to teach the doctrine of Christ and the attributes of God, are matters in themselves of such vast proportions and far reaching connections that they are enumerated here in order to show some of the outlines of the great questions that hinge upon the discussion of a subject that lies so close to the foundation of genuine Christianity; for whatever decision is reached with regard to the validity or fraudulence of the Book of Mormon, that decision tends either to confirm or invalidate the predictions of the Bible. That portions of Scripture have been rendered more or less contradictory and imperfect by mutilations and interpretations by designing and wicked men, and by vandalism and the ravages of time, none will deny; but when the Spirit of Truth accompanies the word, the darkness is made light, the crooked straight, and the wrong right, and we are enabled to recognize the word of the Lord whether in the stick of Judah or in the stick of Ephraim.

For the testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of prophecy.—Rev. 19: 10.

Fourth. Many of the prophecies and parables in the Bible contemplate a fuller delineation and interpretation at a time subsequent to their promulgation, in order that the text may not suffer violation, and that their import may be comprehended in the "times appointed." If it were not so, the wisdom of God would be more or less frustrated by the wicked devices of men and devils, and the wise would not "understand when good cometh."

This is fully sustained by many important passages of Scripture, a few of which may suffice. Daniel was a man beloved of God, yet he understood not the "times appointed" for the seventy years, in which the Lord would accomplish the desolation of Jerusalem. (Dan., chapters 9 and 10.) The parable of the nobleman "going into a far country and returning" again. (Luke 19.)

Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in.—Rom. 11: 25.

That in the dispensation of the fullness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him.—Eph. 1: 10.

Fifth. Seals, or epochs, are contemplated in the economy of God, as recorded in the Bible, for which certain works are reserved and should have a corresponding historical fulfillment in order to sustain or vindicate the word of God, and that his people might know of his ways and honor him. According to Amos,

The Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

The question arises, Is this an epoch or time in which God is doing something, or is it not? Every one will admit that the past sixty years has been a period of the most gigantic strides in all departments of science, art, literature, and invention, and in the natural or physical world it has developed as a period of "earthquakes in divers places," floods, tempests, the dreaded cyclone in districts where science said they could not come, moving pillars of fire, vapors of smoke, forest fires on a vast and extended scale, variation of seasons, "the waves heaving themselves beyond their bounds;" and in the social and political realm unrest, disorder, wars and rumors of wars, vast naval and military armaments, millions of men held in readiness for instant and deadly attack with the most destructive weapons that human ingenuity can contrive; famine, pestilence, false christs, false prophets and true; fiction, fraud, incontinence, distrust, the breaking up of confidence, and the loosening of the social cord; men running to and fro; the increase of knowledge, the amassing of mighty fortunes, the concentration of capital, and the consequent abject poverty of the masses; commotions and upheavals in all circles and in all societies; divisions, heresies, and truce-breakers; men's hearts failing them, and in continual fear "looking for things coming on the earth;" trusts, cliques, and combines, binding the people together in bundles, societies of various orders by oaths, signs, grips, and penalties, and, for what? To protect themselves in the business pursuits of life, which are rapidly becoming reduced to a perilous science in which, in many avocations, only the shrewdest and most unscrupulous can succeed; or to stand against some seen or suspected foe; strikes, in which proud and haughty men precipitate their fellows in ruin and death. What does it all mean? Has God acted like himself by forecasting the complexion of affairs for this generation? or has he failed to appoint and honor a prophet by foretelling what works he was going to perform? And is it in harmony with his word to Judah so to do? Hearken to the word of the Lord in ancient, medieval, and modern times; and those who think themselves spiritual, let them acknowledge that these things are so.

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

Selected Poetry.

YOU CAN NEVER TELL.

You never can tell when you send a word—
Like an arrow shot from a bow
By an archer blind—be it cruel or kind,
Just where it will chance to go.
It may pierce the breast of your dearest friend,
Tipped with its poison or balm;
To a stranger's heart in life's great mart
It may carry its pain or its calm.

You never can tell when you do an act,
Just what the result will be;
But with every deed you are sowing a seed,
Though its harvest you may not see.
Each kindly act is an acorn dropped
In God's productive soil;
Though you may not know, yet the tree shall grow
And shelter the brows that toil.

You never can tell what your thoughts will do
In bringing you hate or love;
For thoughts are things, and their airy wings
Are swifter than carrier doves.
They follow the law of the universe—
Each thing must create its kind;
And they speed o'er the track to bring you back
Whatever went out from your mind.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.

Conference convened with the Janesville branch at Porter Township, Rock County, Wisconsin, September 19, 20, at 10:30 a. m.; H. Southwick president, J. O. Dutton secretary. Branch reports: Janesville 46; loss 2. East Delavan 77; gain 12. Oregon 19; gain 7. Flora Fountain 65; gain 4. Ministry reporting: Elders E. M. Wildermuth, W. A. McDowell, C. H. Burr, J. W. Peterson, C. C. Hoague, W. P. Robinson, J. T. Hackett, H. Southwick, O. N. Dutton; Priests, August Johnson, A. Delap, Charles Sperry; Teachers, F. M. Ball, H. D. Lockwood. Bishop's agent's report: Collections $135.32; disbursements $93.00; on hand September 18, 1896, $42.32. Audited and accepted. Resolved that this conference hereby petition the General Conference to appoint Elder F. M. Cooper as a missionary to Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin for the conference year of 1897-1898. Resolved that hereafter all ministry reports to conference in the Southern Wisconsin district be made in writing, and that each member of the priesthood be hereby earnestly requested to so report at each and every conference, whether they be present at such conference or not. W. A. McDowell was elected president until next conference; Jasper O. Dutton was sustained as secretary for same time; C. C. Hoague was sustained as Bishop's agent. Resolved that the district president provide for two-days' meetings, time and place left to his discretion. Those in charge of gospel tents reported favorably. Preaching by W. P. Robinson, J. T. Hackett, and J. W. Peterson. Adjourned to Flora Fountain branch, January 30 and 31.

Sunday School Associations.

OHIO.

Met September 11, at 9:30 a. m.; H. E. Moler superintendent; G. T. Griffiths was chosen to assist in the exercises. Minnie Rhoades secretary. Report of organization was read and approved. Superintendent and secretary reported. Short speeches were then called for and responded to by G. T. Griffiths, who tried to impress upon the minds of Sunday school workers and teachers the great responsibility of their work, and the result of their labor would be for good if faithfully performed, also James Moler, Minnie Rhoades, Carrie Barstow, Phebe Erwin, Brn. Davidson and Perry, F. J. Ebeling, and Sr. Buler. Schools reporting 4. New Era, enrollment 41, Lagrange 28, Highland 45, Vale's Mills 54; total enrollment 168. Total collections $33.14; total disbursements $10.01; in treasury $23.13. An invitation was extended to the visiting brethren and sisters to participate in the business service of the convention. On separate motions the following officers were elected: D. J. Hannah superintendent, James Moler assistant, Minnie Rhoades secretary, Carrie Barstow treasurer. The delegates chosen to General Convention are: H. E. Moler, James Moler, F. J. Ebeling, S. J. Jeffers, and Charles Cooper. The time and place of meeting of next convention was left to the superintendent of district to designate. The secretaries of the different schools were requested to report on proper blanks. Drills in class work: Senior grade in charge of Minnie Rhoades, primary in charge of Carrie Barstow. The literary program in the evening was fully appreciated. Short speeches by several, together with recitations, essays, and inspiring songs made an enjoyable and instructive service.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Decatur association will convene at Lucas, Iowa, October 2, 7:30 p. m., holding four sessions. Friday morning will be devoted to business, afternoon to work calculated to demonstrate methods of teaching classes and conducting schools, and evening to an entertainment by the Lucas school; subject, Jesus of Nazareth in prophecy and fulfillment. Each school is urgently requested to send delegates, and all are cordially invited. Secretaries, please send reports of your schools. Heretofore there has not been sufficient effort put forth to attend our conventions. Let us improve by having a large gathering this time. Many of the older ones might easily come one day earlier and encourage the younger in their efforts. Will you try to be there?

BRONSON-MUSSER DEBATE.

Editors Herald:—The hotly-contested discussion of fourteen nights between Elder H. C. Bronson and Rev. Joseph Musser closed here last evening with a very large attendance. Six propositions were discussed as follows:—

1. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the Church of God, and in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization?
2. Is the Methodist Protestant Church, of which Rev. G. W. Kinney is a member, the Church of God and in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and organization?
3. Is the Book of Mormon of human origin?
4. Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?
5. Is the translation of the Bible by Joseph Smith an inspired work, and a better translation than King James', and entitled to the respect of all Christian people?
6. Does the Book of Doctrine and Covenants contain revelations from God, equal in authority with the Bible?

On the first proposition, about the same line of argument was introduced by Mr. Musser that is usually employed by those opposing us, Mark 16 receiving the usual twist—signs to follow the apostles only; and as for apostles and prophets in the church now, the original Twelve were in the church by their word, etc. Elder Bronson argued, that allowing this position, we only had less than half the Quorum of Apostles in the church; viz., Peter, James, John, and Matthew, all we have of the original twelve; and if Paul was to be counted, even then they only had five apostles, not yet half the quorum, these being the only ones who have written whose words have reached our day. Being driven from these points he then left the issue and sought consolation in the usual tirade.

In all this Elder Bronson made very plain to the people the reason why Musser had resorted to such subterfuge—he had nothing better with which to meet the logical argument arrayed against him; hence, to fill in his time, resorted to his usual stock in trade.

On the second proposition, Elder Bronson opened up with the Methodist Protestant Discipline, entirely annihilating it to the chagrin and utter discomfiture of Mr. Musser; so much so, that he acknowledged himself that although the Discipline had gone down, yet the Methodist Protestant Church would still stand. In his reply or answer to Elder Bronson's argument on the second chapter of Joel, where the Spirit was to be poured out upon all flesh, Mr. Musser said that "since Christ," whenever a person was converted, their influence was felt upon the animal creation making them docile; and that this was the fulfillment of Joel's prophecy. This is one sample of his brilliant logic. So completely was the Methodist Protestant Church overthrown that before the discussion closed on that proposition some of their members were led to say: "It's no use to carry it any further; it is gone!" Their superintendent stated that they had the wrong man on their side. Just imagine, Mr. Editor, a Campbellite preacher defending infant baptism, and then trying to gull the people into the idea that he is honest in his religion! Perhaps the forty dollars pledged him for his unholy onslaught on the saints may have been the mainspring inspiring him to sacrifice his Campbellite principle of "immersion for the remission of sins" to defend baby sprinkling. Among the Campbellites, Mr. Musser is a strong advocate of "The Bible and the Bible alone" theory, immersion the only mode of baptism, and believers in Christ the only subjects; but now, for a few paltry dollars, Judas-like, betrays Christ in denying these things, and defends the Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church and the dogma of infant sprinkling for baptism. Then when thus exposed, with grimaces, vile epithets, and contumely, dives under his cover of filth stolen from Clark Braden and others and caters to the mob element for his glory. Thinking people saw, however, the weakness of his attack; and were led to realize that his efforts would prove futile.

His arguments on the remaining propositions were of the old web: Jared's boat, "impostor Joe," "Mormon fraud," etc. One point he tried to make was as follows: The Inspired Translation in Genesis 50 declared that Joseph the Seer should be of the tribe of Joseph—a Josephite, that the Book of Mormon declared he should be a Gentile. (This he found on page 470, par. 1), and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants said, on page 199, that he should be a descendant of Aaron, or a Levite. Bro. Bronson let him run with this for several speeches; and, of course, he therefore thought he had a clincher, and three or four times in each speech, pounding the books with his fist, would shout, "If this is true, that's a lie; and if this is true, that's a lie; and if this is true then that and that's a lie; and if this [King James' Bible] is true, then its all lie," meaning the three books, "and Mormon humbug and delusion and it's a lie anyway." When Bro. Bronson thought he had got enough glory out of this, he punctured this bubble and exposed Mr. Musser's little game; then offered to take any boy ten years old and bring him upon the stand; read, or allow the chairman to read the books to him, and if that boy could not see the plain facts in the case and that there was no contradiction, he would yield the point to Mr. Musser. The boy was not brought up, and Musser dropped the matter like he would a hot potato. Some few speeches afterwards, however, he tried to revive it, but it fell flat and some hissed.

If Mr. Musser were to be deprived of what he has stolen from Clark Braden's lectures, and his debate with Bro. Kelley, he would be shorn of his strength and unnoticed by even our enemies as a lecturer.

As a specimen of the wonderful analytical power of his brilliantly equipped mind, in giving a philosophical exegesis of "an untruth," he squeaked out with emphasis running up to high "g" that "a fundamental truth containing an error is an untruth; and an untruth is a falsehood, and a falsehood is a lie." There! Dare anyone now at the expense of their honor declare that Mr. Musser is not a philosopher? And who could be expected to stand before such withering and irresistible logic as that?

One more point I wish to notice that he and others urge against the inspiration of Joseph Smith, is, that in the translation of King James' Bible, the Lord's prayer reads, "Lead us not into temptation." The Book of Mormon also reads, "Lead us not into temptation." Joseph in correcting by inspiration renders it: "Suffer us not to be led into temptation." Other passages of a similar nature are cited; for instance, "Depart from me, ye cursed, I never knew you."—King James. "Depart from me, ye cursed, I never knew you."—Book of Mormon. "Depart from me ye cursed, ye never knew me."—Inspired Translation. Against such it is urged that "the Book of Mormon being written about twelve hundred years before the translation of the Bible by King James' translators, how does it come that the same idiom was employed by the Nephites that was employed twelve hundred years later by said translators? Here is evidence of plagiarism. The Book of Mormon is largely stolen from the Bible, and the writer of it evidently had before him King James' Translation, from which he copied. Then in Joseph's claim of inspiration to correct King James' version, he had also corrected his former inspiration in his translation of the Book of Mormon.

To this Bro. Bronson argued that the constant mutation or change in a living language was a sufficient answer to the above objection. He showed that words employed by King James translators expressing the thoughts of the apostles, do not now express that thought; but, perhaps, a contrary one; for instance, Paul said to the Thessalonians, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now leteth will let until he be taken out of the way," etc. The word "let" as employed by King James' translators, and used by Paul, meant to "hinder;" or, "restrain;" but because of the constant mutation of language, that word had now the exact opposite meaning; that it now meant "to permit," "to allow." He also cited 2 Corinthians 8:1, where Paul said, "Moreover, brethren, we do you to wit, of the grace of God," etc., showing that the expression "we do you to wit," signified to Paul and also to King James' translators what we now express when we say, "We would have you to know." So, the words: "I never knew you," used in the days of Christ, and on down to King James' translators, conveyed what is now expressed by the words, "Ye never knew me." So that the Nephites and those who wrote the Bible used the same words to convey the same idea; and Joseph, as a faithful translator, translated the words expressive of that idea in the words as originally used by them; and then in his correction or revision of the Bible, employs the words expressing the same idea in our language now that was expressed by the Nephites and Bible writers in their time. Therefore, the Book of Mormon not having passed under the hand of divine revision, the language still remains as it was originally written.

Taking the discussion all through from first to last, it has been conducive of good, scores of people hearing the gospel that would not otherwise have heard it; and because of the gentlemanly way in which Bro. Bronson conducted himself all through the debate, he won for himself and the cause the general respect of the people accustomed to doing their own thinking; while Musser is considered by the same class as anything but a gentleman. His flopping over into the Methodist ranks and defending their doctrine for what little money there was in it, while at the same time declaring himself to be a Disciple preacher, shows him to be a penny-catcher, having neither principle nor honor; but like a tree toad, always the color of the bark he sits on. The work here is planted upon a firm basis, some excellent people having embraced the work, and prospects of an ingathering here soon. Places are opening up from which we hear the old Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," notwithstanding the continuous invective and misrepresentation by Mr. Musser and his supporters.

At the close of the discussion, one of the leading ladies of the Methodist Church came to Bro. Bronson, asked his pardon, confessing she had been too prejudiced against him and the church. We also wish to make honorable mention of Mr. and Mrs. Fobes Jewel, people of excellent ability and fine judgment, who stood by us through thick and thin, proving themselves friends of liberty and freedom of thought, and the uncompromising and inveterate foes of these little narrow, contracted, pessimistic views that have to be swallowed down because of the preacher's having sugar coated them. They are both excellent musicians and splendid singers; and we sincerely hope and pray that the loving, tender, and sacred influence of God's Holy Spirit may lead them to the ultimate realization of all that is grand and glorious in this great latter-day work.

Bro. Bronson expects to return to Detroit to-morrow, while I shall remain here for a time. We purpose looking after the work here this fall and winter, making this an objective point, and shall ever try to do the best we can under the varied conditions in which our lot may be cast; that whether peace or contention, cloud or sunshine; whether enjoying the aroma of confidence or suffering the cruel blasts of hate, whether gliding smoothly upon the placid sea, or mounting the crests of the storm-tossed billowy main; whether carried through the balmy streets of Fame's ethereal bowers, or trampled under by contending foes; we shall still strive to keep the camp fires blazing, knowing that the desire of All Nations, the Wonderful Counselor, is our God, our sun and shield, our exceeding strong tower, and our great reward; and though sometimes the pathway is thorny, and our feet may be bleeding with the poisonous fang of calumny, and though scorpions of slander and vituperation infest the way, yet we propose to press on and work till Jesus comes; ever remembering that as we climb the dizzy heights of adversity there is weakness in fear, and danger in looking back.

Very truly and sincerely yours,

WILLARD J. SMITH.

SANTA CRUZ REUNION.

From Wednesday until the close of the reunion there were probably two hundred and fifty saints in attendance, and in this, as in the first part, not a thing happened, to the knowledge of the writer, to mar the peace of any; the preaching, social meetings, and friendly conversations were of such a nature as to make all feel as though they were members of one great family. The Spirit manifested the gifts in the social meetings, inspiring some to prophesy, others to speak in tongues, and others to interpret them. While in some the Spirit inspired the gift of faith, in others it quickened the gift of wisdom and knowledge, "dividing to every man severally as he will," giving in general that thrill of joy known to none but those who have obeyed the true Gospel of Christ, which was a foretaste of that great testimony meeting where the righteous of all dispensations shall gather together, and tell of the wonderful things of this age and nation.

There seemed to be an intense anxiety on the part of the older saints for the welfare and spiritual progress of the young people. The sisters devoted one of their afternoon meetings to prayer for the young folks. Truly this was timely, for when fathers and mothers behold the snares and forces for evil, tending to detract the minds of the young from sobriety and spirituality, and see worldliness so amazingly on the increase, it makes their hearts ache in contemplating what the future may bring forth. And this apprehension is not without just cause, especially in California. After this two young people's meetings were held, each one being a feast, many of the young so expressing themselves. They were blest, comforted, cheered; and many resolved to try hard to do better than ever before.

On Saturday there was baptizing at four o'clock, at which time thirteen were ushered into the kingdom, Bro. Burton officiating in the ordinance. A large crowd of people gathered on the river banks and many passing pedestrians, and those in buggies and wagons stopped and lingered as if to enhance the beauty and solemnity of the scene. It was a beautiful sight indeed. These, and one that was baptized the day before, made fourteen in all during the reunion.

On Sunday evening, at the last service, Bro. Luff was the speaker and discoursed to a large audience, the pavilion being filled to overflowing. Then came the disagreeable part of the reunion, — the good-byes; but it only served to cause us all to cast our hope in the future and console ourselves with the thought that we could all meet again, and with it the resolution to so live that we would be permitted to do so.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The place for holding the conference of the Northern Minnesota district has been changed from Girard to the town of Maine, Ottertail County, at the schoolhouse, near Bro. William Barnhard's. The nearest railroad station to that place is Underwood, between Fergus Falls and Wadena. The conference will be held October 10 and 11, as before announced.

Your brother in Christ,

G. L. JONES, Sec.

Very Rev. Augustine F. Hewit contributes a keen article on the subject of "Constantinople against Rome" to The Catholic World Magazine for October. The paper is a commentary on the recent reply of the Greek Patriarch in Turkey to the Pope's Encyclical on Unity.

The frontispiece of the October Review of Reviews is a portrait of Sir Joseph Lister, the eminent British Surgeon, whose discovery of the value of antiseptics has so revolutionized modern surgical methods, and who was honored, last year, by election to the presidency of the British Association for the Advancement of science. Another interesting picture in the October Review is a photograph of Mr. Gladstone and Li Hung Chang.

The Chicago Times-Herald stands out as one of the most splendid publications in the country. Everything that it contains is clever, original, and progressive, and it sometimes seems a pity that so much genuinely fine literary work as goes to the making of this paper, should form a part of that daily news which has its birth and death in twenty-four hours.—Atlanta Constitution.

BORN.

CRAVENS.—Azal P. Cravens, was born to Bro. Elkama and Sr. Rebecca Cravins July 20, 1896, at Wakenda, Ray County, Missouri. Blessed at the Wakenda church September 14, 1896, by J. M. Terry and James N. Cato. This is a grandchild of Father Cravens of renown in that region.

MARRIED.

BARR—HAWES.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 30, at the home of the parents of the bride, Bro. J. W. Barr and Sr. Chloe A. Hawes were united in marriage, President Joseph Smith performing the ceremony in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and friends. Friends and acquaintances join in good wishes in behalf of the happy couple.

ARCHIBALD—STODDARD.—At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stoddard, Lamoni, Iowa, the evening of September 30, A. D. 1896, Mr. Thomas S. Archibald, of Burlington, Iowa, and Miss Nellie M. Stoddard, of Lamoni, Iowa, were joined in wedlock, Bishop E. L. Kelley officiating in the ceremonies. Miss Stoddard was one of Lamoni's fairest and brightest young ladies, and will ever make home cheerful and happy. Mr. Archibald bears the highest reputation and is connected with a good business firm of Burlington, Iowa. The happy couple has the kindest wishes of our citizens.

DIED.

BISSELL.—In Harrison County, Missouri, August 27, 1896, of dropsy, Sister Lucinda Bissell, aged 70 years, 6 months, and 14 days. Her maiden name was Bartlett, and she was born in Cayuga County, New York. In 1845, she united in marriage with Mr. Roger Bissell, who survives her. To them were born two daughters and one son, of whom the son alone remains. She was a good wife and a kind mother. In 1867 she accepted the latter-day work and was baptized on May 12 by Elder John C. Gaylord, at Marengo, Illinois, where she lived until 1870. In that year she and her husband removed to Decatur county, Iowa. Her faith in the gospel was very steadfast to the end. The funeral was held in the Lone Rock chapel, Bro. C. H. Jones preaching the sermon. Thus has gone to rest a good woman, a faithful saint, one always hospitable, and whose home was a place of rest, her husband sharing with her in the acts of kindness and friendship.

RUSSELL.—At Grinnell, Iowa, September 20, 1896, at the residence of her son, Bro. S. E. Russell, Mrs. Polly Russell, aged 99 years, 2 months, and 20 days. She was united in wedlock May 16, 1816, to Isaac Russell. To them ten children were born, of whom three survive. Sister Russell was a member of the old church, also united with the Reorganized Church many years ago. All her comfort and hope was in the gospel promises. For nearly ten years she was confined to her room, being unable to walk, and at the time of her death was almost blind and deaf. Death came as a sweet release.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.
 This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.
 By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding....35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

REPLY OF THE GREEK CHURCH TO THE POPE'S ENCYCLICAL.

THE encyclical which Pope Leo addressed to the Greek Church in July, 1894, on the subject of reunion, was quite widely quoted and commented upon at the time. The reply which the Greek Church made last August has obtained comparatively little currency, and what quotations were made from it by English and American journals were made from an unsatisfactory translation. A new edition has, however, been printed by the publishers of Atlantis, a Greek journal, published weekly in this city, and from this edition some of the Protestant papers, notably the Christian Advocate, are using extracts in reply to the claims made in the Pope's recent encyclical published in this country June 30.

The reply of the Greek Church is termed "A Patriarchal and Synodical Encyclical Letter to the Most Sacred and God-Beloved Metropolitans and Bishops, and Brethren in Christ; and to the sacred and reverend clergy under them; and to the entire pious and orthodox community of the Most Holy Apostolic and Patriarchal Throne of Constantinople." It is signed by thirteen hierarchs. It begins by reference to the "arrogant pretentiousness" of the "Bishops of Rome," and to the attempt of Pope Leo XIII. to bring about union "by a recognition of himself as Chief Pontiff and supreme spiritual and temporal ruler." The desire for reunion is lauded, and the letter then states conditions of reunion as follows:—

"For the realization of the pious desire of the reunion of the churches, it is necessary, first of all things, to define some common principle and basis. And such secure common principle and basis can be none other than the teaching of the Gospel and of the Seven Holy Ecumenical Councils. When, therefore, we refer to that teaching, which remained common to the church both of the East and the West up to the time of their separation, it is incumbent on us to inquire, with a sincere wish to comprehend the truth, what was it that the entire body of the one Holy Catholic and Apostolic Church of Christ throughout East and West believed at that time; and to that belief, entire and unaltered, we must hold fast. And whatever else has been added or subtracted in later times, that it is the sacred and indispensable duty of every one, if he sincerely seeks the glory of God rather than his own glory, to set it aright, in a spirit of piety; remembering that, if he proudly persist in the perversion of truth, he incurs a heavy responsibility before the impartial judgment seat of Christ."

The letter then goes on to specify the "dangerous innovations" which the Roman Catholic Church has introduced. The use of unleavened bread in the celebration of the Divine Eucharist is one innovation; the admission that the elements of the Sacrament are sanctified with the enunciation of the words, "Take, eat," etc., instead of by the blessing of the priest, is another; a third consists in depriving the laity of the sacred chalice; a fourth consists in the powers assumed by the Pope over the spirits in Purgatory; a fifth, the "novel doctrine of the immaculate conception of the Theotokos and ever Virgin Mary." The letter then passes on to the claim of supremacy made by the Bishop of Rome, as follows:

"Overlooking, however, these material and weighty differences in the belief of the two churches—differences created, as we have seen, in the West—his beatitude [Pope Leo XIII.] represents in his encyclical that the question of the supremacy of the Roman bishops is the decisive and only cause of discord, and refers us to original sources wherein to seek what it was that our forefathers thought thereof, and what was the tradition of early Christianity. But when we do refer back to the Fathers and to the ecumenical councils of the first nine centuries, we find that the Bishop of Rome was never regarded as the supreme authority or as the infallible head of the church; but that every bishop was the head and president of his own particular church, subject only to synodical decrees and to the decisions of the church at large, which alone is infallible. From this rule the Bishop of Rome was in no wise exempted, as ecclesiastical history shows, since the sole eternal Chief and the immortal Head of the Church is our Lord Jesus Christ; for 'He is the head of the body of the church;' He who hath said to his divine disciples and apostles at the ascension into heaven, 'And lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.' Peter, whom the papists—basing themselves on the apocryphal pseudo-Clementines of the second century—have purposely imagined to have been the founder of the Roman Church and its first bishop, Peter is seen in Scripture discussing as an equal with equals in the Apostolic Council of Jerusalem. On another occasion he is bitterly rebuked by Paul, as it is manifest in the Epistle to the Galatians. The very Gospel text to which the Roman pontiff refers, 'Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church,' was interpreted during the early ages of the church, both by the tradition and by all the divine and sacred Fathers without exception—as the papists themselves well know—in an entirely different manner, and in an orthodox spirit; the immovable fundamental rock on which the Lord built his church, and against which the gates of hell shall not prevail, was understood metaphorically to signify the right confession which Peter had made concerning the Lord: 'Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God.' On this confession of faith rests firmly the saving message of Gospel preached by all the apostles and their successors. Therefore the heaven-soaring Apostle Paul refers manifestly to this divine sentence when he declares by divine inspiration: 'According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise master-builder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon. For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.' In another sense, again, he designates all the apostles and prophets as the foundation of the spiritual advancement of the faithful in Christ; namely, the members of the body of Christ, 'which is the church,' saying to the Ephesians: 'Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone.' Such being the inspired teaching of the apostles touching the foundation and the head of the Church of God, it is but natural that the divine Fathers, who hold fast to the apostolic traditions, should neither entertain nor conceive any idea of an absolute supremacy, either in the Apostle Peter or in the bishops of Rome; nor could they attribute to the gospel text in question an interpretation wholly foreign to the church, but only the true and orthodox one. They could not invent, arbitrarily and of their own will, the novel doctrine of an overbearing supremacy of the Roman bishop as a pretended successor to Peter; and this, notwithstanding that the Church of Rome was founded properly not by Peter, of whose apostolic activity in Rome history knows nothing, but through the disciples of the heaven-soaring apostle of the Gentiles, Paul, whose apostolic ministry in Rome is, besides, clear to all."

The letter then refers to the views of the early church regarding the status of the Bishop of Rome as "the first bishop in point of order—that is, the first among equals." His subjection to synodic decisions is also asserted as a doctrine of the early church. Then comes the following passage:—

"The early seeds of those absolutist pretensions of the papacy were sown in the pseudo-Clementines, but they were matured exactly at this time of Nicholas [I.], in this so-called pseudo-Isidorian Decretals, which are a mass of spurious and counterfeit royal ordinances and letters of ancient bishops of Rome, whereby, contrary to all historic truth and to the established government of the church, it was purposely put forth that primitive Christianity accorded to the bishops of Rome unbounded authority over the church at large.

"It is with sorrow of soul that we recount these facts. For though the papal church now admits the spurious and counterfeit nature of those decretals, on which her arrogant pretensions are based, yet refuses stubbornly to return to the canons and decrees of the ecumenical councils; and on the approach of the end of this nineteenth century she has even officially proclaimed the Bishop of Rome to be infallible—to the amazement of the entire Christian world and to the widening of the existing breach. The Orthodox Eastern and Catholic Church of Christ knows of no one infallible but the ineffably incarnated Son and Word of God. And the Apostle Peter himself, whose successor the Pope presumes to be, thrice denied the Lord, and was thrice censured by the Apostle Paul as not standing uprightly in respect to gospel truth. Then the Pope Liberius, in the fourth century, subscribed an Arian confession; and likewise Zosimus, in the fifth century, approved of an heretical confession denying original sin; Virgilius, in the sixth century, was condemned by the Fifth Council for misbelief; and in the seventh century, Honorius, having fallen into the heresy of the Monothelites, was also condemned by the Sixth Ecumenical Council as a heretic, and the popes, his successors, acknowledged and admitted his condemnation."

For all of which reasons, the Eastern Church is "the one holy Catholic and apostolic church of Christ," the Roman Church being "the church of innovations, of the falsification of the writings of the Fathers, of the misinterpretation both of Holy Scriptures and of the decrees of the Holy Councils." The letter ends belligerently with a quotation from Gregory of Nazianzus: "Praiseworthy war is far better than a peace that separates us from God."—Literary Digest, August 15, 1896.

IS ENGLAND'S PROSPERITY MENACED?

The chief obstacles to the progress of education in England are party spirit and religious intolerance. Proposals for educational reform are discussed and decided, not in a philosophical spirit, but with all the acrimony of partisans. Yet it is admitted that the case is a very urgent one; that England is engaged in a struggle with her foreign competitors not only for the supremacy but even for the very existence of her industries; that her workers are worse instructed than their rivals, and are on that account going to the wall; and that better education, both elementary and technical, is vital to the continuance of her prosperity. It is the fact that in both town and country elementary instruction is so backward that, even if adequate technical schools were provided, the mass of the people are unfitted to take full advantage of them. Yet, notwithstanding all this, English statesmen will postpone reform indefinitely if they can see their way to secure a party advantage thereby. The only hope is that public opinion may appreciate, before it is too late, the position of education, both elementary and technical; may become agreed as to the direction in which development ought to take place, and may force Parliament and the government to grapple with the difficulties which have to be overcome.—From Prospects of Education in England, by the Right Hon. Sir John E. Gorst, in North American Review for October.

The Chicago Times-Herald is perhaps the best and most fearless paper in the west. It attacks crime and fraud in every form; does not hesitate to name in its columns the parties who are enemies of the public. It is most ably edited and should be in every household in the land. Such papers, fearless and bold to denounce wrong in any form, are public benefactors.—Raymond Register.

THE EVANELIA DISASTER.

THE saints will appreciate the effort of Brn. Burton and Luff to furnish them particulars concerning the loss of the Evanelia. Here is their account, obtained direct from the lips of a survivor:—

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 26.

Editors Herald:—Doubtless all your many readers, like ourselves, feel very sorrowful by the news of the loss of the "Evanelia," and hoping to learn some particulars concerning the disaster we went on board of the "Tropic Bird" which lately arrived from Tahiti. She is now on the "dry dock," stripping off her two and a half year old copper which is so much corroded as to be useless, and is putting on new metal. Her metal was 20 oz., the Evanelia's 16 oz.

Upon inquiry we learned that a young man came from Tahiti as passenger on the "Tropic Bird" who was on board of the "Evanelia" when she foundered. We went to his hotel and in conversation with him obtained the following information: The "Evanelia" was loaded with about forty tons, dead weight, of bufa (dried cocoonut) and pearl shells. The cabin was filled up to the deck with bufa in bulk and the lockers under the cockpit filled with shells, and bufa and shells in sacks were piled on deck, and on top of the cabin, this with nearly ten tons of iron ballast, making fifty tons in all, was altogether too much load for the little nineteen tons "Evanelia" to swim with, and the native Captain protested vehemently against it; but Captain McGrath thought it was all right, and so went to sea with her in that condition on the morning of July 26, from Rairoa, bound for Tahiti two hundred miles away, with nine persons on board. The little vessel staggered along under this overload, beating to windward until afternoon, when this young man told Captain McGrath that he thought his vessel was sinking, and that he had better throw overboard his deck load; but he thought the passenger was unnecessarily alarmed, and therefore paid no heed to his advice. A short time after this the young man went forward to see how she looked there (for the cargo was piled so high on the cabin top that those aft could not see forward) and he found that she had settled so much that the heel or inner end, of the bowsprit was under water. He at once told Captain McGrath, who went and saw for himself and immediately began to throw overboard the deck load, but it was now too late—one of the natives cut the boat-davits' falls, which let the boat loose from the tackles just as the "Evanelia" plunged bows foremost, down—down thousands of fathoms in the great deep, about five o'clock p. m., July 26, about seven or eight miles off Rairoa. The men all jumped overboard and got into the little boat, which, after drifting about a few hours was picked up by a large boat, the "Temere," and taken back to Rairoa. The pumps were not tried nor sounded from the time she left Rairoa, and the former bumpings she had on the rocks and the fact that her topsides had never before been under water and doubtless had shrunk some in the two years out there in the hot weather, with the excessive load and the unusual strain caused by it, is sufficient to account for her foundering without attributing any extraordinary giving away of butts or planks.

It seems that Captain McGrath had contracted to carry ninety tons of bufa from Rairoa to Tahiti, and was anxious to take as much as possible that trip, so that he could take the remainder in two more trips; so he took all the cabin furniture ashore and filled the cabin full with the bufa in bulk; and that twenty-four tons of bufa and the shells and the iron were too much for the little boat; she could not float at all. Neptune's laws had been transgressed; the penalty had to be paid.

The above is just as we received it from the lips of the passenger referred to.

J. F. BURTON.

JOSEPH LUFF.

In connection with the above we give also copy of the instruction and advice of the Bishop to the missionary in charge in the Islands, May 25, 1896:—

I hope that no change with reference to the use of the vessel will be made so far as making it a merchant trader is concerned, until after the arrival of Bro. Burton, and he will look after the disposition of the vessel so far as its use is concerned, as well as its care, and protection. It has never been expected that the vessel could be properly manned and run without some expense so far as the church is concerned, and it would be better to pay Bro. McGrath, or some other individual who can properly look after it, whatever is necessary, than to begin to use the vessel for work that it was never expected it would engage in when built. It is all proper to aid brethren in different islands in conveying their goods to Tahiti, when the vessel is going on such trip anyway, but to make a regular trading vessel out of it will be a mistake, and the end to such a change will result in more loss to the church, than it will gain by the same.

DISCUSSION.

WE have received a number of additional articles on the subject of "corset wearing," but as the topic has been quite fully discussed already in the HERALD, we shall be obliged to decline further discussions of it, at least for the present.

One brother writes objecting to the differences of opinion manifested by elders and other writers for the church paper. He regrets that he cannot lend the HERALD to friends lest they see men and women arrayed on different sides of questions, and hopes for the time when all shall see "eye to eye." To this we have only to say that, in our opinion, should the HERALD permit the discussion of but one side of any or all questions in its columns and the elders be disposed to consider but one side, it would not be worth reading nor their opinions worth regarding. It would prove to be both narrow and unprogressive in spirit.

Discussion is necessary to liberty and progress, and the policy of the HERALD in permitting both sides to be heard in its columns is the strongest kind of recommendation in its favor, one to which our people can point with honor and satisfaction. Truth invites and promotes inquiry. Its cause is furthered by examination. The spirit of the gospel is expressed by the well-known text, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." This should be and is the spirit manifested by those commissioned to represent it. We could well be ashamed of the church organ and the eldership did they disregard the principle of examination, the primary factor of progress.

It is the spirit of extreme conservatism in religion that clings to the errors of the past and cries down discussion. The tendency to hold up the creeds and other errors of the past as landmarks is always accompanied by the disposition to avoid close scrutiny. The sentiment of the present age is against such a policy, however. Activity and analysis are the watchwords of the present period, and merit is demanding as the seal of approval. The spirit of life has appeared and touched the stagnant pool, creating an agitation that is rapidly causing the noxious and erroneous to disappear, while what remains and finds acceptance will do so only because of its self-evident correctness. Life, motion, activity is natural, is seen in the economy of nature. Even so-called inanimate substances continually grow when in a normal condition. This law of growth is peculiarly manifested in the intellectual and other states of a people, and it is manifestly true that when societies or nations become stagnant they lose life and disappear as forces for good.

It is just as essential for us as a people to analyze questions and policies as for others. It is questionable whether in all the ages to come attainment can be reached by any other process, for it doubtless is one of the first principles of progress. No one mind comprehends or is able to comprehend the many phases of truth, unaided by other forces of mind; nor does it seem to be designed that it should so comprehend. Man is a dependent creature; he works with others for his own and others good. Diversity of views expressed leads to proper conclusions and makes apparent the correctness of those conclusions because tested by the contrast of counter propositions or forces.

We conclude by emphasizing the absolute necessity of candor in spirit and fairness of method in discussion. No one can learn the truth, the whole truth unsullied by error, unless he examine it absolutely without bias, and is willing to concede its facts as they are. It remains true that men frequently are so biased, hampered, or prejudiced in spirit or by lack of candor that they are unable to reach correct conclusions or render just decisions. Truth must be freely and fully welcomed in the heart, in its fullest sense, that complete liberty, enlightenment, and progress be attained. To this desired end the policy of investigation has been championed by the eldership and by the HERALD as advocates of the latter-day work; at least this is as we understand its spirit and policy. To this we think the brother whose letter we have referred to cannot reasonably object.

THE POPE ON ANGLICAN ORDERS.

A LONDON cablegram of the 19th presents this item concerning the Pope's decision concerning the validity of Anglican orders. Perhaps the Pope and his ecclesiastical associates may at some time have to face the problem of apostolic succession from another standpoint, and in which the question of "authority" will not so easily be disposed of by the Church of Rome. No doubt it will come in its time:—

The decision of the Pope in the question of the validity or invalidity of Anglican orders is received with great satisfaction by Evangelical churchmen. He has done what Mr. Gladstone, with Lord Halifax as mentor, considered impossible. The Pope has made an exhaustive study of the subject and has deliberately confirmed the decrees of his predecessors respecting the invalidity of Anglican orders, thereby setting the seal of his own approval upon the traditions of the Roman Church. Cardinal Vaughan was evidently well informed when he condemned as delusive Mr. Gladstone's hopes for a reunion of the two churches on a compromise of the question of Anglican orders.

SUBSTANTIAL ground for hope in the early development of China is afforded in the following report concerning the construction of another railway to traverse her territory. The sight of puffing locomotives and rapidly moving trains will doubtless set the Chinaman to thinking as the missionaries may not now be able to lead him to thinking. He will see the advantages of western improvements and begin to study the system of civilization by which such are made possible. Old things are passing away. God is overruling the destinies of men:—

PEKIN, Oct. 5.—Consent has been given by the Chinese Government for the building of a branch of the Silesian railway across Northern Manchuria, with a pre-emption clause giving China the right of purchasing this branch after thirty years. Permission to construct a branch through Southern Manchuria was refused. Shang Taotai, the Director of Railways, will probably obtain the concession for the Hankow-Pekin line.

A SCIENTIFIC PREDICTION.

WE endeavor to keep track of the spiritual prophecies, good and bad, false and true; of their successes and failures. We also try to give the predictions of scientists, true or false, that their record of success or failure may also be scanned and their merits or demerits known. Here is a scientific prediction, so called. If this one be somewhat indefinite it shows at least that scientific prophets at times join with others in predicting physical disasters:—

London, Sept. 19.—Jerome K. Jerome's paper, entitled To-day, called attention to-day in a serious paragraph to an eminent French scientist, who will not permit his name to be published, and who says that the world, so far as Europe is concerned, is coming to an end. He adds that the earth is certainly cooling in France and Belgium, and that it is likely in the very near future that we shall see great changes. In the north of France, where such a thing has before been unknown, there have already been earthquakes, and the same thing has happened in Belgium. The unknown scientist further states that there are two or three French mountains slipping, while, he concludes, the Swiss mountains are subsiding.

CENTRAL AMERICAN STATES UNITED.

THE consolidation and growth of the Central American republics, projected some years ago, seems to be making progress, according to the following:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5.—The State Department has been informed, through Consul Little at Tegucigalpa, of the meeting in the City of Salvador on September 15 of the first diet of the "Greater Republic of Central America," under the treaty of union celebrated June 20, 1895, between Honduras, Nicaragua, and Salvador. The delegates were E. Constantino Fiallos and Cesar Bonilla of Honduras, Juan Manuel Arce and Eugenio Mendoza of Nicaragua, Jacinto Castellanos and one yet to be named in place of Dr. Matus for Salvador. The preliminary work of the diet is confined to an effort to induce the Republics of Guatemala and Costa Rica to join the union and to draft a constitution for the new republic. The treaty provides that the word "greater" shall be dropped from the title of the republic when Costa Rica and Guatemala join it.

THE city of Guayaquil, Ecuador, almost destroyed by fire.

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 8.—The fire at Guayaquil, Ecuador, which is said to have destroyed fifteen squares of that town, included the most important buildings in it. Among the buildings known to have been destroyed are four banks, all the foreign consulates, all the hotels except one, two churches, all the principal business houses, the military barracks, and the arsenal. Guayaquil has been burned from the post office to the custom-house, the flames extending from the bank of the river. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin. Some arrests have been made. Many people lost their lives during the fire, and the losses are now estimated at 80,000,000 sacres ($54,400,000). The populace is furious, and is demanding the prompt punishment of the guilty.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. C. CLAPP wrote from Santa Cruz, California, September 28, having returned from the northwest for a time because of ill health:—

I am getting better but am hardly able for duty yet, although I preached twice yesterday. I don't know when I will be able to return to my northern mission.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser, Cleveland, Ohio, October 5:—

A very peaceful conference closed here last evening. The light of inspiration was with us. One estimable lady from Vermillion, Ohio, was present and was baptized. Others earnestly investigating were present. The Cleveland saints entertained their guests excellently. The papers made excellent reports of our work. Adjourned to meet the first Saturday and Sunday in March, at Blakes' Mills, Ohio.

Bro. M. C. Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts, the 2d inst.:—

Work in Boston improving. Elder H. J. Davison, of Nova Scotia, preached here Sunday morning and evening. Sunday school, Religio, Sons and Daughters of Zion, and Mite Society all in working order. So we go.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, Foster, Iowa, October 6:—

It is getting cool for meetings and sleeping in the tent. We are having a most excellent hearing, with several deeply interested. On Sunday I baptized two. Married a couple last evening. Both Chase and I are under the weather with cold. Have been out seventy-six days, missed seventeen services on account of storms, removals, and want of congregations. Five meetings by others, and I have preached seventy-eight times. On Sunday we held five services. Pray for us.

Bro. J. F. Mintun, Clearwater, Nebraska, October 5:—

Bro. Joseph Smith arrived here last Saturday eve and preached three sermons yesterday, the third one being a long and strong one. He with myself will remain here till Thursday when we go to attend the Sunday school convention and conference of the Northern Nebraska district to be held 9th to 11th, at Fremont, Nebraska. The secretary of the three days' camp meeting held here will send you items, hence I will say nothing further than that we had an interesting meeting, everything considered. I begin a discussion with Elder J. A. Seaton of the Christian Church on the evening of the 12th; six sessions to each.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A LATE letter from Bro. E. W. Nunley, of Cook's Point, Texas, states that he is to enter upon another discussion, with a Campbellite, near Marlin, Falls County, Texas, October 12. He trusts in the Lord for victory.

Bro. James Tankard, of Independence, Missouri, desires to learn the whereabouts of Brn. Joseph Tankard and Bro. Bradshaw. He desires to hear from them.

Bro. F. M. Oldham, his address Clyde Post Office, Callahan County, Texas, requests us to state that the country where he lives is a good one and that land can be purchased at $3.50 per acre on ten years' time.

Bro. B. F. Ordway sends us an advertisement "Quit-Tobac," a preparation warranted to cure the tobacco habit, or money refunded. The terms of the ad are fair. Those who have not yet freed themselves from the habit of the filthy weed may find just what would help them in the preparation ordered. It is worth a trial. Others are said to have been greatly benefited by its use, to the extent that the desire for tobacco has been controlled and finally overcome.

Bro. A. V. Closson reports the work favorably progressing in Wisconsin. He had baptized thirteen since their June conference and they were to dedicate their church at Porcupine, Wisconsin, on the 18th of October.

Elder Andrew Barr reports progress in the work in the Eastern Michigan district with a goodly number of additions during the summer.

Elder George H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, is laboring in Central and Southern Illinois, preaching at Kibbie, Xenia, and Brush Creek, where he will remain till after the 11th of October.

Bro. S. J. Jeffers, of Arbaugh, Ohio, reports an excellent conference and great interest manifest in the work by the people; five baptisms during the session.

The October number of the North American Review is replete with discussions of national and general topics. Foreign and domestic politics, educational and economic questions now agitating the popular mind universally receive lengthy consideration. The monthly review is necessary to full reading, and the North American Review is among the foremost of such publications. Edited by David A. Munro, published at No. 3 East Fourteenth Street, New York.

Eleven were baptized at Lamoni on Sunday, the 4th inst. Baptisms are of frequent occurrence on the Lord's Day and during the week. The work grows at headquarters as well as abroad.

General Porfirio Diaz was re-elected President of Mexico for four years, his term beginning December 1. There is general rejoicing over the result of the election.

Bro. A. B. Pierce announces the baptism of four at Plainville, Massachusetts, on the 20th ult., by Bro. C. A. Coombs.

A severe storm caused great damage at all points along the English, Irish, and Welsh coasts October 6-8. At Ilfracomb, Devonshire, the sea washed away a hundred feet of wall, flooding the lower part of the town. At Porthcawl the seas were sixty feet high and crashed over the breakwater. Vessels at sea were severely handled and some are missing. Floods are reported in various parts of Wales.

Original Poetry.

EVENING BREEZE.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

'Tis good to feel the evening breeze
Flow upward through its dreamy banks
Of swinging grapevines, and of trees,
Majestic in their somber ranks.

To feel it bathe the fevered face,
And flow along the weary form,
As some fond lover's soft embrace
That makes the heart grow young and warm.

To watch the forest as it stands,
A tawny hulk, that swiftly dims
Into the far-off twilight lands
Of shadow trunks, with shadow limbs.

To feel the soul grow weak with awe
At the far-shining stars of night
Unhampered, yet controlled by law,
And each to each a welcome light.

O Savior walking by by side
Whom all the day I failed to see,
Extend thy patient hand to guide
That I may tread the night with thee!

"The cloud unto its parent stream
That rushes to the sea
Reveals a far-reflected dream
Of heaven's tranquillity;
And unto faith's adoring sight
A mystery appears.—
A cloud transfigured by the light
In every tide of tears."

Dear Home Column:—I have often wanted to write and get some advice on a matter very near to my heart, but for that very reason I have been diffident about laying it bare to others. I had seen so much in the Herald and Autumn Leaves to the young in regard to choosing companions for life, and I indorse it all. But what about us (I presume there are others) who have already chosen? Not that I regret my choice. I have been married seven years, and love my husband a thousand times better, if possible, than I did when we were married, and I loved him dearly then. But it is because I do love him, that I see his faults, and would, if I could, help him to overcome them. When we were married I did not know he ever drank. True, I never asked him, and I know now I should have, but that will not help matters now. Soon after, I learned that he takes an occasional glass of beer, and frequently something stronger. Not enough, as he says, to do him any harm, for he says he has sense enough to know when he has enough. But his strongest argument is, that his father (now dead) always drank as he does, occasionally, and if he can live and die as good a man as his father, 'tis all he asks. And he says truly; his father was a good man, beloved by nearly everyone, a faithful worker in the church, and holding the priesthood. My husband says he was none the worse for what little liquor he drank. In his last sickness he kept it in the house and drank it every day to strengthen him, and gave it to his boys. So you see that what has been the example set before him for so many years I can say nothing to remove. He thinks it's just a notion of mine and it would be a weakness to give way to a woman's whim when it does no harm (he thinks). When we were first acquainted he was a great slave to tobacco; both smoked and chewed a great deal. About a month from that time he quit it entirely without my ever asking him to, or even expressing the wish that he would. But he told me once (only) that he quit because he knew I disliked it so, and didn't want to disgust me by the smell every time he came near me. He has never touched it for so long, and I've always been so proud of it, till in the last few months he has taken to occasionally smoking a cigar. He says not enough to hurt anyone, but that the greatest charm tobacco ever had for him was in the shape of a cigar, and that he hasn't the slightest craving for it in any other form. But I'm so afraid it will all come back in time. Oh! will some one tell me what to do. It only seems to make matters worse for me to say anything to him about it, or the drinking. He is a dear, good husband in every other way; belongs to the church, and seems to take a great interest in the work. Is kind and loving, and a good provider, but is so strong in his own strength, he thinks, that there is no danger. As I have said, it don't do any good to argue, and he reads very little. He is a great worker, always very busy. What ought I to do? Let matters rest and trust the Lord to bring all around right in the end? I have prayed till it seems as if the Lord must tire of the same thing over again.

I feel that if I were only nearer perfect myself, what I could say to him might have more weight. But I am quick-tempered and petulant myself, and hard as I do try, come far short of conquering my own faults, and so cannot by my own example expect him to conquer his.

Sometimes when I look at the other men around me, drinking, and swearing, and carousing, and doing other things, so much worse, I feel maybe I ought to feel thankful he is no worse and let him alone. But I cannot. God help me to be patient. But the thought of it worries me day and night. Pray for me and my dear husband, sisters, that we may do right and be guided by the Holy Spirit in all things, for my desire is to do God's will and that only. If some one can give me a few words of experience it will be thankfully received. O, that I may overcome my own shortcomings and help him overcome his, is the prayer of

DANCING.

A SHORT time ago an article on dancing appeared in your columns. I send you a few additional thoughts. My interest on this theme has lately been stirred up by reading the correspondence of Elders I. N. White and Samuel G. Spencer in July 1st and 15th numbers of Saints' Herald. Samuel G. Spencer is a Utah elder and defends dancing as scriptural and beneficial under certain restrictions. He gives four passages of scripture as supporting his theories; namely: 1. "Let them praise his name in the dance," etc.—Ps. 149: 3. 2. "Praise him with the timbrel and dance," etc.—Ps. 150: 4. 3. "Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together."—Jer. 31: 13. 4. "Now his elder son was in the field; and as he came and drew nigh to the house, he heard music and dancing."—Luke 15: 25.

Let us study these passages to see if they support dancing, as we use the term in this our day. The dance referred to in the first two passages refers without a doubt to a religious ceremony—expressions of religious joy and gratitude. But in examining the marginal reading we find the word "pipe," in both texts quoted, are used interchangeably with "dance." Then it is possible that the dance referred to in these two passages, at least, consisted of music only.

Third reference, Jeremiah 31: 13. Does this passage teach that the virgins will dance with the young men and also with the old men? Is it straining the passage to say that the virgins will dance together and the men, both old and young, will dance together? or in other words, does it necessarily imply a mingling of the sexes in the social dance? I think not.

The fourth passage (Luke 15: 25) refers to the dancing held in honor of the prodigal's return. It was an expression of joy, and there is nothing to show that it resembled our modern dances.

Among the Jews, perhaps the religious dance was the most general. The timbrel was used to direct the dance and it was led by some individual whom the rest followed, with measured step and devotional songs, words, music, and motion aiding each other in expressing the joy or sorrow of the soul.

Dances were sometimes practiced in honor of a conqueror, as in Judges 11: 34, Jephthah's daughter met him with music and dancing, after the conquest of the Ammonites. And also in 1 Samuel 18: 6, 7 we find the women of Israel going to meet David and Saul with music and dancing after their conquest of the Philistines.

Dancing was doubtless known from a very early date as a mere worldly amusement, as described by Job 21: 11-16 and Mark 6: 22. It is worthy of remark that the mingling of the sexes, so common in our modern dances, is supposed to have been unknown to the Jews, although there seems to be an exception in that case of idolatrous confusion and madness when the children of Israel, bowed down to the image of the calf. (Ex. 32: 19.)

Perhaps it would not be out of place to remark that it is an untried theory of mine that dancing would not be evil in its tendency if there was no mingling of the sexes, but a healthful, invigorating recreation; that it would still retain sufficient charm to be pleasing in its effects, minus the harmful fascination and intoxication of the senses and the arousing of feelings, thoughts, and desires which lead to rash vows, and all the heart-aches and miseries which follow in the train of sensualism.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR OCTOBER.

OUR FATHER.

"O Thou whom we are taught, in faith, to call
Our Father, glad in our dear right we come
With mind, with soul, with spirit, bringing all
To learn accord with thee—life's perfect sum;
Not as a slave, but as thy child, we hear
Thy voice, and find in perfect love no fear.

W at could we call thee by thy works alone?
Science stands mute before them, known in part,
'Tis love hath made the high prerogative our own
To say, "Our Father who in heaven art!"
Heaven is thy kingdom that shall rise within
When hearts elect to let thy reign begin.
Dear name that binds us to the Infante,
That grants us heirship to a grander life!
It holds us safe, even while we whisper it,
And hushes into peace all sense of strife.
Our Father cares for us, O restful thought,
A breath of balm, with heavenly healing fraught."

Thursday, Oct. 22.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

LEGION OF HONOR NORMAL DRILLS.

SECOND DRILL, JERUSALEM'S GEOGRAPHY.

1. Location. Jerusalem is located upon the great central mountain range which traverses Palestine from north to south, reaching its greatest elevation at Hebron, twenty-five miles south of Jerusalem. It is distant from Joppa, the Mediterranean seaport on the west, about thirty-five miles, from the Jordan and Jericho, on the east, sixteen miles.

2. Latitude. About thirty-two and one half degrees north latitude and thirty-five and one half east longitude. It lies nearly parallel with Savannah, Georgia.

3. Elevation. It is situated upon five mountains, Akra, Bezetha, Moriah, Ophel, Zion,—their initial letters forming the word "Abmoz." Of these Zion and Ophel, the highest, are on the south. Bezetha, the lowest, is at the northern end of the city. Akra at the west, and Moriah at the east. Mt. Olivet, rising from the east of the city, is two hundred feet higher than Zion. The average elevation of the city is about two thousand five hundred feet.

4. Surroundings. Two deep and precipitous gorges encompass the city on three sides. On the west, sweeping around the southern end of the city to the eastward is the valley of Hinnom, or Gehenna. On the east is the valley of Jehoshaphat, traversed by the brook Kidron. These valleys unite at the southeast and pass away to the Dead Sea. Though in the center of the city from the northwest to the southeast runs the Valley of the "Cheesemongers" or Tyropocean, separating Mount Akra and Mount Ophel from Mount Moriah.

5. Extent. The ancient Jebus, the city taken by David, occupied only Mount Zion. David and Solomon enlarged the city and extended its wall to include Zion, Ophel, and Moriah. The circuit of the wall in the times of Christ was from five to seven miles, including an estimated population of two hundred thousand inhabitants. From David's time onward there was a large addition of the population on the outside to the northward, where the approach to the city was of easier grade.

THIRD DRILL. PLAN OF CITY.

1. Shape. The ancient city formed an irregular quadrilateral, conforming to the five mountains on which it was built. As David and Solomon left it, it was nearly a square. Other kings added to it by extending its walls to the northward, in which direction the city was steadily building. The present boundaries on the east and south are nearly identical with the ancient bounds the deep-descending gorges of Hinnom and Jehoshaphat compelling it.

2. Walls. When David captured the city it had only the Jebusite wall around Zion. This was partly torn down by him, and a new wall built from the "Citadel of David" on the west eastward to Mt. Moriah. This was further extended by Solomon to inclose Moriah and Ophel, and to join the Temple wall. The first wall is known as "David's Wall." As the population increased upon the outside of the city around Mt. Akra towards the north, King Hezekiah and others again extended the wall to include them, beginning at the "Citadel," running north around Akra and east to the northwest corner of the Temple area. This took the name of "Hezekiah's Wall," or the "second wall."

After Christ's death, Herod Agrippa added a still larger addition to the city by inclosing it within a "third wall," starting, like the others, at the "Citadel" and sweeping still further northward and eastward until it met the eastern wall of the city.

3. Gates. There were many gates, especially upon the north and east. The principal ones were as follows: The "Damascus" gate on the north, the main entrance for the northern tribes; the Joppa or "Valley" gate on the west, leading to the sea and toward the south; the "Fountain" gate at the southeast, leading to the pool of Siloam and over Olivet; the Shushan or "Lily" gate of the Temple, leading down into the Valley of Jehoshaphat; the "Zion" gate, perhaps the most ancient, near the middle of the south wall.

4. Districts. The ancient city, by its successive growth and the extension of its walls, was naturally divided into three districts, as follows: On the south, upon Zion and Ophel, the oldest portion was "Zion," or the "Upper City," known sometimes as "David's City."

After Hezekiah's wall was built, the new inclosure was known as "Akra," or the "Lower City," and extended around Akra and up to Moriah. The last addition around Bezetha at the north took the name of the "New City," or "Herod's City."

FOURTH DRILL. SACRED PLACES.

Every foot of ground in and around Jerusalem has its historic and sacred associations. Among the most notable places are the following:—

1. David's Tower and Tomb, in the "Upper

City," near the southwest corner. These were standing in Christ's time. 2. Solomon's Palace and Gardens on Mount Ophel, south of the Temple. 3. Herod's magnificent Palace, in the "Upper City," built by Herod the Great just before Christ's birth. 4. The Tower of Antonia, joining the Temple wall at its northwest corner, the Roman citadel and garrison. 5. Gethsemane, on the east of the city, across the brook Kidron. 6. Calvary, located probably upon the north of the city, according to ancient traditions and the judgment of modern critics. The traditional location of this place within the present Turkish city is however twelve hundred years old. 7. The Temple, on the east side, facing Mount Olivet and the east, its eastern wall forming part of the eastern boundary of the city. It covered originally twenty acres, occupying the summit of Moriah, its walls built up several hundred feet from the sides of the mountain below. It was the most costly and beautiful building of all history.—Selected.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—I have been thinking much of late about children being brought into the church at an early age. I am profoundly impressed with the importance of bringing them into church relation at as early an age as possible. Some contend that a child should be taught to be honest and upright, and then left to choose their religious opinions or the church to which they will belong. After our children go out from the home nest and are no longer under our watchcare, who can foresee what conditions will surround them, or what doctrine they may choose? It seems to me that if we would have our children become Latter Day Saints, we should see to it that before they leave the family tree they are well instructed in the doctrine of Christ, and taught to love the church as they do the home. How may this be done? Let us see.

First. See to it that they attend Sunday school. Don't send them alone; go with them, stay with them, watch their conduct, and take part in the school yourselves. It is the rule to send the little ones home before preaching service, which I think is wrong, although most preachers put the feed so high that the lambs cannot reach it.

Secondly. Teach them to pray (Jesus taught his disciples to pray), and then see to it that you demonstrate by a godly walk the influence of the gospel on your own life, for the child will look for fruit. If you are untruthful and careless in your language, and filthy about your person, don't try to teach the child until you can say, "Follow me, my child."

Let the dear ones feel that we have a deep personal interest in their spiritual welfare. And, above all things, erect a family altar in your home. Call them around you, teach them to kneel by your side, and pray for them by name. The memory of these prayers will never be erased from their minds, but long after your voice is silent in death this scene and your prayer will be a safeguard, and God will give his angels charge concerning them. Last but not least, see what books they read; select the best of literature for them. This is as important as the selection of their food. Let no red-backed novel fall into their hands. It looks bad to see this trashy stuff among the books of a Latter Day Saint. God help us to be wise and prudent in the selection of both physical and mental food.

I have visited the homes of some who claim to be saints who have none of the church literature or books containing the laws given by revelation for our government. Some have never read the Book of Doctrine and Covenants or the Book of Mormon. How are their children to be prepared to become members of the church at an early age? Dear Saints, what an awful responsibility rests upon us in this matter!

I have known people who spared no time or pains to try to induce others to unite with the church, and were very punctilious in their attendance at the church, and were always exhorting others, but paid but little more attention to their children than they did to their stock. Our first effort should be to try and save the dear ones God has given us.

If you haven't the courage to speak to your children about spiritual matters, get some one to do it, that they may know that the church at least is interested in their spiritual welfare.

J. S. STRAIN.

FANNING, Kan., Oct. 4.

Editors Herald:—The saints here have just enjoyed the association of a goodly number of like faith who met with us in conference on September 19 and 20. The Sunday school entertainment was cancelled on the 18th because of rain. The weather opened nicely on the 19th and conference convened under pleasant anticipations. The sessions passed off and the saints rejoiced at the good spirit which was present. Bro. Stebbins was with us; also Brn. W. S. Pender, J. T. Davis, and E. A. Davis, of the traveling ministry.

On Sunday morning the Saints and neighbors as well gathered at the church (which had been recently erected) and listened to an excellently dedicatory sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins which was appreciated by both those in and out of the church. The sermon left an excellent impression on some who had heretofore absented themselves from the saints' meetings on account of prejudice. The dedicatory prayer was by Bro. P. Cadwell, our district president, which was ably petitioned. The saints are rejoicing because of the success of their works in erecting the building. The church was erected at a cost of $872.81 cents with a balance of sixty cents on hand; size 28x40, 14ft. ceiling. The Saints are generally united and endeavoring to advance with the work.

One Mr. Anderson of the Christian Church, located amongst us two years ago, and began lecturing against the Saints, and said he believed he was sent here by the Lord to put that thing down (meaning Mormonism), but alas! so short a time and how the mighty are fallen. His own church refused to employ him, and he has brought dismay to their ranks, because of the deceitful influence.

Brn. Pender and E. A. Davis expect to begin a two weeks series of meetings on the 5th in the Christian church, at Troy, the county seat. This is the county in which Wm. Kirby lives, whose work against the saints is having but little effect.

Hastily,

L. G. GURWELL.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Sept. 30.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ:—We take this means of extending to you our heartfelt thanks, for the aid and sympathy extended to us in our late sad and great bereavement, whether given in word, or by letter, or in numerous other ways received. We appreciate the great kindness, and love shown us, and pray God's blessings may reward you all.

Your sister and brother in gospel bonds,

M. J. AND A. W. HEAD.

MEDINA, Texas, Oct. 1.

Editors Herald:—About three weeks ago while I was hurrying the completion of a schoolhouse with handsaw and hammer in hand, one that I had contracted to build, in order to obtain a little means to help me on my gospel mission, and that I might obtain a scanty means of sustenance for my family while I was telling the glad story of the restored gospel, Bro. H. P. Curtis called with the intelligence that he had contracted to take to himself a better half, with an earnest request for me to proceed at once to San Antonio and officiate in joining them in the holy bonds of matrimony. I could not obtain leave of the building committee under two days, at the end of which time I proceeded to San Antonio, arriving on the day set apart for the happy union to be celebrated by prayer, and a feast of good things, which the friends of the happy pair served in good style. The wedding passed very nicely; an excellent supper, bounteous feast, and interesting entertainment.

Here for the first time I met Bro. I. P. Baggerly, our missionary in charge. He came charging down here to regulate some affairs of the church that seem to have gotten out of running order. I feel that in this all is well. I find Bro. Baggerly to be alive to the work, taking a deep interest in the things of the kingdom. No fears, he is equal to the emergency, and surely all will soon be peace and harmony; in fact nothing serious has happened.

I must return now to Bro. Curtis' trip to the mountains, just prior to his marriage. He was riding leisurely in the new buggy bought by the district for mission work when he left me in the schoolhouse before-mentioned, in the contemplation of the glories of a married life, when he suddenly came in contact with a thunderstorm of unusual magnitude, and as he is a man small of stature and lean in flesh, as the wind and rain dashed upon the buggy he was not able to hold it down, and was blown from the road several feet against the wire fence of a pasture, where he stood for several minutes, holding the horse, the rain falling faster and faster, the wind blowing harder and harder, and the little mental giant as born to rule the storm stood firmly to his post until the storm melted away in the distance, but not until he was thoroughly drenched. His hat with other articles was blown so far away that he saw no more of them. In this condition he rode to my house, a distance of two miles, where he was kindly taken care of by my wife and daughter for the night. The next day being all that a wayfaring man could ask, he went on his way rejoicing.

After the wedding I started, in company with Bro. Baggerly, by wagon to attend a debate that was to take place at Kerrville, Texas, between Bro. H. P. Curtis and Elder McArty of the Firm Foundation or Campbellite Church, or a faction of the church sometimes called "Campbellites."

I must in short give a few items of our travels in the mountains, on our way to Kerrville. We had not been long on our journey until I found Bro. Baggerly to be a great lover of nature and the wonderful things of God and his creation; and as we drove along the road at the foot of some very high mountains he expressed a desire to go on top of them. Finally to satisfy his desire I agreed to ascend one of those mountains. Accordingly we tied our horses and started up the steep side of a mountain. We had already, however, with wagon reached half the distance to the top. We must now like the prophet when he ascended Carmel, reach the top; but as we would occasionally stop to rest our weary limbs, Bro. Baggerly would gaze beneath upon the valleys interspersed with small hills, hollows, and ravines, and seemed to wonder if we did not look something like the great lawgiver when he was ascending Mount Nebo. But his hope seemed to be lost in sight and his faith to end in expectation deepened by the beauty of the scene, when he gazed over those wide valleys and could see no trace of the Israelitish camps; and when he looked beyond he could see nothing that resembled in the least the promised land. But his countenance beamed with charity when he looked upon the scattering inhabitants beneath, with a desire to preach the gospel to them, with a hope that they might receive the truth and be saved from a lost and ruined condition. We finally reached the top, but did not pray for rain. We returned to our wagon and proceeded to Kerrville.

On arriving at our destination we found the little gospel trumpet who had arrived and was waiting at the house of the hospitable friends, Mr. and Sr. Haughts who kindly took the best care of our little team while the debate lasted—four days. We were all proud of our little captain, who fought the battle and defended the truth nobly. The attendance was about one hundred and fifty. The debate being ended and we concluding that all had been done at that place for the time being that could well be done, and Bro. Curtis promising to return in the near future, we took up our journey back to San Antonio, taking in this place on our return; and although on top of the mountain we did not pray for rain, yet it seemed right in the sight of the Giver of all good gifts, to send us rain in abundance; and as we soon after leaving Kerrville came in contact with the river Guadalupe, which had been out of her banks the night before but now had gone down to doubtful fording. Two wagons were on the bank besides ourselves, the danger to safety in crossing the wild rushing stream was for a moment freely discussed. Bro. Baggerly not being a swimmer had but little to say in the matter. He had already dismounted from the wagon, and when he found that I was going to risk myself and team in the water, he refused to get into the wagon, and said that if I after crossing would bring the horses back he would ride one of them over. So three of us with wagons and teams rushed madly into the furious waters. I was the middle man; the man in front and myself landed safely, while the third went down. As he drifted down the water became deeper until he got into swimming water, his wagon came uncoupled, the team came ashore with the front wheels, while he with the bed and hind wheels went floating down the stream. I ran down the bank with a long rope and succeeded in getting the man and his wheels out while the wagon body went on down and lodged below on some bowlders where we could not get to it. A little after eight o'clock p. m. we arrived at home, a distance of twenty-five miles, in safety, with little fatigue. I should have mentioned that Bro. Baggerly crossed the river under protest on horseback.

We continue our journey to-morrow enroute for San Antonio, to fill appointments. That being accomplished, Bro. Curtis and Bro. Baggerly will preach at and in the surrounding country of Pipe Creek. I shall endeavor to hold a series of meetings in Medina. I have the promise of the new schoolhouse above-mentioned; then comes our local conference, on the 23d of this month, at Pipe Creek. Thus the good work moves slowly in these parts.

May the Lord bless the laborers of the vineyard and the people of God, with the honest in heart.

Yours till the battle is ended,
L. L. WIGHT.

EDGEWOOD, Iowa, Sept. 30.

Editors Herald:—Bro. C. E. Hand and the writer have just closed a successful tent meeting of three weeks, closing with the baptism of four, who had the courage to act upon their conviction of the truth, confessing Christ in the presence of a crowd gathered by the waters of Elk Creek, as clear and beautiful a stream as ever ran.

The meeting was well attended, and the interest all that could be desired. Many more are believing and will obey in time.

Bro. and Sr. Seward, of Edgewood, were on the ground with their camping tent. Bro. and Sr. Thomas, and Sr. Weir, of Center Junction, were also present to help along the work; the saints from Osterdock likewise. Large crowds gathered on Sundays.

Generous hearts again ministered to our wants, and made their houses our homes. May God reward them here and in the life to come. Another was baptized two days later.

Your brother,
O. B. THOMAS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 1.

Editors Herald:—I am in a position whereby I can assist the saints in securing absolutely pure olive oil at reasonable rates. If the presidents of the various branches or anyone in the branch interested desire information I will assist them whereby they can purchase direct from the producer. Those writing will please address me at 420 Harrison Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa, inclosing stamp for reply. From my experience with olive oil and its adulterations I believe the majority of the saints do not get the pure olive oil. Two days' meeting at Boomer next Saturday and Sunday, at Crescent, October 10 and 11, and at Wheeler's Grove the 17th and 18th. Things moving slowly here.

Yours,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

BEATRICE, Neb., Oct. 3.

Editors Herald:—I have been holding a series of meetings at the Mount Olive schoolhouse, five miles northeast of Beatrice. I have had orderly meetings, though not crowded on account of the Dunkards holding a protracted meeting a mile and a half northeast of here. But our ministry are always well received at this place.

We have several scattered members in this part in and near Beatrice. I will hold communion service to-morrow for the benefit of these scattered members. Some have belonged to the church for years, even as much as ten years, and have never yet partaken of the sacrament. I believe that this is one thing that is neglected by some.

I expect to go from here to the Hooker schoolhouse, near Bro. Hillman's, some four miles south of Adams, and from there to the Palmyra branch, where we hold our district conference on the 18th and 19th of October, where I hope to meet with a good representation of the members of the district.

Fraternally,
J. W. WALDSMITH.

MIDWAY, Ark., Sep. 24.

Editors Herald:—I am thankful to my heavenly Father that my lot was cast with the people of God. I can testify that I have received many blessings from God, in whom I trust.

I have belonged to the church about six years and while I have not always done as I should, thank God I have always been ready to defend what I believe to be true. Nothing in this world could shake my faith; I know the work is of God and I thank him for giving me a heart to embrace it.

I am one of the isolated saints. We once had a branch here and enjoyed God's Spirit; but many of the Saints moved away and the branch went down. About a dozen remain, but they are badly scattered. I would be so glad if some one could come and reorganize us. We have been looking for Bro. Montague to come. We pray that he may come soon, also Bro. Jackson, for we are waiting very anxiously to hear the gospel and they will be welcome among us.

We had a long drouth; no rain but small showers since April and very little made. But we trust in God and believe he will provide for his children who trust in him.

I want to get the church history. Every saint should read it and I hope will get it. I trust all will live up to their duties and pay their tithing that the glorious gospel may soon go to all nations and the Lord come to redeem his people.

C. C. JUDKINS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—It is now nearly three months since I left Independence, Missouri, for California, to honor the General Conference appointment. Ill health delayed me long in starting, and when I left home, it was the effort of faith, for I was far from being well.

On the evening of Tuesday, July 14, I landed in Los Angeles, and put up for the night with Bro. Tilton (formerly of Lamoni, Iowa). On the following day I went to Downey, where the Southern California district reunion was in progress. There I met with many new faces; but all aglow with the fervor of spiritual life. The meetings were edifying and profitable in the main and it was a satisfaction of soul to be present.

On the morning of July 17, I ordained Bro. Nelson Van Fleet to the office of a high priest, and on the 19th ordained Bro. David L. Harris to the office of seventy, according to the provision of last April Conference. In both instances we were much comforted by the assurance of divine approval. Four times during the meetings I occupied the stand as speaker, doing the best I could.

After the reunion closed, three days were spent at the home of Bro. and Sr. Van Fleet, resting and sampling the various fruits with which their orchard abounds, also enjoying the generous hospitality which they extend to Zion's workers. It was a brief but pleasant season, and made me feel almost loth to go. At the appointed time, however, district President Albert Carmichael was on hand with his horse and buggy, and together we drove to Garden Grove, where we put up at the home of Bro. and Sr. George Farmer. For one week this was my headquarters, though the "Gospel Swamp" region, Santa Ana, Newport Beach, and several other contiguous points were visited in making calls on the saints. On four occasions I dispensed the word of life in the little chapel to quite large and interested audiences.

Availing myself further of the kindness of Bro. Carmichael, I was then taken to San Bernardino, stopping one night on the way at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lute Brackenbury, at Riverside. Mr. B. is a son of Bro. John Brackenbury of our home town, and an old acquaintance. We were entertained hospitably, and enjoyed the privilege of talking gospel again to him. He promised to follow us the next day to San Bernardino, and did so, bringing along the needed change of apparel, to be buried in baptism. This ordinance, at his request, I performed, and with the assistance of Bro. Carmichael confirmed him.

Our stay in that city was brief. The heat was, to me, insufferable, so after two Sunday preachings, and having visited as many of the saints as possible, considering my ill health, we bade them an early adieu on Monday morning. At 4:30 we left the home of Bro. and Sr. Nels Paulson, where we had been sheltered, and received genuine saintly treatment and care, and drove to Cucamonga. Here we spent most of a day and all of a night, sharing the fellowship and bounty of heart and board that were extended.

Next day found us at the home of Bro. and Sr. William Garner, at San Gabriel, where we remained for two days, during which time we were taken by Bro. B. to the pretty town of Pasadena. It is hardly enough to say that we enjoyed a very pleasant visit at San Gabriel; but that will have to do, for we can't find any better words to express it. We enjoyed the kindness shown us hugely, and wished we could have remained longer, but duty bade us hasten on. So, at the signal from Bro. Carmichael I took place by his side in the buggy and in about three hours we alighted in Los Angeles, and I found a welcome at the home of Sr. J. A. Badham and family, and was royally entertained during the few days of my stay. We made the circuit of the city in the brief time at our disposal, and visited as many saints as possible, and on Sunday I preached to a goodly assemblage at the hall twice. Space forbids any lengthy relation of persons, places, and sights seen. On Monday evening, in order to be within the time limit of the ticket purchased at home a month before, I was compelled to take train for San Francisco. So I reluctantly said "good bye" to Bro. Carmichael, who had so kindly driven me around for three weeks, and honored the "All aboard" signal that rang through the Southern Pacific depot.

At four p. m., August 11, I alighted from the train at Oakland, and dropped into the extended arms of Bro. J. F. Burton, who was in waiting. Since then my time has been divided between that city, Berkeley, and the place of present writing, except ten days spent at Santa Cruz, attending the reunion of the Central and Northern California districts. I can say freely that I have labored all that my strength would allow. To have done more would have been a delight, had ability been mine. The Lord has helped me graciously in proclaiming the truth, especially in this northern part. My health is somewhat better, and I entertain a strong hope of returning strength and vigor.

On September 6, at Oakland, assisted by Elder J. F. Burton, I ordained Bro. J. B. Price to the office of a high priest, as per provision of General Conference. Will the Church Secretary please note the fact and date of this and the two before-mentioned ordinations. Bro. Gordon E. Deuel will be glad to learn that his son Charles was ordained to the office of a priest at the reunion. Bro. John Cockerton, of Oakland, was also ordained a priest at one of the regular services of the branch.

To-day I leave for Santa Rosa, and from thence expect to tour the country as much as time and health will allow. Bro. Burton, whom I have found to be, as I expected, a willing and effective helper, has been associated with me considerable of the time since my arrival here. I cannot trespass upon your space, nor upon the patience of your readers, to tell of all the persons, even of prominence, whom I have met, and of the kindness shown me by the saints in every place. In this city my home has been with Bro. and Sr. J. A. Anthony, and they, like all the rest, have anticipated my every want and supplied me bountifully. The characteristic benevolence of Bro. and Sr. Anthony is known to all the traveling ministry who have "been this way," and I need only add that my sojourn with them has been a season of peace, happiness, and plenty. May the good Lord whom we serve bless them and all those who, like them, have ministered so kindly to me and others of the ministry. This is a big field; but the interest does not seem to be quite as great as in the East, among those without. With the corps of workers associated with me, who are doing the best they can, we hope to be able to report improvement and present some sheaves when the final showing is to be made. I baptized one here last week—my first baptism in the sea. More anon. Your colaborer,

JOSEPH LUFF.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 28.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Luff preached a memorial sermon last night, commemorative of Bro. William Potter, at the request of Sr. Potter; the object being to present our views to the people who will attend such services, but will not attend regular services. We had quite a large congregation and Bro. Luff's sermon was a grand exhibition of the divine wisdom, mercy, and love. The saints are, most of them, well spiritually, but financially in distress. And yet, if those who could would pay, we would not lack in that direction. May God's peace abide with you.

PRECEPT, Neb., Sept. 30.

Editors Herald:—I have not heard a Latter Day Saint sermon for seventeen years, and I am very anxious to more fully investigate on one or two points, and then if as well satisfied on those points as I am with the rest of the doctrine, I will unite with the church.

I have never united with any church, as I was much dissatisfied with their teachings; but during my sickness a few weeks ago I felt that I must die, and the awful thought that I would be lost I will never, never forget. But I asked the Lord to spare my life, promising him that if spared I would obey the word of God as soon as I could be assured that I was right.

I do not wish to complain. Yet it is hard to bear the heavy burden of grief that it has been my lot to bear; for in less than one short year I have stood by the grave of three of my family. My dear wife was called from me on the 9th of last October; my little daughter died January 2; and my sainted mother on July 18. So you see my grief has been very bitter indeed, almost more than poor weak flesh can stand. I have one little boy left. He is a great pleasure to me.

I enclose mother's obituary, clipped from the Beaver City Times, of July 24, 1896. You can insert all or only the part pertaining to the church in the Herald. I assure you I will be glad to meet you and make your acquaintance.

Sincerely yours,

ROBT. E. GILLILAND.

ANGOLA, Kan., Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—I have been very busy, preaching and working away at the Babylonian walls. I am now located in Southeastern Kansas, and my address is Weir City, Kansas. My wife and I are traveling with horse and buggy, and by Bro. White's advice we are doing what we can to strengthen the old forts and, as the way may open, dispense the truth.

Southeastern Kansas looks to me like a grand field for gospel work. Much has already been done; some branches established, and several noble brethren sent to "our neighbor" and to foreign lands, with the gospel message. May the spirit of peace go with them, and also shield and protect the branches that nourished them, that they may continue to bring in the sheep and reap a rich reward.

I find that the saints need encouragement as well as teaching. We have now visited Pleasant View, Weir City, Columbus, and Angola branches, and it is evident that they need "food;" as Paul said, "Feed the flock of God." This food should be suited to our requirements. Our natural food is not all acidulous, neither all something sweet; and so it is with our spiritual learning: sometimes we need encouragement, while again we need to be strongly reminded of our lackings and be reformed that we are to live "by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." And this means to keep all the commandments of God.

While I have been in these parts I find the saints as a majority do not understand tithing, nor are they making much effort to learn or pay it. Tithing is a part of the gospel, and Jesus Christ taught it. (See Matt. 23: 23.) They ought to have paid tithes of cummin and mint as well as keep the other parts of the law; and if we do not, we are robbers, robbing God. People have robbed him in the past. (See Malachi 3: 8.) "Ye have robbed me," (verse 9) even a whole nation. Verse ten says, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse and prove me now herewith." Is this not one of God's commands? Verse eleven says, "I will rebuke the devourer." But if we do not pay our tithing need we be surprised if we are in the same condition as those in verse nine—"Ye are cursed with a curse," because "ye have robbed me"?

We teach, Doctrine and Covenants, page 239:25 that, "After your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people." Page 116:4: "And there shall be weeping and wailing among the hosts of men; and there shall be a great hailstorm sent forth to destroy the crops of the earth"; and it is because of the wickedness of men. About the 1st of September a terrible hailstorm passed through Weir City and neighborhood, demolishing windows, beating holes in roofs—a sheet iron livery stable in Weir, was riddled with holes, roofs were blown off by the wind; in the country hundreds of chickens and birds were killed, orchards were badly beaten by the ice, not an apple left in lots of orchards, when just a few minutes before they were heavily loaded with fruit. Some orchards were stripped of all the apples and not even a leaf left to indicate early fall, and the small limbs badly split, and trees blown out by the roots. Corn was badly injured, being broken down and beaten to pieces.

Let us stand by the temporal law of God as well as the spiritual, lest that which we have been taken from us and be given to them that have. Let us stand in holy places and the holiest "place" of all, is, where God may "place" us, after complying with his commands; and whether this place is in a mansion or cottage, whether you are at the pulpit or plow, in commercial life, or at the trade, among the high or among the low, and if, when even comes your only bed is in the manger, if God has placed you there your place is "holy." "Cease to find fault one with another" is another command. Let us serve God by a complete obedience.

Your brother,

W. C. CATHER.

DELOIT, Iowa, Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. W. Whiting and I closed tabernacle meetings for this season September 27, at Aurelia, Iowa. Bro. and Sr. C. R. Pomeroy, formerly of Millersburg, Illinois, branch, live at Aurelia, and gave us a hearty welcome and a home during our stay. They had not heard a Latter Day Saint preach for over twenty years.

The saints in and near Cherokee met with us Sundays, assisting in song service, cheering and aiding us in many other ways. They are an energetic, hence a happy band of saints.

DRAIN, Ore., Oct. 2.

Editors Herald:—I take this opportunity of informing you as Brethren in Christ that I am convinced more and more that this latter-day work is true, and that when I entered into it I became a disciple of Christ, by the testimony of the Spirit that we should love one another; therefore I feel the love within me kindled whenever I learn of any of the brethren suffering from afflictions of the temporal man; therefore I ask in the name of Christ that as Bro. J. C. Clapp has been compelled on account of afflictions to quit his labor in the field and go home to wait God's will toward him, I write this to ask the saints in general to pray, and especially that the Prayer Union will offer their prayers, for his restoration to health if it is God's will to heal him.

I also request that they remember Bro. Luke Storey, as he is suffering with a terrible sore mouth and pain in his face and has requested me to pray for him and that I solicit the prayers of all the saints that he may be healed.

We feel greatly disappointed by Bro. Clapp's sickness, and regret that we are left without an elder to lead us in this part, but hope that the Lord will send one to our aid soon. So we wait and trust in his mighty power.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

POMONA, Mo., Sept. 28.

Editors Herald:—Our Northern Arkansas camp meeting began the 10th of September and closed the 20th. Brn. Montague, Baldwin, and the writer did the preaching. Other elders who were invited failed to come. We held three services each day, two preaching and one prayer service, and we enjoyed a reasonable degree of the Spirit from first to last. But few saints attended from a distance and some who lived close to the camp ground were deprived of the privilege of attending, on account of sickness. We had large crowds each night and at Sunday services, and the people in that part of the field have a better understanding of our position among the rest of the religious world than ever before, and some seemed to be somewhat interested. I had the meeting advertised in the county paper and some few who had never heard our doctrine preached came several miles to hear.

On the 17th we organized the Martin's Creek branch with twenty-six members and there are several more living near by who will no doubt call for their letters and join the new branch. Bro. D. R. Baldwin is their presiding elder, and Bro. Ides A. Nuckles their priest; so we have no fear but what this new branch will do well if all are faithful. We baptized three at the close, and taking all things into consideration we pronounced the camp meeting a success.

With a heavy heart I gave the parting hand to our highly esteemed Bro. Montague, on the 21st, and took my departure to Coats, and he was to depart the next day all alone to penetrate the dismal gloom in Southwestern Arkansas.

I took up my meetings at Coats, but had a very light attendance; politics have seemed to crush out the little spiritual light the people had, so that when the few would gather they were discussing the finance question instead of Christianity. I am at home for a few days, but will try to spend them profitably to the cause we love so much. The good Master has blessed me of late with good health again, for which I praise his holy name.

In bonds,

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., Oct. 5.

Editors Herald:—The saints of this place held a basket meeting six miles northwest of town yesterday. We had made arrangements to have the assistance of Brn. W. H. Kelley and George Jenkins, but they were prevented from coming. The meeting was held in Bro. Jacob Cramer's barn lot, under the shade of some trees. It was preceded by a Sunday school which has been held in this place all summer. This, however, was its last session. Mrs. Celia Jones, one of its starters, treated the little folks to candy and gave them a New Testament apiece. As we went out that day we didn't get there in time to participate in the Sabbath school, except to join in the discussion of some questions at its close. Then came the meeting. We sang out of the books used by the school. Good liberty was given on the subject presented, which was the millennial reign.

Dinner was served under the trees, and while it was not very large like we have seen, still there was enough and to spare.

The day was splendid; many were seen out for a walk or ride, and our drive was by no means unpleasant.

We would like to have Brn. E. C. Briggs and S. W. L. Scott come here and take into consideration the organizing of a branch, as they are in the district in part for that purpose.

Now, dear Saints, don't think from this letter that "everything is lovely" in this part, for such is not the case. There are some unpleasant things, things that bring regret and sorrow, to the existence of which we cannot close our eyes. Nevertheless we do not think "some strange thing" has happened to us in this, for every rose has a thorn; in fact, both grow from the same root very often, and so joys and sorrows grow on the tree of a Saint's experience.

Yours in the gospel,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Sept. 15.

Editors Herald:—While in late association with some of the brethren of the ministry, incidentally through conversation I was enabled to form an idea of the condition of the general treasury, and of the Bishop's inability to meet the present demands that the work requires. I felt to lament that the allowances, small as they often are, for the support of the families of absent servants of God, have such extended delays; in many cases they not having received any portion for four to six months, and some even longer.

The most of these families, if not all, are obliged to depend upon the kindness of merchants who extend credit from month to month, encouraged to continue the favor by the assurance from the elder's wife that her allowance will certainly not be delayed much longer. But when disappointment succeeds disappointment, promises must continue to be broken, and it is thus the honesty and integrity of good-meaning people is jeopardized, and which more or less affects the great work of the Lord in their communities.

One brother who had just received a letter from his wife, who did not write with an accusing or faultfinding spirit, by the language used was reminded of the destitute condition of his wife and family. A brother told me he would have to return home and make his promise good to one who had been furnishing his family for quite a number of months. He had guaranteed him against loss by a promise to turn over to him his dwelling house; and the limit of time now having expired, he stood ready to deliver up as per agreement the shelter and home so much needed for wife and children that his integrity as a minister for Christ might not be questioned.

This state of things would not exist if the allowances so far in arrears could be paid. Some may say it is unwise for the elders to allow debt to accumulate against them that they ought not to go away unless they are sure the necessities would be supplied. However that may be, I believe all the General Conference appointees feel that when they are appointed to do a work for our Lord it is their imperative duty to do it; and they have the right to believe that they hear the whole body of the church exclaiming, "Amen; go, brother, upon your mission of truth, bringing light and joy to the souls of men—rejoicing to those who sit in darkness and despair; go, force into oblivion the dark and angry clouds that, lo, these years have been shutting out the sunlight of truth, heaven's choicest boon; let your voice be heard in every country and clime heralding the glad tidings of a restored gospel, making glad the souls of the honest-hearted; and we will see that the burdens of temporal care will not hinder you."

And now that the necessities of those dependent are not forthcoming, it is evident that there is some one neglecting duty. It is certainly not entirely the Bishop, for we know that his treasury is almost always empty, and is at present hundreds and maybe thousands of dollars behind in paying allowances to the needy. Last General Conference in order to curtail the demand upon the Bishop, took from the field more than fifty of the ministerial force. This fact compels us to ask ourselves, Who is responsible for the ripened grain that ought to be garnered? We do not doubt but all God-worshipping and Christ-loving saints would love to see the reverse condition. The remedy is to heed the counsel of the Lord:

The saints remember well the call made over a year ago by the Presidency and Bishop for assistance in the Temple Lot suit; the response was so prompt and plentiful that notice had to be given that more than enough to cover their need had been received. This certainly shows a hearty willingness on the part of the saints to meet the urgent demands, that loss to the church may be averted. This encourages me to believe that if the present depleted condition of the treasury was generally known it would not only be replenished by freewill offerings, but that the funds held back by the saints, which absolutely belong to the Lord; that is, one tenth of all our property or that part that has not been tithed, would be paid.

We frequently hear saints say that they don't know how to go about it to find what they owe the Lord. For their benefit I will say that it is easy to calculate how much we possessed at the beginning of our existence on the earth. If after we have made a covenant through the ordinance of the gospel we have through gift or earnings become owners of ten cents worth, one cent belongs to the Lord. If ten dollars, one dollar belongs to the Lord. If one has a variety of articles, such as books, money, merchandise, clothing, tools, furniture, houses, land, cattle, and any article, no matter how small or worthless looking, if you make use of it, it is of some value. Place an honest value on each article, and make a list of all articles you own, and after you have added up the column take from it one tenth, and that tenth is the Lord's own. Preserve your list, and at the end of the following year make another list of what is on hand, and if the former list was one hundred dollars and the last one is one hundred and ten dollars, you have a difference of ten, and one is the Lord's.

Now it is just and right that we all should pay this debt. The Lord promises to favor us if we do not rob him. Read Malachi 3: 8-11 and Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.

I don't believe it would be out of harmony with the spirit of the law of tithing if we paid what we owe with such articles of produce, cows, sheep, horses, or hogs, or any article that the Bishop's agent could accept and allow us the price he uses or disposes of it at. Some agents are handling merchandise; they might take butter, eggs, chickens, or other produce; some are farmers; they might take cattle or hogs or other stock. Some are traveling ministers who might receive such material as they could use if circumstances were favorable, thus helping a brother or sister out with their tithing, and helping his family to a part of their allowance. Our Bishop's agent, who is a General Conference appointee, told me that he had collected tithing of the kind for some time in the past and has gathered a good deal of tithing in this way that might never have been paid, as some persons are situated in a way that it seems impossible to pay money, yet are willing to turn on such account something they possess if it could be utilized. This brother says he sells the articles placed in his hands, or uses it in his family, or supplies some other elder's family, allowing a just price for all he uses. He reports to the Bishop, "So much collected; charge to my wife's account, so much, and credit Bro. and Sr. A. and B. so much paid on tithing account."

Of course all are not situated to follow such suggestions, but there is no doubt much could be done in many cases by taking advantage of situations each may find himself in, whether agent or tithepayer. The latter should be anxious to keep the law, and the former to be sure that every member in his district understands the law. I have no doubt if all those who have not complied with this law would do so at once there would be no lack in the Bishop's hands and no elder would have to leave his field to relieve his family of their daily needs.

With ceaseless prayer for the prosperity of the work, I am,

Yours truly,
M. S. FRICK.

THANKSGIVING DAY OFFERING.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—The following resolution was introduced and unanimously carried at our last branch quarterly business meeting, October 7, 1896. The secretary will undoubtedly send it to you but fearing that he would be so engaged in business that he could not send copy for insertion for next week, I send copy. Please give it prominent insertion in your columns.

Yours very truly,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

"Appreciating the varied and multiplied blessings bestowed by the beneficent Father during the years that have passed and especially the current one; and realizing the urgent need that the Bishopric be substantially sustained in their laudable effort to meet contingent and provide for accruing expenditures in promulgating church work, therefore be it,

"Resolved, that on the coming Thanksgiving Day a special prayer service be held, at which time a general invitation be extended to all that they bring a freewill offering to the Lord, the same to be placed in the General Treasury and to be at the disposal of the Bishopric; and we recommend this method of aiding the Bishopric to all the saints in the United States and Canada."

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

EDITORS HERALD:—As this subject has been occupying the attention of the church for some time, and has been discussed through the columns of the Herald to some extent, it will likely not be out of place for me to set forth a few thoughts in relation thereto for the consideration of your readers.

I find that there are two general opinions existing among believers in the Book of Mormon:—

1. That the River Sidon is the Magdalena in South America.
2. That the River Sidon is the Usamacinta in Central America.

One of these positions must be true and the other false; and no matter which position we may take, unless that position is substantiated by facts, it does not make it true; or, in other words, believing and advocating a certain thing for years does not make it true unless it be true. The Nephites called some river "Sidon," and we want to know what river; if we can find out we have the key to the whole situation. There are certain things stated in the Book of Mormon concerning Sidon and the countries and cities near it that may aid us in the solution of the question.

1. The River Sidon ran north. The same can be said of both the Magdalena and Usamacinta.
2. The head of Sidon was in the "south wilderness" which was the boundary line between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi.

3. The head of Sidon was near the "east sea." Here is where the main question hinges. The Magdalena does not fill the bill, as it heads near the west sea and does not head closer than one thousand miles from the "east sea," while the Usumacinta fills the bill nicely and its head is near the "east sea." I will now proceed with the proof that the head of Sidon was near the east sea.

Location of the city of Moroni:—

And it came to pass that the Nephites began the foundation of a city; and they called the name of the city Moroni; and it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.—Alma 22: 3.

Let us note the points in the above quotation; Moroni was on the east sea, and south (not north) by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.

Location of the city of Nephiah:—

And they also began a foundation for a city between the city of Moroni and the city of Aaron, joining the borders of Aaron and Moroni; and they called the name of the city, or the land Nephiah.—Alma 22: 3.

Note carefully please that Nephiah joined the borders of Moroni, and as we have seen that Moroni was on the east sea, we cannot escape the conclusion that Nephiah was near the east sea.

Turning now to Alma 26: 3, we have a report from Helaman to Moroni. Helaman is conducting a war with the Lamanites in the south and west borders of the land. He says of the armies of the Lamanites:—

Neither durst they cross the head of Sidon, over to the city of Nephiah.

It does not require an educated man to see clearly from the above language that the city of Nephiah was near the head of Sidon. If, then, Nephiah was near the head of Sidon, and if it joined the borders of Moroni, and Moroni was on the east sea, we must logically conclude that beyond a doubt the head of Sidon was near the east sea. The Magdalena does not fill the bill as we previously observed, and until the advocates of the Magdalena theory show why the above line of evidences are not good, we think the church is justified in calling the claim in question. Can our elders defend a map based on this theory with a gap of more than one thousand miles between the head of the river and the east sea? Personally we would not like to try the experiment with a competent critic.

Bro. Simon Smith evidently has the correct solution of the question when he locates the land of Zarahemla in Central America, extending from the Isthmus of Tehauntepec to the vicinity of Honduras Bay, the land of Nephi extending from Honduras Bay to the Isthmus of Panama, the "narrow strip of wilderness" in the vicinity of Honduras Bay, at the the head of the Usumacinta River, dividing the land of Nephi and the land of Zarahemla. Many persons dismiss this idea without extensive consideration upon the fact that the Book of Mormon represents both Zarahemla and Nephi as being in the "land southward." The "land southward" is thought to include only what we now call South America. Here arises an important question: Did the Nephites divide the land northward and the land southward as we do? Who can prove they did? They divided at a certain "narrow neck." Many have assumed that this narrow neck was Panama; but there is another "narrow neck," the Isthmus of Tehauntepec, and they may have made the division at that point, including all of what is now known as Central America in the land southward. There is nothing unreasonable in the suggestion, and in fact the evidence favors that position. The River Sidon ran by the city of Zarahemla; it ran north, and had its head near the east sea, as we have previously shown. No river in South America answers the description; hence we look to Central America and find just such a river, flowing in the right direction, having its head in the right place. With this view of the question Tehauntepec would be the "narrow neck" that plays so prominent a part in Book of Mormon history.

The objection is urged by some that Tehauntepec is too wide, it being one hundred and forty miles at present, while the record tells us that it was a "day's journey for a Nephite" in one place, from sea to sea. This, of course, would seem to be quite an objection, but we must remember that a long period of time has elapsed since Book of Mormon days, and many very important changes may have taken place. Especially is this true with the region of Tehauntepec, if we can give credence to the statement of learned scientists on the question. I submit the following from a work entitled, "The Earth and its Inhabitants," by Elisee Reclus, volume 2, page 36:—

According to Spear, a geologist attached to one of the numerous expeditions that have studied the Isthmus of Tehauntepec, the terraced foundations consist partly of cretaceous rocks deposited at a time when the Atlantic and Pacific oceans were here connected by a broad channel. . . . The land still continues to encroach insensibly on the ocean; the Pacific coast, formed of late alluvial matter, is continually advancing seawards, while the lagoons along the shore are gradually drying up. In the Isthmus of Tehauntepec low lying tracts occupy a larger space relatively to the whole region than in any other part of Mexico.

By the above quotation we learn from the geologist that at Tehauntepec the two oceans were once connected. The rise of the land has evidently been a gradual process of time, as it is still going on. To say that it was no more than a day's journey across from sea to sea, in one particular place, in Book of Mormon days, would certainly not be extravagant. We cannot tell how slow or how rapid has been the change. The fact that it was once no more than a day's journey for a Nephite, removes all criticism on that point, unless it can be shown that it was not so narrow as that at the time the book was written. Who can furnish the proof?

When we look at the question from the standpoint that the Usumacinta is "Sidon," and that Tehauntepec is the "narrow neck," many of the difficulties of Book of Mormon geography disappear. The boundary line between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi would not need so much explanation. We could just start at the "east sea" and run "toward the west," past the "head of Sidon," in a "straight course," as the book plainly declares. (Alma 22: 2.) The land of Nephi could extend from sea to sea (Alma 13: 10, 11) and still be "south of Zarahemla."

It could be properly said:—

The land of Nephi, and the land of Zarahemla, were nearly surrounded by water.—Alma 13: 11.

One has to strain his conscience a little to believe that all South America is here referred to as being "nearly surrounded by water."

THE POLITICS OF THE DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

THE anticipating character of the purported revelations of Jesus Christ, contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, is good proof of their divinity. Human ability to forecast future events and provide a suitable remedy for every evil which may arise, is extremely limited at the best. But God knows the end from the beginning, and he makes suitable provision for every emergency that may arise; and he does this, evidently, in order that his work may be perpetuated and his people saved.

The early revelations of the church point out very clearly what God designed the character and policy of the saints to be; and had they carefully heeded the instructions given for their guidance in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois, their enemies would never have prevailed against them.

Among other things, these revelations require us to be strictly loyal to the institutions of our government, and they prohibit any degree of union between church and state. Now, we cannot be patriotic and loyal, as required, without a fair degree of knowledge concerning the institutions of our government. How can we love that of which we know little or nothing? and how can we intelligently obey laws of which we have no understanding? nor is it possible for us to be truly patriotic, and render the obedience commanded of God to "the laws of the land," if we allow anything to intervene between us and the government which is, in spirit or genius, contrary to the institutions of the government itself. It is not loyalty to political party which is enjoined, but to the "constitutional law of the land."

To show that I am correct with reference to the glorious victory that would have come to the saints through complete obedience, the reader is requested to carefully examine the following passages: Doctrine and Covenants 100:2; 95:3, 4; 94:5; 107:13, 14.

From the beginning the Lord has been very careful that every step taken in church work should be in harmony with the laws of the land. Joseph Smith informs us that Section 17 was given by inspiration before the church was organized; and by means of this document they knew how to organize acceptably to God. In the first paragraph of this section we find the following significant statements:—

The rise of the Church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April.

Thus we may see, clearly if we will, that the purpose of God was that the church should be in harmony with "the laws of our country" from the very beginning; and, as we shall presently see, he intended this harmony to continue till Jesus comes whose right it is to rule and reign.

In section 41, given in February, 1831, the Lord promises to give a law for the government of his church, that the elders might "know how to govern" his "church and have all things right before" him. (See paragraph 1.) In paragraph 2 we read:—

And I will be your ruler when I come; and behold I come quickly; and ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you.

In the same month of the same year the promised law was given, and in it we find the following:—

And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill, they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proven according to the laws of the land.

If a man or woman shall rob, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall steal, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. And if he or she shall lie, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land. If he or she do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law, even that of God. —D. C. 42: 21, 22.

These paragraphs plainly show that the laws of our county as well as the laws of God must be honored by the church as an organization, and by each individual member thereof. And section 41:2, teaches that the whole law given of God, as contained in section 42, is to be in force, and cannot possibly be contravened by anything else, till Jesus comes in glory to be our lawgiver and ruler.

Section 58:5 is very plain, and when the letter and spirit of it are fully honored, it is my opinion that no attempt will be made by the saints to run church and state together, not even by prayer and the reading of the Bible in our public schools and colleges, which have been established for the purpose of securing to their attendants a secular education. The church, the Sunday school, and the home are the places to teach religion; and there is no better evidence of moral and spiritual decay in the church than an over-anxiety to introduce religion into our secular schools. But here is our quotation which speaks for itself:—

Let no man think he is ruler, but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will; or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat. Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold, here is wisdom.

No State in the Union can establish any form of religion and remain in harmony with the Constitution of the United States; and, as I see it, we cannot compel any attendant at public school or college to hear our religion read and prayed, without his consent, unless we do it in conflict with the spirit and sentiment both of the Constitution of our country and the church. If our people will set wise and blameless examples to all with whom they come in contact, avoiding so far as possible even the appearance of evil, and diligently declare our holy religion around the home circle, in the Sunday school, in private, by consent of the hearers; and from the pulpit, they will do all that God requires; and when they try to do more than he requires, they do harm.

And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all these things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil. I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn: wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these, cometh of evil.—D. C. 95: 2.

The revelation from which the above is an extract, was given soon after the beginning of the serious persecutions against the saints in Jackson County, Missouri. The saints had sought for lawful redress of their wrongs, but without success. Naturally, at this time, and thereafter, they would be inclined to underestimate the constitution and our governmental machinery; but the God of the saints speaks, and he places a very high estimate on that grand instrument, and on all laws founded thereon which support "that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges" which "belongs to all mankind" and is justifiable before him.

Notice in particular, the Lord did not instruct his people to support any political party that then existed, or that would thereafter come into being; but he says that it is his will that the constitutional laws of the land should be befriended and sustained. That so far as human law is concerned, whatever requires more or less than the constitutional law, and that principle of liberty taught therein, which is for all men, comes of evil. And so far as voting is concerned, and our political attitude in campaign times, here are the rules, and the only rules, so far as I know, which God has given for the government of his saints:—

Honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold.

And whatever falls below this standard, "cometh of evil."

Dear saints, are we observing these rules in letter and in spirit? or have we gone on so long altogether after the manner of the world, that we cannot tell the difference between an honest man and one who is not honest? Will God who has commanded us to choose help us by the Spirit of truth? Do we ever allow party ties and the partisan spirit to interfere and disqualify us for this important duty? Now is an opportune time for us to answer as unto God.

Anything that will truly help us to make this choice, so that we may keep the commandment of the Lord, is good, and should not be objected to by anyone. I therefore suggest two things that will help us:—

First, the character of the record a man makes. Records are wonderful things to disclose character. They speak with reference to a man's honesty and wisdom. If a man reverses his record without the least pretense of concession, it indicates that his integrity is below par, that is, if the man is compos mentis. If he has radically changed his mind, as shown by public records, he should possess the moral courage to say so.

Secnd, the character of the principles he espouses and advocates. "Good men and wise men" will advocate good and wise principles which are calculated to benefit the masses, and especially the toiling millions. They will not subscribe to a party platform contrary to their former convictions until they have been truly converted. Patriotism, loyalty to the government, goodness and wisdom, will not permit them to take such a course.

To show still further what estimate the Lord places upon the constitution, I present the following:—

And again I say unto you, those who have been scattered by their enemies, it is my will that they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established, and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine, and principle pertaining to futurity, according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—D. C. 98: 10; latter half of the paragraph.

From the foregoing quotations, I deduce the following:—

1. That God requires us to honor and obey the constitutional laws of the land. This obedience must be intelligent and cheerful else it will not be acceptable to God; and therefore, it is right and necessary that the saints should gain an understanding of these things, and that they should cultivate loyalty and patriotism.

2. When we are in harmony with the Constitution, our politics are right; but when we are in conflict with it, they are wrong.

3. That the laws which God has given for the government of his people are the laws of the church; and so far as he is concerned, he proposes to keep church and state entirely apart.

4. That there is not so much as even an intimation that it is our duty to stand by any political party. Indeed, no such party is provided for in the Constitution.

5. It is our duty to befriend and sustain the Constitution, and that principle of freedom taught therein which God wills that all men should enjoy.

6. That whatever requires more or less than the constitutional law of the land is not of God and comes of evil.

7. That in selecting men for positions in the government, from the President down, we should be guided by their fitness for these respective positions, rather than the party to which they belong.

8. That in passing upon the fitness of men for office, honesty and wisdom are to be regarded as leading and essential qualifications.

I have never yet felt that it was right for me as a minister of the church to tell any one or more of the saints for whom they should vote, in church or state; but when interrogated with reference to this matter, I simply tell them what I intend to do, why I shall do it, and then advise them to think and investigate till they are satisfied, and then vote according to their own convictions. Is this right?

May we be able to cultivate broader and better views, and see the right wherever it is to be found.

[J. R. LAMBERT.]

TO THOSE INTERESTED IN THE WELFARE OF OUR YOUTH.

THERE has perhaps never been a time during this generation when there was such a need of some safeguard being thrown around our young people as there is to day. The mother may rear the child with all tenderness, watching his every footstep lest they tread upon forbidden ground; his place in the Sunday school may always be occupied, and he may invariably at night bow beside her knee and lisp his childish prayer, but the time comes, only too soon, when this motherly watchcare and childish devotion begins to relax its vigor.

He soon begins to break over the bounds denominated as childhood, the parents' advice though courteously received does not have the weight it once did. One by one his aspirations begin to shoot from under the parental roof, and different things brought to his sight and hearing form the basis for greater thought. In other words, he is commencing to think for himself.

To us it would seem to be the most important point in life, whether it is of greater importance than his early childhood we do not care to question, but rather call to mind the vastly different care that is taken of his welfare now and that that was taken in earlier life. Ninety nine per cent of mothers believe their children several per cent better than they really are, and equally the same per cent will attribute the downfall of their child, if they do fall, to bad associations. We know of one instance in particular where two young men associated together a great deal, perhaps more than they should have done, and either this association or some other proved very disastrous to them. After it had culminated rather abruptly both parents claimed it was the association of their child with the other party's child that caused the trouble. Each one could see the fault in the other's child, but apparently could overlook the shortcomings of their own. Standing on neutral ground, and looking the situation over we came to the conclusion they were both right to a certain degree at least, as either of the guilty parties had sufficient meanness inculcated in them from some source to cause trouble, but when the two formed a combination, their downfall was but a natural sequence. Perhaps this is an isolated case; we hope it is but believe similar cases might be found without searching a great while. Be this as it may we feel quite sure that a "red light" swung across the pathway of many of our youth would not be amiss. There is danger ahead, yet while there is danger we desire to have the youth of the church so fortified that he may, like Bunyan's Pilgrim, pass the danger line in safety.

Every parent whose affections encircle some child stepping from the borders of childhood will say amen to this, yet how many of these same ones are willing to sit serenely quiet, while others are wearing their life away swinging the "red light" for their child and others? There is little doubt but what all who read this are interested in this subject if not in the manner it is handled, our object is to awaken that interest.

The subject is closely allied to the "must" and "ought" problem that was so fittingly portrayed in recent issue of Autumn Leaves. We are endeavoring to deal with the period in life when the parent can no longer speak in the imperative. There are many plans that might be adopted to assist in this matter, but the one we desire to call attention to here is that of literature.

Since we were enjoined by the Giver of every good gift to read all good books, the great problem has been confronting us, What are considered good books, and how are they to be distributed among the ones that are to read them? Added to this comes the question, How are they to be secured to distribute?

Stop and think for a moment what a terrible amount of literature is daily being thrust upon us. To even endeavor to read a comparatively small portion of it, and be anything near what might be termed well read, is almost out of the question with those who earn daily bread by the sweat of their brow. The fact is we can but read the very cream of literature, and from this great mass it is no easy task to select such. Then after we have decided upon the books it is no easy matter to pay for them.

Zion's Religio-Literary Society is trying to solve this perplexing problem, and as a means to bring about the desired result have established what is termed a "Literary Distribution Fund," the one great barrier now being the same as one of those that places the Latter Day Saints Church below par in the eyes of the world—finance.

The plan is to have books purchased in large quantities and then distributed among the different local societies, thus forming a circulating library in every society of young people. When once started it will naturally grow, the books to remain the property of the society but to be so distributed as to have them placed where all can have access to them. By purchasing in this manner there will be two very great advantages; one is securing them at greatly reduced prices as compared with purchasing them at retail; another and more important one is the securing of the proper kind of literature. A few dollars at a retail book store is soon exhausted, while by purchasing at wholesale it would go much farther, and we feel sure the purchasing would be placed in such hands as would be good judges of what we need. Another benefit derived will be that good literature will be placed in the hands of those who otherwise would never read it at all, as we desire to make the distribution proportionally among the different societies regardless of the amount they donate, hence those not able to purchase books at all, can, if they so desire, have equal privileges with the more fortunate.

We want to raise five hundred dollars by January 1, 1897, and believe it can be done. Several have already remitted, and others have promised, this number however having been among the Religio society members. We desire this to reach others as well for all the help is needed that we can possibly have. While the fact is appreciated that calls are continuously being made for financial aid, we feel that the circumstances warrant the request for assistance in this laudable enterprise, and at the same time would make it in the spirit the request was made of the children of Israel, for such as can give willingly. Giving to such as this is a matter of principle and sacrifice. It is not because the Lord is in indigent circumstances, for he could very easily convert a few millionaires any one of which could do more for us than we could all possibly do ourselves, but in so doing we would receive no credit therefor. It is the one who earns his bread and butter by the sweat of his brow that is called upon to keep the financial end of our work going, and for such they may reasonably expect the reward.

If those who read this can but appreciate what the plan implies we don't think it would be necessary to ask for assistance again in this way. There has doubtless never been an opportunity presented where one dollar would be as far reaching and fruitful of good results as in this move. It is not invested to-day and gone to-morrow; it is lasting. Your dollar may enable twenty five or thirty anxious poor young people to read a good book, for which they will be thankful the remainder of their days. Please consider earnestly and prayerfully before you cast the matter from your mind. Then if you think you are not so situated or sufficiently interested as to help a little, don't give a cent. Don't give because we ask for it, if your sober judgement does not convince you of the merit of the undertaking, and that it would be the most fruitful investment you could make; act as you think best. Space does not permit making as full an explanation as we hope to make later on, but believe sufficient has been said to enable you to judge whether the effort be of God or whether it be of man.

If you wish to assist in this work, any amount you wish to give will be thankfully received, no matter how small. If a few could send in five or ten dollars, or more, each, it would help; if you can't send but ten cents, send it along. The money can be sent any time as we do not expect to close the doors January 1, 1897, but start the distribution of the books. We wish the amount as large as possible by January 1st in order that we may get it started in proper manner and then such other books be distributed either monthly or quarterly as the funds will permit.

Kindly remit such donations as you wish to make to R. Archibald, General Treasurer, 1627 Semple Ave., St. Louis.

Yours very truly,
J. C. HITCHCOCK.

Conference Minutes.

MOBILE.

Moler, James Moler, J. L. Goodrich, Thomas Matthews, V. M. Goodrich, and J. C. Smith were selected delegates to General Conference of 1897. Such of these as might be present were authorized to cast full vote of district. Bro. Hilliard preached the dedicatory sermon on Sunday, which was well received by all. An overflow meeting was held in the district tent both in forenoon and afternoon to accommodate the large crowd. Several were baptized during the session.

Sunday School Associations.

ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis district Sunday school held its quarterly convention at St. Louis, Missouri, September 26, and 27. A number were present from Belleville, Cheltenham, and Oak Hill. Saturday was given up to the transaction of business, the time being well occupied and numerous steps taken to increase the Sunday school interest in the district. In the evening an entertainment was given, in charge of District Superintendent Dawson. A very profitable and enjoyable time was had throughout the entire convention.

EASTERN IOWA.

Convention was held at Fulton, Iowa, August 21; Ella J. Green superintendent, Pauline Schrunk secretary pro tem. All visiting saints were invited to take part in the convention. Address by district superintendent. Powersville, Butternut Grove, and Zion's Hope schools reported. The following officers were elected: Ella J. Green superintendent, Ella Schrunk assistant, Lizzie Haller secretary, John Heide treasurer. Voted that the superintendent and secretary of the association hereafter report at the conventions, and the treasurer once each year. Address by O. B. Thomas. Resolved that the question of uniformity of lesson texts be presented before the schools connected with the association for their consideration; this duty to rest upon the superintendent of each school, the decision of each school to be reported at next association. Ella J. Green, Pauline Schrunk, and Willard Beal were chosen committee on program for next convention. The amount collected to defray the expenses of Bro. Hougas were ordered to be used by district superintendent in visiting schools connected with association. Convention program was then carried out. Adjourned to meet at Brush Creek, Iowa, February 27.

MOBILE.

September 19, at 3:30 p. m., during conference of Mobile district, at session called by district president for the purpose of considering the Sunday school work, remarks were made by Brn. Chute, Carpenter, Tucker, Smith, Booker, and Lone. It was then resolved that we proceed to organize a district association. Bro. C. I. Carpenter was elected superintendent, W. L. Booker assistant, John L. Booker secretary and treasurer. The constitution and by-laws of the General Association was adopted. This body is to be known as the Latter Day Saints Sunday school association of the Mobile district. Convention then adjourned to meet with the Three Rivers branch at two p. m., Friday, December 11.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of Decatur district will meet at Lucas, Iowa, Thursday, October 22, at 7:30 p. m. (Not on the 2d, as, by typographical error, it was announced last week.)

SUNDAY SCHOOL EXERCISES AT THE WOODBINE REUNION.

An organization was perfected by electing T. A. Hougas superintendent, and J. F. Mintun and W. N. Robinson assistants, Lenna Strand secretary, and Nellie Ballentyne treasurer. Four very interesting and instructive sessions of regular Sunday school work were held, the reports showing the following increase of attendance: Monday, eight a. m., 71; Tuesday, eight a. m., 82; Wednesday, eight a. m., 101; Thursday, eight a. m., 145. Collection during the sessions was $3.74 and was paid out for the expenses of the committee and to General Superintendent and General Secretary for their expenses. Besides this, something over five dollars was subscribed for the purpose of purchasing a teachers' Bible, to be presented to Ella R. Devore as a token of our appreciation of her work in the Sunday schools in the Society Islands. This was presented to her through the General Superintendent of the Association by a few well-chosen words full of feeling. The presentation scene affected the whole assembly with evidence of the strong tie that binds God's children, especially when mutually engaged in sacrificial work for the advancement of his blessed cause.

Our Sunday school prayer and testimony meeting was held at which time the Spirit of God was strongly felt, giving encouragement to those engaged in the Sunday school work. Four sessions of institute work were held, at which time several important topics were discussed and critically examined, and from which there resulted a great advancement in this department of church work. Some of the most important points presented at these sessions will be presented in future articles.

Two general sessions of special work were held in the large tent which cheered, instructed, and entertained many, and enlisted additional interest in the Sunday school.

The business sessions resulted in selecting as the program committee for the reunion for 1897, T. A. Hougas, W. N. Robinson, and Anna Salyards who were authorized to choose such sub-committees as may be thought advisable. By request presented we were granted an afternoon and evening session of next General Reunion time for special work.

Briefly told, this is the history of one of the most important efforts made to advance this department of the church.

LENNA STRAND, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

A BISHOP'S AGENT'S APPEAL.

To the Saints of the Northeastern Illinois District; Greeting:—The hard times, the lack of means, and the pressing needs of the church suggest to me the propriety of calling the attention of the saints to the law of tithes and offerings. It will hardly be necessary for me to prove that this law is a part of the gospel and applicable to us in our present condition. Enough has been said from time to time to reveal to all their duty. Besides, the Lord has spoken very plainly upon this matter, and the church accepts the principle as true.

But in these times of financial depression it is natural that everyone should economize by cutting off all unnecessary expenses. In this there is danger of some making the mistake of withholding the "Lord's portion." And this is what prompts me to write this appeal. It is not to beg, for of all men God's servants should not be beggars. It is not to plead our poverty, for our heavenly Father is rich and there is an abundance for all his servants when his children will live in obedience to his laws. God has fully provided for every emergency, and our own safety as well as the progress of the work depends upon his people accepting and living up to the provisions made. The Lord knew that these would be distressing times and sent the warning abroad that the earth was about to be visited with the destructive elements of pestilence, sword, famine, storm, and distress of nations; and provided a way of escape for his people if they will but heed his voice.

If there was ever a time when God's people needed the special blessings of God it is in these times of distress. And his blessings are promised us, even "the opening of the windows of heaven" and "blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." And further, the Lord says: "I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground. Neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed." In this the Lord asks his people to prove him. How? Now let all listen and heed the terms: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house and prove me herewith saith the Lord of hosts." How many are willing to "prove" "the Lord"? Those who are, let them bear in mind that the terms are; 1. "All the tithes," Not a part but all—it is not a tithe unless it is a tithe.

2. That it is to be brought "into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house. There is order in all God's works and it is not only necessary that all his children should give their tithes, but give it in the way he has appointed; for the Lord has appointed that there shall be meat in his house through the bringing in of tithes and offerings and that through this means his people should be blessed. (Mal. 3: 8, 9.)

Now let us look on the other side and see the consequences of a failure to do our duty in this respect:—

1. Then the Lord calls us robbers; "Ye have robbed me."

2. A curse instead of a blessing; "Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me."

3. And doubtless worse than all the Lord's storehouse is empty and God's work is hindered. This is not a mere theory but to many a demonstrated truth, as hundreds can testify who have proved the Lord "herewith."

Then let all who have been negligent in this matter, make a beginning. You may find it difficult at first, for Satan will hinder you all in his power; but resist him and he will flee from you in this as well as in other things.

No one is expected to do impossibilities, but let us all do all in our power and ask God to help us; and he will open up ways and means to enable us to do as he has commanded.

Our district has improved in this respect, but there are a great many yet who ought to have their names on the Bishop's books. Don't wait till you have accumulated a large sum, but make a beginning by sending what you have, and continue until you have paid a tenth of you possessions, and then a tenth of your increase annually.

We need means at once to supply the families of the missionaries who are in the field, who are doing what they can to "preach the gospel to every creature" and to establish truth on the earth. The saints need the protection and blessings of God. Then let us all be obedient children.

Remittances may be sent by draft, post office order, or registered letter, as is most convenient; or, members of branches may hand their amounts to the officers of their respective branches, who will see that it reaches me. My address is, No. 277 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraitures of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush.....25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding.....35 cts.

N. B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition. Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

IS REVIVAL OF DENOMINATIONALISM REQUIRED?

A PLEA for the revival of denominationalism is made by The Presbyterian, which primarily remarks that "diffusive Christianity is no more effective in saving men than sheet-lightning shimmering over summer clouds." The editor believes that the world never had so much effort for its religious betterment as now, and yet never such a small proportion of positive results. He notes that the ratio of conversion was never so small in proportion to the exertions put forth; that conversions among the Heathen are not in the ratio of the difference of the means employed sixty years ago, while school-teaching and general intelligence are greater; that respect for Christianity, through its missionaries, has increased and is increasing, but if we contrast the results of present activities as to conversions, the difference is most perceptible. He asks why this is so, and then gives reasons, as follows:—

"It is not that the missionary is less industrious and self-sacrificing; he is vastly better equipped in every way for his work. The trouble is that his exertions are too general. The attempt is made to cover too much ground. Besides, there has been the counteractive influence of the popular notion that Christianity is rather for the betterment of the race in its general conditions than for the saving of souls from eternal ruin.

"The churches have fallen into the channels of mere humanitarianism. The trend now is toward municipal Christianity. Christian power is diverted to reputable secularities, ethics, and enfranchisements, in order to greater political liberty, until the operation of Christian sacrifice comes in only incidentally, soul-saving being not the only, or even the main, end or object. Everybody is preaching, everywhere to the masses, but who is preaching, and quietly bending all his energies, to save the individual? Where is the society for solitary auditors? Where is the house-to-house organization to wrestle with the unsaved alike in the slums and behind brownstone fronts? The name 'slums' generally shuts the door against all efforts in the more destitute portions of our cities. Work for the improvement of moral natures is spread out, like a little butter over a whole loaf."

The editor thinks that all the Christianity in the world has been almost entirely the product of denominational zeal and enterprise. He feels assured that Christian work, to be greatly and permanently effective, should be divided up, carried on and sustained by denominations, and in furtherance of this view continues:—

"Denominationalism, intense, intelligent, and loyal, forcing itself into power by saving men, is not a curse, but a blessing. If the world is saved, it will be saved in this way. Undenominational efforts, however well meant, and however apparently successful, have always failed of permanent results, and, as long as human nature exists as it is, always will fail. Denominationalism is not what is popularly called sectarianism; it does not promote bigotry. The most abominable dogmatism extant is among those who boast that they have no creeds. It is a sort of headless monster, flopping itself about without law of existence, unregulated by the equities of truth or charity.

"Nothing promotes good neighborly relations like strong and well-kept line fences. It is not necessary to cast mind and soul in the same mold to have the most lovely fellowship. Unity comes necessarily out of variety. Love from thoughts of a common Savior and gratitude for salvation reaches out to all that are Christ's. The contemplation of a final reunion and blessed association, when the battle is over and when rest comes to the weary soldier, are the great attraction and sure bond of a fellowship that will live and thrive amidst manifold diversity. We believe in a Jure Divino church government, not of one form, but of all forms by which men are saved, tutored, cultured, and led. The Papistic, the prelatical, the Presbyterian, the Congregational, and all their modifications, are divinely appointed modes for the conveyance of divine truth and life, and for discipline to the attainment of the best results for the salvation of the race and for the glory of God. All agencies which do not work in divinely appointed directions will be short lived, and end more or less in failure.

"It is a matter beyond controversy that the best exhibitions of brotherly feeling, and the best effort to beget and continue the true brotherhood of man to extend help to man, and to express charity for and to man by man, and to display the power of sweetness and excellence of Him who is God manifest in the flesh, have their home and life in Christian communions which hold a spiritual oneness in him, yet are known by denominational names. The sins and curses laid by infidels at their doors are, in the main, slanders. The world would soon find that all the progress and goodness of which they boast as the result of a civilization, independent of Christian churches, are as exiles in rags without them."

The writer closes by expressing the opinion that a general revival of religion will be preceded by a revival of denominationalism, remarking that souls are developed to the highest spiritual point in church homes of their own choice and love.—Literary Digest.

GENESIS OF THE DENOMINATION.

IT IS somewhat unusual to hear a Protestant clergyman stigmatize modern Protestantism as "an internal disorder," "a mob," "an anarchy," "a family scandal;" yet this is what Dr. James H. Ecob does in an article under the above heading in The Church Union (New York). The denomination, he says, arose in the individualism of the Reformation, but it has gone beyond reason, and we have been dividing and subdividing on religious questions until the Christian household deserves the phrases that we have quoted above. Says Dr. Ecob:—

"The denomination is a survival from the Reformation. I do not say it is a 'survival of the fittest.' It is a survival of an accident, or, perhaps I had better say, of a perversion or degeneration. The Reformation was the sympathetic movement of the church with the whole civilized world toward individualism. Literature, science, art, government, as well as religion, were under the stress of the same evolutionary process. The 'divine right of kings,' not only in government, but in all departments of thought and endeavor, had culminated in a reign of the absolutism of authority. The human soul lay buried under the accumulated traditions of ages. But it was a heart of fire under strata of dull earth. When the seismic pain seized it the whole dead weight was thrown off and a new order was dated. The church shared in the general awakening. The prison doors of authority were burst open. In the gladness of liberty men for a time ran everywhere. It was a joy to try one's power; to assert one's rights. It mattered little what the occasion or the object so long as a man planted his individualism squarely against the weakening absolutism of authority. . . .

"The Reformation was a revolt against the tyranny of this ancient regime. It was fairly successful in its attempt to break up this solidarity of opinion into its original elements, or, at least, into smaller groups. According to the success of the movement we have approximate or complete individualism. This is a well-worn, even tiresome, historic truism. First, the centralizing of power or centripetal movement; then, as this crushing, centralized force becomes unbearable, the motion is reversed, and under the centrifugal impulse there is a rush outward again toward individualism. . . .

"At the Reformation we find individualism fresh and vigorous in its self-assertion. In art, in government, and in literature this same spirit is called a renaissance; but in religion, a reformation, a revival, a kindling from above. The individual becomes conscious of the hidden prophet in him. He no longer travels cut of himself for his visions and oracles. Heaven is as near to his soul as to any other soul."

"In this state of things," says Dr. Ecob, "reformers, prophets, martyrs spring as the grass." They are an invincible band till the fatal tendency to human selfishness disintegrates it to a mass of stragglers. This is exactly what happened. Dr. Ecob goes on:—

"So the denomination was born. Its father was a degenerate child of the reason, that doctrine of verbal inspiration. Its mother was that Cassandra of history—individualism gone mad. The denomination is by no means a case of survival of the fittest. It is the fruit of degeneration. Its stigmata are unmistakable—the decrepitude of doctrinalism, the insanity of individualism. Mark that I say, the insanity of individualism. Right, sane individualism is a divine ordinance for man. It always has its own glorious orbit within the great constellated life of love. If the Reformers had held to each other not a man of them would have failed of his true place and weight in the whole balanced order. But each man or group losing faith in the divine law of community, and, of course, growing narrow and selfish, we find them thrown apart, dividing and subdividing at every whim of self-assertion. The shadow of a shade of difference on doctrine, or custom, or rite, or polity, carried up into the court of conscience at once took form and substance and was planted as a standard of separation or carried as a banner of attack. This process of insane, unholy self-assertion has gone on till this day our Protestantism is no longer a protest, but an internal disorder. An army with regiments so defined and segregated is a mob. A government with states or provinces so self-centered is an anarchy. A household so dismembered into single autocracies is a family scandal and travesty. A constellation so broken from its center is chaos."—Literary Digest.

THE CURFEW LAW.

Edward W. Bok, in the September Ladies' Home Journal, reviews the provisions and operations of the curfew ordinance, which, in variously modified forms, has been adopted by municipal legislative bodies in the West. He gives hearty indorsement to the law, and asserts that, although it met with general opposition at first, there is not a city or town in which it has been enforced, that would have it abolished. "Wherever the curfew ordinance has gone into effect," Mr. Bok contends, "its advantages have been conceded. This is true now of over three hundred towns and cities, some as large in population as Omaha and Topeka. In each case the excellence of the law has become apparent, opposing parents have conceded its wisdom, and even children are said to be pleased with it. It has placed in the hands of the police a most effective weapon for clearing the streets of hoodlums at night, and in many cases where disorder reigned at street corners quietness, law, and order now prevail. So well has the ordinance worked that reports, gathered from not less than forty of the towns where it is a law, show that the fine or imprisonment penalty has not been inflicted in a single case. The first caution has served the purpose. These reports show, too, that the ordinance is not enforced in any oppressive manner. In the case of evening winter or summer entertainments, which would keep the children out later than the curfew hour, authority is easily obtained and readily granted by the mayor or town official for an extension of the time. Its rigid enforcement is applied most strictly to the hoodlum element, and with this class the police claim they have never been able to deal so successfully. It will be at once obvious to all rightminded parents, I think, that they should give the weight of their influence to the curfew ordinance wherever it may be presented. . . . Taken from any and every standpoint it is an excellent thing, and it may wisely be encouraged by parents all over our land."

SR. BERTHA M. SMITH DEAD.

SR. BERTHA M., wife of President Joseph Smith, died suddenly at the family residence near Lamoni, Iowa, on Monday, October 19, 1896, at ten o'clock a. m. Her death was the result of injuries received in a runaway accident. She leaves an aged mother, her husband, two daughters, and three sons of her immediate family; two sisters and two brothers; two daughters of President Smith by his first wife; and other relatives and friends to mourn their loss and her unexpected departure. She died in the faith she had lived, in which she maintained the strong integrity which was a marked trait of her character. She was generous and hospitable by nature. She has gone to her rest in peace.

President Smith and his family have the sincere sympathy and prayers of saints and friends in this sad hour of trial and grief.

The funeral is expected to take place on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 21st inst.

IS POLYGAMY SUPPRESSED IN UTAH?

WE have been sharply criticised by the Utah contingent of Mormons for permitting suggestions and statements to appear in the HERALD from time to time to the effect that plural or polygamous marriages were still maintained in Utah; thus by inference casting suspicion upon that people that they were not acting in good faith with the government of the United States and the world outside of Utah. We give place to the following taken from the Republic, newspaper, of St. Louis, for September 14, 1896.

Of course we do not vouch for the accuracy of the report of what Mr. Roberts said on the occasion referred to; but, if it is a correct statement it is strongly corroborative of the sentiment that plural marriage is still held to by the church in Utah, and taught by their elders when abroad, notwithstanding this has been denied so frequently by them.

Elder B. H. Roberts, of the Mormon Church, preached last night at Chatsworth Hall, Seventeenth and Olive Streets, in justification of plural marriage, as formerly practiced and now maintained in theory by the Latter Day Saints. A large audience accorded him close attention. Mr. Roberts is an eloquent, forcible speaker, and makes his remarks entertaining even to those who do not agree with his conclusions. The meeting followed the orthodox religious form generally adopted by Protestant Christian churches, and there was nothing but the sermon to indicate that the service was that of the Mormon Church.

The preacher took some little time in creating a philosophical foundation for his tenet, but he did it in a way that showed his eloquence and descriptive powers to great advantage. The fact that this earth is but an atom in the universe, and that human beings play an infinitesimally small part in the design of creation, having been vividly brought before the minds of the audience, he began his argument proper. He stated that in 1831 Joseph Smith, then engaged in a revision of the Bible, entered into communication with God for the purpose of promulgating a new and everlasting covenant of marriage. Smith was permitted to prophesy, and the Mormon Bible was the result. It regards marriage as a covenant for eternity. It teaches material resurrection and the continuance of marriages made upon this earth in that post mortem time. The speaker paid a high tribute to woman, and her influence on men for the betterment of the world. Entering into a scriptural defense of polygamy, he said:—

"The faith of the saints in the revelation commanding them to practice celestial marriage was strengthened by reading in the Scripture how the Lord blessed and approved the actions of those who practiced plural marriage in past ages. They read of the faithful Abraham taking Hagar, the handmaid of his wife, Sarah, to wife; and when trouble arose in the family and Hagar departed from her husband's household, an angel of the Lord met her and commanded her to return (Genesis 16: 9), which, if plural marriage were sinful, the angel would not have done, but would rather have encouraged her in her flight from that which was evil. Nowhere do we find the Lord reproving

Abraham for taking Hagar to wife; on the contrary, when the Lord appeared unto him some time after the birth of Ishmael, he promised him a son by his wife, Sarah, through whom all the seed of Abraham was to be blessed. In all this there appears no displeasure towards Abraham for marrying more wives than one.

"The history of Jacob affords still more striking proofs of God's approval of polygamy. The story of his marrying the two daughters of Laban is too well known to need repeating here. But when Rachel realized her barrenness she gave her handmaid Bilhah, to be her husband's wife, and she bore Jacob a son. And Rachel said: 'God hath judged me, and has heard my voice, and hath given me a son.'—Genesis 30: 6. Then, when Leah saw that she had left off bearing children, she took Zilpah, her maid, and gave her to Jacob to wife; and the sacred writer adds: 'And God hearkened unto Leah, and she conceived and bore unto Jacob a fifth son.'

"If plurality of wives were wrong in the sight of God, would he bless in so remarkable a manner those who practiced it? Would he hear the prayers of those polygamous wives, and answer them with blessings—take away the reproach of the barren Rachel and make her fruitful, and give more children to Leah as her 'hire' for giving her husband another wife, when he already had three? I think not. If a plurality of wives, I mean as practiced by the prophets, is a sin at all it must be adultery. Yet we find adultery condemned and Abraham, Jacob, and the prophets exalted.

"David, the king of Israel, and a man whose heart, we are informed, was perfect before the Lord, had a plurality of wives. Yet notwithstanding David practiced a principle which the Christians of to-day denounce as evil, we are taught by the Scripture that David did what was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from anything he commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah, the Hittite. If David did what was right in the eyes of the Lord all the days of his life, except in the matter of Uriah's wife, he must have done what was right when he took Abigail and Ahinoam to be his wives; hence a plurality of wives as David practiced it must be right in the sight of God.

"David's sin with Uriah's wife also throws some light on the subject in hand. The circumstance is well known—David committed adultery with Bathsheba and then had her husband placed in the front of the battle where he was murdered. For this crime the Lord reproved David, but gave him Saul's widows. If polygamy were sinful, was it not wrong for the Lord to give unto David the widows of Saul, when he already had several wives? If for a man to have a plurality of wives be sinful, then in this instance at least the Lord was a party to the wrong. And the Christians of to-day, who in the face of the truth just pointed out still insist on the sinfulness of polygamy, virtually accuse God of being a party to the evil.

"We learn from the description given of the New Jerusalem that there will be twelve gates in the wall surrounding the city, and on these gates will be written the names of the twelve sons of Jacob, born of his four wives. We have already quoted the words of Jesus, showing that polygamous Abraham, Jacob, and the prophets will be in the kingdom of God, and will doubtless have their abode in this New Jerusalem, so that it appears that if our modern friends, who so bitterly oppose the practice of the saints in having a plurality of wives, ever go to heaven, gain an admittance to the heavenly city, it will be by passing through a gate upon which is written the name of a polygamous child, only to be ushered into the presence of such notorious polygamists as Abraham and Jacob. It appears that modern Christians must either learn to tolerate polygamy or give up the glorious hope of resting in Abraham's bosom—a hope which has ever given a silvery lining to the clouds which hang about the deathbed of the dying Christian.

"The following is a summary of reasons we have for believing that God approves polygamy:—

"First. When a polygamous wife deserted the family of which she was a member, the Lord sent an angel to bid her return to that family and promised to make her seed a great nation.

"Second. The Lord heard and answered the prayers of polygamous wives by granting them children.

"Third. The men who practiced plural marriage by no means forfeited the peculiar blessings promised to them before they were polygamists; on the contrary, promises were renewed and greater blessings added.

"Fourth. God himself gave unto David a plurality of wives.

"Fifth. God owned and blessed the issue of polygamous marriages, making a marked contrast between them and illegitimate children.

"Sixth. So far as the earthly parentage of Jesus is concerned, he came of polygamous lineage.

"Seventh. The Lord gave unto Israel a number of laws, under which polygamy was not only permitted, but in some instances made obligatory."

Elder Roberts reviewed the suppression of polygamy in Utah by law, and said that the Mormons would have suffered any martyrdom for their principles had they not been released by divine revelation to their President. Polygamy, however, he said, is only incidental to the Mormon theory of marriage. He defended the practice from the assertion that it was but a foil for the gratification of lust. He declared that it was not necessary for a man to saddle himself with a family to gratify lust, and cited social conditions in St. Louis. His eloquent peroration terminated with the declaration that the "Mormon marriage covenant is a system that rises to meet the grandeur of God's universe."

After the sermon was concluded a man in the audience rose and attempted to engage the elder in a colloquial controversy, but the saint declined to answer any questions except in private. His questioner stated that he wanted to straighten out an apparent contradiction, but the elder remained obdurate and the man's curiosity was not satisfied.

Elder Roberts will speak to-night and Tuesday evening at the same hall.

Whether Elder B. H. Roberts has more ability and is more eloquent than other defenders of the Utah philosophy, or he has been started on a new crusade by the leaders of the church, in behalf of plural marriage, because of the fact of statehood for Utah, we can only conjecture; but it is very peculiarly striking that in the effort at Chatsworth Hall, St. Louis, he pursues the very course which the Lord commanded Jacob to tell the people of his time was not pleasing to him:—

For behold, thus saith the Lord, This people begin to wax in iniquity; they understand not the scriptures: for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord.—Book of Jacob, 2: 6.

We have not space to review this effort at any length, but it is surely just to conclude that what the people whom the Lord rebuked through the Prophet Jacob were doing by citing the example of David and Solomon, Mr. Roberts did at St. Louis; and if he fairly represents the people for whom he is preaching, then, if the course taken by that people rebuked by Jacob was condemnable, so is the one adopted by Mr. Roberts and his people.

OCCURRENCES like the one recorded herewith have been cited in proof of existing close sympathy between the spirit and the earthly house in which it dwells—that if one suffer or be displaced the other is often peculiarly and keenly conscious of it. We publish another statement to this effect as showing that such experiences are quite common:—

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 5.—The amputated arms of Abraham Netherwood of this city have been giving him so much pain that he had them dug up, the joints straightened, and reburied, and he is to-day free from pain.

Mr. Netherwood is sixty years old and was for years foreman of the Norfolk and New Brunswick Hosiery Company. About six weeks ago he was caught in a piece of machinery and his arms were shattered.

Mr. Netherwood had not seen the severed hands and arms when buried, but he became satisfied that they were not in a natural position, and to gain relief from pain with which he was tortured nightly decided to have the buried parts straightened out.

"LATTER DAY SAINTS CONVENE."

PROBABLY one of the most substantial indications of the strength and growth of the Reorganization is furnished in the favorable comments of the press, which though years ago was generally hostile, is now disposed to recognize the church and its faith as a settled force for good that has "come to stay." This has been made manifest in the steady-going uprightness of our people who, in their devotion to moral principle, have "by manifestation of the truth" in that and in other respects won favor in the eyes of the people and compelled the acknowledgments daily being made by the public press of their worthiness of public trust and recognition.

Our New England brethren and sisters have obtained satisfactory recognition of this kind, of which we have a sample in the following which we clip from the Fall River, Massachusetts, News of October 10. What the church has done to merit good opinion and tributes to her worth in all parts of the world where such worth has been noted and recognition of it expressed, is but a partial exposition of what she can do and what remains yet to be done. We believe it to be the design of the author of the faith that its possibilities for good shall be so signally manifest as to compel the acknowledgements of general public sentiment that it has proved itself to be a power for good, both by the vindication of itself and the righteousness it has wrought for mankind in every community where it has been planted.

It takes time to demonstrate the merit of any movement, to surmount the difficulties and remove the misapprehensions that have impeded and do yet impede our progress; but patient, persistent preaching and living will by the blessing of God cause the obstacles to remove, or to so lose their apparent power as resisting forces as to make the victory assured and certain.

Baptisms are gladly welcomed as signs that truth prevails in the hearts of men; but they are not the only ones that measure our progress. Much must often be done before it is time to plant organizations among the people, and he who labors to properly educate public sentiment concerning the faith — who illustrates its true spirit and purpose in his teaching and in himself, has done well for the church though he has baptized none or but few. He has laid a substantial foundation, upon which anyone may safely build, and without which no one can build successfully or with ground for hope of substantial growth and permanent increasing influence for good.

We hope to see the day when New England will again contribute thousands of faithful men and women to swell the numbers of the kingdom of God. Our people there as elsewhere have been faithful and persistent in the face of many seeming discouragements. They have done well to call forth the commendations that have appeared from time to time. The fruits of their labors will more fully appear in due time.

The semi-annual conference of the Massachusetts District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met, last Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 p. m., in the saints' chapel on Claffin Street, Flint village. Elder Frank M. Sheehy, of Boston, was appointed as temporary and permanent chairman of these sessions, and later was elected president of the above district. The other officers elected were: Vice-president, Frank O. Coombs, Plainville; secretary M. C. Fisher, Boston; assistant secretary A. Burnside Pierce, Pawtucket, Rhode Island; treasurer R. Bullard, Boston.

Statistical reports were read in this convention showing steady and prosperous growth of the churches in nearly all parts of its jurisdiction. The restoration of the ancient priesthood of the Apostolic days are among the prominent claims of the ecclesiastical body, and that the original Christian doctrines are in force and its early spiritual blessings, obtainable and really received and enjoyed by its faithful adherents. Its numerical strength in the United States is about 50,000 and rapidly increasing. Its international headquarters are Lamoni Iowa, at which place they own a large publishing plant, one of the finest in that part of the State, and also a non-sectarian college, which is now fast attracting national importance as a seat of learning.

Kirtland, Ohio, at which place the famous temple is located, and Independence, Missouri, are some of the other important centres. In deportment and intelligence they compare favorably with other religious bodies.

Yesterday at nine a. m. they held a prayer and testimony service lasting three hours, in which a large number participated. At 2:30, Elder John Smith, of the local church, presided, with prayer by Elder C. H. Coombs, of Plainville. Elder Holmes J. Davidson, of Nova Scotia, gave an interesting discourse. Shortly after four p. m. Elder Sheehy administered the rite of baptism by immersion to five candidates at the Narrows. Elder F. M. Sheehy preached the Sunday evening sermon. Mrs. S. W. Ashton acted as organist, and Mrs. Joseph Linney chorister, both of Fall River. Elder F. O. Coombs rendered valuable assistance in the musical department with the cornet. Miss Ora Holmes, of Providence, sang a solo, last evening, and Miss Beatrice Whitney, of this city, assisted in a vocal trio. The services yesterday were crowded at each session.

STORMS AND HIGH TIDES.

TELEGRAMS from various points along the Atlantic coast recount the work of destruction wrought by storm and high tides on the 13th inst. The unusually high tides are significant in the light of ancient and modern prophecy. We append but a brief portion of the telegraphic account:—

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The great storm of 1896 has not been relegated to the annals of the past. The story has not half been told. No one has so far been able to estimate the damage wrought by the wind and the waves nor to say how far-reaching was the fury of the gale. But as far as the eye can see, from any point along the shores of Long Island, along the Jersey coast, in over the low lands, and in some instances over the highlands, wherever one may turn, there are evidences that a hurricane has been passing through this section of the country.

It was the tail of a storm that came from the Indies, broad and destructive; it lifted the seas to a giant height and forced in the waters with a sweep that carried them high over the land to begin the work the wind and rain would finish. For two days and a night the gale blew with ever-increasing fury, and to-day there was a steady downpour of rain to contemplate the miserable devastation. Thousands have spent the day at the beaches. At Brighton Beach and at Manhattan, at Edgemere, at Far Rockaway, and at a dozen other points along the sea line, the incoming waters swept under the very foundations of the building. One hotel did go down. It was the Brunswick, at Sea Isle City, the finest structure of its kind in that section.

The reports that have already come in are to the effect that in some sections whole districts on the coast were clean swept of frame buildings. Jersey City was, in places, practically inundated. Boats were a valuable acquisition to-day. The railroads in that section of New Jersey were sufferers to the extent of suspending business for a period, and many towns in that State were cut off.

Householders at Asbury Park and Long Branch gathered to watch the fury of the seas, wonder-stricken and amazed at the greatness of the waters.

Yesterday the tide was higher than anybody remembered it to be, but early this morning, long before sunrise, it had again reached a maximum still higher than at the previous flood. It only needed this to complete the devastation along the beaches. The seas simply swept over the adjoining districts, hundreds of feet beyond what long ago had been fixed as the line of safety. As a result dwellings were flooded, and to-day some of them are not yet safe from collapse.

POPE'S ANGLICAN LETTER ATTACKED.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A sensation was caused at the Church Congress at Shrewsbury during the week by a fierce attack made upon the Pope's bull referring to the Anglican orders by the Archbishop of Cork, Lord Halifax, the Bishop of Salisbury, and others.

The bull was described as a misuse by the Pope of the fairest chance man ever had since the sixteenth century for promoting unity, and the Bishop of Salisbury suggested that the bull "sets us free to do the work which lies nearest without so much regard for the ulterior consequences. We are free to follow the path opened to us by divine providence and create an independent world-wide communion."

The Bishop suggests that the first step for the Anglicans to take is to create a union of policy with the Presbyterians.

The question of authority, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. There is world-wide dissatisfaction and unrest, an inner consciousness that something is lacking, that the foundations of churchism are unsatisfactory and unstable; a sense of insecurity which causes some of the clergy to endeavor to prop up or to wedge their foundations by resort to some means. The more the question is discussed, the more apparent becomes the necessity for doing something. Ecclesiastical statesmen are worried; theological microbes are thick in the air, floating about and finding lodgment in productive soil, ready to pounce down and spring up in heresies and religious movements innumerable. The fertile brains of churchmen are fallow fields in which the germs find ample development, and men are running to and fro with new propositions in theology, looking to the solution of the vexed problem. The question practically resolves itself into the plain queries, "Who are we?" and "where are we?" Rome has in late years assumed an apparent liberal (?) turn, and has said something about freedom of conscience and progress in a sort of general way; but being closely pressed for recognition of the authority of English Churchism, answers, "No;" flatly and unmistakably. Not even the entreaties of Mr. Gladstone are effective upon that point; Pope Leo is amiable as a man, but rigid as a Roman Catholic; the authority of the Roman pontiff is arrogant, unyielding. Protestantism and Greek Catholicism must bow the knee. Unity and concord are desired and devoutly prayed for; peace is sought and is to be had in time; but when the lamb and the lion lie down together the former must content himself to occupy the stomach of the latter and accept the dictations of headquarters—Rome.

Greek Catholics issue a counter bull and show forth the usurpations of Roman bishops; Rome has assumed a place upon which of right she has no just claim.

John Calvin has been called in question and his creed rejected, or pigeonholed for revision. Baptist succession has been given up and sprinklings by Baptists been admitted, acknowledged, as having been accepted as baptisms. A Methodist General Conference has tabled a resolution inquiring into the validity of Roman Catholic baptism because of the question, "If Catholic baptism is not valid, what becomes of our baptism?" Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and other Protestant bodies cannot unite, finding no common ground upon which they can agree because each clings to his favorite dogma; and now comes the Church of England which proposes a policy of union with the Presbyterians. What next?

By the way, does the Bishop of Salisbury recognize the supremacy of the Pope in any sense by the statement that the action of the latter sets him and his coworkers "free to do the work which lies nearest without so much regard for the ulterior consequences?" If so, by what means has Leo's confessed authority been annulled? And by what authoritative sanction have the representatives of the Church of England been commissioned to "create an independent world-wide communion"? Is the project an authoritative one, or is it but another movement inspired by "ecclesiastical policy?"

When this Church Congress meets in future years will it be any nearer the solution of the problem? If it turned to Roman Catholicism for authoritative sanction and, being rejected, is now ready to join hands with Presbyterianism, one of the most radical forms of divergence from and opposition to the authority of Rome, where is the consistency in its movements, what the ground for confidence in its judgment?

From the religious confusion that has existed for centuries it is apparent that something is radically wrong in the ranks of theology. The Scriptures state the cause to be a departure from the faith, and prescribe the remedy in the principle of divine direction—the principle of present, continuing instruction from on high. The elders of the latter-day work have been calling attention to those scriptural statements and the provisions of the divine economy for the government and salvation of the great family of man. They have hinted to the theological world that it would be a good thing for humanity if the God of the past was made the God of the present; his direction sought and his counsel heeded. Religionists seem afraid to trust him however. To them he was a sure guide to past generations, but in the present no communication from him seems to be desired, by the great religious masses at least. They seem to be afraid that he be heard at all.

It is taking the world a long time to learn that inharmoniousness with or separation from God means confusion, and increasing confusion the longer such conditions prevail; and that unity is attainable only by and through obedience to the directions and mandates of Christ the Lord. He is the way, the truth, and the life; and men cannot come unto the Father but by him.

Pope Leo has been importuned and found to be unrelenting; the creeds and their correlative movements prove unsatisfactory. To whom shall men go but to Him who has the words of eternal life?

BAPTISM, IMMERSION.

BRO. RALPH FARRELL, of West Sullivan, Maine, sends us the following statement from Prof. Lord, of Dartmouth College, concerning baptism:—

Editors Herald:—A few days ago I wrote to Mr. G. D. Lord, Instructor in Greek at Dartmouth College, asking him the meaning of the Greek word from which baptize is derived, and received this reply:—

"Baptize: to dip or plunge in or under water; e. g., to sink a ship, also to drench, soak.

"I quote from Century Company's Dictionary, Baptism: 'A sacrament or ordinance of the Christian Church, instituted by Christ as an initiatory rite, consisting in the immersion of the person in water, or in the application to the person by affusion or by sprinkling by an authorized administrator in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. In Protestant churches it is generally regarded as a symbol of purification, a rite of initiation into the visible Church of Christ, and a sign ratifying God's covenant with his people.'

"In the Roman Catholic Church baptism is the sacrament of initiation into the Church of Christ. Churches of the western world commonly substitute sprinkling for immersion, which as with the Baptist, is the common mode in the East.

"Yours,

"G. D. LORD."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. I. N. WHITE, Webb City, Missouri, October 13:—

I left Springfield last evening where I organized a branch of thirty-four members. I spoke fifteen times while there and left a growing interest, the hall being crowded with attentive listeners at the last. Am in Webb City and speak here on the 13th and 14th, and at Blendsville on the 15th, and attend the quarterly conference the 16th to 18th. The work is still moving forward. The political campaigning is a whirlpool that is not easily dodged, even by elders that try ever so hard to keep out of politics. I read and pray for myself, and believe I know how to vote and will content myself as being in favor with God by preaching the gospel and let politics alone and settle my part of it on November 3 by voting for—whom I please.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, Maine, Minnesota, October 7:—

Our conference closed last night. We had a very spiritual time, though not many out on account of the continued cold rain that fell on Thursday and Friday before conference. We are advancing slowly but surely for which we are thankful. The preaching during our conference was a little above the average. I am feeling quite well and have more work than I can do.

Bro. James W. Gillen wrote from Sterling, Colorado, October 8:—

The work is making slow but steady progress in this mission, so far as I am informed in regard to it. The missionaries are doing all they can to push the work forward. My health is good.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Kalkaska, Michigan, October 8:—

I spent two weeks here, preached sixteen times with but little success; yet some six to ten or more are aroused up and investigating and may in the future obey the truth. Few attend, so much going on. We have had wet and cold weather. And there has been a show in town for one week, and another to come, with "Peck's Bad Boy." And some are more ready to receive than Jack's good boy (if he be good). We pull stakes today and pack up tent for the winter, feeling that our labors are not in vain.

Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California, October 5:—

Some of the Royal Hawaiian Band sang for us at our services Sunday morning. We advertised "some," not knowing how many, but only one came. We expected Bro. Burton to preach for us morning and evening, but his throat would not permit, and so I had the honor of presenting the word. Bro. John Saxe baptized Bro. Ursenbach, who is a resident of Angel Island, and he was confirmed under the hands of Brn. George S. Lincoln and C. A. Parkin. His confirmation was inducted by the Holy Spirit. A little child was blessed, and sacrament administered to the new convert and his wife, who only come to the city occasionally.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. JOHN S. LAWTON, of No. 140 Belmont Street, Brockton, Massachusetts, is one of the committee of the Massachusetts reunion, for 1897, and writing to the HERALD about the affair, suggests that the committee are already at work believing that the best success has not been hitherto reached because the committees have "started too late." It is well in all laudable enterprises to take "time by the forelock."

Brn. Alma and Charles Barmore are wanted to assist at Thanksgiving day exercises at Kibbie, Illinois, and are requested to communicate with Bro. J. T. Curtis, Kibbie, Illinois.

Bro. J. W. Wight, called home because of illness of his infant child, desires saints in his field to know that she is improving, and that he is hopeful of her early recovery.

Bro. John A. Lemburg, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, wishes the traveling minister of that region to remember his address and such as can to call and see him.

Bro. J. L. Goodrich, of the South-eastern Ohio field writes that the prevalence of diphtheria and the extensive interest in political questions have driven him from the field for the present. He is now making repairs on his house. He will go to West Virginia in November. Bro. and Sr. Devore have reached their home in Ohio.

We promise our readers an article on the money question at no distant day. Remittances are in order, however, at any time, and will cheerfully be placed to the credit of those making them.

Sr. Carrie Barron, Ludington, Michigan, wishes to obtain a copy of the hymn beginning with the words,

'O my people be not lifted
Up in pride of wicked hearts.'

Who can furnish it to her?

Pres. Joseph Smith returned home from Nebraska on Wednesday, the 14th inst.

Brn. A. H. Smith and F. M. Weld left Lamoni on the 16th inst., the former going to Illinois, the latter to Minnesota in answer to a special call. Bishop Kelley left the same day, for Guilford, Missouri.

In the last issue of the HERALD, article "The Politics of the Doctrine and Covenants," page 685, middle column, twelfth line, read conversion instead of conce sion. The copy read: "If a man reverses his record without the least pretense of conversion," etc.

Elder Lee S. Robinson, of Idaho Falls, Idaho, and brother of Bro. Ebenezer Robinson, of Lamoni, made us a brief call at the Herald Office, during the week past. He has been appointed by the Utah Church to labor in Nebraska.

Original Poetry.

WHEN WILL OUR WAITING BE OVER.

BY DAVID H. SMITH.

Now we are waiting in pain and sorrow,
When will the dawning bring us light?
Strong in our faith we look for to-morrow,
Often we fall in the gloom of the night.
When through the azure the Savior returning
Cleanseth the earth with the power of burning,
Then will we rest from our toil with delight.

Long we have sighed for the glory of Zion,
Noting with patience the signs of the day,
Knowing the strength of the arm we rely on.
Oft in the dark we have sunk by the way;
Glory to God for the signs are proclaiming
Succor is nigh though scourges are flaming;
Thanks to the Lord as before him we pray.

Long we have prayed to Jehovah to guide us
Safe through the snares that are set for our feet,

Shielding our souls from ills that betide us,
Helping us on till his works are complete;
That we may rise in the first resurrection,
Joyous and bright in robes of perfection,
When earth will be holy and life will be sweet.

Let us be thankful for each dispensation,
And follow the iron rod hand over hand,
Trusting in God as the God of salvation,
His promises firm as the heavens shall stand.
And earth shall be bright as the dream of a dreamer,
A thousand sweet voices shall praise the Redeemer, Jehovah is holy, and mighty, and grand.

CHARACTER BUILDING.

CHARACTER does not come by chance; it is wrought out, and is the combined work of God and man. The very origin of the word points to this truth. Its root is the Greek word charasso which, with slight change, we translate "harass." As Edward Everett Hale says: "The great trip-hammer of the mint of God hits us hard, again and again, and again, and with every blow the metal struck changes its luster, its strength, even its image and superscription. Its character comes to it because it is pounded by this tremendous hammer. The more it is beaten the more character it has." As coins come from the mint with image and superscription clear-cut and strong just in proportion to the strength of the blows received, so character is strong in proportion to the blows it bears in God's mint.

We speak of sterling character—do we ever stop to study out the meaning of this figure of speech? It comes from the English pound sterling, coin of the realm. A pound sterling is, literally, gold pounded till it shows the image of the reigning sovereign. Thus our vernacular, which is a crystallization of the deeper thoughts of the generations forming it, testifies to the value of character by linking its expression with the coin of the realm, the standard of value. Character is the one thing of intrinsic value in the universe, the only thing we can take with us; all else we leave at the grave.

A dying miser had his bags of gold brought to his bedside, that so long as life lasted he might gloat over his hoard, but instead of the joy the sight had before given him, was now only agony because he could not take his treasure with him. Seizing a piece he threw it into his mouth, saying, "I will take you, anyway." But the gold choked him, and his soul went into eternity, naked and empty, bearing only the impress of its own sordidness. So every soul goes into eternity, bearing the impress stamped upon it here.

Character building in the home is a complex process, into which many elements enter. First among these is the character of the parents themselves. This affects children in two ways, by inheritance and by example, both potent forces for good or evil. No scientific laws are more fixed and certain than those of heredity, yet few are less known or less regarded in human affairs. The farmer studies them carefully as regards his stock, but utterly ignores them in relation to his children. Yet wherever we find life we find heredity, and whatever affects life affects heredity. This is true not only of individuals, but of nations, and no nation exemplifies its truth better than America. The stern conflicts of pioneer life and its rigid simplicity, led naturally to a nation marked by the self control, self-denial, courage, and patriotism characterizing the men and women of the revolution. Peace secured through hard-fought battles won, the natural sequence is a philosophic age, in which amid peace and plenty, ingenious and liberal pursuits flourish, and scientific studies are pursued with vigor. Then is the time great inventions are made. In proof of this, note the inventive spirit marking the years following the acknowledgment of our independence, the invention of the cotton gin and the steam engine. The two decades following our civil war witnessed more inventions by Americans than the two centuries preceding. This is in direct accordance with the laws of heredity.

Another hereditament is equally manifested in the American people of to-day. During those terrible years of civil conflict, the physical, mental and spiritual energies of our men and women were taxed to the uttermost; the nerve strain on the whole nation was something fearful, and we see its effects to-day in lack of nerve force among many born during those terrible years. Again, the aggressive spirit was for the time exhausted, and children born during the years closely following the war are largely characterized by the unaggressive spirit. They are now coming upon the stage of action and doubtless will be more ready to settle vexed questions by peaceful arbitrations than by the arbitrament of the sword. This is a blessed provision of nature; without it wars might be interminable; in it we see hope of healing the wounds of war, and making us indeed a united people.

As with the nation, so with the individual, the law of heredity decides in large measure what the character of the child will be.

"They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin."

This thought, it seems to me, should keep every man and woman pure for the sake of the children that are to be.

Heredity lies at the very foundation of life and character building. A foolish prudery—and wicked as well as foolish, when we consider its results—has too long kept it in the background. Never till men and women study this subject in the light of God's truth as revealed in the Bible and in science, and having learned his laws regarding heredity, sacredly obey them, shall there be a generation of children having a fair start in the world. Most children commence life handicapped by the sins or the follies of their parents. An intense absorption in either business or pleasure, to the exclusion of soul culture, results in children with moral natures warped or undeveloped. The mother's corset often leaves its mark upon the child. In the father's wine-cup is often dissolved pearls more precious than Cleopatra's—the will-power of his children—while the steadiness of nerve which is their rightful inheritance, is too often puffed away in the smoke of his cigar. God gave the world an impressive lesson in heredity when he would make the strongest man on record, and commenced the process by sending an angel from heaven to give the strictest possible total abstinence pledge to the mother of Samson. All through his word he recognizes the law of inheritance, and orders that spiritual opportunities be transmitted with temporal estates. He clearly shows that both good and bad traits may be transmitted, and also that sin can cancel the inheritance of good traits, as we see in the case of degenerate children of good parents; or that grace may cancel a bad inheritance.

We have been very slow in "thinking God's thoughts after him," in this direction, but have at last recognized the fact that it was by no accident he sent the angel to Samson's mother instead of to Manoah, but that he thus pointed out a fixed law of heredity, which is, that the line of transmission is between the sexes, from mother to son, from father to daughter. True, we have many instances of transmission of traits from father to son, from mother to daughter, as well as a transmission of traits to a child equally by both parents, but the general law seems otherwise, and experience proves this. No race of heroes ever sprung from mothers who were slaves. The mothers of great men have become almost as noted as the great men themselves. Witness the mother of Alfred the Great, of Napoleon, of Luther, of Goethe, of Washington, of John Q. Adams, of Lincoln, of Garfield, of John B. Gough, and scores of others. Close study of Bible history reveals the same fact.

When the lives of great women are as closely studied as those of great men have been, we may find the other half of this truth, that the fathers of grand women have themselves possessed grand natures, and that we must look to the fathers if we would find prefigured the character of the daughters. Queen Elizabeth is Henry the Eighth slightly modified by sex and Protestantism. Lady Norton inherited from her father, Thomas Sheridan, the talents which her mother so sedulously cultivated. Elizabeth Fry inherited from her father a large philanthropy. Lucretia Mott's splendid moral courage was the feminine gender of her sturdy sea-captain father's sterling qualities.

Carefully analyzed, they may help to elucidate another principle of heredity not so well established, but which the best authorities assert. It is that both sons and daughters are likely to inherit physical form, passions, and appetites from the fathers, and intellectual and spiritual traits from the mothers.

These two principles of heredity working together often produce complicated results. Yet it is said that few men or women have ever exhibited great intellectual powers unless these were prefigured in the mother, thus substantiating the second principle named. If this be true, and no one can prove that it is not, it presents a strong and unexpected argument in favor of intellectual culture and development for mothers, and an equally strong argument to fathers for controlling all appetites and passions. Sowing wild oats does not seem such a harmless thing, when we remember that innocent children must reap the harvest which this sowing produces, a harvest often of woe and shame, of physical weakness and moral obliquity.

A parent's first duty, not only to himself and to God, but to his children, is to be able to say, "I respect myself."

To say that, and feel it in every fiber of his being, he must be clean and pure, honest in the sight of God and man; when he can thus say it, he is sure of the respect of his children—a vital point in their character building.

"God reaches us good things with our own hands" is an old proverb and a true one. Good children are not accidental; they are the natural result of the parents working together with God. Form in your own mind a clear ideal of what character you wish your children to bear, then labor together with God to develop it.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

A SINGING SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LIFELESS singing means, usually, a dead Sunday school. Many a superintendent might greatly increase the vigor of his school by getting a snap into the music. Different ways of singing will not of themselves solve the problem, but they will go far toward it. Here are a few methods which will add to the singing the variety that is the spice of it as well as of nearly everything else.

Try reading the song in concert before it is sung. It would puzzle most even of us older folks to tell, after we have sung a hymn, what is in it. Concert reading brings out unsuspected beauties of thought, and the hymn will be sung afterwards with fresh zest and with fuller intelligence. The superintendent may vary this plan by reading the stanzas alternately with the school, or the girls may alternate with the boys. Occasionally get a single scholar to read the hymn before the school, or, what is far better, to commit it to memory and recite it.

Indeed, memory hymns, to be committed to memory by the entire school, and sung without the book, will prove very popular. Select songs that are worth learning for their words as well as for their music,—a thing which, alas! cannot be said of all our Sunday school songs. One memory hymn a month might possibly be achieved, and your children will rapidly grow independent of hymn books, as their grandsires were.

They may like to vote upon a school hymn for the entire year, and learn it in this way,—one that shall serve as a sort of rallying song throughout the twelve-month. The various classes, too, may be encouraged to select their own class songs, and to practice them at their class socials. Then, once in awhile, the entire school may listen while one or two classes sing their class hymns.

It would do no harm, either, for the superintendent occasionally to bind the children's interest to the singing by asking them to call for their favorites, that the school may sing them. This privilege may be granted to the classes or scholars that have the best record in attendance.

It will add interest to the singing if bits of pleasant information are sometimes given about the authors of our familiar songs. At the opening of the session, for instance, tell something about the blind hymn-writer, Fanny Crosby, and then let all the songs sung that day be by her, or tell a little about Miss Havergal's beautiful life, or give a few bright anecdotes about Dr. S. F. Smith, and then use nothing but their hymns. Some such book as Hezekiah Butterworth's "Story of the Hymns" (New York: The American Tract Society. $1.75), or Duffield's English Hymns: Their Authors and History" (New York: The Funk & Wagnalls Co. $3), will afford a plentiful supply of biographical material. Once in awhile get one of the scholars to read one of these hymn anecdotes, or to tell it in his own words.

Prayer songs—there are many most beautiful ones—may be used as prayers, all heads being bowed while they are sung softly, or they may be read in the same way.

Antiphonal songs are easily arranged. Choose two classes of good singers in distant parts of the room, and let one sing the verses and the other the chorus of some suitable song. A hymn arranged in the form of question and answer, such as, "Watchman, tell us of the night," or, "Art thou weary, art thou languid?" is very effective when sung in this way, or when read in dialog, the superintendent taking the questions and the school the answers.

Other dispositions may be made, for the sake of variety. Get the girls to sing the stanzas, and the boys the choruses, or the girls to sing one verse, and the boys the next, all uniting on the choruses; or, let the school to the right of the center alternate in singing with the school to the left. Send a company of singers into another room, with closed doors, and have them sing the chorus as an echo, very softly. Get the teachers to sing the stanzas of some song, while the whole school sings the refrain.

Solos are good once in awhile, especially if you make the school the chorus for them. A quartet of picked singers may be introduced very delightfully on occasion, especially if their selection is germane to the lesson topic, and, best of all, if the quartet is chosen from the scholars themselves.

The primary department will hugely enjoy singing one of their songs to the main school, and the older scholars will enjoy it quite as heartily.

Possibly a Sunday school choir might be organized to advantage, the strong singers from among the more mature scholars being banded together to practice new music and lead the singing. School orchestras have been very useful in many churches, the boys being proud to serve the school with violin and cornet.

Most useful, however, in adding zest to the singing, are the simple changes and variations that shrewdly call attention to the old by putting it in a new place, or "putting it" in a new way. For instance, you might call fresh attention to a beautiful song by bidding all sing it without their books, while you "line it out" earnestly and brightly. You might preface a hymn with a sentence or two telling why you think it just the hymn to sing in connection with the day's lesson. You might piece together several verses from different songs, and ask the school to sing them in immediate succession, without prelude or interlude, noting the connection and progress of the thought. You might stimulate the scholars in this and that corner by asking now one class and now another to consider themselves the leaders in the song next to be sung. You might have occasional "new hymn" days in which will be sung no song ever tried by the school. You might even steal ten minutes, on very rare occasions, for song services, carefully planned so as to bear effectively on the lesson for the day. The ways are almost endless whereby a music loving, child loving superintendent can introduce his two loves to each other.

A few more general suggestions. First, to the organist or pianist. Why do you think it necessary to hammer out an entire piece of music before you let the fidgety children sing it? They already know every note of it, and are not interested in your performance; nor is anyone else. They can find the place quite as quickly as you can. Except in the case of new songs, do let us off with the chord, and we'll canonize you as a model of self-restraint and good sense.

Then to the precentor, or whoever is responsible for the time you keep. Why is it so slow? I never could see why hymns should be sung so drawlingly as to make it quite impossible to grasp their thought. Time yourself in singing your next hymn, then read aloud the same hymn, forcing yourself to occupy the same time, and you will see why it is that our singing leaves our minds quite absolute blanks. This grievous fault must be remedied with the children if the singing of hymns is ever to be, to the average grown-up, an intellectual and spiritual as well as a physical occupation.

And to the same end, why is it that your school can sing readily, even without the book, the first two or three stanzas of so many songs, while every stanza beyond is an unknown land to them? It is because, owing chiefly to the slowness of our ordinary singing, we seldom compass the whole of a hymn.

At the close of a well-written hymn is the climax, the thought up to which the whole has led, which binds it all together. Our songs, if they are to get hold upon our minds and lives, must be sung beyond their prelude, sung straight through: To get hold of minds and lives,—that must be the end sought by all our singing.—Sunday School Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the city of Camden, trying to hold up the gospel banner to the people. My tent work is over for this season. Since August 26 I ran the tent alone till last Monday week, September 28. The last Sunday in the tent, the 27th, many of the saints from the Philadelphia branch came over and we took supper in the tent and had a good time, and Bro. A. H. Parsons came with them and preached for us in the evening to a large audience, and the Lord was with us. Bro. Hosea Bacon of that city has given us his kind aid in defense of the truth; also our aged brother, John Stone, Sen., one of the old wheel horses. He is about seventy-five years old and his mind is bright in gospel work.

I was with the gospel tent four months to a day, and I tried to prove faithful to my post, and during the four months I did not sleep a night away from the tent. Bro. H. E. Moler was with me the first three months and the weather was very hot part of that time. But we tried to live and heed the word of wisdom. In those three months we only cooked three messes of meat and the Lord blessed us with health. If all the young brethren that start out in the work could have the wise counsel that I received from Bro. Moler, it would be a good schooling for them, if they would heed the counsel.

I closed the tent meetings September 27. We had good attendance and attention during our meetings here, and the Lord has been with me by his Spirit and has blessed me in my labors. After closing the tent meetings I rented a hall and we are still trying to keep the truth before the people, and there is a good interest here, and the Spirit of God has been moving out on the people. Last night about nine o'clock we troubled the waters of the Delaware River again, and baptized two more into the kingdom of God. That makes sixteen since September 13, and we will have baptizing again next Sunday, and there are more near the door; so you see that the Lord has been with us.

I ask an interest in your prayers that I may live so that the Lord will continue to be with me, and that I may not betray the confidence of the people here, for they have been very kind to me. Our noble sister, Sr. Stewart, has acted as organist in our meetings, and she has assisted nobly in the work here, and I pray that God will bless her and all the saints here, and if the Lord continues to bless us here and if we all prove faithful we will have a branch here yet. We expect to start the Sunday school work here next Sunday, if all is well.

We have the so-called religious element to contend with and some of the ministers are getting very uneasy about the flock. But God is with us and it is his work, and it will roll forth till it fills the whole earth, and Christ will reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Then let us pray for one another, for the day is fading fast.

I pray that God will bless us all that we may continue faithful to the end, and that we may hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done," "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Your brother,

WILLIAM A. SMITH.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 3.

Editors Herald:—I left Illinois for my mission field about the middle of August, stopping at Fulton, Iowa, to attend the Eastern Iowa district conference. The attendance from the different branches was good and I think all spent an enjoyable and profitable time there. I was privileged to meet with several of the dear saints to whom I was minister in the sweet days of yore when I began my career as a preacher. Seeing them brought the scenes of my early ministry to my memory, and as I thought of the struggles of a stripling of eighteen summers trying to unfurl the banner of King Emanuel to the world, and of the kindness and forbearance of those saints, it touched a tender chord in my nature and caused the teardrop to start. In my fancy I also saw the faces of many gone on before with whom I had many times mingled my voice in prayer and song, and their genial countenances seemed to beam on me again like the galaxy of excellence present on the halls of memory and I forgot for the time that summer suns, winds, and rains had smiled, whispered, moaned, and wept over their mouldering forms; that winter's snows, frosts, and cold had mantled in whiteness their burial places, biting and blighting the tenderly planted flowers that affectionate hands have decked their tombs with, for once? aye, twice and thrice, since my fancies were realities. Their memory is sweet, yet sad; but this testimony will long remain with us to inspire us to greater faithfulness, and according to the strength of the chain love has forged, will we endeavor to gain entrance to their abode.

I also had the pleasure of attending the last few days of Bluff Park reunion, and with the assistant editor of the Herald was shown over the remains of old historic Nauvoo. The once "beautiful" city, now in ruins, speaks plainly of the fulfillment of the prophecy of the rejection of the church; and the long pilgrimage across the plains and their dwelling in the mountains was what God foresaw, but not what he had desired to be the heritage of modern Israel.

The 1st of September found me at Wray, Colorado, where I joined Bro. C. R. Duncan in holding meetings for ten days or more in two different places. The season of the year being a busy one our attendance was small; but I felt then and do yet that good would come of the effort. Bro. Duncan left on the 12th for Western Nebraska, I remaining over Sunday and preaching till the 16th, when I came to this place. The next day Bro. M. F. Gowell and I went to Erie, a little town twenty-five miles north. Neither of us knew anyone in the town when we stepped off the car platform, but we came with a determination to effect an opening if possible. The Methodist people granted us the use of their church for two nights, and a lady kindly gave us something to eat. Our first meeting was as well attended as we could have expected, as it was a rainy night. We stated our condition plainly to the people, that we asked no pay for our work but had no place to board in the town without paying and that we could not afford to do; that we would gladly accept of anyone's hospitality, however humble might be their dwelling. Either they thought none of their dwellings sufficiently humble or some other unknown cause. At any rate we were compelled to go to the hotel for a bed. Our finances were pretty low and things looked rather discouraging, so the next day we walked out of the town to a secluded spot and poured out our hearts' troubles to the Lord and felt assured by the calm influence of the Spirit that he heard our petitions. Of course we could have gone back to Denver and given up the effort, but we did not feel like giving up. When we arose from our praying we felt impressed to go to Lafayette, a distance of four miles. It had rained the previous night and made our walk very tiresome, especially to the writer, who was in rather poor health. We found a brother there who though not able to entertain us on account of circumstances, gave us some of the would-be free silver and directed us to a family of Saints by the name of Spruce, where we found a good home during the remainder of our stay in that locality, and by walking three miles we were enabled to continue our efforts at Erie.

The Methodists became a little fearful for the safety of their members, so we held forth in the town hall for a few nights, when our meetings were brought to a close suddenly by the prevalence of diphtheria and the action of the board of health in closing all the churches and schools. We then returned to Denver feeling that we had had some profitable experience, even if our effort had not been so successful as we desired.

The people of this State seem to have come here in quest of health, wealth, or pleasure, and anything failing to conduce to that end does not possess much attraction for them. Prosecuting missionary work in this State where there are no saints at the present is next to impossible. Prearranged railroad collisions, carnival of mountain and plain, military exhibitions and popular theaters attract their thousands of the giddy votaries of amusement and wring from them the shining shekel, while we can scarcely get an audience in this great city to listen to the news of free salvation. On nearly every street corner may be seen knots of men discussing "free silver" and the hard times, gesticulating violently and calling each other hard names when they differ, while both classes are the supporters of the various amusements and attractions that draw from them the quarters and half dollars that ought to go to the supplying of the necessaries of life of which they complain of lacking. How people can spend their money in supporting such things liberally and then complain of hard times is a mystery to me; but politics waxes hot and still hotter, and so the old world wags on.

Bro. J. W. Gilbert came in from California last Sunday and occupied at the saints' hall in the evening. With him came the sad news of the sinking of the Evanelia. My heart goes out in sympathy for our missionaries and saints in the southern seas who will feel the loss of their boat more keenly than we can in America.

In a few days I am going over the range to Mesa and Grand Valleys to do work there and in New Mexico during the fall and winter. If the saints in Southwestern Colorado and New Mexico who desire a visit from me will kindly send me their address with directions how to reach them, I will try to arrange to call on them before leaving these parts. Mail addressed to No. 2851 California Street, Denver, Colorado, will be promptly forwarded to me, and will receive prompt attention.

Ever praying for the success of the cause of Zion, and that the Lord may give to his servants great penetration of mind and refined decisions, I am,

Yours sincerely,

JOHN B. ROUSH.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—I just returned from Toronto; was there forty-two days. I preached thirty-seven times, baptized four, confirmed nine, blessed three children. Bro. Virgin baptized six. The work is onward, of course.

I now leave for St. Thomas conference, to be held next Saturday and Sunday.

J. C. FOSS.

CLEARWATER, Neb., Oct. 5.

Editors Herald:—The grove meeting, according to arrangements, commenced Friday, October 2. Bro. William Ramel was elected chairman, Bro. F. S. Gatenby secretary, Bro. Levi Gamet chorister. Brn. J. F. Mintun and F. A. Smith were present and delivered some very able addresses to saints of Inman, Meadow Grove, and Clearwater branches. All enjoyed themselves, both socially and spiritually, but the weather was not as favorable as we would have liked.

Elder J. F. Mintun received a message on the 3d that Bro. Joseph Smith would be with us on Saturday night. We were very highly pleased to have Bro. Joseph present, and listened to some very able discourses from him, having services three times a day, by Brn. F. A. Smith, J. F. Mintun, and Joseph Smith. Bro. F. A. Smith left us on the 5th, expecting to preach in Norfolk the evening of the 5th. Brn. J. F. Mintun and Joseph Smith remained with us, holding services in the church until the night of the 7th, leaving on the 8th; Bro. Mintun preaching at Norfolk the evening of the 8th, and Bro. Joseph preached at Meadow Grove the same evening.

There was a good deal of interest main-fested all through the meetings, the saints taking every opportunity of the privileges afforded them. All were well paid for their trouble and time, and we hope and pray that many more such meetings may be enjoyed by the saints in the near future. The only thing that happened to mar the happiness of the saints was the sad accident to Johnny Bauhman, whose parents were coming to hear the gospel. He fell out of the wagon and broke his leg. The little fellow is about nine years old, and we request the saints to remember him in their prayers.

Yours in the faith,
F. S. GATENBY.

ELK FORT, W. Va., Oct. 5.

Editors Herald:—There is a branch of saints here who are in the way of truth. Our members are scattered, but we have meetings once in awhile. There is one elder with us and two priests.

It has been about seven years since I was baptized, and I have had many conflicts that have been hard to endure, since that time, but if I will live faithful there is a crown for me.

Bro. D. L. Shinn has been with us and has done a good work here; a work that I believe no one else could have done. He had good crowds and good attention, and some who had been opponents were led to believe. Some will be baptized in November when he returns.

Yours in faith,
JAMES MOORE.

ASHMONT, Ohio, Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—The Ohio district conference was well attended by both saints and friends. I was informed by some of the brethren living there that there were about one thousand people present on the Sabbath. We held preaching services in the new church building and in the district tent at the same time, and it seemed to the writer that there was one third of the people walking around on the outside. Bro. Hilliard was present and rendered excellent aid. He preached some able sermons that contained good food for thought, both for saints and sinners. The word preached during the conference was greatly blessed of the Lord and we feel confident that it will be conducive of great good to the church in and around Vales Mills.

The saints' meeting on Monday was richly attended by the Holy Spirit's presence. It was truly a feast of good things to the saints; yes, it was one of those kind of meetings that will be remembered with joy for many days to come. The business was attended to in the Spirit of Christ, and the Sunday school convention was a grand success in every way. In fact, the conference was one of the best ever held in the district. Brethren James Moler, Goodrich, H. E. Moler, F. Ebeling, Matthews, L. D. Ullom, and many others of the ministry were in attendance, and all seemed happy and alive in the Lord's work of grace, and expressed themselves as being willing to do all within their power to help roll on the mighty work of God in these las days. All these brethren are faithful workers in the army of the Lord.

Much credit is due Brn. Jeffers, Bowen, Clemens, Hunter, and friend Giles Bowen for the urgent manner in which they have worked to erect a house of worship to the Lord. The present church house is much larger than the former building. And we think a much better house in every way. Five persons were baptized at Vales Mills; four during the conference and one after it closed.

On the 16th ult. Bro. L. D. Ullom and I went to Wellston, Brn. Hilliard and James Moler having preceded us the day previous. We held three preaching services in all. Bro. Hilliard left here for the Southern Indiana district conference and the writer in company with Brn. J. L. Goodrich and L. D. Ullom went to Limerick. While there I enjoyed a very pleasant visit with Bro. Beatty and family. Bro. B. and wife had been quite ill, but were much improved by the time we reached there. Bro. Beatty seemed strong in the faith and intends to labor extensively in the ministry this fall and winter, providing his health is good. I learn that Bro. Devore and wife have arrived at Limerick. I shall be pleased to have Brn. Devore and Beatty labor in the Ohio and West Virginia districts. Perhaps they can travel some together as in days of yore. I am sure that the saints and many of the outsiders will be glad both to see and hear them again.

The Pittsburg and Kirtland district conference passed off pleasantly on the 3d and 4th insts. Brn. Etzenhouser, Short, and Criley were in attendance, also many others of the local ministers were present. The preaching was excellent and the saints' meetings were just grand. Sr. Riblet, of this place, was baptized on Sunday. I arrived here last Saturday evening and preached twice to fair-sized audiences on yesterday, and shall speak to-night again, and expect to continue the meetings over the coming Sabbath, providing the interest is good. It is quite a task to keep up an interest for the reason that the majority of the people are almost wild over politics. In fact you cannot get the people to talk about anything, but gold and silver nowadays. Hence I do not expect that we can get the attention of the people until after the election.

It is possible that I will go to New Washington from here. Sr. J. A. Hamilton has been very sick, but was some better a week or ten days ago. Will the sisters of the Prayer Union remember her in their prayers, also all other Saints who know the worth and efficacy of prayer.

We glean from the reports which we have received from the brethren that there have been about one hundred baptisms in the entire mission since the 1st of April. The few saints here have kindly cared for my wants, also as the saints in other parts of the mission.

The work of the Lord is in a fair condition in this mission, and I am glad to be able to report that we have bright prospects ahead of us. May God continue to bless his great work in every land, and especially our worthy Bro. Caffall. We very often think of him. Be of good cheer, dear brother, you and your aged companion are not forgotten by the saints in your native land. Many prayers are offered in your behalf and in behalf of the work over which you have charge.

I herewith send kind regards to the brethren and sisters in the European mission with whom I have spent so many happy hours in days gone by. May the peace and blessing of our heavenly Father be and abide with you and his children in all the world, is the earnest prayer and desire of

Your brother in Christ,
GOMER THOMAS GRIFFITHS.

POLLOCK, Mo., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—Just closed a week's meeting at Judson about fourteen miles west of here. Had good liberty in presenting the truth. One old lady came up after my first sermon and expressed herself as being well pleased. On the last night I spoke on the divinity of the Book of Mormon and the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith the Prophet, and after I closed the doctor of the place expressed himself as being well pleased with the manner in which we present our claims. I baptized one last Sunday. I feel encouraged to press on and gain the prize which is at the end of the race. In bonds,

J. F. PETRE.

SANDYVILLE, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Des Moines district held at Runnells, Polk County, the 3d and 4th inst. is an event of the past. The weather was just lovely; clear, bright, and pleasant. The attendance was large. District quite well represented. Peace and unity, happiness and good will were characteristic of all the sessions. Saints of Valley branch gave all visitors a hearty welcome.

The business calendar was neither lengthy nor complex, consequently was soon disposed of. Of the Sunday school convention of the 2d inst., am not able to write, being unable to attend because of being called to Sandyville to preach the funeral of fifteen year old Harry Martyn, in the Disciple church to a large audience. The lad was highly respected by all who knew him. He was a nephew to Bro. and Sr. D. K. Dodson, of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Of the exercises of the evening, however, we can say they were a goodly improvement over previous like efforts. Many who came were unable to obtain entrance to the church. Bro. J. S. Roth had been on hand two or three evenings before the convention assembled and had aroused the people to an interest, giving the conference a good send-off. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity at all the preaching services.

The Bishop's two sermons were blessed efforts, and feasts of good things, and appreciated as such by all the saints. All hope it will not be his farewell visit to this district. We felt a disappointment that Bro. Joseph was not with us, but the demand for labor and the "closeness" of the times is a sufficient "if" in the case; so we relent and forgive.

Bro. J. W. Morgan, of Perry, baptized his mother-in-law on Sunday. She comes from the Methodists, and resides at Rich Hill, Missouri.

Ministerial reports showed that labor had been done by most of the local elders and other officers of the district, and that a number had been added to the district since the June 1 session.

I am at above address for the time, holding forth in the "old tent," evenings, with increasing audiences; but how long the weather will permit us to do so at this time of the year is the question.

Political enthusiasm is away up and still rising as election day approaches, and how soon we may be sidetracked is also a problem. So we labor and wait. Patiently,

C. SCOTT.

TULARE, Cal., Oct. 8.

Editors Herald:—Elder D. L. Harris has labored in Tulare and vicinity for some time. Through his efforts our branch is in a better working condition than ever before; new officers elected and two ordained; some have been baptized, others investigating; the saints encouraged. Bro. Harris' example among us is worthy of imitation and has won the esteem of all that have made his acquaintance.

Several members of this branch went on a camping trip to attend the reunion held at Santa Cruz, beginning September 11 and lasting ten days, among the number Bro. Harris. We enjoyed the trip splendidly, notwithstanding the inconvenience of camping, sleeping in haystacks, etc. We were the first to arrive on the grounds. It was a pleasure to meet so many that we had not seen for years. Such a spiritual feast that we enjoyed, the best meetings that I ever attended. The only complaint I had to offer was, the meetings were too short, although some of the prayer meetings began at nine a. m. and lasted till 11:30 a. m., preaching services held over an hour.

The saints are heeding the admonition to come up higher. It was with a feeling of sadness to see so many of the ministry coming from their different fields of labor to attend the reunion, sick and afflicted, after having sacrificed the comforts of home and worldly ambitions to battle against the evils of the adversary, and for the building up of humanity. There is so much work to be done and so few to do the work that we feel that none of them can be spared. We as saints should do all in our power for the comfort of the ministry and their families, and for building up this work.

After the reunion Elders J. B. Price, D. L. Harris, and Walter Scott came to Tulare with us; Bro. Scott making a short visit, then going to Fresno. Bro. Harris and Price are laboring at Kern County for the present. Bro. Charles W. Deuel was ordained to the office of priest during the reunion, which will make his aged father's heart glad when he hears of it. Last Sunday he conducted his first prayer meeting, and preached a short sermon that was very good. I think he and his zealous wife will accomplish much good in their neighborhood.

I have made so many mistakes in the past, but it is my earnest desire to overcome them, and to improve every advantage and opportunity, and to diligently pursue every good work that I may be of some benefit to others.

In gospel bonds,

MARY A. TWADDLE.

WILLOW SPRINGS, Mo., Oct. 12.

Editors Herald:—I was baptized October 23, 1889, by Bro. B. A. Atwell, and since I obeyed the gospel our heavenly Father has confirmed the truthfulness of this great latter-day work to my soul's satisfaction, and I feel it my duty to bear my testimony to some of the wonderful manifestations of his love and power shed forth among his believing children in these last days.

In March, 1895, I was taken with lagrippe and was suffering immense pain in my head and limbs, so that I could not rest one minute, and I was in that condition for several days. Bro. Ward came and anointed my head with consecrated olive oil and laid his hands upon my head and raised his voice to our heavenly Father in my behalf, and I was instantly healed. In August, 1895, I was taken severely ill and the family called Dr. A. G. Hollenbeck and he treated me for several days and gave me up to die; then Bro. Sparling administered to me and I was brought back from the jaws of death and restored to perfect health again, and the following certificate is from the doctor's own hand:—

"WILLOW SPRINGS, Mo., Aug. 14, 1896.

"This is to certify I attended Mrs. Edna McGowen during her sickness one year ago, and we all thought there was no hope for her recovery, when by prayer by herself and friends she was restored to good health.

"A. G. HOLLENBECK."

Again, on the 24th of September, 1896, Bro. Spurlock administered to me for a bruise on my head and arm which was caused by a fall, and causing me very much pain; and while his hands were on my head all pain left my body and I was again filled with the Spirit. I know this great latter-day work is the work of the Lord and worth living; when we can have the witness of the Spirit verifying the words of our Master as found in Mark 16: 18: "These signs shall follow them that believe." Many times in the early days of my life I have thought how well I would liked to have lived in the days of Christ and the apostles, when such wonderful power was manifest among the believers, not knowing at that time of the restoration of the gospel; but now I rejoice to tell the world that the gospel gifts are restored and that all who will bow in obedience to the principles of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ shall know it, for the Lord has spoken it.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 5.
ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.
BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.
NECESSITY.

WE are told by the Prophet Nahum that in the day of God's "preparation,"

The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings [with great speed, and a trail of light in the darkness]. The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches.—Nahum 2: 4, 3.

But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.—Daniel 12: 4.

Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they willingly are ignorant of, that by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water.—2 Peter 3: 3-5.

This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucabreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. . . . Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.—2 Timothy 3: 1-5, 7.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come.—Joel 2: 28-31. (Isaiah 24: 23; Acts 2: 16-21.)

And surely shall he again bring a remnant of the seed of Joseph to the knowledge of the Lord their God; and as surely as the Lord liveth will he gather in from the four quarters of the earth, all the remnant of the seed of Jacob, who are scattered abroad upon all the face of the earth; . . . and then shall they know their Redeemer, who is Jesus Christ.—Book of Nephi 2: 12.

if the Gentiles do not repent, after the blessing which they shall receive, [which is the supremacy of the world, to the subduing and scattering of the holy people, by the will and agency of the Spirit], after they have scattered my people, then shall ye who are a remnant of the house of Jacob [through the seed of Ephraim], go forth among them; and ye shall be in the midst of them, who shall be many; and ye shall be among them, as a lion among the beasts of the forest, and as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who, if he goeth through, both treadeth down and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.—Book of Nephi 9: 8. See also Micah 5: 8.

But a seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins; and unto him will I give power to bring forth my word unto the seed of thy loins; and not to the bringing forth of my word only, saith the Lord, but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them. Wherefore, the fruit of thy loins shall write; and the fruit of the loins of Judah shall write; and that which shall be written by the fruit of thy loins, and also that which shall be written by the fruit of the loins of Judah, shall grow together, unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions, and establishing peace among the fruit of thy loins, and bringing them to the knowledge of their fathers in the latter days.—2 Nephi 2: 2. See also Ezekiel 37: 15-23.

And the records or stick of Joseph shall come forth;

Out of the earth shall they come, by the hand of the Lord, and none can stay it; and it shall come in a day when it shall be said that miracles are done away; and it shall come even as if one should speak from the dead. And it shall come in a day when the blood of the saints shall cry unto the Lord because of secret combinations and the works of darkness; yea, it shall come in a day when the power of God shall be denied, and churches become defiled, and shall be lifted up in the pride of their hearts; yea, even in a day when leaders of churches, and teachers, in the pride of their hearts, even to the envying them who belong to their churches; yea, it shall come in a day when there shall be heard of fires, and tempests, and vapors of smoke; . . . and there shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and earthquakes in divers places; . . . in a day when there shall be great pollutions upon the face of the earth; there shall be murders and robbing, and lying, and deceiving, and whoredoms, and all manner of abominations, when there shall be many who will say, Do this, or do that, and it mattereth not, for the Lord will uphold such at the last day. . . . Yea, it shall come in a day when there shall be churches built up that shall say, Come unto me, and for your money you shall be forgiven of your sins. O ye wicked and perverse, and stiff-necked people, why have you built up churches unto yourselves to get gain? Why have ye transfigured the holy word of God, that ye might bring damnation upon your souls? Behold, look ye unto the revelations of God. For behold, the time cometh at that day when all these things must be fulfilled. .

. . . Great and marvelous things . . . must shortly come at that day when these things shall come forth among you. . . . And there are none, save a few only, who do not lift themselves up in the pride of their hearts, to the wearing of very fine apparel, unto envying, and strifes, and malice, and persecutions, and all manner of iniquities; and your churches, yea, even every one, have become polluted because of the pride of your hearts. For behold, ye do love money, and your substances, and your fine apparel, and the adorning of your churches, more than ye love the poor and the needy, and the sick and the afflicted. . . . Why do ye build up your secret abominations? . . . Behold the sword of vengeance hangeth over you; and the time soon cometh that he avengeth the blood of the saints upon you, for he will not suffer their cries any longer.—Mormon 4: 2-4.

Comment upon the above as a forecast in 1829 of the state of the church and society for the past sixty years, would be superfluous; a retrospect now could hardly improve upon it.

And the Lord, speaking through the prophet of these "last days," repeats his word given to Noah:—

As I live, then so will I come in the last days—in the days of wickedness and vengeance, to fulfil the oath which I have made unto you, concerning the children of Noah: and the day shall come that the earth shall rest, but before that day, shall the heavens be darkened, and a veil of darkness shall cover the earth; and the heavens shall shake, and also the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve; and righteousness will I send down out of heaven; and truth will I send forth out of the earth, to bear testimony of my Only Begotten; his resurrection from the dead; yea, and also the resurrection of all men: and righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem.—D. C. 36: 12.

For in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.—Joel 2: 32.

But, behold, I say unto you that before this great day shall come, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall be turned into blood, and the stars shall fall from heaven; and there shall be greater signs in heaven above, and in the earth beneath; and there shall be weeping and wailing among the hosts of men; and there shall be a great hail-storm sent forth to destroy the crops of the earth; and it shall come to pass, because of the wickedness of the world, that I will take vengeance upon the wicked, for they will not repent; for the cup of mine indignation is full: for, behold, my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will send forth flies upon the face of the earth, which shall take hold of the inhabitants thereof, and shall eat their flesh, and shall cause maggots to come in upon them, and their tongues shall be stayed that they shall not utter against me, and their flesh shall fall from off their bones, and their eyes from their sockets; and it shall come to pass that the beasts of the forests and the fowls of the air shall devour them up; and that great and abominable church, which is the whore of all the earth, shall be cast down by devouring fire, according as it is spoken by the mouth of Ezekiel the prophet, which spoke of these things, which have not come to pass, but surely must, as I live, for abomination shall not reign.—D. C. 28: 4, 5.

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.—D. C. 49: 3.

Verily, thus saith the Lord, concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls. The days will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at that place: for behold, the Southern States shall be divided against the Northern States, and the Southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and thus war shall be poured out upon all nations. And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their masters, who shall be marshalled and disciplined for war. And it shall come to pass also, that the remnants who are left of the land will marshal themselves, and shall become exceeding angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation; and thus, with the sword, and by bloodshed, the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquakes, and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations; that the cry of the saints, and of the blood of the saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth, to be avenged of their enemies. Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen.—Revelation and prophecy of December, 1832.

If the Book of Mormon is not "the stick of Joseph," and if it was not brought forth in exact fulfillment of the prophecies of Isaiah and Ezekiel, then we must admit that we fail to comprehend the simplest declarations of scriptural language, and that it was one of the most stupendous travesties of all ages, and is equaled by the falsity of the major premise only, in demanding such a complement as the Book of Mormon proves to be, not only as to matter, and manner of production, but also as to time and means of its development, and abounding with such remarkable coincidences and fitting relations of the sequel to the story as to challenge our admiration for the ancient writers who were so gifted in prescience as to be able, at different periods of time, to lay the foundation of a plot so many centuries ago, in such exact conformity to the time now existing and demanding such a work; that, if we were inclined to be skeptical, it would require less evidence to convince us that it was fact than fiction; and we would still have the happy realization of reading a romance founded in fact. If, on the contrary, the Book of Mormon, as the minor proposition, proves to be what is claimed for it, the history of a fallen people or of a degenerate race, and no other book is extant to answer to its import, as "the stick of Ephraim," Ezekiel 37:16; and if the time has expired for the coming forth of said work, and if the book answers to both, then the prophecies of the Bible, on that point, as the major proposition, are true and reliable; the word of God is vindicated; the latter-day dispensation has been ushered in, and the fullness of the Gentiles is near at hand.

PURPOSES.

First. Among the purposes of the Book of Mormon we will mention, The confounding of false doctrine to the laying down of contentions and the promulgation of the truth. It has been on record since 1830, on the doctrines of faith, repentance, baptism for the remission of personal sins of those who have come to the years of accountability, and admission into the Church of Christ; the laying on of hands on all baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost; the resurrection of the dead; teaching explicitly the different orders of the resurrection, and the different degrees of glory; and the doctrine of eternal judgment, all as cardinal principles. It has been on record for over sixty years, clearly setting forth the innocence and purity of young children and their happy condition if they are called hence before the years of accountability; the conscious state of the dead between death and the resurrection; the intermediate state of probation to those who have not had an opportunity of embracing the gospel in this life, so-called heresies, for which Profs. Swing, Briggs, Smyth, and Elder Thomas, have been made to answer at the bar of their respective churches. It speaks authoritatively on the apostolic order of the Church of Christ; it teaches the restoration of Judea, the return of the Jews to their own land, the second advent of Christ in the near future; the mystical union of Christ and his church; the return of the lost tribes from the north country; the validity of the Bible as "the stick of Judah;" the baptism of the earth by water and by fire; the marriage, or reunion, and consequent enlargement of the surface of the lands. It claims to be the law of God to Ephraim or the stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim, and the history, in an ecclesiastical sense, of the aborigines of America, showing their origin and migrations, and, prophetically, their future destiny. It teaches the sacredness of the marriage covenant, and the curse and abomination of polygamy and divorce. It proclaims the downfall of "Mystery, Babylon;" the glorious reign of Christ one thousand years; the great tribulation of the mother of harlots with her daughters; the great consummation by the work of God in the last days; the great conflagration; and the restoration of the earth to its Edenic purity; the descent of the Holy City, the New Jerusalem, to the renewed and glorified earth. These, with a score of other doctrines, which Bible students seek for in vain, in an elucidated form, in the stick of Judah, over which they wrangle and dispute and are consequently led into darkness and skepticism, are clearly delineated in the stick of (Joseph in the hand of) Ephraim, or the Book of Mormon. (Ezekiel 37:16.)

Second. Another design of God in bringing forth this work, at the time, is evidently to prepare the way of the Lord for his second coming by bringing out of the wilderness the true church of Christ, that a pure and holy people be gathered out, who will worship God according to the doctrines of Christ and be prepared to receive him; to increase faith in the earth that men may believe that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every age all who call upon him and obey his commandments are accepted of him; and to convince men that the day for the preparation of his coming is now at hand, which is also abundantly proven by the record of Judah, the Bible.

Third. To increase the testimony of God to the human family in regard to the stability of the plan of salvation in Christ, showing that God is the same to-day as he has been in the past, and as he will be in the future, unchangeable, and consequently his dealings with his people as shown in the Book of Mormon are identical with his dealings with the other branches of the house of Israel, as shown in the Bible, with the exception that the doctrines of Christ, in some respects, are more plain than in the Bible, probably for the reason that they have not been subjected to such frequent changes and mutilations by translators and copyists, and the usages of time. They are, in fact, as they were laid away by their scribes.

Fourth. Another purpose, doubtless, is to acquaint the people of this generation, and especially of this nation, with the origin and future destiny of the aborigines of this continent, not only for the instruction and benefit of the civilized races now occupying this favored land, in order that they may remember more mercifully the seed of Ephraim, now as wanderers and fugitives in all the nations of "the land shadowing [outlined] with wings," but equally for the instruction and redemption of the house of Ephraim and the tribes of Israel his fellows, who are of the "nations scattered and peeled, terrible from their beginning hitherto," and who are destined in the economy of God, to vindicate themselves as the "lion among the beasts of the forest," or, as "the remnant of Jacob among the Gentiles."

And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people [nationalities], as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces and none can deliver. Thine hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.—Micah 5: 8, 9.

This, of course, seems extravagant, and no doubt many wise men would say, Impossible! absurd to entertain for a moment such a ridiculous thought, that this mighty nation will become a prey to these wild, roving, insignificant, and detestable hordes!

It is not our province to forecast history, but a hint to wise men is sometimes sufficient. If the necessity should arise, as provision is made for him to go through in the prophecy just quoted; viz., "If he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver. Thine hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off," we would have no inclination to apologize for the Lord, for he is abundantly able to vindicate his own word and to "make it honorable."

THE RIVER SIDON; WHERE IS IT?

In order to correctly answer the above question it becomes necessary to be able to locate a few cardinal points from which to draw our conclusions. This may not be as easily done as we would like, yet it appears that there are sufficient evidences to enable us to draw a conclusion with considerable certainty at least. It should be borne in mind that the land of Zarahemla is spoken of as a subdivision of the country occupied by the Nephites during the reign of the judges, (see Alma 16:12,) and also, as the whole territory, as may be seen by the following:—

And thus he cut off all the strongholds of the Lamanites, in the east wilderness: yea, and also in the west, fortifying the line between the Nephites and the Lamanites, between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi.—Alma 22: 2.

This was in the twentieth year of the Judges and during this time the "land of Nephi" was recognized as belonging to the Lamanites. (Alma 13: 12.)

These two nations which were divided into several subdivisions or states were separated by "a narrow strip of wilderness," (Alma 13: 11,) extending across the continent "in a straight course from the east sea to the west." (Alma 22: 2.)

In order to tell which side of the dividing line was occupied by the Nephites we present the following:—

And they went forth, and drove all the Lamanites who were in the east wilderness into their own lands, which were south of the land of Zarahemla . . . the Nephites possessing all the land northward.—Alma 22: 2.

The "narrow strip of wilderness" which served as a dividing line crossed the country near the head of the "river Sidon," "running from the east towards the west," and as Sidon ran through the country inhabited by the Nephites, we see it must have run in a northward direction. Consulting our maps of South America we find three rivers of considerable size running northward, namely, the Cauca, Magdalena, and Orinoco. The first two join and form one river near the sea. Hence it seems to me that the answer would be the Magdalena or Orinoco.

We will now endeavor to locate a few more points to see if the question is made plainer. By reading Alma 22: 2, 3 we learn that after Moroni had driven the Lamanites out of the "east wilderness," he caused that the inhabitants who were of the land of Zarahemla, and in the land round about [evidently referring to the subdivision of their country], should go forth into the east wilderness, even to the borders, by the seashore, and possess the land. . . . And it came to pass that the Nephites began the foundation of a city; and they called the name of the city Moroni; and it was by the east sea; and it was in the south by the line of the possessions of the Lamanites.

Now if we run a line in a "straight course" from the "sea east to the sea west," passing by the head waters of the Orinoco or Magdalena, we would strike the Atlantic coast near the present Cayenne and hence conclude that Moroni was in that vicinity, and I also understand that it is the southeastern part of the Nephite country at this time. We follow the account of their settlements as it is given in this verse, and find that they followed the coast till they came to the northern part of their nation and then built a city "called Lehi, which was in the north by the borders of the sea-shore." For further proof that their cities were near the seashore, see Alma 23: 8.

The Nephites' settlements did not extend to the sea west (Pacific Ocean); but a wilderness extended along the entire coast to the land of Desolation, is evident from the fact that Limhi sent "forty and three" of his people to find the land of Zarahemla, but, they were lost in the wilderness, for the space of many day, . . . and found not the land of Zarahemla, but returned to this land, having traveled in a land among many waters; having discovered a land which was covered with bones of men, and of beasts, etc., and was also covered with ruins of buildings of every kind: having discovered a land which had been peopled with a people who were as numerous as the hosts of Israel.—Moses 5: 9.

As the land of Desolation is north of both Zarahemla and Bountiful, to have reached it they must have gone to one side of the settlements, which could not have been done unless the wilderness in which they "traveled" had extended the entire distance. To strengthen this view we cite Alma 6: 2:—

Alma departed from thence, and took his journey over into the land of Melek, on the west of the river Sidon, on the west, by the borders of the wilderness.

From there he goes three days' journey on the north of the land of Melek; and he came to a city which was called Ammonihah.—Alma 6: 3.

Alma 11: 1-5 gives us further information concerning Ammonihah by saying:—

The armies of the Lamanites had come in upon the wilderness side, into the borders of the land, even into the city of Ammonihah, and began to slay the people, and destroy the city.

They also took prisoners and departed back into the wilderness and started southward towards their own land. They could not have traveled in the wilderness from there "away up beyond the borders of the land of Manti" without coming in contact with the settlements if the country was settled to the Pacific coast.

Again Alma 1: 13-15 gives an account of a battle with combined forces of the Lamanites and Amlicites which took place as soon as they had crossed onto the west side of the river Sidon, and they were driven "before the Nephites, towards the wilderness which was west and north, away beyond the borders of the land;" and they were finally driven into it.

Now take your maps of South America and divide the continent by "a narrow strip of wilderness" running from the sea east (Atlantic Ocean) to the sea west (Pacific Ocean), passing across the head of the Magdalena or Orinoco River, it makes no difference which one you choose for they are about the same distance south, and you have the southern boundary of the "Land of Zarahemla." Place your pencil just north of where this line strikes the Atlantic Ocean and you have the vicinity of the city of Moroni. Then follow the coast till you come to where the coast line runs west and you have the vicinity of the City of "Lehi, which was in the north, by the borders of the sea-shore." Then pass along to the west coast and you find the wilderness extending along the entire distance to the Lamanite possessions.

With the map before your eyes remember that Zarahemla is west of the river Sidon and yet it is in the "heart of our country," and is called the "center of our land." Alma 27: 7; Helaman 1: 6. Looking at the center of the country described by those boundary points I see the Orinoco River making its way through the land in such a way as to leave the fertile plains on the west in the "heart of our country" and the "center of our land." For my part I do not see how Helaman could have stood on the west of the Cauca or Magdalena River with an understanding of the geographical position of his country, and imagined that he was in the "center of" his country, "our committee's report" notwithstanding.

After Alma had finished regulating the affairs of the church in the city of Zarahemla, he went over upon the east of the river of Sidon, into the valley of Gideon.—Alma 4:2. Also Alma 11:5.

This conveys the fact that Zarahemla is west of the river Sidon. He finished his labors in Gideon, and returned to his own house at Zarahemla to rest himself from the labors which he had performed. And it came to pass in the commencement of the tenth year of the reign of the Judges over the people of Nephi, that Alma departed from thence, and took his journey over into the land of Melek, on the west of the river Sidon, on the west, by the borders of the wilderness.—Alma 6:1, 2.

This shows that the land of Melek was west of the land of Zarahemla and the wilderness was west of Melek.

According to the best information I have at hand the Cauca river creeps along the Andes Mountains in places not more than seventy-five miles from the Pacific Ocean and the Magdalena is not much farther east. Call either the Sidon and place the subdivisions of the nation, Zarahemla with its teeming population, and the city with its thousands of inhabitants, on the west, and draw your boundary line; then place still farther west the "land of Melek," then the wilderness, and it seems to me you will have things crowded too much for comfort. "Give us room that we might dwell," undoubtedly would be an appropriate hymn for them to sing.

Now come a few hundred miles east to the Orinoco River and locate the city of Zarahemla about the place where the river turns in a northeast direction (I have no map with me and cannot give the names of cities that exist in that part), and you will have a wonderful productive plain extending from the water sheds at the mouth of the river on the south to the sea on the north, and from the Orinoco River on the east, to the mountain range that divides this plain from the Magdalena valley on the west, — a land that would support just such a population of people described in the Book of Mormon.

Then place the "land of Melek" that Alma passed "over into," (over the mountain range that forms the watershed between the plains and the Magdalena valley,) and the "land of Ammonihah" with its wonderful resources and great city, in the Magdalena valley, and the wilderness "which was called Hermounts," that "was west and north, away beyond the borders of the land" between the mountain range on the west of the valley and the Pacific Ocean, and we have a starting point that will enable us to proceed with considerable certainty. But place the Magdalena or Cauca River as the Sidon and we meet with insurmountable difficulties in locating the countries of Antionum, Nephiah, Moroni, Aaron, etc., on the east of Sidon as well as those on the west.

The land of Manti was on the west side and near the head of the river Sidon, as may be seen from Alma 20: 5-7. The Lamanites had gathered on the borders of Jershon, but on seeing the Nephites, retreated and "departed out of the land of Antionum, into the wilderness, and took their journey round about in the wilderness, away by the head of the river Sidon, that they might come into the land of Manti, and take possession of the land."

It was revealed to Alma that the Lamanites were marching round about in the wilderness, that they might come over into land of Manti, (verse 5,) and acting on this information Moroni took a part of his army and marched over into the land of Manti. . . . And . . . caused that his army should be secreted in the valley which was near the bank of the river Sidon, which was on the west of the river Sidon, in the wilderness.—Verse 6.

Ninth verse:—

And the remainder he concealed in the west valley, on the west of the river Sidon, and so on down into the borders of the land of Manti.

And they crossed the waters of Sidon. . . . And it came to pass that Moroni and his army met the Lamanites in the valley.—Verse 10.

And the Lamanites began their retreat from the land of Antionum, which was east of the land of Zarahemla, which lay nearly bordering upon the seashore, which was south of Jershon.—Alma 16: 12.

Crossing the Sidon from the east into the land of Manti shows that Manti is on the west and Sidon is the boundary line on the east.

This country was in the hands of the Lamanites when Helaman marched against them with his two thousand young men in the twenty-sixth year of the Judges. Now let us see if we can learn anything about where the river Sidon is from the relative positions of these cities. See Alma 26: 1-4. Helaman stops in the city Judea and after parleying with them for some time without a decisive battle, the statement is made:—

Neither durst they [the Lamanites] cross the head of Sidon, over to the city of Nephiah. And thus, with their forces, they were determined to maintain those cities which they had taken.—Verse 3.

Here the writer speaks of Nephiah as being east of Sidon, not much north of the boundary line, and as if not so very far. It seems to be the next fort east of Manti which had been built to strengthen the southern boundary. In support of this view I call attention to Alma 29: 11, an account of Nephiah being attacked by Moroni and the Lamanites that had possession of the city fled into the land of Moroni, which was in the borders by the seashore.

When the city of Manti was taken by Helaman some of the Lamanites went "over and joined the Lamanites" in the part where the city of Nephiah was located. Moroni had been taken by the Lamanites before this and the Nephites that escaped had "gathered together from" that city to Nephiah before it was taken this time. (Alma 27: 3.) Thus we see something of the meaning of Moroni fortifying the line between the Nephites and the Lamanites, between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi; from the west sea, running by the head of the river Sidon.

Place your pencil in the "land of Manti," west of the head of the Magdalena and think of Nephiah away over near Moroni which was on the coast and what kind of a line of forts would you have "between the Lamanites and Nephites?" It seems to me if that were the case the reason the Lamanites did not leave Manti and "cross the head of Sidon over to the city Nephiah" was its great distance instead of fear as Helaman would have us believe. Now place Manti by the head of the Orinoco and Nephiah along east and then Moroni near the coast and it will be a great deal easier to defend. At least it seems more according to the account to my mind.

As we find the people running from Moroni to Nephiah and from Nephiah to Moroni as the vicissitudes of war proceed, and as Nephiah is spoken of as not being the next fort east of Manti and as not being very far, and of them going there from Manti, we conclude that these were the principal forts from the Atlantic coast to the head of the Orinoco River (the Sidon), and that Manti, Zeezrom, Cumeni, Antiparah, Judea, etc., were west between the Sidon and the Pacific coast. The number of forts west of Sidon proves the Magdalena River to be far west.

I have written this with the hope that it will be the means of increasing investigation on this subject, that the facts may be better understood by us all. I realize that it is necessary to correctly locate Sidon before we can proceed with the map of ancient South America according to the Book of Mormon.

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN WALES.

Convened at Latter Day Saints' chapel, Island place, Llanelly, Wales, September 5, at seven o'clock. James Caffall and E. R. Dewsnap, Sen., elected as presidents of the conference. Opened with very encouraging addresses. E. R. Dewsnap as district president reported district on the whole in a better condition than last conference, though much still remained to be done. J. H. Edwards reported the Llanelly branch in a good state at present, and prospects bright for future. J. R. Gibbs reported the Morriston branch in good feeling, good prospects of increase. Priest Phillips, priest of Pontycaets branch, reported, in absence of the branch president, that they were determined to be more active in the future. E. R. Dewsnap, delegate to mission conference, reported good spiritual services and the business session good. Sunday morning, September 6, prayer and sacrament meeting, good instruction and a spiritual time at eleven a. m. James Caffall occupied the stand and delivered a most instructive address on the duties of the saints, encouraging them to proceed with the work they had in hand. Sunday afternoon at 2:30 a fellowship meeting was held in charge of the presidents of the conference. This was indeed a spiritual feast. Sunday evening at six o'clock Joseph Dewsnap, Sen., president of the Manchester district, was the speaker, subject, "Why am I a Latter Day Saint?" and produced strong, irrefutable reasoning, supported by scripture texts, in favor of being a saint of these latter days. At eight p. m. an outdoor service was held when Rees Jenkins spoke with great liberty in Welsh. Thus ended our conference, all having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

PITTSBURG AND KIRTLAND.

Conference convened with the Cleveland, Ohio, branch October 3 and 4; G. T. Griffiths chosen to preside; Charles Lake and E. H. Garrett secretaries pro tem. Branch reports: Wheeling 147; gain 15. Pittsburg 174; gain 5. Kirtland 84; gain 8. Youngstown 28. Fairview 46; gain 2. Conneaut Township 24; gain 1. Blake Mills 70; gain 6. Sharon 35; gain 13. Cleveland 27; gain 3. Ministry reporting: Elders M. T. Short, R. Etzenhouser, and Jacob Reese; Priest J. W. Barget. R. Etzenhouser was chosen president of the district, E. S. Fairley secretary, and L. W. Powell, Bishop's agent, sustained. By resclution conference meets with the Blake Mills branch the first Saturday and Sunday in March, 1897. Bro. F. Criley occupied the stand Saturday night and presented some good thoughts and valuable suggestions relative to the work and the duty of the saints in temporal as well as spiritual things. Bro. L. W. Powell also addressed the saints upon the necessary and important subject of tithing. His discourse was eloquent, instructive, and interesting, cheering the hearts of those who were living in the performance of duty, while it was certainly calculated to stir up those who may have been lax or careless concerning this important principle of the law. On Sunday morning Bro. M. T. Short addressed the congregation in his usual forceful and happy style, presenting many good and logical arguments upon the subject of baptism. R. Etzenhouser occupied the evening hour with a splendid sermon, in which he brought forth such strong proofs and arguments in support of the idea of prophecy in this age and the divine authenticity of the work, as to prove irresistible to the searcher after truth. Although the district was not represented as fully as had been expected and desired, yet much good was undoubtedly accomplished, peace and unity prevailing through all the sessions.

WEVER.—At Swan, Iowa, March 11, 1896, to Bro. A. N. and Sr. Aprilla Wever, a son and named Carel Webster. Blessed at Runnells, October 4, by Elders J. S. Roth, E. L. Kelley, and C. Scott.

WARREN.—At Adelphi, Iowa, August 13, 1896, to Bro. R. E. and Sr. Minnie Warren, a son and named Olen B. Blessed October 4, by Elders J. S. Roth, C. Scott, and E. L. Kelley.

BEAR.—To Bro. John and his wife S. Bell Bear was born on June 6, 1896, a son. This firstborn was blessed in the auditorium of the church in St. Joseph, Missouri, on the 25th of September, 1896, by Elders J. M. Terry and R. Archibald and given the augural name of John Terry Geoffrey.

MARRIED.

JACKSON—BAUGHMAN.—In the Latter Day Saints' church, Woodbine, Iowa, September 27 at ten a. m. in the presence of a few friends, Sr. Blanche Baughman and Mr. Andrew Jackson, both of Earling, Iowa, were united in marriage, Elder T. W. Williams officiating. May their voyage be as serene and peaceful as the embarking.

DIED.

SMITH.—At her home, near Lamoni, Iowa, 9:50 a. m., October 19, 1896, Sr. Bertha Madison, wife of President Joseph Smith. She was born on Indian Creek, Lasalle County, Illinois, July 16, 1843. She was of Norwegian parentage, her father, Mad Madison, and mother, Mary Thomason, emigrated to America, and married after arriving in Illinois, where they settled. She was married to Pres. Joseph Smith, at the residence of Bishop Israel L. Rogers, Elder Elijah Banta celebrating the rite, November 12, 1869. She was faithful to her God, her husband, and family, and departed this life quietly and peacefully as a child going to sleep on its mother's breast. She was thrown from a buggy September 8, and severely hurt; it is supposed that blood poisoning resulted, of which she died. She leaves her mother, aged 78; her husband and five children, Mrs. Audentia Anderson, Fred M., Israel A., Hale W., and Lucy Y.; these with two brothers, two sisters, and two daughters of Pres. Smith, mourn their loss in her departure from the scenes of this life.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayments of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 45 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N. B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

GOD'S RESPONSIBILITY TO MAN.

SHALL not the judge of all the earth do right?—Abraham.

Can God create right? Can he make that which is wrong in the impartial judgment of reasonable men to be right? Some have thought that he can; that, if not, he is under necessity; therefore is not the sovereign of the universe. But it is evident that, with our nature, the wrong, though called right, would yet be wrong to us. James Mill said that there may be worlds where two and two make five. Not for man, not for reason. What the people in that world call five would be really our four. It is nonsense to think, or to try to think, otherwise.

By no arbitrary decree can injustice and oppression be made lovely to our eyes. The simple reason is it is contrary to our nature. But we are in the image and likeness of God. Our reason is like his reason, as the flame of the match is like the fires of the sun. Conscience is the echo of the voice of God.

Can you seize your child in the cradle and drag the innocent babe by the heels out of doors, down the steps, and throw it into the gutter? You have the physical power, but you can no more do it than you can thrust your hand into the fire and let it burn to a crisp. Now, the nature of God is truth and righteousness. It is impossible for him to lie or to reverse right or truth. He cannot deny himself.

Then the judge of all the earth is responsible to man to do right. Abraham stood pleading for Sodom. "Wilt thou slay the righteous with the wicked?" God consented to save the entire city if there were fifty, forty, or thirty, or twenty, or even ten, righteous men there, and he never stopped lessening the number till Abraham stopped asking. [Read Genesis 18.] He saved Lot; he tried to save his sons-in-law, but they would not hear. The Judge of all is responsible to man for just dealing.

A young man was being examined for the position of steamboat engineer. "Suppose," said the examiner, "that you had the doctor all fixed and you turned on steam, the engine worked, and yet no water was thrown into the boiler, what would do?" "I would examine the valves and the machinery." "But the supposition is that the machinery is all right." "Then I would look over the side of the boat to see if the river had gone dry." He was right. The machinery being correct, the water being there, it must come. The laws of nature are true; they never lie. Nature is God's thought materialized. Reason and conscience are God's thoughts incased and individualized in man. God is responsible by his nature not to outrage their highest, purest instincts. We may safely say he cannot do so. He cannot deny himself.

Again, God is responsible to man by the relations he bears to him. Confucius, the Chinese sage, summed up all duty in the five relations of life. These are parent and child; master and servant; husband and wife; elder and younger brother and friends. In every case he emphasized the duty of the inferior, or younger. The duties of parent, the obligation of a husband, the responsibility of the employer, are scantily treated.

Calvinism, born in monarchical times, makes man a subject of an autocratic government. That God is in any way responsible to man is an idea foreign to the system. To a thorough American there is no more glory to God in the irresistible salvation of man than there is to the man who pulls a log to the shore. The log could not drown, the elect man cannot be lost. The error in this outgrown system is akin to that of the Chinese philosopher; it overlooked the fact that relations are mutual, that the larger responsibility lies on the superior.

A blacksmith forged a huge chain. Neighbors who had time to spare and who could tell everybody else how to work dropped in and wondered that he took so much time and made every link so strong. Said he to the Captain who bought it: "I'll warrant that to stand any storm on the Atlantic." The test came. The storm drove the ship, with three hundred souls aboard, toward the sharp rocks. One chain, eaten by the salt water, was torn as easily as a ribbon. "Cast out the last anchor," was the command. The trusty blacksmith was safe at home, but the lives of three hundred men and women depended on the fidelity of his work. The anchor caught the rocky bottom, the ship pulled and groaned and surged toward the ravenous breakers; but all in vain; the morning awoke to hear a psalm of thanksgiving for deliverance. Was not the blacksmith responsible for what he made? Was not Buddensiek responsible for lives lost when he built houses with a mere shell of brick in New York City?

God is our maker. He is responsible that we are made ignorant; that we have no burden laid on us beyond our strength; no duty imposed which we cannot discharge. We may fairly ask that in our nature there shall be no insoluble contradictions, no aspirations which cannot, if pure and just, be gratified, no reasonable hope which cannot be realized.

Being our maker and the giver of all we are and have, God is also our law-giver and Judge. As we have seen, by his nature, he can ask from man nothing but what is right. As a Judge, he must judge righteously. There are those who, by superior cunning, are able to prey on their fellow-men, who trample upon or evade the laws of men.

For these judgment waits. The Judge will do right. Eternity will show that there is no gain in wrongdoing, no profit in stealing or gambling, though it be under forms of law. An honest man, a modern Abraham, can reasonably and righteously expect the Judge of all the earth to bring every secret thing to light and to righteous judgment. God is our father. But the children of God are divided into three classes. All men are the children of God by creation. God is the framer of our bodies, the father of our spirits. But a birthright may be forfeited. A wayward boy may wander from the parental roof and counsels; he may sink into brutality and nastiness, until the family disowns him. To them he is dead. All wrongdoing and selfishness is odious to our Father. A God of spotless purity, he abhors greedy lusts and drunkenness. Such a man is a prodigal. He is lost. Even to be unfilial, unthankful, neglectful of one's obligations to his God, divorces him from his Father's blessing. The birthright is lost by neglect.

Another class of sons are those adopted. "Come out from among them and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord God Almighty."—1 Cor. 7.

Jesus gave power to those who received him to become the sons of God.

In the third class only one person is found,—the only begotten son of God, who became flesh and dwelt among us, the Son of Mary.

God loves all his children. Even those who forfeit their birthright by folly and wickedness are dear to him, so dear that he sent his only begotten to lead them home. We know something of the responsibility of a father towards his children. He must provide for their needs; he must train them in virtue; he should teach them in all wisdom. All of this we have received from God. Surely, he who gave us these duties cannot be unmindful of his responsibility* to his own. While God loves all, he blesses just in the ratio that they draw nigh to him. He blesses the Japanese more than he does the Chinese, the Americans more than he does the Japanese.

In proportion to the knowledge of and fidelity to truth and righteousness possessed by a man or by a nation, in just that degree does the individual or people receive good from the hand of God. It may not always appear as material good; if gone or in hopeless poverty.

A father is to provide for and to train his children into manhood. God, our Father, has provided for our bodies abundantly. We have not only necessary things but comforts and luxuries. Notwithstanding hard times, the reader probably knows no man, sober, industrious, and prudent, who has not saved something for a home and old age. Chauncey M. Depew said: "Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman, and child in Peekskill. Every one who was at all sober and saving has his home and something laid up for a rainy day. The others are gone or are in hopeless poverty."

God trains us, educates, and disciplines us toward the highest manhood, whenever we put our hand into his. That we may have no excuse, he has sent the Elder Brother to show us how to walk in this battling world and to lead us back home.

To some men God is an employer. They work in his vineyard. The payment is not directly a penny, but indirectly. The wealthy nations are those who worship the true God. But in that which is more precious than gold, there is no paymaster like our God. The depths of love, the heights of grace, the streams of peace which flow into the heart, and which bless and ennoble the lives of those who are in partnership with God, are of far more value than all the riches of earth. "He who comes to God must believe that he is a rewarder of those who diligently seek him."—Heb. 2:6.

A King is to lead his people to victory. The King of kings is responsible for victory over foes too strong for unaided man. Against internal enemies, the appetites and lust which mutiny against reason and drown men in destruction; against eternal temptation, he leads myriads to a rejoicing victory. He has explored the tomb, conquered him who had the power of death, and can safely bring his friends to a glorious triumph over sin, the grave, and the terrors of the judgment.

There is no more responsible being in the universe than God. Full well does he discharge that responsibility.

All nature is crowded with blessings for man. They are except air, which is the most necessary of all, removed or hidden from man, in order to call out his skill and energy. In proportion to these he extracts the riches of nature. It is equally true of mind, which is a larger and more fruitful field than nature. Unable to read the warning guidepost, a traveler went over the precipice to death. Unable to read the warning signs of danger, the youth rushes to destruction over the cigarette or mint julep or jack-pot route. In both realms, nature and mind, the Creator has put a premium on knowledge and obedience. It is shallow reasoning to be diligent in preparing for winter, which you may never see, and to leave preparation for eternity to mere chance. God is responsible to man to do right. So doing, he will deliver the righteous from every evil, and reserve the unjust to the day of judgment to be punished.—Ex.

The November Arena contains a paper by Mrs. Mary M. Harrison, who has for years made a study of child life, on "Children's Sense of Fear," which will be of especial interest to those engaged in training the young. Now that child psychology is being made a distinct study, it is to be hoped that the baleful and pernicious old-time custom of filling the minds of little innocent children with frightful pictures, so largely resorted to hitherto as a factor in their moral training, will be relegated to the barbarities of the past.

The Arena closes its sixteenth volume with the November number, which is one of the most notable issues of that progressive magazine. It contains striking papers on the money question by Prof. Frank Parsons, of the Boston University School of Law, Justice Walter Clark, LL. D., of the Supreme Bench of North Carolina, Hon. William H. Standish, and B. O. Flower, the editor.

Rev. A. P. Doyle writes on the subject of "The Future of Catholicity in America, with reference to Mission-Work to non-Catholics;" Henry Austin Adams treats of "Bishop Potter and Anglican Orders" in a pungent fashion, in a paper in the November number of The Catholic World Magazine.

The Review of Reviews for November publishes several important and interesting articles on the latest phases of the Eastern Question, especially from the British point of view. Mr. W. T. Stead's survey of the subject, entitled "The Eastern Ogre; or, St. George to the rescue," is extremely characteristic and suggestive; the Review also offers a remarkable symposium of current thought on "What should be done with Turkey?" as the pressing problem of the hour.

CAN YOU AID US?

WE are again obliged, and on behalf of the business department, to renew the request for remittances of amounts due the Herald Office, on subscriptions to periodicals and on book accounts, past and present. Though feeling quite perceptibly the pressure of financial stringency which has generally prevailed throughout the country for some time, the publishing department has proceeded with its work upon the supposition and conviction that the work must move, that it must go forward despite all the forces and forbidding conditions that threaten or tend to hinder it; that its character is so important and so fraught with possibilities for good to the cause that nothing short of absolute impossibilities could justify the cessation of every proper effort designed to promote the interests of the church.

Acting upon this conviction, and notwithstanding the many features peculiar to the closeness of the times, arrangements were made to publish a History of the Church, also to issue other publications important to the interests of the work, and which will be announced in due time. In moving forward in these undertakings reliance was had both upon the Lord and upon the practical substantial interest of the faithful throughout the world, who with those who labor in the spiritual and business concerns of the church, have a common interest in all that pertains to its growth and general welfare.

We still rely upon the faithful brethren and sisters to whom with us has been committed the responsibility of prosecuting the work intrusted to us all. And again we ask them to make an earnest effort to support this branch of the service by such remittances as they can make, both on amounts due the office, and by subscribing for the History of the Church and other publications.

The amounts asked for are not large, but are quite numerous and overdue. From no one would a very large amount be necessary (with the possible exception of a few individuals) to square accounts with the office, or to forward the subscriptions asked for; while to this department such small sums collected would amount to considerable in the aggregate, and prove an ample supply for all present demands.

If those who owe the office will make the effort to remit, it can be done, and the results of such effort would prove a source of satisfaction to them and of great practical benefit to this department of the service. Brethren, sisters, look at your labels and make the effort, and we believe you will be able to respond to our wishes and thereby have cause for further satisfaction in the good that will thus accrue to the work.

The end of the year approaches; the season when crops are sold, accounts squared up, books balanced, and preparations made to begin the new year. We ask that in the distribution of values received the Herald Office be remembered; that it, as one of the servants of the body, be kept in condition to serve the cause effectively, both at home and abroad. It requires an infusion of financial blood to strengthen it as a force for good; that it be able to encourage the workers by contributing freely of those things designed by the wisdom of the body for the good of the church.

It would be a cause for sincere congratulation could every account now due the office be collected. It would place the publishing plant upon its feet and infuse energy into it as a factor for good, the results of which would be seen and realized at once.

We trust those who owe the office will make an earnest effort in its behalf; that their interests will be prospered in their renewed endeavors to meet their obligations in this respect.

It has not been and is not now our intention to overurge this matter upon the attention of the people. We believe they are so earnestly interested in the cause that when the necessity of entire coöperation is seen and understood, they will make the necessary effort, rise to the occasion, and meet the demand. This demand, however, is a very moderate one, and we believe, is made for "value received." Indeed, none of the demands of the work in a financial way are extreme or unjust; and though the principle of "sacrifice" necessarily runs through service to God, it is always a pleasure to the sincere disciple to do that that shall be a manifest token of his love for the work, for the Master, and for fellow man.

Our work is designed to call forth our best efforts; to educate, to discipline us, and to lead onward and forward to greater usefulness and effectiveness. It could not be the work of God and do less. It could not bring out the good in humanity were it lacking in this respect. This means devotion, energy, application, and success. It is contrary to the philosophy of our work that we fail in any proper endeavor, in any reasonable service demanded of us in the legitimate prosecution of the part intrusted to us individually, whether officials or laity. "All are 'called,'" all intrusted with degrees of talent, as all are to rejoice in and partake of the blessings of triumph.

We had not intended to place the matter of "collections" exactly in this light; but the spirit of our philosophy is so broad and inclusive that it touches all the phases of life—the affairs of this world as those of the world to come, reminding us again and again that all things that rightly are, are of God, hence worthy of the care essential to their proper management, that the design in their institution may fully be executed. In this the children of the kingdom should be "wiser," not less capable, than the children of this world; and, too, as rightly using the material wealth of the world, and not abusing it. Good management of worldly affairs and worldly interests is worthy of commendation and to be admired. It received the commendation of the Master himself, who admonished his disciples concerning temporalities and their proper use. The Lord has created material things, and could not but commend a wise stewardship in managing them.

The best, the only true system of administration of economic affairs is included in the revelations of God's word to his people in these last days. It provides means for the promulgation of the work, the care of the poor, also an industrial and common sense equality based on an industrious application of all persons concerned; all this when conditions are such that the law can be honored and executed in its entirety.

To attain such desired condition certainly requires constant progress, careful application, intelligent consecration and effort, that constant improvement be made. "All are called" is the word, but few are "chosen;" and those chosen are those found to be "faithful." We have learned both by observation and experience that with the greatest blessings of God, individual comprehension and wise action are necessary upon the part of his people; in other words, that God does not propose to violate the principle of agency by literally compelling men and women to see and do what they should by prayerfulness and careful observation learn to do willingly, "with all" their "might," as the Scriptures require. The law is to be written on the heart, and the heart is to be willing and consecrated to the purposes set before the church. Service to God is personal and voluntary, not machine-like and compulsory.

In past times we have known Latter Day Saints who were not sufficiently concerned about earthly economy and worldly prosperity to secure themselves even a home; they were going to "gather to Zion" in a future time, and in a very indefinite, careless way; and they made little or no provision to obtain homes when they did gather. We have also known some, and yet know them, who, going to the other extreme, held too close a grasp on what close management and industry together with God's blessing brought to them, failing to contribute to the Lord's treasury the amount due him. We understand that both these extremes are to be avoided; that "man shall live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God," both that pertaining to spiritual and to temporal concerns; that his love of the spiritual shall not be so lacking in the practical as to cause neglect of temporal prosperity, nor his love for the temporal cause him to become selfish and blind to the spiritual, either of which is extreme and out of harmony with the spirit of the law.

We are addressing a people who have been admonished by a repeated series of historical human happenings past and present; a people which has the experience of present successes and disastrous failures to profit by; and who, in consequence of such manifest admonitions, wrought out in actual consequences of failure to act correctly, in their own immediate time and demonstrated in results actually seen and known, are thereby placed under increased responsibilities to be wise, studious of the word of God, faithful in every duty, and alert to the interests of the work.

We believe they will not disappoint the just expectations of the Master, by failing to support the temporal interests of both the Bishopric and the publishing department. For that reason we have felt free to make this appeal as a reminder that upon all as members of the body rests the burden of responsibility of carrying on, with the active ministry, the work to be brought to successful completion "by sacrifice."

Every time of need is a time of opportunity, and having an eye single to the success of the work we shall be able to make the effort necessary to its advancement, and thus also grow with it, securing our personal growth with the development of a growing movement.

We plead that the Bishop and the Herald Office receive their proportionate necessary attention among such efforts. God will bless those who stand by his work in its times of need. Those who have been obedient to the temporal law have received an increase both of spiritual blessing and of temporal prosperity as a result; and the further result has been realized upon their part in a drawing nearer to God and a fuller consecration of themselves and their substance to his service, which has deepened their joy in the Lord and brought them to a closer walk and communion with him.

We are reminded at the present time of the sacrifices of the ministry and of their families, who because of the prevailing hard times have suffered to a degree because means were not always at hand to promptly supply them. We believe that no more is required of them than of others in this respect; that this sacrifice of the society of wife and children upon the part of the minister, and that of husband and father upon the part of his family, ought not to be added to unnecessarily, especially because of any neglect in the payment of tithes and offerings. Those who have plenty surely cannot contemplate such conditions with indifference if they are "brethren and sisters," one in Christ; if the spirit of affection abides and abounds. Such a spirit must prevail and increase if the work is to be accomplished; indeed, it cannot be accomplished otherwise. That is the Spirit of Christ, the love of God, by which the Redeemer himself made the sacrifice and performed the great and exalted duty required of him. We believe too that such a spirit prevailing throughout the branches and organizations of the church will be noted and felt for good by the honest in heart, and draw them to the work, and add them as elements of strength to aid its extension in the world.

Confusion and disorder reign and increase in the world, because it has departed from the principles of law and life. Unity and peace, its counterparts, and resultant concord and progress, the fruits of obedience to the law of the Spirit of life, will give to men and women an exhibition of the possibilities of "the plan of salvation." It must be apparent to every thoughtful woman and man who notes the smallness of our numbers and the obstacles to be overcome, that unity of effort is what we need; that every one who represents the work shall be active in doing all that lies in his power to do, that it may be built up and spread abroad. A united effort will accomplish the work. This God has himself declared in his promise that success shall be given if his people are faithful.

The addresses of the Bishop and his agents are known; also those of the Herald Office and its agents in the branches. The latter have done well, so far as their efforts have been seconded and sustained, and some improvement has resulted. It will be necessary to drop some names from the Herald Office, because promises to remit have not been met. The rule adopted is that subscriptions one year overdue are not continued unless assurance is given that amounts will be paid. The office desires to retain all subscribers, but is financially unable to do better than the above.

Remittances and new subscriptions solicited. Sample copies of the HERALD will be forwarded to those not taking it. The ministry would favor us by forwarding addresses of newly baptized persons who do not take the HERALD.

DECADENCE OF CHAUTAUQUANISM.

FROM what will appear to the readers of the HERALD in the article from the Pittsburg Leader given below sent us by a brother, who rightly thought it would be interesting to all, there is reason to believe that our so-called orthodox friends are at last awaking to the danger to their institutions resulting from the remarkably free criticism and loose theology of the Chautauquan services.

We have known for some time that too much effort was put into these Chautauquan assemblies to make them sensational, and that there was such a trend toward extreme liberalism as would finally take the movement out of the line and object in which it was originated; as we understand them.

In many places where associate movements were started they were failures, after a year or two of expensive experiment, and disappointment on the part of those who sought to do good by them. It became a sort of fad, and its existence was a matter of doubt. We wish the well-meaning persons who have supported the move a successful return to the proper bases of belief and work so far as such institution may be made to help humanity and society.

Pittsburgers who visit Chautauqua each summer will read with interest the appended article from the Pittsburg Presbyterian Banner.

"For more than twenty years Chautauqua, New York, has received much public attention and been largely patronized. It was established as a summer resort for rest, religious services, and educational purposes. Though not avowedly in the special interest of any religious denomination, the leader in the movement was and has been Rev. John H. Vincent, D. D., now a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. But it was generally understood that in its services and teachings it would harmonize with the evangelical churches, and so it did in its earlier years. Great crowds were attracted yearly which embraced many ministers of the gospel, because of the supposed Christian character of the organization, the opportunity for rest and mental and spiritual quickening at a reasonable price.

"Several other organizations with the same objects in view sprang up in different parts of the country, and it seemed as if Chautauqua was to be of immense advantage to evangelical Christianity and education. Yet it looks as if this hope was about to be disappointed. The promises made in the beginning, it was claimed, had not been verified. It was asserted that evangelical Christianity was being crowded into the background, and that so-called 'liberal Christianity' was being brought to the front, and it is well known that for some time in the school of Sacred Literature those teachers have been receiving the preference who do not hesitate to put as true, the results of the most radical criticism. And among the most popular lectures, a most conspicuous place has been given to those who have no sympathy with the evangelical churches. At length public attention has been called to this defection, and unless there is a speedy relinquishment of these objectionable features, Chautauqua will soon be abandoned by evangelical Christians. A correspondent of the Christian Observer, Southern Presbyterian, Louisville, of September 9, 1896, presents a scathing arraignment. He says:—

"Perhaps there is no place in the whole country where a preacher from the South can hear more things which he does not believe, than at Chautauqua, New York. Dr. William Brown, while editor of the Central Presbyterian, once said of Bishop Keane: "It is astonishing how much the bishop knows that isn't so." When measured by the South's standard of orthodoxy, a large proportion of the speakers who occupy the platform at Chautauqua know a vast deal that is not so. Many of the preachers who are selected to edify the people on Sunday, belong to this class. They know much that differs from the Bible, or at any rate from the old-fashioned interpretation of the Bible."

"Then he gives a criticism on the preaching inflicted upon the hearers there by a brilliant young man, Rev. C. F. Aked, of Liverpool, England.

"Mr. Aked's preaching represents a type which is popular, and by no means uncommon. It is false, not so much in what it affirms, as in what it suggests, and in what it omits. It deals in broad statements which seem honoring to God, and which one cannot deny without accompanying his denial with explanation. But it is not loyal to Scripture, in that it fails to note distinctions which the Scriptures emphasize. Its whole argument is built on the assumption that character cannot affect relationship. God's word emphasizes the fact that it does. Adam's relation to God was fundamentally altered, and, but for redeeming grace, would have been eternally altered by his sin. When a sinner is born again, then his relation to God is altered. If one thing is made plain by the Bible, it is that the relation between God and man is not an unalterable relationship. "To as many as received Christ, to them gave he the right to become the sons of God." Were they sons before? If so, they were doubly sons after. "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus." If children by creation, and if we continue to be children despite our wickedness, then we become doubly children by faith in Christ.

"The fatal defect of such preaching as that of Mr. Aked is that it takes no notice of the relationship which is created by our union with Christ, and which contains all the glory and blessedness signified by sonship; and impliedly, if not expressly, it ascribes this glory and blessedness to a sonship founded, not in grace, but in nature. It is the first step and a long step toward universalism."

"At morning prayers, President Eliot, of Harvard University, had the assurance to place Christianity, Buddhism, and Mohammedanism in one fold, saying:—

"One great lesson taught by Chautauqua is the unity of christendom. Here all sects meet on a common footing, and greet each other in the spirit of brotherhood. The future promises a larger unity. We confidently and gladly look forward to an early day, when not only the different divisions of christendom will be united, but when the representatives of all religions shall be embraced in one fold; when the precious truths in Buddhism and Mohammedanism will be recognized and appreciated."

"Such language as this is a natural outgrowth of the parliament of religions at the World's fair, in Chicago.

"But probably the most startling of all the statements made by this correspondent is the following paragraph concerning a proceeding by Bishop John H. Vincent himself:—

"A Missouri preacher of some prominence said to me, "I have been coming here every season for seven years, and have been an enthusiast in my admiration of Chautauqua, but I am almost sick as I witness the trend of things. A premium seems to be set on every kind of heretical teaching." The most deplorable fact is that the distinguished bishop whose name has been most closely associated with the movement and who has been honored as its founder and chief promoter, seems also to be broadening. At a vesper service he read a letter from a lady who in quite plain and repulsive language called in question the scriptural narrative touching the birth of Christ and reflected on the character of the Virgin Mary. The bishop in deference to the views of this letter conceded that the divinity of Christ was not an essential article of the Christian faith, and in order to show the freedom from the restraints of a narrow creed, made other generous concessions. A gentleman remarked to me, with a touch of indignation in his tone, "The bishop has wiped out everything distinctive of Christianity." The friends of old-fashioned evangelical religion, and those who wish well for the great church to which Bishop Vincent belongs, regret to see him opening the door wider and wider for the admission of what they believe to be dangerous, and even deadly errors; and especially do they regret to see him giving the weight of his personal influence to teachings which have hitherto been regarded as subversive of our most cherished hopes.

"That a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church should declare 'that the divinity of Christ was not an essential article of the Christian faith,' is most astounding. We leave him to settle this matter with the church who has honored him with one of its highest appointments, but it is clear that Presbyterian and all evangelical Christians will cease to patronize Chautauqua unless a speedy reformation in its teachings is speedily bought about."

FLOODS IN SIBERIA.

TACOMA, Wash.—Siberian papers received by the Oriental liner Tacoma report great floods in Southeastern Siberia, by which thousands have been rendered homeless and destitute. The Amur and its tributaries are all out of their banks, and the plains for hundreds of miles are covered by a great lake, the water in some cases being twenty-six feet deep. The Siberian railway has been flooded for a distance of 120 versts from Imma, the terminus of the road, and many large wash-outs elsewhere are reported.

Telegraphic communication with Vladivostock was interrupted for several days. Grain crops, which were being harvested, were all destroyed, together with farm buildings. Thousands of cattle were drowned. Meager reports give information of a heavy loss of life, but owing to interrupted communication details are not yet at hand.

The Governor of Vladivostock has dispatched several companies of soldiers, with steam launches and lifeboats, to the scene of the disaster to assist in rescue work. Great distress and famine will undoubtedly be caused in the agricultural districts. The government is doing all in its power to assist the sufferers, but owing to the topography of the country a vast amount of distress will result before the isolated districts can be reached. The Siberian papers call for subscriptions in aid of the sufferers. The season has been exceptionally wet, and the crops were materially damaged by the rain.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. ETHAN PAXTON, Wheatland, Missouri, October 12:—

There are four of my family with myself that have united with the church this summer; three were baptized by D. C. White, one by F. L. Sawley. There are now twenty-eight members here and we are quite anxious to have a branch organized, believing we could work to better advantage for the cause. Prejudice is giving way; some are anxiously inquiring after the truth. The first sermons we heard were about nine months ago, by Brn. Sawley and Mannering; since that time eighteen or twenty have been baptized in this and the adjoining neighborhood. Bro. Sawley is our only missionary. We are hopeful that much good will be accomplished in this region of country.

Bro. R. C. Evans, writing from London, Ontario, orders the history of the church. He writes as if expecting good results from the work, in which we are sure he will not be disappointed:—

I inclose remittance for our new Church History in best binding. I wish this work for myself. I have felt well in reading the Herald account of the coming forth of this long looked for work. I believe it will prove a great blessing to the church and of lasting benefit to the eldership, a benediction to the honest people not yet in the fold. I never felt better, nor have I ever been more pressed for time to fill appointments. I inclose clipping from Ridgetown paper concerning our late conference.

Bro. Morris T. Short closes a letter from Chardon, Ohio, October 13, in the following pleasant way:—

But to return to my narration. I left weeping wife and crying children a dozen days ago, all for the fall and winter campaign. Cleveland conference was a grand good one, and went off without a solitary jar, and with much unity, fellowship, and love. I have spoken a few times in the grand old Temple: but on Sunday eve we began for a solid week in the courthouse here. Many of the Kirtland saints were over and rendered timely music. Bro. Wm. H. Kelley made the opening address. The orthodox (?) church, as usual, would not let us occupy their chapels when not in use. Yesterday's and to-day's rain are hindering causes, as also a W. C. T. U. evangelist. Methodist, masculine woman preacher, is drawing the people, and their sympathy and support too, plus prejudice, madame rumor, etc. I have the privilege to preach in a schoolhouse a little over half way between here and Kirtland, which is almost due west of here. I think to begin there next Monday evening, and thus I hope to move along as the monkeys cross a large stream by taking hold with one hand ere I let go with the other. "A new broom sweeps clean," so the Buckeye and Keystone saints have not given me an unkind word, and I want to earn merited esteem. The products of vineyards and orchards are simply enormous, in all these parts, and surely it is a most bountiful year. The emerald forest is blushing, and the maplewood is both donning and doffing her buff attire, as the autumnal blasts sweep over the lakes and through the dell. And now, gentle reader, bye bye.

Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser writing from Cleveland, Ohio, October 14:—

The loss of the Evanelia seems a mystery, but I am not ready to beat a retreat over it. The depleted condition of the treasury is inconvenient to say the least. On the other hand a marked increase in numbers so far this year. The completion of the College and Home, and the issuing of the History are comforting to contemplate. The year has been a blessed and pleasant one to me in my ministry, though the bitter has still been mingled with the sweet, and no doubt will throughout the conflict.

The loss of the Evanelia is not a mystery, under the conditions which attended her going down at sea. It would have been a much greater mystery had she survived the ordeal to which she was put.

Bro. Henry Sparling, Springfield, Missouri, October 22:—

Please say to your many readers that I have moved my family to this point; but I am still Bishop's agent for Southern Missouri district and my address is No. 1631 Thorman Avenue, Springfield, Missouri. I will take tithing in kind, those living nearest me, and those living nearest Bro. Ward, he will take it and give you a receipt for the same.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, writing from Audubon, Minnesota, October 21, says of the late reunion at Fergus Falls, Minnesota:—

The outsiders gave us a very good hearing; the speakers were blessed in presenting the truth; interest was good. I have watered twenty-three souls, and a number of others say they will join in the spring.

Bro. C. A. Parkin, San Francisco, California, October 12:—

Our services were made more attractive than usual on Sunday morning on account of the presence of three Hawaiian brethren, who sung three songs in their own tongue. We felt the solemn truth that "God is no respecter of persons." In the evening Bro. George S. Lincoln occupied the stand, and, I think, delivered the sermon of his life in defense of Joseph the Martyr and the Book of Mormon. I listened, rejoiced, and praised God. The "marvelous work" moves onward. Brn. Luff and Burton are at Dos Palos now. Our constant prayer is for the welfare of this great latter-day work.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE report of Bro. George Montague, for himself and associate laborers, shows twenty baptisms in the Southwestern Mission, for the quarter ending September 30. Prospects in some places good, in others "gloomy, owing to politics."

Bro. Henry L. Hutson is fearful that some one may think that the coming of Bro. I. P. Baggerly to San Antonio, as noted in a late HERALD, was to adjust some great crime, which was not the case, the object of his going being to organize a branch there; not to try criminals.

One of the best newspaper articles in explanation of the faith and position of the church that we have seen of late appears in a Ridgetown, Ontario, journal of the 9th inst., sent us by Bro. R. C. Evans. It is of two columns length and refers to still another, a former article. It contains an account of a late district conference and outlines the leading features that pertain to the faith and its history. It is well written and will no doubt aid the people in reaching correct conclusions concerning the church. Brn. Lake, Evans, Shields, and others of the Canada mission have done well in securing valuable aid from the public press.

One manner of securing information in regard to matters not passing under one's own observation is asking of questions. An elder of the Utah Church has asked the Deseret News a question, which will be seen elsewhere. Read it with the light of section 43, paragraph 2, Doctrine and Covenants, which read in connection with it.

Bro. W. S. Taylor, of Sherwin Junction, Kansas, reports an excellent conference at Blendville, Missouri, October 16 and 17. All business passed pleasantly, but one thing, and that one an old source of annoyance not stated by Bro. Taylor.

A dispatch from Sydney, New South Wales, October 23, states that the missionary ship Dayspring has been wrecked near New Caledonia Island. The captain and seven men escaped in a boat, but nine others are supposed to have perished.

Drouth has caused a total failure of crops in the northern part of South Australia. Numbers of farmers are destitute.

The town of Kuroff, in Russian Poland, has been almost destroyed by fire. Three thousand persons are left homeless.

Constantinople advices of the 22d report a grave condition of affairs there. The ministers are opposed to the poll tax imposed on the Mussulmen, but the palace officials insisted that the measure was necessary for the defense of the Mussulman religion, on the ground that the Christians are preparing to attack the Mussulmen and that the European press is preaching a crusade against Islam. The British committee appointed to investigate the cause of the recent disorders here computes that fifteen thousand Armenians in Constantinople and its suburbs have been rendered destitute as a result of the late massacres.

Bro. A. H. Smith attended the conference of the Northern Illinois district, October 17 and 18, at Sandwich, Illinois, from which point he returned on the 20th, called home by the recent death in the family of President Joseph Smith.

Brn. A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, E. L. Kelley, William and B. M. Anderson, J. S. Snively, Frank Criley, C. H. Jones, S. and W. Shakespeare, James Allen, and D. F. Nicholson; besides Srs. S. V. Bailey, Laura Kelley, and Della Criley were present from Lamoni and vicinity at the conference of the Decatur district held at Lucas, Iowa, October 24 and 25. Brn. R. M. Elvin, A. M. Chase, and C. Scott, of the missionary force, were also present. A good conference is reported.

Bro. F. M. Weld, who recently returned from Mountain Lake, Cottonwood County, Minnesota, where he had gone in answer to a special call, reports a fine opening at that point. Protestants and Catholics manifested much interest in his meetings. Being called elsewhere, he commends that point to the attention of missionaries in that field.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Our trials we could soften
If we'd only pause and think,
Tears would not flow so often
If we'd only pause and think,
Our skies would all be brighter—
Our burdens would be lighter,
Our deeds would all be whiter
If we'd only pause and think."

Dear Sisters:—I have just been reading Clara D's letter in a recent Herald, and while finding much food for thought, there is one question that forces itself persistently upon mind, namely, "or do you think you are a mistake in creation?"

How often I have been led, in seasons of spiritual depression, to wonder if, after all, it were not a mistake when I was created. There seems so little that I can do and there is nothing that I can do but what some one else might do better. Circumstances seem determined that I may not develop what taste I have for any of the attainments that are considered so necessary to a cultured mind and for work in the Master's cause, and O how I have always longed to develop those tastes! I have sometimes asked myself why I lived—what for—why should I cumber the earth when others could do better than I. But when my loved companion says, "I am a better man than before I knew you, Wife," and dear little arms encircle my neck, and prattling tongues lisp, "I love mamma," when I see the tear of genuine friendship in the eye of sister and brother in the gospel at parting, and when my earnest petition to the Giver of all good is not allowed to remain unanswered I find that each one, however unimportant he may seem in the eyes of the world, has his own little nook in nature's great world wherein to develop and expand the beauties of its life and that the more developing of life's opportunities there are, the more beauty is unfolded to the world surrounding us.

Sit thee not down to idleness,
Nor think with dull repining,
There are no lives in all thou knowest
That need love's sweet entwining.
There never has been an accident
In all God's dear creation.
Thy lifework may be in thy lowly sphere,
And not in rank and station.
Strive, then, to be content with life
Where'er thy lot is cast,
And surely peace of heart will come
When thou hast done thy best.
If thou canst not sing to the world thy song
Thou canst sing it in thy heart,
And to thy life, though the years be long,
Of its beauty 'twill impart.
Thy God can hear thy praise of him
If 'tis lived in thy life each day.
Strive, then, to be happy, whate'er thy lot,
For this is the better way.

WILD FERN.

[AFTER reading the above our mind was led out and on, wondering and still wondering how many and subtle are the wiles of the adversary of all good. The Master said that the simplest service,—a service which even the hand of a child can render,—the giving of a cup of cold water, should not go unrewarded. But Satan is not willing we should believe this. It is opposed to the best interests of his kingdom,—that kingdom of sorrow, despair, and darkness, unspanned by one ray of hope—that we should believe and act upon this just and heavenly principle,—hence he persuades us that we are unfitted for work in the Master's kingdom and we had better fold our hands, yield our strength to the silken bands of sloth and be content to be idlers, because we cannot do some great thing. Who called any act great? If we have read the Bible aright its promises are not to the great, but to the faithful. Were not the many talents taken from the unfaithful and given to him who had been faithful in few? There is work in this world for all—else God were not a God of justice—and those who are faithful to improve the talent intrusted to them are those who will hear the "Well done, good and faithful servant." Will it not be enough? The servant of the great Assyrian general was wiser than his master when he counseled him to do the simple thing the prophet had commanded him, "for," said he, "if the prophet had bid you do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it? how much rather then when he saith to thee, Wash and be clean." May God grant to hasten the day when his people, one and all, will be a willing people! Willing to do just what they can do, for God requires no more than this of any of his servants.—ED.]

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

BRO. C. C. JUDKINS, of Midway, Arkansas, requests your prayers in behalf of his daughter that she may recover from the effects of a surgical operation.

CAMERON, Missouri.

Dear Sisters:—What is the matter with our Home Column? Why is it that we see so few letters in it? What has become of many of its correspondents? Have they become "weary in well-doing"? or do they think they have done all that is required of them, and that the responsibility of continuing this work must now rest with others? It may be some of them, like myself, feel their weakness, and are trying to justify themselves with the thought that there are so many others better qualified. We might feel contented with such thoughts if we only knew that those blessed with greater talents would use them and not keep them wrapped up and hid away. It will require willing hearts to use the talents given, whether they be great or small, if they ever prove to be beneficial to ourselves or others.

I often think of Sr. Walker and wonder if she does not feel discouraged at times, because of the indifference manifested by some who could help if they would. Does she ever feel as if she would like to rest, and be relieved of the work she has been so faithful in performing? I am confident she will fully appreciate that day of rest that is to be given to the faithful and diligent when it does come. I don't believe rest can be fully appreciated unless we first become weary and are really tired.

I enjoy reading our Home Column. I always find something in it that is good and instructive. Yet I miss the letters, for many who have written have endeared themselves to me. Their words of encouragement, sympathy, and good instruction have often come to me when I really needed them. I firmly believe those who wrote were prompted to do so for the benefit of those who were in need of help. I am confident that few if any are without their trials. All have their cloudy days, as well as their bright ones, and when we are passing through them words of sympathy and encouragement are always thankfully received. But there is comfort at least in the thought that if we only prove faithful we shall all have the blessed privilege of meeting and becoming better acquainted, where sorrows and trials cannot come. O how thankful we ought to be that we have been permitted to hear and obey the gospel, for it gives to us the blessed assurance of rest and peace when this life is ended, if we endure with patience the trials of life and faithfully perform the work required of us. But, dear sisters, will we be able to do this? I am satisfied it will take a constant effort on our part. We shall have no time to watch others; we shall always find enough to do to watch ourselves; and if we do so, we shall very likely see enough to keep us humble, so that we shall be willing to seek for help of Him who is able to assist.

But what a loving, kind, and merciful Father we have to seek assistance from! Who could know him without loving him? Neither can we really and truly love him until we do know him. We can always rely on him as a present help in time of need, if we only put our trust in him and try to do his will. It is at least consoling to know that we have one true Friend who can sympathize with us in all our trials. He knows what our hearts' desires are, and if we do sometimes make mistakes, our reasons for doing so are plain to him, our motives will always be taken into consideration, and just decision will be awarded to all. Trusting that each of us may be found worthy of a righteous reward, I am,

Your sister,
G. F. SIMMONS.

RIVERSIDE, California.

Dear Sister Frances:—It has been a long time since I have written to the sisters. There are so many of the sisters that are so much more competent to write than I; but when I read their letters which express my thoughts and feelings, and I get so much good and am encouraged to still hold onto that rod of iron, I thank the dear Father above that I live in this day of the world when God has restored the blessed gospel to his people and that I have been permitted to hear and embrace the blessed word. I feel that I want to have everyone to share it with me, for it brings peace and joy to each heart that will embrace it.

There are trials for each of us to bear, but God will give us strength to endure all that comes to us. My heart goes out in love to all the dear sisters and brothers who write us such good and gracious words in the papers. It is food to my soul and helps me to take fresh courage to strive harder to have more faith in the promises that God has given us.

I can say thanks to a blessed Father above. He has heard and answered prayer in behalf of a dear daughter whose life was despaired of, who has been restored to comfortable health. She is a Christian and is trying to live a good life, but O I do pray she may yet see the true light and have a fullness of the Spirit! I ask your prayers for her and all the dear ones who are striving to serve the Master. I am alone in my faith, but God has given me strength to endure, and I trust he will to the end. My health is poor, but I have peace and joy in the Lord. I have so many good blessings that I am trying to speak to others of this gospel that has been given to us in these latter days, these perilous times. My prayer to God is to bless all his people and keep them from the evil that is in the world, that we may come up on a higher plane and live so we may be enabled to meet the dear Savior with peace and joy when he comes to make up his jewels. Yours in the everlasting covenant, NECESSITY AND MANNER OF VISITING THE PRIMARY CLASS.

(Paper read by Mrs. J. H. Royce at Crystal Springs camp ground, August 6.)

AS OUR plain of action broadens under the hand of organized effort we feel the overwhelming necessity of a better acquaintance with earth's choicest treasures—the children.

No one has a right to teach who cannot bring with her a deep sympathy for all the woes of childhood, a mind broad enough to measure inherited tendencies and present environments, and a heart so filled with a love for her work that she is willing to employ time and talent in helping to fit the characters within her charge for life's great work.

The teacher of the Sunday school lacks the advantage possessed by the teacher of the day school in studying character. She does not see child deal with child. She has no opportunity of measuring the malice, envy, or jealousy in the heart, save as she sees perhaps a shrug of the shoulder or the gathering up of garments as one of less fine array approaches.

It not infrequently happens that the seemingly bright boy who is all attention and whose lesson seems best learned and remembered is the worst little fraud in the class, and has no higher aim than gaining a card of attendance, a prize for well-learned lessons, or a certificate of promotion.

While on the other hand that modest, quiet child who shrinks at the sound of her own voice, and perhaps under the nerve-strain of being watched by others, is found playing or shuffling feet, thereby missing the reward and failing of promotion; this is the one who lets the teacher's words sink deep into her heart, meditates upon the lesson taught, betters her own life, sweetens the home, and makes happier the lives of others by reason of what she has gained in the Sunday school. These conditions being true, how great becomes the necessity of knowing the class individually, that we may not mistake unconscious brass for devotion, nor failure to answer for indifference. Trying to bottle up a quantity of instruction and pouring it out without regard to personal need and calling it the full duty of the teacher looks as if we were patterning after the patent medicine man instead of the dear Father who metes out our portion according to individual need.

Let us think how Christ and the apostles of old did. To them who were blind, sight was given; to the lame, power to walk. When man sought salvation, his early teachings, his present environments, his occupation, his knowledge of Christ, were all taken into consideration. In talking to the fisherman he likened the kingdom of heaven to a net let down into the sea; to the vine dresser he likened it to a vineyard; and so on, in language applicable to the occupation.

Where one was known to be of that honesty of character that if he believed he would also do according to that belief, he was told to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and he should be saved. To those who believed and yet had not repented, was given the command to repent. To those who understood repentance baptism was preached for the remission of sins, and to those who had received a water baptism under the hands of some proselyte, the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost was preached. When they had accepted of what Paul in the sixth of Hebrews terms the principles of the doctrine of Christ, were fully inducted into the church, they were told to go on to perfection or as Peter has it in his talk to the church, "add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance," etc. And so we find the gospel full of evidence that God plans to meet individual need. Pursuant to God's plan we see the necessity of the teacher's personal acquaintance with each member of the class; hence it is not a question of what suits me as a teacher, but what is my duty to my class. How can we promote according to merit without knowledge thus obtained?

Again, no religion is of value that is not practical. The primary teacher who acquaints herself with the child in its home relations is able to make application according to the needs of the home. We are not suffering for a "don't" religion for the child half so much as a "do." The teacher can help him find his own obstacles to overcome, his own battles to fight. Is there a poor tired mother in the home? Show him his opportunity of doing with his own hands what in many homes is given over to servants. Show him how his little feet can run upon errands, his hands can lovingly tend baby, and he can be so happy in making himself tired for dear Mother's sake. Is there an aged grandmother, show him his good fortune in having a chance to do acts of kindness to one who is so soon to depart for the Father's home. Has he ill temper, selfishness, or other vices, help him to know ways of overcoming such. Impress upon him the thought that it is to him that overcometh that the reward is due. Encourage him in keeping track of the acts of unselfishness done or of temper overcome; let him see that you can measure his moral growth and that you delight in the victories he has won. Tell him of some of your temptations when younger and how you tried to overcome. In fact, be his confidential friend, in word and in deed, and he will soon commence to see that you are helping him to work out life's problems; that he may sweeten the world by his presence, may build for himself a character that will make him agreeable company for the heavenly host.

Keep before him the love of God in creating for him so much that is enjoyable, and encourage in him a spirit of gratitude that will make him love right because it is right, because it is for his present and future good, and because it is pleasing to the dear Father whose love surpasses all understanding.

So the reasons may be multiplied for the teachers visiting the homes. As to the manner, all will depend upon circumstances; and the intelligent, earnest teacher will find out the way for herself. Some one has said, "Be sure that you have your tracts and note book at hand." Maybe that will do in some places. You cannot always plan ahead. Wait till you see the home. Your first duty might be to take up that not overly clean baby, but if we haven't love enough in our hearts to care for the child that is intimate with mother earth, then there is something wanting in our own preparation. Maybe you may do missionary work with a dish pan to the relief of tired mother. Maybe the children's new story book contains something that you can read so sweetly that a lasting impression may be made. Maybe you can sing with the little ones that last song learned in the Sunday school. Maybe you can aid them in understanding the next Sunday's lesson. Maybe you can do such sweet, noble, helpful things. Whatever you may do, do not make many visits without talking with them of Christ's redeeming love. Let them know that it is for them individually, and believing all this, you will bear to the throne of grace a petition for each individual of your class that even the unbelieving mother may think "Maybe there is something real in religion; maybe there is a God of love who is reaching out a helping hand to the poor amongst men!"

Teachers, who can measure your possibilities in this line? Are we studying to push the work? Are we willing to do just the best that is in us toward bettering the condition of mankind? Are we willing to learn more and more of God's words and works that we may walk in the light, the true light of God? Are we willing to truly stand up for Jesus and accept all the truth that the Lord is willing to reveal to us? Let the purity and earnestness of our lives answer.

WAIT A LITTLE.

GIVE the child a chance. Suppose he has not done exactly right. Perhaps he sees his error, and is sorry for it, but has not come to the point of expressing his repentance. Wait a little. Do not nip the tender bud of regret by the harsh breath of blame. Think how patient God is with you. Think how all the laws of his great household are made with a view to his children's development, their growth in all spiritual perfections.

"But," says the father, "the child's got to obey, and that's the long and short of it."

Is that the way men talk about their corn and their potatoes, their wheat and their grass crops? No, indeed! Soils, methods, fertilizers are studied anxiously, carefully; but, alas! in what haphazard fashion is the precious human product cultivated.

Make the child happy when it is possible. See what plans God has made for his children's happiness. In the sunshine of joy the little human plant develops naturally, harmoniously. In grief and anger and sullenness he is repressed, chilled, thwarted, distorted.

A child should be allowed to have "his own way" whenever that way is innocent. The child's natural, innocent ways are the Maker's ways. Do we not thwart God when we thwart the impulses that he has put into little children? If we would become children with them we might enter into their heaven. Becoming one with them in love, our knowledge and experience would be available for their safe and tender guidance.—Mary F. Butts in S. S. Times.

FREMONT, Neb., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference was held here last Saturday and Sunday, and the saints were delighted, cheered, and comforted by the presence of Brn. Joseph Smith and E. L. Kelley. It was considered a rare treat by the saints in this part of the world. On Sunday I went to Omaha, where we had a very enjoyable day, with many outsiders out to hear at night. Four names were given for baptism, two on Monday, and two on Sunday following, the 18th. On Monday we repaired to the church, and baptized the two and confirmed them, Bro. Kelley assisting.

I then took train for this place, to act as moderator for Bro. Mintun, in his discussion with Elder Seaton, of the Christian Church, which began that night, leaving Bro. Joseph Smith to speak at night to the saints and friends at Omaha. So you see we are in the fight out in this neck of woods (or prairie rather) as well as in other parts.

The Christians thought they were strong, so made broad assertions, and, of course, there were some of these Latter Day Saints on hand ready to take it up. The result was they sent to Marion, Iowa, for their champion, and on last Monday night they met and crossed theological swords, and the fight has been on ever since; which, while waged hotly, has been as clean as you could expect, and far more so than we had thought it would be, from the start, as he very politely warned us he would be smooth, just as "smooth as a cocklebur" and he asked "no quarter and would give none," so we rather looked for some mud slinging.

The rules were quite strict and by a little careful work he was held down very well, only making a few real bad thrusts, for which he was made to apologize. There were to have been six nights on each proposition, but it was reduced to five to satisfy Mr. Seaton, because of the sickness of one of his daughters; so last night closed the first proposition, and to say that victory was ours from the very first speech Bro. Mintun made, is putting it mildly; and in the last two speeches he was blessed wonderfully. The difference was so very marked and the working of the true God so manifested itself that whereas we started with the prejudice of the people strongly against us, we closed with a warm feeling manifest toward us of friendliness and respect, for which we feel to thank the Lord, our strength. The saints are rejoicing and feel much stronger in their faith than before the debate began.

We commence the other proposition to-night, when Bro. Mintun affirms that "the church of which I, J. F. Mintun, am a member, is the Church of Christ as taught in the New Testament Scriptures;" five nights to be given to this proposition or five sessions at least. We are hopeful that the Lord will be with us in this also.

We had the very novel experience of hearing this disciple of the Christian Church use the Book of Mormon to prove that the name "Christian" as applied to his church was one of the marks of identity as the true Church of Christ, first called Christians at Antioch. Ha! Ha! What next? He read from Book of Mormon pages 471 and 326, and, when he saw the Book said too much for him, he of course got down to ridicule and had the rent or hole on the pole and writing on the hole that was hung on the pole; but when Bro. Mintun turned on the light, lo, poor Bro. Seaton, the self-made apostle from Marion, was in the hole, and, everybody could see it! He also used P. P. Pratt in the Voice of Warning, but made nothing out of that, so let it drop.

We are all well and feeling good in spirit. I go to Omaha for Sunday. Bro. Stubbart here. Bro. Mintun will rest. Pray for us that God may be with us.

Yours in gospel bonds,
FREDRICK A. SMITH.

BUCHANAN, Mich., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald.—The two-days' meetings in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan district have been good, there being some at nearly every place obeying the gospel, Elder H. H. Robinson and the writer laboring together at the following places.

At Williamston, Michigan we had a real good meeting, the Advents were there with their tent and had been for thirteen weeks and had some of the people bothered on the Sabbath question. We were requested to speak on the same topic, and they being informed of our intention were on hand with pencil in hand took notes and announced a reply the same evening, and that continued four evenings. The result was death to their labors at that place, so all the people say. They told me they were sorry they took the course they did.

The elder tried to slander the saints by making mention of their influence on society telling some things that took place in Northern Michigan when he was challenged for discussion by Elder J. J. Cornish. The people told him if he went down in the neighborhood where the saints were to hold a discussion with him he had better take a body guard with him for their children were terrible and that he would be in danger; but I think Elder Ballinger was more terrified at the appearance of J. J. and the truths he presented than by the children of the saints; also by the crowd that would be present. Well, he left without a convert and all said he was worsted in the reply.

We went from there to Charlotte, Michigan, where we met some of the noble of God's kingdom—Bro. and Sr. Charles Smith and family who made the entire congregation welcome during the meeting, and many other saints from the country and other places were in attendance, doing their part nobly. At the close of the meeting we baptized two noble ones haling from Lansing, and then the writer returned to Lansing, where we had several good cottage meetings, and then back to Williamston, Michigan, and held five meetings with good attention. That grand old saint of God, Thomas Horton, and his good wife made the saints a home and is so very anxious that they be organized there. The work should be followed up there as many are investigating and almost persuaded.

We left there and the next place was the Marcellus branch, where we found the saints anxiously waiting for the gospel. One was baptized, others are ready and calling for baptism, which will be attended to in the near future. Then we went to Hartford and found the saints all alive to the work, having bought them a little room and fitted it up very nicely to hold their meetings in. There we held the best meeting of the season; baptized four good people; one was a Methodist Episcopal seventy-four years old. The people want us to return as soon as possible and renew the work, as there are several nearly ready for baptism.

We are now safely anchored at the comfortable home of Bro. John Shook, where the elders always find a home and a welcome. He has been the marshal of this place for several years, but lawabiding citizens are not afraid of the marshal, so I reckon that Bro. H. H. and self are safe. We go from here to Knox, Indiana, which will wind up the meeting until Troy and California are announced later on. Galien will have the conference soon, then we shall have been all around.

I want to say for this district that it is alive and in fair condition. Thanks to all of you for kindness, and you are ever remembered by the writer evening and morning, and would ask to be remembered by all, and please remember our families in their financial distress.

Your brother and friend,
L. F. DANIEL.

FREMONT, Neb., Oct. 15.

Editors Herald.—The work in onward here. The Sunday school convention was a grand success and closed with a splendid entertainment. Several of those who took part displayed splendid talent, especially Sr. Mamie Sampson.

The conference following on the 10th and 11th was also a grand success. Brn. Joseph Smith, E. L. Kelley, F. A. Smith, and J. F. Mintun were present, with a number of visiting saints from various places. The preaching was done by Brn. E. L. Kelley, J. F. Mintun, and Joseph Smith. Some nonmembers who attended said the preaching was the best they ever heard. The saints were all well pleased and rejoiced together in the glorious latter-day work.

The discussion between Bro. Mintun and J. A. Seaton is progressing nicely here. Three of the twelve sessions have passed and the verdict of outsiders, so far as we have heard, has been that Bro. Mintun is having it about his own way. Mr. Seaton made an acknowledgment to that effect himself the second evening. Saints and friends of the work are all rejoicing in the prospect of victory for the truth.

Yours for truth,
J. M. STUBBART, Dist. Pres.

VANESSA, Ont., Oct. 16.

Editors Herald.—Since I last wrote you I have baptized two more, making twenty-two since General Conference. For the want of means to travel I did not reach my appointed field of labor till too late for a good long summer's ministerial work; but I put in good time on the coast of Maine before I left.

But during the sixty-eight days since I left Rockland, Maine, I have preached fifty-seven times, baptized four, confirmed ten, blessed three children, attended ten other meetings, assisted four times, administered to the sick fifty-four times. Weary of my work, but not tired of the gospel. I very much dislike the idea of staying around home and feeding on the scanty means of the church, and being condemned of God, and in the judgment day be called a robber. I shall be in this mission till the middle, or last of November, then visit my family and make arrangements for winter work.

The conference at St. Thomas last Saturday and Sunday, was the best I have attended for several years. The business passed off splendidly. Bro. Lake is a good presiding officer. He preached to a full house on Sunday evening; the sermon was grand; several remarked to me, "I never heard Uncle John do so well before."

Elder R. C. Evans spoke in the afternoon. It was grand. Would to God that all the world could have listened to the silver tongued orator. May God bless the boy preacher. The writer spoke at eleven o'clock. Bro. St. John gave us a very good, instructive discourse on Saturday evening. On Sunday morning we met for sacrament and social meeting. The Spirit of God like a fire was present and never before have I ever viewed the sacrament as I did last Sunday morning. A noble sister saw the same. It seemed to me that the actual body of Christ was lying on the table.

The following was sung in tongues by Bro. John H. Lake, the interpretation being sung by Elder R. C. Evans:—

Behold my saints who now appear
Before me at this hour,

I will be with thee in thy prayers
Thou wilt enjoy my power.

Your covenant to serve the Lord
According to his word,
Has not been kept in fullness true,
Thou hast oft from me swerved.

In consequence of this my power
From thee has been withheld;
Ye have not all united been,
My power thou'st not upheld.

My priesthood you have not upheld
According to my law,
And hence transgressors have been shield
By my own people's flaw.

On Monday morning Bro. Lake called the missionary force together and instructed us a little on our duty as ministers for Christ. He told each one of us what part of the field to labor in. Each one seemed to be well satisfied to go as he said, and all left with a strong determination to push the work. He said: "Tell the people the signs shall follow the believer, and if they don't follow its because they don't believe, and to such Jesus says they shall be damned."

On Monday evening the branch at St. Thomas gave an entertainment. It was grand; much was to be learned by what was done. I am very glad that I came to Canada, for I have seen a camel with a very large hump on her left side; I saw the Queen, heard St. John preach, and slept with the Pope.

One was baptized on Tuesday by Elder Tomlinson.

J. C. FOSS.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Oct. 15.

Editors Herald:—Bro. R. Farris and I have been here ever since the reunion, holding forth in the district tent. We commenced September 27 and have held meetings every night. We have had a few out to hear every night that we have preached, but we are not exciting the people very much as they do in the East, for fourteen is the largest number of nonbelievers we have had at any of our meetings; but we were very well pleased to get that many, with less numbers at other times. But still I believe I can safely say that we have reached more outsiders than the three branches at San Francisco, Oakland, and San Jose all put together have in the last three months; so you may know that there is not much of a tidal wave of religion, especially of Latter Day Saintism, on this coast.

So far as I am informed the work on the Pacific coast is at very low tide among those not of our faith; and I believe I can safely say that it will go lower from the fact of there being so much ineffectual work done in running from place to place and only preaching a few sermons. I here repeat what I wrote some time ago, that it puts me in mind of a lot of harvesters who were hired to harvest a very large field and they went forth into the field promiscuously, cutting a few sheaves here and there, then leaving them and running to another place and doing the same thing without binding them together in many instances, leaving them to waste upon the ground, or for the birds of prey and the elements to destroy; especially the young and tender wheat. This is a fair comparison of the work that I know has been done in California, for I have been connected with it almost from its commencement in this State. This running seemed necessary and I did my part of it, but I must confess that I am heartily ashamed of that kind of work, because I have seen its bad effects; and, if possible, I want to reform, especially when it is much cheaper and so much more effectual to work the ground as we go, provided there could be a united effort.

This can be done by the church as a body assembled in conference taking the matter in hand and spending more money for tents and less for elders' expenses to run from place to place and to the General Conferences so often, and to so many large reunions. Let all these meetings and their expenses be divided up into smaller meetings and make them a means of reaching more people. Let a General Conference be once in two or four years, and let the missions and districts manage their own ministry more than at present. The times are getting harder and harder, and the poor saints cannot give as in the past; and as the perilous times get worse and worse and the different churches see their ebbing powers, it will be harder to get places than now. Everything will combine against us as their enemy, but with tents, plenty of them in the field, we are independent and can move into any place and set up our tent and commence work with tracts and visiting from house to house, and three good effectual workers can do more in this State than ten can any other way; and they can work the ground thoroughly, and if properly fixed can work all winter in California.

I am not finding fault with anybody, but know that the church like its Head—Christ—and all of its members, has and will have to learn wisdom by the things suffered. The church as well as individual members have had to pay very dear for their experiences in the past, "For the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."—Luke 16:8. I throw out these thoughts as a sort of feeler, for I know how hard it is to reform old fogies like myself, and will write more anon.

My health is some better but I am laboring under great difficulties physically; but spiritually I have been made to rejoice in delivering the gospel message. The saints here are doing what they can, and may God bless them is our prayer.

Yours in bonds.

A. HAWS.

EXCELSIOR, Minn., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—If my memory is good I believe I have not written to the Herald this conference year. Perhaps the main reason is that I have not had anything of special interest to write. I have tried to keep pace with the work and do what I could to get the gospel before the people. I have to date opened up four new places and have done some good in each place. Last Sunday I had the pleasure of baptizing two at one of these new places, a mother and son, and there are more to follow. Three young ladies, sisters, have said they would be baptized soon. Two of them are ready now, but the younger one is not; but I think will be soon.

The older one of the three had a dream a few nights since that has decided her not to wait very long. I had preached upon the mission of Christ and followed it with, "What must I do to be saved?" and that night the two places, heaven and hell, were shown her, and as she related it to me the next morning she said that she saw the dividing line between them and some; that she was acquainted with some that were in heaven, and that there were a great many in that place, many more than in the other. She was in the place of torment, and said that the agony she suffered could not be described. She said she had been taught to believe that hell was a lake of fire, but said it was not, but that her suffering was worse, it seemed to her, than it would be to be cast into fire. She said that as she was looking at those in heaven she recognized me there, that I turned to her and said, "Remember that I told you about these places, and you had a chance to obey the gospel;" and in answer she said that she remembered it; and that was one of the reasons why she suffered as she did. She now feels that she wants to escape that place, and I believe will make a good member when she comes.

The work is onward in this mission and in better shape than ever before. Some pruning has been done that will have a wholesome effect upon the work as a stumblingblock that has been in the way of some has been removed, and they will now come into the church. This is a hard place to get an opening, as it is a pleasure resort, and they do not want the gospel; but I am going to storm the fort anyway and throw a few shells into the camp of the enemy.

I met one of their generals (a minister) yesterday, one that would not read a notice of my meeting to his congregation, and I think it was hot for him for awhile. I presume he will do better next time. He promised to come and hear me, and I hope he will be on hand to-night, as I am to answer the question from a Bible standpoint, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" I think he will squirm some if he comes.

It is hard to get the attention of the people now because of political agitation, and I will be glad when election is over. Some call me a "gold bug," but I do not care, as I expect to reside in a city paved with gold.

Yours in the faith,

E. A. STEDMAN.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 17.

Editors Herald:—Passing through Poquonnoc, this State, to-day, the happy memories of the late Massachusetts district reunion were vividly brought to mind. The grove by the beautiful waters of Poquonnoc showed no signs of human life as it did last August. The familiar face of Station Agent Morgan was there to greet the patrons of the Shore Line railroad as before. This railroad is rightly named. For miles and miles it follows the picturesque but irregular shore of Long Island Sound and Narragansett Bay.

While some were in a measure dissatisfied with the 1896 reunion, yet I am frank to confess that the results of that gathering no man can tell. Suffice it to say some of the good seed of the word of God was faithfully planted there. Doubtless the work was opened up in such a way that it can be successfully followed up at some opportune time.

By the way, the district conference of last Saturday and Sunday deserves a word here. The Sabbath meetings were crowded at each session. The spiritual gifts were copiously exercised and the Fall River saints with whom the conference met, were strengthened, as so were all present.

Elders H. J. Davison and F. M. Sheehy preached afternoon and evening respectively. Promises of brighter times witnessed to by a higher power than man strongly indicated a rise in the spiritual barometer in the district. The News and Herald of Fall River published creditable notices of conference.

Thinking some of late of the destinies of different institutions, American and otherwise, their rise or decline, prospective or real, and their success or failure, the above results are certain as they assume or fail to assume, an attitude towards the liberty and intelligence of a pure and true manhood and womanhood, especially the latter.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world" we are told, and how true it is. It is just as certain and true in relation to the church as of any other organization.

What a sure foundation for the great future of the church is being laid by the motherhood of Zion! Could any problem of human life be grander than that which has to do with the training of childhood's happy hours and fitting them to walk in the footsteps of the pure and good.

Five children were baptized at conference.

Yours, etc.,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 19.

Editors Herald:—I returned to my field of labor on the 2d inst., stopping at Baldwin, Maryland, to attend the dedication of the saints' little chapel there. The dedication took place on Sunday, the 4th, the writer preaching the sermon, Bro. A. H. Parsons offering the prayer. There were not a great many in attendance, but those present seemed to enjoy the services, and felt repaid for attending. The dedicatory prayer was especially impressive. Thus was dedicated the first meetinghouse of this church in the State of Maryland; also the first in the Philadelphia district.

From Baldwin I went to New Park, Pennsylvania, a distance of about fifty miles; being conveyed across the country in buggies by Brn. Walter Hargan, Joshua Fowler, and Edward Matthews. I remained something over a week at New Park, preaching mostly to saints, endeavoring to strengthen them in the faith. While there three were baptized, two of whom were children of the saints; the other, a young man, who has heard considerable of the doctrine.

Leaving New Park on the 15th, I came to Bro. Fowler's; on the 16th took train at Oxford, Pennsylvania, for Philadelphia.

It has been over a month since leaving this place, and on returning it is gratifying, and encouraging to see what has been accomplished since my leaving. Bro. W. A. Smith remained at his post with the gospel tent as long as weather permitted, then securing a hall in the city of Camden, he continued the work until last week, having baptized eighteen there altogether. This makes twenty-eight baptized thus far in this district during this conference year. Bro. Smith and I go to Germantown to-day, to look after some interest that was created there by our tent work last summer.

Our beloved brother, A. H. Parsons, is just as actively engaged as ever. He is truly a model for those who are not engaged in the general ministry; for he loses no opportunity to work to the advantage of the church. He has nobly assisted Bro. Smith and me during the present year. Besides preaching in this city and in Camden, he is now preaching up in Connecticut every four weeks.

Notwithstanding the crisis, and the perils, the work still moves.

H. E. MOLER.

BENNETT, Neb., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald:—I closed a ten nights' session debate with Rev. T. H. Popplewell, of the Christian Church, last night. I never expect to gain a more complete victory for the truth. Friends were made to the cause and the saints strengthened. The gospel of Christ stood the test admirably, and no proof was produced that it was not the "same yesterday, to-day, and forever." I thank God for the "fullness of the gospel," and the privilege of defending and working for it. I am still in the faith.

Your brother in Christ,

W. E. PEAK.

DOW CITY, Ia., Oct. 22.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference which was held at Harlan, Iowa, from the 16th to the 18th inst., was harmonious and spiritual from first to last with a good representation present at the opening. Branch reports and credentials were all in district secretary's hands in good time. Thanks to branch officers and clerks. Ministerial reports showed zeal and spirituality in the main though, perhaps, some might do more if they would try hard. The preaching was good and prayer and testimony meetings above the average. Bro. W. D. Bullard who presides over the Salem branch was ordained to the office of elder and Bro. Joseph Greenwood was ordained to the office of priest to act as an officer in the Galland's Grove branch.

We have other young men who will make a success as ministers, and the Spirit will so indicate in due time if they continue humble, faithful, and prayerful. We need much more help and every saint should pray that the "Lord of the harvest, . . . would send forth laborers into his harvest."

The Sunday school entertainment given Saturday evening was interesting, instructive, and speaks well for those conducting and taking part in the exercises. The day of Zion's glory dawneth. "Good men and true" and women of the same kind are needed all over the world to battle for the right under the direction of King Immanuel. Thank God for the Sunday school and its noble workers.

All goes fairly well with us, and the saints are encouraged to press forward.

Hopefully,

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

MACON, Mo., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—I held eleven services at Gospel Hill church, assisted by D. Flanders. Congregations were not large, but attentive, and anxious to look after our welfare. One said she would be baptized the next opportunity, and several others there are believing the angel's message.

From there I went to the German Stewartsville branch and preached three times for them to large congregations each time. Found a noble band of saints there. Then on to Stewartsville, and preached six times and had a very pleasant time with the saints there; and on the 11th inst. I went to Pleasant Grove and preached twice and stayed over night with our energetic brother, C. P. Faul. I enjoyed my visit very much with them there.

From there I went to the Delano branch; spoke twice there and baptized two; there too lives a noble band of saints, who know how to make the elders comfortable. Then on to the conference of Northeast Missouri district that convened seven miles from Macon. We had a very nice time there; the few saints with their neighbors deserve credit for the way they entertained the visiting brethren.

Our conference convened in the district tent and Bro. Chatburn and I are continuing meetings in it and expect to hold over Sunday. We are having fine weather and nice crowds, and hope for good results.

In gospel bonds,

M. M. TURPEN.

HARFOD, South Wales, Oct. 6.

Editors Herald:—The Eastern district, South Wales, convened at six p. m. in a dark, dingy, none too clean looking room in the back slums of Porth, for which one pound as rent was paid; but it was the only public room procurable. Time was when the district could hold a conference gathering in a private house, but present indications are such as to justify the belief that the time for holding conference gatherings in a private house is past.

Though the weather was very unpropitious, rain, rain, rain, then rain again, and then keeping on, and on, pouring down, the conference was well attended, peaceful and profitable. One lengthy business session Saturday evening; prayer meeting Sunday, nine a. m.; preaching 10:30; sacrament at two p. m.; preaching at six p. m. when Bro. J. D. Jenkins delivered a most powerful and impressive sermon in the Welsh language to an audience of about seventy persons, which was a very fair audience, all things being considered. The sermon was of thirty minutes' duration, eliciting the most profound attention. Bro. J. D. Jenkins, as per arrangement, is devoting his entire time in the ministerial field, and is working in good earnest. There are hundreds of thousands of people within a small radius; two or three baptisms of late; some three or four others are getting ready; private houses are too small for the Penygraig branch. The saints are being stirred up, and appear willing to be stirred up, and according to present indications, intend to stay stirred up; this is a hopeful sign.

There is a unanimity of feeling in reference to keeping Bro. J. D. Jenkins in the field, at present. He lives in the confidence of the saints. His labors are indispensable. The present status of finances in the district insures his continuance for a year at least, if the Bishop can permit the Bishop's agent to use the freewill offering and tithes coming in, which are limited, as there are at present but few in the district.

From Llanelly I halted at Morrision; gave nine discourses, Bro. Gibbs assisting, opening the meetings promptly at the advertised hour. His daughters were prompt in furnishing music and singing. The excellent singing done by the Welsh, by some is attributed to the fact, of opening their mouths wider than other folk. I can assure your readers that the music and singing at Morrision during my stay, were magnificently grand, and very inspiring. The daughters follow the examples of father in being punctual at the meeting. Some three or four in Morrision are near baptism.

The Western district seems to be gradually falling in line with the system, being presented by Bro. E. R. Dewsnup, who is working assiduously for the welfare of the district as his circumstances allow. Rain continues; sunless days as a consequence, health excellent.

Modern Babylon is being shaken from center to circumference, over the question of Christian union. Since the Encyclical Letter of Leo XIII., Catholics are waxing bold, Protestants, though assuming courage, look ahead with fearful foreboding; zealous, God-fearing Latter Day Saints, growing in holy boldness. So moves the world.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—In this metropolis the gospel work moves very slowly, yet I presume the saints, and especially those who have the general oversight of the work in all the world, would be pleased to hear from these quarters.

Although not possessing the power of coloring matters to increase the interest that might be had in the city of brotherly love, I often think some one ought to be sufficiently interested in the Herald cause to report occasionally, that others might be encouraged. It is encouraging often to the ministry when toiling with but little success to know that others are engaged similarly who are doing a great deal of preaching seemingly with but very meager results, so far as the human eye can discern at least. Not altogether in the line that "misery loves company," but to know that others who are valiant and noble workers are not converting the world I have often been consoled with that thought during the past four years service in this city. The experience urged me to seek other places to try my preaching power to see if I had really lost what little I had once enjoyed when in the West, where I never failed to obtain an audience, if I got a hearing at all.

It is so different in these parts to what an elder finds in most places west that I do not wonder that the ministry has and does, seemingly at least, shun this city. I have felt many times like vacating, yet the good Spirit said stay. When I concluded to seek employment I was almost sure I should be compelled to leave to obtain work. I felt if I did my part all would work for the best interests of all concerned. I only speak of this as a token of the Lord's fatherly care extended, which has always been my experience in this gospel work.

The efforts of this conference year have been quite successful. Bro. Moler and Smith made two settings with the tent in the city proper. After spending about six weeks with but little interest and very small audiences, they moved to Germantown, where four weeks were spent to small congregations. Some few seemingly have become interested sufficiently to open their houses for preaching. The writer accompanied the brethren there on the 19th and spoke to about ten adults, who seemed to be very much interested. The brethren tarried to continue meetings during the week.

The next move was to Camden, New Jersey. This place I have desired to reach, but having no place to hold forth in and no money to move and run the tent last year, and having such poor success in this city, I left the State and opened up in Connecticut. Here (in Camden) the congregation kept growing till a fair-sized audience was had. After a fortnight Bro. Moler left for home and Bro. Smith continued the effort for some six weeks longer, baptizing eighteen adults. A hall was obtained at the close of tenting season and a Sunday school organized and regular appointments made for prayer and preaching service; prayer meeting every Wednesday evening at 7:45; preaching Lord's Day at 7:30 p. m.; Sunday school at three p. m. It increases our work as branch officers. However, we shall do the best we can to keep up the interest.

Bro. Moler returned in time for the dedication of the Baldwin church, October 4. He delivered the sermon, which was enjoyed by those present, being a fair-sized congregation, considering the dampness of the day. The writer made the prayer. However the county paper said Rev. W. H. Kelley preached and Rev. W. A. Smith offered the prayer. Moler and Parsons were not mentioned. How is that, W. H. K.? Some queer things get out sometimes.

Last Sabbath the writer spent in Connecticut, delivering two discourses in the new church and administering the sacrament. The interest seemed to be good; at least good-sized audiences were present morn and eve. Bro. Moler occupied the pulpit at the hall at the morning hour and Bro. Smith in the evening, while Bro. Moler preached in the mission hall at Camden. Bro. Stone has been laid up with rheumatism for a fortnight; Bro. Lewis is not enjoying very good health; Bro. Zimmerman returned Friday from Europe, where he has been visiting his parents. Good health is enjoyed by most all the saints. The young people's meeting is slowly growing in numbers. The song service has failed to materialize under the new departure, yet we hope saints may awake to the fact that the election of a chorister means more than merely the fact that they have one. Their support by their presence is necessary at each service if they desire to receive the benefit desired and accomplish the good hoped for.

The ministerial force of the city has gotten up a new sermon which was delivered at most all the churches last Sunday, also in New York and Brooklyn. It is called "Sound money and sound gospel." If I were allowed to pass my judgment, I think they know about as much about one as the other. However, some of them have decided that their salaries must be paid in gold; no white metal for them. It must appear to them, seeing the demand is more urgent on the part of the people to understand the present issue—political—than religion, that their duties lay in the political arena instead of in the theological. At least one would judge so by all the efforts made so far this fall. Well, let all the infidel fraternity spend their time and talent in that direction while God's ministers minister comfort to the soul and thought to the intelligence of those who have time to listen.

THE BOOK OF MORMON.—No. 6.
ITS ORIGIN, NECESSITY, AND PURPOSE; ITS MORALS, AND THE BIBLICAL EVIDENCES OF ITS VALIDITY.
BY ELDER I. N. W. COOPER.
MORALS.

THE moral and religious sentiment of the Book of Mormon is such as can in nowise be impeached. Besides teaching the most sublime lessons of morality, and of deep Christian piety, and of the most generous principles of philanthropy, it abounds with instructive and well-drawn parables, highly wrought pictures of living faith, happy delineations of the exemplary lives, patient zeal, and fervent charity of the martyrs of Christ on this continent. As a whole it clothed in language that will not in a single instance, bring a blush to the cheek of the most refined. It defends with vigorous hand the dependent, fragrant flower that blooms along the path of life for the health, comfort, and ornament of man, breathing with pathetic tenderness upon the chafed spirit of its frail and delicate casket, "the fair daughters of men," for ages subject to the play and sport or the caprice of her charlatan brother. It condemns in the strongest language the loose character and polygamous practices of the ancients referred to in the Bible:—

For . . . thus saith the Lord, . . . Behold, David and Solomon had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, . . . wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I, the Lord God will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God delighteth in the chastity of women. . . . For behold, I, the Lord, have seen the sorrow, and heard the mourning of the daughters of my people in the land of Jerusalem; . . . because of the wickedness and abominations of their husbands. And I will not suffer, saith the Lord of hosts, that the cries of the fair daughters of this people, which I have led out of the land of Jerusalem, shall come up unto me, against the men of my people, . . . for they shall not lead away captive, the daughters of my people, because of their tenderness, save I shall visit them with a sore curse, even unto destruction.—Book of Jacob 2: 6.

BIBLICAL EVIDENCES.

In examining the biblical evidences of the Book of Mormon it would be well for us to remember that prophecy without a corresponding historical fulfillment is fallacious and void. The prophecies of the Bible demand that in the time of the end, or the day of God's preparation, "a marvelous work and a wonder" shall come to pass. In the coming forth of this marvelous work and wonder, a "book" comes forth, without parallel in the past in its origin and in the evidences of its divinity, and by it another chain of evidences of the truthfulness of prophecy is completed. The Bible demands the coming forth of such a book as to matter, manner, and time.

The word of God is righteousness, salvation, and truth, and is to spring forth from the ground:—

Drop down, ye heavens, from above, and let the skies pour down righteousness: let the earth open, and let them bring forth salvation, and let righteousness spring up together; I the Lord have created it.—Isa. 45: 8.

Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.—Ps. 85: 11.

And of a people denominated "Ariel" (a lion), who were of the city where David dwelt (marginal reading of Harding's Royal Edition of the Bible) he saith:—

And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground, and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be, as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust.—Isa. 29: 4.

These prophecies of the Bible have their literal and historical fulfillment in the springing forth from the ground of the Book of Mormon as the word of the Lord to the seed of Ephraim. Wherever the principles of the doctrine of Christ are properly and authoritatively taught, we take it as a postulate that there the kingdom of God must necessarily exist, and possess, to a greater or less extent, the blessings and powers of the gospel according to the state of its progression or perfection, and may be in distinct and widely separated folds or bodies. Jesus says:—

Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold.—John 10: 16.

This cannot refer to churches or people, either Jew or Gentile, in the eastern continent, but refers to the seed of Israel, either on this continent, or in the North Country, as we find that Jesus himself in his day considered the kingdom under heaven in three localities at least, as represented by the leaven "which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal" (Luke 13: 2), the meal representing the people, the leaven the doctrine of Christ.

The law of the Lord to Ephraim may well be represented by the Book of Mormon:—

I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing.—Hosea 8: 12.

This portion of the seed of Ephraim can be located nowhere but in America—"the land shadowing with wings . . . beyond the rivers of Ethiopia." (Isa. 18; Gen. 49: 22-27; Deut. 33: 13-18.)

Prophecies of the old prophets were sometimes used by the apostles for the purpose of instruction or warning, and to show their application in a partial sense in their day, while their complete fulfillment may be reserved for the last days:—

But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel. And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh.—Acts 2: 16-18.

This prophecy of Joel's had no reference whatever to the pentecostal blessing in Peter's day, but referred directly to the pouring out of the Spirit in the last days; not only upon men, but upon beasts, birds, and fishes, or "all flesh."

A note of warning was sounded by Peter when he said:—

Beware therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in the prophets; behold, ye despisers, and wonder and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.—Acts 13: 40, 41.

This prophecy, like the one above, had no direct reference to the people living in Peter's day, but, conditionally, might have had a partial application to the disobedient and willfully ignorant at that time. It has a direct reference to the latter days, and to the time when "a marvelous work and a wonder" would come to pass, even the bringing forth of "a book" from the ground. And that such marvelous work and a wonder is the bringing forth of a book is evident from the prophecy referred to by Peter:—

Stay yourselves, and wonder, cry ye out, and cry: they are drunken but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed: and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned. . . . Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid. . . . Is it not yet a very little while [after the coming forth of this book], and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field [because of the early and latter rains which now visit the land of Palestine], and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest. And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.—Isa. 29: 9-18.

The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: and join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.—Ezek. 37: 15-19.

This prophecy is being fulfilled now, as we take the stick of Judah, the Bible, and the stick of Joseph or Ephraim, the Book of Mormon, in our hand; which we find to be one in precept and doctrine, and tend to the laying down of contentions concerning the word of God and the doctrine of Christ and is in our eyes a marvelous work and a wonder, and is necessarily the historical fulfillment of the prophecy of Ezekiel.

Altars found in the ruins of Mexico and Central America were constructed for the purpose of human sacrifice, and of such capacity as to admit of the sacrifices upon some of them of five hundred persons in one day, are evidence, in connection with the testimony of the identity of a portion of the seed of Ephraim in this land, that Ephraim made altars to sin:—

Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin.—Hosea 8: 11.

Besides the biblical evidences already adduced throughout this work another class of evidence in favor of the Book of Mormon, tending in no small way to establish the divinity of its origin and preservation, may be found in the antiquarian and archæological researches and discoveries that have been made in the western world at times subsequent to the publication of the book in 1830, from the Andes to the Great lakes, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, all of which attest, in unmistakable terms, the previous existence of a vast and extended civilization; and the Book of Mormon coming forth at a time when these antiquities were scarcely thought of and known only to a very limited extent, boldly committed itself with the record of a mighty people once inhabiting this country, who had made their way hither from the East, from Egypt and Assyria, who had built cities and temples and had graven monuments of stone, and who had journeyed northward and southward along the western seas.

Numerous works of antiquity and travel have been published; among others, Catherwood and Stephens, in two large volumes, copiously illustrated with copies of temples, obelisks, and monuments in Central America, covered with hieroglyphic and other writings. Josiah Priest's Antiquities; Emerson and Sage's Travels; Lieutenant Beal's reports; Baldwin's Ancient America, and a host of other productions, all bearing on the same subject; which, taken in connection with the facts and locations given in the Book of Mormon before any of these discoveries were made, while they do surround the book with an amount and kind of evidence to prove the divinity of its origin as does not exist in favor of any other book, either ancient or modern, should at once fasten on the thoughtful candid mind the conviction that the hand that held it was divine.

Thus we have given you a mere synopsis of the evidences of the divinity of this book. To attempt to fully develop all or either of the subjects would be foreign to the purpose and would entail the writing of many volumes. We have endeavored to point out the ways only in which the directors lead, leaving the discussion of the subjects, together with the investigation of the book, in connection with its companion, the stick of Judah, the Bible, to all who may take sufficient interest to "know whether these things be so," or who may desire to "prove all things" and to "hold fast that which is good;" who may seek for "a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens;" and all those who may think they are "the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus;" and all others who may read these pages, or may desire to know "the truth as it is in Christ." And we commend you to the grace, mercy, and favor of Him who "said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain." (Isaiah 45: 19.)

Ireland has had a year of unexampled prosperity, if the deposits in banks are any indication, the increase in those in joint stock banks being over $6,000,000, and in savings banks also over $6,000,000. The traffic receipts on the Irish railroads, too, were the largest on record.

PROVING DIVINE AUTHORITY.

IN a letter written from Metz, Steuben County, Indiana, Elders John H. Stout and U. G. Miller makes this request:—

"Will you please answer the following through the News: Who ordained President Brigham Young to the office of President of the Church, and also the date of the organization? The Reorganized ministers are making the statement that he never was ordained, and that the people never made the claim that he was. No doubt it will be of use to others of the elders as well as ourselves."

For the information of those who send the inquiry, we will state that the event referred to is carefully recorded in church history, and has been published frequently. President Brigham Young was installed as the President of the Church, in the quorum of the First Presidency, by the Council of the Apostles, on December 5, 1847. Not a ceremony necessary to the performance of that solemn duty was omitted—everything was done in perfect order, and by the united voice of the Twelve. President Young had been President of the Church in his position as President of the presiding quorum, the Twelve Apostles, for more than three years previous to the date given, or ever since the martyrdom of the Prophet Joseph. When, on the date mentioned, President Young had been duly installed as the chief in the First Presidency, he selected Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards as first and second counselors respectively, and they were also duly set apart, being sustained by the unanimous vote of the Twelve. In their case, as with President Young, no ceremony was omitted.

As to the statements of the parties referred to, and others of a similarly misrepresentative nature, all the elders should have learned by this time that they are characteristic of such individuals. Not all the representatives of the Reorganized Church indulge in such inaccuracies, many of them being highminded, honorable people; but there are some in that denomination, as in others, who do not pursue a reputable course. We have this advice to offer to the elders respecting such: Treat them precisely as similar characters in other sectarian denominations are treated, as that is their true position.

With regard to the authority of President Young or any others of the Twelve called by the Lord through the Prophet Joseph Smith to the holy apostleship, or any of their successors, or of the church, we would remind the elders of the counsel of the First Presidency in this respect. Such authority is not a subject on which there is any room for doubt, hence no occasion exists for discussion thereon by the elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The test of such divine authority is open to all individuals of all sects—by doing the will of the Father and thereby receiving a testimony of the truth. The elders present the opportunity for applying that test in the doctrine they preach and the ordinances they perform, and the way is open to every individual who will obey the word of God as taught in Scripture to ascertain the truth of the elders' message, that the gospel of Christ has been restored to earth preparatory for the hour of God's judgment, just as the revelation given to St. John on the isle of Patmos foretold.

As for all sects and denominations outside of the church which the Lord Jesus has established in this age, if any representatives thereof have doubts of their own authority or divinity and wish to discuss the same in a proper, dignified manner, with a view to ascertaining the truth, that is their business; and in the matter of any accommodation they may be accorded, all of these denominations, the Reorganization included, stand on precisely the same platform. The question of authority in those sects may be, under some circumstances and between some individuals, a matter of friendly discussion, without invoking ill feelings. But as to the Church which was organized by divine command and authority April 6, 1830, and which has continued and will continue in an organized state, and for the present has the chief abiding place of its members in the Rocky Mountain valleys, there is no room for disputation with anyone by its Elders over its authority. Its Elders know they possess it, and the means of proof of that authority has been indicated by the Lord; viz.: that those who do the will of the Father shall receive a testimony from Him. This is for all people and man cannot offer a superior test to that which the Lord has provided. The missionaries have no time, because there is no occasion, to waste in discussing the authority of the church. They present the message and authority of divinely commissioned servants of the Lord, and if any individuals feel to question that calling in a friendly way or otherwise, let them be referred to the test we have pointed out as the way to learn the truth. There is no need for fear that the Lord will not care for his own. He will do his part, not requiring his servants to contend against any church; but that they contend earnestly for the faith delivered to the saints, by preaching the doctrine of Christ and giving the people full opportunity to exercise, in an intelligent manner, their agency in receiving the same.

I find the above evasive article in the Deseret News (daily) for October 5, and thought it might be well to give exactly what the history does say upon the question. Surely there does come some "baffling questions" to the leaders of the Utah Church.

The reader will notice that the question is entirely ignored as to who ordained Brigham Young to the office of President of the church and a strong effort is made to hush up any further inquiry upon the matter with the statement to "do the will of the Father and you shall know," etc.

But what shall the earnest seeker after truth do when the teachings of these men, who claim to represent Christ, do not agree with his teachings as found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants? I am willing to do the will of the Father and trust to him to give me the witness, but I am not one to expect him to give his sanction to something that is manifestly contrary to his will; neither do I believe he will recognize the authority of anyone who teaches contrary to his law.

The statement of the writer of the above that "President Brigham Young was installed as the President of the Church, in the Quorum of the First Presidency, by the Council of the Apostles on December 5, 1847, is misleading; because the facts are that the Quorum of Twelve Apostles was not there at that time. Lyman Wight, William Smith, and John E. Page did not leave Nauvoo with the others of the apostles. Parley P. Pratt and John Taylor were in the Great Salt Lake Valley. (See Millennial Star, vol. 10, page 43.) I quote the language used:—

Our beloved apostles P. P. Pratt and J. Taylor are in the Great Basin, while the other apostles are at Council Bluffs, except Elder Hyde, who is twenty-five miles below, at Hyde Park.

It would have been impossible for the statement to be true as quoted above. The writer goes on to state that Brigham selected as his counselors H. C. Kimball and Willard Richards, "and they were also set apart, being sustained by the unanimous vote of the Twelve." Taking out the three that did not leave Nauvoo with them, and then the two that were in the "Great Basin," and then the three that were taken out to form a First Presidency, only four are left to do business for the whole, and as the law says that only a majority could form a quorum, how can the writer of the above article say that they were sustained by the unanimous vote of the Twelve? Even allowing the legality of the election and ordination of Amasa Lyman, there could have been only five to form a quorum. Brigham Young said, April 7, 1852:—

A person was mentioned to-day who did not believe that Brigham Young was a Prophet, Seer, and Revelator. I wish to ask every member of this whole community, if they ever heard him profess to be a Prophet, Seer, and Revelator, as Joseph Smith was? . . . Who ordained me to be First President of this church on earth? I answer, it is the choice of this people, and that is sufficient.—Millennial Star, vol. 16, p. 442.

Surely the elders of the church in Utah are easily satisfied if they are content with the answers given to their questions in the above article. If the facts of the election and ordination of Brigham Young to the office of First President, have so frequently been published, it would have been interesting to know where; but I find nothing in regard to that transaction, except the above, aside from the action taken at Council Bluffs on December 24, 1847, and found in Millennial Star, volume 10, page 114. And if the above statement be true, that he was elected and installed First President on December 5, 1847, by the four or five apostles present, then there was some underhanded work done; and snap judgment was taken on the church when he was presented on December 24, when there was only one thousand present out of a possible two hundred thousand.

Brigham stated in a letter to Orson Spencer, dated January 23, 1847:—

At this conference we suggested to the brethren the propriety of organizing the church with a First Presidency and a Patriarch, as hinted at in our General Epistle, and the expediency of such a move at this time was so clearly seen by the brethren, that they hailed it as an action which the state of the work at present demanded, and as a means to liberate the hands of of the Quorum of the Twelve, who now feel at liberty to go abroad and herald the truth to the ends of the earth, and build up the kingdom in all the world. Accordingly Brigham Young was nominated to be the First President of the Church, and he nominated Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards to be his two counselors, which nominations were seconded and carried without a dissentient voice.—Millennial Star, vol. 10, p. 114.

Great excitement prevails throughout the world to know "Who shall be the successor of Joseph Smith?"

In reply, we say, Be patient, be patient a little, till the proper time comes, and we will tell you all. "Great wheels move slow." At present, we can say that a special conference of the church was held in Nauvoo on the 8th ult., and it was carried without a dissenting voice, that the "Twelve" should preside over the whole church, and when any alteration in the Presidency shall be required, seasonable notice will be given.

The italics at the close of the quotation are mine.

And yet, after this had been given out to the church to lull them into quietness, and to make them believe that they would be consulted in the matter, a few of the apostles met together on the 5th of December, 1847, and chose a First Presidency secretly, and then on the 23d of December, 1847, they wrote a general epistle to the church abroad, in which the hint referred to by President Young, is found in the following words, "and we now, having it in contemplation soon to re-organize the church according to the original pattern, with a First Presidency and Patriarch." This epistle will be found in Millennial Star, vol. 10, pages 81-88.

The next day (December 24) the organization was effected. But already, eighteen days before the epistle was written, the four or five of the Twelve had effected the organization of the Presidency, then the hint of an organization was given out to soon be made, and before the ink was fairly dry the organization took place. No wonder the authorities of the Utah Church do not like to have their authority discussed. Such a proceeding in political matters would be called the lowest kind of wire pulling.

Keep on asking questions, brethren, but do not be satisfied by such evasive answers as given in the article published above. Insist on a straightforward answer and statement of the truth.

Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord.—Isaiah 1:18.

Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.—Isaiah 41:21.

Conference Minutes.

EASTERN DISTRICT, SOUTH WALES.

Conference held, October 3 and 4, 1896, in the Porth town hall, Rhondda Valley; called to order by A. N. Bishop, Bro. Caffall being chosen to preside over the business sessions. Minutes of last conference read and approved. Bro. Caffall reported his labors in the district. The following elders reported in person: A. N. Bishop, Thomas Gould, Thomas Griffiths, John Jones, John O. Evans, J. D. Jenkins; Priests Thomas Jones, David Edmunds, Evan Lewis, John Salathiel, David Morris, John J. Jenkins; Teacher W. P. Cox; Deacon John Thomas. The following recommendations from the Twynwydd branch were referred to Bro. Caffall and the officers of said branch; namely, that Bro. Owen J. Williams be ordained to the office of priest, and Bro. William T. Little to the office of teacher. The following recommendations were presented from the Penygraig branch; viz., that Bro. W. J.

Cox be ordained a priest. This case was referred to the missionary in charge. It was further recommended by the Penygraig branch that Bro. John G. Jenkins be ordained an elder. This met the approval of the conference, and it was ordered that he be ordained during the conference sessions. Bishop's agent's report: In hand March 1, £7, 9, 6; due church £5; received £4, 13, 1; total £17, 2, 7; paid out £3, 5, 7½; due church October 2, 1896, £13, 16, 11½. Report audited and found correct. Bro. John Jenkins, of the Penygraig branch, desired his license of the conference. This matter was referred to the officers of said branch and the missionary in charge. The following resolutions were proposed by A. N. Bishop, and seconded by John Jones, and supported by John O. Evans, John Jenkins, J. D. Jenkins, and Thomas Griffiths: "Firstly, Believing the time has arrived when the word of the Lord concerning the use of tobacco and strong drinks can be enforced in our district, be it resolved that we ordain no one to any office in this district that is addicted in any manner to the use of tobacco or intoxicating drinks. And be it further resolved that we will not sustain any existing officer of this district who will persist in using tobacco or intoxicating drinks one month after the passing of this resolution. And we would further strongly urge the officers of this district not to visit in any capacity public houses where intoxicating drinks are sold, as we are of the opinion that it militates against the character of the one that does so, and brings reproach upon the church. And as it is our intention in the summer of 1897, God being willing, to preach the gospel upon the highways in the different localities where the saints reside. Hence, we adopt these means to cleanse the church, and in this our effort for good we ask the coöperation of all the officers and members of the whole district." These resolutions were unanimously adopted. It was further ordered that the district secretary send a copy of them to the secretary of each branch in the district. Moved by T. Jones that the minutes now on the record referring to one penny per week towards district fund be expunged; motion lost. The following amendment was presented by Bro. Caffall and seconded by T. Griffiths: Resolved that we reaffirm the resolution found on the record recommending the saints to contribute one penny per week to the district fund; and further, that we recommend each branch to take up a collection on the first Sunday in each month, for free-will offering, and forward same to Bishop's agent, and a collection every second Sunday for the district fund, and forward it to the district treasurer. This met the approval of the conference, and was carried unanimously. The district treasurer presented his report. The same was audited by Brn. Jones, Lewis, and Jenkins, and found correct. The thanks of the conference was due to the brethren and sisters of the Penygraig branch for the kind manner in which they entertained the visiting saints, there being over fifty present to take meals between the meetings, and they were helped considerably by those who were not in the church.

At nine a. m. on Sunday morning prayer and testimony meeting in charge of Elders Thomas Griffiths and A. N. Bishop. A very peaceable and profitable time was spent. At 10:30 a. m. preaching by Elder James Caffall on the duty of the officers of the church, and of elders in particular. At 1:30 p. m. prayer and testimony meeting in charge of A. N. Bishop and J. D. Jenkins. The sacrament was also administered, and a happy time enjoyed, and Bro. John G. Jenkins was ordained an elder under the hands of Brn. Caffall and Bishop. At six p. m. preaching by Bro. J. D. Jenkins in Welsh, and Bro. Caffall in English. The hall was crowded, and the two brethren acquitted themselves well. The singing during conference was in charge of Brn. D. Edmunds and W. J. Cox, and Bro. John Salathiel brought his organ some miles to the hall and presided over the same during conference, which helped us in our song service very much. The authorities of the church in America were upheld, and Bro. Caffall as president of the European mission, and A. N. Bishop as president of the district, with all district and branch officials. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president. Thus closed the most peaceful conference ever held in the Eastern district.

Signed, A. N. BISHOP, Pres.
MORONI BISHOP, Sec.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Conference convened at Fall River, October 10, F. M. Sheehy in chair, M. C. Fisher clerk. Reports: Elders F. M. Sheehy, G. H. Gates, C. A. Coombs, J. B. Pierce, N. R. Nickerson, G. S. Yerrington, F. O. Coombs, John Smith, William Bradbury, John Gilbert, R. Bullard, H. J. Davison; Priests F. H. Moore, A. B. Pierce, D. T. Shaw, T. H. Andrews; Deacons W. F. Frost and M. Gondolf. District clerk recommended to investigate the membership of Sadie French to find if she ever united with any branch of the church. New Bedford branch recommended William Talbot for ordination to office of priest, which was referred to a committee of all elders of conference. Said committee later approved the ordination and recommended same to conference. Next session of conference to be held at Dennisport, Massachusetts, second Saturday in February, 1897. A resolution was passed asking the president of each branch in district to solicit fifteen cents from each member of said branch, same to be used for purpose of purchasing a new district tent. Money to be forwarded to Richard Bullard, Arlington Heights, Massachusetts, district treasurer. Bishop's agent, Richard Bullard, reported with items for the collections and expenditures of moneys since February, 1896, totals collected from each branch as follows: Boston $370.81, Plainville $167.70, Providence $140.70, New Bedford $117.42, Little Compton $34.00, Plymouth $35.47, Fall River $29.43, Brockton $21.93, Dennisport $14.70, Cranston $4.00; total $936.16. Richard Bullard reported as district treasurer as follows: Receipts $101.62, expenditures $97; on hand $4.62. Officers elected: F. M. Sheehy president, F. O. Coombs vice president, M. C.

Fisher, clerk, A. B. Pierce assistant clerk, R. Bullard Bishop's agent and district treasurer. Free contributions during session of conference were sufficient to clear the debt on Fall River chapel. John Smith was appointed to labor in Dennisport branch. On Sunday, the 11th, a prayer service convened at nine holding till twelve o'clock. A spiritual feast was had, the gifts being manifest in prophecy and tongues. Preaching by H. J. Davison and F. M. Sheehy. Branches reported as follows: Boston 143, Little Compton 17, Providence 211, Cranston 39, Fall River 125, New Bedford 24, Plainville 88, North Plymouth 29, Brockton 35; all reporting except Dennisport branch; totals showing net gain of 26.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA.

Convened with Palmyra branch, at 9:30 a. m., October 19, 1896, J. W. Waldsmith chairman, J. L. Diefendorf secretary. Branch reports: Blue River 180; gain 14. Nebraska City 138. Palmyra branch 38; Hebron 26. Elders reporting: W. E. Peak, T. Nutt, J. W. Waldsmith, W. M. Self, P. C. Peterson, H. Fields, J. Thompson, T. Blodgett; Priests S. Broliar, R. O. Self, J. H. Drury, H. C. Freming, E. D. Briggs, F. L. Tucker. Bishop's agent, J. W. Waldsmith, reported: Receipts $82.30; expenditures $78.62; balance on hand $3 68. The conference adopted the following rules to govern representation in conference: "1. All members of the district in good standing shall have a voice and vote in all business when present. 2. Each branch may elect a delegate for every six members or fraction thereof to represent those who are not present. 3. All members in good standing are eligible to the position of a delegate." There being no priesthood bearing members in the Lincoln branch, the conference saw fit to disorganize it. All missionaries in and in charge of the district were sustained. Elder J. W. Waldsmith, district president and Bishop's agent, was sustained in his office. E. D. Briggs was elected secretary. Adjourned to meet at Nebraska City on the Sunday and Monday nearest the full moon in February, 1897.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference held at Jonesport, August 29 and 30; S. O. Foss in the chair, J. D. Wilson clerk. Reports of all the branches presented and accepted. Committee, S. O. Foss, reported that he has corresponded with Western Maine and they thought it advisable to establish a dividing line between the two districts and that it should start from Frenchman's Bay and follow the Narraguagus River, north thence through to Aroostook. It was referred to Elder Kelley for his indorsement. Ministry reporting: Elders S. O. Foss, J. S. Walker, A. W. Kelley, U. W. Greene, F. M. Sheehy, and I. M. Smith; Priests J. N. Ames and U. W. Kelley; Teacher B. F. Foss; Deacon J. J. McKeown. A letter was presented and read by U. W. Greene from W. H. Kelley, encouraging the saints to be faithful in the work of the Master. Resolved that all reports be presented to the clerk in writing to be read at the following conference. Bishop's agent's report presented, examined, and reported correct. S. O. Foss was sustained president, J. D. Wilson clerk. Preaching by U. W. Greene, F. M. Sheehy, and I. M. Smith. Adjourned to meet at Indian River at the call of the president.

FLORIDA.

Conference convened at Hinote branch, September 26, Edward Powell presiding. No branch reports. Ministry reporting: D. E. Tucker, J. D. Erwin, S. D. Allen, J. N. Hawkins; Edward Powell; Priests J. M. Baggerly, C. I. Carpenter, V. S. Jernigan. Bishop's agent reported: On hand at last conference 31 cents, received since $26, paid out 31 cents, on hand $26. Edward Powell sustained president, V. S. Jernigan secretary. Preaching by D. E. Tucker and J. D. Erwin, assisted by S. D. Allen, J. N. Hawkins, and C. I. Carpenter. Adjourned to meet at Greenwood branch, December 19.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Independence district Sunday school association will meet in convention at ten o'clock, Friday, November 6, at Lees Summit, Missouri. The morning session will be devoted to a discussion of the subject of teachers' meetings both as to its needs and necessities as well as the overcoming of obstacles in attending such meetings. The subject will be introduced by a paper from Cole Moxon, of Independence, the afternoon session will be devoted to business and a discussion of interesting topics of Sunday school work, the evening session will include "Teachers and Teaching" led by W. N. Robinson, and the other features will be musical selections and recitations by the Lees Summit Sunday school.

ANNA MURPHY, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

NOTICES.

The new Latter Day Saints' church, near Centerville, Wayne County, West Virginia, will be dedicated Sunday, November 8, 1896, at eleven a. m., by Bro. L. R. Devore, of Jackson County, Ohio, assisted by Bro. D. L. Shinn, of Harrison County, West Virginia. All the ministry and others that can attend are cordially invited to be present. All those coming by rail come to Wayne, West Virginia, via Kenova, West Virginia, where they will be met by conveyance if they will notify Elder J. W. Trout, of Wayne, West Virginia, or W. R. Odell, of Centerville, Wayne County, West Virginia. In bonds, W. R. ODELL.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Independence district will convene at 10:30 a. m., Saturday, November 7, at Lee's Summit, Missouri. We hope that all branches will report, also all elders and priests. Send all reports to Arthur Allen, 2210, Wabash Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, not later than the fifth of November.

ARTHUR ALLEN, Sec.

The Northwest Kansas district conference will meet with the Goshen branch, November 14 and 15. We earnestly desire the attendance of all the saints in the district, that the business may be properly transacted.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayures of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush..25 cts.
Full cloth, durable binding....35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

HEBREW INFLUENCE ON OTHER RACES AND RELIGIONS.

A GREAT German historian asserts that the noblest developments of human nature have come from Semitic seed implanted in Aryan ground. Lessing says that the mission of the Jews is one of moral and mental elevation. Says a writer in the Hospital (July 18) in an article on this subject:—

'It is this fact that, apart from all theological controversy and discussion, renders the history of the Hebrew race one of abiding interest and importance for all other races of mankind. Our own great historian Gibbon, whose work has been described as the grand bridge over which all future students and readers of history will pass from the ancient into the modern world, in one of the earliest chapters of his great work says Judea and Phenicia will never be forgotten, for from the one the world received its religion, from the other its letters, which have been the foundation of its literature. Another most significant fact is, that the Jews alone of all the most ancient nations survive to this day, the same people, with the same religion and the same race, as those who emigrated from Egypt thousands of years ago to escape from the tyranny of the Pharaohs. In one of the very earliest chapters of the Bible it is stated that Noah, when prophesying the future destiny of his sons, said, 'God shall enlarge Japhet, and he shall dwell in tents of Shem.' The usual interpretation of this text is understood to be that Japhet shall dwell in the tents of Shem; but the old Hebrew version is, that it is intended to convey the meaning that God Himself shall dwell in the tents of Shem. We quote this familiar text, as it seems to foreshadow in prophecy the great gulf and different characteristics which, up to the present day, have separated the Jewish and the gentile world. Later on it is said that Abraham was told that 'in his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed.' These old texts are worthy of the closest study, as they still exercise a most potent influence over all the modern Mohammedan world, and in spite of the so-called 'higher criticism' over a very great part of the modern Christian world also. When we come to the story of the Exodus, and the promulgation of the Mosaic law, we feel somewhat more in touch with the modern civilization over which it has exerted so great an influence. Its sanitary enactments have been acknowledged to be thoroughly sound by the greatest of modern authorities, and it contains the germs of progress from which it may be said that many of the most important changes in modern legislation have arisen. To take only one instance as an example. In Lev. 25, when the ceremonies of the Jubilee year are described, it is ordained that every man shall be returned unto his possessions and unto his family. This is the most ancient of all records which aims a blow at slavery, which 'peculiar' institution, as it has been called, is, perhaps, of all others the one which most sharply divides the social conceptions of the ancient and the modern world."

After noting the fall of Jewish influence during the Middle Ages, the author reminds us of its renewed rise in modern times, and goes on to say:—

"The Jewish race, through their peculiar combination of qualities, may yet be destined to play a great part in the evolution of sociological ideas in the future. They represent the one Eastern nation that is in constant and immediate touch with every part of the West. While they have preserved their own nationality in a way and under such difficulties, as have affected no other nation in history, they have still to a very great extent become mixed up with the social life of every other nation with any pretense to civilization upon the face of the earth. And when to this fact is added the fact that they have come down from the earliest antiquity as an unmixed race, if any credence is to be given to the theory of heredity, we cannot but believe that their influence will be felt in every future development of sociology to a very marked degree."—Literary Digest.

DISCUSS LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

Mail and Express:—A question that is rapidly forcing itself to the front in religious circles is the location of the lost tribes of Israel. In view of the prophecies that when the children of the house of Judea, or Jews, return to Palestine they are to be accompanied by their brethren of the house of Israel, whose identity among the nations has remained so long undiscovered, the subject is intensely interesting alike to Jews and Christians.

For many years devout minds have been engaged in investigations that have yielded continuous streams of light from sacred and secular history, chronology, astronomy, and numerous other sources. Scores of men eminent in the realms of religious, scientific, historical, ethnological, and philological research have pursued their inquiries unceasingly, and claim at last to have solved the mystery in the discovery that the Anglo Saxon race possess all the distinguishing marks whereby the lost tribes are to be finally recognized.

Prof. C. Piazzzi Smyth, late Astronomer Royal for Scotland, in reviewing a book by Prof. C. A. L. Totten, United States army, an enthusiastic and voluminous writer on the subject, expresses himself as follows:—

“What is the effect of so unexpected a discovery on the Bible itself? It is twofold. First, it causes us to behold and acknowledge therein the accomplishment of a true miracle, and of the mightiest kind through the ages, consummated in our own days. And, second, it causes the Bible to become for the Neo-Israelitic Anglo Saxon of America and Great Britain with her colonies, as it was for the tribes of Israel of old, an infallible book for their national guidance in politics, as well as a collection of inspired instructions for each individual soul in religion.”

Naturally, the supposed discovery of a truth so long hidden from theological eyes elicits considerable criticism from conservative expositors of the Scriptures; but no earnest seeker after light can afford to treat with disdain the opinions of devout and scholarly men, except at the risk of placing themselves in the category of those possessing the pharisaical spirit. The exponents of this belief complain that they do not receive fair treatment at the hands of the religious press. Whether this complaint be just or not, truth itself must eventually be victorious and can afford to patiently await the issue.

The faith of the Christian is in no degree threatened by the controversy, as evangelical activity is increased by this new testimony to the faithfulness of Jehovah to his promises, while to the loyal Jew the discovery is pregnant with an early fulfillment of the glorious hopes that have sustained him through long centuries of gloom and disaster. Briefly stated the facts are as follows:—

The house of Israel was banished to Assyria about 721 B. C.; the house of Judah to Babylon about 100 years later. The house of Judah returned to Palestine under Ezra and Nehemiah after seventy years of captivity, but the ten-tribed house of Israel never returned. According to numerous prophecies they were to become Lo-Ammi (not my people), gentilized, outcast, divorced, and known under another name. On the other hand all the great prophets predict that while in the land of their dispersion they were to be recovenanted and become the sons of the living God—a strong nation and chief of the nations—in the isles of the sea and the isles far off—in the north and west—possessing the gates of their enemies, and to be among the nations in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest. All of which promises undoubtedly refer to the ten-tribed or lost house of Israel, and not to the house of Judah. It is contended by the exponents of this supposed discovery that there is no possibility of the fulfillment of these prophecies if they do not refer to the English-speaking people.

At any rate, it is a subject replete with international interest, and should be accorded a dignified discussion and candid consideration.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

That inspiration is nothing without work. That a pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it.

That there is no limit to the age at which a man may make a fool of himself.

That a thing is never too often repeated which is never sufficiently learned.

That the cat which is always washing itself before the fire has no time to go rattling.

That there is a vast difference between being an important personage and a self-important one.

That a silver dollar makes more noise than a five dollar bill when it is dropped into a contribution box.

That when thought does not deserve a neat dress it is well to keep it in some dark closet in your own brain.

That he who blows the coal in quarrels has nothing to do with has no right to complain if the sparks fly in his face.

Judge Remy once boasted that he himself had been the means of putting to death in sixteen years 800 witches. Luther states that 7,000 witches were burned at Treves; 600 by a single Bishop of Bamberg; 800 in a single year in the bishopric of Watzburg; 1,000 in the Providence of Como; 400 at Toulouse at a single execution; 500 at Geneva in three months; and 48 at Sweden.

The number of mountain railways in the world in 1895 was as follows: Switzerland, 17; Germany, 14; Austria, 10; Italy, 4; France, 4; while four were distributed between Spain, Portugal, Greece, and Madeira. In Asia there were three, one in Sumatra, one in Japan, and one in Syria. In North America there were three, in Central America one, and in South America four.

Latest statistics show that there are at present seventeen Roman Catholic diocesan Bishops in England and Wales and seven in Scotland, in addition to one Archbishop and two Bishops of titular sees. The total number of priests in Great Britain is 3,014 and these serve 1,789 churches and missions. The population of the United Kingdom from the Roman Catholic standpoint is about 5, 800,000

It is stated that since trees have been extensively planted in Lower California the rainfall of the region has become more uniform and favorable to agriculture. But there are other parts of the State in which the saw-mills are wiping out the forests and planting the desert in the midst of nature's bounties.

The estimates of the yield of the potato crop in Great Britain show that on 533,000 acres a crop of 3,053,005 tons was secured, against an almost exactly similar quantity produced on much larger acreage—753,000 acres—in Ireland.

Another legacy of 100,000 francs has been left to the French Academy, the income of which must be awarded to authors of moral works.

The knowledge which we crave and work for, which we look for and find, which we think or dig out for ourselves, which we rejoice in as a newly found treasure—that is the knowledge, be it small or great, that is worth having. It is like the food for which we hunger—it gives us fresh power and fuller life, matters far less even what this knowledge is than the way in which it was gained. The most systematic and well-prepared course of study worried through by a student whose only care is that he may get his diploma is of far less value to him or to the world than the vital thought of the young mechanic who, anxious to master the secrets of his trade, patiently studies its details, discovers its principles, and infuses into it his fresh and living force, perhaps in the form of some new invention, or perhaps in a more skillful touch or a more delicate finish than it has yet received.—N. Y. Ledger.

In a communication to “Newspaperdom” Mr. Cameron, of the London, Ont., Advertiser, defines the ideal newspaper as one in which the history of the previous twenty-four hours is presented fairly, picturesquely and interpretively, and he pointedly inquires, “Does not the Chicago Times-Herald, under H. H. Kohlsaat, carry out this plan and specification?”

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the “three books,” the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

GRACELAND.

GRACELAND COLLEGE is nearing completion, and soon students will be within its walls. We call attention to it again, because it is needful to do so. The election will soon be over, and the policies of the national government determined upon for another four years (it is now October 31) and the time of the people be released from the strain of the campaign, when the saints will have a chance to think about something besides "tariff revision," "public finance," "the gold standard," "bimetallism," "sixteen to one," "free silver," "demonetization," and all the other political issues—fads and otherwise—and pay attention to what things are important to us as a people in the immediate future. The church must rise to its privileges and proper position as an educator; and to do this, all necessary measures, the support of the college, is included. Read the revelations in Book of Covenants and notice how the saints were instructed to seek for knowledge, of men, things, nations, governments, things on the earth, in the earth, and under the earth, the heavens and all other things open to human research.

"BEYOND THE GRAVE."

"THE SOUL WAITS AND GROWS IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE."

THE following interesting article appeared in an issue of the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Dispatch, from the pen of George Hodges. It serves to show that men are broadening the range of their religious thinking and breaking away from the narrow limits of the creeds:—

There is no map in the Bible of the world beyond the grave. We are told distinctly that there is a world beyond the grave. The central saint and hero of the Bible is One who, being dead, came back alive out of the grave to make that absolutely sure. After death is life. But where, and how?

These are questions which we cannot but ask; but we get no satisfying answers. The only answers which approach satisfaction are to be read in the pages of the Bible. Everything else, all religion, all poetry, all philosophy beside, is only guesswork. The Bible men are the great spiritual masters. God made them his messengers in the realm of spiritual truth. If anybody can tell us, these men can to whom God spoke. But they tell us very little.

Partly, perhaps, because we do not need to know. The essential purpose if the Bible in its relation to human life is to teach us how to live to-day. When to-morrow comes, when the "morrow of death" comes, and we need new light along an unknown path, we will get it. God will give it. But for the present we can see the daily way plain enough to walk in it, and, more than that, we do not need to know. Anyhow, much more than that God has not told us.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE OTHER LIFE.

Perhaps, also, we get no answer to our questions because we could not understand the answers if we got them. The conditions of the other life may be as impossible to our understanding as the language of the higher mathematics is to a child. Even the few sentences in which the truths of the other world are stated in the Bible are put in the form of symbol. White thrones and open books and pearly gates and golden streets—these are but the faint shadows of great mysteries. The world beyond is still the undiscovered country.

But we crave knowledge of that other life. Part of our family lives on the other side of those celestial boundaries. We cannot help looking with longing and wondering eyes in that direction, and asking questions. Every word which the great spiritual masters have spoken upon these hidden matters is of interest to us.

Thus we take the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. It was not spoken, indeed, as a special revelation of the life to come; that was not its purpose. It was directed straight against certain evils of the life which now is. Our Lord was thinking of the avaricious, selfish, and unbrotherly Pharisees. They loved money more than they loved men. So long as they were attired in purple and fine linen, it mattered not how many beggars full of sores lay in the street without. Jesus wanted to show them what a great surprise lay in store for them in the "first five minutes after death." That was why he told this story. But that is not the most interesting about it to us. The gates are open into the world beyond, and we look through. That is what we care for most.

WHAT BECOMES OF THE SOUL.

Immediately after death is the point of time in the parable. The general judgment at the last day, the final amen to all things earthly, has not come yet. We are still down here on this familiar planet, we and the rich man's brothers, hurrying about in pursuit of our daily business, intent on getting all the money and all the pleasure that we can, not thinking much about things spiritual and eternal, paying small heed to Moses and the prophets; while over in the world unseen is being recited this singular and significant dialogue.

They are both new-comers, the rich man and Lazarus, dead but a day, only a day old in the new life. At once we ask our eager question: On the day after death, where is the soul? Does the soul of the saint go straight to heaven? Does the sinner's soul go direct to hell? Or do they both wait in some general place of departed spirits until the general judgment? Is there a place between?

We begin to get an answer to the question when we discover in the parable that the rich man and Lazarus are both alike in hell. The distinction between the two is that the rich man is in torments, while Lazarus is in Abraham's bosom, and that a deep cleft of separation divides the one from the other. The rich man wakes up in hell, and behold the flames of torment are around him, while the poor man is protected by the arms of the prophet; but they are both in hell. Then we remember that our Lord himself, after his death upon the cross, descended into hell.

In the opinion of St. Peter there was nothing unusual nor remarkable about that. The wonder was not that he descended into hell, but that he came out again. To go into hell seems to have been accounted by the apostle to be the natural course of things with every human being. David had said in one of his psalms that his soul would not be left in hell, but his soul was left, the preacher said, and consequently he must have been thinking of some one else; that is, of Christ."

DIFFERENT MEANINGS OF "HELL."

The apostolic argument thus takes for granted that the natural destiny of the soul of man is to be left in hell. When the creed declares that Christ descended into hell the purpose is not to set that forth as a singular fact. The creed is declaring the absolute reality of the death of Christ. He died and his body was buried and his soul went into hell, just like anybody else's body and soul. But his soul was not left in hell, neither did his body see corruption. That was the only strange and wonderful thing about it.

Evidently this is not the hell of ordinary speech. In the original languages of the Bible, when we go to them to find the word which is translated "hell," we find three words, one in the Old Testament and two in the New. The Old Testament word is "sheol;"

the New Testament words are "hades and gehenna."

Gehenna means the Valley of Hinnom. It was a dark glen beside Jerusalem, where in the evil days of King Abaz the people of that city had offered their children to be burned with fire in sacrifice of Moloch. When the reformation came and men were ashamed even of the memory of that hideous idolatry, the valley was given over to pollution. It was made the dumping ground of Jerusalem. Here they carted the dead bodies of animals and malefactors. Here the garbage wagons deposited their loads of refuse.

In the midst of the foul valley they kept a continual fire burning to consume these ghastly and malodorous contributions.

It was a place of horror, given up to unclean dogs and ghosts and creeping things and poisonous smoke. It became the symbol of all that was loathsome; even of that place of unknown and eternal dread, "where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." The word "gehenna" meant what we mean by hell to-day.

But "sheol" and "hades" did not mean that. The word sheol occurs sixty-two times in the Old Testament. Thirty-one times it is translated "hell," and the other thirty-one times "the grave."

MEANS THE UNSEEN WORLD.

There is an association of dread about the words, but no association of punishment. At the end of life lies sheol, hades, hell, death, the grave, the unseen world. The last meaning is the widest. That is what the Greeks meant by hades. That is what Jacob meant when he expected to meet his son there, his beloved son whom he accounted dead. That is what Josephus meant when he described the soul of Samuel in the story of the witch of Eador, as ascending out of hades. That is what St. Peter meant when he declared that the soul of Christ had not been left in hades. That is what Jesus meant when he pictured Dives and Lazarus and Abraham, all in hades.

The word "hell" in the parable means the unseen world. It does not mean hell, in our sense, any more than "Abraham's bosom" means heaven. The bad are in misery, but it is not the misery of hell; the good are in bliss, but it is not the bliss of heaven. This is the place of departed spirits; it is the intermediate state.

For, putting aside all these questions about words and definitions, we need but remember that two conditions are declared in Holy Scripture to precede heaven. One is a general judgment, the other is complete sanctification.

But the general judgment is set for the last day. Whatever the reality may be which lies behind this symbol and figure, this is the time for it. It is appointed at the end of the world. It is then that the dead, small and great, shall stand before God, and the judgment begins with the opening of the Books. It is then that the separation shall take place, right and left, and the voice of blessing shall be heard and the voice of malediction. "Come, ye blessed"—"Depart, ye cursed," are words which Jesus tells us will be uttered at the last day. There is to be a general judgment at the last day.

POSSIBLE CHANGES AFTER DEATH.

How can this agree with an individual judgment to-day and to-morrow, as the souls of the dead go to Him who made them? How can this agree with an individual settlement of each soul's destiny, and an immediate entrance into an eternal condition of joy or woe? Shall the souls of the blessed be brought out of heaven to be tried over again? This is not the picture which is given in the Revelation of St. John, where the souls of the martyrs pray before the altar, and white robes are given them, and they are told that they must rest "yet for a little season, till their fellow servants also and their brethren shall be fulfilled."

And then there is the other condition. Into heaven shall the pure-hearted enter, and they only. Into heaven shall they go who have clean consciences. "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, nor maketh a lie." That shuts the door in our faces.

Not one of us may enter heaven. Unless—unless what? Unless death works a miracle of transformation, makes us all over new, changes the scarlet of sin into the whiteness of wool; and of that we have no word of evidence anywhere. The whole analogy of God's dealings with the soul stands against that. God works gradually, not suddenly. It is the will of God that man should grow. There is no more likelihood that that eternal purpose meets contradiction in the moment of death, and that God makes a miraculous alteration in human character, than there is that men will be turned into angels and archangels.

A SIGHT OF THE REAL TRUTH.

And yet here is the thief on the cross. Not a good past had he to show, not an immaculate conscience; he is no saint. But "to-day," says the Master, "shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Ah, yes; in Paradise. But Paradise was another Hebrew name for the place of departed spirits; the intermediate state. The penitent thief might go there well enough. But not into heaven, not into the immediate presence of the Father. Jesus himself did not go there then.

"I have not yet ascended to my Father," he said when he came back out of the grave. By and by the penitent thief may grow ready for the beatitude of heaven. But if a choice between heaven and hell makes the first turn in the road, whose gate is the grave, the only entrance for the penitent thief, and for a good many more of us, is by some sudden word of magic which shall change us as the animals in the old stories were changed at touch of wand to men and women.

Unless, again. Unless this glimpse at a place of waiting and of preparation should be a sight of the real truth. If there is an intermediate state, as the Bible seems to teach, then all is plain. For in this state there must be a progressive sanctification going on. "The souls of the faithful are with the Lord," St. Paul says; that must mean growth in grace.

There is no promise of a new probation, no sign of another chance, no passing from the bad side to the good side of that great gulf.

The parable sets a negative to that. Death, so far as we know, is the end of opportunity. Of what goes on among the persistently impenitent, amid the torments, in the company of the lost, we are not told at all.

IN THE INTERMEDIATE STATE.

But the faithful departed must be growing better. The soul is separated from sensual temptation, taken away from all hindering environment, and has time to think, and a clear mind to think with, and good things to think about, and perhaps for the first time has a real chance to cultivate that good which God alone may have discovered in the heart. And the soul is in Christ's presence, and in the company of saints and heroes. How can the soul help growing?

On and on advances the Christian soul, growing in grace, growing in knowledge, growing in sanctity and in readiness for heaven. I know, says St. Paul, that the Lord, who has begun this good work in you, will continue it until "that day." And "that day," in the phrase of the apostle, means not the day of death, but the day of judgment.

On through the grave and gate of death passes the soul unchanged into the intermediate state, and there waits, but not in sleep nor in idleness; waits and grows, learning more and loving more unceasingly; in the bliss of paradise, but not yet in the beatitude of heaven; waits and grows in grace and sanctity till the whole number is made up, and the general judgment is at hand, and the day of the Lord comes.

IN RESPONSE.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH and family are receiving from many of the elders and saints, letters of condolence and sympathy in their recent loss by the death of wife and mother, Sr. Bertha. In response to these kind expressions of sympathy in our bereavement we hereby express our gratefulness to the Giver of all good, for the kind and tender words by which these saints and friends have conveyed the assurance of their love, esteem, and regard. We assure the writers that we appreciate and value the friendship in Christ which these letters evince towards us, and request that as we cannot reply personally to all those who have written will accept this as our recognition of their kindness and our acceptance of their loving epistles.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH AND FAMILY.

EXIT SCHWEINFURTH.

GEORGE JACOB SCHWEINFURTH, the Rockford messiah, so-called, and against whom charges of immorality have been made in connection with his conduct of the "heaven" or home at Rockford, Illinois, has reached the end of his career. It requires time to make manifest the character of movements, and time has caused this one to collapse, like many others of like character:—

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 21.—This morning G. J. Schweinfurth called on the Rev. M. D. Shutter, who officiated at his wedding recently, and said good-bye.

He announced his intention of leaving Minneapolis and retiring to private life. He leaves for Chicago in the morning and his colony here has already broken up.

He announces that he will also give up the colony at Rockford.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 21.—Schweinfurth has not been seen in Rockford since his marriage at Minneapolis, and the so-called "heaven" is occupied by its original owner, Mr. Weldon, who refuses to confirm or deny the rumor of its abandonment.

ECCLESIASTICAL HAPPENINGS.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The Rt.-Rev. Frederick Temple, Bishop of London, has been appointed Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of all Englewood in succession to the late Most Reverend Edward White Benson.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 25.—Ex-Pope Tols-toi of the Russian Church, who was recently deposed from the priests' functions because he had refused to clear himself of an accusation that he had been converted to Catholicism, has been arrested at Moscow and taken to Nijai, where he was condemned by a church tribunal to seven years' banishment from St. Petersburg and Moscow, and was forbidden to hold any state office for twenty years.

The third annual meeting of the American Congress of Liberal Religious Societies will be held in Indianapolis, November 17-19. Among the topics for discussion are "The sympathy of religions and fraternity of the sects;" "The foundations of religion," "Sociological problems of the church," and, "The church of the free."

URBANA, Ill., Oct. 23.—After a warm debate, lasting four hours, at the closing session of the Illinois Baptist Association, on the report of the Committee on Education, the section indorsing the divinity school of the University of Chicago was defeated, by a vote of seventy-two to twenty-two. Many of the clergymen, especially from the central and southern part of the State, strongly opposed this section, alleging that the theology of President W. R. Harper of the Chicago institution is not sound. The indorsement was particularly desired as an assistance toward raising the money on which Rockefeller's latest contribution to the University of Chicago is contingent. The other sections of the committee report were adopted.

The foregoing item dated Urbana, Illinois, is corrected by a later statement, which reverses the vote to seventy-two affirmative and twenty-two negative votes, by which the divinity school of Chicago University was indorsed.

Dr. Harper, President of the University, it will be remembered, delivered a series of lectures which by some were interpreted as bordering too near the conclusions of the higher criticism, so-called, hence the vote of twenty-two against indorsement of the Divinity School.

Mr. Rockefeller, the well-known multi-millionaire, has made handsome gifts to the University and has promised other endowments on condition that a stipulated amount be raised by contributions from others.

These religious items are presented, briefly, as showing the trend of theological happenings.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. A. B. PIERCE, of Attleboro, Massachusetts, contributes the following local items under date of the 24th ult.:—

The prayer union at Plainville has thoroughly renovated the interior of the chapel there. Who said the ladies could not accomplish much? They can.

Elder F. O. Coombs preached at Attleboro last Sunday evening, and Elder C. A. Coombs at Plainville in the forenoon. The Massachusetts Sunday school association meets at Plainville, Saturday, November 14, and over Sunday. A good program is in preparation by superintendent E. H. Fisher. The Plainville Sunday school is to have a new blackboard. Brn. R. Abercrombie and F. O. Coombs deserve credit for procuring same. A number of the saints contributed. The resolution of Council Bluffs branch should be indorsed by every branch of the church. The idea of a Thanksgiving offering service is at once appropriate and would be spiritually and financially beneficial. One more was baptized at Plainville yesterday, Sr. Eliza Shallcross, wife of Bro. James Shallcross. Elders C. A. and F. O. Coombs conducted preaching service at Attleboro last evening. Bro. A. B. Pierce spoke at the chapel here last evening.

Correspondence has brought or assisted to bring more than one to such an understanding of the faith that obedience has followed. Bro. A. S. Cochran, of the Herald Office, has been in correspondence with Mr. W. B. Toney, of Allen, Indian Territory, who as a result of investigation induced thereby has now become a brother and worker in the faith. He writes Bro. Cochran from Standley, Indian Territory, the 26th ult., as follows:—

I have come down to Standley, as you directed, and met with the saints at this place. And thank the Lord's name forevermore, I have been shown by the power of his Spirit that this latter-day work is of God. No sooner was I convinced of that fact than I walked out and demanded baptism at their hands, which was administered to me by Bro. George Montague at about eight o'clock this morning, and I was confirmed by the laying on of hands by Brn. Montague, Short, and Bailey, at about one o'clock this afternoon. The Lord made manifest to some of the saints both by dreams, visions, and impressions of his Holy Spirit, that I should be immediately ordained to the ministry. I also had the same impression of the Spirit in power after my confirmation. And was accordingly set apart by the branch at this place for ordination, and was ordained to the office of an elder by Brn. Montague, Short, and Bailey. I will go to proclaiming the restored gospel of the kingdom. I want to thank you, my dear brother, for the kindness and patience you have manifested toward me, in helping me to see the light of the gospel divine, and rejoice in the same. I hope you will be a father to me and assist me in my work by your learned and fatherly advice until I am advanced in the work sufficient to make it through. Pray for me that the power of the Spirit of Elijah's God may rest upon me, and that I may speak the gospel in words of power.

Bro. J. J. Cornish wrote from Ludington, Michigan, October 28:—

Our conference at Freesoil is over. We had a good one. Brn. F. M. Cooper, J. H. Peters, and R. E. Grant were among the elders present. Five were baptized and all seemed to go away feeling good. We had splendid weather during conference.

Bro. R. C. Evans wrote from St. Thomas, Ontario, October 26, as follows, from which it appears that he is about to enter upon another discussion:—

Our church was full all day yesterday; big interest here. I am here every night this week and over next Sunday. On Monday next I go home for books. On Tuesday, the 3d, I leave for Cedar Valley to debate with Baptist minister, he to affirm that "the Book of Mormon is not a revelation from God, and it is unworthy the respect of Christian people." If I can enjoy the Spirit of God, I and all saints know the result of the coming struggle. Pray for me.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRETHREN who send us birth and death notices need not be surprised if such are occasionally held over a week or more. When matter of greater importance demands our space we hold over said notices as we go to press. We endeavor to give all matter used earliest possible insertion. Conference minutes, notices, letters, etc., requiring prompt publication, properly receive first consideration.

Later reports state that George Jacob Schweinfurth has returned to Rockford, Illinois, and makes the statement that time will show whether or not he intends to flee the place. Public sentiment is quite strong against the alleged messiah, especially since immorality has been developed in connection with his work.

Bro. D. W. Clow writes from Rock Island, Illinois, that the few saints there have begun active work in behalf of the cause by renting a hall and holding social services and Sunday school sessions. They have also put up a sign, determined to show their colors and give others an opportunity to learn of the faith. Brethren in the field are asked to help them.

Bro. G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, Hawaii, accompanied by Mrs. Waller and their youngest child, arrived at Lamoni on Friday, the 30th inst. Bro. and Sr. Waller will shortly proceed to California, after which they will return home to Hawaii, Bro. Waller continuing in charge of the work there. He reports prospects good for the interests of the cause in the Hawaiian Islands. The church and its faith have obtained prestige among the people and are steadily gaining in influence for good. His nephew, Bro. Edward Ingham, and another young brother, have been set apart to the work of the ministry and are doing good in their service. Patient, careful labor is required among the native population; continued success is hoped for and in prospect.

Bro. Parkin notes that Bro. J. A. Sax baptized two at San Francisco Sunday, the 25th.

Presiding Elder J. A. Gunsolley, of the Lamoni branch, announced to his flock Sunday morning, October 25, that there had been fifty-four baptisms in the branch during the past four months. Can any of the branches do better than this? This has been the result of steady work, not aided by any revival or protracted efforts. It is as true now as years ago that Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, yet it is God that giveth the increase.

Bro. J. T. Davis in writing to Bro. Heman C. Smith, under date of October 27, says that he had intended starting for his Utah field on the 10th inst., but had the misfortune to break his right arm on the 9th, which of course delayed him. He is getting along well and will soon be himself again and in the field.

Sr. E. H. Crowson, of Alton, Illinois, writes warning the saints against a confidence man who secured money from her by representing himself to be a Latter Day Saint. She describes him as being club-footed, a description sufficient to identify him. Look out for him; his club foot will appear on first sight and his cloven foot on a closer view. An application of the law of the land often is wholesome in its effects upon such cases.

In HERALD of October 14, 1896, page 682, middle of the second column of letter of Bro. M. S. Frick, it should read, "a Bishop's agent" instead of "our Bishop's agent."

By letter from Bro. Joseph Luff and card from Bro. C. A. Parkin, of San Francisco, we learn that Bro. Joseph F. Burton and wife would start for Tahiti November 1. May the Lord govern wind and tide to their safe arrival in their field of labor.

Bro. Columbus Scott occupied the pulpit of the saints' church at Lamoni, on Sunday the 1st inst. Bro. G. J. Waller addressed the evening congregation, including in his address an account of his conversion and the establishment and growth of the work in the Sandwich Islands. A large audience greeted the speaker, who entertained his hearers with an able and interesting discourse.

Late Lamoni arrivals include Brn. Columbus Scott, R. M. Elvin, A. M. Chase, and E. C. Briggs, all in good health and spirits, and bringing good news of success in their fields.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"EACH HEART KNOWETH ITS OWN BITTERNESS."

BY SISTER AGNES.

THE day was very dark, but a darkness more dense reigned within Nellie's mind as she sat down by the window and mechanically watched the raindrops fall. Hers was a lonely life, she thought, here all by herself with her baby, her husband gone—forced to seek employment far from his own comfortable, peaceful home. The care and responsibility of their little one they realized fully, and it seemed anything but just that the whole care should fall upon her frail shoulders, while he was denied the father's proud privilege of aiding in the ministrations to the comfort of this sweet burden.

The aching head and back and accompanying weakness all testified that she had overtaxed her strength, and with the strength of the body fled also the cheerfulness of the mind.

Her eyes again sought the dismal scene outside—the flowers lying prone upon the ground, the garden rapidly becoming one vast patch of weeds—all telling her they too needed the care of him whose pleasure it had always been to make her home and surroundings as attractive and pleasant as possible.

The tears would start, but for baby's sake she realized she must control her feelings. Prayer seemed to afford no relief and she was about to exclaim with that One of deeper agony, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Then there came before her eyes another young mother, and another happy home. But this home also suffered a breaking up, but of a different character. With the mind's eye Nellie saw that young mother follow four little caskets from her home to the silent city of rest, and as though that was not enough, her husband was also called from her side to bear, far away, the message of peace. What grandeur of character did she here find—from those torn and bleeding heartstrings should come such sweet music—the gospel of everlasting peace.

Her thoughts again returned to her own home, but with different intent. "Oh! selfish heart," she thought, "you will allow a dismal rainstorm and your own loneliness to deprive you of peace, and others of the cheer you should bear to them, while they suffer all the woe this earth can afford, and still bear tidings of peace to the families of the earth. They are indeed 'like the plants that throw their fragrance from the wounded part, breathing sweetness out of woe.' 'Is gloom and distress thy heritage'? 'Can you be so thankless, when the light and glory of life everlasting and of eternal peace is offered to you, and placed within your reach, without price, only endurance and resignation being required?'"

Many thoughts passed through her mind, and she turned from the dismal outside scene to her interior surroundings, and a prayer of thankfulness went from her heart, that her babe had been spared to her, and that her lot had indeed been cast in pleasant places.

PLANO, Ill., August 17, 1896.

JESUS CHRIST. WHO? WHEN? WHERE?

BY SR. C. R. MEMORRIS.

JESUS CHRIST, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. Who, then, is this Jesus, this wonderful personage? The blasphemer hurls this precious name, in wrath, from his polluted lips. The humble child of God whispers that holy name in prayer. The dying saint clings with firm faith to Jesus, the only name under heaven whereby we can be saved. After the fateful fall of man, which brought the dreadful curse of sin and sorrow upon the human race, when through disobedience the face and smile of the Almighty one was turned away from our first parents and there seemed no help for the restoration of God's favor for a lost and ruined race, there comes a promise of hope amidst the darkness which sin has brought, the promise of a Savior who should redeem his people from their sins. Then the line of prophets takes up the wondrous promise, and prophesy of the coming Savior.

After the lapse of many years we hear of the wise men coming to Jerusalem, saying, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." Wonderful news for men and angels! that a Savior was born. He who had been heralded by the prophets now makes his appearance in Bethlehem according to the prophecy, "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." The prophecy is now fulfilled in the days of Herod the king, and they called his name Jesus. But the birth of this heavenly king was not in favor with the cruel Herod, and he soon sought to put away the life of the holy babe, which he feared might interpose with earthly power. So his parents fled with him where they might with more safety guard his young life.

So the child Jesus grew to manhood years and was in favor both with God and man. Then when the time approached for the great sacrifice, for the fulfillment of the redemption plan, we read of Jesus making his way to where John was baptizing in the river Jordan, and desiring immersion from the hands of John. But he who was the herald of his coming says in wonder and admiration, "Behold the lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!" and when Jesus approached him he needed no proof that this was indeed the Christ that should come, and said, "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" And Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him."

Soon after this began the trials of Jesus. Doubted by friends as being the Christ, derided and insulted by others, some of his disciples leaving their Master and going from him, how sad his short ministry of life and salvation which he brought to the people. But the time of his great sacrifice drew near, and when his disciples fled in fear, and the soldiers bore him away to the high priest, and after this wicked council had condemned him to death, he was nailed to the cross, the great sacrifice of the world's redemption. Oh! can we tell how bitter the anguish of the suffering Son of God when he seemed forsaken of heaven and of earth, as he cried out, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

But the massive stone could not hold the body of the blessed Redeemer. O, no! The shackles burst and Jesus Christ; the Son of God, the Redeemer of the world, walked forth in holy triumph to meet a weeping Mary and the disciples, thus showing that he was the Christ indeed, and though they were permitted to see him and be assured that he was their Master, yet his wonderful redemption was wrought and the time fast approaching when he must leave them and ascend to the Father, from whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

But not then will he come as in the days of mortal flesh. Not then will he come as the humble babe of Bethlehem. Not then as the lowly Nazarene, scoffed and spit upon by the noisy rabble while the crown of thorns was placed in cruel mockery upon his sacred head, when insulted and mocked by wicked men. O no! not so will be the coming of our risen Lord, but in the clouds of heaven will he come, with his holy angels, heralded by trump and thunders. No cruel mockings then for the sacred Son of God, when the heavens shall pass away as a scroll, and all the nations of the earth shall tremble at the coming of the majesty of the King of kings, and every eye shall behold him, they also who pierced him. "But who may abide the day of his coming? . . . for he is like a refiner's fire and like fullers' soap." Oh, wonderful Savior! but now triumphant Jesus.

O that with yonder sacred throng,
We at his feet may fall:
We'll join the everlasting song,
And crown him Lord of all.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR NOVEMBER.

Thursday, Nov. 5.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

MRS. PARKS'S WAY.

A TRUE NARRATIVE.

"IRREPRESSIBLE juveniles!" hisped the gay young lassie, when she resigned her position as teacher of six bright, mischievous-looking boys.

"Scamps!" said the sober man the next Sunday, as he informed the superintendent of his inability to cope with them.

"Irreverent youngsters!" was the pastor's comment as he also left, vanquished.

"Misunderstood!" was the verdict of Mrs. Parks, who, from her seat in the Bible class, had noted the doings of boys and teachers. "They are not bad; there's only a superabundance of physical life. Scolding disagrees; give them work; make them feel that they are part of this school, of this church, that we need their help, and their pranks will disappear."

Her theories being reported to the superintendent, he persuaded her to put them in practice.

As she took her seat with the lads, Bill whispered, "Say, teacher, what makes more noise than a pig fast under a fence?" With a smiling face, she turned to say, "Why two, Bill,—that's easy." This instead of "Now behave," which had heretofore greeted such sallies, held Bill in astonished silence until Myrtie Dodge came to her class just across the aisle.

She was his friend, he must greet her. So the pretty Sunday school paper rapidly became a ball. But Mrs. Parks, alert, interposed with:—

"How far can you throw? There's a school I'd like to help you pelt with these, only not in wads,—for those boys and girls would enjoy both pictures and stories. All summer they meet under a big tree, Sundays as well as other days, with merry birds dancing through its branches, and the saucy squirrel chattering in plain sight. But when Jack Frost comes, and the poor bare toes can no longer endure the cold, Ma'am Becky takes them into her own wee cabin, and there, from the old Bibles sent by a friend, they learn to read, and how to be good. They learn so quickly too! Yes, let us send the papers."

"This school?" queried the boys.

"No, no, this class! We can save our candy money for that purpose." She laughed. Then came such a fusillade of questions, until she held up her hands in dismay.

"Say we elect Bill secretary; have him write and find out all about it!"

The bell called to order. Teacher and boys—friends now—found that lesson so interesting that paper balls were forgotten, to the great relief of neighboring classes.

The inquiring letter was sent. A prompt reply told of such destitution as those well-cared-for boys had never even dreamed of.

How they talked of it!—talked and planned until mothers became as interested as boys, and moved the Home Missionary Society to send a box full of good things, making Thanksgiving joy in the hearts of struggling teacher and dusky pupils.

Thus encouraged, Mrs. Parks's next step was to identify her boys with church interests. Being a member of the Aid Society, she suggested an ice cream social, and "Please let my class serve."

This took some persuading, but her enthusiasm prevailed. If she had any doubts, they fled as she saw the dignified acceptance of an invitation to be waiters at an ice cream social given by the Ladies' Aid Society next Thursday evening. The success of the event depended largely on her boys. They must not fail. Nor did they. Proudly now they felt they were part of the church, and must work for it just as their teacher said.

Their class conduct? Well, hearken to Bill as he remonstrates with some troublesome visitors: "You must be quiet. Our reputation has been none too good, we can't afford to be noisy."

Any more paper balls? Not one since the day "teacher" quietly put her hand on Bill's as he was ready to shoot, saying, with a pleasant smile, "Save it till to-morrow." With an equally pleasant smile, he dropped it, "for keeps," as he said.

Superintendent and pastor were glad to concede Mrs. Parks's "way," to be a good way, and to accept the help of these willing hands, now being guided, not repressed.

Teachers, boys will be boys! Be a boy with them. Study them, and you may lead them not only to study their Sunday school lesson, but to find the true meaning of life's lesson,—helpfulness to others.—Glean in S. S. Times.

RECOGNITION of birthdays is common in primary departments, but not so many Sunday schools carry the method into higher grades. The Lutheran Sunday school at Palatine Bridge, New York, is one that does. The superintendent holds up the "birthday box" each Sunday, inviting any one—teacher, officer, visitor, as well as scholar—who has had a birthday during the preceding week to give at least a penny for each year of age; and each contributor receives a pretty birthday card, then and there, from the superintendent.—Sel.

HASTINGS, Victoria, Sept. 23.

Editors Herald.—After a safe trip of about six hundred miles by train I arrived here in time to meet with the Victoria conference on the 5th and 6th insts. Each of the three branches was represented, and a profitable time was spent. Bro. David Craig was recommended to the Bishop as agent in this district; Elder McIntosh was reelected as president, and Elder Road as clerk of the district. Resolutions of condolence were passed in behalf of the bereaved husband and relatives of the late Sr. Cuthbert, of the Queensferry branch. The district will hold its next meeting at Queensferry the 16th of January, 1897.

Eighteen months have intervened since I was here before, and many changes have occurred. The seven months I had spent in Victoria were peculiarly discouraging ones to me. Since then, a "brighter day" has "dawned," as was spoken before by Elder Loving, of the Nambucca branch, New South Wales; and I find myself back, better prepared to labor, even should it be amid the same conditions as before. Victoria shared the quickening impulse which the work received in New South Wales the last eighteen months. Through the ministry of Elder Butterworth quite a number have been added here at Hastings—men and women whom it is a pleasure to know. Since their conference I have organized a local of the Religio Society with some sixteen members. It bids fair to succeed; and I have no hesitancy in saying that if each one appropriates the development made possible through this means that Victoria will pay tribute to the list of general church workers in this field. There seems to be an awakening desire over here to develop native talent for missionary work. This we are thankful to see. The discouragements which a local man has to meet in that direction are greater than in America, and the facilities not so good. For this very reason they should all take up the Religio-Literary work; it is eminently calculated to give the needed development, and make Australian talent second to none in the world. A hint to the wise is sufficient. We shall rejoice to see effort made accordingly in every branch. Three out of the eight branches in the mission are falling into line. Who will be the next?

The Great Physician has been near us lately and some remarkable answers to prayer in the administration have occurred in several places. Word from New South Wales informs us of seven more baptized at Argent's Hill, Nambucca, and four at Sydney, by Elders George Ballard and C. A. Butterworth, respectively. Most of the number were the fruits of the Sunday school. There have been nearly forty additions in the mission since the first of the year.

The Sunday school is destined to become a large factor in the upward progress, and many are not slow to see it. We have been greatly encouraged at the way this department has been improving since our arrival three years ago. I have remarked that if I see no other fruits than this during my stay I shall feel repaid for my sacrifice (speaking after the manner of men). At first there were only two or three schools in the mission, and they were slow to take hold of the superior matter and methods of the General Association. Now there is a school in every branch large enough to have one, and all or nearly all are working under the Constitution of the Association, and using the Quarterlies, some being enthusiastic in their praise of them. We are thinking of extending the organization to district work in New South Wales. The school here was reorganized last Sunday and started out with a class of grown persons added. The Senior Quarterlies are such excellent educators, and contain such a wealth of knowledge that they have decided to catch up with the procession. Indeed, there are none of us who like to see the children going ahead of us in gospel and Bible knowledge, and why not the older ones go to Sunday school? Will any of us in this life cease to be disciples—learners? "Therefore ceasing to speak of the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection." "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." A true disciple will always be a learner.

I expect to labor at Geelong, Melbourne, Frankston, and Broadford while in these parts; all new ground, or nearly so.

Considering the vicissitudes through which our native land is passing by way of cyclones, excessive heat, and a wild, heated, political campaign, I am of the opinion we are a little better located just at the present. However, Zion's conditions are found neither here nor there. It requires some more faith than formerly to pray, "Thy kingdom come," and so much the more as the situation in America becomes doubtful and bewildering.

HARTFORD, Mich., Oct. 24.

Editors Herald.—The work is onward in this part of the field; two were baptized at Buchanan and two more gave their names for baptism and will be baptized soon. That will make seventeen since the two-days' meetings commenced in the district; and the end is not yet. Bro. Daniel and Bro. Scott are holding one at Knox to-day and to-morrow, and I am holding forth here in the neat little church the saints have erected. Some are near the door. I am feeling well and hopeful.

Yours for truth and right,

H. H. ROBINSON.

HIGBY, W. Va., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald.—I am a saint, baptized by Bro. James Moler. He was the first man I ever heard preach the gospel. We have a branch here. We do not have much preaching. Bro. Shinn was here and began a good work. If he could come back and finish it. People like him better than anyone that has ever been here.

I am trying to live my profession. I do know that there can be a great work done here if we can get the right man. Give us Bro. Shinn. The Lord is on our side. He can work and none can hinder. My wife and three of my children belong to the church. The last year of my life is my best year. I do thank the Lord that I ever did get into this latter-day work.

I am a priest and try to do all the good I can. We have a great deal to contend with, but by faithful living we will come out more than conqueror. We want Bro. Shinn here again and the people want him. We ask the prayers of the church to help us in our hardships.

CHARLES MOORE.

LIMERICK, Ohio, Oct. 22.

Editors Herald.—Since reading "The Evanelia Disaster" in Herald for October 14, I wish to say that the minutes of April Conference in the Islands briefly state why she was for the time being permitted to be used to trade in. The conditions on which she was run the year before could not in reason be repeated, because they were very likely to cause the French authorities to soon stop such a course; viz., the way she was furnished with provisions, etc. Also it was not known to that body that there would be any one or more missionaries sent (by the church here) this year; and we two leaving left Bro. and Sr. Case and Bro. Jansson as the missionaries dependent on the Evanelia, mostly. It was necessary that they go to the Windward Isles as soon as possible, (Bro. Jansson was already there,) as it seemed absolutely necessary for them to do so. If the boat was tied up, as she would doubtless have to be if not permitted to trade; for the cost of hiring captain and sailors for so little work as would be required to carry the few missionaries there in active labor from place to place, would have been an item too great, with the already cost, and further outlay to be met for recoppering etc., for the conference to cheerfully meet.

The conditions upon which Bro. McGrath agreed to run her seemed fair to the two missionaries there, and the two agents of the Bishop, and it was thought to be the very best thing to be done, at the time, and was adopted by the conference.

There was a written agreement between Bro. McGrath, and Metuaore, and missionaries, as to how he would run her; and that "agreement" can doubtless be obtained from Metuaore; and if it was not specified in the written agreement it was verbally stated and agreed upon that "there was to be no bufaa carried by her at any time;" this I am certain of. And now when the "agreement" was broken, she is lost. Had the "agreement" been strictly adhered to by Bro. Mc-Grath, I have no doubt but that she would yet be on the breast of the ocean instead of beneath the waves to-day. We are full of sorrow over the loss, but are assured that the disposition made of her by the conference was by us done in good faith, and had Bro. McGrath been true to his promise all would doubtless have been well.

The letter sent to "missionary in charge," dated May 25, could not reach Tahiti before the last of June, and we were not there, having left on the 14th of June for America. And it would be uncertain when Bro. Case would get it, as they were far away from Tahiti at that time.

We desired an interview with the chief authorities; viz., Brn. Joseph, Alexander, and Bro. E. L. Kelley at the Woodbine Reunion, in order to verbally explain the whys and wherefores or reasons why the disposition was made as it was of the vessel, etc. I suggested such a meeting to Bro. Kelley and Bro. Alexander, but none was had for that special purpose. I know we desired such an interview, and that we both felt grieved because none was had. Bro. Luff also desired that we meet them and lay the whole matter before them, as we had to him, the which we desired to do (and it was one of the chief reasons of our being present at the reunion), and hear their judgment of approval or condemnation.

Since reading what has been said in Herald and Ensign, I deem it proper to offer the above to the saints, as we believe that there are none who feel more interest in the Islands mission than we do, nor greater sorrow over the loss of the vessel.

Hopefully yours,

GARLAND, Ala., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing I have labored about one month in Florida. I had our valiant and congenial preacher D. E. Tucker to assist me about two weeks. While in Florida we had a nice time together and plenty of people to preach to—many calls for preaching among outsiders. Bro. Powell informed us at conference that the work was not lagging in Florida but growing nicely, spreading out to new fields and gaining prestige.

Leaving Bro. Tucker in the land of flowers I hastened on to Garland in order to attend conference. I arrived at Bro. J. G. Vickery's on Friday, October 16, and found them ready for conference. The Sunday school gave us a splendid entertainment on Friday night; indeed, the essays, speeches, and songs were fine.

The saints at Garland, Pleasant Hill branch, are coming to the front, making progress characteristic of true Latter Day Saints. The church has some fine young people in this branch who are of sterling worth to the church. We spent about all the day Saturday in business. Some conflagration arose among the old veteran elders, calling to my remembrance our General Conference at Lamoni, in 1893; but our worthy president J. G. Vickery displayed his ability to preside and the conference passed off.

Bro. C. I. Carpenter is with us and assisted wisely and nicely during the conference. Sunday, at eleven a. m., I spoke to about five hundred people from different parts of the country. At three p. m. I baptized Bro. and Sr. Harper, of Herbert, Alabama, continued meeting until last night. Will commence meeting to-night at Flat Rock, Alabama, continue until next Sunday.

Bro. J. G. Vickery is a noble worker; is doing all he can to advance the Alabama district.

The longer I work in this field the better I like it. I have great many more calls for preaching than I can reach. Work, work, all the time. I do not meet the severe persecution against me from the outside world that I received in the Southwest. I will not return to Texas this winter. As so urgent demands are for me to remain in my mission, I will do so. I believe I can do a great work in the Southeast by the help of our loving Father.

I will say to all the saints and friends requesting my labors: I will do all I can, and if I can be with all of you I will gladly do so.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

DOWNNS, O. T., Oct. 21.

Editors Herald:—This field is now just as I have found it during the two years and over that I have labored here—many, many places to preach, calls till you can't rest, with but few to respond; and the "few" this year so far have been myself; so I have been overtaxed with work. However, I am glad to have been in a field where there is plenty to do; but what the final result of my labors will be, time will have to determine.

I am still in favor of the going "two by two" plan, and have no desire to set aside the plain teaching of the Scriptures on that line. But I have tried to do the best I could under the circumstances, believing it to be better for me to labor without a collaborer rather than disregard my appointment. I am firmly of the opinion that it is not the number of sermons preached nor the amount of places visited that will bring the best results finally to the church; but it is to keep in line with the instruction that God has given. "God's ways are not man's ways"—God's way for his ministry to travel is "two by two;" there's another way that sends them one by one. Of course the many places now open for preaching, the many urgent calls, has induced the ministry of to-day to separate and go one by one. But why can it be thought best to adopt a different plan than the one God has given? Is it not true in this case as in all others that "haste makes waste?" So one of our leading men has, and some who may not be leading ones have while sustaining other points of doctrine, sheltered themselves behind the immovable defense of the words: "It is written;" "It is written." It is "written" that the elders shall go "two by two."

Since my arrival here last June I have been over the greater portion of the field, yet I have not visited half the places where calls have come from. I hope by another year to find several elders appointed to Oklahoma.

The Utah Church, if the report be true, has about twenty or more missionaries in this field. I hear of them often, but have not met any of them this year. They do us much harm. Just lately I hear of two of them receiving bad treatment at the hands of twenty armed men near Shaner.

I have lately visited the western part of Oklahoma, in "D" County, where I found a number of saints—one elder, Bro. G. Williams; a priest, Bro. L. A. Hall; and Bro. Frank Vrooman, a teacher; also Bro. Valgmore. These saints have been laboring very faithfully there to plant the restored gospel. Bro. Vrooman will be remembered by Brn. E. A. Davis and W. E. Peak. Bro. Frank is still in the faith and is doing a good work for the Lord. The saints in "D" County had appointed a camp meeting to commence September 16 and invited the writer to attend. I felt inclined to do so, and also sent word to Brn. T. J. Smith and Stephen Butler, who also came out. Bro. Thomson Cochran, near Dyke Post Office, joined the company; also his daughter Ella, who rendered much assistance in singing. The attendance was not large, but the saints had a joyful time, and I believe much good was done. Four were baptized, children of the saints.

After the close of the camp meeting I preached five times in the Seiling church. This is a lively community of people, who class themselves as "Christians." Elder Matchet, a notable man from Kansas, had been laboring in the vicinity and baptized thirty or forty. I commenced my meeting on Monday night. The elder was present. My theme was "continued revelation; the blessings of the gospel would be enjoyed to-day as in times past." This was too much for Elder Matchet, and as I closed the meeting he called the people to "sit down." He was to go next day to his home in Kansas, so he wanted to tell his friends farewell (?); but in telling them farewell he took special pains to tell them to "have nothing to do with the delusive doctrine they had listened to to-night." He was one of these mild, gentlemanly men with a kind, pleading voice, seasoned with a very reverential tone. I had quoted Hebrews, chapter six, and urged that the laying on of hands was one of the "principles of the doctrine of Christ," and also 2 John 9, that we should "abide in the doctrine of Christ" or else we would "have not God." The man from Kansas made an earnest and honest effort I suppose to prove that this language in Hebrews 6:1, 2, referred to the Mosaic law; that the "baptisms" there mentioned were the "washings and sprinklings performed under the law," and had no reference to what we to-day call baptism. He also pleaded in his mildness that the laying on of hands mentioned in Hebrews six was under the law also, and that it was "performed by the priest on the sacred animal that was offered by the people as a sacrifice." He made it plain to the people that whenever the priest offered the sacred beast as a sacrifice that he (the priest) always laid his hands on that the offering might be sanctified, holy, and pure.

Well, after he had said his say, I insisted that Paul referred to these things—the doctrine of baptisms, laying on of hands, etc., “The principles of the doctrine of Christ;” and that under the Christian dispensation the laying on of hands was still to be observed by the priest—apostle, bishop, or elder, who would present the sacrifice to God; and that while the sacrifice was not to be a beast, an animal from the flock or herd, but was to be ourself, “A living sacrifice to God,” and in presenting the sacrifice the officer presenting it was to perform the laying on of hands under the Christian dispensation as it was under the law, the change made was in the sacrifice presented. This was like a raging wind on a peaceful sea! The elder changed the tone of his voice, lost his calmness, and began to pitch and foam like a bronco pony. He could see, as I believe, that he had lost his position; it was too plain for the people not to see it, and he knew it; and the effort he made to patch it up was very amusing to all present. I say “all,” yes with but few exceptions. His own people confess that the “little Irishman was too much for Bro. Matchet.”

It was a plain case to my mind; the power of God's Spirit was with me, and I knew it. When debate was talked of they, “the Christian” people, would not think of having Elder Matchet to represent their side.

I rejoice that God has blessed me in my labors. I have opened up the work in new places this year and have received a cordial welcome wherever I have gone. In two places there are people waiting for baptism, but I have been so crowded that as yet I have not been able to reach them. In other portions of the field saints have written for me to come, but we need a dozen elders here to respond to all the calls. I hope we may have them next year.

I have been greatly encouraged while reading the good reports coming through the Herald and Ensign. All the saints should take the Herald. They must feed themselves or else they will get very hungry. The food the saints need comes through the books and the church papers. This world is a great school, and I have been able to learn some things since laboring in the ministry; that the representative men of other churches, with whom our brethren have had public discussions, must surely know that if their cause be right, they can well afford to use right and honorable means to establish and maintain their cause. But when they meet us with slander and abuse, it proves their weakness, and the folly of their claims. I could not help but realize this while reading the report of the late debate at Fairland, Indian Territory. If Mr. Popplewell was more abusive than he was at the Keighley debate I pity the condition of the people who will accept of his work—that kind of work.

An old and experienced lawyer was instructing a young attorney how to plead a case. He said: “If the law is against you, deal mostly with facts; if the facts are against you, deal mostly with the law; but if the law and the facts are both against you, then abuse the other attorney.” So when these Campbellite elders, and others in debate find the law and facts both against them they spend their time abusing “the other attorney.”

As ministers for Christ we can well afford to be like him; and whatever mistakes have been made in the past by any of us, for my part I hope to improve until I shall be a “valiant” soldier “in the army of the Lord.”

Truth will triumph, and as saints of God we can well afford to joyfully and hopefully abide its time.

Yours in faith,

R. M. MALONEY.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Oct. 24.

Editors Herald:—Our two-days' meeting at Pleasant Grove was a decided success. Everything passed off without anything to mar the enjoyment of all. Three were baptized; one sister came in a wagon fifty miles for the purpose of attending the meetings and being baptized. We held three meetings on Saturday and four on Sunday and the little chapel was filled each time. Many heard the faith of the Reorganization presented for the first the time and went away favorably impressed. God's Spirit was with us both in our prayer and preaching services, and we were made to feel that such gatherings were approved by him; and we are safe in saying that a meeting of the kind is one of the established things each year for Utah saints as well as for the Eastern saints.

There were saints from Nephi, Camp Floyd, Provo, Sandy, Murray, and Salt Lake City. The Pleasant Grove saints vied with each other in making our stay pleasant and enjoyable, and we can only pray for many happy returns. The writer was the only missionary present and had to do all the preaching. Preaching once on Friday and twice on Saturday and three times on Sunday, also; and continued each night until Thursday following, having the best audiences that we have ever had in Pleasant Grove.

Yours,

H. O. SMITH.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—In company with Bro. T. F. Stafford, I yesterday planted the work in Beardstown, Illinois.

A few months ago in my dealings, I asked a gentleman how long would it be until this would let up, meaning the hard times.

“Well,” said he, “I suppose when the millennium comes.”

“The mil what?” said I.

“Why,” said he, “the millennium.”

I said, “What kind of a thing is that?”

“O,” said he, “the reign of Christ for a thousand years on the earth.”

“Is he coming to reign?” said I.

“Why yes,” said he, “the prophets declared it, he himself affirmed it, and his disciples confirmed it by repeating the promises that he would surely come.”

“How long do you think it will take?” said I.

“O,” said he, “not long;” and beginning to enlarge upon the theme he pointed out what was said in Revelation, putting upon it the common interpretations.

I wished to know if those were absolutely correct. “O yes,” said he.

“But suppose,” said I, “that I would interpret them differently, wouldn't I have as good a right to my opinion as you or anyone else?”

“Well hardly,” he thought.

I wanted to know where he obtained his authority in presence of the Bible forbidding it, to give private interpretations.

“The Bible does not prohibit it,” he taught. I then asked him what he would do with the following, “No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.”

“Where is that to be found?” said he.

“Have you a Bible?” I asked.

“Yes.”

“Then, in 2 Peter first chapter, last verses.”

By this time he was prepared to hear more. I preached to him for two hours, and more.

Said he, “If I could be assured of the truth of what you have presented I would give my life.”

“Would you,” said I; “would you be willing to surrender your good name?”

“Yes,” he said.

“Sure,” said I, “even if it was to cause you to be cast out as evil?”

“Yes.”

“The worst name in the world?” I asked.

“Yes.”

“Well,” said I, “I will give you a test: Suppose the name was as bad as ‘Mormon,’ how then?”

“You surely don't mean to tell me that Mormonism has anything to do with what you have taught me to-day?”

“I surely do,” said I. “I have taught you ‘Mormonism’ pure and unadulterated.”

“What then about polygamy?” said he.

“O,” said I, “that is the adulteration.”

I sent him books, visited his home, was splendidly received by his good wife, answered objecting questions, reaffirmed the testimony, and the result was after careful investigation both husband and wife were buried in the liquid wave to rise to walk in newness of life, October 25.

We, Bro. Stafford and myself, feel very thankful for the degree of the Spirit we enjoyed during confirmation, and pray that Bro. and Sr. Shoemaker may live worthy of the presence of the abiding Comforter.

J. A. ROBINSON.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—I am laboring at Harlam, Clay County, Missouri, just across the river north of Kansas City. Have just closed a two-weeks' meeting there and baptized five. All are rejoicing in the work. Will continue to hold service Sundays at eleven a. m., and 7:30 p. m.

I do not know what district it is in. Will the president of the district please let me hear from him? I shall continue to labor there until instructed differently.

I have been ably assisted in this work by the ministry of our branch (Chelsea Park) which I fully appreciate.

This opening is the result of preaching on the streets of Kansas City, Missouri, by Bro.

J. I. Young and myself. I write this by way of encouragement for the idle ministry to preach on the streets if nothing better offers.

Be diligent, brethren, and occupy the place that you were called to.

How often we hear the surplus ministry of a branch complain that they have no places to preach; but, remember, brethren, the Lord called us to labor in the field already white and ready for the laborer; so stand fast in the calling wherein ye are called and the God of Israel will reward and bless us.

May God help us not only to be willing but be able to stand in our place, is my prayer in Jesus' name.

JAY HOFFMAN.

DISPATCH, Kan., Oct. 23.

Editors Herald.—Saturday evening last, closed the long-talked-of debate at this place. The following propositions were discussed by myself and Rev. W. A. Colver, of the Campbellite persuasion:—

“Resolved that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and its teachings entitled to respect and belief of all Christian people.”

“Resolved that the church of which I, W. A. Colver, am a member, called Christian, is identical in faith, organization, ordinances, teaching, and worship with the Church of Christ as left completed and perfected by the apostles of Christ.”

“Resolved that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the Church of God in fact, and accepted with him.”

I affirmed the first and third, negatived by Mr. Colver; the second affirmed by Rev. Colver negatived by me. This man came here from Missouri at the earnest solicitations of the Campbellites and United Brethren of this place to clean up the saints, or Mormons as they called us, saying he was a very able man and had done up several of our men in grand shape in the past, and now would show us where we belonged.

I soon discovered that Rev. Colver was an apt scholar of Braden. His main arguments were simply a rehash of Braden's slush, which the readers of the Herald are no doubt acquainted with by this time.

I showed the fallacy of his position by reading the affidavits of numerous persons who lived in the immediate vicinity of Joseph Smith and the place of the organization of the church; also our faith and belief.

I called the people's attention to his line of argument; that this was his stock in trade with which to rebut my arguments. I produced from the Bible, the standard of evidence in this discussion. I showed the incompetency of his witnesses; that from their own testimony they must be set aside in this discussion.

When we came on the second proposition and he should affirm he would not attempt to show that the church that he was a member of was identical with the Church of Christ, but avoided it, talking all the while about types and shadows from the days of Adam to Christ. I told the audience that as the brother had failed to compare the church that he was a member of with the Church of Christ as left completed and perfected by the apostles, and show us that it was identical, I felt under obligation to assist him and would do so, that the people might see if it was identical. I then proceeded to show how, when, and where the so-called Christian Church came into existence.

His moderator at once arose and called me to a point of order. I called for the reading of our agreement; it was concluded that I was in order, and I then continued to unfold Campbellism, to the gratification of the major portion of the audience. At this session the chief moderator called “time” five minutes before my time was up. Some one in the audience cried out “Johnson didn't get his time by five minutes.” I at once claimed my time, and it was granted. Again I was out short one minute. I appealed to the house and showed their trickery, and got my time all right. The next night a new chief moderator greeted the eyes of the audience. Then we had no further trouble during the debate.

At the close of the discussion a collection was taken up for each disputant. My collection amounted to $4.68. Rev. Colver's was between fifty and seventy-five cents. Thus we saw how the people stood at the end of this discussion.

We have gained many warm friends, and I feel that some will soon unite with us. The Lord was with me during this discussion, for which I feel to praise his holy name. I desire to continue in this blessed cause and ever be ready to defend it. I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may receive better health. I am troubled with paralysis to some extent. May the Lord bless his saints abundantly.

SANDWICH, Ill., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald.—I have been holding a series of meetings here since our district conference, under most favorable conditions. The weather has been all anyone could ask for and the interest has been excellent.

I baptized four more this afternoon, making six in all. Among the number Mrs. Davis Rogers, Mrs. Ella Greenfield, and Miss Mabel Fairbanks. Others are investigating; some very near the kingdom. We all rejoice.

Yours in bonds,

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 25.

Editors Herald.—As a branch here we are getting along very nicely, only a great amount of spiritual development is needed to help us to come up higher in this work. We have preaching every Sabbath evening by some of the branch officers and would be glad to see any in the gospel call and see us. Bro. Etzenhouser seems to like Cleveland so well that I hope he will not forget that there are some saints in Wheeling who have not forgotten him.

Would have liked to have been able to attend conference at Cleveland, but on account of so many disadvantages we murmur not, but still hope for the future. Would like to see Bro. Arthur Mills before the year rolls away; but if not, hope he will be sent this way next year.

I often think of some of the words in the Harp, (hymn No. 721,) when we read of the spread of this work. And what pleasure it brings to us!

Would have liked to have had Bro. Criley paid us a visit while he was not so far away from us. I often think of how much we miss by not doing what we are often led to do by that still small voice and that hand that leads us on. I was led to go to Pittsburg the first Sunday in October and I reasoned it out of my mind in this way, that they would all be gone from there to conference to Cleveland, and so did not go; and I think if I would have gone I would have met Bro. Criley. And truly we as saints know what it is to meet old friends in this work; and so we glide along and hope to profit by the past.

There is one in the district that does not forget to visit us and that is our old standby, Bro. Griffiths. I call him that because he was the one that commenced the work in this place by the Spirit of God.

We as a branch are looking up a lot, contemplating the building of a larger church in a more suitable place. We have organized a branch of the Daughters of Zion last month, or at least taken up where we left off quite a long time; and I only hope that each one of us will be able to cling to it. If we cannot accomplish much good while we live it may be a great help to our children in time to come. Truly I have always approved of it in the highest way, and felt it was a long-felt want. I look forward to the future in meeting old friends at General Conference at Lamoni. With love to all in the gospel,

Your sister,

MARY S. BREWSTER.

PORCUPINE, Wis., Oct. 27.

Editors Herald.—Our two-days' meetings October 10 and 11 passed off pleasantly, Bro. A. L. Whiteaker doing the preaching. Let me here state that although Bro. Whiteaker's family is not sustained by the church, he still has been devoting a large portion of his time to the ministry, with good results.

We continued meetings during the week following, and on Friday the 16th Bro. W. A. McDowell and C. H. Burr joined us, and on Sunday, the 18th, we had our new church dedicated, Bro. C. H. Burr preaching the sermon, and Bro. W. A. McDowell offering the dedicatory prayer, and I can truly say the Lord was with us, accepting it as an offering from the saints. The size of the building is twenty-four by forty feet with entry on outside six by six feet, extending eight feet above the main building. It cost in all labor and material $1,027.65, and I think it is a credit to the saints here. Work was begun on the building June 3, 1895.

We continued meetings during the week after dedication, but on Tuesday, the 20th, Bro. Whiteaker started home, and on Saturday, the 24th, Bro. McDowell went to Ono to hold meetings over Sunday, coming back yesterday; and he starts to-morrow for Crawford and Grant counties to do missionary work there, while Bro. Burr and I expect to labor in Pepin, Pierce, Chippewa, and Barron counties. We expect to make some new openings this fall, where we have urgent calls for preaching.

Yours in bonds,
A. V. CLOSSON.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, Oct. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am in the conflict with the world for the truth. It does seem so to me, for we meet opposition on every hand—and have to contend against the united world. For it seems to me they are one solid phalanx against the saints. I am endeavoring to present the truth as best I can, and can say (not to boast, but in truth) that I have had excellent liberty as a general thing this year, and many more calls than we can fill with the present force, and mostly a good interest manifested.

I think the work is onward in this Eastern Iowa district. The saints seem to be anxious and trying to do, but I think there is room for improvement, and hope we may all strive to improve. We find good kind-hearted saints, and also many kind friends that are of the world, who have assisted us with their kind care, and financially as well, and many a "come again" by outsiders as well as saints. May God bless them for their kind and benevolent acts.

We seem willing as a people to see the gospel go to the world and willing to pray the Lord to send more laborers into the vineyard. That is right; but I fear lest we neglect one important point in our prayers or that should go with them and that is this: We forget that we owe the Lord a debt and he wants his pay, and that on the payment of this debt depends largely the sending of more laborers into the vineyard; and not only this, but the blessings of life and a treasure in the world to come.

Dear saints, can we not see the necessity of our complying with the whole law? The law of tithing and offerings is a part of that law and God says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." I for one have complied to the best of my understanding with that law and have been blessed by so doing. I know that God is true to his promise. The storehouse of God should be replenished so that the widows, and the orphan, and poor can be cared for. This is the way that the Lord has given to care for his people and the elders that go into the field and are not able to support their families without their labor. Their families must be cared for. I think those that are so situated that their families can care for themselves have no claim on the church, only so far as it comes under the head of the poor widows and orphans; that is the specified purpose for which the tithing is collected, if I understand it rightly. Today is "a day of sacrifice" and "tithing of my people," we are told. I hope and pray that God may so move upon the saints that there may be more laborers sent into the field next year; and not a less number, for there are many calls that pass by unfilled, and we have more than the present force can fill. We only have two in this district to labor, so we will do the best we can and be content.

I was detained at home until July 15, then went to Low Moor, joined Bro. O. B. Thomas and went with the tent until the season was over; then returned home a few days to attend to home affairs and get some warmer clothing, as it was getting cold; and have returned again to my work. I came to Charles City to fill a call. The saints secured the Christian church. The people are much prejudiced against us here, so much so that they closed the house after giving us the use of it. We preached three sermons and then they sent us on our way rejoicing. Then we saw the Universalists. They seemed willing we should have their house, but the expenses were too much, more than the few saints were able to pay. There are but three here; however, they are anxious and willing to do all they can, but money is hard to get, so we will leave until a more convenient season. I think there are some that want to hear and would if opportunity was given them. Some of the members were not in favor of closing the house against us, but the majority ruled. They found no fault with the preaching, but thought it good and Bible as well; but their craft was in danger; they could not endure sound doctrine.

I will go to Powersville and hold a few meetings and then on to Brush Creek, according to promise. I hope to hear that the local ministry of this district will soon be ready to help what they can, hoping all will move out and do all they can for the advancement of the work, for the time is short and the day passing swiftly by, and night coming on when our work will be done. May God bless all his good people and arouse them to a sense of their duty that they be made to realize that their sacrifices must be to God and in his cause and not to man or the world. This is a day of separation and we are commanded to come out from the world and not conform to the vain things of this world; not to worship the God of fashion or popularity, but the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. May God help us to fully accord to this that we may be blessed of him when he comes.

Yours for truth,
C. E. HAND.

ALTON, Illinois, Oct. 27.

Editors Herald:—I feel it a duty to write for the benefit of other Latter Day Saints. The letter from Bro. D. L. McCarty of Holden, Missouri, in Zion's Ensign for October 24, came a little too late for us to profit by it. We had the man with the club foot here last Friday, claiming to be a Latter Day Saint all his life. Acquainted with Brn. Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, Alexander H. Smith, and in fact all the head ones of the church, and that his brother George Wells was in the ministry, and out preaching etc., etc. He gave his name this time as William Wells, of Macon City, Missouri; told a very plausible story of being on his road home, out of money, and if we could loan him five dollars he would return it as soon as he reached home. We gave him the money and on Sunday evening when reading Bro. McCarty's letter, we realized that we too had been duped. So I write this that all the saints may profit by our loss, and look out for the man with the club foot.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
ELIZA H. CROWSON.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 29.

Editors Herald:—After enjoying one of the best Sunday school conventions and district conferences it has been my privilege to attend in this the Northern Nebraska district, I engaged in a discussion on the 12th inst. with Elder J. A. Seaton, of the Christian Church; and to say that from my point of view there was shown both by evidences and the manner of presenting those evidences that "the church of which I, J. A. Seaton, am a member," is not the church of the Christ, the Anointed One, and that "the church of which I, J. F. Mintun, am a member," is the true church of the Anointed One very clearly, is putting it mildly. This is my third public discussion, and I must say that I never was more signally blessed in meeting my opponent on every point than in this, and never did a man in act and word betray the spirit that rules in the organization of which he is a member, providing he represents any church, and that could not be ascertained by his arguments or statements unless it was the church at Marion, Iowa, with which Alexander Campbell had nothing to do in its existence, or a headless church having for its counselors five dead apostles, no God, no Christ, and for its life a Holy Spirit (?) without any manifestations of life.

While he claimed to be a member of the church organized on the day of Pentecost yet he admitted this could not be proven by succession, and if he proved one "point of identity;" it was that the disciples were "first called Christians at Antioch;" but he could not tell who first called them Christians, but thought probably Paul and Barnabas; at least he said if they did not he did not know who did, neither could he tell why they were so-called.

Bro. F. A. Smith did well as moderator. We concluded to give Mr. Seaton all the latitude he wanted, and by so doing he showed himself as a representative of the Christian Church, much to the detriment of that church. I visited some of the leading representatives of the Christian Church on Monday last ere I left Fremont, and they clearly realized the spirit manifested by Elder Seaton and the effect it had had upon the church he claimed to represent.

One has already given his name for baptism, and others are very near the kingdom of God, and will without doubt enter therein ere long.

I met a representative of the Church of God at Blair the 27th inst., and arranged for a discussion between Elder Almus Adams of that church and Elder Columbus Scott to be held at Blair, Nebraska, beginning January 11, 1897, and continuing twelve nights. This discussion has been in prospect for several months, but on account of not being able to receive correspondence from Elder Adams, have not been able to perfect arrangements till at the time above-mentioned. This discussion will cover the setting up of the kingdom of God as referred to in Daniel 2: 44, and the unconsciousness or consciousness of the spirit between death and the resurrection.

Politics have about driven the ministers in this State at bay, on account of not enough interest on the part of the people in the service of God beyond the service of political parties. I try to hold meetings at Desota to-night and to-morrow night, and then return here for Sunday's services. The rain continued all night last night without abatement, and until after eight o'clock this morning.

My faith is more firmly fixed, if it was possible for it to be, than ever before.

Some remarkable cases of healing have occurred since my last writing, thus showing that faith is increasing among the people.

Praying for the welfare of Zion, and especially that God will send more laborers into the vineyard of the Lord, and provide sufficient to sustain those dependent upon them, I am,

Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN. ❁

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:— Please say to your many readers that I have not quit the ministry, engaging in politics, current report to the contrary notwithstanding. Could have done so with pecuniary benefit, but have said "No" to the various invitations. Had I done so it would have been a step backward. Am interested in the success of freedom nationally, but shall not jeopardize my eternal liberty through neglect of spiritual obligations. Our two days' meeting at Wheeler's Grove and Crescent were well attended; marked spiritual confirmation. Have been laboring at Hazel Dell recently with varying interest. A noble band of saints there. Will be at Wheeler's Grove and Carson next Sunday.

Yours hastily,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Selected Poetry.

ETERNAL JUSTICE.

The man is thought a knave or fool,
Or bigot plotting crime,
Who, for the advancement of his race,
Is wiser than his time.
For him the hemlock shall distill;
For him the axe be bared;
For him the gibbet shall be built;
For him the stake prepared.
Him shall the scorn and wrath of men
Pursue with deadly aim;
And malice, envy, spite, and lies
Shall desecrate his name.
But truth shall conquer at the last
For round and round we run,
And ever the right comes uppermost,
And ever is justice done.
Pace through thy cell, old Socrates,
Cheerily to and fro;
Trust to the impulse of thy soul
And let the poison flow.
They may shatter to earth the lump of clay,
That holds a light divine,

But they cannot quench the fire of thought

By any such deadly wine;
They cannot blot thy spoken words

From the memory of man,
By all the poison ever was brewed
Since time its course began.

To-day abhorred, to-morrow adored,
So round and round we run;
And ever the truth comes uppermost,
And ever is justice done.

Plod in thy grave, gray anchorite,
Be wiser than thy peers;
Augment the range of human power
And trust to coming years.
They may call thee wizard, and monk accursed,
And load with dispraise:

Thou wert born five hundred years too soon
For the comfort of thy days,
But not too soon for humankind,
Time hath reward in store,
And the demons of our sires become
The spirits that we adore.
The blind can see, the slave is lord;
So round and round we run,
And ever the wrong is proved to be wrong,
And ever is justice done.

Keep, Galileo, to thy thought,
And nerve thy soul to bear:
They may gloat over the senseless words they wring

From the pangs of thy despair;
They may veil their eyes, but they cannot hide
The sun's meridian glow;
The heel of a priest may tread thee down,
And a tyrant work thee woe;
But never a truth has been destroyed;
They may curse it and call it a crime;
Pervert and betray, or slander and slay
Its teachers for a time.
But the sunshine, aye, shall light the sky,
As round and round we run,
And the truth shall ever come uppermost,
And justice shall be done.

And live there now such men as these—
With thoughts like the great of old?
Many have died in their misery
And left their thoughts untold,
And many live, and are ranked as mad
And placed in the cold world's ban
For sending their bright farseeing souls
Three centuries in the van.
They toil in penury and grief,
Unknown if not maligned:
Forlorn, forlorn, bearing the scorn
Of the meanest of mankind;
But yet the world goes round and round
And the genial seasons run,
And ever the truth comes uppermost
And ever is justice done.

—Chas. McKay, in North American Review.

Roots draw enormous quantities of moisture from the soil, and by this means it is discharged through the leaves into the atmosphere. For example, the common sunflower has been proven to exhale an ounce of water each hour, and a large oak tree estimated to have 700,000 leaves exhaled 700 tons of water during the seven months it carried its foliage.

ARE WE HONEST?

POPE says, "An honest man is the noblest work of God," but, possessing the light of the revealed gospel of which he was deprived, I shall be compelled to differ from him; for I do not believe that God made man either honest or dishonest, but perfect in the sense of creative endowments, leaving the moral development to the individual.

If any man is honest, it is not that God made him so, but that he from choice using the means given of God, acquired honor and integrity. If God made one man honest, then we can but conclude that he made the other dishonest; hence as to personal qualifications and worth one is as commendable as the other, for neither made himself what he is.

It is more reasonable to believe that this characteristic is not gratuitously given but studiously acquired through divine grace; thus making the individual the active factor in its acquirement.

Webster defines the term thus: "1. Fair in dealing with others; free from trickishness and fraud; acting and having the disposition to act at all times according to justice or correct moral principles.

"2. Free from fraud; fair, just, equitable, frank, sincere, unreserved; according to truth."

The Encyclopædic-Dictionary confirms the above. The following pungent statement is taken from that noble instrument of reform, The Ram's Horn: "That man is a thief who is honest because he is watched." Honor leads men above and beyond law. The truly honorable man will not ask, "What does the law define as my duty and how much have I to do?" but rather, "What is right and how much can I do?"

An honest man does not question how much or how little he can do and still be within the limit of the law; but, without question complies with the strict demands of the law and readily proceeds farther, when it is possible and good can accrue.

An honest man has a standard and he will act according to that standard regardless of the enforcement or nonenforcement of law. We should never say, "Will I be caught if I do this?" but "Is it right and will good accrue from this act?"

It is amusing to note the number of ways in which loyal (?) church members make excuses for little discrepancies and often wink at flagrant misrepresentations. I once heard of a man, whom I supposed to be a good, upright church member, who boasted of a certain achievement and what do you think it was? He and his family were going off for a visit necessitating a journey on the railroad for several hundred miles. There is a rule governing railroads which provides that children over five years of age pay half fare. He had a little girl about eleven years old but she was rather small and by keeping her partly shielded when the conductor passed, he succeeded in "smuggling" her through without paying a cent and when he arrived at his destination he commenced to tell how clever he was, even boasting of what he had done! Any man who does this need lay no claim to honesty for he lacks it. You may argue, "Oh well, the railroad makes lots of money and I am poor." Certainly, but is this sufficient warrant for you to rob them? The highway robber can make the same claim! Their wealth and your needs are not the criterion here. The question is, "What is right?" "Did I do right by them?" Suppose the conductor endeavored to collect full fare for the child, would you give it? No, you would refuse. Why? Because the rules say, "A child under twelve years only half fare." Yes, and that rule says also, "A child over five years must pay half fare." It is not the question whether the company's agent does or does not do his duty but when you get on the train you agree to their rules (or you should never get on) and you, as an honest man, should observe them, and when you knowingly take a child and do not pay the amount demanded you are dishonest. So far as the results to the company, they are affected the same as though you opened their money drawer and took so much. Not that you would be as culpable, but the results would be the same to them. The man who would deliberately do this cannot claim to be honest. No true, consistent Latter Day Saint would commit such an act! It may be you can deceive the company's agent—the conductor, but you cannot deceive God, for he does not approve of such underhanded, dishonest work. Suppose you were in the company's place and some one would do the same to you, would you consider them honest? You know you would not. A man who would stealthily smuggle his child through without paying would, if opportunity afforded, ride himself without paying; and one who would do this would go even farther if he thought the law would not affect him. Again, what do you think is the feeling of the children? Their keen observant eyes soon discover your underhanded act and at once their idea of honor is lowered and they reason, "Well, if papa can do this and get something for nothing so can I." If at some subsequent period your child should take some money out of your drawer or pocketbook don't chide him for he is following your example. If you are poor then be honorable and ask that the company remit the charge. If they do this you are exempt. Oft-times individuals will get on a street car and, if the conductor fails to collect their fare, they chuckle to themselves and keep quiet; others when the conductor is collecting fare will assume a far-away preoccupied expression as though they had paid their fare thinking to evade the conductor. Have you ever done this? Then you have practiced deception! Suppose the conductor does miss you, does that exempt you from paying? Not at all. The conductor is but an agent; if he fails in his duty it does not relieve you of your responsibility. In riding you have been benefited, and honor and justice would demand that you pay therefor. Which is the worst, to get on the car assuming an honest, worthy attitude and receiving a comfortable ride without paying, or to climb on the trucks and ride? You will say that the man on the trucks stole a ride. If he did, then you stole a ride when you rode in the car without paying and your theft was the worst! Ram's Horn says, "We rob God whenever we give our neighbor light weight."

Are you a merchant, a business man, or engaged in traffic of any kind? Do you deal fairly? Do you sell goods below cost? Do you continually have an advertisement to sell below cost? If you have, I must say that you are either irresponsible or unreliable. A sane and honorable man will not do this way. Do you represent something as all wool that is not? Do you water your sugar, give light weight, or use any of the sly tricks of trade? Do you buy potatoes, apples, etc., from the farmer, making him heap the measure, and then give skimp measure to your customers? If you are guilty of any of the above you are dishonest, and not worthy the acknowledgment and blessing of God and the respect of good men. A man who, by artifice or stealth, seeks to misrepresent in any way is dishonest. He who places small, inferior, or decayed fruit in the bottom of a pail and good fruit on top and tries to get you to buy is a trickster.

Again, of the patron let me inquire, Did the merchant ever give you too little change? What did you do? "Why, went to him at once and had him correct in." Why? Because you were honest. Did he ever give you too much change? What did you do with it? Kept it because you were honest?—no, because you were dishonest! Did you ever run a book account and find that the merchant had charged you with things you never received? You immediately sought to have it corrected. Did you call the attention of the merchant when sometimes he failed to charge certain articles? If you did not, you were not honest. Have you ever purchased anything promising to pay in a certain time, yet did not although you were able? Then your integrity is questionable.

I once worked for a man assisting him in a certain enterprise. When we got through he volunteered the information that he had not done as well as he expected; that he had lost money in the venture, hence my remuneration was very meagre. Some time after that I heard him talking to a third party and I then learned he made quite a sum of money in the business. Now did the man lie? Was he honest? The facts were: he engaged in the business; he lost a few small accounts but above all loss he cleared a neat sum of money. He deceived me! Yet he so framed his statement that should he be taken to task he could show that he had told the truth (?). Yet he had purposely suppressed part of the truth in order to deceive me. I felt at the time that the act was dishonest. I feel so now! Any man who deliberately misleads another is dishonest. Withholding the truth is sometimes as dishonest as telling an untruth, for the results are the same. Telling a thing, and having a mental reservation at the same time, may be a Roman Catholic plan, but it will not do for Latter Day Saints.

Some presume on church relationship and contract debts, and do not pay them. When spoken to they say, "O, he's a Latter Day Saint; he should not care if I never paid him." Don't make your religion a cloak for your dishonesty. Act on business principles. A man who presumes on church membership, secures a favor, and does not recompense the other according to agreement is doubly dishonest.

Are you an employer? Do you hire a man for just as little as you can and then work him from light till dark and get all you can out of him? If so, you are dishonest. It will not do for you to contend, "Well, I pay him as much as other people pay their hands." If a man is worth two dollars per day to you, pay him that, if other men are only paying their laborers fifty cents. As regards pay, the question should not be, "How little can I hire a man for?" but, "What is that man worth to me?" and pay him accordingly. A man who, during these troublous times, will take advantage of hunger, privation, and suffering, and will hire a man and pay him small wages when the man earns more, is little better than a thief! "You rob the hireling in his wages." Remember "the laborer is worthy of his hire." I know men who hire laborers and after a little, some poor unfortunate comes along and offers to work for less, and they discharge the first and hire the second. It makes no difference to such individuals how the laborer lives so they get his labor. Poor, narrow, selfish natures! The gospel will have to work a wonderful transformation before they can worthily be called saints. There are men so avaricious and greedy who would have others work for them for their board if they would do so, and then talk about how they love the Lord! Bah! such religion! A religion which does not show its fruits in this life is a sham and a fraud!

Are you a laborer? Did you ever engage to work for a dollar or a dollar and a half a day? Would you work as faithfully when your employer was out of sight as when he was present? Did you shirk your work? Did you seek to take advantage in any way? If so, you were dishonest! You may say, "He's well off, he's worth thousands." It matters not though he may be worth millions, and you as poor as a church mouse. When you enter his employ and promise to give a day's work for the money, if you take the money and have not given a full good day's work you are dishonest. Your employer should pay you what you are worth, and you should work for what you get.

The man who does not in all his dealings follow the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as ye would have others do unto you," is not honorable and consequently not a disciple of Christ, even though his name may be on the church record. Have you ever taken advantage of a man in a trade? Have you ever asked a man more for property than you were willing to give? If you have then according to Webster you are dishonest.

Again, many of us are not honest in our conversation with others. We are not frank. A man who will say a thing behind a man's back and not to his face is deceptive. A man who for policy's sake will flatter or act the opposite of what he feels, is guilty of chicanery and fraud. Parents who tell their children ghost stories; who tell them they will "whip" them and then do not; who promise to give them things if they are good and then do not; who scare them into obedience; who mislead them as to their origin; who tell them the "Santa Claus" falsehood are dishonest and not worthy the crowning confidence of innocent, trusting childhood. Anything which has any sham about it, which is not throughout what it appears on the surface, is not true and consequently not honest. A man who professes love for God and then deliberately injures or takes advantage of his fellow man is inconsistent, unreliable, and dishonest.

An honest man. Where is he?

David says, "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved."—Ps. 15.

An honest man is one who, if he professes faith in God, will do what God says. He will show his love for God in the amount he bestows upon his fellow man. He will practice what he preaches; will do to another what he would be pleased to have done to him if positions were reversed. He will pay for all he gets and will neither take advantage nor impose upon either rich or poor; he will not try to get something for nothing, thus incurring loss on others; he will give full weight; heaping measure and good goods; he will not sell a thing for more than it is worth; he will not take advantage in a trade; if an employer he will pay a man what he earns; if a laborer he will work for what he gets; if a farmer he will not impose on the merchant by taking him stale eggs or anything but pure butter; he will neither water nor skim the milk he takes to his customers or the creamery; he will not feed salt to a bunch of steers and then drive them to the watering trough just before they are weighed and sold; he will not rent lands to a poor man and take most of what he raises for rent. An honest man will not live off the labor of others, but will give a fair equivalent for receipts; he will do nothing but, should the deed be examined as to its merits, he would be willing for all men to know it; he will be frank, fair, and just, and will act at all times as though the "All-seeing eye" was upon him. Prayer never paid a debt. Sorrow never restores a wrong. Truth never compromises with error. Religion (true) admits nothing sly or subtle. If we are the "children of God" we should bear the family likeness, and manifest the characteristics of our Father. Legal adoption does not always guarantee legal inheritance. We may be heirs now and aliens to-morrow, our heirship depending on personal effort and inasmuch as the Father will permit none to occupy who have complied with his demands, then we should do that which becomes us as his children, eschewing the first intimation of that deceptive spirit which lost Eden to Eve and enslaved man soul and body. If we must "be like him" (Christ) we must develop that characteristic which made him a man, yea a God, among men, viz., an unswerving devotion to truth theoretically and practically, and a soul free from guile and fraud who lived to emancipate, not to enthrall; to help, not to harm; to give, not to take; to shield, not to shatter; to enliven, not to kill; to live for others as well as self. To be honest before God and man we must seek to be like him, and when we with a psalm on our lips and a prayer in our heart do aught but what accords with his "Ideal" text-book reflected in himself we are inconsistent to say the least. When we from selfish impulse and human weakness resort to stealth, intrigue, artifice, or cunning to benefit self incurring loss to others, we are false in our troth with God and consequently dishonest in our profession before the world. I now conclude by asking, "Are we honest?"

Yours trying to be,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

DECATUR.

Conference of the Decatur district convened at Lucas, Iowa, October 24, ten a. m.; President Anderson presiding, B. M. Anderson secretary. Branches reporting: Allendale 92; gain 9. Greenville 42; gain 1. Wirt 36; gain 2. Lamoni 1,159; gain 42. Davis City 82; gain 2. Cainesville 54; gain 3. Lucas 159; gain 1. Hiteman 41; loss 4. Elders: A. H. Smith, J. R. Lambert, William Anderson, A. S. Cochran, J. S. Snively, H. A. Stebbins, R. M. Elvin, E. L. Kelley, R. S. Salyards, Columbus Scott, John R. Evans, C. H. Jones, T. J. Bell, James Allen, S. V. Bailey, H. N. Snively, J. A. Gunsolley, D. W. Wight, E. Keeler, J. J. Watkins, Isaac Phillips, J. M. Brown, Frank Criley, W. H. Kephart, H. Bartlett, T. A.

John, T. R. Allen; Priests F. E. Cochran, W. T. Shakespeare, Nephi Lovell, A. M. Chase, C. W. Dillon, M. D. Lewis, T. Hopkins, G. Cloyd, J. A. Evans, D. E. Daniels, J. T. Evans; Teachers A. K. Anderson, J. H. Harp, S. Shakespeare, W. E. Evans, R. S. Gray; Deacon George Goban. Bishop's agent, David Dancer, reported: Received $216.74; paid out $1,190.99, having received $768.71 from the Bishop, the balance, $205.54, being advanced by the Herald Office. District treasurer reported: By balance last report $6.97, received since $10.69, paid out $16.95, balance on hand 71 cents. Committee on case of houses of worship reported as follows:—

"Report of committee on the question, 'Who has the right to look after the church building, and to open the door in time of meetings, or can anyone do so unless they are appointed by the members?' we beg leave to report; viz.: The law in Doctrine and Covenants, section 83, paragraph 22, makes deacons 'standing ministers unto the church.' And by mutual understanding throughout the church and in the absence of a 'Thus saith the Lord' or an act or resolution of general or district conference, it has by custom passed into rule, that when a branch by its vote shall choose one of the deacons to the office of 'deacon of the branch,' he shall have the watchcare of all branch property, to be responsible to the branch for his stewardship, to act as janitor and usher. However, this does not prohibit the presiding officer to exercise a general supervising watchcare over the house of worship, of holding a key to the same, and by himself or other person open the door when a necessity shall demand; nor does the choosing of a deacon of the branch prevent the branch or its presiding officer granting the use of the house for other purposes than the regular branch meetings; in such an event the party obtaining the grant may by himself or by other party open and close the house of worship. And further; the branch can by vote define the duties of the deacon, choose some other person than the deacon to act as janitor, also choose other person or persons to act as usher. No one has the right to assume the watchcare of church property when these other officers or either are present or to act in any office in the branch or to act as janitor or as usher or to keep order without the voice and vote of branch or appointment by the presiding officer or those in immediate charge subject to the voice and vote of branch if the appointment is for continuous duty.

"Respectfully submitted,

"ROBT. ELVIN, } Com."
"E. L. KELLEY, }

R. M. Elvin reported very favorably of the tent work in the district in which he was associated with Bro. A. M. Chase, having made some new openings and hundreds heard the gospel. President Anderson reported that unless he had an assistant it would be impossible for him to do the work of the district justice, whereupon he was given the privilege to nominate an assistant, the conference to ratify, and S. V. Bailey, of Lamoni, was chosen. Committee on drafting rules of representation to report to the February conference was named as follows: R. M. Elvin, M. H. Forscutt, and H. A. Stebbins. A committee to secure a musical instrument for next year's tent service was appointed,—R. M. Elvin, S. V. Bailey, and A. M. Chase. The officers of the district were sustained and other business of local character was transacted. The meetings throughout were well attended and a profitable time was had. At the Sunday afternoon prayer meeting, by request of the Hiteman branch and order of the conference, Bro. John M. Hooper was ordained a teacher and John Griffiths a deacon under the hands of Brn. A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley. The preaching was by J. R. Lambert, E. L. Kelley, C. Scott, and A. H. Smith. Adjourned to meet at Lamoni, Friday evening, 7:30, nearest the full moon in February next.

Sunday School Associations.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Convention met at Harlan, Iowa, October 17, at 2:30 p. m.; William McKim superintendent, Fred B. Shumate secretary. The following schools reported: Pilot Rock, Harlan, Salem, Deloit, and Dow City. R. Wight and W. D. Bullard gave very encouraging talks on Sunday school work. Superintendent McKim was authorized to make an assessment of $10 pro rata on the different schools to defray traveling expenses of district superintendent in visiting schools; said amount to be deposited in treasury and to be drawn subject to order of secretary. On motion the district conference was requested to grant the Sunday school association Friday and Friday evening at next time of meeting. The matter of providing for an institute the coming winter at some central place, was left to district superintendent. A splendid entertainment was given in the evening at 7:30, after which it was ordered that the essays read should be sent for publication. Adjourned to meet at Dow City, Iowa, at call of district officers.

SPRING RIVER.

Convention met at Blendsville, Missouri, October 19, at 9:30 a. m.; Sr. M. Hart president, Mirtie Brown secretary. Superintendent reported; other officers not reporting. Superintendents of three Sunday schools reported; others failed to report. Schools reporting: Webb City, enrollment 16; total attendance 1,320; total collection $13.77. Maysville, enrollment 58; total attendance 652; total collection $1.74. Columbus, enrollment 28; total attendance 421; total collection $1.67. Angola, enrollment 45; total attendance 566; total collection $3.16. Blendsville, enrollment 60; total attendance 853; total collection $10.42. Wier City, enrollment 62; total attendance 583; total collection $6.69. Pleasant View, enrollment 41; total attendance 408; total collection $14.12. Each Sunday school in district is to choose its own committee on arranging program for its school to next convention. We desire to see each school represented in the same. Review work by Charles W. Sutherland was instructive. Several workers spoke interestingly on different topics of Sunday school work. A motion prevailed that thirty minutes of each afternoon session of Spring River district Sunday school association be devoted to teachers' and superintendents' normal class training, superintendent of district to appoint teacher to take charge of class. In the evening a very instructive and interesting program was rendered. The banner for best program was awarded to Blendsville Sunday school. Adjourned to meet at Weir City, the Monday following district conference, at 9:30 a. m. Superintendents of schools are expected to send in report of progress of schools at next convention.

FAR WEST.

Convention was held at Delano branch, Missouri, September 18; C. P. Faul superintendent, Mrs. D. H. Blair secretary. Although during a heavy rainstorm, which lasted all day, nine schools were represented, there being present twenty-four delegates, several of the ministry, and quite a goodly number of others. The following schools were represented: Zion's Star, St. Joseph, Missouri, membership 105, Stewartsville 70, Pleasant Grove 60, Wakenda, Louella 53, German Stewartsville 64, Mission, Kingston, 42, Mt. Pleasant, Cameron, 52, Aspey mission, St. Joseph, 56, Gospel Hill, Maysville, 47; total 549; increase since June 19, 1896, 50. Next meeting to be held December 11, 1896, with the German Stewartsville branch.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

From Far West, Missouri, Sunday school district.

Whereas, In an allwise providence of our heavenly Ruler, our young sister, Hulda Hinderks, was transplanted from the family, church, and Sunday school circles here below to the beautiful paradise of God, which in vision was shown her about one hour before her departure, and so enchanted her as to make her willing and anxious to go; and, whereas, we realize that we have sustained the loss of a dear and honored member of our district, and a faithful and efficient Sunday school worker, therefore be it resolved, that we respectfully tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family of our dear sister and mourn with them the loss of one endeared to us by amiable and loving traits of character. And be it further resolved, that these resolutions be read upon the records of the district and published in the Herald and Ensign.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Independence district conference will convene November 7, at 10:30 a. m., at Lee's Summit, Missouri. Come all who can and let us have a good time. Will the ministry and also the branches see that they have their reports in in time. E. L. Kelley and G. H. Hilliard of the Bishopric are expected to be present.

R. MAY, Pres.

BORN.

NELSON.—To Bro. Jacob and Sr. Anna J. Nelson, January 30, 1896, a daughter, and named Ida Lora. Blessed at Guilford, Missouri, October 18, 1896, by Elders T. A. Hougas and Henry Kemp.

BROOKS.—A son was born to Samuel M. and Sr. Annie Brooks on May 19, 1896, in St. Joseph, Missouri. Unconscious of the sorrowing conditions surrounding, it grew to be a sunbeam in the house because of its "brightness." He was blessed under spiritual assurance of the Father's acceptance, at their home on the 1st of October, by Elder J. M. Terry.

HUNTER.—Two little twin girls, Lilnes and Margaret, to Mr. Thomas and Sr. Catharine Hunter, September 21, 1896, at Toronto, Ontario; blessed by Elder J. C. Foss, September 22, 1896.

HATTEY.—To Bro. Charles T. and Sr. Hattey, September 27, 1896, a daughter; named Elizabeth M.; blessed September 28, 1896, by Elder J. C. Foss.

CHATBURN.—At Hutchinson, Colorado, May 3, 1896. A Son; to Elder Frank J. and Sister Carrie Chatburn. Blessed at Wilber, Nebraska, September 20, by Elders J. W. Waldsmith, and Thomas Nutt, and named Thomas Wilber.

DIED.

MARTOLE.—Caroline Martole, daughter of John and Mary Martole, born April 8, 1885. Baptized by Elder James Donaldson, July 14, 1895, in Harrison County, Iowa. Died October 16. Buried in Bieler's Grove cemetery. Funeral conducted by Elders C. Derry and S. B. Kibler, on the 17th inst.

SPARROW.—Abner Phillip Sparrow, infant son of Henry and Elizabeth Sparrow. Born October 9, 1896. Blessed by Elders Derry and Kibler on the 16th inst. Died on the 17th. Funeral preached in saints' church, Woodbine, October 19, 1896, by C. Derry, assisted by Elder Kibler.

HALL.—At the family residence, near Spring Valley, Decatur County, Iowa, on October 25, 1896, John, son of Thomas and S. J. Hall. He was born November 12, 1878, hence was 17 years, 11 months, and 13 days old, at the time of his demise. His mother says of him that he was always a good boy. Though he had never joined any church, yet his character would bear the closest scrutiny. He was a regular attendant at Sunday school, and he loved to sing the songs in use there; his especial favorite was "Jesus is mighty to save." His last illness, lingering and painful though it was, was borne with exemplary patience and fortitude. He leaves a widowed mother and five sisters to mourn the loss of an only son and brother. Funeral services at the house and cemetery, October 26, by Elder Duncan Campbell. Scripture lesson, John 11: 1-45; text, 1 Corinthians 15: 22.

YOUNG.—George D. Young was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, and joined this church in its early days, but did not follow what was done in the West, and was numbered with the scattered ones until September 3, 1895, at which time he was baptized by R. M. Elvin into the Reorganization. He was ordained a priest January 19, 1896, under the hands of William Anderson and J. S. Snively, in which office he labored as his age and health would permit him during his few months of life after his ordination. He was ever earnest and willing, doing all he could, and his death is a sad loss both to the church and his friends. He departed this life October 21, 1896, aged 66 years, 4 months, and 5 days. His funeral sermon was preached by Bro. J. S. Snively in the Hiteman, Iowa, chapel, October 22, and from the church the relatives and friends followed the remains to the Hiteman cemetery, where loving hands laid to rest his weary body to await the resurrection morn. He leaves to mourn his death an aged wife and companion of forty-eight years, two sons, one daughter, two brothers, and two sisters, some of whom have the hopes of the gospel to cheer them in their sorrow. While they will miss him and may wish him with them again, they have the hope of a glorious resurrection, after which they can enjoy through endless ages his companionship. In the language of one of the hymns used,

Beloved friends, weep not for him
Whose place is vacant here;
Your loss is great, but he has gained
A brighter, happier sphere!

Then, like him, hold the "iron rod;"
Let that your footsteps guide;
And then his God will be your God—
Your feet shall never slide.

You'll then behold him, face to face,
Where no rude hand shall tear
You from each other's warm embrace,
Nor cause a sorrow there.

CURTIS.—John Curtis, at Kibbie, Crawford County, Illinois, October 2, 1896. Deceased was born in the State of Ohio, December 24, 1833. He united with the Newlight Church in early life, and a short time after went with the United Brethren Church. Was class leader in that church a good part of the time, until four years ago when he heard the restored gospel, which he readily accepted, was baptized by Emsley Curtis. He called in the elders, and was administered to a number of times during his sickness, but received only temporary relief and died firm in the faith, and in hope of a part in the first resurrection. Funeral sermon by G. H. Hilliard.

BEAMAN.—At Grand Rapids, Michigan, October 17, 1896, Orah Manetta, second daughter of Bro. and Sr. William Beaman. Deceased was born March 31, 1890. When but a babe she had a severy sickness which undermined her constitution so that when some few weeks ago she was taken ill with scarlet fever it seemed improbable that she would recover. However, she passed through the worst of the fever and seemed to be in a fair way of recovery when she was suddenly taken off with paralysis of the heart. The funeral sermon was preached in the saints' hall on Sunday, October 25. While Bro. and Sr. Beaman feel their loss they do not sorrow as those who have no hope, but calmly say, "Thy will be done."

HAND.—Near Randalia, Iowa, September 15, 1896, Sr. Cora A. Hand, wife of Bro. Warren Hand, and daughter of Bro. and Sr. Dewit Serene. She was born March 26, 1868; was married to Warren Hand, December 25, 1887. To them were born two children, the oldest preceding her some years to the heavenly home. Husband, one child, father, two sisters, and many near relatives and friends mourn. Deceased was baptized by F. M. Cooper, March 16, 1883. Thus in early life she learned to love and obey her Savior, living a consistent Christian life. A few days before her departure, while being administered to, she received a testimony of her acceptance with God her Savior, therefore she died in hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral conducted by Daughters of Rebecca. Funeral sermon by B. F. Miller.

GILLILAND.—Sr. Annis Jane Gilliland, was born April 28, 1838, at Friendship, Indiana. January 30, 1862, she was married to William Gilliland. In 1879 they removed to Nebraska, where she died July 18, 1896. In early life she united with the Christian Church, but in 1875 she heard the restored gospel and embraced it, receiving baptism at the hands of Elder Columbus Scott. Though for seventeen years isolated from the church she retained her faith unto the end. Mrs. S. R. Olmstead made some remarks at the funeral to a large attendance of neighbors and friends, but the funeral will be preached by a Latter Day Saint elder when one can be procured. Her husband and two sons survive her.

BAKER.—John B. Baker, October 2, at his home in Logan, Iowa. Was born February 25, 1829, at Bethlehem, New Hampshire. Was enlisted in the service of his country in both the Mexican and Civil Wars. Became a member of the church September 20, 1883; lived and died in the faith and rejoiced in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services were from the Saints' chapel, Sunday, October 4, at two p. m. Hundreds were in attendance; beautiful floral offerings graced the church and casket. Funeral sermon by Elder A. M. Fyrand.

RICHARDSON.—Hattie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Richardson, and granddaughter of Bro. and Sr. William Alden, was born October 11, 1881; died at her home in Morgan Township, Decatur County, Iowa, October 5, 1896. She was a good girl, loved by all who knew her. The funeral services were held in the Union schoolhouse, sermon by Elder J. S. Snively; interment in the Hamilton cemetery. Prayer at the grave by Elder Duncan Campbell.

"There is no death! the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forever more.

"And ever near us—though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead."

HENDERSON.—At Pipestone, Minnesota, Sr. Stella Gordon Henderson departed this life September 12, 1896. She was born June 1, 1879, at Grand Prairie, Nobles County, Minnesota; was baptized into the Reorganized Church July 26, 1896, by Elder I. N. Roberts and confirmed by the same. Funeral took place at the Presbyterian church in the city of Pipestone, sermon by Elder I. N. Roberts. A large crowd in attendance showed the esteem they had for the young sister and her adopted parents. Everything was decorated with flowers of the most beautiful hue. She died happy and with a full assurance of the first resurrection. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

STREET.—At Midway, Utah, May 25, 1881, Mary Bates, wife of Thomas Street. She was born June 20, 1819, at Linton, Derbyshire, England; was married November 26, 1838, and with her husband emigrated to Utah in 1863. She and her husband were baptized into the Reorganized Church October 31, 1868, by Elder George M. Robinson, at Park City, Summit County, Utah. She passed away in peace. Interment in the Heber City cemetery.

BOYER.—At Olathe, Colorado, the infant son of Mr. Alex. and Sr. Alice Boyer, born May, 28, 1896. Died September 24, 1896, after an illness of only three days. Funeral services by Elder M. L. Schmid.

CLEARY.—Sr. Ethel Cleary, daughter of Bro. William A. and Sr. Annie Webberly, of Ironton, Ohio. Sr. Cleary was born February 6, 1877, at Swinscoe, Stafford, England; was baptized by her father at Ironton, Ohio, February 26, 1889; was married to Bro. Michael Cleary August 19, 1894. Funeral services at LaGrange, Ohio, conducted by Elder J. L. Goodrich.

LOACH.—At Hiteman, Iowa, October 15, 1896, Bro. Thomas Loach, whose earthly pilgrimage was 64 years, 8 months, and 16 days. Born January 30, 1832, at Commonside, Staffordshire, England; united with the church about seventeen years ago. Funeral sermon at the home of his son James W. Loach, at eight p. m. by Elder Robert M.

Elvin, from 2 Timothy 4: 7, 8. The body was shipped to Lamoni for interment in Rose Hill cemetery by the side of his lately deceased wife. Services were held at saints' chapel, Lamoni, on arrival, in charge of Elder A. S. Cochran, President Joseph Smith delivering a sermon.

HEARD.—At Burtville, Missouri, October 11, 1896, Sarah Lyddia, daughter of W. E. and L. A. Heard, aged 1 year, 4 months, and 10 days. Her mother preceded her four and one half months. Funeral services conducted by William Wier.

KEEGAN.—At Spring Valley, Illinois. John Keegan was killed by being run over by a train October 13, 1896, his body was brought home and the funeral sermon was by Elder R. M. Elvin from Job 14: 14, in the Baptist church to a full house, Bro. A. M. Chase at the organ. Mr. Keegan was born at Ottumwa, Iowa, 22 years, 3 months, and 9 days before death.

HEYWOOD.—Jonathan David Heywood was born in Bristol, Vermont, February 21, 1806, and died October 12, 1896. He came to Illinois, in 1843, and passed through the experiences there. His wife was shot by the mob, one bullet passing through her breast and one through her neck, but subsequently recovering. He was captured by the mob; was shot at twice, one bullet passing through his hat, another through his pants' leg. He finally escaped from the mob and crossed the river to Montrose. Here he remained five days; was joined by his three sons who finally made their way to Council Bluffs, establishing a homestead about three miles east of the city. He repudiated Young and his usurpations, but when Brn. Briggs and Blair representing the Reorganization came west he united with the church, and has been a faithful member ever since. Funeral sermon by T. W. Williams.

JONES.—David Isaac Jones was born near Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, February 12, 1817; died at Mottsville, Nevada, September 14, 1896. He united with the church in an early day, and labored, suffered, and preached in his native country. Removed to Utah in 1853, and to Nevada in 1857. Bro. Jones and wife united with the Reorganized Church in 1868 through the ministrations of Elder W. W. Blair. He held the office of elder in the Reorganization and was faithful to the gospel covenant. A good father, husband, and neighbor, highly respected by all, has gone to rest. Four sons and one daughter survive him, his faithful wife having preceded him to the better land some fifteen years. Brn. A. J. Davis and E. Morgan officiated at the funeral services; interment in Mottsville cemetery.

VALLAM.—At Woodford, California, September 9, 1896, Bro. Henry J. Vallam, son of Bro. Peter Vallam. Born May 3, 1875; baptized July 26, 1888, by Heman C. Smith. He was much respected by his comrades and the young people in his neighborhood as a trusty and reliable young man and his sudden death caused much sympathy for parents, brothers, sisters, and friends. The funeral was on the 11th and largely attended, the procession being nearly a mile in length. He rests in peace.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will aborn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE ARGUMENT FROM DESIGN.

THE first part of the Duke of Argyll's latest work ("The Philosophy of Belief; or, Law in Christian Theology") is devoted to the witness of the divine Mind in nature. This witness he holds to be clear, immediate, and universal. In reviewing this portion of the book, an able writer in the Quarterly Review treats of the argument from design as held in the past and as modified by scientific knowledge in the present day. The review is delightfully free from pedantry, and we quote portions of it here. Says the writer:—

"The bold teleology of the Duke of Argyll will perhaps surprise those people who have been told that teleology is obsolete, and that Paley is played out.

"There are certain historical misconceptions on this matter which ought to be corrected. To hear some people speak one would imagine that teleology had been invented by Paley; but the conceptions which it expresses are more than two thousand years old.

"Socrates expressed his disappointment with the philosophy of Anaxagoras, precisely because he forsook the principle. . . .

"As I proceeded I found my philosopher altogether forsaking mind or any other principle of order, but having recourse to air, and ether, and water, and other eccentricities.' ('Phædo': Jowett, vol. 2: p. 244.)

"Again, in the 'Timæus,' we read:—

"Was the world always in existence and without beginning? or created and had it a beginning? Created, I reply, being visible, and tangible, and having a body, and therefore sensible; and all sensible things are apprehended by opinion and sense, and are in a process of creation and created. Now that which is created must, as we affirm, of necessity be created by a cause. But the father and maker of all this Universe is past finding out.' ('Timæus': Jowett, vol. 3: p. 448.)

"Similarly in the 'Republic,' while illustrating the principle of creation by the making of a bed, he says:—

"There is another artist—I should like to know what you would say of him. "Who is he?" (asks Glaucon). "One who is the maker of all the works of all other workmen." ('Republic': Jowett, vol. 3: p. 308.)

"Epictetus noticed adaptations in nature, and argued from them to God:—

"Who is it then,' he asked, 'who has fitted this to that and that to this? And who is it that has fitted the knife to the case and the case to the knife? Is it no one? And indeed, from the very structure of things which have attained their completion, we are accustomed to show that the work is certainly the act of some artificer, and that it has not been constructed without a purpose. Does then each of these things demonstrate the workman, and do not visible things, and the faculty of seeing and light, demonstrate Him?' ('Epictetus,' disc. 6: Long's translation, p. 19.)

"Another historical mistake is concerning the scientific status of the men whose names during the last two hundred years have been associated with teleological arguments. They are spoken of as though they were credulous and unscientific men. Apart, therefore, from the question of the solid value of the design argument, we wish to recall their historical position and the relations they bore to the science of their day.

"The Royal Society was incorporated by Royal Charter in 1662. Five years later the Society elected as one of its Fellows, John Ray, the naturalist, whose works were considered by Cuvier as the foundation of modern zoölogy. It was this John Ray who produced the work entitled 'The Wisdom of God Manifested in the Works of Creation.' Nehemiah Grew, also a member of the Royal Society, wrote a work called 'Cosmologia Sacra,' in which he dwelt on the evidence of design in nature. In more recent times the authors of the 'Bridgewater Treatises' were among the most eminent men of their day. In no sense were any of these writers desirous of retarding science. The contrary was the case. They were by some suspected of too great an adhesion to nature and science. In the seventeenth century, at any rate, the method of explaining nature by some a priori theological views had not wholly passed away. . . . Men who assailed the faith of the church acknowledged the argument. Two examples will suffice—Hume in England and Voltaire in France. Hume wrote, 'The whole frame of nature bespeaks an intelligent maker.' Voltaire wrote, 'Rien n'ébranle en moi cet axiome, tout ouvrage démontre un ouvrier.' It is necessary to remind ourselves of these facts, that we may fairly and justly estimate the historical position of the advocates of the design argument. They were not the advocates of retrogression; they were in the advance lines of scientific investigation."

The Quarterly writer thinks that the design argument is misconceived. He states it thus: "The facts which we observe in nature suggest mind." This argument does not, he observes, compel us to add that this suggested mind is good, or infinite, or omnipotent—that it is God. It is not within the scope of the argument to declare the attributes of the mind any more than Robinson Crusoe could from the footprint describe the character of the man who made it, or than those who discovered flint-head arrows and inferred that they were made by men could answer questions as to the kind of men who made them. The argument does not extend beyond the inference of mind back of nature. The article then goes on to deal with a well-known objection:—

“But the modern thinker reminds us that matters have changed. In Paley’s day we might argue thus concerning mind in nature, because we had no force at hand ready to account for the wonderful phenomena presented to us. Now, however, we have such a force. We have a law which explains everything—the law of the survival of the fittest.

“Two remarks on this remain, we believe, unanswered. First, law explains nothing. Law is not a force, but the method in which force acts; law answers the question how? but not the question that man continues to ask—Why? The force which acts through law may, for all we know, be a will-force, as Mr. Wallace has thought at least to be possible; and according to a recent writer (Mr. C. S. Minot), ‘it is perfectly thinkable that the universe could come to rest, were not the balance of the forms of energy disturbed by the life-power.’

“Secondly, even granting certain powers or law, which cannot be granted, it has yet to be proved that the law of the survival of the fittest covers the whole ground. Certain sturdy evolutionists declare that it cannot. Mr. Wallace has shown that the law cannot account for the development of artistic or musical powers in man.

“But setting aside these remarks, we have still to learn that the intervention of law destroys the idea of mind in nature. If mind in nature mean anything analogous to what we know of mind; i. e., if mind mean something akin to man’s mind we do not get rid of it by pointing to the law by which something or other is done. On the contrary, the highest classes of mind we know act by law: only the lower sort disregard it. To work by law shows a measure of progress in mental development. . . . Law, according to Theism, is only the expression of the method of divine action. But this is bondage, we are told. It is supposing or imposing limitation which is inconsistent with the idea of a Supreme Being. The answer is, that two things are equally impossible and yet equally true. We cannot conceive of the finite apart from the Infinite; neither can we conceive of finite free-will without some limitation upon Infinite Will. If there be a Supreme Intelligence, He can only make intelligible to His creatures by some self-imposed limitation. Indeed, no mind makes itself intelligible to a kindred mind except though limitation. The musician accepts the limitation of musical notes. The poet accepts the limitation of rhythm or rhyme. We never mark these as humiliating limitations; for it does not occur to us that freedom means the boundless capacity of doing incomprehensible things. There is a service which is perfect freedom. Such is the law of verse to the poet, the law of harmony to the musician and the law of love to the heart. Unless we conceive of mind as something which in the Supreme is not measurelessly greater but wholly unlike all that we call mind in man, we cannot view such limitation as bondage.”

The design argument has, however, been changed since Paley’s time. We quote again:—

“It is not now, as it was in Paley’s time, the bare contemplation of a certain instrument, the eye or the ear, which most appeals to us. We are conscious that what we behold is not a completed structure. What we behold is a process and not a finished work. We are as those who visit a great cathedral. We are shown the organ. The evidence of intelligence which would appeal to the man of last century would be the arrangements and adaptations of pipes and levers and notes. We do not think that this witness has lost its power; but there is a witness of mind which is more emphatic. We ramble about the cathedral; we observe the pillars which uphold the massive roof, the sheaves of stone-wrought curves above us, and the quaint stories chronicled upon the windows. Presently the low notes of the organ are heard; the music diffuses itself throughout the building. The notes unroll sweet harmonies; the changing melodies possess our souls; we follow the wordless music as it unfolds its meaning; we are cheered, softened, awed, and elevated. Do we ask whether intelligence presides over the keys? We need not to ask. We know that whoever is pouring forth music which thus lays hold upon heart and spirit has the power of a heart which can feel with our heart, and a spirit which can appeal to ours. In the process we find mind. ‘Science,’ wrote the late Professor Huxley, in a letter to a friend, ‘is as clear as the Bible about an Eternal of whose infinite process of evolution the visible is a fragment. The sweeping away of Genesis makes no more difference to that doctrine than it does to gravitation.’

“Such is the teleology of our own day. We hear God in the great music to which the universe is built. As the slow processes lead on from lower forms of life to higher, from inanimate life to man; as the music changes, and the evolution is that of man’s mental powers or religious consciousness, we enter into its spirit. We cannot set down in fixed terms all that it signifies; but it sings to us of the wondrous, unseen Power which, through all changes, is lifting life and man from stage, to stage, which bids man climb and climbs with man as he climbs, and keeps ever before our hopes the glad consummation—the

‘one far-off divine event
To which the whole creation moves.’”

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

AT the late election for public officers for the United States Government during the next four years, the choice was made of William McKinley, of Ohio, for President and Garret A. Hobart, of New Jersey, for Vice President. These men will be inaugurated in office next March and take up the duties falling upon them respectively immediately thereafter. Whatever may have been the preferences of the readers of the HERALD in the late political contest, it should be now the wish, the hope of all, that the men chosen by the suffrages of the people, will prove to be honest, able, and efficient officers in their respective positions at the head of the federal government. It is also to be hoped, that as the change is made from the Democratic policies of government to those of the Republican party, such change shall be made in such way that no injury to the commonwealth may occur; and that the men upon whom the duty of administering public affairs will be imposed may act wisely and well the parts assigned them for the good of all, and not for party, pelf, or power.

The Saints, with others, had their differences of views, and choice of men and policies; and now that the decision has been made, it should be the noble part of all to see to it that no bitterness of dispute is left to rankle and disturb. All should submit with cheerful spirit to the arbitrament of the ballot, and maintain the dignity and duty of citizens; and if doubting the wisdom of the choice of the majority, abide in good will until the time and opportunity serve to rectify by changing men and policies.

The HERALD has taken no part in the conflict, on the one side or the other, and does not now express an opinion as to the wisdom, or folly of the choice for the chief officers of the Nation made at the polls on Tuesday, November 3; but does acquiesce in the decision, and expresses the hope that their administration may be a good one for the people. For this we should and do pray.

"MONEY VERSUS CHARITY."

EDITORS HERALD:—Please allow me a little space in your Herald for the following: Not a hundred miles from where the writer now is two saints met. One brother asked the other to take dinner with him. The invitation was accepted, and during dinner the money question was discussed. It appeared that the two saints held opposite views, the host being for gold, while his guest was for the double standard. The host discovering this declared, "If I had known you had been for silver, I would not have asked you to dinner."

Comment seems unnecessary. Saints, there is nothing like charity. Don't allow your charity to be killed by political differences, or the world in derision may say, "Zion putteth on her beautiful (?) garments!" "Charity believeth all things." If a brother differs from you, you should respect his motive, unless you are certain he knows it to be wrong. You are as likely to be in the wrong as he is; therefore remember "Charity." If "righteousness covers the earth" it will not be through intolerance. I do not say, Do not discuss politics, but "Let your speech be seasoned with salt," remembering that "a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

Yours in the one hope,

T. J. SHELDON.

It is possible that some mistake the meaning of the word "charity," as used by the apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 13: 1,

Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

This is sometimes taken as a shelter under which to excuse forbearance under peculiar conditions of carelessness, indifference, insult, or outrage; and sometimes it is taken advantage of by those who see self-interest and advancement to obtain from others the things wished for. Both of these conditions, or either of them, existing in the mind of a person, will prevent fully according to another the privilege to think and to express thought differing from, or antagonizing the opinions of the person so affected.

Political differences are potent forces for mischief. And where an array of parties similar to that of the present campaign is possible, the danger of irritation from the friction of clashing opinions is greatly enhanced. No other warning than the aspect the political field presents should be needed among the Saints, to safely fortify them against the mischievous spirit of intolerance, supposedly exhibited in the suggestion above.

We differ, let us hold our differences in Christian humility and regard, one for another.

The Editor of HERALD has strong political opinions. They may, or may not accord with those of the patrons of the HERALD, but whatever they are, or however strong they are, or however correct, or incorrect they may be, he is not at liberty to express them in the church organ; for reasons obvious to many; neither is he at liberty to "take the stump" for the political creed he holds nor the candidate whom he may think to be the best exponent of his ideas in political economy; but, he may, nay, he must regard every man's right to political opinions to be as sacred as his own; no matter what the man's theories, or preferences may be. And he is further under obligation to live in peace, and Christian amity with every man of every complexion of political faith, in the complex maze of political differences now obtaining, it being taken for granted that good is desired by all, and the gospel and the Master's work is first in consideration.

It is related among the legends of the far east, that once, as Abraham sat at his tent door in the evening, a stranger came and craved hospitality. Abraham gave him water to wash his face, his hands and feet, and bade him be seated while the women of the household prepared the evening repast. When the repast was prepared and the stranger seated, he began to eat without giving thanks. Observing this, Abraham angrily ordered him from his tent, reproving harshly for his careless irreverence. After the stranger had gone, an angel waited on the irate patriarch and asked him, "Where is the stranger who came to tarry with thee?" To this Abraham stated the facts, saying, "This stranger gave not reverence to God, and I sent him away."

The angel sternly said: "Hast not thy God borne with thee all thy life long; and couldst thou not bear with this stranger one night?" and turned from Abraham's presence. The reproof struck home. Abraham's heart was melted, and hastening after the departing stranger, he pacified and brought him back, and made him a welcome guest till the morning.

The lesson is in point, let us profit by it.

MR. O. SPRAGUE, with whom we were acquainted in 1846 at Fulton City, Illinois, now living at Pomona, California, sends us a clipping from a Spiritualist paper, he being somewhat associated with that class of believers. This clipping we give below:—

Ques.—(G. A. H., Spanish Fork, Utah.) "Was Joseph Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church, an impostor or a spirit medium?"

Ans.—We may say that Joseph Smith was highly mediumistic and surrounded by a band of spirits who were engaged in the propagation of certain thoughts and opinions, and who chose him as their mouthpiece and instrument for the founding of this peculiar organization and power called the "Mormon Church." That this medium received communications from the other life we are assured, and that much given to him, no doubt, emanated from quite an advanced spiritual source, although it was mingled with other thoughts and forces belonging more fully to the material life.

Ques.—(G. A. H., Spanish Fork, Utah.) "Does the power and wealth which the late Brigham Young, President of the Mormon Church, possessed in this world add anything to his glory or greatness in the next or spirit world?"

Ans.—Property and its influence and fame of a worldly character, or that which may be exercised to the degradation or the belittlement of other human souls in any direction, cannot add to spiritual glory or to human aggrandisement in the spirit world. We are not prepared to say that the teachings and tenets of Mormonism are all of this character, and we know that Joseph Smith possessed many grand and noble attributes, and that he did exercise a helpful influence over other individuals. We also know that Brigham Young and others who followed in his footsteps were benefited in many ways and that they accomplished much good, and just so far as they look back from the spiritual spheres and perceive where they established good works and were instrumental in being of service to humanity, just so far will their glory be enhanced and their happiness advanced in the spirit world, and just so far as they can review the past and behold wherein they may have detracted from human happiness and elevation, and may have accomplished works not beneficial to the human race, just so far will they feel depressed and dissatisfied, unhappy and cast down in spiritual contemplation.

Our object is to show that even the spirits recognize the spiritual character of the work of Joseph Smith, though that class of believers this side, or on the other may not understand the extent and source of that work.

SR. MARGARET GURLEY, the widow of Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, Sen., who has for several years past been making her home with her son, Zenas H. Gurley, Jun., either fell accidentally, or threw herself from the window of her room in the second story of the residence, on Tuesday, November 3, and was so severely hurt internally that she died soon after.

Sr. Gurley was a member of the church in the days of Joseph and Hyrum, and was ever a faithful companion and aid to her husband in his righteous endeavors to present the truths of the gospel to those needing salvation.

At the time her sons Zenas H. and Edwin withdrew from the church, she also withdrew; but, at her request some little time afterwards, she was received again into the fellowship of the church, and died within its folds. She was a woman of strong characteristics, outspoken and fearless in the expression of her approval of what was right and her disapproval of what she deemed wrong. She made no enemies by this frankness, for the reason that she was loved and esteemed for her sterling integrity and excellent womanly qualities, which endeared her to all who knew her. Her body was taken to Sandwich, Illinois, by her son Zenas, to be laid by the side of her husband, her son John, and daughters Julia and Louisa, who have passed on before. She leaves three sons, Zenas, George, and Edwin; the first-named a resident of Lamoni, the second living at Sandwich, and the last-named living in California. She was born January 1, 1808, and was baptized July 12, 1836, at Williamsburg, Canada West, by John E. Page; she died November 3, 1896, and hence was eighty-eight years, ten months, and two days old at her departure, having been a member of the church for sixty years; more than an average lifetime spent in the service of the Master. Who can withhold the meed of praise which is her due. "She hath done what she could," and "has entered into rest," "the rest of the people of God."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Please answer through the Herald the following questions:—

1. Has a presiding officer the right at a branch business meeting to grant unto those not members of the church the privilege to participate in the business?

2. Also in Herald of June 3, 1896, a question is answered relative to members being received back into the church after having been expelled, in which is set forth the conditions upon which they can be received into the church. Where can the record of the action of the church several years ago be found?

Ans. 1. No. No persons not belonging to the the church can be invested with the right to do business for a branch, or the church as members in business meeting. Members of the church, though not of a branch, may be invited to take part in the business meetings, and by such invitation be authorized to engage in the branch business.

2. On Friday, April 11, 1879, the following action regarding persons expelled from the church being again received into membership:—

"Resolved that it is the opinion of this conference that when a member has been legally excommunicated from the church, he can be received back into the fold only through the door, baptism."

There was an effort made in the session for 1892, at Independence, Missouri, to have this action modified in case of persons whose names should be stricken from the record because of a change of belief, but the effort failed and the resolution recited above remained in force and is the rule of procedure at present. The resolution is found on page 139 of HERALD for May 1, 1879.

VICTOR HUGO ON IMMORTALITY.

EUROPE or the world has held few nobler spirits than Victor Hugo, the famous author, whose genius had shed a light over the literature of the present century. This is what Hugo, in his closing years, wrote down, as the very inmost expression of his heart and brain and soul, on the great subject of the hereafter: "I feel in myself the future life. I am like a forest which has been more than once cut down. I am rising, I know, toward the sky. The sunshine is on my head. The earth gives me its generous sap, but heaven lights me with the reflection of unknown worlds. You say the soul is nothing, but the resultant of bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head and eternal spring is in my heart. Then I breathe at this hour the fragrance of the lilacs, the violets, and the roses as at twenty years. The nearer I approach the end, the plainer I hear around me the immortal symphonies of the worlds which invite me."

JUVENILE PUBLICATIONS.

OF the books of the "Birth Offering Series," for children, "Footsteps of Jesus" are out of print. "The Silver Thimbles" and "The Happiest Christmas" are yet in stock and will prove satisfactory to parents who purchase for their little ones.

These books were written by sisters in the church who have the welfare of the children at heart, and will entertain and educate little readers. Price twenty cents per volume post-paid.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

THE following items; the first concerning the triumph of Liberals in Hungary against Catholicism in state and civil affairs, the second concerning the Eastern question, will be found of interest to our readers who note the trend of passing events:—

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The triumph of the Liberals in the Hungarian elections is far more sweeping than the most sanguine had expected. The clerical party which made its fight on the civil marriage laws, lost heavily throughout the Magyar districts, and its anti-Semitic annex, composed of the men called clerical Kossuthists, is practically wiped out of existence, having lost forty seats out of forty-seven. Although the real Kossuthists hold their own, they are now hardly distinguishable from other Liberals, and it may be said of the election as a whole that it binds Hungary to Austria more closely and satisfactorily than has been the case since 1867.

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Graphic this morning says that it is enabled to state on high authority that the Czar is taking back to St. Petersburg a scheme to summon a European conference on the Eastern question, but believing that the chief burden of any course resolved upon may fall on Russia, he decided to wait until the full consequences are reported upon by his Ministers of War and Finance. The Czar also desires to be in a position to act alone, the Graphic says, in the event of the powers failing to agree. So far, however, the negotiations have not reached the point of giving a European mandate to Russia.

Some excitement is reported from Odessa caused by the sudden mobilization of Russian reserves in South Russia. Importance is attached to the reported imminent departure from Constantinople to St. Petersburg of the Russian ambassador.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH F. BURTON, writing from Oakland, California, October 30:—

On Sunday, November 1, at 8:30 a. m. Emma and I sail for Papeete. We will have for a fellow-passenger Consul Doty. I go in faith, trusting in our Master for help and wisdom to do right in all my duties—a lonely mission, brightened by toil only, and by the presence of the Lord of the vineyard, and satisfaction in duty performed. By and by, or when you may, please write us.

BRO. H. E. MOLER, Camden, New Jersey, November 3:—

Work still on the move here; three baptized here in the last week: others are very near.

BRO. R. M. MALONEY, Downs, Oklahoma Territory, October 28.

The work is progressing here some, but the force is light—light weight, only one hundred and twenty-five pounds, that's your humble servant. I need help; would like to have a dozen good elders down here, if you have them in stock. Please send them along.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. WALKER, of Lamoni, well known to our readers as Editor of the Home Column, and of Autumn Leaves, and in general work, is spending the fall and winter seasons at Beaconsfield, Iowa, where correspondents should address her.

BRO. JAMES M. SHEFFIELD, of the Lamoni branch, went to the polls on the 3d instant to exercise his right of franchise; which, of course, is not remarkable in itself, but, coupled with the fact that he voted for John Quincy Adams, in 1828, makes a remarkable record, not equaled by many now living. The old veterans of the past political conflicts are fast passing away; there being few links left between the far off then and now.

BRO. JOSEPH MORRILL, of Smith Center, Kansas, writes, bearing testimony to the truth of the three books, the mission of the Martyr, and the divine calling of Pres. Joseph Smith. Bro. Morrill was baptized in 1845 and is now in his seventy-second year.

BRO. D. W. SHIRK has located at Minatare, Scotts Bluff County, Nebraska, where other saints reside, all of whom desire such of the traveling ministry as can to call on them.

The mission address of Bro. D. E. Tucker is, Milton, Florida.

BRO. F. M. WELD left Lamoni on the 6th inst. for New London, Iowa, in the Nauvoo district.

The published letter, written by Bro. W. S. McGrath to Bro. and Sr. L. R. Devore, gives his account of the loss of the Evanelia; and we publish so as to give fair hearing to Bro. McGrath in regard to the disaster.

BRO. J. W. GILLEN arrived from Denver during the week of the 1st. He preached for the Lamoni saints on the evening of the 8th, Bro. E. C. Briggs occupying the stand in the morning service.

SELECT READING FOR DECEMBER MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

THE four corner-stones on which character should be builded are: loving faith in God, truthfulness, obedience, self-reliance. . . . How shall we train our children to be truthful? is a vital question, worthy the most serious consideration of every parent. First, be absolutely truthful yourself, in thought and deed, as well as in speech, and be this always from the very first. We often mistake in thinking that little children do not understand, and lay the foundation of untruthfulness by lying to them in their infancy. Little children do understand much more than we give them credit for. I know a little one fourteen months old who will sob as though her heart would break if anyone she loves says to her, "I do not love you." She understands perfectly and is influenced by the thoughtless words spoken. Yet, who has not heard parents deliberately lie to children two or three years old, and if their conduct was called in question, attempt to justify themselves by saying, "Oh! it makes no difference; they are too young to understand."

A few weeks ago I sat on the veranda of the old palace at Santa Fe, listening to the band playing on the plaza. Near by sat a beautiful woman with a lovely little girl beside her. As usual, the plaza was filled with a motley crowd; Spanish, American, Mexican, Indian, mingling in picturesque confusion. Just in front of us an old Indian chief, with his back toward us, leaned over the plaza railing, intently listening to the music. The little girl slipped down from her chair and ran across the porch to obtain a nearer view of the bright scene in the plaza. She was not in the slightest danger, and only a few feet from her mother who could almost reach her without leaving her chair; but, as her mother said to us, she did not wish the child to stand there because she would get her clothes soiled on the pillar, she called to her, "Come back to mamma. Quick, or that big Indian will catch you!" The child was evidently used to her mother's lies, for she paid little attention to the command, and it was repeated: "I tell you to come back." At the sound of her voice the Indian turned his head and looked toward us. "There, don't you see, he is coming now." My heart ached for both mother and child. How little do you realize, I thought, what seeds you are sowing in the heart of your darling, seeds of falsehood, of distrust of your word, of injustice to the Indian.

We need not go to New Mexico for such examples; we find them at every fireside. "Go to sleep, dear, mamma is not going to leave you," when your best bonnet lies on the bed all ready to put on, and you hurry off as soon as the little eyes are closed; or, "The black man will catch you," "Take it, dear, mamma loves it," as you smack your lips in delight over the bitter draught you have pretended to taste. This falsehood teaching does not stop with infancy. You see an unwelcome guest enter the gate: "O dear! I wish she had stayed at home!" you exclaim in the presence of your children. She enters and you greet her with smiles and "How glad I am to see you." Your boys are with you while you are selling a cow; they know you are selling her because she is unmanageable, will not stand, and kicks over the milk pail; you say never a word of this, but recommend her highly in every respect. Are you teaching them to speak the truth or falsehood?

Oh! in how many ways truthfulness is undetermined in the hearts of children! Sometimes the evil is wrought through lack of patience to explain things to the child, or of courage to tell him, "I do not know." A child's questions are often troublesome. Time and patience are required to answer them, or they may be such that he could not understand the answer; again, the answering may require more knowledge than we possess. An easy make-shift in either case is to give some nonsensical answer that may satisfy him for the time being, but which he is sure to learn, sooner or later, has not a particle of truth in it.

Tell him the truth so far as you tell him anything. If you do this always his confidence in you will be so strong that he will wait patiently when you tell him he is not old enough to understand the matter, and will not think any the less of you when you say, "I do not know." In this connection we repeat the advice before given: Do not oblige yourself to say, "I don't know," oftener than is necessary. Parents, especially mothers, should prepare themselves to answer children's natural questions about the sun, the moon, the fire, the birds, the trees, and every-day occurrences in life and in Nature. Nature is always true, and questions concerning her workings answered truthfully will help to develop truth in the heart of your child.

Cultivate courage, physical, as well as moral courage. Much lying among children comes through fear—fear of your displeasure, of punishment, of bad consequences in some shape. Make them courageous and you deliver them from this temptation. Show them the beauty of truth and lead them to appreciate it above all things, by proving your own appreciation of it. Accidents will happen with children; they will injure or destroy things without the slightest intention of doing harm. If you treat this as though they had committed a wrong instead of doing harm, you deaden their moral sense, and teach them a cowardice which leads them to lying.

The accidental breaking of a vase may have no moral character whatever; do not let your vexation at its loss, lead you to reprove or punish the child who broke it as though he had committed a sin. It is perfectly right that you should teach him to be more careful, by making him suffer in some measure the consequences of his carelessness, but make it clear that this is what the punishment means, and not that the breaking of the vase is a sin, per se. Clear moral perceptions lie at the basis of truthfulness. The child must be trained to do the right thing because it is right, and to avoid the wrong because it is wrong. Hence the conscience must be trained to distinguish right from wrong. Our aim should be such an education of the conscience as shall make it sensitive to discern the right, and authoritative to enforce it. Many people seem to think there is no such thing as educating the conscience, that it is an inflexible rule of "faith and practice" born with us, over which we have no control, and consequently, concerning which we have no responsibility. They may not assert their belief in words, but their neglect of conscience-training proclaims it. The fact that when persecuting the Christians, Paul verily thought that he was doing God's service, disproves this position.

In a little child, conscience seems rolled up tight, like a rose in the bud, it takes the sunlight and showers to develop it. This is particularly the case in regard to truth telling. Many little children tell lies unconsciously, and therefore innocently; we shall see the reason of this when we come to study the imagination. In many other ways children transgress the right line of truth, because their moral development has not progressed far enough for them to know that they are transgressing it.

I was once reading a paper before a State teachers' association on the topic, "How shall we train little children to tell the truth?" The title of the paper and some of its positions were criticised; "The question should be," said my critic, "How shall we preserve truthfulness in children? they naturally tell the truth, and would never do otherwise, were they not taught to lie."

There is a sense in which my critic was right; but the truth he told was only a half truth. Training to truthfulness is a positive as well as a negative process. Not only must the child not be trained to untruthfulness by the example of those around him, but he must be taught to distinguish the truth, to speak it, and to prize it above all things. The foundation of truthfulness can be laid securely only in the fear of God and the consciousness of his presence. "Thou God, seest me." "Thou desirest truth in the inward parts," and similar passages impressed upon the childish heart, are potent factors in the formation of character. They lead naturally to the prayer, "Cleanse thou me from secret faults;" "Guide me into all truth," a prayer that is never unheard.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

From experience cite instances of telling untruths to children, for convenience, in jest or otherwise, and show what would have been the better way.

Is it any less a sin to tell a lie to a child than to a grown person?

Can a child readily gain the "clear moral perceptions," which "lie at the basis of truthfulness," if he is punished alike for soiling his clothes, doing accidental harm, or committing actual wrong?

Discuss the question whether a little child needs to be trained to tell the truth. If so, how?

USE OF GOSPEL QUARTERLIES IN CLASS WORK, ETC.

To the Sunday school workers of the Woodbine reunion I send greeting and hope that, though I may not speak with you face to face, it yet may be from heart to heart and in the kindly spirit with which a man speaks to his near friend.

I have been requested to write to you upon the subject of the use of the Quarterlies in class work; but of necessity I must include more than the class-time, because the manner in which I conduct my class depends greatly upon how I have previously prepared myself. The use of the Quarterly or its non-use in class-time depends much upon its use or non-use outside of class-time.

I shall begin then by saying that it is very necessary that every teacher should study his lesson as thoroughly as he can before going to the class. I have used my words carefully, for you notice that I said study his lesson. I did not say study his Quarterly and I did not mean study his Quarterly alone, but study his lesson, in his Bible, in his Quarterly, and other helps if he has such. And the study of books alone will not suffice, but, as was said by the Lord to Oliver Cowdery in the early days of this work, study "in your mind." And this last is, in my opinion, the most important of all, pervading all our work.

This is one of the thoughts I would impress, if I could indelibly upon your minds, the necessity of giving much careful thought. Think! Think! The Creator has endowed you with mind; use it. In all the business of your life, in all the work of your hands, think, and let your works show the results of your intelligent mind. "The glory of God is intelligence, and it is seen in all his works." Intelligence is the light of truth. You have a portion of it given to you; if you use it wisely God has ordained in your very nature, that it shall increase and you will grow in wisdom as did our Master, our elder Brother, our pattern, as has every man, every one who has loved the truth and sought to make it his own, for God gives liberally to his children when they seek earnestly for the treasures of wisdom.

I believe this is the key to success in your class, that you work intelligently, thoughtfully, earnestly, faithfully. If your mind is upon your work you will not be at a loss to know what to do or to say. You will not finish your lesson in ten or fifteen minutes and then sit up in very quiet good order or read the Hope, or do something else to spend the time allotted for class work.

And let me say just here that a real still class is seldom a class that is learning much. It is usually a sign of mental sleepiness. The mind is not working. Then there is the opposite, a class in which there is much noise and activity. There the mind is active, but it is the activity of mischief or the restlessness of weariness, while upon the theme of the lesson, there is, as in the other case, mental drowsiness.

Teacher, you cannot master the situation, as you should, if your mind has not been at work, if you have not informed yourself. If you must be tied down to a Quarterly, or a Bible even, any book, you cannot fully master your class, and by that I mean lead, guide, teach,

To master does not always mean to use force; it means to be a power that leads, shapes, orders, brings desired results to pass.

You desire your pupils to know the facts, the truths of the lesson, to comprehend the principles couched in the language of it. You cannot be the power that shall bring this to pass unless you yourself first know those truths and comprehend those principles.

You may be wondering as you listen, Why this long homily on the necessity of thought and preparation of the lesson? Because the teachers' meeting is a much neglected place of resort and because too many teachers go before their classes who might say as one of them frankly does as he begins to teach(?) his class. "Well, I don't know much about my lesson to-day I have not looked at it." I presume to say that we have not in our ranks a teacher who is qualified to teach a lesson at which he has not looked. Effort is the price we must pay for success.

The teachers' meeting is a necessary provision. It may, if properly sustained, do much good. Teachers who really cannot attend (and there are some who cannot) should do the next best thing, study at home. But whether at the meeting or at home, you have all the blessed privilege of studying in your mind, and be sure that you esteem and use this privilege, for other preparation amounts to little without it. Without it there cannot come enlightenment of mind.

In studying the text of the lesson be sure to study it from the Bible. The Quarterly is but an aid, a help. Study them together. Do not read the Quarterly alone and from it glean an outline of the lesson text, but be diligent enough and prudent enough to read for yourself the statements of the scriptures and to place upon them the interpretation that your judgment supports. Much evil has come into the world because men ceased to think for themselves and accepted the interpretations of other minds than their own. This is an easy, an indolent way of doing, but it is the way that brings weakness, bondage of mind, and in contrast to this, has not the eloquent apostle recorded a true expression, "The truth shall make you free"? And again I reiterate, we must toil, we must work to know the truth. Effort is the price of success. My observations and experience lead me to conclude that the teacher in the senior grade who makes most diligent use of his Bible and Quarterly outside of the class will use it least in class-time. He will not come to class as if the weapon with which to defend his religious grounds, the instrument with which to clear away the rubbish of superstition was his Quarterly, but he will come with the composure of one whose weapon is the word of God stored up in his mind together with such facts of corroborative history and science as he has been able to glean. His knowledge is in his head not in his hand. He has made it a part of himself. And this knowledge, what is it? A weapon of defense for the work's sake, an instrument of good in saving other men, a mine of wealth to the possessor himself, a source of joy that no man can take away.

A teacher of a class in the senior grade who has studied his lesson well outside of the class will probably make use of his Quarterly in the class only to follow the lesson outline or to refer to some question or citation. He will use it simply as a reference book to be used occasionally. He will not sit in the class, his eyes fastened upon the book and he in danger of losing his place and being disconcerted if interrupted. He will be free. He could teach the lesson if he happened to forget to bring his books to the class. He would be like the eminent instructor of whom it was said that he could teach if he had neither books nor schoolroom. He could teach a boy if they sat on a log in the woods, the boy on one end of the log and he on the other. The meaning simply is that the man was so much of a teacher, so well-informed, so ready to adapt himself to his conditions that he needed but the pupil ready to listen to him. We may not equal this man, but we should follow in his course in the respects we have mentioned.

In the Intermediate Grade the teacher should be as well prepared, as well informed by previous study as the teachers of Senior classes. But the Intermediate teacher may have more need to use the Quarterly since she uses many devices for holding the attention of her pupils.

She probably has them turn to the citations given in the Bible Practice Work, since that part of the lesson is intended to give practice in turning quickly to different parts of the Bible.

Perhaps she has them read with her sometimes, they filling in words when she pauses for them to do so. At times she may have them tracing a journey upon the map or finding places she asks for and upon which she questions them.

They may be searching out the proper names from the Lesson Story which she writes down as they are found and which she uses as a starting-point in reviewing the lesson.

Many and various are the little interesting devices planned by the teacher who studies in her mind how she can interest and instruct her class of Intermediate boys or girls. In some she uses her book, in some she does not, but her object in all is to teach the truths of the lesson.

Now I have not given in detail the many methods of using the Quarterlies, but I have tried to point you to the root out of which they spring, thought. You may have your own methods of teaching, your own plan by which you work, your own way of using or laying aside your book and you may make a success. But you must think; there is no substitute for it.

One more thought and it is this. When our heavenly Father looked down in mercy upon the children of men and sent the angel having the gospel to restore unto us, he remembered the little children and gave a commandment that the little children of his church should be instructed. Let us not think then that it is a light thing for us to labor in the Sabbath school. It is a work that should be done and one to which we should give intelligent and faithful efforts.

Hoping that Zion's faithful workers everywhere may be encouraged by the blessings of Heaven and the good will of Him that blessed his Israel of old, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ANNA SALYARDS.

TROY, Kan., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald.—By request of Bro. F. J. McNutt the writer, associated part of the time with Bro. E. A. Davis, began a series of meetings in the Christian church at Troy, Kansas, October 5. We had promise of the church for two weeks. We so advertised in two local papers. Upon the day the meetings were to begin we were informed that the trustees had concluded best not to allow us to occupy the church at all. Mr. Bowers, an attorney at law, and Mr. Ditmore, two of the trustees, insisted that we should occupy the church according to contract. This was finally agreed to, and we began the services October 5 and continued without interruption until Wednesday of the second week.

Without consulting us a notice was written upon a blackboard and placed near the post office, stating that Rev. George Ritchie would preach at the Christian church that night. The minister attended our meeting the evening before and heard me announce a subject for Wednesday evening and also announce meetings for each night during the week. Just before time to begin meeting Wednesday night I told the minister that if he preached it would be embarrassing under the circumstances for both him and me; for him because he had no legitimate appointment, and for me because I had already introduced a subject and announced that I would continue discussion of it that eve. He then arose and announced that he would preach next night. He then withdrew from the house and quite a number left with him and I preached. At the close of the service I announced that I would be present next night to fill my appointment if permitted to do so; if not, I would put the Christian Church on record or give them an opportunity to put themselves on record. Mr. Bowers arose and explained to the audience very fully that we were entitled to the house during the balance of the week. He did not believe the effort to crowd Rev. Ritchie in on our appointments would meet with the approval of the Christian Church. He then asked those who thought Rev. Ritchie should speak next night to arise. None arose. He then asked those to arise who thought the writer should speak next night. There were sixty-eight present and a majority of them arose.

There were now two appointments out for Thursday night, and so I stated, and conscientiously, that there would certainly be preaching on that date. It proved otherwise, however. It was well understood that there would be a contest and the house was well filled at an early hour. I announced a hymn, and Mrs. Harrington, their organist, played and the choir sang it. At its closing, Rev. Ritchie began to read from the Bible and I asked him to desist. Mr. Bowers again explained that the meeting was mine, but before he closed his remarks, some in the audience became noisy, others began to blow out the lights, and it looked for a while as though a riot was imminent. The sheriff was soon called and ordered the people to go home. That, of course, closed our meetings in the church. The opera house was secured and nearly another week's meetings were held. The people generally, and quite a number of their own church people, condemned their action.

If Bro. J. W. Gilbert contemplates coming to Kansas to labor, as stated in church papers, if he will write me at Troy, Kansas, I will send him some addresses which may be profitable to him. W. S. PENDER.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Aug. 14, 1896.

Dear Bro. and Sr. Devore.—It is with pain and disappointment that I take up my pen to acquaint you with the loss of the little gospel vessel "Evanelia," which foundered on the 27th of July off the coast of Rairoa, in latitude 15°, 1', and longitude 150°, 17', (Paris time,) taking everything down with her.

I left Tahiti on the 12th of May, as you know, with bright prospects before me, and arrived at Makatea next night at seven, which was a splendid run, but on account of a gale could do nothing for two days. Metuaore left us there and went to Tikahau on a boat which we met there. I then took Pohemiti, his wife, and Tefau's three children to Niau. I then went to Apataki and Manihi, where I picked up Bro. and Sr. Case and went to Takarora; from Takarora to Kauehi, Raraka, Katiu, Makemo, Taega, Raroia, Takume, Tauere, Hao, Amanu, Tauere, Rekareka, Raroia, Nihiru Marutea, Taega, Makemo, Katiu, Raraka Kauehi, Fakarava, Faaité Anaa, Toau, Niau, Kaukura, Apataki, and Arutua.

We got to Arutua on Saturday, July 18. After getting into the boat and leaving the vessel "hove-to" in charge of the captain, with orders to keep out of the current, I started, with two sailors and a passenger, Mr. Healy, for shore; but had proceeded but a short distance, when on looking back to admire the vessel pitching and dancing about over the big seas, I was surprised to see they had tacked ship and that she was coming tearing toward us like something possessed. They had her in the current and in a minute more she was helpless, turning about at the will of the current. I turned the boat toward her and shouted for them to hoist the foresail and staysail, but they were like a pack of lunatics, not knowing what to do. Just as she turned round the third time a big wave took the boat bang against the vessel and I sprang aboard and took the wheel, and in a second saw that the only chance to save her was to run her into the passage, through the boiling, seething current. It was a dangerous venture, but less so than to try and "tack ship" or "wear ship" in such a boisterous sea and current, so I headed her in, and though a half a gale was blowing at the time, I don't think she went in faster than two miles an hour, but the current was running out about seven or eight miles at least. Had I not been acquainted with the passage it would have been a clear case of wreck. When I left the boat and took the wheel Mr. Healy and the two sailors were still in the boat and could not get out, but were towed through the water so fast that their hair stood on end, and Healy when he came aboard after we got safely inside was like a ghost. On Sunday the wind hauled and made it a fair breeze out, so we decided to take advantage of it. After the afternoon meeting we got under way and sailed out in fine style.

That night we had the worst storm that has been felt in the South Seas for years. It drove the "Eunice," Narii Salmon's vessel, ashore, and a number of boats at Rairoa; almost drove the "Punau" ashore at Tikei; tore all the sails off the "Teavaroa," which was laying off and on at Amanu, and they didn't have any sails on her for six days. We were between Arutua and Apataki, with Apataki on our lee, and therefore could not "lay to," but had to reef her down and send her through it. The first night out of San Francisco was nothing to it. The seas were breaking over her on all sides. I never for a minute doubted that she would ride it out. In the morning the storm had abated so we could carry most of our canvas, and we put her on her course for Rairoa. We got to Rairoa at two p. m., but had to lay to all that day and night until the next morning, as the gale had forced so much water over the southern reef that the current was running out like a mill race, and having a head wind going in could not make it. On Tuesday morning we got in all O. K. and anchored off Avatoru and then found that all the people were away up at the other end, about forty miles, making "bufa." Mr. Brander sent for me and offered me two hundred dollars to take a load of bufu down to Tahiti. I refused, saying that I did not want to carry "bufa," as it would dirty the vessel; but he argued that I could take it and when I got to Tahiti fumigate her and thus kill all the insects, paint her inside, fore and aft, and refinish the cabin for less than fifty dollars; and that as I would have to do that anyway I would be clearing at least over a hundred dollars. I said "No," I would rather not, and started for the Rahui. He was also going to the Rahui, so we met there again. I did no business at all there; the people wouldn't come aboard to even look at her. We had then a couple of days calm, and expenses were running up; in fact I was ninety dollars behind, with no chance of playing even on Makatea; and Brander came again and asked me to take it, so I consented, thinking it was a sure thing, and never doubting the ability of the vessel to carry her capacity of anything. We loaded her and the load was in her for three days before we got out to sea. When we left we had only a light breeze and she moved along nicely, never having worked so nicely before. We had occasion to wear ship and pick up an oar which had dropped overboard and Mr. Healy remarked: "Now, that's what I call a good exemplification of what a short time it would take to pick up a man if a vessel handled like this one." When we were in the middle of the channel between Rairoa and Tikahau the breeze hauled more ahead, so we tacked ship. About three minutes after going about I noticed her beginning to log at the head, and asked Mr. Healy to go forward and have a look. He went forward and turned to me and says: "Well, I think you had better lower the boat as she is going down by the head." I left the wheel, and ran forward, and in an instant saw that she was sinking, and ordered the boat lowered and the sailors to throw over the pearl shell and what bufa there was on deck. She, by the time the shell was over, was bowsprit under, which was in less than two minutes. We had lowered the sails except the staysail, which could not be got down, and as she turned broadside on the wind catching the staysail, carried her over to starboard and she lay on her beam's ends with her fore-castle deck under water and going down fast. Then she stood straight up with her stern out of water and went down gradually. Mr. Healy, Autoni, and one sailor were in the boat a short distance off so as to be out of the vortex when she took the final plunge. In some unaccountable manner the French flag, a new one I had just made (18 feet long and 9 wide) got wound about the wheel and she went down with it that way. We had no time to save anything and no way to carry it if we did save it. My chest which was on deck and which had most of my money in it, got washed overboard just before she took the final plunge, and a minute or so after when I jumped into the water to keep from going down in the suction, my box bobbed up under my nose. I immediately seized it and half swam and half dove with it over to the the boat and we hoisted it in. On looking back the vessel had disappeared—the end of her main boom being the only thing visible. A cutter came along then bound for Tahiti, picked us up and took us back to Rairoa. We came down to Tahiti on the "Eunice," which had been temporarily repaired, though she was leaking so that twelve men had to pump and bail continually to keep her from sinking.

This is the end of my prospects. I am ruined financially. The French Government had a thorough investigation into it and came to the conclusion that she had sprung a plank, owing to some defect in her building, and that no one could be held responsible. In taking my testimony the commodore asked my theory of the cause of her sinking. He said people said she was overloaded and was leaky and mismanaged. He asked me what was done and I told him. In regard to my theory I told him this:—

1. That the vessel did not leak prior to going to sea, as I had sounded the well myself and found only about four inches of dirty black bilge water which the pump would not suck.

2. That the vessel did not go down through a gradual leak or she would have gone down stern first, as she was loaded by the stern.

3. That she was not overloaded or she would not have worked well, but would have laid over and refused to right herself, whereas she had sailed on a very even keel and had been buoyant until after tacking ship.

4. That I thought she must have sprung a butt or two forward so that the water rushed into her suddenly and set her down by the head, and the reason for her not going down stern first was because it took the water a long time to work in through the bufa; also, that had she been overloaded with a deck load, she would have capsized as soon as her bows were under water.

That she was not overloaded could be judged from the fact that her chain plates were not down to water, and she had three planks free board. I said I thought that it was possible that the vessel had been badly strained in the gale and that the copper and cement under it may have held until she got out to sea, and that in coming about it sprung wide open and she filled forward. Had it been a case of overloading, the vessel would have swamped, but no water came over her until her bows went clear under to stay, so that the water must have come in from below. There was no sea, nothing but the long, low swells of the ocean.

Bro. Case has not heard of it yet that I know of.

I expected Bro. Burton was in Tahiti, as a native from Taaite, "Kaaoko" by name, told me that he had seen him. That was why I was coming down, principally.

The mail is just about closing, so I must bid you good-bye. I don't know whether or not I will be here when you get this, but suppose I will, as I don't see any chance of getting out of the country, so you may write to me here if you care to. Yours as ever,

W. S. MCGRATH.

ORANGEVILLE, Utah, Oct. 29.

Editors Herald:—In "Life of Joseph the Prophet," by Tullidge, I find a statement that in a council by leading authorities of the church, held at Nauvoo, April 3-5, 1867, Joseph Smith presiding, M. H. Forscutt secretary, the following was adopted:—

"Resolved that it is the right of General Conference to appoint the presiding officers of districts."

The reason I felt especially interested in that was that it was fully in harmony with my own views. I believe if that resolution had been acted upon it would have caused the office of district president to have been honored and respected as it ought; while upon the other hand in many instances it has been ignored and deemed superfluous. I do not think this has been by a desire to disregard the proper authority, but because of not fully understanding the order of God. Branch officers in organized districts have appealed to missionaries in charge of missions for ministerial aid and counsel in government, rather than to district presidents, thus hindering one in his legitimate work and ignoring the other, causing the missionary to spend his time regulating branch affairs when he ought to have been sounding the warning voice to the world; and leaving the district president to be wondering what were his rights and prerogatives. I believe it was this condition that caused the Lord to speak to the church in 1894, saying:—

"The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected, to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past."

Read also the following paragraph; and likewise paragraph 1, section 120, all declaring it the duty of the missionary quorums to push the preaching of the word into new fields that all mankind may be warned, leaving branches and districts in the care of the standing authorities so far as possible.

But the churches—both branches and districts—need the watchcare of wise, spiritual teachers, having the confidence of the saints and qualifications to feed the church, that the ground gained may not only be maintained but still further enlarged upon; thus enabling the missionary to press on without fear that labor performed shall be lost in consequence of no proper authority to take charge of the work where already established. To this end I believe that presidents of districts should be appointed by General Conference, or by the general authorities of the church; such appointment, of course, not to be complete until ratified by the district, in accordance with the law which says: "Districts may be presided over by a high priest, or an elder, who shall be received and sustained in his office by the vote of the district."—D. C. 120:2. I believe the time will come when some such order shall obtain in the church, making the district organization a part of the whole, receiving from the general authorities that recognition and direction needed for the welfare and prosperity of the work.

Under the rules now obtaining, where district authorities are chosen by the people independent of any direction from higher authority, it looks to me too much like an organization within an organization, and such condition subject to conflict between missionaries in charge of missions and district authorities, causing misunderstandings and jealousies which are injurious to the work.

I have said more upon this topic than I intended to when I began to write, but I have expressed my feelings upon this to me very important matter. I do not claim to understand it all, but trust I shall ever be willing to learn, that I may come to a better understanding of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.

I have written with the desire that others may give this subject due consideration, and with the hope and trust in God that he will guide and direct in all things pertaining to his work until his chosen ministry shall become better prepared for the accomplishment of the great work intrusted to their care.

I arrived in this mission on the 9th inst. Bro. A. P. Larsen, at Molen, met me at Price, on the Rio Grande and Western Railroad, and conveyed me to this place. Since then I have preached here, at Ferron, and at Molen to good audiences, occupying the Mormon meetinghouses. I have been treated with kindness and respect by nearly all, and some interest in our message made manifest.

I had the privilege to baptize Sr. Wilkin at this place, who has been a believer in the work of the Reorganization for some time. Bro. Anthony will be pleased to hear of this, he having made her acquaintance when he was here three years ago. She and Sr. Jewks at this place, and Bro. Larsen at Molen, are the only members so far as I can learn in this (Emery) county. May God be near such scattered ones, that while they are deprived of the fellowship of the saints and the blessings accruing through branch organization, they may receive from him and in the way he deems best, such comfort and strength through which they may be preserved in faithfulness unto the end.

In bonds,

BUCHANAN, Mich., Oct. 29.

Editors Herald:—We are endeavoring to let our light shine here in Buchanan and in the regions round about. Our two days' meeting held on October 17 and 18, conducted by Elders H. H. Robinson and L. F. Daniel, was greatly enjoyed by the saints and there was a fair attendance from the outside world and considerable interest manifested. Two were baptized, some sick were administered to, and the saints were edified and encouraged, and love, unity, peace, and good will seem to prevail here at present.

We have been as busily engaged in the work this year as we well could be under the circumstances. Have labored at Little Prairie Ronde, the Shannon schoolhouse, Marcellus Township, New Troy, Dayton, Buchanan, and other places in the country. Have baptized four so far. We baptized one noble young man at Dayton, on Sunday, the 25th, who, should he live humble and faithful, may be of service to the church sometime in the future. We were pleased to see the Buchanan saints drive up just before the hour appointed for baptism; we appreciated their assistance in the song service, and our thanks are especially due Elder H. A. Richardson and Bro. John Shook, who kindly assisted us in the various services of the day.

We have effected quite an opening at Dayton and expect to trouble the water again next Sunday if all is well. We are rejoicing in this glorious work. The dear Lord is blessing us all we are able to bear, and our desire is to live humble and faithful and to do all in our power for the promotion of the cause we love.

May Zion prosper and truth triumph over error and darkness, is the prayer of,

Your brother in Christ,

E. J. GOODENOUGH.

A GLORIOUS VISIT.

ALLEN, I. T., Nov. 1.

Editors Herald:—This is the first time upon the fleeting shores of time that I have been privileged to address you through these sacred columns. I have long wandered in darkness and doubt, but thanks be to God I can now rejoice in the effulgent light and glorious liberty of the fulness of the gospel of Christ; as restored by the angel at the hand of his favored son, the prophet; and I am resolved that so long as I am permitted to tabernacle here in this house of clay, this gospel shall be my constant theme, God being my helper.

Dear readers, I will tell you how this all came about. I was a Campbellite. About two years ago a Bro. Perkins happened to be thrown into my company. He and I entered into a fireside discussion of this church, its doctrine, and principles. I became somewhat interested, challenged him for a debate with some of his men. Having had some considerable debates, and knowing full well that unless a man thoroughly understood both sides of the question he could never succeed, I asked him where I could get some literature. He directed me to write to Bro. David Dancer. I did so, and he sent me the Voice of Warning, some tracts, and said for further information address Bro. Asa S. Cochran. I did so, and bought some other literature. He sent me some Autumn Leaves, also the Herald for awhile, and the more I studied the question the more I saw I had better let Bro. Perkin's man alone.

In the meantime I saw the Braden-Kelley debate advertised. I knew that he (Clark Braden) was a talented man among us, and decided that that was the place to get the differences properly discussed. I sent for it at once, and began reading it a Braden man, and closed a Kelley man.

About this last April, I wrote to Bro. Asa Cochran that as to the doctrine, it seemed to be correct; but I did not know whether the saints could do what they claimed to do or not, but if he could assure me of the fact I would come over at once; otherwise I was likely to turn skeptic. He immediately wrote me that I could rest assured that they could do all they claimed, and that God's kingdom with all its officers, gifts, powers, blessing were among men to-day. And all I had to do, was simply to go to God in prayer humbling myself in his sight; and I would be shown of the truthfulness of the doctrine. I saw no harm in that and resolved to do so. On retiring that night, I asked God to make known to me in his own way, the truthfulness of the doctrine, that is, if it be true. That night I was visited by a heavenly messenger and saw a wonderful light, which had such a salutary effect on me that it eradicated all desire from my heart to oppose the saints in any way. I wrote Bro.

Cochran about it and he directed me to go and meet with the saints at Standley, Indian Territory. I went to Wilburton and there made the acquaintance of one Bro. Peter Adamson, who accompanied me to Standley. Bro. Adamson, is a full-blooded Scotchman, and a regular old coal miner, but notwithstanding all that a more hospitable, sacrificing, and Christian-hearted old man never lived. He hired a man to take his place and went with me, and left his family and business, all that he might be of some assistance in leading me into the light. He has a large but good family and knows just how to make strangers feel at home.

We set out October 23, for Standley, to visit the saints, a distance of about forty-five miles across the winding-stair mountain, and over as rough roads as ever it was my sad lot to have to encounter. We arrived at Standley, October 24, about noon. There I made the acquaintance of a goodly number of the saints. Was royally entertained in the snug and clever homes of Brn. Short and Bailey. That night Bro. Adamson preached from Psalms 85: 11, 12. He gave us a good discourse on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. He was followed by Bro. George Montague, who was there at that time. At ten o'clock the next day, they had Sunday school. At three o'clock prayer meeting. The Spirit was certainly in their midst. I saw, heard, and felt enough to convince any infidel in the world. I arose and demanded baptism at their hands, which was administered by Bro. George Montague, October 26, at about eight o'clock a. m. in the Kimesh River. I was confirmed by the laying on of the hands of Brn. Montague, Short, and Bailey, with prayer by Bro. Ellis Short; after which I was ordained to the office of an elder by Bro. Montague, with Brn. Short and Bailey assisting.

I went to Tuskahoma, the capital of the Choctaw Nation, the next day, and there amid the bustle and rush of business (council being in session) I preached my first discourse to an intelligent audience. I don't guess they knew but what I had been in the business for ten years. (I mean it was my first discourse in this church. I have been in the ministry nine years.) I arrived home at Allen, Indian Territory, October 31.

I will now go to Oklahoma and work until conference. All brethren seeing this that want my help in Oklahoma Territory will please write me at this place until further notice is given, as I want to devote my whole work to the Lord. All I am or ever expect to be, have now or ever expect to have, is his both now and forevermore.

Pray for me, brethren and sisters, that I may be able to rejoice amid persecution, and that I may have wisdom from on high, to assist me in this grand and glorious work, and that Zion's walls may be builded up and God's name honored and glorified by my ministry.

I hope to have the hearty cooperation of Bro. Maloney and the brethren in Oklahoma until conference and then have the happy privilege of meeting the brethren there and of forming their acquaintance. Hoping to meet all the faithful in the celestial kingdom of God, I will for the present desist.

Your brother in the one faith,
W. B. TONEY.

BEAVER, Texas, Oct. 24.

Editors Herald:—I have been informed that that Elder Chism has been telling the people in some localities that his debate with me has driven me to infidelity, and that some of our people think it strange to hear such reports. It might be a little strange if it were true that his tirade against Joseph Smith would turn me to infidelity. I have heard all that Elder Chism stated so often. One has only to read the Braden-Kelley debate to get it all. I have listened to Mr. Braden when I thought he did his best to destroy the faith of the saints in the restored gospel, and it did not lessen my faith in the mission of Mr. Smith.

Mr. Chism, if you made these statements, they are false. I am still preaching the gospel. Elder Chism puts me in mind of a Texas hound. When he is badly whipped he howls.

I had renewed evidence of Joseph Smith's mission during the debate.

All goes well. I am in the faith.

A. J. MOORE.

BLAIRSTOWN, Mo., Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:—On the 25th inst. I closed an eight-days' meeting at the Merritt school-house, near Alma Hout's, and baptized four; one an old lady aged fifty-four, who formerly belonged to the Christian Church, and a gentleman aged thirty-six who had made no profession previous to this.

Our experience was rather peculiar. When we arrived at the water I had no knowledge of more than one to be baptized, but two presented themselves. I baptized them and dismissed the congregation, got into my buggy, and about a hundred yards or more away, when I was called back to baptize another. After attending to this I again got into my buggy and was just starting, when a gentleman came to me (having his Sunday clothes on), and said he was ready for baptism. I felt to thank God to see how the Spirit had moved upon them to obey. Others were there who were almost ready to yield.

A few days ago I received a letter from a Methodist preacher, who formerly had been preaching for the Campbellite or Christian Church, and while he was preaching for them he wrote me a letter from which I make the following extract:—

"I cannot preach with sufficient force, not the way my hands are tied. What is the matter? The Spirit is not in it. Campbellism is too—too—cold for me. No life, no Spirit, no anything."

It seems like he has not improved his conditions very much by accepting the Methodist faith, for in a letter dated October 5, he makes the following statement:—

"I have prayed for light and there is none for me. All is dark, dark!"

The Prophet Micah says, "Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you . . . and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their lips; for there is no answer of God."

Surely the Protestant ministers and many of the churches are in that condition to-day. And why? Is it not because they have failed to comply with the condition on which God promises to give them?

I am thankful to the Lord that he is moving on the people and that they are asking for more light. May the Lord prepare his ministry to carry it to them.

Yours in the faith,

D. C. WHITE.

DOW CITY, Iowa, Nov. 4.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing to you I visited at Bro. Weed's, in Cherry County, where I baptized two. From there we came on to Simeon and stayed at Bro. Rogers' a few days, preaching in the nearest school-house, and it was eight miles away. From there to Wood Lake where I took train and left Bro. Mengle to return home alone. Bro. M. had hauled me about four hundred miles with his team, which enabled me to reach the scattered saints that I could not have visited had it not been for his kindness.

I returned home last Saturday from Valley and Custer counties, where there is a noble little band of saints. One was baptized there last Sunday from the Christian Church, a lady that I believe will have influence for good.

Organized a branch at Round Park with Bro. C. W. Prettyman president, E. B. Knott priest, John Naab teacher and E. S. Fretz deacon. The branch has a good corps of officers and if the members will sustain them in the discharge of their duties the branch will surely grow. I believe they now have twenty-one members. I expect Bro. C. R. Duncan to visit them soon and help Bro. Prettyman. There is a large field in that region that seems to be ready to hear the word; whether they will obey or not can better be told after they have heard.

I will remain home a little while preparing for winter and then go into the north part of the mission (Western Nebraska) again.

In gospel bonds,

D. M. RUDD.

ROXBURY, Va., Nov. 2.

Editors Herald:—I suppose you, and some of the brethren, would like to know what has become of F. C. Smith. Well, I am in the old historical State of Virginia, settled down, keeping house, as best we can, on the farm of Bro. Isaac Coffman. Bro. and Sr. Coffman, as also Bro. and Sr. Money maker, are grand good saints, and are doing all they can to make us comfortable. It seems good to have some one care for us, for we did not have anything to help ourselves with.

I came down here a little over two weeks ago, and started to hold meetings in a small house, which Mr. Walker, the post master, gave us to hold services in. Bro. Barnett and some others put in some boards, and a little stove to warm it with, and we have it full quite often. It will hold about fifty people. Quite a good many are very much interested in the work, and I have hopes of baptizing some before I go away. Bro. and Sr. Herrick and also Bro. and Sr. Barnett have been real kind to me and have done all they can to assist in the work. They have made me presents of clothing; others help what they can, and would do more if they had the chance. All the saints I have met seem to be good people, and I am very thankful to them for their kindness to me.

I suppose the saints of Michigan will be pleased to know that Bro. Smith is not in paradise in Virginia, and that he remembers the many favors and kindnesses shown to him and wife, while there. We have lovely weather; no rain since the flood of a few weeks ago to hinder us in the work. It is a hard place to labor in; no little towns and schoolhouses to preach in here like I had in Michigan, and it seems to me as if the church had taken me out of a ripe field of grain and put me in a green one. I am hoping and praying that I may do good while here, but I also hope I shall not have to stay here long. I did some preaching at Roman, where our church was burned; but there is no interest there. I expect to stay here for awhile yet and then return home and see what I can do there for the work and make some things to keep home with.

In bonds,

FRANCIS C. SMITH.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Oct. 28.

Editors Herald:—For the past three weeks I have been looking after gospel matters in this part of my mission field, Northern Michigan district, and have felt fairly well in preaching, teaching, and trying to give a word of encouragement to those that stand in need, not forgetting to correct those that needed correction.

There are many people in Michigan who are desirous of living lives devoted to the cause of Christ and thereby push the work on to victory. Many others have the desire, but for the lack of knowledge they sometimes get in the way of one another, and as a natural consequence little flashes of fire with great pillars of smoke are to be seen and heard of in various localities.

If the saints could only see the idea; that God, when he constructed the great plan of salvation called the perfect law of liberty, so arranged it that every man and woman in this world could have an active position in the same, and yet not be in the way of another; that if each one would learn his duty and perform it, he like the well-constructed machinery of a great mill, with some pulley wheels running one way and some another, yet they all run, that their strength might be felt together, and in that way perform the great work of the designer that lay before them.

But supposing that one of those little pulley wheels (called a priest) should slip off the journal and try to crowd out, and take the place of a larger wheel (called the district president) what would be the consequence? Why that little wheel would be in danger of getting crushed, otherwise would likely crush some other part of the machinery, and thus bring breakage and destruction, rather than perform duty.

Now I understand the church of Christ to be the great gospel mill designed by God to make Christians; that every shaft, belt, and pulley wheel must have its place and work there, and then the work done by it will be effectual and will never need to be undone. This being true, why not every young minister, such as priests and local elders, who reside in districts, when they want to go and labor for a few weeks or months, make application and obtain the consent of the president of the district and thereby find where their work would be the more effectual, ever remembering that it is not their duty to run into organized branches and give the officers hail Columbia by telling the saints they are dead and only need burying, then proceed to preach and baptize without saying a word to the officers of said branches? No local minister, either elder or priest, that knows his duty will do such things. He may go into a branch and settle difficulty, if so directed by the president of the district; otherwise he should let branch matters alone and always obtain consent of the president of the branch before preaching or baptizing in said branch.

Again, it is not the duty of local laborers when out preaching to be continually talking to the young saints whom they baptize, telling them they ought to be organized at once, and then go on to predict the ordination of Tom, Dick, and Harry, and thus get a lot fired with the zeal of office-hunting. Why not teach the saints that there are proper officers in the church, such as the missionary, assisted by the district president, to look after such matters as ordination and organization, and in this way teach them the law and get them to see that we ourselves are not the very biggest thing there is in the church? I am sorry to say that in some places I have found where some of our young ministers have baptized nearly everything they could get under the water in the form of man or woman, and allowed the idea that they themselves were the north star of the universe, to get so deeply rooted in the minds of their converts, that when the district president and missionary came down, all they had to do was to take a back seat and look on. Most any old woman could tell them who ought to be ordained and how the branch should be organized, but not one of them knew their own duty any farther than it was right to get baptized.

Remember, brethren, that simply dumping a lot of wood and stone together does not always signify a building.

True it is that this field has been neglected, not having men enough with practical experience to carry on the work. The worthy president of the district has been doing the best he can, but has been so tied up with tent work that he could not visit the branches as much as he ought to. What we need here most at the present time is a setting in order and a correcting where it needs it, with effectual teaching that all may move on, all of which we hope will be brought about in due time.

Our late conference at Freesoil was a spiritual feast to be enjoyed by a fair representation from the different parts of the district. Ern. Cooper, Cornish, Ellis, and the writer were called as speakers. Five more were baptized on Sunday afternoon, Bro. Cornish officiating. Everything moved off very nicely during the different sessions until we came to the Brooks' case, when by permission of the body Mr. Brooks was allowed the floor; and as he told how he loved this work and how deeply he was interested in it, that he could not live outside, etc., tears could be seen to flow quite freely in the audience, they supposing it to be the effects of the Spirit of God. But when F. M. Cooper was permitted to bring in the other side of the case the better judgment of the body said, We want Mr. Brooks outside the church, and thus voted.

It seems to me that if our ministry, from the deacon up, were not so afraid of hurting the feelings of transgressors and would correct them on the spot, it would save this church a lot of disgrace. But it seems there are some that love to have favor so much, that even when a correction is made they will constantly be apologizing for what has been said. Why not every minister be ready and willing to correct the man or woman that will dare to get drunk, lie, steal, or conduct himself in such a manner before the public as to provoke criticism? I believe the man that wants to do right is willing to be corrected and will act in harmony with the truth when it is told him; but he who pleads his feelings so tenderly as not to stand correction, loves to do wrong; and the officer who is afraid to tell his brother of the wrong he is doing is a moral coward, and needs correcting himself.

Why not every teacher learn his duty and then move up the line and wage war against transgression wherever it is found until the church is free from some of the crimes that now prevail. But we are told that Bro. A. B. that gets drunk, lies, or steals, is a big-hearted man; that he pays a little tithing and sticks up for the work; and besides all this, his feelings are so tender that it would not be well to approach him in regard to the wrong he has done until he gets a little stronger in the faith. Glorious! Is not this sectarianism for you in the first degree? Pays a little tithing, perhaps goads a Methodist to death about baptism; but on the top of all that proves to the public that he himself is a drunkard! Which side is his testimony on? Is it not against the church? "But his feelings," says an elder, "they are so tender!" Let that drunkard toughen his feelings equal to his character, and then the teacher does not need to use so many sugar-coated remedies that hardly ever have any effect.

Brethren, let us come up higher in the sight of the Lord; and the transgressor, let him mend his ways or get out of the church, and thus purify the body of Christ, the church. For the truth,

R. E. GRANT.

TABOR, Iowa, Oct. 5.

Editors Herald:—Our Nodaway district conference held in Guilford, Missouri, was all we could ask. Everything passed off pleasantly, and general satisfaction seemingly prevailed. Bro. T. A. Hougas was present, working in the interest of the Sabbath school, and did well. Bishop Kelley also was with us, doing excellent service in his line of work, and in his usual logical and argumentative style of expression. The saints were made to rejoice in the truth, and friends greatly enlightened in the way of life.

Bro. Peter Anderson, of Stanberry, was with us and preached the word. We were glad to see and meet with all.

Our Sunday school work and conference held in Plum Creek branch of this district, October 15-18, is reported to be first class. Our work is moving onward for good, in both of these districts. The local brethren are, we believe, trying to do their best generally. We are hopeful for the future, as we have many calls for preaching. We intend to push the work forward to victory as best we can with what force we have.

Bro. John Lentz has offered his services to the district for the winter, and we wish him success, and ask the saints and friends to receive him, and aid him what they can. He is young, but we believe willing, and trying to do what he can for the work. Dear saints, we have nothing to fear, no reason to complain. If we do right God will stand by us; if we do wrong he cannot. Let us remember this, and seek to build each other up, and by so doing we build up the work.

We deeply sympathize with our beloved President in his sad bereavement, and pray that God will sustain him in this hour of trial.

Praying for the prosperity of the work for God's blessing to rest and abide with all, as they faithfully labor for its interest, I am still,
Your brother,

HENRY KEMP.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—At ten o'clock this morning the barkentine "City of Papeete," in tow of the giant tug, "Sea King," left the harbor at this place, carrying, among other passengers, our beloved Brother and Sister Burton, who are bound for their mission field in the far-off islands of the Pacific. A little company of saints and friends had gathered on the wharf to bid them farewell, and for an hour before the boat's signal was given, the time was spent in exchanging expressions of tenderest affection and esteem.

On the boat we met with United States Consul Doty, who is returning to the islands after a visit of three or four months among relatives in Ohio and New Jersey. From him we learned that the former governor of the South Sea Islands had been released and that a new and young man had been appointed as his successor.

This was very pleasant news to us, as it seemed to very clearly express the disapproval of France of the course pursued by the former governor, and to imply that the future would be marked by more of the spirit of freedom and progress. I need hardly here say that Bro. Burton hailed the tidings with delight, for those who know what opposition he encountered at the hands of the former governor, will be able to guess his feelings better than I can describe them.

We stood upon the wharf and waved back answering signals to those upon the fast receding boat, until they faded from sight in the dim distance, and then we turned our steps towards the place of our residence, feeling a sense of uncommon lonesomeness. We had labored together with Bro. Burton for quite a season since coming to this State, and our former love had been strengthened and confirmed, and in this hour of separation we feel that a loss has been sustained by us personally. The work and the people of the Islands will be the gainers thereby, and to it and them, in the name of Israel's God, we surrender all our preferences.

It was a delightful scene to witness the cheerfulness and pleasure that marked the countenances of our gospel representatives as they moved out upon the great deep. We felt a blessed comfort as Sr. Burton bade us tell her mother and sister in Missouri, that she felt supremely happy in the parting hour. For Christ and his church, the consecration was being made, and he who had appointed the work, was inspiring the workers with a bliss uncommon, which overcame all the distress incident to parting from dear friends and coworkers. How the hearts of Bro. and Sr. Case will throb with ecstasy when they are permitted to again meet those who have gone from us. May heaven liberally bless the sacrifice and those making it, and may the harvest of their sowing be abundant and glorious.

On Thursday evening last about forty of the saints and friends of Oakland met at the home of Brother and Sister Morrison and spent several hours in social intercourse in honor of Brother and Sister Burton. It was a farewell entertainment, and was enjoyed by all. Musical and literary talent was put on exhibition in creditable style and a feast of fruit, cake, etc., helped fill out the program finely. A token of regard, in the form of a small purse was presented to the guests in honor, the writer being selected as spokesman. The response by Brother Burton was in excellent taste and spirit, and all present were regaled with a miniature view of Tahiti, in seeing Brother and Sister Burton, attired in their Island costume, stand before them, singing a couple of hymns in the native tongue. This evening's entertainment was duplicated on the next evening at San Francisco, at the home of Brother and Sister Saxe, where the members of Zion's Religion gave a farewell entertainment. The "costume" feature was not here repeated, as the clothing had been packed and prepared for shipment. The program was entertaining and, as on the former evening, there was but one feature to shade its enjoyment; viz.: the knowledge that soon we were to lose those who were the chief attraction of the occasion. All said amen, however, to the behest of heaven.

On Friday afternoon Bro. and Sr. Burton and the writer retired to a room alone and, kneeling down, presented ourselves before God for a blessing. Upon rising, at their request, I placed my hands upon their heads, and invoked divine favor upon them and their mission work. It was the first time I had performed, in a specific way, such a service; but God was there. Our hearts were made to feel his presence, and the room seemed like a hallowed place. From that moment Sr. Burton seemed almost impatient to get off. The Spirit of that visitation was still with her when she left. What a comfort supreme! What a God is ours! To him be praise forever.

I believe my health is steadily, though gradually improving. I certainly am much better than when I left home nearly four months ago. For this, thank God.

Your brother in Christ,
JOSEPH LUFF.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—This morning at nine o'clock we will leave the wharf for Tahiti on board of the "City of Papeete." It is a beautiful morning! now just daylight, wind westerly, and so we hope for a good run off shore. Since reunion I accompanied Bro. Luff on a short tour from here to Dos Palos, stopping at San Jose on the way, where he delivered some soul-stirring sermons to full houses. He also preached in the tent one evening for Bro. Haws. There were present a few saints and one outsider. He was a little the worse for the demon drink, and soon left.

From there we went to Gilroy, and on to Dos Palos, Bro. and Sr. Putney going over the mountains with us in their carriage. After a two-days' ride over mountain and dusty plain we arrived and found arrangements made for meetings in a building which had been used for a store and hall, but now used for school purposes. Here we held meetings to an exceedingly interested audience, the room being generally full and often packed full, men sitting on the floor. More outsiders there in one meeting than has been in the tent since reunion, many times over, night after night, and until the close of the service did the interest continue, and Bro. Luff delighting them, instructing them, making the Pharisees among them angry, while those who wanted truth were fairly electrified. God blessed him and much good was done. Before I left there I had the privilege of baptizing one woman; and many of the citizens of Dos Palos will long remember the solid teaching and the fiery eloquence of the preacher from the East. Here I received word that all things were ready for my departure from California to my field of labor, so I came on and now we are ready and in a little over three hours we will be on our way.

In leaving this land I wish to express my thanks to the saints for their many acts of kindness to me and mine. May God bless you all abundantly and his peace be with you; and in him who succeeds me in the care of the mission you will find a worthy, noble, devout, excellent saint of God, and servant of God indeed, patient and true; and you will be blessed if you will abide the counsel and pay heed to his instruction for he is a man of God, and God will direct him.

Remember us in your petitions. Good morning.

Your brother in Christ,
J. F. BURTON.

THE EFFECT OF NARCOTICS AND OTHER STIMULANTS ON THE SYSTEM.

ALL things have been created by the Lord for a purpose, although man is often slow in finding that purpose, and until he has discovered it, his mistakes are bound to be many.

Morphine is frequently used with advantage for obtaining unconsciousness where the idiosyncrasy of the patient will not permit the use of another anæsthetic. But mankind, wishing to escape from their troubles, have used it to such an extent that they become what is known as "fiends;" that is, their system craves the poison.

Quinine also has its victims. It is in fact, altogether too frequently used. It is given for every little ailment whether needed or not, until now in some places it is placed on the table in a special dish at every meal; for it has become a necessity. The family cannot be happy without it, and yet it has made many a person deaf for life.

Arsenic is used by the people of Switzerland, because it produces a feeling of exhilaration and causes the heart to beat more rapidly, so they can do more climbing during the day than they naturally would. Of course the reaction comes at night, and the dose must be constantly increased until they can take enough to kill three or four men.

All narcotics are used for their influence on the nerves, to produce unconsciousness—"to drown trouble."

I have here a clipping from London Answers entitled, "Cigarettes made of Hops." I shall read it as further evidence:—

"I know several ladies who have taken to smoking hop cigarettes," said a chemist, in response to the query of an Answers man. "Every one of them would give a great deal to be able to discard the habit."

"The fad originated, I understand, with a lady who has great influence in the higher circles of society. The fatigues of the season—a constant succession of dinners, balls, receptions, theaters, race meetings, the opera, and so forth—have been too much for her nerves, and she has hit upon the fragrant, soothing hop as a sedative.

“She started by taking the hops out of a hop pillow, rolling them into tiny cigarettes and smoking one or two a day. Now, she gets a constant supply of hops through me, and if I am to judge by the quantity of hops supplied to her, she must smoke an immense quantity of cigarettes.

“The hop cigarette is distinctly soothing, the smoke being characterized by a very pleasant aroma. The habit is an inexpensive one, so far as the pocket is concerned, but not as regards the health and temper. Both suffer considerably, and especially is this the case where the habit is discontinued for a short period. The hop cigarette smoker craves his peculiar weed, and isn't happy until he gets it.”

One of the commonest forms of intemperance and the one dwelt most upon by the lecturer is alcoholism. This ground has been so thoroughly covered that it is not necessary to say much about it at this time. Its effect is to cause the heart to beat more rapidly for awhile, but in the end it hinders the heart with a coat of fat. It also acts on the brain; a drunkard's brain is fairly soaked in alcohol, at least so doctors, who have dissected the brain, tell us. Some even say that it dissolves portions of the brain, while one temperance lecturer, after explaining that the brain is composed largely of albumen, took the white of an egg and dropped it in a glass of alcohol. It looked as if it had been cooked. Try it; the largest constituent of the brain after water is albumen.

Now I do not say that alcohol is not highly beneficial in certain cases of sickness, that whiskey is not good in cases of diphtheria, blood-poisoning, or snake-bites. Pure alcohol is very poisonous; but when the system contains one poison, another is usually given to counteract the first. But it is not the use, but the abuse, that is detrimental, and abuse is our theme.

I remember once reading in the Independent Patriot of a bartender who was complaining because he had to scrape the beer-drops off the bar. “But we can't leave them, for they rot the wood!”

“Rot the wood, do they?” asked the regular imbiber, “Then what in the name of common sense does it do to my stomach?”

“That's more than I know. But one thing I do know, men must have stomachs made of cast iron or they could never stand half the stuff they pour in them. Look at this.” And he took a piece of meat and poured a small measure of ginger-ale over it. In five minutes it had broken up into fragments.

Some of you may already know that doctors are at work trying to obtain a snake serum, so that they can inoculate people against snake bites. One woman in India has already succeeded. She takes the cobra's bite with pleasure. In fact, she has become so that it is absolutely necessary for her to take a bite every month, or else she becomes dizzy, miserable, and all run down; but as soon as she receives the sting and the poison she is happy and can go about her work as usual. As one authority says:—

Soon things will change and your polite invitation to your friends to sample your stock of snakes will meet with no more surprise than is now expressed when you ask them to have a cigar, or try your wines, or old Bourbon whiskey.

Tobacco, as you all are probably aware, numbers many victims; among them Gen. Grant. Its tendency is generally towards producing cancers, heart trouble, and in some cases deranging the whole system. It is good of course for bruises, lock-jaw, and sick cattle. And some physicians have advised the use of smoking tobacco. I know of men, a doctor among the number, who being so advised started smoking. They now repent at their leisure. They regret that first step. Doctors do and have sometimes advised unwisely.

My father and cousin were standing on a corner last spring waiting for a car, when they were approached by a man, a physical wreck, who asked them for some tobacco, in any form. Upon their informing him that as they had never used that article they could not have any about their persons he said, “Then give me some money so I can buy some. I am a complete wreck; I have no will of my own. Tobacco is my complete master; I'm dying for tobacco. Food I can do without, I must have tobacco.” He warned them against a similar course and left. That is what I call a tobacco “fiend.” I am heartily sorry for him, but what can be done for such as he—a physical, a moral, a mental wreck?

I have been lecturing, I feel, to no effect; for I see no such “fiends” before me. But many of us are still given to the use of tea and coffee. Now coffee is valuable in cases of opium poisoning and to stimulate the heart's action. And the poorer classes use it to allay hunger, so that they will consume less solid food. Tea will also allay hunger and many an old lady after drinking her cup of tea and breaking off a bit of cracker thinks she has had a meal! Base deception! she has partaken of almost no food—received almost no nourishment. The tea has destroyed her appetite and she imagines that she has been fed. The active principle of tea is theine; of coffee, caffeine. Scientists have now agreed that these are but two names for the same substance, which we shall call caffeine. Now caffeine will in doses of eight to twelve grains produce anxiety, great excitement, and even delirium.

The general effect of caffeine as used in tea and coffee, is to cause a feeling of exhilaration, dispel fatigue and sleepiness, and allay hunger. But after larger doses it tends to produce flatulent indigestion, nervousness, and palpitation of the heart, as well as sleeplessness and fatigue, after which the patient will have recourse to tea or coffee again, as the case may be, to brace up the system. He thus becomes a tea or coffee inebriate, a fiend, since his system seems to crave the poison.

We are informed in Chambers's Encyclopedia that doses of three to four grains of caffeine may be taken daily without serious complications by a person in normal health, but that double this quantity is dangerous. We are again informed in the Encyclopedia Britannica that a cup of coffee contains from 1.5 to 1.9 grains of caffeine. Therefore it would seem to follow that two cups of coffee may be drunk daily without serious results; but that four or more are dangerous. Of course in smaller doses the poison is slowly working its way and in larger doses serious complications may follow.

Now some may say, “I drink more than that every day, yet I do not see the bad effects. In fact I feel better after drinking a cup of coffee than before.” Of course you do. Does not the snake fiend of India take enough poison to kill several men, and yet does she not feel better after taking the poison than before? In fact, one doctor says she is better off than any other inebriate for she has only to take her drug once a month. You have to take yours twice or even three times a day.

Tea contains a larger percentage of caffeine than does coffee, but our infusions of tea are usually much weaker than those of coffee, so it is very doubtful if a cup of tea contains as much caffeine as does a cup of coffee. Still there is enough. But tea contains considerable of a substance called tannin, which precipitates both albumen and peptone, and acts on the system as an astringent. It thus hinders the course of natural digestion in a most decided manner.

It is claimed by some that tea and coffee retard the waste of tissue in the body. The Encyclopedia Britannica declares, however, that this is a mistaken idea, for they have no such effect whatever. Tea and coffee are sometimes used by the medical world in cases of sickness. But as we have before stated, when the system contains one poison another is often given to counteract the first.

After all that has been said about the effect of these poisons on the system, let us remark that gluttony and too great abstemiousness are almost equally bad. But of the two, too great abstemiousness is the worse. Overeating taxes the energy to digest, but undereating does not supply sufficient fuel to keep up the fire of life properly. Both are, however, destructive.

Of course none of us ever did anything like that. But when we have an opportunity to eat our fill of some coveted delicacy, we are all children once again, and are like the old lady who, having a very good meal set before her, after she had finished, pushed back her chair, folded her hands, and said, "Thank the Lord! I've eaten too much once again!"

Then the non-smoking man will only too often return to his work, mental or physical as the case may be, too soon after eating. There is not blood enough to go around, so damage is done. So between the man who takes a quiet smoke after his meals and the man who rushes back to hard work too soon after eating, the smoker is the lesser sinner of the two. This is probably the reason why so many of our centenarians are smokers. They take life easier.

Temperance seems to me like a man trying to walk on the comb of the roof; if he steps to either side he goes down, and when he climbs up one side, if he is not very careful he will fall down the other. So we must be very near perfect to keep on the edge.

Doctors tell us that overeating and undereating produce similar symptoms. The presence of too much of something, or the lack of the same thing, affects us in a similar manner. Whether we fail to reach the comb on one side or fall down on the other, the effect is the same,—we are down.

Although each poison accomplishes damage to its particular organ, yet injury to one is injury to all, for all must give of their energy to repair the loss of the afflicted organ.

In conclusion, we would say, "The dissipations of youth are drafts upon old age, payable, with interest, about thirty years after date." If you require proof that this is an age of dissipation, you need but to look around you and note the men of forty-five to sixty years of age who are prematurely aged. Prematurely aged! when man should but have come to the fullness of his powers, his prime. If I remember correctly Enoch when sixty-five expressed surprise that the Lord would speak to a mere boy! (Genesis 6: 32.)

Therefore we would say, "Moderation is like a silken thread running through the pearl of all virtues."

"REMNANT."

THE caption under which this article has been written may seem peculiar to well-informed Latter Day Saints; because it is generally understood among the saints and the priesthood that the church which Christ organized apostatized, the powers of hell prevailed against it, and there was not a vestige of it left,—not even a "remnant."

During the last two reunions I have attended in Southwestern Missouri, I heard it taught by one of the bright and shining lights in the church, that a remnant of God's people has been continued down the ages, until the angel made his appearance unto Joseph the Seer. When I first heard these thoughts presented, I said to myself, "That is Baptist theology." It did not ring in my ears like the pure gospel truth, and I concluded that something was wrong. I learned by reading the sacred word that a complete apostasy was inevitable. The prophets, Daniel, Isaiah, Paul, John, and Jesus Christ, together with the inspired men of this latter-day dispensation, are a unit upon this question. This is an important matter. If there was a remnant all of God's servants should teach it that way. There should be "no" division, for inspiration does not contradict itself.

I shall now present a few evidences, supporting the position that the saints were overcome. The idea of there being a remnant is a vain, imaginary thing.

And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them; and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.—Rev. 13:7.

John the Revelator saw by the unerring foresight of inspiration that war would be made against the saints and they would be overcome, not partially overcome, but completely. This is strong language and needs no comment.

For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ.—1 Cor. 12:12.

Here the apostle compares the church with the body of a man. When God made man he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul. Before this his body was an inanimate object. Likewise Christ organized the church, "the body," for the habitation of God through the Spirit; and on the day of Pentecost God breathed into the church the breath of life, the power of the Holy Ghost. The ministers went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, confirming the word spoken with signs following the believer.

When man dies, the body crumbles back to mother earth and the spirit returns to God who gave it. This earthly tabernacle of clay is no longer animated by that intellectual entity which makes us intelligible, comprehensive beings. So it was with the church when it was prevailed against by the dragon power. The saints were persecuted and overcome; the head was severed from the body, and the apostles suffered death under the cruel hands of tyranny. The church or body was dead; because the Spirit of Christ had taken its departure. The mystery of iniquity began to work in Paul's day, and later on they transgressed the law, changed the ordinance, and broke the everlasting covenant. Therefore the spirit and the body became separated. Of course there were good, honest people all through the ages; but if during the "dark ages" people were inmates of the kingdom of God where and who were they? Before these honest people can become citizens of the kingdom, they must comply with the laws of adoption. Did they do it? If they did we have no record of it. "For the body without the spirit is dead." (James 2: 26.) It is an admitted fact that the church became a disorganized body and the authority was taken from it. The authority, the gifts, and the body ceased to exist. Now James says:—

The body without the spirit is dead.—James 2: 26.

Dead means to be lifeless. Where, O where is the "remnant"?

"Well," says one, "the remnant lived among the hills and mountains away from civilization."

Yes, and they are liable to stay there never to come forth. We will never be able to find even a "little finger" of the remnant.

At the expiration of the 1260 years, the woman, according to revelation, must come out of the wilderness. This is figurative language, The same power that overcome the saints is still exercising dominion over the nations of the earth. The same power would overcome the saints at the present time, if we would only step outside the narrow way. Now the Lord commands the people to "come out of Babylon." What is Babylon but the woman which sat on the scarlet colored beast spoken of in Revelation 17:3? Then when the church is re-established in the eleventh hour dispensation, the same woman will appear upon the stage of action, that Christ proposed, too, eighteen hundred years ago. She will be robed in the same garments and clothed with like authority. Says one, How can it be the same woman? I might ask, Is not this the same government which was founded by our forefathers? Yet the same material is not living. It is still Republican in form and we delegate authority to men to legislate and make laws for the good of the country, as our ancestry did. So when the angel winged his way earthward in 1830, he delegated authority to a different generation and organized the church after the New Testament pattern. Hence it is the same woman or church that existed anciently, because we have the gospel and the Holy Ghost operating upon our minds as in days of old.

Now if the "remnant" came down the ages, why did not the angel appear to the remnant, instead of to Joseph? And if there is a remnant they must of necessity be vested with the authority of almighty God. Joseph Smith did not hold the priesthood until the angel laid hands upon his head and ordained him.

Daniel speaks in thunder tones upon this subject:—

And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws.—Daniel 7: 25.

This power spoken of was to "wear out" the saints. Worcester in his dictionary defines the word "wear" to mean, "a passing away by degrees." Thus the saints were to pass away by degrees, until they were completely worn out or overcome.

This remnant theory takes away the beauty of the gospel and the grandeur of the restoration.

Yours for the restoration,

A. M. BAKER.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG AND KIRTLAND.

Pittsburg last report 169, present number 174, gain by baptism 3, by certificate of baptism 3, by vote of former baptism 1, loss by removal 1, by death 1, net gain 5, new ordinations 7, marriages 3. Cleveland, Ohio, present number 27. Officers reporting: R. Etzenhouser, George H. Hulmes, and Jacob Reese. Bro. R. Etzenhouser elected president of district and E. S. Fairley reelected district secretary. Resolved, that it is the opinion of the conference that the Pittsburg and Kirtland district be divided so as to constitute two districts instead of one; and be it further resolved; that the several branches consider and act on the matter, reporting to the next conference of this district so that if such action shall obtain the General Conference be petitioned to grant such division. Officers present, one apostle, three seventies, five elders, five priests and one deacon. Next district conference to be held at Blake Mills, Ohio, first Saturday and Sunday in March, 1897. Since last conference a new branch was organized at Banning, Fayette County, Pennsylvania by G. T. Griffiths with Bro. Joseph Maxon as president and Sr. Ella Maxon, secretary.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Conference convened at saints' chapel, San Bernardino, ten a. m., October 16; A. Carmichael president, W. M. Gibson assistant, W. P. Pickering secretary. Officials reporting: Elders H. L. Holt, J. B. Price, N. Van Fleet, A. Carmichael, W. M. Gibson, R. R. Dana, J. G. Walker, E. J. French, W. P. Pickering, A. E. Jones, and C. Baly; Priests J. Morris, and N. J. Wixom; Teachers, J. Baldwin, J. Scott, S. Peafold, and J. Chester. Branch reports: San Bernardino, 15 baptized, 5 received, 6 removed, 4 died. Newport, 20 baptized, 9 received, 6 removed, 1 lost by error in last report, 4 died. Los Angeles, gain 1 by error, 14 baptized, 4 received, 4 expelled, 4 died. Santa Maria, 13 baptized, 9 received, 1 died. Net gain in the district 60. Bishop's agent, C. Baly, reported: On hand last report $154.06; received $1,039.85; expended $1,110.27; due church $83.64. J. Morris having offered himself for missionary labor, the matter was referred to the missionary in charge with request that he act in the matter as soon as he can. H. L. Holt was elected delegate to the General Conference of 1897. A. Carmichael was elected district president for the ensuing year, N. Van Fleet assistant, W. P. Pickering secretary and treasurer, and C. Baly was sustained Bishop's agent. Joseph Chester asked the conference for a teacher's license, which was granted. Report of district Sunday school association was read and accepted. The following was adopted: Resolved that all the local ministry are requested and expected to labor in preaching the word all that circumstances will permit under the direction of the district and branch presidents. By resolution all the active officers of the church, general, district, and local, were sustained. By resolution our district president, Albert Carmichael, was recommended to the higher authorities of the church to be ordained to the office of high priest. The business sessions were peaceful and orderly; the preaching and social services were very enjoyable. The preaching was by Elders W. M. Gibson, J. B. Price, C. Baly, and H. L. Holt. Adjourned to meet with the Los Angeles branch at ten a. m. on the third Friday in October, 1897.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Conference convened at Bay Port at 10:45, October 10, 1896. F. M. Cooper was chosen to preside, assisted by J. A. Grant. William Davis secretary; David Smith chorister; Sister Stevens organist. A vote was taken that visiting saints take part in the conference. Branches reporting: Bay Port 98, St. Thomas 37, Applegate 33, Buel Center 62, Juniata 81, Forester 28, German 23, Five Lakes 69, Huron Center 69, Sigel 36, Evergreen 103, East Fremont 37. Ministry reporting: Elders F. M. Cooper baptized 7, J. A. Grant baptized 4, Levi Phelps baptized 20, H. C. Bronson, Andrew Barr baptized 9, E. Delong baptized 9, William Davis baptized 17, William Dowker baptized 1, A. McKenzie baptized 3; Priests Thomas Rawson, P. W. Surbrook; Teachers William Hartnell, T. H. Obrien. Bishop's agent's report read and approved: Total receipts, including amount on hand at last report $380.71; total expenditures $353.36; balance due church $27.35. Resolved that this district adopt the resolution adopted by the General Conference on April 13, 1892, as found in conference minutes of 1892, page 73, which reads: "Whereas the Quorum of the Twelve deem it wisdom to appoint none as church missionaries who do not honor the Lord in 'avoiding the use of tobacco,' etc., as enjoined in the revelation of April, 1887, and whereas branch, and especially district presidents, are important church servants, therefore be it resolved, that we do respectfully call the attention of all saints to the propriety of observing the example of the Twelve in appointing such officers, especially where others equally competent are available who do thus honor the Lord;" and whereas some officers of branches in this district at the present time are addicted to the use of tobacco and have been for years; therefore be it resolved that this conference do admonish and earnestly request all such to cease the evil habit, that their teaching may be made effectual by their example, as enjoined in the revelation of 1887. E. C. Briggs, F. M. Cooper, A. Barr, William Davis, J. A. Grant, and E. Delong were appointed delegates to General Conference. Andrew Barr was chosen district president; William Davis district clerk. Preaching by F. M. Cooper, A. Barr, David Smith, E. Delong, and J. A.

Grant. A vote of thanks was tendered the saints and friends of Bay Port for their hospitality in caring for the people during conference. Adjourned to meet with the Huron Center branch at the call of district president.

CHATHAM.

Conference convened at Ridgetown, October 3 and 4; J. H. Lake president, George Green and R. C. Evans associates; John Shields and R. Coburn secretaries. Branch reports: Battle Hill 31; no change. Longwood 22; no change. Tilbury 50; 1 received. Chatham 82; 6 baptized. Lindsley 50; 2 received. Buxton 18; no change. Blenheim 51; no change. Petrolea 53; 1 received, 1 expelled. Wallaceburg 38; 1 baptized. Zone 56; 2 baptized. Wabash 39; 1 baptized. Ridgetown 45; 2 baptized, 1 received. J. H. Tyrrell reported: Receipts $362.19; expended $229.21; due church $132.98. Audited and found correct. District treasurer, George Hampshire, reported: Receipts $20.85; expended $16.80; on hand $4.05. Ministry reporting: Elders G. Green, A. Leverton baptized 6, J. Shields, S. Brown baptized 2, G. Hampshire, B. St. John baptized 4, J. H. Tyrrell baptized 5, B. Blackemore, J. A. Blackemore baptized 1, R. Coburn; Priests W. H. Taylor and J. Williamson baptized 1. An account of $0.54 from district secretary and $1.30 from the president of the district were ordered paid. The request of the Wabash branch that J. W. Badger be ordained a teacher was granted, N. L. Blakeley to attend to the same. A motion that any new opening caused by the local ministry, that such one have six months control over same assisted by the president of the district, was voted down; also one that the Chatham district be divided into two districts, the river Thames to be the dividing line. J. H. Lake was chosen delegate to represent the district at the General Conference of 1897. The committee appointed to examine some matters in connection with Petrolea branch reported: 1. We think the brother in question has not been properly dealt with; and, 2. We find according to the correspondence written by the brother in question, that he has gone into apostasy; and, furthermore, we agree with the findings of the court held on June 25, 1896, and we recommend that the time for labor with the brother be extended until the June conference of 1897, and that the president of the Petrolea branch correspond with the brother and seek to effect a reconciliation and restoration to the faith, and if the aforesaid cannot be done, that he be duly notified either in person or by registered letter to appear at the next June conference for trial. Samuel Brown, J. H. Tyrrell, and N. L. Blakeley, committee. The report was received and adopted and the committee discharged. George Green was sustained district president, R. Coburn vice president and secretary, J. H. Tyrrell Bishop's agent, and George Hampshire district treasurer. Preaching by J. H. Lake, John Shields, R. C. Evans, and A. Leverton. A collection was taken up at the close of the Sunday afternoon service to pay the incidental expenses of the conference amounting to $9.08. It was paid to the district treasurer. Adjourned to meet with the Buxton branch the second Saturday and Sunday in June, 1897.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Sunday school association of the Mobile district will meet in convention with the Three Rivers school, at Three Rivers, Mississippi, December 11, at two p. m. At seven p. m. the hour will be occupied by a model Sunday school session in charge of the district officers and to be participated in by representatives of all the schools in the district. The lesson will be the one for December 13, in the three grades of the Gospel Quarterly. All come prepared, and let us have a profitable time.

Secretaries reports should include the work of thirteen Sundays—from September 13 to December 6 inclusive—and should be sent by mail to the district secretary, J. L. Booker, Bay Minette, Alabama, or to the convention by delegate.

We hope to see every school reported and well represented and every one come prepared to do their part. If we meet thus success will crown our efforts.

C. I. CARPENTER, Supt.
J. L. BOOKER, Sec.

The Pottawattamie district Sunday school association will convene at Crescent, Iowa, Saturday, November 21, at two p. m. The afternoon session will be devoted to business and the discussion of important questions. The evening session will be of a literary character. It is hoped that as many as can will be present.

AN APPEAL.

To the Saints of the Decatur District:—We, the undersigned, were duly appointed at the Lucas conference, October 24, 1896, to raise means and procure an organ for use in the "gospel tent." An organ is an absolute necessity to the success of meetings in the tent and as every saint in the district should possess an equal interest in the spread and advancement of the "glad tidings of good news" unto all people, we make this appeal to you, that you contribute to this fund freely and thus aid in pushing our cause. If more is received by the committee than is necessary we will deposit the overplus with the district treasurer. Do not postpone in sending your contributions, as now is a most favorable time. All moneys can be remitted to the chairman, Box 224, Lamoni, Iowa, or handed to either member of the committee.

Dear saints, we make this appeal to each of you individually who are able to aid, and confidently expect a hearty response.

In bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.
S. V. BAILEY.
A. M. CHASE.

LAMONI, IOWA, Nov. 6, 1896.

All saints living at or near Spring Valley, Seatonville, Hollawayville, Loceyville (Marquette), De Pue (all in Bureau County, Illinois), please communicate with the undersigned. Any saints knowing of saints or friends interested at or near these places, are invited to communicate with

T. J. SHELDON.

LADD, Bureau County, Illinois, October 28. 2t

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

There will be a conference of the Montana district held at Deer Lodge the 28th and 29th of November. A full representation of the ministry and members of the district is desired. Presidents and secretaries of branches in the district are asked to see that the branches furnish full reports. Come, saints, let us meet and have a good time.

JOHN E. REESE, Pres.
GOMER REESE, Sec.

The conference of the Little Sioux district will meet at Little Sioux, Harrison County, Iowa, December 5 and 6. Hope for full reports. Will begin Saturday, 5th, at 11 a. m.
A. M. FYRANDO, Dist. Sec.

BORN.

BROOKS.—To Bro. Samuel M. and Sr. Anna Brooks was given a son on May 19, 1896, in St. Joseph, Missouri. This precious one appearing in the midst of tribulation, as a sunbeam, was blessed at the home of its parents on October 1, 1896, by J. M. Terry under the impress of the Holy Spirit.

WIGHTMAN.—At Spring Creek, Brown County, Colorado, April 17, 1896, to Bro. Sherman and Sr. Cora Wightman, a son; named Samuel Allington, and blessed at Lamoni, Iowa, October 4, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and H. N. Snively.

CHURCH.—At Lamoni, Iowa, August 5, 1896, to Bro. C. F. and Sr. Laura Church, a son; named Arthur Burdette, and blessed October 4, 1896, by Elders H. N. Snively and H. A. Stebbins.

NORMAN.—To Mr. Andrew F. and Ellen H. Norman, a son, November 7, 1894. Blessed September 30, 1896, by Elder C. E. Hand.

RIPLEY.—A daughter was born to George and Sr. Ellen Ripley in St. Joseph, Missouri, September 16, 1896. She was blessed at the church on November 1, 1896, by Elders J. M. Terry and R. Archibald, and given the name of Marguerite.

FANNON.—September 18, 1896, to Ed S. and Annie M. Fannon, of Bedison, Missouri, a son, and named Charles Madison. Blessed October 29, 1896, by H. Kemp and Ole Madison.

HAGER.—To Jerry and Belle Hager, of Guilford, Missouri, a son, September 12, 1896, and named Freddie. Blessed October 20, 1896, by Henry Kemp.

MARRIED.

SMITH—MURDOCK.—At Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, November 5, 1896, by Apostle G. T. Griffiths, Sr. Bertha S. Murdock and Bro. Ralph G. Smith.

DIED.

DORSETT.—At Earlville, Illinois, June 11, 1896, Sister Anna, wife of Bro. George Dorsett. She was born near Earlville, Illinois, July 12, 1868. They had lived in Wright County, Iowa, for more than five years and lost the firstborn while there, a son, three years old, August 3, 1893, and on February 20, 1895, was baptized a member of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by C. Scott and within one week moved back to Earlville, Illinois, her former home, and took a severe cold, which settled on her lungs and lingered about three months; and passed peacefully away a firm believer in Christ and in the hope of the first resurrection. She leaves a husband and child, father and mother, and two brothers to mourn their loss. Funeral June 13, conducted by Reverend John Roades, of Earlville, Illinois.

Then peacefully rest till the grave shall uncloseth
No sound can awaken thy quiet repose;
Thy spirit by angels is carried above
To the mansions of glory, the heaven above.

Oh may we, like her, when grim death shall appear,
Be ready and willing the summons to hear.
In life be no cowards, but bravely contend
For the gospel of Jesus, our Savior and friend.

HIDY.—At Collins, Iowa, little Eva Lena Hidy. She was born at Collins, Iowa, September 14, 1888, and died October 25, 1896, aged 8 years, 1 month, 11 days. She was beloved by all that knew her because of her admirable qualities and affectionate loving spirit. Her mother and little baby brother preceded her about three years ago. She leaves father and step-mother to mourn her and to whom she became very much endeared, and a little baby brother and other relatives to mourn her early departure. Funeral at the residence in charge of Elder William C. Nirk.

THOMPSON.—At Dennisport, Massachusetts, October 22, 1896, Bro. Martin Thompson, aged 78 years and 3 months. Funeral October 25, with services by Elder John Smith. The services at the grave were in charge of the Masonic Order.

SANDIDGE.—At Bridger, Montana, September 13, 1896, M. P. Sandidge, aged 62. The circumstances connected with Mr. Sandidge's death are very sad. One evening when watering his horses, they became frightened, and one of the halter ropes became tangled about one of his wrists, and the horse dragged him quite a distance, and kicking him. When he was found he had a large gash on the head and he was unconscious, and remained so until death. Mr. Sandidge came West at an early period in life. He was the husband of Sr. Sandidge, of Bridger, the first convert to the latter-day work in that locality. He was a firm believer in the doctrine, but had put off obeying it, but had he lived there is no doubt he would have obeyed it. His home was always open to the elders for food and shelter and for preaching when they were ruled out of the schoolhouse in his neighborhood. We feel sure there is a reward for him. Wife and seven children mourn their loss. They have the sympathy of all about them. We are sure the Lord will take care of them. The funeral sermon was preached by J. E. Reese from Job 14:1. Interment in the cemetery at Reese Creek.

GARNER.—At Malaga, California, October 23, 1896, Elder Daniel Garner. Bro. Garner was born June 24, 1854, at San Bernardino, California, to which place, his father, John Garner, and his family emigrated from Salt Lake, Utah, with Amasa Lyman and C. C. Rich, after the expulsion from Illinois, in 1846, and where afterward the family joined the Reorganized Church, under the ministrations of Elders J. W. Gillen, Blair, and others. Bro. Daniel was baptized May 15, 1870, by Elder J. W. Gillen, and remained a faithful adherent, and after his ordination to the eldership, advocate of the faith and the church, filling offices of trust with justness and dignity, to the satisfaction and confidence of the saints where he dwelt. The sympathies of all go out to Sr. Mary, his wife, upon whom the loss falls heavily, she having lately been called to lose a child by death and her house by fire, and now her husband. Bro. Daniel Garner was a great sufferer for years and welcomed death as a release from disability and pain. He died respected by all and loved by many. "And his rest shall be glorious."

STRANAHAN.—J. K. Stranahan was born in Chesterfield, Essex County, New York, September 17, 1809; died in Hood River, Oregon, September 10, 1896. Was married in Essex, Essex County, in 1830, to Miss Pamela Reynolds, of Essex. They settled in Stockholm, New York, where both united with the Christian Church. After living many years in Stockholm, they moved to Southern Michigan, where they resided six years. They then moved to Minnesota while it was yet a territory. He came to Oregon with his wife in 1833, and survived her five years. They had seven children, four sons and three daughters, all of whom are living. He was a student of the Bible, and made a practice of reading it through once a year. He became identified with the church about twenty years ago, and his voice was often heard in defense of the restored gospel.

CRAVEN.—Angus Ray Craven, infant son of Bro. and Sr. Jarett Craven, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, born October 7, 1895; died from the effects of a fall October 15, 1896. Funeral service preached by F. M. Weld, October 18.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

EARLY THANKSGIVINGS AND THE EVENTS WHICH LED TO THEM.

WE wonder how many boys and girls know the facts which we shall tell them about this holiday. How many, for instance, can tell in what year the day was first observed? To recall the circumstances of the first day of Thanksgiving may serve to remind us of how much more we have to be thankful for than had those early pilgrims. History tells us that of the one hundred and two emigrants that landed on the bleak and rocky coast of Cape Cod bay in the winter of 1620 almost half died before the following winter fairly set in. To-day in our comfortable country and city homes we cannot even imagine the sufferings of the survivors, both from destitution and the inclement weather, which they were not prepared either as to clothes or habitations to brave. The most of the brave people were not inured to hardships. Among them were gentle and delicately nurtured men and women.

They staked and laid out two rows of huts for the nineteen families that comprised the colony, but within the first year they had to make seven times more graves for the dead than houses for the living. Notwithstanding all their trials and hardships these brave founders of a great and glorious race had so much for which to be thankful that they had to appoint "an especial day on which to give especial thanks for all their mercies."

So they agreed among themselves that, since their prudence and forethought had been so wonderfully blessed of God, they would send out four men hunting that they might rejoice together in a special manner after the fruit of their labors had been gathered. According to the historian, barley and Indian corn were their only crops; the "peas were not worth gathering, for, as we feared, they were too late sown." This was under the good Governor Bradford. The four men who went hunting brought in as much game as served the company for a week. The recreations of the day consisted of the exercises of their arms—Massasoit, the Indian chief, and ninety of his men coming among them for three days, during which time they were entertained and feasted by the colonists, the Indians killing and bringing to the feast five deer. This was in 1621 and was the beginning of thanksgiving in America.

The next New England Thanksgiving day was in July, 1623, which had been appointed a day of fasting and prayer on account of drought. While the people were praying rain fell abundantly and the Governor appointed it instead a day of thanksgiving. In June, 1632, Governor Winthrop, of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, invited the Governor of Plymouth Colony to unite with him in a day of public thanksgiving because the action of the British Privy Council had been favorable to the colonies. In Massachusetts Bay Colony old records show that days of thanksgiving were appointed in 1632, 1634, 1637, 1638, and 1639, and sometimes on more than one day in the same year. In Plymouth we find mention of one in 1651 and again in 1668. In 1680 it seems to have become an annual custom.

During the Revolution it was annually recommended by Congress; then there was a thanksgiving for peace in 1784, and in 1789 President

Washington recommended a day of thanksgiving for the adoption of the Constitution. In 1795 there was one for the suppression of insurrection, and in April, 1815, the president appointed a day of thanksgiving for peace. In New England, during all this time, however, annual proclamations were issued by the governors of the various States officially recommending the religious observance of the day, where indeed it became the principal social and home festival of the year.

During the war of the rebellion President Lincoln appointed special thanksgiving in 1862 and 1863, and a national proclamation of annual thanksgiving was issued in 1863 and 1864. Since that time the President, as well as governors and mayors, have issued such a proclamation annually.

One of the remarkable thanksgivings on record was the custom in Southampton and Easthampton, Long Island. Montauk Point, consisting of about nine-thousand acres, was owned by numerous proprietors in those two towns. They used it as a common pasturage for their stock. The time for driving the flocks home for the winter was fixed at a meeting by the town council, "and it came," says the historian, "to be a rule from the period beyond which the memory of man runneth not that the Thursday of the week following the return of the cattle from Montauk should be observed as a day of thanksgiving."

But thanksgiving is older even than the United States. In many countries there have been from time to time thankful hearts. In Holland the first anniversary of the deliverance of the city of Leyden from the siege, October 3, 1575, was kept as a religious festival of thanksgiving and praise. In the English Church service the 5th of November is so celebrated in commemoration of the gunpowder plot.

We think we have told you as much as you can remember about what other people had to be thankful for and when, and if you will master some of these dates you will probably be better informed about the day, which to you means perhaps only a great feast, than will some of the older folks, who, we are sure, will be very proud and pleased to hear what you have learned.—American Agriculturist.

OLD MANUSCRIPT OF "ECCLESIASTICUS" BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

THE American Hebrew thus speaks concerning the finding of a MS. that "belongs, at latest, to the twelfth century:"—

"Examining some ancient MSS. which Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Gibson brought back to Cambridge from their most recent visit to the Orient, Mr. S. Schechter has had the good fortune to light upon a leaf containing a small segment of the original Hebrew text of that very remarkable book: Ecclesiasticus, or the Wisdom of the Son of Sirach. If the whole of the MS. to which this fragment belongs can be recovered, it will set at rest many philosophical and even historical problems. But this particular section of the Apocrypha has so extraordinary an intrinsic as well as critical importance that even a fragment of it, in its original form, must be welcomed as a great and valuable discovery. . . . A comparison with the Greek and Syriac versions shows that this recovered text varies in its correspondence with the versions in almost every line. . . . No vowel points are used in this fragment, though the copy of which Saadya spoke bore both vowel points and accents. This is believed to show the influence of Karaites; who thought none but Scripture writings should be punctuated. So, within two centuries after Saadya's death, the punctuation of non-canonical texts died out."—Ex.

STRENGTH OF DIFFERENT RELIGIONS.

THERE has been computed, "on the basis of the latest scientific and statistical sources accessible," a suggestive table of the distribution of the people of the globe according to their religions. This table is published in the Deutsche Kirchenzeitung (Berlin). The population of the earth is estimated at fifteen hundred millions, distributed as follows: Europe, 381,200,000; Africa, 127,000,000; Asia, 354,000,000; Australia, 4,730,000; America, 133,670,000; total, 1,500,000,000. The leading religions are represented by the following figures: Protestant Christians, 200,000,000; Roman Catholic Christians, 195,000,000; Greek Catholic Christians, 105,000,000; total, Christians, 500,000,000; Jews, 8,000,000; Mohammedans, 180,000,000; Heathens, 812,000,000; total non-Christians, 1,000,000,000. The Presbyterian Review (Toronto), remarks that according to these data, one-third of the population of the globe is Christian—that is to say, nationally and nominally Christian. This differs largely from statistical estimates heretofore made.—Ex.

LET THE CHURCH BE TAXED.

It is argued that many churches are not self-sustaining at present, and that to tax them would render them still less so. Thousands are less able to provide for their children because of the tax-collector. Why should the laborer pay taxes upon his humble home, and the religious corporation be exempted? Make all property bear its just and equal share of taxation and you lessen the laboring man's burden. When the workingman feels that his burden is heavier, because the magnificent possessions of the church are omitted from the tax roll, do you wonder that the church loses its power over him?

History is said to repeat itself, and the United States are on a fair way of reaching a condition which took place in England at one time, and in France, Italy, Spain, South Germany, Mexico, and some of the South and Central American Republics. In these countries corporated religious wealth became so great that it crippled their resources, paralyzed industry, and produced political and social ambitions which were only alleviated by wholesale confiscation. The taxation of church property is in the interest of American principles, and in harmony with the experience of nations. Exemption is a relic of the principle of church and state, inherited from the Old World, and not yet eliminated from our political system.—From "The Taxation of Church Property," by the Rev. Madison C. Peters, in North American Review for November.

WHAT THE AMERICAN COLLEGE HAS DONE.

The American college has possibly done more in laying foundations for culture than in directly cherishing culture; for the American college has been so deeply concerned with the primary disciplines that it has found little opportunity for affording to its students means and methods of the deepest enrichment. But it has given impulses; it has awakened aspirations; it has put before the student standards of taste; it has trained intellectual judgment; it has given to the great law of right a new value by showing the breadth of its application and the height of its reach; it has sought to create a refinement which is purchased neither by the elimination of robustness nor by the introduction of over-critical æstheticism; it has tried to train each man to love the best in literature, in music, in painting, in nature, in humanity; and it has striven constantly to cause the student to distinguish in everything, not simply the good from the bad, but, what is far more difficult, the better from the best.

This service of the American college in training men to live intellectual lives is of the greatest worth to this country and to this age. For, in this age and country of materialism, the college should minister to the things of the mind. The college should not directly attempt to stem the tide of materialism. The attempt would be useless. But the college may worthily hope to transmute the capacity for this material enthusiasm, even if not the enthusiasm itself, into a capacity for holding and delighting in relations which are eternal, spiritual, and ethical.—From "Influence of The College in American Life," by President Charles F. Thwing, D. D., LL.D., Western Reserve University and Adelbert College, in North American Review for November.

Though most great captains and warriors have made their reputation before reaching the age of 50, there are some who did their best work at a much greater age. The most striking instance of this is, perhaps, that of Enrico Dandolo, elected Doge of Venice in 1192, at the age of 82. In the following years he attacked and conquered Trieste, the Ionian Islands, and Constantinople. In 1204, being then 94 years of age, he took Constantinople by storm, himself leading the attack.

Probably the oldest timber in the world is found in the ancient temples of Egypt, in connection with stonework which is known to be at least 4,000 years old. This, the only wood used in the construction of the temples, is in the form of ties, holding the end of one stem to another.

PUBLICATIONS WANTED.

The undersigned desires to purchase volumes 1, 2, and 3 of the Times and Seasons to complete the set; also volumes of the Messenger and Advocate, Millennial Star, or other publications of the early church. Volumes issued in the early times of the Utah Church are also wanted.

LAMONI, IOWA, NOV. 18, 1896.

"THE MORMONS IN ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI."

UNDER the above heading, The Church Advocate, for September 16th, has a correspondence between Elder W. R. Covert, pastor of the Church of God, 2929 Montgomery Street, St. Louis, Missouri, and Elder B. H. Roberts, of the Utah Mormon Church, in which the former challenges the latter to a discussion, in the following peculiar form:—

Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, Young, et al., the original founders of the Mormon Church, and compilers, promoters, and publishers of the Book or Bible of Mormon, were liars, frauds, knaves, or ignoramuses, and that the Book of Mormon is unworthy of credence, belief or respect, and that Mormonism is a delusion, a fraud, and a lie, the same as modern spiritualism.

This challenge Elder Roberts declined, giving as the reason that the language in which it was couched warranted his so doing. The following is from Mr. Roberts' letter:—

The coarseness, vulgarity, and intemperance of that language addressed to one who is an entire stranger to you, is not of an assuring nature; and as I have no other means of judging of your disposition or character, but by your communication, I must tell you frankly that I cannot conceive of you being a proper person with whom to engage in a religious discussion, and therefore respectfully decline your challenge.

This Elder Covert is the man with whom Bro. W. H. Kelley discussed at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and was there properly met and the cause he attacked, the Reorganized Church, sustained. At the opening of his article to the Advocate he states as follows:—

The Mormons, known as the "Latter Day Saints," or those of Salt Lake, or polygamy branch, and the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ," who teach the same as the Salt Lake Mormons, except that they repudiate polygamy, have been unusually active and aggressive, and have been making great claims and circulating their literature among our church people and congregation after services. I regarded this as very impertinent on their part, to keep putting their literature under our noses in our own house of worship. To bring the matter to a square issue I issued a challenge which was sent them, and I received a reply, to which I replied.

The challenge and Elder Roberts' declination of it are given by us.

The reason why we notice this challenge to debate and the refusal of it is, that in some localities where the elders of the Reorganization are at work it is presented to them as if the challenge had been sent to us of the Reorganization and been declined by us, which is not correct. It is true that Elder Covert does in a manner something like his name, include both the Utah Church and the Reorganization as Mormons, and carries the inference that both have distributed literature in the house of worship of the Church of God after services, which he considers very impertinent; and in the saying, "I have issued a challenge, which was sent them," seems to think that by sending such challenge to Elder Roberts, he sent it to the Reorganization, thereby mixing the two churches in one, notwithstanding he admits that the one has "repudiated polygamy." We do not know whether anyone of the Reorganized Church has been engaged in presenting tracts to those who may have attended services at the places of worship of the Church of God, but we think it possible; nor do we know if the Utah elders, B. H. Roberts and his coworkers, have done it; but think it possible; and should it have been done, we are quite prepared to believe that so far as the Reorganized Church is concerned, such distribution of tracts, pamphlets, etc., was the result of an attack made on the church and its faith by Elder Covert, directly or indirectly. We do not know that this is so, but think it probable. Nor do we think it impertinent if it did occur, or if done by either, or both the Utah people and our own elders; for the reason that it is a common usage among dissenting bodies of believers, and is in its practice far preferable and more manly than to indulge in abuse and vituperation in the pulpit where no one is allowed to reply, or defend the faith assailed.

Now, be it known unto all who read, that so far as the Editor is informed, no challenge from Elder Covert, of the Church of God, to discuss, has been received by any of the elders of the Reorganized Church, nor do we know that any such challenge has been issued to us.

We think further that, Elder Roberts' letter in which he declined the challenge as worded, was correct and justifiable for the reason given; though we in no sense think that the challenge was issued to us, or that we are in any sense of implication under obligation to notice it. If Elder Covert desires to join issue with Elder B. H. Roberts, it is likely that gentleman can look after his side of both the issue to be joined and the preliminary arrangements, including the wording of the challenge. Should he have a desire to join issue with the Reorganization, it is fair to presume that the brethren at Saint Louis can and will attend to the matter when it shall take proper shape for their notice.

In the meantime it will be well to bear in mind that we neither advocate the Utah philosophy, nor stand for its eldership; neither do we consent to being classed with them because Elder Covert or any others choose to make such attack.

WISDOM UNDER STRESS OF CONDITIONS.

THE last election has again demonstrated the fitness of the American citizen for self government. The fact that the elective franchise has been exercised by the voting portion of seventy millions of people, after a political campaign in which the issues between the parties have been hotly, sometimes intemperately contested, on all sides, is a strong proof that the American citizen is as a rule a lover of his country and seeks his country's good in the measures which he advocates by the casting of his ballot. Upon no other hypothesis can this extraordinary object lesson in government be accounted for.

Take the city of Chicago as an example. Nearly two millions of citizens, a population composed of a great variety of nationalities and their descendants, among whom are to be found classes from the refined to the vicious, pass through the culminating crisis of a hotly contested political struggle on an appointed day, in almost absolute peace and safety to life and property. What was done in Chicago was done in all the great cities with scarcely an exception, reflecting a credit upon the American freeman, worthy the attention of the world.

We are not writing in reference to the issues, the principles at stake on either side, nor praising one class at the expense of another, but to offer commendation to the American citizen, whoever he was and whatever ticket he voted on the 3d of November last, for his exhibition of forbearance and political good will to man.

One of the causes resulting in the peaceable election in Chicago was the enforcement of the excellent provision in the statute laws of Illinois, which requires that all places where intoxicants are sold shall be closed and kept closed on all election days. The municipal officers of that great city knew that disturbance, riot, bloodshed might follow in the wake of the open saloon, and so gave orders to the police force to see to it that the law concerning the drinking places should be observed. Sobriety resulted, and the city was saved the scenes that would otherwise have occurred.

There may be some bitterness of feeling left after the hot words uttered, and the unjustifiable aspersions cast upon others, by some on either side; but it is to be hoped that this will soon wear away before the general and usual good nature of the American freeman, who is courageous in conflict, strong in defeat, and generous in victory.

The days will come and go, the sun shine as brightly, the rain fall as steadily, the corn grow as high and the pumpkins as big, all events for the good and ill of all keep on succeeding each other in their courses, just the same under one president as under another, whether chosen by the men of this party, or that, the exponent of the one policy or of the other; so let all be patient, hopeful, and enduring.

CORRECT LIVING.

IN conversation with a brother, a hard working, busy man, the other day, he remarked: "I always live within my means; so that I owe no one, and can lie down at night and sleep without being troubled."

This suggested the thought, that what has been said about the average American living beyond his income is in far too many instances true. The idea is that the average American, acting upon the idea that he is just as good as anybody else, must live as well and have things as nice and good as does that some anybody else; and this too, apparently, without taking into the account the conditions surrounding both cases.

Without stopping to dispute about the proposition, but taking it for granted that each individual American citizen is as good as every other so far as being flesh and blood, with liberty to live, move, and have a being in pursuit of happiness is concerned, inquiry may be made as to whether the man who earns but $500 per year should have and use in his living, commodities that cost from $550 to any other sum in excess of his earnings, because that some other citizen no better than he receives and expends such larger sum. From some things that are said, one is led to infer that some who criticise existing things would hold that no matter what sum one man received, whether much or little, no one should be permitted to live better, that is, more luxuriously than himself, that being equally as good as another, the economies of nature should be so manipulated as to provide for him as for his apparently more favored neighbor. Hence, whatever this man who is as good as every other man, may obtain in excess of what he earns to spend, he is entitled to from the undefinable and unknown quantity, "the world," and hence, laws should be so modeled that the inequalities should be scaled down, or up, and general society make up what he has not less than the other. The axiom upon which this is turned is, "The world owes me a living anyway," and the man proceeds to collect his debt. Too many do not too nicely discriminate as to what portion of mankind called the world they proceed against in their effort to collect; but living beyond what they earn and have to spend, the deficiency is gathered from others, many of whom are no richer in reality than themselves. This is what causes a good many failures in business circles all over the country, men in business being called upon, in an indirect way to meet the living expenses of those of the class referred to. Nor is this confined to the extremely poor; a good many examples being discoverable among classes moderately independent, ambitious, but unwise.

In all cases where it is possible, by the application of the strictest rules of economy, and the sacrifice of self-indulgence families should live within their income; buy only what they can pay for, take care of what they buy, and see that nothing is permitted to go to waste. It was once said of the Western American farmer, by a German writer and economist, that the German farmers on a similar number of acres would manage to live on what the American farmer lets go to waste. The French housekeepers, both of the lower and middle classes, are adepts in utilizing the family resources, often making an attractive and wholesome repast out of materials which the American housewife of similar classes would think only fit to be thrown away. This fault, if it be a fault, lies as much at the door of the "man of the house," the householder, as at that of his helpmeet, and is as noticeable, and may be traced to the same source, an unnecessary and reprehensible pride, a feeling to appear to be as well off as others, which stimulates an improper emulation, damaging to the happiness and credit of the one actuated by it.

It requires considerable courage, nowadays, for a man to say, "I cannot afford it;" when he is urged to buy by shrewd salesmen, who are intent upon making sales of their goods, but this courage is commendable, and should be exercised, always when persons in close, or straitened circumstances are urged to buy what they may want, but do not need, or what they are asked to get into debt for. Yielding has been the leading cause to financial ruin of many an otherwise thrifty man, who getting into debt, has struggled along under his load until his strength and courage both failed, and he died leaving a heritage of debt, to be either paid by his widow and children, or to pass to the wrong side of the "profit and loss" account of those he owed when he died.

Debt cannot always be avoided, but in the great majority of cases it can be, and should be. Especially should the young man entering life on his own resources keep out of debt. No matter who he sees dressing finer than he, or spending money and time in personal pleasure, "having a good time," he should say constantly, I have not the money to spend that way, and I will not go into debt. Keep out of debt, live within your income, and then you will, if industrious, keep righteously the injunction, "Provide things honest in the sight of all men."

Personal observation and experience have suggested to the editor the wisdom of what is here written.

COLLEGE GROUNDS GRADED.

IN answer to a call for volunteer work, about forty willing souls responded, with about fifteen or twenty teams, and prepared to grade the grounds and remove the accumulated lumber and rubbish about the College building, on Saturday the 14th inst. Bro. Frank Criley and William Anderson, of the Trustees, took charge of the work, which was pushed almost to completion ere night came on, and renewed on Monday the 16th, and brought to completion.

The spirit of the volunteers was a willing one; all joined heart and hand in the good work and cheerfully pushed it to the close. Elders and laymen, saints and friends, worked together like good fellows, and the grading proved a great success.

It was astonishing to see how even an apostle, fresh from his pulpit in the field, held a firm grip on a scraper and grader, as it passed through or inclined to bounce over the hard clay-gumbo, from morn till nightfall. He was a man of nerve, however, lithe and wiry, and no exception to the gathered workers in grit and intention to help, and help he did, as did all present.

The work of grading and cleaning up, a big job, was thus done without the outlay of money, and done freely and heartily by all participating, much to the satisfaction of the workers themselves and those having the interests of the college work in charge.

The labor done and the spirit prompting it are appreciated and the HERALD voices the general sentiment of all in charge of and interested in the college building and work in moving a vote of thanks for the good service rendered.—Seconded and carried unanimously—everybody voting.

The janitor, Bro. Frank Bradfield, has already moved his family into the building, which is being prepared for college use beginning with the winter term, which opens on the 3d of January. Students and others interested should note the date.

NOTE IT.

THOSE who love the work are interested in noting the movements of those who oppose it, especially the cunning methods employed by those who, unable to meet the truth by open methods, resort to trickery and lying and evasiveness. We refer the reader to the statements of Bro. M. H. Bond's letter in this issue, in reference to the methods employed by Elder B. H. Roberts of the Utah Church, now devoting his attention to the city of Cincinnati, and who previously visited and made missionary efforts at St. Louis. Bro. Bond presents just a little of the long list of tactics employed by some Utah generals and some representatives in the mission field, from which those who will may readily judge and properly estimate the principles for which they contend.

We are aware that this statement may sound harsh, but it is not, nor is it so intended. The harsh part of it is the spirit that resorts to such means to cover up false positions and to deceive. It will be remembered that while the Utah elders have been claiming that polygamy is a thing of the past, when pressed to it they admit belief in it as a cardinal principle of the "celestial" law, hence essential to ultimate exaltation to their "celestial" future. Elder Roberts also devoted a portion of his recent efforts in St. Louis to the advocacy of "polygamy." No one with ordinary judgment should for a moment be misled by the elders of the Utah apostasy; nor will clear-headed sensible men or women be fooled or duped by their apparent guilelessness, through a mistaken sense of "sympathy." As men they are to be pitied and not mistreated; but as teachers they should be withstood and the erroneous and debasing features of their faith made plain, in justice to the people, to protect from religious and moral deception, and to vindicate the truth.

The propositions involved are simple ones and can readily be decided by men and women of ordinary development and free from the leaven that, because mixed with some great truths—perverted to certain ends—have bound the Utah Mormons through priestcraft; viz., polygamy and priestly domination, which have almost invariably followed or accompanied apostasy. Idolatrous and semi-idolatrous peoples, including also transgressors among Israel of old, have erected polygamy into prominence as a principle of their institutions. Great monarchies, European and Asiatic, have been cursed and dismembered by it, and countless evils have followed in its train. It is a legitimate production of men and nations who have departed from God, and has been one of their first sins and leading causes of degeneration and darkness. It is a favorite principle of barbarous men and has flourished in the wornout semi-civilized nations of the effete East. Ishmael and his descendants, the children of the "bondwoman," the progeny of her illegitimate son, have loved and lived in it, and find it congenial to and coördinate with their "false prophet" and his perversion of the truth, and which has brought them the perpetual heritage of spiritual fanaticism and bondage.

Such, in brief is the history of polygamy in its results upon mankind. It belongs to a dark past, in which it and the systems of apostate religions that have adopted it have wrought out and demonstrated its terrible results before the eyes of humanity, and which have been recorded in the pages of history for the admonition of men and women in the present time.

But again, in latter times, man has been permitted to repeat his folly and work out and actually demonstrate the results of departure from God and his truth, hence apostasy and polygamy in Utah, the results of disobedience, apostasy, usurpation, priestcraft, and darkness.

The American people, the Anglo-Saxon, the Teuton, and other nations, enlightened by the spirit of the nineteenth and almost dawning twentieth century, and profiting by the experiences of the past, are looking forward, not backward, advancing in civilization and casting aside the dead weights that in the past have caused such a vast amount of intellectual, spiritual, and moral darkness and death and hindrance to their material progress. It is too late to champion such principles and their concomitant evils. God is at work and has declared that man shall be emancipated, that abomination shall not reign. The wrong shall fail, the truth prevail. The truth entire, unmixed with error, alone can stand.

We are of opinion that many of the leaders of the Utah Church already read and have for some time read the handwriting on their wall and have little hope of extending their present system; but the rather seek to keep what they have intact, so long as possible; that it is a vain hope, however, for the elements of dissolution are surely at work, undermining their own erroneous system; and that their own people will at no distant day demand an open account of their stewardship; that they meet the foe like men and make answer to the ministry of the Reorganization, whose mission it is to deliver the captive people of Utah, and all others in spiritual darkness. This is its mission, as the continuation of the church organized through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith the Martyr and his coworkers by Jesus Christ the great Head over all things to the church.

ONE of the brethren writes that he is becoming quite anxious to see the forthcoming History of the Church; that he ought to have interest on the amount forwarded in prepayment for it. On behalf of the Business Manager we state that had there been no long list of delinquent accounts due the office, prepayment would not have been required; also that said delinquencies have obliged the office to borrow money at interest to issue the history. Work is being pushed on the book and the first volume will probably be finished and mailed about the holidays. Work has been expedited so far as the laborious and particular character of such a publication would permit. We believe that when the book does appear it will justify what the church has anticipated and what the HERALD Office has advertised it to be.

ARMENIAN massacres continue. The great powers hesitate to interfere lest a general war be precipitated by the division of territorial soil:—

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 10.—The reports in circulation here on Thursday last that a massacre had occurred near Kaisarien turns out to have been more serious than at first announced. The massacre occurred in the village of Everek; one hundred persons were killed and nearly all the Armenian houses were pillaged.

IMPORTANT WORLD ITEMS.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—In the course of a speech at Enfield last evening Sir Charles Dilke, the well-known authority on international politics, said that England had recently rejected a proposal by the three great powers to partition China. He also said that the alleged recent inspection of the forts of the Dardanelles by a Russian General was by order of the Russian Government, and that therefore it was possible that Russia would regard a British attack on the Dardanelles as a casus belli.

The Globe this afternoon confirms on "undeniable authority" the statement made in a St. Petersburg dispatch to the Times, quoting the Novosti as saying that towards the close of the war between China and Japan, China offered to cede the Island of Formosa to Great Britain unconditionally, with the view of excluding the Japanese from that territory, but Lord Roseberry, the then Prime Minister, promptly declined the offer, which was made through the Viceroy of Hankow.

A special dispatch from Bombay says that in eleven districts of the Deccan and Concan a million and a quarter of people are believed to be on the verge of starvation. The dispatch adds that riots have occurred at Shaha-bad and Kazod.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.—Prince Obolenski, writing to the Novoe Vremya, recommends the export of Russian cereals to India and suggests that rye should be sold in Odessa at forty kopecks per pood [equal to thirty-six English pounds].

The Russian newspapers are making warm appeals to the people of Russia to contribute funds for the relief of the famine sufferers in India.

BREMEN, Nov. 11.—The Cotton Exchange has decided to contribute $7,500 to send a commission of experts to Eastern Asia with instructions to report upon the demands there for industrial and commercial products.

BRN. G. H. HILLIARD and E. A. Blakeslee, of the Bishopric, have been at Lamoni in session with Bishop E. L. Kelley, to hear and consider cases submitted and appealed to the Bishop's Court. Both are in good health and spirits, the latter having been lately chosen State Senator from the seventh district, Michigan, in which he resides. It is the first time Bro. Blakeslee was ever named for an office, and this was offered him by unanimous indorsement by acclamation of a convention called for the purpose of naming a candidate for the office. It is a splendid tribute to pay to so young a man; and it is the wish of all that Bro. Blakeslee will prove worthy of the trust placed in him by his friends, and truly represent the people, all the people of his district and the State.

Bro. Hilliard has been traveling extensively in the various districts of the church, and seems to be much encouraged in the prospects for the work. Within the year he has been from Minnesota to Florida and Mississippi; from Maine to California, doing gospel work, and teaching the law.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. C. A. PARKIN, San Francisco, California, November 2:—

It was our privilege to attend services at Oakland yesterday, it being "sacrament" Sunday. On account of the City of Papeete not sailing on Sunday we had Bro. Burton and wife with us once more to partake of the "bread of life." The good Spirit was present and was manifest in the gifts. We listened with great pleasure to Brn. Luff and Burton bear testimony as to how they knew the latter-day work to be of divine origin. In the evening at San Francisco Bro. Luff preached a grand sermon on the dispensations of the gospel and was listened to with rapt attention.

Bro. J. M. Stubbart, Octavia, Nebraska, November 4:—

Our two days' meeting at Columbus, October 31 and November 1 was real good. The saints said it was much better than they expected, owing to the near approach of election, and the political excitement. Though there has been but little progress made there for years, I believe a good work may be done there in the near future. Bro. F. A. Smith and the writer did the preaching. Bro. Fred gave us three splendid sermons. He is a noble champion of the truth, and a genial associate.

Bro. F. G. Pitt, Chicago, Illinois, November 11:—

All goes well at this end of the line; one more has given his name for baptism, several others near the door. A spirit of unity and peace prevails in all our meetings, which is very encouraging. Our young people have taken hold of the work with a will. Our Religio is proving a splendid success.

Bro. A. H. Smith wrote from Chicago, November 13, as follows:—

I held one preaching service in Clinton. Uncle Williams' widow lives there. I called to see her but she was not at home, did not see her. Am advertised here for next Sunday, have promised to stay over two Sundays.

HAVANA advices of the 12th report that the Spanish troops have captured strong positions of the Cubans in the mountains of El Rubi, in the Province Pinar del Rio. Sharp fighting is reported on both sides.

M. Hanotaux, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, announces an official list of reforms to be put into execution by the Turkish Government, and that provincial authorities in the Sultan's dominions have been instructed to execute them immediately. M. Hanotaux further states that active negotiations were continuing to obtain further administrative and financial reforms. All persons taken into custody in Constantinople, who were believed to be innocent, have already been released.

It is stated that Dr. Keane, of the Catholic University at Washington, has been charged with heresy by Cardinal Satolli, the late Apostolic Delegate sent by Pope Leo XIII. to the United States to investigate the condition of and prospects for the growth of Catholicism in this country, and to regulate some of the church's internal affairs and general policy. The charges are said to be the outgrowth of certain democratic ideas of policy held by the American prelate and others, which are regarded as out of harmony with the old Roman conservatism of Pope Leo and the Vatican. Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, Minnesota, are said to be also under the displeasure of the Holy See, and for similar causes as those assigned in Dr. Keane's case.

Russia is said to have massed a monster army of 112,000 men in the Vladivostock district. This with the frequent presence of Russian engineers at Port Arthur and their operations in Manchuria, with the tacit consent of the officials in China, are highly significant indications of the relations between Russia and China and point unmistakably to the common object of Russia's warlike anticipations and designs upon Eastern Asia. This is the view of the British press which says: "It behooves the British Government to thoroughly investigate this very important matter."

Late departures from Lamoni include Bro. J. W. Wight and Columbus Scott, to their fields in Iowa; Bro. E. A. Blakeslee, to Galien, Michigan; and Bro. G. H. Hilliard to Independence, Missouri.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard will visit and labor in the branches of the Decatur district, in Iowa and Missouri, in the months of November and December. Said branches should note his announcements of dates, which we hope to publish next week, that his meetings may be advertised.

Bro. Henry C. Smith and wife, who have been laboring in mission work in Wisconsin, arrived at home, Lamoni, during the past week, in good spirits and apparent good health.

Lord Salisbury, Prime Minister of Great Britain, has acceded to the demands of the United States in the Venezuelan question and declared the willingness of his government to submit the matter to arbitration. This is an official recognition of the Monroe Doctrine and establishes the principle of international arbitration, between America and Great Britain at least. King Oscar, of Sweden, has been chosen as the final arbitrator, to act with the commissions appointed by the American and British governments.

THANKSGIVING.

THE President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, has by public proclamation, appointed Thursday, November 26, as a day of thanksgiving, and requested the citizens of the Republic to put aside labor and business on that day, to assemble at such convenient places as are usual and acceptable on that day and there render praise and thanksgiving to God, for the blessings of the year and period, of which they may be cognizant.

As loyal citizens it is the duty of the saints to heed the request of the Nation's Executive Officer and observe the day so set apart. To do this, it will be advisable that the presiding officers of the respective branches, lay the matter of the proclamation before the members of their branches at as early a time as practicable, and appoint the time and place of assembling, and hold public services, on the forenoon of Thursday, November 26; the character of the services to be such as the officers of the branch may deem advisable, to come within the limits of the request of President Cleveland's proclamation.

Original Poetry.

SUBLIMITY.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

Only to think of the depth and volume of a million voices singing as one,
The world's multitudinous voice singing a hymn to Jesus, the glorified Son.

Swelling and swelling and floating on the swift breeze, to the cloud top'd dome of the sky;
And as musically sweet and pure and free as the messenger's winds rushing by.

Only to think of a million beautiful human souls bowing themselves in praise,
All refined and illumined and bright with God's love like the spring sun's golden rays.

Only to think of the meeting and greeting of friends from every time that is past,
That were a time worthy to live or to die for, and that shall be ours at the last.

Some funny English appears in the official Japanese "Guide to Observers for Solar Eclipse on August 9, 1896." It, however, shows how advanced the Japanese are. The Chinese still use gongs to drive away the dragon that eats up the sun.

Dear Sisters:—It is now a long time since I wrote a letter for our Home Column. The letters do seem to be few and far between of late, the space being filled with selections for Daughters of Zion meetings and instructions in regard to training children, good and beneficial, but somehow we miss the good, interesting letters. I am one of the Daughters of Zion, but a lone one and no chance of meeting with others. About all I can do is to teach my own children, to fill their minds with pure thoughts that will counteract the evil they may encounter. If I can do this and my boys can grow up to the years of understanding free from the vices that are so rife around us, I feel that it will be a work that they in after years will appreciate and be grateful for; and this is not all the reward.

We are a few families of Saints here struggling along, some earnestly and zealously, and some carelessly and indifferently. We have prayer meeting and Sunday school, and of this last I wish to tell you a little. Our school has been carried on the year round for more than four years. We have met all this time at one place, the home of one of the Saints. At times some of us have felt much discouraged because of the fact that some who are ashamed not to come, but who come unprepared, are listless and dull during class hour, even sometimes going to sleep! We have tried to rouse them, but no! they will not be roused! they cannot even get ideas in the class, but sit dumb, having no answer if called upon. What shall we do? struggle on carrying this extra burden, or shall we do as some of us have often felt like at times—give it up?

The children of these saints do not willingly come to Sunday school, for they are never taught the least thing at home, and they feel the difference that there is between them and other children who are ready to answer the questions of the teacher.

But I do not want you to think that we have had nothing at all to encourage us all these years, for we have had much. Some of those who were only little ones when we began are now in the church and striving nobly to be valiant soldiers for Christ. Some of us older ones have been blessed in the study of the Bible and Book of Mormon, and I for one would not have missed the treasures I have gained for anything. It has often been a comfort to me and is something that will last forever. Hoping that this short letter may be for the cheering of some despondent one who can see by it that others have trials and difficulties to overcome or labor under. I gladly and cheerfully urge them to keep on toiling and laboring, for the rest and reward are by and by. Lovingly your sister,

ELLA J. GREEN.

[AH, Sister Ella, there are none who do not have discouragements to contend with. Indeed, so often do they come to some, that a certain one of whom we know selected the following for the benefit of self entirely, but after reading your letter it seems too good to be kept from others whose needs may be equally great, hence we publish it.]

THE DANGERS OF DISCOURAGEMENT.

DISCOURAGEMENT is full of danger. It is temptation. He who lets it enter his heart and settle there does not know to what sin and sorrow it may lead him. An old bit of history tells us of the Israelites, at a certain time, that they were "much discouraged because of the way." The way itself was rough and dreary, through the sandy Arabah. Then the needlessness of it all but for Edom's selfish refusal to allow them to pass through his territory, made the feeling of disheartenment the keener. We can scarcely be surprised that they were discouraged, and yet we see in this very incident the danger of yielding to discouragement. It led to murmuring against God, even to profane contempt of God's goodness, and to grievous sin.

Many people find the way of life hard. There are scarcely any who do not come upon points of hardness even amid the most prosperous years. There are things in people's condition and circumstances which in themselves are hard. Sometimes it is sickness, sometimes poverty, sometimes sorrow. The burdens are heavy. The toil is oppressive. The way is wearisome.

Then sometimes, as in the case of the Israelites, much of the hardness is caused by unbrotherly conduct. There are brothers who make life harder for brothers. We all need to guard our conduct most sedulously, lest we become hinderers of others in their life. It is a sin to be a hinderer. We commit a grievous wrong against another when we make life harder for him,—when we make it harder for him to be true, honest, pure-hearted, and worthy. Edom made it immeasurably harder for Israel, simply by being disobliging. There are many people who make the way longer and harder for others, when by a little unselfish obliging, a little cheering help, they might make it easier for them.

It is a sin to be a discourager. The ten spies who brought back the unbelieving report about the giants, and thus spread disheartenment and dismay, wrought a great crime against the people. Their discouraging words led to most calamitous consequences,—the doom of death on a whole generation, and the shutting of the nation out of the promised land for forty years. Yet like wrongs are being committed continually right in our own Christian days. Discouragers are going about among men, and, by their gloomy pessimistic words are making life incalculably harder for them. They put out the lamps of cheer and hope that shine in men's homes. They quench the very stars that burn in the sky above men's heads. They take the gladness out of hearts. They see only the dark shadows of life, never the sunshine. One is never stronger, braver, happier, for meeting them.

There should be nothing but condemnation for the discourager. He is an enemy of his fellows. He is a misanthrope. It is a sore sin against humanity to make life harder for men. Our great Teacher spoke burning words against those who put stumbling blocks in the paths of God's little ones. This censure falls upon all who in any way lay hindrances in the paths of others.

The Christian duty of every one is to be an encourager, a helper of others in their life. There is a pleasant story of a poor woman in Glasgow, who, one summer day, was walking along a street in which some poorly clad children were running barefooted at their play. A policeman saw this woman stoop down again and again as she went on, each time picking up something, which she put in her apron. The officer supposed she was finding and appropriating something she should not take away, and in a threatening manner demanded that she show him what she had in her apron. The trembling woman complied, and showed some pieces of broken glass, which she had gathered up out of the street. "I thought I would take them out of the way of the bairns' feet," she said. The act was a beautiful one. The poor woman was doing angels' work. She was making the street a safer place for the children to play.

It should be our aim not only to pick up bits broken glass from the children's playgrounds to make them safer, but in all life's ways to gather out the stones and the stumbling-blocks, and whatever might hinder or hurt our fellow-pilgrim in his journey.

Whatever the cause, or whoever is responsible for the hardness, there is no doubt that in every life there are experiences which have a discouraging tendency. It may seem almost too much to say that whatever the hardness of the way may be, nevertheless a Christian should never be discouraged. Yet this is the lesson. It is never safe to give way to even the beginnings of discouragement, for, if we do, we cannot know what the end will be. Discouragement cherished, leads to despondency and despair. Even if it does not grow to such sad ripeness, it works grievous harm in a life. It produces a noxious atmosphere in which all the lamps burn but dimly. It weakens one's moral purposes, and paralyzes one's energies. A discouraged man is only half himself. He takes hold of duty with only half his wanted earnestness. His feet drag heavily as he goes about his duties.

No one can afford to be discouraged, even for one hour, even in the smallest degree. We need all our strength if we would be equal to the burden and stress and responsibility of our common days. Life is not easy for any of us if we meet it worthily, and make of it what God expects us to make. It is necessary that our eye shall be clear, its light undimmed; that our heart shall beat with full pulsings; that our hand shall be strong and steady, and that all our powers shall be at their best. This cannot be if we are the prey of discouragement, or if we yield in even the smallest degree to its influence.

"But how can we keep from being discouraged?" asks some one. "When the way is hard, when burdens are heavy, when the path is through hot deserts, when even brothers make life harder for us, how can we help being discouraged?"

The answer is that, if we are Christians, there never can be a sufficient reason why we should be discouraged. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" We need only to abide in Christ, doing always faithfully our simple duty, and leaving all in his hands. What seem to us to be discouragements, become helps toward nobler life. A Christian physician, whose career has been full of faith and noble ministry, gives this experience: He was a poor boy, and a cripple. One day he was watching some other boys on the ball-field. They were active, strong, and wealthy. As he looked on, his heart grew bitter with envy. A young man who stood beside him noted the discontent on his face, and said to him, "You wish you were in those boys' place,—don't you?" "Yes, I do," was the answer. "I reckon God gave them money, education, and health," continued the young man, "to help them to be of some account in the world. Did it never strike you that he gave you your lame leg for the same reason,—to make a man of you?"

The boy gave no answer, and turned away; but he did not forget the words. They stayed in his heart until they kindled hope and courage there, helping him to rise above his deformity. He soon learned that what was true of his lame leg was true also of all the difficulties, hindrances, and hard conditions of his life,—they were all God's gifts to him to help him to be of some account in the world,—to make a man of him.

The lesson is for all of us. The deformity, the burden, the weight of some other one's weakness or need, the inheritance of difficulty which seems to be a hindrance to a worthy life, is but another chance to grow, to become stronger, richer hearted, more a man or a woman, to win a higher place in life, and a brighter crown in glory.

In any case, we should never give place to discouragement for a moment. If we are God's children, we have to keep ourselves in God's hands, and keep our own hands off; then, out of the sorest difficulties and the hardest conditions, blessing will come. God lives, and is caring for us, and we can say:—

"God's in his heaven—

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

AT the business meeting of the Sunday school held at the Woodbine reunion, a committee consisting of T. W. Williams, J. F. Mintun, and W. N. Robinson were appointed to arrange for a Sunday School Teachers' Institute, to be held at some time during the holidays. This committee begs leave to report that they have decided to hold a three days' institute at Council Bluffs, Iowa, where the Saints there and at Omaha kindly agree to entertain the visitors with board and lodging free of charge.

The railway companies at this season of the year grant one and a third rates on special days. As near as we can find out at the present, tickets will be sold on the 24th and 25th of December, to return until January 2. This has necessitated setting the time for the institute on the 26th, 27th, and 28th of December, which dates are subject to slight change should the General Passenger Association rule differently.

As these rates include a territory of about two hundred miles or perhaps but one hundred and fifty miles in all directions from Council Bluffs, we wish the teachers and workers of this territory to take notice of this announcement to be preparing to be with us at that time. The Sunday school work, in all its phases, will be discussed thoroughly.

As soon as you have decided to come please drop a line to T. W. Williams, No. 420 Harrison Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa, so that you can be located. Those having friends in either of the cities should so state.

Further work with the program and more definite details will be announced later.

W. N. ROBINSON, for the committee.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, October 26, 1896.

THREE REUNIONS—THURMAN, MONTROSE, AND WOODBINE.

NOW that the reunion season has closed for 1896, we feel that a word or two concerning the Sunday school work done at each of them might be of profit and interest to many.

On the afternoon of Saturday, August 8, we packed our "grip" and boarded the train enroute for the Thurman, Iowa, reunion. We arrived on the camp grounds that night just in time to hear the closing thoughts of Bro. A. H. Smith's sermon on the "evidences of a God." Scarcely had the services closed and the hand shaking been done till the questions began to come, "When are we going to have Sunday school?" This evinced what we already believed—that the Sunday school work here had won a warm corner in the hearts of the many who attend this reunion from year to year.

The Sunday school work began at four o'clock p. m. Sunday with organization as follows: Superintendent T. A. Hougas; assistant superintendent Joseph Roberts, and secretary, Charley Fry. Regular Sunday school sessions were held in the large tent at nine o'clock, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday mornings. We do not remember the numbers in attendance, but suffice it to say the attendance increased from beginning to close. The second morning the secretary found by computation that more than seventy per centum of the entire camp were present and taking part. So much for having it on a regular hour rather than an "off hour." Much, however, of the interest shown was due to the earnest and persistent efforts of officers and teachers together.

Teachers' meetings were held at four p. m. each day to prepare for the work of the following morning. And the earnestness and interest manifested in these meetings by the teachers, and others as well, was really gratifying to see. The good spirit was there too, to bless us and to aid us.

The afternoon hour on Thursday was devoted to Sunday school institute work; and the evening was devoted to the cause of temperance. Each was excellent in its line.

The work throughout the reunion in the Sunday School department, as well as all others, was eminently satisfactory to all. It showed, too, that more effective work is being done in all parts of the district. It is with pleasure we recognize the willing and efficient assistance rendered by our young brethren Joseph Roberts and Charley Fry.

Much as we regretted it, we were obliged to leave for home early Saturday morning to prepare to attend the forthcoming district convention at Fulton, Iowa, and reunion at Montrose, Iowa. Sickness prevented our reaching Fulton; but in company with wife and mother, managed to reach Montrose in time for the Nauvoo district convention on Friday p. m. A very pleasant and profitable afternoon was spent with the workers of that district and many others from surrounding districts.

The organization for the Sunday school work of the reunion was effected Saturday morning. Here we were for the first time harnessed for work with our colaborer and General Secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson. And a very congenial association it proved to be, too. Bro. Reames and Sr. Bessie Bond, both of St. Joseph were elected secretaries and Bro. F. G. Pitt acted as chorister. Two sessions of Sunday School were held. Sr. Jennie Newton was placed in charge of the primary department, and Sr. Belle James the intermediate; and Bro. O. Hudson the Book of Mormon class. The work done by the teachers was of such a character as to elicit many a warm compliment from spectators. Here, again, the secretary called attention to the marked increase of attendance.

In the institute work we became aware of the fact that we were working with many that were deeply interested, but who had heretofore been deprived of Sunday School and convention privileges. And, too, that the many workers there had come from different fields with varied experiences sometimes differing widely. But, notwithstanding all this "they showed they were prompted by the same guiding Spirit," all striving for the same great end—sowing the seed of truth in the hearts of both old and young.

Five sessions of institute work were held and two teachers' meetings. All this was both pleasant and profitable. But that which made upon us the deepest impression was our closing Sunday school prayer and testimony meeting. At the request of the superintendent all came, fasting, at eight o'clock in the morning. And for more than two hours the songs, prayers, and testimonies poured forth and the Holy Spirit touched every heart and evidenced the divine approval of our efforts in the Sunday school cause. It was a time not soon to be forgotten by those present. Practically this closed our work there. So on Sunday evening we started again for home. The many sad "good-byes," the many times spoken "come again" and "God bless you in your work" as we left the camp, together with feelings aroused within us by our visit to "our loved Nauvoo" filled our hearts to overflowing and made impressions upon our minds not soon to be erased. Presently the "iron horse" was hurrying us up the valley of the "father of waters." A two hour lay off at Burlington enabled us to go with Brother M. T. Short and call our brethren at the Saints' chapel there. Early the next morning we were again safe at home and the Bluff Park Reunion was a thing of pleasant memory.

We had only time to begin to think "there's no place like home" when the positive realization came to us that another reunion was fast approaching—that at Woodbine, Iowa. And in little more than two weeks we found ourselves again enroute for reunion. We arrived there Sunday noon as the sun was beginning to dispel some of the extreme dampness caused by the late rains. All were in good spirits and hopeful for better weather which came from then on.

The Sunday school work was introduced by the organization at eight a. m. Monday. We were very ably assisted throughout the work of the reunion by Brn. W. N. Robinson and J. F. Mintun. Sr. Lenna Strand was selected secretary. During the reunion four sessions of Sunday school were held. The primary department was in care of Sr. Dora Young; the intermediate, Sr. Emma Hougas; and the senior, Bro. J. F. Mintun. The work was of a commendable character and showed plainly that very effective work had been done at previous reunions by the zealous, earnest workers of that region in preparing the teachers for their work in the schools. The hour of meeting was very early in the morning—eight o'clock—and generally was very cold and damp. But, notwithstanding all, an interest was secured which enabled us to once more record an attendance which constantly increased from the beginning, the attendance of the last session more than doubling that of the first. There were four sessions of institute work, carrying out a very interesting program previously prepared by a committee appointed last year.

There was, also, one fragment of a teachers' meeting. Two sessions—an afternoon and an evening—were used in music and addresses.

A very pleasant feature of the afternoon session was the address of Sr. Ella R. Devore who together with her husband Bro. L. R. Devore have very recently returned from their long mission in the Society Islands. She related many circumstances of her labors and sufferings in the island mission. Also much of the manner of conducting their Sunday schools there, and of the many obstacles to be surmounted therein. Her remarks frequently brought tears to the eyes of her hearers.

At the close of her talk she was presented with a new teacher's Bible which the Sunday school workers had contributed to secure for her. The scene was a touching one—one that will claim a place in our memories for time yet to come.

The other feature of the afternoon exercises were a very instructive paper by our General Secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, on the subject, "How to organize district associations;" and an address by the General Superintendent on the "History and present condition of our General Association." In the evening two able addresses were given by Brn. J. W. Wight on "The relation of the Sunday school to the home," and T. W. Williams on "The Sunday school a factor in our government." Thus was our work completed. The seed sown there, we trust, found lodgement in many hearts and was carried to many different parts of the various districts represented—there to spring up in due time.

The Sunday school work of the several reunions had reached many and fired their hearts with new zeal for the work and a determination to do more and better work than heretofore. We learn, too, that much good work was done for the Sunday school in other reunions by local workers. This is as it should be. Keep the work moving.

That "He who moves upon the hearts of men" may strengthen us for every duty, is the wish and prayer of

Your brother and colaborer,

T. A. HOUGAS.

HENDERSON, Iowa, Oct. 25, 1896.

Letter Department.

ST. LOUIS, Missouri, Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—The smoke of the greatest of political battles has cleared away and not only are there no dead in sight so far as the church is concerned, but everybody is good-natured, whether satisfied over the result or not. In looking over the matter, to my mind, we are, not only as a nation, but as a church, if not reaching results satisfactory to everybody—yet, as I believe, by a heavenly interference, have been forced toward an education regarding constitutional rights, and as if we believe that God raised up the men who framed our Constitution we hold that God's voice is in the declaration that "All governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed," and that whether it is a question of the choice of Saul for a king, or a man and the principles for which he may stand as candidate for the highest office in the gift of this greatest of people and of nations, the principle is the same.

It is written, "Behold, I, the Lord, have made my church in these last days like unto a judge, sitting on a hill, or a high place to judge the nations; for it shall come to pass, that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion," etc. (D. C. 64:7.) And if, "Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her." She can never become "an ensign unto the people" while the masses of her people are in ignorance of her laws; and the "glory" that we sometime sing and shout about will never come through a blind faith in religious or political superiors in office. "The glory of God is intelligence;" and without it, disappointment forever awaits us, and the kingdom of God will not come to us, worlds without end.

The late political canvass may have brought out some surprising or even disagreeable things. If so, however, it can only accrue to our benefit to know sooner than later the truths which only discussion could reveal that necessary to our welfare as a nation.

Church matters are, with us, we are glad to report, improving, both in attendance and spiritual power; and we are without doubt making friends for the church every day. I hope for health and opportunity to do missionary work in the remote parts of the district, but matters constantly seem to need our personal attention in or near the city.

Our district conference meets here, in St. Louis, the 21st, and we hope to see a general interest manifested by a full attendance.

Bro. James Gillen has been with us for two Sabbaths, interesting the saints both here in the city and at Cheltenham by his practical sermons.

The Religio and Daughters of Zion are trying to hold the attention of the young to profitable themes and entertainments of a practical character. Sister Green as the head of the latter, is doing a great deal of good along practical lines, and it's a pity that this excellent organization for prevention of cruelty to the victims of ignorance of law, does not receive more recognition among many who most need its benefits.

We have had a very little snow and stormy weather, but to-day is as beautiful as June.

The national convention of the W. C. T. U. convenes to-morrow in this city. Miss Willard, Clara Barton, Anna Shaw, and other great workers in this great cause are in the city, and we hope and expect to attend as many sessions as church obligations will permit.

While physically deprived and hindered somewhat, yet because of our great gospel hope this leaves us cheerful, grateful, and happy in and for our future prospect.

M. H. BOND.

P. S.—I desire to add, that a man by the name which his parents probably gave him, but which nobody seems to know, but calling himself "Wells," claiming relationship with Brother Wells of the church, membership, acquaintance with Alexander Smith, and plenty of others, etc., is abroad in the land and defrauding the saints of money by plea of lost pocketbook, etc., wanting to go to his several homes and farms located in his imagination, in Missouri or Iowa. He is club-footed, and is a bad one, and ought to have been arrested ere this.

A letter from Sr. Riggs, of Cincinnati, Ohio, states that Elder Roberts, of Utah, is there, holding services, which the Doctor and herself attended, taking the elder home with them. Roberts tells them that they have a church here in St. Louis, have baptized several of our members, challenged me for discussion, to which I would not answer, etc., etc., etc., and Sr. Riggs anxiously inquires by letter if it is true, to which I most emphatically responded yesterday "nit."

For brazen-faced impudence and clerical "cheek" commend me to the Utah contingent that have been masquerading in St. Louis under the name of Latter Day Saints. Nothing can be farther from the truth, save they have baptized and ordained, I understand, one of our laymembers and one only, who has always been a polygamist in theory and has been baptized six or eight times, I understand, already.

Roberts and his colaborers have all refused discussion and denial or refused to answer questions in public service. We understand now from them that an attack is made upon the translation of the scriptures by Joseph Smith as published by the Reorganization. They say the original manuscript is with the church, locked up in its archives, (where it will do least harm,) to them probably.

M. H. B.

[This Elder B. H. Roberts is the same who, in company with Francis M. Lyman, one of the Twelve Apostles of the Utah Church, agreed to discuss the questions of "Succession" and Utah as a place of gathering, with one or more elders of the Reorganized Church, at San Bernardino, California, in 1894, after being granted use of the saints' chapel there, in which Elders Roberts and Lyman held a series of meetings; but who afterwards declined to enter upon said discussion because forbidden so to do by open published counsel of the Utah Presidency to refrain from such discussions; said official counsel being extended to all representatives of the Utah organization.—Ed.]

JANESVILLE, Minn., Nov. 1.

Editors Herald:—Upon this Sabbath morning I have been led to think more earnestly than usual of the many saints in different parts of the vineyard who will to-day meet together to worship God and to hear the preaching of the Gospel, and to wonder how many there are, who, like myself who have not the privilege of meeting with those of like faith.

As the Herald comes to us every week, the first thing I look for is the letter department, to see if there are any writers from this State, and I have often wondered if there was any other scattered members in this part of the vineyard who look as eagerly for Minnesota letters as I do; and it is for this reason that I pen these few lines.

I see by last Herald that Elders Roberts and Steadman are both doing good work, and meeting with fair success. I am glad that such is the case, and hope that sometime during the year I may be permitted to meet with them or some of the ministry of the State. This place supports five churches and a town hall, but so far we have been unable to secure the use of any of them for the saints. The Methodist people declaring that they would rather have the name of being uncharitable, than to have their temple defiled by having the Mormon doctrine presented in it, but we are still in the faith, and trust that the time will come when we will have an opening in this place.

CLAUDE C. DAY.

BELL GROVE, W. Va., Oct. 31.

Editors Herald:—I desire to give the saints a synopsis of my labors as a missionary since General Conference, as I have not written to the Herald since then.

I held a meeting with the Buffalo City branch the last days of April; baptized three, blessed some children, and did other branch work. Went from there to Calhoun County to a new opening that I had made, and preached ten days; baptized three. From there I went to Mount Hope branch, in Summers County, and labored with them three weeks, preaching most every night and on Sundays to large attentive congregations. Though no one obeyed, I feel that good was accomplished if the work is followed up in due time.

From Mount Hope branch I started for my home in Jackson County, preaching in Raleigh, Fayette, and Kanawha counties as I came. In Raleigh County a lady sixty-eight years old came forward for baptism. She was living with her son, and he told her that if she was baptized she could go to the poor house for he would not support her. When I got home I held a meeting at the Casto schoolhouse and baptized one; and on the 6th of August I started to our district conference a distance of eighty-five miles by land, having no means to pay my way by rail; and on the second night I arrived at Balos, Calhoun County, where there were a few saints. I left my buggy standing in the yard as usual, and the next morning it was gone, so we took the track of it and when we caught up with it it had been put over a precipice about forty feet and was lying upside down, broken to pieces so badly that we had to haul it three miles to a shop, by hand. So there I was with seventy-five cents in money and my buggy broken so that it would take six or seven dollars to put it in running order; so the brethren went my security for the work and as I had to lay over a few days I sent out an appointment for preaching. As soon as meeting was announced His Satanic Majesty began to rage, and myself, horse and buggy were guarded the rest of the week against my protest. The schoolhouse was locked, and all that could be done was done to keep out the word; but the brethren went to one of the trustees and told him that if he did not open that door for me if he opened it for anyone else they would sue him for discriminating between citizens, so he opened it and took the lock off and took it home, and on Sunday I baptized a very prominent woman at that place, and at the same place organized a branch on my return from conference.

Bro. D. L. Shinn came down to Jackson to hold a debate with a Missionary Baptist, at the close of which he baptized five, and Elder J. L. Williams one. Bro. Shinn remained with us about a month, preaching at Mount Nebo, Casto, Sand Hill, Valley Star, and Ralter schoolhouses, making many friends for the cause. Bro. Shinn is a noble expounder of the word and is an exemplary saint, living out what he preaches, and some are requesting me to send and bring him back.

I got back last week from a trip of two weeks in Roane County, and on my way one night from preaching to where I was stopping two others besides myself received a storm of rocks from the brush, making the brush and fence rails crack. This shower was repeated three times, but no one was hit. My friends begged me not to go back the next night, but I went and all was quiet during the rest of the meeting. I preached at Sand Hill last night. Will start to Kentucky after the election. It is almost impossible to get the people to listen to the gospel, owing to politics.

Yours for the truth,

G. H. GODBY.

RICHMOND, Missouri, Nov. 5.

Editors Herald:—As it has been some time since I have contributed to your columns I thought I would pen a few lines.

I am not doing much preaching at present. I was called on, however, to preach Sr. Mary Arturbern's funeral sermon. She died the 12th of August, of present year. It was preached in the Baptist church, at Wakenda, Missouri, on the 25th of October. There was a large congregation. I also preached three times while there in private houses. The work is at a standstill there, or nearly so, I am sorry to say, and I can't say that it is any better here where I am living.

I went out to Wakenda branch in the northeast part of this county a few days ago to administer to old Sr. Cato, who is very low, she is seventy-seven years old; a good old mother in Israel is she. I have been acquainted with her since 1869; has always borne a faithful testimony.

I wish to say a word to the saints in Northeast and Northwest Kansas districts that I haven't forgotten them. Am glad to hear of their progress. I see that Bro. Kent has been laboring eight miles southeast of Beloit, Kansas. I am somewhat acquainted in that locality, having preached there myself several times and the Spirit said in a sacrament meeting at old Bro. Knapp's, that if the saints were faithful there would be a branch of the church there. So may it be.

I desire the prayers of all saints. I have a throat trouble that prevents me from doing very much preaching at present. I desire to remain faithful.

ALTON, Ill., Nov. 7.

Editors Herald:—I thank you very much for publishing my letter for the good of other saints, and inclose a card received today from our daughter and son, Joseph E. Betts, Jr., and wife, of Belleville, Illinois. It speaks for itself and shows the necessity of warning the saints against such a man going about from place to place robbing them.

While I never rejoice over any one's personal affliction, still in this case I am thankful he is so marked with one foot off that surely he cannot deceive the saints much longer with fine stories. Like Bro. McCarty, I pray that we may so live that we can discern the good from the bad.

Your sister,

E. H. CROWSON.

Dear Papa and Eliza:—We are sorry you are at such a loss by the man giving his name as Wells; but you have company: he was at our house with much the same story and got $3.50. This time he was William Reese. We heard of the notice too late, as you did.

FLORENCE.

HAGERMAN, Idaho, Nov. 3.

Editors Herald:—In company with our fellow citizens we have to-day expressed our choice as to governmental affairs for the immediate future; and now while anxious thousands are listening with bated breath to the counting of votes, we are sitting silent and alone in the now desolate home of our brother-in-law, Henry Secor. How changed the condition here since one year ago as we stopped on our way from district conference in company with Bro. Henry Shaw enroute for our intended winter's field. Our loved sister, then busy and happy in the midst of home and school duties, manifested no signs of so soon yielding to the destroyer, and we little dreamed that in less than a month we would be called from our field back to help comfort bereaved ones, and would only be permitted to look upon the silent mound where so tenderly her body was laid to rest by a large and saddened throng.

She left a vacant place here, not only in the home, but in the community; but her life's work still lives and will continue to live in the characters and lives of not alone this generation—but who can tell where the effects of her teaching by precept and example may cease to be manifest.

Since our return here one week ago we were called back to the little cemetery to assist in the funeral services of a young man, Mr. Herman Hansen. In taking a retrospective view of the year past—the second one I have acted in the calling of an elder—I find the scenes have been varied perhaps more than in previous years; but I can scarcely say that the work has been more satisfactory. I have tried to perform my duty, and have been greatly blessed of the Master at times, and again have felt famished for the spiritual food I was trying to break to others. Often in our trials have we felt the need of a traveling companion to give counsel and help, but have learned that while the world was not in sympathy with us, in the hour of need to trust in divine help.

We have baptized five this conference year; three in Utah and two in Idaho, and have preached the word from Pleasant Grove, Utah, to Baker City, Oregon. And as we think of the good souls who have so kindly ministered to our wants, feeding, clothing, and giving us money, tears of gratitude start as we breathe a prayer to our heavenly Father to bless them as they deserve.

Father Klingback, of Emmett, desires to be remembered with his family. He has been almost helpless for several years, and anxiously awaits the summons home. His aged and feeble wife seems to desire life only to minister to him. Frank, their eldest son, is suffering from cancer, which has eaten away his lower lip, and is stealthily creeping on. He has a wife and four sons. She alone is in the church and is a firm witness of that sweet peace, consolation, and assurance of help in times of darkest trials which has enabled saints to be buoyant and rejoice in the midst of affliction.

I expect to renew my journey to-morrow toward Malad, to be present for conference the 14th inst.

LAMONI, Iowa, Nov. 7.

Editors Herald:—The following letter from Sr. Houck was received through Bro. S. Ackerley, of Lamoni, a few days since. It is an additional evidence, of a very signal character, of the goodness of God to those who trust in him.

Little three-year-old Pearl was afflicted with an affection of the hip joint, and of the limb to the ankle joint, that produced excruciating pain that caused her to scream whenever moved. She was so afflicted for months. The doctors could give no relief, but advised her parents to take her to the hospital to be cared for.

I was sent for about one year since to administer to Pearl, and did so. I had the evidence of the Holy Spirit that the child would be blessed. The child obtained relief at once, and gradually improved from that time on.

Bro. Ackerley and I met at Brother George Houck's house last July, I think, and we administered to the child again, and the result is told by the child's grandmother as the following shows. We feel blessed of God and confirmed in the faith, as we realize that God's hand is stretched out still.

C. SCOTT.

RADCLIFFE, Iowa, Oct. 28.

Mr. C. Scott; Dear Sir:—It is with the greatest of pleasure I sit down to drop you a few lines to tell you that Pearl can walk now without her crutches. She said I should write and tell you that she could walk. She feels very proud over it as well as the rest of us do. Her mother told her one day that the Lord healed her leg and she said No, that Brn. Scott and Ackerley did. The Lord be praised for his mercy to us in behalf of the child. We are all as well as usual and hope these few lines will find you and family well.

Your sister,

MRS. GEORGE HOUCK.

BUCHANAN, Mich., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—Conference of this district passed very pleasantly. The political excitement did not dampen ardor to that extent that a goodly representation was not present, for a larger attendance greeted and responded to the call than was anticipated. The cause, on general lines, is progressing. Reports from various parts of the field indicate gains of thirty-nine baptisms since the last conference in June. There has been a tremendous move forward during the year just past. We need more efficient laborers. Love to all.

In line,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—I would like to say to the saints in the Southeastern mission that I have not lost in their welfare, nor in the work in that region, though I have been so long absent from them. I was making arrangements to start south again, but on the 3d of the present month I was attacked, for the third time, with chills and fever, which will prevent me from starting yet for a few days. I will try to be with you just as soon as practicable.

May I express the hope that all the ministry and laity will do all in their power to advance the interests of the great cause which we are striving to build up. There is much to do; the time is short in which to do it; we cannot afford to let any frivolous excuse stand in the way of the performance of duty.

Let no jealousy or strife have place in the hearts of any. Exercise patience in bearing with one another's weaknesses. "See that" the "law is kept" and if any are overtaken in a fault, or wrong, let all who "live in glass houses" be careful in manifesting a disposition or desire to throw the first stone.

Remember that, "with whatsoever measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again," and, again: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The missionary in charge will be glad to have the hearty cooperation of all, and will be also glad to give due credit so far as he can to all for the work done. This thought may be of little consequence to any of you, but I am sure the Master, whom we are striving to serve, would be pleased with the same thing; and certainly none can be careless or unconcerned as to what may please him.

May the rich blessings of God attend all his faithful people is the prayer of,

Yours in bonds,

T. C. KELLEY.

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa, Nov. 10.

Editors Herald:—After recovering from a severe spell of the grip and quinsy, lasting from the 14th of October till the 5th of November, I came here by request of the saints, and began meeting at 10:30 on the 8th. At 2:30 we held prayer and sacrament meeting at Bro. O. Hayer's house, by special request of Sr. Hayer, who has been sick for three months, and sometimes nigh unto death. At the close of the meeting she was administered to and the Lord truly blessed her. She ate supper with the family at the table, and yesterday she was sewing. The Lord be praised.

In the evening we had a large congregation at the church again. After a sermon of one hour Bro. John D. Price and Sr. Maud E. O. Walker presented themselves before the matrimonial altar and were united as one in the holy bonds of wedlock. I think the event brought out quite a good many to see a Latter Day Saints' wedding. Well, they got a gospel sermon to start with. To-day Bro. and Sr. Price start for their future home in Washington. May peace and prosperity, with God's blessings go with this couple of noble young saints, and may they be the means of carrying the gospel to others in that far-off country.

The roads in this flat country are almost impassable, and snow almost every day since the 6th and to-day it is raining, so we have concluded to close the meeting till the roads and weather get better. There are some honest ones here yet who want the truth. May God lead them to accept the light.

In hopes, J. S. ROTH.

GRAND VALLEY, Ont., Nov. 9

Editors Herald:—We have just returned to our appointment, having been present at the late discussion between Elder R. C. Evans and Rev. R. W. Kelley, the latter of the Baptist Church. The proposition discussed is as follows:—

"Resolved that the Book of Mormon is not of divine origin, and is not worthy the respect of Christian people."

The discussion lasted one evening, three speeches on each side. To say we had a victory would hardly express the facts. Rev. Kelley struggled hard to keep up his end, but he showed very plainly that he was unaware of the strength of our position; in fact he gave expression to a statement which showed he was an incompetent man; it was as follows: "I thank God I never read the Book of Mormon." Poor fellow! he but sounded his death-doom when he gave utterance to such a remark.

As a sample of his logic let me offer the following from the brain of Rev. Kelley: "God has sacred numbers in the Bible such as three, seven, thirteen, twenty-one, and seventy. Now count up the Book of the Old Testament, and how many are there? Thirty-nine in all. Divide thirty-nine by the sacred number three, and it goes thirteen times and nothing over. If there was one more book that would make forty, and it would not be divisible by three with no remainder. Now then we know the Book of Mormon is a fraud, for that making one more book spoils the sacred number thirty-nine."

He applied the same test to the twenty-seven books of the New Testament and found no remainder when divided by three, therefore the Book of Mormon is a fraud. Many of his own people were disgusted with his assertions.

The work in our portion of the vineyard is moving slowly, but, I believe, surely.

That man Foss seems to be a very observing sort of fellow. Am glad his "desire to see and examine things" is being satisfied. I believe the phrenologist on him that he liked to know what was going on. I tell you Canada is the place to gratify a person's curiosity. All right, Bro. Foss, we'll get square.

In bonds,

DANIEL MACGREGOR.

LANCASTER, Wis., Nov. 10.

Editors Herald:—I have recently been laboring in Grant County, revisiting some of the most important places canvassed by Bro. Pender and myself five and six years ago. I find that very much prejudice has died out and that the people appear to be glad to see me. One place in particular that we could not preach in then is now open, and they even sent for me to come and preach. That place is Elmdale. I commence there to-night. Another place where three years ago I was shut out of a schoolhouse after having been promised the use of it, and where I stood on the schoolhouse porch and preached one night without a light, now sends me numerous invitations to come and preach in their schoolhouse. I shall go there next from here and then over into Crawford and Richland Counties.

I find that through neglect some of the saints have nearly starved to death spiritually. But a two days' meeting held at Flora last Saturday and Sunday largely revived the work, especially among those that attended. We have the largest branch of the church in this district, or one of the largest; but as before stated, through neglect it nearly became disorganized. I hope now they will keep alive in the work. At our two days' meeting, a young brother, baptized last July, was called and ordained to the office of a priest. The Lord spoke to him and told him many of his thoughts, and spake in answer to his prayers, and informed him that he had a great work to do in his native country—Norway. He is a young man of excellent repute, a graduate of a Norwegian college, and a son of a wealthy merchant there. He has been two years in this country and sails for home in a few weeks. Thus there seems to be prospects for a further spread of our work in Norway.

Our district conference will be held at Flora, the last Saturday and Sunday in January, and I hope the saints will make an extra effort to be present for their own good and the good also of the saints here.

Am getting very anxious for the Church History. Think I ought to have interest on my money pretty soon.

LEARNING OBEDIENCE.

OFTEN in the past when referring to Christ as our example, some of our speakers and writers have made use of Hebrews 5:7, 8, applying this statement of Paul to Christ, and from the comments made, I have been led to believe that those thus using the passage wished to convey the idea that sufferings were a necessary means made use of by the Almighty in order that Christ might remain obedient to his will. Now, while I do not deny the possibility of Christ's transgressing the will of his Father, I do deny the probability of his doing so. To say that sufferings were necessary to teach Christ obedience, would be to affirm that unless the Father had thus intervened, he would have gone astray.

There is a vast difference between obeying because of sufferings and suffering because of obedience. With us sufferings often serve as a means of correction or prevention, but could the same truthfully be said in respect to Christ? If so, we place him on a level with ourselves, and thus, at least in my estimation, detract considerably from the exalted position which he occupies as the Son of Man. Whereas, on the other hand, if he was "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:15); if he "suffered temptations but gave no heed to them" (D. & C. 17:5); if he came to do God's will, and not his own (John 4:34; 6:38 and Matt. 26:39), regardless of consequences; if he suffered, because of obedience to the appointment received of the Father, in order to demonstrate his right to become the Savior, in order to stem the tide of evil (1 John 3:8), and turn mankind towards God; then, and then only is he placed before us in the light of a true manifestation of the God-character, the "pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim. 3:15, 16), I. T., and the "rock that is higher than I" (Ps. 61:2).

Man had suffered temptations and yielded to them. Christ took upon him the responsibility of the actions of mankind; and, with this load upon him, suffered all manner of temptations but did not yield to them. In this condition he was perfected (Heb. 2:10). Having thus been made perfect he became a suitable sacrifice for the sins of the world. He "became the author of eternal salvation to all them that obey him" (Heb. 5:9). He gave his life for the world (John 10:18). For the sake of mankind he permitted himself to be taken captive by the powers of hell and the grave, notwithstanding they had no claim on him (John 14:30), thus wresting from the grasp of the Devil, the keys of hell and death (Rev. 1:18).

We have no evidence, and I dare not admit for a moment, that Christ ever had a disposition to disobey God, not even in the garden when suffering the torment of the damned—the second death. In this hour of extreme trial and suffering his only desire was that God's will, and not his own, should be accomplished.

Hebrews 5:7, 8, (see Inspired Translation,) evidently refers to Melchisedec and not to Christ, from the following reasons: 1. The inspired translator places those two verses in parentheses. 2. Paul thus briefly refers to some experience in the life of Melchisedec. 3. God at that time saved him from death. 4. His experiences—like ours—served to teach him obedience. 5. Christ was not saved from death; when his time came he gave his life for the people. 6. He did not learn obedience by the things which he suffered, but suffered because of his obedience to the will of God in all things, that he might redeem his people.

PETER ANDERSON.

THE PERSONALITY OF JESUS.

EIGHTEEN hundred and sixty-three years have passed since the man Christ Jesus lived upon the earth, of whom the people of his day said, "Never man spake as this man spake." While many deny that he was the Son of God, they all unite in saying he was the finest specimen of manhood the world has produced. The account as found in the New Testament is very limited, considering so important a personage; much more is written of less prominent individuals. When we examine the lives of prominent men that have lived in the past, we discover much that is grand, lofty, and noble; yet when we compare their personality with that of Christ, the son of Mary stands out in bold and striking relief from them all.

We are living in an age of physical and material development; lives have been devoted to science. Some have soared into the heavens, discovered the laws that pertain to the sun, moon, and stars, and their relationship to the planet on which we live. Others have delved into the earth and sea, and brought to light the wonderful things contained therein. As a result of their life work they have brought to light many beautiful truths. Memory of them is perpetuated by commentaries and costly monuments; yet not one of them claimed the work was finished. Their testimony has been, the possibilities of to-morrow, or truths yet to be discovered far exceeds that which is known. Great personalities have demanded the world's attention at various times in the world's history. Kings, queens, and emperors have ruled for good and evil. Napoleon caused the world to tremble by his indomitable will and ambition. Men of finance have caused ruin, discord, and death; filled mad houses and jails, suicide, pauper, and drunkards' graves. Princes have ascended the throne wading deep in the best blood of the creation.

While the world have applauded many of those personalities of the past, men of research are pointing out their defects. Washington, the father of his country, was a wonderful man, yet at times by his language he placed himself on a level with the commonest. Thus many men with great reputation had defects in their lives. In the language of Elder S. W. Scott in his essay on "Moral and Spiritual Transformation," (Zion's Ensign, Nov. 23, 1895,) would say:—

Character is what a man is; reputation is what he is thought to be. Character is within, reputation is without. Character is real, reputation may be false. Character is substantial and enduring; reputation may be vapory and fleeting. Character is at home, reputation is abroad. Character is in a man's soul, reputation is in the minds of others. A man's character is what he makes for himself; it is his own workmanship; it is the stature of the man, of his conception which he carries in the studio within. It is the man he paints on the soul's canvas. God makes the soul, man makes the character.

The imperfections found in the man of to-day are also found in those of the past. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Solomon, David, and Lot had their peculiar weaknesses; but, as stated above, the personality of Jesus stands out in striking relief from them all.

In considering the personality of Jesus, we learn that such a one was expected to come by God's people, that he would be the embodiment of perfection, not only their Savior and Lord, but a pattern in all things so far as conduct is concerned in this life. In trying to comprehend Jesus Christ; or his personality, we must look upon him as at least a two-fold being, that prior to his advent upon this earth he possessed an entity separate and distinct from God the Father, as such was coequal with him in power, majesty, and in all that constitute God; that he left the realms of glory, his power and authority, and took upon himself the nature of man (human nature) and became like one of us and subject to all that mankind is heir to. The Scriptures says:—

For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.—Heb. 4:15.

At times Jesus claimed to be God. Many to-day believe he was the veritable God, and that it is impossible to be like him; thus practically affirming that his body or outward casing was a mask hiding the great and eternal Creator beneath. This, I fear, is misleading and needs qualifying; but says one, "Did not his works prove him to be God?" I answer, He promised his disciples they should do greater works if they abode in him; will not the same results follow (if necessary) from his authorized servants?

Then to comprehend and harmonize the different statements found in the New Testament, "to be like him," "to follow him," "to be perfect," etc., we must discern his humanity apart from his divinity. While he walked the earth as man, resident within him was the knowledge that he came out from the Father, leaving his power, glory, and majesty, and coequality with God. As a man he was vested with authority, the priesthood of heaven, to set up the church or kingdom upon the earth, and to carry on his ministerial work. By virtue of that authority he was enabled to call down the blessings of heaven and do many mighty works, but in that regard we are not called to be like him, except where individuals are holding that same authority. But so far as his humanity is concerned or personnel, we can and must be like him. Wherein he was kind, loving, and gentle, and manifested those traits that constitute manhood, we are called to follow in his footsteps.

It may be asked, Can man in his own strength do this? I answer No! But by obeying the gospel as taught by Jesus Christ he will enjoy the same privileges that Jesus and his followers enjoyed while he was upon the earth. He will then offer the heaven-approved condition for the reception of the divine Spirit to lead and guide into all truth, into the paths necessary for moral, spiritual, and mental development, thus preparing and fitting him to enter the presence of Jesus Christ our Lord, reflecting the characteristics of the lowly Nazarene, receiving recognition from the Son of God as one who had taken him at his word, exercised his free agency, walked in the path of rectitude and right, developing his moral and spiritual powers by overcoming and subduing his natural and animal desires, thus forming and building a character that will merit the divine approval, "well done."

It may be asked by the "literary circle," How do you reconcile the fact that Mary conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, while we are "born in sin and shapen in iniquity." First, I believe since the time of Mary's conception to the time of birth, the process of development was the same as in any other case; the animal life of the babe was developed by the animal life of its mother and no doubt still received it during infancy from the bosom. The seclusion of Mary while pregnant would no doubt have a marvelous effect on the child. It would naturally be bright and pure, and this I believe to be the God-given privilege of every child to be born pure and not handicapped by the sensual and unlawful desires of its parents. The scripture reads:—

And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom.—Luke 2: 40.

Second, I do not believe we are born in sin and shapened in iniquity. It may be born into environments of sin and iniquity; but the babe is as pure as a dove in the sight of heaven.

Jesus said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." We gather from the above that Jesus took his humanity from his mother Mary; was born mortal and subject to all that flesh is her to. It was necessary for him to be taught and mentally developed, the results of which were manifest when Joseph and Mary found him at the temple sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions. And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.—Luke 3: 46, 47.

Even his parents were amazed at finding him so occupied. It would not do to say this was the result of his being God. To do so would rob his humanity the approval due him, also rob his parents of the credit due them in bringing up the child in the way he should go. We read:—

And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them.—Matt. 3: 51.

which was very natural and proper until he obtained his majority, working at the carpenter's bench, discharging his duty and obligation as a son, educating and equipping himself for the ministry.

And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.—Luke 2: 52.

This proves conclusively that Jesus possessed human nature; it was that human nature which was schooled and disciplined, which waxed strong, increased in wisdom and stature and found favor with God and man.

To claim that he was the veritable God and clothed with seemingly human nature, would do violence to the Almighty and his unchangeability. If Jesus was God in the fullest sense of the word, he could not improve upon himself, he could not receive benefit from God-fearing parents, could not be improved by a moral and spiritual training. If the eternal God was in Jesus from infancy to the cross, it would appear deceptive from start to finish, in waxing strong, increasing in wisdom and finding favor with God and man, and his parents pretending to be amazed when they found him discussing with the doctors in the temple, also in their flight into Egypt to protect their child. It would appear assuming in Joseph and Mary exacting from him the duties of sonship for thirty years; would it not be heaping indignity upon God to bring him down to the level of man?

While Mary knew her son was to be an instrument in God's hands, the savior of the human family, to be sacrificed for the sins of the world, and had so taught him through childhood, yet she clasped him to her bosom as her offspring, experiencing the thrilling emotion of motherhood and the responsibility of parent overshadowing it with her care, love, and anxiety. It was this love that caused her to undergo the weary travel into Egypt to protect her child.

The humanity of Jesus can be detected all through his ministry. He came to John and requested baptism, but John forbade him, saying:—

I have need to be baptized of thee.—Matt. 3: 14.

John knew the high and holy calling of Jesus, that he was to be the savior of humanity, the one spoken of by the prophet of old, who would come in the process of time to redeem a fallen world. Hence, knowing this, John felt he was not worthy to baptize so great a personage. Jesus answered and said:—

Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness.—Matt. 3: 15.

Why was it necessary for Jesus to be baptized? Because he was clothed upon with humanity, which without sin had to bow in obedience to the ordinance of heaven; in that humanity were the seeds of corruption and death. It had to pass through the divine channel of baptism to obtain favor and recognition from heaven; he had to submit his person to the watery grave "to fulfill all righteousness." When John so understood it "he suffered him."

Verily, verily I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.—John 10: 1.

If Jesus had not entered by the door could not the terms "thief and robber" be applied to him? When he had subjected his humanity to baptism, thus fulfilling all righteousness, what was the result? The recognition of heaven rested upon him, and lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matt. 3: 17.

The human Jesus, the carpenter's son, the lowly Nazarene, has now become the adopted Son of God, having the seal of adoption from heaven, clothed with authority and inspiration. He goes forth to do his Father's will, to accomplish and fulfill the duties of his high and holy calling and to complete the great fight over self, bending and subjecting the natural will to the divine will. Where the first man Adam failed, Jesus the second Adam was a success. "He came, saw, and conquered;" thus he stands out in clear and striking relief from all. The emblem of manhood, the embodiment of virtue, unfurling to the gaze of fallen humanity the ensign,

I am the way, the truth, and the life.—John 14:6.

But to continue, we next find him in the wilderness fasting, and when he had fasted forty days and nights he became hungry. Here is proof of his humanity; he had denied his physical being natural food for forty days, and as a result he became hungered. Were it otherwise there would be no virtue in his fasting.

The serpent who brought about the fall of Adam and Eve and caused them to be driven from the garden of Eden, by circumvention had cursed humanity for four thousand years, now appears in another form, in all the subtle craftiness of his nature to circumvent the purposes of God. He knew the despised Nazarene was his greatest enemy. If Jesus won the victory his cause was forever lost. Hence all his forces are arrayed against the mission of Jesus Christ. He knew that Jesus like Adam was clothed with human nature, and that human nature was suffering the pangs of hunger. He said:—

If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.—Matt. 4:3.

He further appeals to his human nature when he offers Jesus the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them if he would fall down and worship him. His reply,

It is written, baffles the tempter. Then angels from heaven came and administered to hungering Jesus.

Jesus referred to his humanity when he said:—

The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.—Matt. 8:20.

We discover his humanity in the feeding of the five thousand:—

Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on this multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way.—Matt. 15:32.

Jesus knew by experience the results of fasting upon the physical system; hence the exercise of his miraculous power to alleviate the hunger of this great throng.

We now come to that wonderful experience in the mount of transfiguration. After receiving baptism at the hands of John, he goes forth on his mission, doing all manner of good, healing the sick, proclaiming the gospel of good news to men, and doing the work successfully his father had given him to do, which resulted in a manifestation from heaven, the divine approval. His person is filled with the Holy Spirit.

And his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.—Matt. 17:2.

The disciples said it was good to be there. While they were conversing a voice from the cloud said:—

This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.—Matt. 17:5.

What a glorious tribute!

We find him on another occasion weeping over Jerusalem, when he uttered these words:—

O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.—Matt. 23:37, 38.

Jesus is no doubt speaking by inspiration; yet in or through that inspiration we detect his humanity. The words, "How often I would have gathered you," etc., refer to the time he was with the Father before he came into this life of flesh, when he sent the different prophets as related in the Old Testament. The words, "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate," refer to the future; foreseeing by the unerring sight of inspiration what their terrible condition would be. He knew the curse that would fall upon their beloved city, the great suffering they would be called to pass through. He saw the Roman soldiers steeped in vileness, thirsting for blood like demons let loose to kill, destroy, and ravish. He saw them scattered and peeled, a hiss and a byword amongst all nations.

Seeing all this his humanity bursts forth and he weeps.

We now come to a very touching scene, the raising of Lazarus. Here the humanity of Jesus is brought out in striking relief. Mary, Martha, and Lazarus are his earthly friends. While Lazarus lay sick they sent word to Jesus saying:—

Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest is sick.—John 11:3.

John 11:5 reads:—

Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus.

He did not at once respond to their call; he tarried that the power of his high and holy calling might be manifest. When he arrived at Bethany Mary and Martha came to him in tears stating their trouble.

When Jesus therefore saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he groaned in his spirit, and was troubled.—John 11:33.

When they pointed out the place where Lazarus lay,

Jesus wept.

Those standing by said:—

Behold how he loved him.

When the stone is removed from where Lazarus lay, Jesus with the authority vested in him from heaven commands the dead to come forth.

As we draw our essay to a close, and come to the closing scene in the life of Jesus we feel to some extent how great and terrible must have been the strain upon that human frame. Truly he was a man of sorrow acquainted with grief. While his physical sufferings were intense, his mental sufferings were worse. While he knew he came out from heaven and, while there was coequal with God, he had only frail human strength to pass through the terrible and crushing ordeal. He had to tread the wine press alone, to be forsaken by his brethren. He received the last ministrations of angels before going to an ignominious death, like the vile murderer in his cell receiving the last rites of the church before stepping upon the scaffold to meet a merited justice. He was led like a lamb to the slaughter, yet he opened not his mouth.

In Matthew 26:37 we read:—

And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

Luke 22:41, 42:—

And he was withdrawn from them about a stone's cast, and kneeled down, and prayed, saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove this cup from me: nevertheless, not my will, but thine, be done.

Frail human nature here asserted itself; but, thank God, where human strength fails, divine strength is given.

And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him. And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.—Ibid. 43:44.

Next comes his betrayal by his own disciple; indignity heaped upon him, alone with a blood-thirsty mob, mocked, scourged, spat upon, beard plucked, and crowned with prickly thorns, bearing the cross to an ignominious death. His strength gives out, he submits like a lamb, without murmur, while cruel men drive the spikes through his hands and feet. The cross is raised aloft, and slips with a dull thud to the bottom of the pit, racking the body with pain. Calmly awaiting death the heavens become dark and forbidding, the suffering human frame is hanging on the tree. At last, when the pain of body and anguish of mind become unbearable, he cries, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

BORN.

THOMPSON.—At Eagle Grove, Iowa, August 24, 1896, to Bro. H. M. and Sr. L. M. Thompson, a son, and named Lawrence Melvin. Blessed at Head Grove, November 8, 1896, by Elder J. S. Roth.

THOMAS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, October 6, 1894, to Mr. George and Sr. Alice Thomas, a daughter; named Georgia Marie, and blessed October 4, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and E. J. Robinson.

THOMAS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 6, 1896, to Mr. George and Sr. Alice Thomas, a daughter, named Eva May, and blessed October 4, 1896, by Elders E. J. Robinson and H. A. Stebbins.

LANG.—To Bro. Edward J. and Sr. Bell Lang, November 10, 1896, a son.

MARRIED.

PRICE—WALKER.—In the Head Grove, Iowa, church, November 8, 1896, by Elder J. S. Roth, Bro. John D. Price to Sr. Maud E. O. Walker.

DIED.

GREENE.—Asphyxiated by drowning at Green's Landing, Maine, October 21, 1896, Myron F., son of Elder and Mrs. U. W. Greene, aged 2 years, 8 months, and 22 days. A bright, beautiful lad, ruddy with health; playing out of doors he strayed from the yard and was not missed for some minutes, when a search was at once instituted. His toy cart being seen near the shore led the searchers to look carefully about the old wreck "Ellen Perkins" which Bro. Otis C. Eaton uses in place of a wharf. The hatches were all open and the strong wind that prevailed evidently blew him through the fore-scuttle into the water. After considerable searching around the vessel and down the hatches, some one went down and there found his body drifting among the seaweed. Every effort was made to resuscitate him, but it was too late. Funeral conducted by Elder George W. Eaton.

WOOLLEY.—October 8, 1896, at Colchester, Illinois, Maria Woolley, aged 64 years, 5 months, and 17 days. Maria Stoddard was born at Kirtland, Ohio, April 12, 1832. She was married to N. B. Woolley June 6, 1852, at Webster, Illinois. Deceased was a daughter of Sophronia Smith Stoddard and niece of Joseph Smith the Martyr, and was baptized by her uncle when quite young at Nauvoo, and has lived a consistent Christian life. She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the morning of the first resurrection.

GRAHAM.—At North Bend, Nebraska, July 24, 1896, Bro. John H. Graham. The doctor said his death was caused by a tumorous cancer on his neck, which had caused him considerable suffering for some months. Bro. Graham united with the church in an early day, but owing to the Utah apostasy he did not unite with the Reorganization until a few years ago, which he did at Lamoni, Iowa, where his membership still rests. He died strong in the faith.

BLACKMAN.—At Magnolia, Iowa, October 8, 1896, Shirley Deane, infant son of C. H. and Amy L. Blackman, aged 9 months and 7 hours. Funeral services conducted by A. M. Fyrando. Little Shirley was possessed of a bright and happy spirit, and his death has left an aching void in the hearts of the family.

GARNER.—Sr. Lorinda Garner, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Allen Marshall, Fremont, Nebraska, October 24, 1896. She was born January 14, 1802, in Newcastle, Henry County, Illinois, being the first white child born in that county. She was baptized February 12, 1842, in Indiana, by Elder Z. S. Martin. Passing through the "cloudy day," some of her family became entangled in the apostasy under B. Young, and others while believing the doctrine of the church, have, for reasons best known to themselves, not obeyed the gospel. She was a member of the Platte Valley branch, Nebraska. Four generations mourn her departure. Funeral services at Waterloo, Nebraska, near which place her body was laid to rest awaiting the morn of the first resurrection.

GRAY.—At her home in St. Joseph, Missouri, November 1, 1896, without previous warning, the spirit of Sr. Lavina J. Gray took its departure from its earthly tabernacle. She leaves a husband, Mr. John W. Gray, seven children, two brothers, and one sister to mourn, two of whom, Bro. C. L. Sales and Sr. C. Smith, of Missouri Valley, Iowa, were in attendance at the funeral, which occurred from the church November 4, in charge of R. Archibald. Sermon by J. M. Terry, from Revelation 14: 13.

SAILSBERY.—Marinda Sailsbery was born in Chenango County, New York, May 3, 1818; came to Illinois with her sister, Mrs. I. L. Rogers, in 1841. Soon after coming to this state she was married to Geo. Rarick, and with him united with the Latter Day Saints, and after the death of the prophet, they went to Voree. Sometime in the fifties they removed to Western Iowa and took part in Baneemyism under C. B. Thompson. In 1859 they returned to Illinois, and soon after united with the Reorganized Church, he soon being ordained to the office of elder, and some time after chosen to the office of seventy, and one of the seven presidents. Some years after he was called to the office of high priest, which position he held at his death, which took place on December 19, 1874. In all the toils, trials, hardships, and pleasures, she was his companion and faithful wife. To this union eight children were born, four of whom are left to mourn the loss of a kind parent. She died at the home of her daughter, Sr. Augusta Vickery, near Plano, Illinois, on Friday, October 23, 1896. She received a stroke on June 15, 1896, of which she did not fully recover. Death came to her without the least sign of a struggle. The funeral was held at the saints' church in Plano, Elder F. G. Pitt preaching the sermon. She was buried beside her husband in the Asbury cemetery.

HARDY.—At his home near Tabor, Iowa, November 1, 1896, Bro. Isaac A. Hardy, in the 76th year of his age. Bro. Hardy was born in Virginia; became identified with the Latter Day Saints about twenty-five years ago; baptized by old father Gaylord (as he was familiarly called). Bro. Hardy was a very quiet man, well respected by those who knew him. Funeral at the family residence, November 2, in charge of Mr. Frank Spencer; short discourse by H. F. Durfey from Hebrews 9: 27. Bro. Hardy leaves an aged wife, several children and grandchildren, and many friends who realize that although his place is vacant here he is resting in peace to await the resurrection morn.

CHAPMAN.—At Tryconnell, Ontario, October 25, 1896, Hannah J. Chapman. Though she had been deprived of communion with saints for a few years, yet she was firm in the gospel, requesting to be administered to, and the elders were sent for and attended to that ordinance. The fever left her and she had no pain, but became weaker and weaker until Sunday morning, when she gave her baby girl, nine days old, to her sister, and told her she had to go. She wished to partake of the sacrament; Elder Annett was sent for, but before he arrived her spirit had fled. She leaves a husband and two children. She had her children blessed, thus placing them in the care of him who will protect and guide them into the paths of righteousness. Funeral sermon by Elder B. St. John, in the Methodist church, their choir ably assisting.

RHODE.—At her parents' home, near Tabor, Iowa, October 2, 1896, Sr. Maggie Rhode. She was born March 31, 1872; baptized into the church September 4, 1884, by H. Kemp; married to Mr. John Duncan Rhode December 6, 1894, who died April 7, 1896. Sr. Maggie was a lovely girl; her pleasant traits of character made the home circle enjoyable and agreeable to all. She was a dutiful and affectionate wife, and deeply mourned her great loss when her husband was taken from her, which was seemingly more than she could bear. She bore her sufferings without a murmur, and passed over the river of death in hope of the resurrection of the just. A large cortege followed her remains to the Congregational church, of Tabor, which was kindly granted for the funeral service. Sermon by Elder Henry Kemp to a large attendance of relatives, saints, and respected friends. Interment in Tabor's beautiful cemetery, by the side of her husband. Father, mother, four sisters, two brothers, and many other relatives and friends mourn.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendices—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush.....25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding.....35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

IN THE LOST CITY OF OMITLAN WHERE MINERALOGIST NIVEN MADE HIS GREAT DISCOVERIES.

CITY OF MEXICO, November 1.—A remarkable discovery has been made in Mexico, and one that is exciting considerable attention. It seems as if it were another wonder of the world, for it is no less than the unearthing of a prehistoric city in the State of Guerrero that was so spacious as to cover nine hundred square miles, and that had no less than twenty-two temples and two pyramids. The discoverer of this city, William Niven, has given it the name of Omitlan, that being a contraction of the Aztec word Quechomictlipan, which means "what a quantity of bones on top."

The story of the buried city is now told for the first time. Five years ago, while on a mineralogical prospecting tour through the State of Guerrero, William Niven, a well-known New York mineralogist and life member of the American Museum of Natural History, visited the capital Chilpancingo, and there was invited by the Governor-General, Francisco V. Arce, to examine his fine collection of minerals and antiquities. This he gladly did, and he was particularly impressed with the number and quality of the latter. What surprised him most was that the region from which most of the antiquities came was practically unknown to archaeologists and explorers. As his homeward journey was near this locality he decided to investigate further, and he camped at the nearest point, an Indian village, Xochipala, that is a day's horseback ride from north Chilpancingo, and he there learned from an Indian chief that there was a great prehistoric city that was within two days' horseback ride west of the city. It was further stated that there were temples and pyramids there and a great green idol in one of the plazas.

Being accustomed to stories of lost mines, buried treasures and other Indian fairy tales Mr. Niven paid little attention to the story at the time and nothing was done until two years ago, when on an archaeological collecting trip for Morris K. Jessup, President of the American Museum of Natural History of New York. Then the story of the buried city was more emphatically repeated by the chief and he offered to furnish a guide to it. This offer he accepted, and he went to the place designated. He found the ruins and that they covered an area that was far greater than the chief had led him to expect. There were ruins of three great temples occupying a space of hundreds of square feet, with altars in the center from fifteen to twenty-five feet high, fifteen feet square, and walls were standing in some places eight feet high, all substantially built of stone and lime. On arrival in this city he mentioned the discovery to a few friends, but in confidence, for he wanted to gain a concession from the Mexican Government to ship some objects that might be found in excavation, there being a Mexican law prohibiting the exportation of antiquities. This concession he tried to obtain for two years, but failed. He then determined to make another trip to the buried city and by the aid of the camera give to the world the story of his remarkable discovery.

Accordingly last July he left New York with an excellent camera and 600 glass plates. He had also a first-class camping outfit, consisting of tent, rifle, and other necessities. After spending a few days in this city completing arrangements for the trip he started on his expedition and at the beginning of August he reached the town of Cuautla, in the State of Morelos, where he purchased four pack animals and was joined by his trusted mozo (servant) Jesus Mancilla, and an arriero (muleteer). Then he started for the ruined city that he has named Omitlan. His route lay through the line of new railroad at present being constructed from Puente de Ixtla to Acapulco, and he was most cordially entertained at the different camps. At Buena Vista he met a fellow-Scotchman, Dave Shaw, a prominent railroad contractor, who kindly offered mules to pack supplies and other necessaries.

Leaving this point Mr. Niven followed the trail, which went round a great divide. He camped at Tepecoacalco, Tetelillo and Ahueyhuepan. At the latter place, a little Indian village near the Mescala River, the chief warned the people not to give information about the ruins, as the little stone idols found in them were "gods of air," and if any were taken out of the country a severe drought would follow. He even refused to sell corn to the explorers, and early next morning they left this inhospitable place. A halt was next made at Mazela, and on the following day Coacoyula was reached.

Here several Indians were employed to excavate some subterranean ruins at Texcal, and the photographs taken show a curious style of architecture. Rows of prepared stone were laid side by side near the roof, and these in size and shape resembled the sugar loaf. In cleaning out one of the chambers some jade beads were found.

The next work was done at Guayabo, about ten miles west. Here were the ruins of a temple which covered a space of 1,200 square feet. The foundation walls were visible, and the great altar in the center was merely a heap of stones. A trench was dug on the northwest side, and for three days the digging continued. The work was impeded by the swarming of bees. These were of a variety smaller than the house fly and have no sting, but

Mr. Niven says their annoyance is far worse than a New Jersey mosquito. "They buzzed in your ears, crept into your nostrils, clung to your eyelids, tangled in your hair, dropped into your glass when drinking and followed the food." All methods were employed to get rid of them, but in vain, and the only method of relief was in covering the head with a veil.

On the fourth day a great discovery was made. At nine feet below the surface, under the foundation of the altar, was found an olla, or terra-cotta pot. It was filled with dirt, bones and seventy-two objects of mother-of-pearl. Many of the latter were carved in the shape of fishes, and four of them were two inches in length and bore carved idol heads with peculiar head-dress. The olla was unfortunately broken by the pickaxe of the peon, but the fragments were carefully collected. Half of the pot, with contents undisturbed, was secured.

The next camp was at Xochipala, and the trail was followed west from the town for two leagues, wending to the foothills of the Sierra Madre, bearing a little to the south. Camp was made at a spring in the deep canyon, and after lunch the ascent of a steep hill was made. Near the summit were evidences of prehistoric structures, which, however, were in most instances little more than foundations; but the greatest surprise was at the top of the ridge, for there was what must once have been a great temple, 400x100 feet in size. In the center was an altar of solid masonry fifteen feet square and nearly twenty feet high. At each corner of the foundations and in parts of the walls circular towers were plainly visible. Several hours were spent in digging near the altar, but only a few fragments of broken pottery were found. Next day the brush was partly cleared and photographs were taken. Excavations were made at several points, and several jade beads and pieces of broken plaster were found.

The next camping place was three miles west, at Jabalin. Here also were found the ruins of a temple with the remains of the campanario or belfry, with an altar in the center. An excavation revealed plastered walls, and a floor with two layer of plaster, between which were broken pottery and bones, was then discovered.

Of course all these discoveries were interesting, but they bear no comparison to what followed. After crossing the great barranca of Xilatlahco, 1,500 feet deep, Mr. Niven came to Quechomictlipan, where were found the most important ruins.

Near a building that seemed to have been substantially constructed the camp was set. This building was built of material that had apparently been selected with the greatest care, the stone being harder and hewn of equal dimensions. The building was also erected with architectural skill that will compare favorably with buildings of the present day. In this building was a circular chamber, plastered, twelve feet in diameter, painted red and white, and filled with loose dirt and broken plaster. There was considerable clearing done here. About four feet from the wall and eight feet under the surface the skeletons of four animals were found, which will probably be of great scientific interest. They have been carefully preserved for critical examination. An excavation was made into a momoscle, or pyramid, near this building, and some very fine objects were found on the plastered floor, notably two green jade ear ornaments and a green jade idol.

There is one thing peculiar about this jade. No material of the same kind is found in Mexico. There is a jade in South America and in Australia, but these do not resemble the jade found in Mexican ruins. The only jade that resembles it is that of China. Has China any connection with the prehistoric history of these buried cities?

At Chalchiutepetl, which is Aztec for Hill of the Precious Stone, excavations were made by the aid of six Indians hired from Zumpango del Rio twenty miles distant. Operations began on a great pyramid sixty feet high. Here were found a copper bell (dress ornament), some green jade amulets, two remarkable idols of green diorite, showing great artistic skill. A great number of green jade beads were found on the surface. Human skulls and bones were found here in great quantities.

Tejas and Organos were next visited, and it was found that the buildings at the latter place were subterranean. One was dug into, and beads, broken pottery, charcoal, bones and several circular stones discovered. Photographs were made of the temple at Tejas. The walls were higher than those of Quechomictlipan, but there was the same altar in the center of the temple.

At Portnerio a great pyramid was found. A trench was dug in it and a large number of fine jade beads and other articles were found therein.

At Xochocolyin a large block of cut stone 7x2 feet was discovered with the figure of an idol and two idols weighing over 500 pounds were found.

From this point south to Guayabo is fully ten leagues, and it is the same distance from Quechomictlipan east to Chalchiutepetl—being thirty miles in each direction, or 900 square miles. All over the vast area traces of ruined cities are found on every foothill, mountain, or ridge. From the appearance of the ruins and twenty-two temples visited, all being of the same style, it is reasonable to suppose that they existed long before the foundation of Tenochtitlan (the ancient name of the City of Mexico), in 1312, and that long before that time this vast, ancient city was overwhelmed by an earthquake. The walls standing on ridges and completely overthrown on mountains and other indications tend to confirm this view, though history is silent even on the existence of the city. There is another point here. To support such a city, larger even than London, the water supply must have been great and large bodies of water must have existed, though little water is found near the place now.

As a proof that this buried city has hitherto been unknown it may be said that the latest ethnological map of Mexico, which shows the mounds and ruins discovered, has the region now described unmarked in any way.

It may be incredible to some that such a city has remained so long undiscovered, but this is partly explained by the fact that the State of Guerrero has long been considered, unjustly it is true, a dangerous country to travel in.

The results of this discovery are of unquestioned value to science and art, but it must be remembered that the exploration has been crude and imperfect. There is no question that many treasures lie buried that will be later unearthed and may throw considerable light on the history of Mexico.—Fred Navarro, Manager Pan-American Press.

THE SIEGE STILL ON.

ITEMS have appeared from time to time narrating the methods employed by elders of the Utah Church. Various changes of policy are made, presumably to suit the conditions to be met and ends sought to be reached.

Bro. Richard Ellis, of Sydney, New South Wales, reports a case in point. However, this is not the first time that Utah elders have sought to steal the thunder of the Reorganized Church. We quote from a letter addressed by Bro. Ellis to Bro. John Scott of Lamoni, dated October 8, and in which he also reports the status of our work there:—

Bro. Butterworth has left Victoria with his family. I think he is likely to remain in New South Wales. Bro. Gomer Wells has gone to Victoria to take his place. We had four more added to our branch about three weeks ago. One of those baptized was formerly a local minister for the Wesleyans. I think a few more are very near the door. I hope it won't be long till we shall number a hundred in our branch. The Brighamites have a branch in the suburbs of Sydney, about two or three miles from our branch. I believe that the few members they have are those who were with them years ago, although I have heard that they have a few added to their number. They go under the name of Josephites; that is, taking the name of Joseph Smith, the Martyr. They say they are his followers. They have three or four elders in Sydney, while we have only one, and he is not here above half his time; it is divided between here and New Castle, one hundred miles by rail. I heard that one of the Utah elders has taken two families from Sydney to Utah. Bro. Butterworth is talking of looking them up in a few days.

From what we have seen and learned of the elders sent out by the Utah Church, we have become satisfied that they are, with but few exceptions, men of very limited ability and experience, hence incapable of accomplishing very much. Most of them are men taken from their farms without ministerial training, and who have accepted the statements and teaching, the leadership and policy of their officials—the "living oracles"—without question; who have grown up in and imbibed the spirit to "obey counsel" and "do as told" to do; hence are unprepared to make much impression upon the busy, aggressive, questioning world about them.

Not being men of independent thought and character, and untrained in the arena of public independent spirit and conflict, they show the results of their habits and methods of life and discipline, hence lack ability to think independently and to meet the issues in conflict. Few of them are posted on the teachings of the early church, or those of the three books. They have been trained to think, move, and act in set grooves prescribed and worn into ruts by the exhortations and counsel of their file leaders; hence are set, fixed, and unprogressive, with but few exceptions.

When confronted with facts published years ago when Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, and others expressed themselves openly and defiantly because of having full sway in Utah, these elders are taken unawares and unprepared for the avalanche of "stuff" uttered and published by their early leaders, hence are obliged to evade open methods of investigation and compelled to pursue a quiet, inoffensive policy of house-to-house tract distribution, etc. Knowing that the facts of Utah Church history cannot be defended, the leaders have counseled against discussion, hence the present system of missionary effort to proselyte, and largely carried on by the class of elders referred to; who, drafted in their turn, leave home for a specified time and "take a mission," but who really accomplish little or nothing, as our Australian brother and others clearly show.

We are aware that some of the Utah elders are not as innocent or ignorant concerning the manipulations and usurpations of their leaders past and present as are those referred to; that some of the representatives of the church in Utah know too well the dark past and accept its teaching and practice, being by no means ignorant in that respect. We are also aware that they also cover up and gloss over, so far as in their power, the wrong that would clothe itself in the garb of goodness, and are deep in the mire because well posted concerning its history and details.

Neither class can do much in the line of missionary effort, however. A line of vigilant sentinels as elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and members of the Reorganized Church stands guard to hedge the way and to challenge that the countersign be given—that true Latter Day Saintism be presented, or the false be made plain, that their "folly be made manifest in the eyes of all people."

A spirit of fanaticism too attends any men who continue to propagate a wrong, however conscientious some might be in doing it. While we are aware, as stated, that some know too well the indefensible character of what they affirm, yet it remains true that men determined to affirm wrong principles in a movement to which they have given their adherence partake of the spirit of such movement. Especially does the spirit of fanaticism and superstition attach to a movement that is a perversion of or a direct departure from truth. If the light within becomes darkness, "how great is that darkness!" Those "once enlightened" become the more greatly darkened in mind if once they turn from the truth, and entail such conditions of darkness and blindness upon their followers.

Men who refuse to accept the truth and who will not measure and adjust their actions and policies by it, become susceptible, liable to darkness of mind. Especially is this true in spiritual concerns, for Satan stands ready to use as forces to do evil and to blind those who claim to be called to walk in and to teach the way of life and light. Men become servants of him whom they "list to obey"; and the apostles, prophets, and elders of the salt land have proven themselves to be no exception to the rule.

We have known men from Utah who claimed to have spirit testimony that Brigham Young was the legal president of the church, the successor of Joseph Smith, and polygamy a divine institution. They fasted and prayed and "knew it like fire in their bones." We had no reason to doubt their testimony; they were undoubtedly attended by a spirit power; for men can receive testimony according to what they labor for and are entitled to: the testimony of the powers of darkness if serving in advocacy of their peculiar principles and suffering themselves to be misled and controlled by the forces of evil; the testimony of the Spirit of truth if obedient to the restraints of truth. Israel of old had its inspiration even when it turned to the worship of false gods and polluted its priesthood by departure from the right way. Spirit forces and powers stood ready to encourage by supernatural cooperation and direction, when they turned aside from the written word given to instruct, to direct, and keep their feet in the paths of truth and peace. It has not been difficult to recognize the presence of spirit influence attending men who hold a perverted and corrupted priesthood sent out as ministers of the Utah apostasy. Its dark and forbidding character has been discerned and felt by more than one of the faithful ministry who have met and confronted men sent out ostensibly to build up that institution but whose primary purpose has at times been to "resist the truth" in resisting the work of the Reorganization by seeking to detract from its influence by proclaiming the reprehensible theories and doctrines and methods represented by the organization in Utah.

We are hopeful that many men ignorant of the perversion that so long has held the Utah people in its toils will in due time attain a clear understanding of the situation and turn from the leadership of its priesthood. There is scarcely a doubt but what scores of men and women in the Brighamite Church will yet rise up and cast off the yoke that so long has held them under bondage. Error is not permanent, and cannot always abide; truth alone is steadfast and it only can remain. We look forward to the time when, and at no distant day, men and women of integrity in Utah will hear and heed the voice of Israel's Shepherd and break away from the conditions that now keep them within the ranks of that organization in which they and their children have been robbed of spiritual and moral light and power, the true heritage of the honest in heart, the people of the Lord.

Ever since the beginning of the latter-day work one peculiarity has attached to it; viz., every man and woman who faithfully obeys the gospel becomes an advocate and defender of the faith; this necessarily so because moved upon to labor for good by the indwelling power of the Spirit of truth; hence in time to come we shall see the power of priestly rule so broken in Utah that men and women will come from the ranks of the dominant church there who will be strong contenders for the faith once delivered to the saints in the Martyr's day, and which faith is continued in by the continuation of the original church—the Reorganization—the "Josephites," so-called.

It is a recognized, manifest truth that the more men seek to bolster up a wrong the more apparent becomes the revelation of its true character; defects sought to be hidden by cunning and craft stand out in bolder relief; the employment of wrong lines of policy awaken a disposition to take note of and question the ends sought to be reached, and finally the whole affair appears in its true light. And, it is natural for the majority of the people when awakened to realize their actual condition to stand by the right. For this reason we are hopeful concerning the issue. The end is bound to come, the truth to be vindicated, and God's work made honorable; and all who will, be delivered from evil and oppression. It is manifest that religious institutions that cannot and will not stand on the defensive either at home or abroad must go down.

The siege is still on.

ADDRESSES for sample copies of the HERALD or Autumn Leaves are still desired. It aids both the publishing department and the work in the field to have them.

CUBA.

LATE advices deny the report that the Spanish forces under General Weyler had captured an insurgent stronghold and inflicted a severe blow upon the Cuban patriots. It is now stated that the Cuban generals drove back the Spaniards and captured valuable accouterments, and are well prepared to resist attacks. Reports, as seen, are somewhat conflicting, recourse being had, it is said, to hopeful war reports, to aid the Spanish cause at home and against the Cuban sympathizers in the United States. It is to be hoped that the war will soon end—and with Cuba free, as every people of right ought to be. With Cuba the gem of the Antilles as free as Columbia the gem of the Ocean the world would witness another step forward for the general good of man.

APOSTLE THATCHER IS OUSTED.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Nov. 19.—Moses Thatcher, for many years an apostle in the Mormon Church, has been disfellowshipped. The official announcement appeared this evening in the Deseret News, the official organ of the church.

This action was taken to-day at a secret meeting of the apostles and is the result of the political activity of Mr. Thatcher a year ago.

Mr. Thatcher was placed upon the Democratic ticket as a candidate for Senator with B. H. Roberts, also a Mormon, for Congress. This did not seem to please prominent Mormon Republicans, and as a result both Mr. Thatcher and Mr. Roberts were disciplined, the church claiming that as they were members of the church and holding an official position they had no right to accept a nomination without first having consulted their colleagues and superiors.

This both denounced as wrong, and for it both fell under the displeasure of the Mormon authorities. Mr. Roberts afterward relented and was given a mission to New York, where he now is.

Mr. Thatcher has insisted right along that the church had no right to say what office he should accept or when he should accept it, and as a result of this attitude he has been dropped from the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

He has a host of friends among Mormon Democrats in Utah, and it is more than possible that he will be named as the next Senator from Utah, as the legislature is Democratic. The church will prevent his election, however, if it can. The action to-day plainly proves this.

It now looks as though the old Mormon and Gentile fight would be renewed in Utah and at a very early day.

The foregoing is clipped from the Chicago Times-Herald of the 20th inst.

We cannot vouch for all the statements made in the item, but are aware that Mr. Thatcher has for some time been under a ban placed upon him by his superiors in the Utah priesthood, having incurred their disfavor because he refused to submit to their views concerning his course in political matters, which in the form of priesthood "counsel" practically amounted to dictation; and from men who had themselves shown strong personal political interests and manifested considerable activity in political affairs, and to the extent of making campaign speeches,—some of them at least.

Mr. Thatcher has many friends in Utah who admire his ability and independence of character, and it is just possible that his action may lead to the defection of others who like him do not believe that priestly rulers possess the right to impose a ban upon those who take an independent stand and act contrary to the opinions of others in matters upon which they possess the individual right guaranteed to every man.

Elder B. H. Roberts, it appears, has submitted and bowed to the yoke, not being equal to the emergency, while Mr. Thatcher shows strength and refuses to yield. We trust the outcome may be for good in favor of political and spiritual freedom among the people of Utah. Moses Thatcher may yet by his course lead many out from the bondage of their spiritual rulers.

THE CLERICALS.

CATHOLIC prelates declare that Rome is not the enemy but the friend of republics. The recent opposition by clericals to the civil rights bill in Hungary did not help many to accept the statement and the late action of clericals in France appears to be in opposition to republican sentiment:—

PARIS, Nov. 12.—In the Chamber of Deputies today M. Miram, Radical Socialist Deputy for Rheims, attacked the government for forbidding the congress of school-teachers while showing weakness regarding the clerical anti-republican crusade, as shown in the proceedings of the clerical congresses at Rheims.

M. Rambaud, Minister of Education, promised a liberal bill increasing the privileges of the teachers and permitting the meeting of the congress.

M. Darlan, Minister of Justice, denied the alleged anti-republican attitude of the clericals. Only one incident had occurred, he said, at Rheims which the government reproved. M. Bourgeois, the late Premier, denounced the conduct of the Bishops, which he said was the more reprehensible as they were State officials. The Catholic congress, he said, had a political aim. M. Millerand taunted the government with submitting to the dictation of the clericals. M. Meline, the Premier, then demanded a vote of confidence in the government, which was voted by 324 yeas to 225 nays.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRETHREN in the Oklahoma field are asked to note this call for labor, from Sr. Mary Ellen Plain, Beaver City, Beaver County, Oklahoma, dated the 8th inst:—

I wish you would send an elder out here. It is some time since one was here, and if one would come and preach I think some would join the church. Where we live the Christian elder baptized five recently. I would like to see a good, able elder who enjoys the Spirit. I would do all I could to help pay his way. I have ten children. My husband has been dead six years, and he died in the faith of Christ. I hope an elder will be sent soon. We feel that we are some of the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths was at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, November 16, whence he wrote as follows:—

The work in my field is in excellent order. All of the brethren in the ministry are hard at work and good reports are coming in. Many people have been baptized of late throughout the mission.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn wrote from Moberly, Missouri, November 17:—

I baptized six at Moberly, good prospects for a branch there soon. Have opened up Macon with a splendid interest. One man by the name of Burkhart told me he would give a lot on which to build a house in Moberly and I am inclined to take the advantage of all such offers.

Bro. Gomer R. Wells, in sending an order for publications writes from Bradford, Victoria, Australia, October 8, as follows:—

The inclosed handbill will show what I am trying to do here. This trip is costing Bro. Leyland about $6.25 for railway expense, printing, and hall rent, besides giving me a home and sending me away with eight hundred and fifty handbills to use elsewhere. Besides this he is having me send off orders to Herald and Ensign amounting to $15.65, or a total expenditure of nearly $22. He is not a rich man but is in a fair position as school-teacher, and wishes to keep abreast the times and the progress of the work, as far as an isolated family of saints can. Attendance fair here; interest nothing special. I leave for Geelong next week, where I have hopes of a good work being done. I want to try Frankston, a new place, before Christmas. (Geelong is practically new.) Bro. McIntosh, of Queensferry branch, is under appointment and will work in the city of Melbourne at same time I am at the above places. One brother in Hastings had paid about fifty dollars as an "offering." After hearing a sermon by your humble servant on "tithing," he had the sub-agent change it so as to read "tithing." Several others are decided on "squaring accounts" with the Lord. The Hastings branch is in excellent spiritual condition just now, and this can be said of the majority of the branches in Australia. There is a visible improvement in every way the last two years. I look forward to the coming conference (Christmas) in Sydney as the largest and best Australia will have ever had. Letters from Elders Butterworth and Kaler show the work prospering in New Castle and Sidney in New South Wales.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Reed City, Michigan, the 20th:—

We are doing the best we can reasonably here. I am feeling well in body and in mind. We are a little behind financially but I look for better times under the incoming administration.

Bro. James Moler, Wellston, Ohio, November 17:—

To-morrow I go to a new place in Meigs County, to open up the work. I recently baptized three here and two at Wilkesville, a worthy young man by the name of Patton and his sister. Four were recently baptized at Weldon by Brn. J. L. Goodrich and F. J. Ebeling, so the work moves along fairly well. I feel joyful in the conflict.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, Cherokee, Iowa, November 18:—

Bro. C. E. Butterworth, missionary in charge, directed me to this locality and I expect to begin meetings in the G. A. R. hall to-morrow night. We hope for good results.

Bro. J. J. Morgan, Scranton, Pennsylvania, November 18:—

Bro. F. M. Sheehy is with us. He baptized three young people to-day and there are eight more possibly to be baptized next week. Bro. Sheehy will organize a Sunday school before he leaves.

Bro. F. T. Baker, Lebeck, Missouri, late date:—

I wish to correspond with some elder who can make it a point to visit Antelope County, Nebraska. I have been corresponding a Mr. Gossard, a half brother of Senator Allen, and have an invitation from him to any of our people to visit him at his home. I can assure them they will be treated nicely, although they may have to fight over every inch of the ground while presenting the gospel to him. If some elder will send his address to me I will give him a few pointers that will open up the way for good to be accomplished.

We have received the following from "Headquarters National Armenian Relief Committee," which we publish by request and for the information of any who can aid the destitute and suffering Armenians:—

The National Armenian Relief Committee is just in receipt of the following cable dispatch from the International Armenian Relief Committee at Constantinople, Sir Phillip Currie Chairman:—

"PHILIPPOLIS, Nov. 14, 1896.

"SPENCER TRASK, 63 Bible House, N. Y.

"Harpoet, the center of the desolated district, estimates forty thousand people destitute; needs twenty thousand pounds for food, twenty-five thousand more for bedding, clothing, cooking utensils. We fed eighty thousand people in this district last year. Preparing careful estimates of other districts. Our committee expects calls for one hundred thousand pounds for the winter's needs.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. T. BARHAM, of Mountain Grove, Missouri, writes, relating experiences confirmatory to him of spiritual things.

Bro. J. W. Wight was at Woodbine, Iowa, on the 16th. He expected to go thence to Mondamin.

Destructive storms are reported along the coast of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, November 14. The damage to shipping was heavy.

Severe storms are also reported in the Northwest—in Washington and Oregon, about the same date, the western storm being accompanied by floods followed by severe cold.

The thirty-first annual session of the Iowa State Horticultural Society will be held in the Horticultural Rooms of the State Capitol, at Des Moines, December 8-11 next. Reduced railway rates have been secured. For programs or other information address the Secretary, at Des Moines.

The Southwestern Iowa Horticultural Society announces a program of its twenty-second annual session to be held at Council Bluffs, December 15-17. Railway rates are announced conditioned on the attendance of one hundred.

Mrs. Martha Hughes Cannon, the fourth wife of Angus M. Cannon of the Utah Church was elected State Senator in an election contest against her husband, whom she defeated by a majority of four thousand votes. Mrs. Cannon is a Democrat and the first woman to be elected to the position of State Senator.

Elder J. C. Foss has returned from his Canada mission to Rockford, Maine, having been absent ninety-eight days, preached eighty times, baptized eight, confirmed twelve, and blessed five children. He is thinking of removing his family to Independence, Missouri.

Bro. C. W. Dillen, of Lamoni, brings to the Bishop two hundred and ten pounds of honey as the faithful tithe into the storehouse; this shows also that Lamoni after all is not far away from the land of "milk and honey."

President Joseph Smith left home on Thursday, the 18th inst., for Lamoille, Illinois, expecting to remain there over Sunday and go thence to Defiance, Iowa, for Thanksgiving Day and the following Sunday.

Bro. S. V. Bailey, Vice President of the Decatur district, has gone into the Southwest for a brief stay, during which he will do some missionary work at various points in Indian Territory and in Arkansas.

Bro. A. M. Chase, of the Decatur district, returned to his field in Iowa during the past week, to resume the campaign in schoolhouse, church, and at the fireside, since packing away the district tent. Bro. Chase is a preacher, Sunday school worker, and excellent singer—a live young man and a cheerful worker.

Bro. John Wahlstrom, of Lamoni, who a few years ago labored for the Reorganization in Sweden, has received word from some in that country who desire to unite with the church when a minister is available. They have heard the word through some baptized by Bro. Wahlstrom.

Bro. M. T. Short wrote from Canton, Ohio, the 17th, that he had just closed a discussion with one Rev. Stauffer, of the Church of God, in the city hall, and in which he gained a decided victory, the people indorsing his effort and requesting him to return. Bro. Short also inclosed a handbill which advertised the discussion and other meetings held by him in South Canton Republican Club hall. He is now preaching in a village five miles from Canton.

The HERALD notes with pleasure the marriage of Bro. Ralph G. Smith, of the Saints' Hymnal committee, to Sr. Bertha S. Murdock, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on the 5th of the present month. Both these young people are known for their devotion and zeal in the cause of truth. May the blessings of peace and prosperity attend them.

And, now added to this good word comes news of the marriage of Bro. C. Ed Miller to Sr. Annie Shaefer, both also of Pittsburg; Bro. Miller, a live branch officer and preacher, and his wife well-known as a worker and one who cared for the traveling ministry while a member of the family of Bro. Frank Criley, formerly Bishop's agent at Pittsburg. Success to these worthy young people. May many in Israel follow their good example, and thus avoid possible spiritual loss which often ensues by contracting marriages with those without spiritual interest in the work of the Lord, failing to do which some have been regarded and some have become "weak in the faith."

The Liberal Congress of Religions convened at Indianapolis, Indiana, November 19. Its object is to promote liberalism and catholicity in religion. Dr. H. W. Thomas is President of the Congress.

We failed to note a late visit made to our city by Bro. J. W. Brackenbury, of Independence, Missouri, a brother whom we esteem. We beg pardon for the oversight and mention it at this late date because worthy of mention. If we fail to get all arrivals and departures of the ministry it is not because of partiality.

A brother who has traveled some in the ministry in company with other elders suggests that if there is anyone who should be "rapped in slumber," it the man who snores. We do not wish to detract from this brilliant sentiment, but move to include the man who preaches and debates aloud in his sleep.

Bro. M. F. Gowell, from Colorado, and Bro. O. B. Thomas, of the Eastern Iowa district, spent Sunday, the 22d, with the Lamoni saints, the latter speaking at the evening service.

By letter from Elder Hyrum O. Smith from Salt Lake City, Utah, November 19, we learn that he has recently been preaching at Park City and Coalville, Utah. At Park City the Bishop of the Utah Church permitted him to speak once in his meeting. At the hall had a large audience which packed the hall, and some turned away for want of room. The Bishop and others commended his fairness in treating the issues. The hall costing $3.75 per night, he was forced to close on account of scarcity of finances. Will return if he can arrange to reduce expenses. Bro. John T. Davis was in the city; preached twice, and on the 9th departed for Rush Valley.

Original Poetry.

[Dedicated to my brother Oramei.]

O GUIDE MY FEET.

O guide my feet! Through the valley dark
Lead me that I may not fail nor fall:
O thou who art my covenant, my ark,
Lead thou the way; O Lord, on thee I call!

O guide my feet! And let me take thy hand,
And though the night be dark and waters deep,
Yet safely shall I cross to that bright strand
Where evermore thou'lt guide, nor ways are steep.

O guide my feet! Temptations constant rise;
And let not go my hand, for still I fear,
Without thy help I yet may fail the prize,
And by the wayside fall, if thou'rt not near.

O guide my feet! Thy cross before my eyes
Will break the gath'ring gloom, and point the way
That leads my soul to thee beyond the skies,
Where glories live eternal, and the day.

O guide my feet! Mine eyes grow dim, the light Seems fleeing fast! O Savior, let me meet Thee on the way! Ah, now, indeed, 'tis bright!
Thou hast my hand, and thou dost guide my feet!

THANKSGIVING.

"O Thou, whose power the earth displays,
Whose promises of life are ours,
The Springtime offered thee her praise
Amid the censers of the flowers.

And now again, O love Divine,
A thousand vales the harvest fills;
We seek thy house to-day, and join
The eternal chorus of the hills."

Dear Sister Walker:—I fully intended while at Independence this spring to give the readers of the Column a few items of interest obtained during my visit to the "Land of Zion." But time has slipped away so rapidly that already these events are too far in the past to make a newsy sketch. But to me the many incidents of that pleasant, happy, and enjoyable visit will be present for years to come. And row as face after face of those dear friends and kinsfolk pass rapidly before my mental vision I breathe a fervent, "God bless the dear ones there," the kind-hearted sisters and faithful workers in the Master's cause. Yes, the great wheels of time roll steadily onward, leaving some hearts glad with their turning and some crushed with sadness and sorrow for those who have been snatched from them. But they stay not in their rapid flight for either the happy or the sorrowing.

And now the summer months have fled and the way has been prepared before us, and soon indeed we will be on the great deep again, leaving our native land, dear friends and relatives far behind, while every day will bring us nearer to the place and people with whom I have almost lived—in spirit—for the past year. I sometimes think I must have a wandering spirit, not content to abide long at a time where its tabernacle is. Now it regards not the hardships and dangers consequent to a mission among those far-off islands, but urges forward, rejoicing that it is accounted worthy, esteeming those petty trials, those "light afflictions" as opportunities, stepping stones by which it (my spiritual being) will be brought in more immediate communion with the Supreme and live more in its reflected light; may more often feast upon the riches from the Father's storehouse and drink deeper of the living waters. But O, the "weak flesh" knows so well how weak it is! knows how hard it is to do its part and keep pace with all the weight it has to carry; knows it will always be subject to the pangs of hunger; that it has appetites, tastes, likes, and dislikes of its own that will clamor for their rights,—all of which must be kept in subjection or the spirit can never reach its anticipated goal. But we trust in Him who is able to make strong even the weakest, and go forth willingly, aye, joyfully, because of the words of promise by the Spirit. Yes, go joyfully, notwithstanding the love I have for the saints of California with whom we have been so long, and from whom we have received so much kindness. I might, perhaps, be less willing to go had we not the real, true, warm friends that we leave, for I know their desires will often go out to God in earnest prayer in our behalf, which will be around about us as a wall of defense.

I have not outlined for myself my great work among the natives. My deafness will prevent me from being of much service in the Sunday school work, and apart from the assistance I hope to render my husband in his work, by making our dwelling place as cheerful and homelike as possible, consulting and advising with him, keeping his clothes in order and preparing his food; and towards the natives to lead an exemplary life, be kind and sympathetic, ready to listen to and counsel with them at all times when they may need or seek such, and, when sufficient of the language is acquired, to lead in their sister's meetings. Apart from these, my work will be with myself; a work of overcoming and coming up higher. This work with myself must be done to keep the spirit of contentment and patience necessary to accomplish what I have already named, and also an abiding faith and trust in God. I have sometimes feared lest I was entering upon this test, this sifting of mental powers, before I was spiritually ripe enough to sift well, and thus come short of and fail in my life-work in this way, instead of being exalted to a higher plain of faith and confidence towards God, leaning more heavily upon him in petty trials and provocations I should be overcome by a feeling of murmuring or rebellion and thus lose the Spirit. Do those who, looking towards the island mission, see only the halo and glory (the result of hard, tedious study and labor) wonder what would cause a spirit of rebellion? If so let such a one fancy being on an island for three or four months with no communication from even the other islands, where the few articles of food were the same always till one's appetite revolted against it, and all this time without any church papers or mail matter, then see a vessel standing up towards the island, and notwithstanding weeks of praying, the wind would be so contrary that she is obliged to abandon the effort of making the island, and sail off out of sight again with all the treasures she may have been bringing to you. Such circumstances as those try the mettle.

This letter was commenced two months ago. Our sailing being deferred, I deferred the letter also. But now all our effects are on board the City of Papeete, ready to sail tomorrow morning. The Lord has gladdened and strengthened our hearts by his spirit-whisperings to ourselves first, then the same confirmed by the mouths of his servants, for all of which we thank him, and feel more trustful. And here let me thank the many kind friends who have assisted in various ways. All will be remembered by us and not forgotten by Him who delights in the good works of his children and will reward all. I shall be pleased to receive letters from as many as will write. Address us at Papeete, Tahiti, and affix a five cent stamp. And now I bid you all a kind good-bye for the present.

With all good wishes,

SR. BURTON.

[WE are permitted to publish the following letter, and do so in the hope that it may prove encouraging to others who have to meet and contend with like opposition. Thus the gospel is winning its way!—ED.

My Dear Friend:—For the joy of my soul I cannot refrain from writing to you. You should have heard the talk my uncle, aunt, cousin, and self had last night. My uncle ran down

Mormonism and so did my aunt and cousin, but the two latter upheld the Christian Church. Ah! I thank God my faith is still as sound as ever. It is hard to defend a sect, even if you are of that faith, with those whom you love going against you. My uncle told all he knew of Mormonism and a precious little it was, and most all wrong. I am glad I could show him the difference between the Josephites and the Brighamites when he said that every Mormon believed or practiced polygamy! I told them how the church became divided and reorganized again, and in fact delivered quite a sermon about it. I don't want this to seem a great deed, but if Joseph Smith was never defended, praised, and loved before by a young, ignorant girl, he was then, and will be for ever by me to the best of my ability. My cousin is very anxious to have me come to her church (the Christian) and see if I won't be converted. She feels very badly because I believe "such an impossible story." Ah! poor cousin! She is on the wrong track. I promised to go to her church and see what they believe and reason it out. I feel safe. I know God will give me strength to see which is truth and which is fiction. I want your prayers that I may be able to show my relatives all or at least some of the beauties and truths of Mormonism. I don't want you to fear that I'll go over to their side or that my faith will be shaken. I feel safe in God and I know he won't let me go without holding out a loving, saving hand to keep me! I went to my cousin's church this morning. The sermon was not in the least as inspiring as ours. Rev. Wilson is their pastor and it was he who preached. I didn't like the sermon and it made my heart ache to see a whole congregation who did. I would like to convert my cousin, but I'm afraid I can't, for she is one of those who say, "A Bible, a Bible," etc. She is firm in her belief and if she were a Saint she would be among the most faithful. She don't say just those words, "A Bible," etc., but she thinks all you need is the Bible and won't believe a word about Joseph Smith translating the Book of Mormon.

I like Bro. Williams' sermons. All his sermons have a great effect on me. It was through him, mostly, that I became converted. The time he was there almost every night explaining the Book of Mormon I became convinced of all the truths you ever told me, and I learned a great deal more from him. In the end of our talk last night my cousin said I certainly was foolish to believe in the Book of Mormon. She don't like it a bit, and when I asked her what she thought would become of the wicked and where our souls would be while awaiting the resurrection morn she simply said she hadn't thought much about it, and hadn't any settled idea. To please her I am going to examine her doctrine, knowing it may help me some day. O how I wish women were called to the field and I was one of them! But no! A wise and holy God hath done all things well. I'll be content with my lot although I often wish I could do some great thing to help on the noble work. I want you to get me a Book of Mormon, if you can to read, as the other was due at the library before I could finish it. I had it renewed three times. I am going to get Aunt's book if I can and let you see how it lies about Joseph Smith. Simply awful! If I can get it I'll bring it to you next Thursday afternoon. Please be at home. I have hopes of gaining Papa's consent to join the church soon, but I have few hopes of him ever joining. He said, not long ago, "I'll never cast a stone in your way," but he also added he preferred the Salvation Army to the Saints! Heaven help us! Join me in prayer for him. I don't want him to make such a mistake as that. I own that they do well to get men out of the clutches of drink and vice, but they don't give religion enough. They stop when they have you that far and set you to getting others away from vice. Please answer this soon. Please tell me, Was there a pair of stone spectacles given to Joseph Smith by the angel to help him translate the Book of Mormon? Aunt's book says there was, but I don't remember about any such a thing when I read the history of his life by his mother.

AN INVESTIGATOR.

[WE have learned that since the writing of the above this young lady has been baptized, and we hope that in her the church has obtained a faithful laborer. Not all preachers are ordained, but all who embrace this work are called to "thrust in their sickles and reap," while the promise is that "he that reapeth receiveth wages." "The harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few." When we realize the great need which exists for labor in all the departments of church work we question whether the Salvation Army who seem to be so successful in getting others to engage in the work of elevating their fellow man, are not wiser in their day and generation, than the children of light. Would God that each one who embraced this latter-day work might remember that we are called to work out our salvation with fear and trembling! The promise is "To him that overcometh" and the reward is at the end of the race.—ED.]

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

According to the instructions of the association at Kirtland, April, 1896, the officers have named a program committee to arrange for the Lamoni convention of April, 1897. They have wisely chosen as that committee, T. A. Hougas, Henderson, Iowa, Mrs. Viola

Blair, Lamoni, Iowa, and Myron C. Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts.

"A teacher's spirit, a teacher's character, a teacher's atmosphere, and a teacher's life, impress and influence a pupil quite as much as a teacher's words."—Trumbull.

He who was once a wanderer
With no where to lay his head,
Watches his people's indifference
To the lambs for whom he bled.

Yes, there is room for the children,
And white robes for each to wear,
Room in the heavenly city,
Be it ours to lead them there!

Then blessed will be our entrance,
And sweet will the greeting be,
As ye did unto the last of these,
Ye did it unto me!—Sel.

HINTS FOR REVIEW.

THE little child knows very little about extent of space or duration of time.

Should we not therefore, use care lest our review story covers too long a period of history and has to do with too many places.

Study to draw from the child as much information as possible concerning past lessons.

Have one central thought and let all the lessons lead up to that.

Do not crowd the child's mind nor overtax its memory. Better give one thought clearly—however simple, than to leave many half-formed ideas for the poor little brain to puzzle over.

Teach Jesus in every lesson.

A helpful lesson might be the review of the last week of Christ's life on earth.—Sel.

HOW TO QUALIFY ONESELF FOR THE DUTIES OF A SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

I BELIEVE I have the right to presume that all persons who may hear the reading of this paper, are more or less favorable to the organization and maintenance of the Sunday school and thus placing themselves in harmony with the will of the Lord, who in 1831 spoke to his servant William Phelps and told him he should be ordained to assist Oliver Cowdery in printing and selecting and writing books for schools in this church that little children also might receive instruction before the Lord as was pleasing unto him. (D. C. 55: 2.) And now our conclusion is that inasmuch as there are to be books of instruction there must be instructors or teachers that the children may receive the benefit; and as the Sabbath day is an appropriate time and convenient to gather children together it has been adopted and the result is the Sunday school. I know it has been but a short time since when some very good people thought Sunday schools were a thing that savored too much of the world, but I am very thankful that if there are any unconverted now they are in such a hopeless minority that the onward march of the Sunday school and the God-given privilege of the children is assured them.

1. To be a teacher in the Sunday school one must first have an uncompromising belief that the Sunday school is a means to the specific end that no other means can accomplish as well, using all the knowledge gained by attendance, observation or council with others, that you might be in harmony with the designs of God, bringing little children unto him.

2. We should remember the words of inspiration, "For, behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things, for he that is compelled in all things the same is a slothful and not a wise servant: wherefore he receiveth no reward." The foundation work for Sunday school teaching is laid by lending our presence and assistance if possible. Thus doing what we can in trying to prepare ourselves for higher calls and thus escape the condemning words of the Lord "Thou slothful servant."

3. To be a teacher one must have an unflagging interest in the work, which interest and love for it will be made manifest by an untiring zeal, making oneself interested in every move that promises advancement; and if called to teach, study well to make yourself an approved workman, always going from the closet of prayer to the class, to instruct and guide the learners into such paths of truth as you may be directed by that divine aid which you have previously invoked.

If called to take charge of the primary or intermediate grades, your knowledge should be as thorough as though teaching any other department; that is, be very sure that whatever thoughts you present will stand the most exacting tests. To teach these little ones, the teacher will qualify herself by making simplicity a special study, how she may in the most practical and effective manner impress the everlasting truths on their little minds. Teachers of the primary and intermediate classes should remember that in these grades are found extensive fields of fertile soil—golden opportunities for the wise teacher to reap a wonderful harvest. Here no seeds of tradition and error have been sown, consequently the seed of truth can grow untrammelled by the misleading and false ideas of the adversary, which often have taken root and overrun the minds of older ones.

4. The teacher must make a prayerful study how in the most simple manner to impress the child mind of the reality of the Creator, his form, his object of the creation of mankind, his mercy, goodness, justice and power, of his laws relative to man, and if these things are taught according to the truth the imprint will remain throughout eternity; they never will be displaced; for there is nothing that can be devised, that is not truth, that will take the place of truth and so long as the little mind is active or it may be years and years will intervene; yet the same mind retains the true principals taught and impressed by the early teacher, and her name is associated with the impression forever.

There are very few of us who cannot look back to the years of our earliest recollection, and call to mind some of the sayings or acts of our day school, or Sunday school teachers.

Very often the neglected tasks, imposed by our day school teacher, were brought to a passable conclusion, by the application of the hazel brush or ferule. While like tasks, and requests were more readily and gladly done for our Sunday school teacher, who through patience and persuasion accomplished as great results.

5. The teacher of the Sunday school must expect to meet trials, difficulties and discouragements, and when they come, they must be met with only one determination, and that is to conquer; which may not always be possible in their own strength; but, dear teacher, being as you are engaged in one of the branches of God's work, don't fail to ask his assistance in time of need.

6. Be sure that you make yourself fully acquainted with the lesson in every detail that you can come before your class amply able to hold their attention and not only able to answer the questions set for the lesson, but to make some application of the thoughts in it, to the ordinary surroundings of persons and things of to-day. Of course a study of the application would have to be made with the view whether they are to be used in the primary, intermediate or senior grades.

7. Insist on your class asking questions, however let them understand from the beginning that you don't pretend to know all things. It will be a wonder if they will not succeed in puzzling you. They will enjoy this change from the customary order and they will believe, when they find a question too hard for you that you will know how to sympathize with them under the reverse conditions.

8. Cultivate the graces of an humble spirit. Be careful that your everyday acts are such that will strengthen the confidence of every one in your integrity, in your faith in God, in your honesty of purpose in teaching and leading children into that higher spiritual and temporal life, that fills the soul with hope, peace and joy.

9. And now to summarize the duties and qualification I will add:—

Be always on hand and punctual.

Thoroughly acquaint yourself with the lesson.

Attend regularly the teachers meeting.

Go to your tasks and duties with a prayerful heart.

In teaching, be familiar, affectionate, practical, serious and earnest.

Converse personally with each scholar respecting his faith and hope and soul's welfare.

See that your instructions are enforced by your life and conversation.

Study and try to understand the character and habits of your pupils.

Visit the scholars at their homes especially if they have been absent.

Bear each member of your class in mind when in prayer.

Make their salvation the great object of all your instruction.

Cultivate a spirit of ardent piety, self-consecration, and a constant dependence on God for success.

Let us all try and see what we can do for the Sunday school cause.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

We plough the fields and scatter
The good seed o'er the land,
But it is fed and watered
By God's almighty hand.
He sends the snow in winter,
The warmth to swell the grain,
The breezes and the sunshine,
And soft refreshing rain.

He, only is the maker
Of all things near and far;
He paints the wayside flower,
He lights the evening star;
The winds and waves obey him
By him the birds are fed;
Much more to us, his children,
He gives our daily bread.

We thank thee, then, O Father,
For all things bright and good;
The seed time and the harvest,
Our life, our health, our food.
Accept the gifts we offer
For all thy love imparts,
And what thou most desirest,
Our humble, thankful hearts.—Sel.

LOCKHARTVILLE, N. S., Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:—My heart was made sad while reading a few days ago of one of our elders who had to return home to "turn over" his house to those who had been supplying his family while he was away on his mission. It is refreshing to know that there are men and women, who for love of the gospel are willing to sacrifice their very home; but there is something wrong somewhere when they are compelled to do it for honor's sake.

I have returned from attending the conference at South Rawdon: not large, but quite satisfactory, after the saints and friends became reconciled to their disappointment. We all expected Bro. F. M. Sheehy. The fatted lamb was killed and all that, but the fates or rather our mission president ordered otherwise. No doubt it was all right: we were sorry just the same.

Williamsdale and Cumberland counties, November 8.

Since writing the above several days have passed away and I find myself in this place, where for several years I have labored to plant the gospel. We have no church organization yet, but have a good commodious building to meet in; not yet quite ready for dedication, but the few saints and friends are trying hard to keep moving in that direction. They have recently seated it with nice chairs, paying as they go. They have done well, and no doubt at no distant day their efforts will be crowned with success. Then we hope to see them bending their energies to the financial law and the Word of Wisdom, and removing those things that hinder the organization of a branch. May God help them to arise superior to those influences of the "world, the flesh, and the Devil," and maintain a church, with its prayer services, its family altar, its blessing at the table: in fact, all those characteristics that distinguish a saint from a sinner. Forward is the word, brethren, and the reward is to the overcomer. There is a great responsibility resting upon us who profess to be the redeemed children of God. May his power forbid that while we are anxious that strangers should hear the gospel, our life and example should be barren to our friends and neighbors.

To those that might feel almost discouraged in their efforts to be as they would like to be, I would suggest, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." The Master has given a law to govern his saints, and I am confident that by no other way can a man or woman live and grow or be happy. My experience and observation this summer have taught me some things; one is, that the successful man, the happy man, the man that is doing anything toward the advancement of the great latter-day work, is the one that is doing God's law and not the one who is making all manner of excuses why he is not. The imperfections of others is no excuse for me.

A number have asked me to write up my sojourn in the Massachusetts district this summer, for the Herald. I cannot do that; there is too much of it. Suffice it to say the work is moving grandly on. There are not a few noble souls that are in this gospel for all that it is worth, and that is a good deal. Individually I was well received, kindly cared for, and abundantly supplied with the necessities of this life. I am thankful for it all and only hope that in return I may have done some good. I am battling away, hoping and praying for God to bless.

Yours,
H. J. DAVISON.

STOCKTON, Utah, Nov. 10.

Editors Herald.—I arrived at Salt Lake City on the night of the 7th inst. Was met at the depot and cared for by Bro. H. O. Smith.

We met with the saints in the chapel on Sunday and preached twice and moved on to this place on the 9th, where I will remain for a short time, visiting relatives and doing what I can for the Lord. This is the place where I had a debate some eight or nine years ago.

Our work to a great extent will have to be of the "house-to-house" character, for the lack of public places to preach in. Any of the brethren or old friends that may desire my labor in any part may address me at this place, and I will try to serve all in the interest of the church as soon as possible. I have considerable to do here for the time being.

Our train and a stock train collided on the night of the 6th, in a tunnel on the highest point of elevation, ten thousand feet, on the Rio Grande railroad; no lives lost, but some hurt; two locomotives with their "tenders" ruined; baggage car destroyed and baggage torn and scattered about in bad shape, with some cattle killed. I lost a good trunk.

It seems to me that there is terrible and severe obstacles arising in my way to reach this field since my appointment last conference. It is but a month since I broke my right arm, when ready to start, besides my sorrowful trial before that. I hope there is enough divinity behind the call to assure good success in the future. Pray for me.

Your brother,
J. T. DAVIS.

LEBECK, Mo., Nov. 13.

Editors Herald.—I have been thinking that perhaps a few thoughts from me might find place in your columns. To-night as I sit at my desk writing this, I can hear the boom of cannon in celebrating what some would be pleased to term a great victory in the election just past. I will not express myself in regard to this matter farther than to say that it will not pay Latter Day Saints to spend their time contending over politics. The question that I wish to bring before the readers of the Herald is the condition of the church from a financial standpoint.

Dear saints, it does seem to me that if the true condition was understood, there would be a rallying to the support of the church in this particular. When it is known that the church cannot fill the calls for preaching from a lack of funds, the situation looks dark indeed. When it is known that elder's wives have starved out at home and have been obliged to go to the missionary field with their husbands and undergo the privations of a missionary life, scantily clothed, the situation looks darker.

Dear saints, do we love this cause? Let us see if we do. How many brethren will go secretly before God and solemnly pledge themselves to quit the use of tobacco for just one month and send the money thus saved to the Bishop? Hands up, those that will do this. Remember that if we will not do this we love tobacco better than we do this latter-day work. Then another plan for us to adopt, is, instead of having a feast on Thanksgiving Day let us have a fast and take the money that it would necessarily cost for a dinner and send that to the Bishop also.

Now let us not undertake too much, for if this matter is attended to in regard to the two items I have mentioned it will relieve the church from the present strained conditions.

How many will do this? Let us start the fund at once by sending in our contributions to Bishop Kelley and each week have a list of those making contributions, printed in the Herald.

We frequently ask God to prosper the work that Zion may be established. Brethren, we cannot pray funds into our church treasury, and Zion cannot be established till we are in a better condition spiritually; and when we are right in this respect we can go down into our pockets and help financially. Whose name will be first on the list with a subscription of some amount?

The Clinton district conference is now in session, holding its quarterly conference. The Sunday school convention passed off very pleasantly, also very profitably. The Sunday school work is getting to be a grand thing to those interested in seeing the church prosper.

Yours for the success of the one faith.

F. T. BAKER.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 13.

Editors Herald.—In late issues of both the Herald and the Ensign I see that the "club-footed man is still imposing on the saints generally, asking for and receiving five dollars, which he promises to "return as soon" as he gets "home." This is the same story he told California saints whom he victimized. One sister in Santa Cruz, California, after she had given this man five dollars, accidentally happened to smell his breath, after which she said to herself: "I will never get that money back," or words to that effect.

About two years ago the writer was living at Santa Cruz, when the "clubfooted man" was borrowing (?) money from the saints in California; and when Mr. Wells, alias "the clubfooted man," arrived at Santa Cruz, he first visited a sister named Grant. It so happened that this sister had been visited twice within a few days (if I remember right) once by an individual thought to be a companion of the above-named Wells (?) and next by the last-named gentleman (?) himself. A brother who at that time had been a member of our church but a few weeks or months (I do not remember which), Walter Scott by name, a carpenter by trade, was working at Sr. Grant's place and was there on the occasion named when both calls were made; the first by the companion, and the second by Wells (?). Bro. Scott had been investigating religion for a number of years, and at last found what he considered was "the true religion of Jesus Christ," and was perfectly satisfied with it, had no misgivings or doubts; but alas! as the brother himself remarked:

"After I heard those men talk, witnessed their actions, saw the tobacco stains that started from the corners of their mouths and ended at the lower part of their chins, smelled their whisky-laden breath, and when they claimed to be saints, it caused me to have some doubt; that is, I thought to myself, "Can it be possible after all these years of investigation, that I have been deceived? The matter worried me for a few days until I had a dream which allayed all my fears and doubts. I dreamed that I was worrying about the matter, when suddenly a nice looking man came up to me and said: 'Dear brother, I will tell you how you may know a true Latter Day Saint; you will see no tobacco stains on his face, nor will you detect any smell of whisky on his breath or clothes.'

"I will recognize the brother that gave this information in my dream if I ever see him with my natural eyes," said Bro. Scott, and sure enough he did. During the California reunion of the Northern and Central districts in 1895, Bro. Scott, one day after entering the tent used for boarding the elders startled his wife by remarking, without any explanation other than pointing the index finger of his right hand at a gentleman sitting at a table in the tent: "There is the man!"

"What man?" queried his wife, not knowing what he meant.

"The brother that told me in my dream how I would know a true Latter Day Saint," answered Bro. Scott.

Dear readers, the brother who was pointed out while sitting at the table in the tent was none other than Bro. W. W. Blair, whose memory and kindly face and good deeds will be fresh in the minds of the saints during their lives. Bro. Scott had never seen him before the dream.

My object in writing this letter is that my brothers and sisters will be more careful with their dollars in the future, and use the God-given sense of smell before parting with their money to strangers, and also profit by Bro. Scott's dream.

If this meets the eye of Elder Walter Scott and he discovers that my memory has not served me right in all particulars, will he please correct where needed, and publish.

Your brother in Christ,

Editors Herald:—It is with mingled feelings of sorrow and compunction to think that I have suffered so protracted a period of time to elapse since I ventured into your literary circle, to address to you a few words of brotherly sympathy, not unmingled, I trust, with the higher elements of spiritual consolation, edification, and encouragement.

The Herald is an invaluable source of mutual retrospection, and, to a certain extent also of introspection; for we often times discover, in reading the letters of various brethren or sisters in your more favored land that the very same doubts or fears, sins or temptations, which beset and distress our own minds, are palpably in evidence in their experience also; and thus the voice of Satan is put to silence who has, true to his old character (Rev. 13:10), been our accuser; saying to our sorrowful and troubled soul, "If you were of the true fold, or truly one of Christ's disciples, you would have no such doubts and fears, or evil thoughts or feelings as are evident in your experience from time to time. We are then enabled to point him to "that blessed one who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." (Hebrews 4:15.)

Who knows what sore temptations mean,
For He has felt the same.

The epistles of our aged and venerable brother, Paul, are also, to me at least, an unfailing fount of comfort and consolation when grieved at heart by so many faults and failings I see in myself; for does he not say: "When I would do good, evil is present with me." "For that which I do, I allow not: for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good." Listen, dear brethren, to the history and mystery of the whole matter, and take comfort: You that are likewise tempted and tried, by the logical and legitimate conclusion of the apostle's argument in his own words: "Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me. For I know that in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not."—Roman 7:15-19.

[We quote the passage cited from Paul's writings as given in the Inspired Version, because of its manifest superiority and because the King James' rendering does not harmonize with other scripture.—ED.]

"For we know that the commandment is spiritual; but when I was under the law, I was yet carnal, sold under sin. But now I am spiritual; for that which I am commanded to do, I do; and that which I am commanded not to allow, I allow not. For what I know is not right, I would not do; for that which is sin, I hate. If then I do not that which I would not allow, I consent unto the law, that it is good; and I am not condemned. Now then, it is no more I that do sin; but I seek to subdue that sin which dwelleth in me. For I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing; for to will is present with me, but to perform that which is good I find not, only in Christ. For the good that I would have done when under the law, I find not to be good; therefore, I do it not. But the evil which I would not do under the law, I find to be good, that, I do. Now if I do that, through the assistance of Christ, I would not do under the law, I am not under the law; and it is no more that I seek to do wrong, but to subdue sin that dwelleth in me. I find then that under the law, that when I would do good evil was present with me; for I delight in the law of God after the inward man. And now I see another law, even the commandment of Christ, and it is imprinted in my mind. But my members are warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members. And if I subdue not the sin which is in me, but with the flesh serve the law of sin; O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord, then, that so with the mind I myself serve the law of God."

In like manner do we gather gleams of sunshine and glimpses of satisfaction on reading the letters of other and deeper taught brethren who have learned also to "put no trust in man or make flesh their arm" (Jer. 17:5); but to rely wholly and only on the arm of Jehovah, for that they have found out how true is God's word which saith:—"The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?"—Jer. 17:9.

I am aware that there are many who, not understanding or not at heart believing the absolute veracity of God's word on the one hand, and unaccustomed to examining their own selves as St. Paul commands us, on the other (2 Cor. 13:5), affect to think and speak slightly of these things; but, depend upon it my brethren, these things were written for our learning, that we should "cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, for wherein is he to be accounted of?" (Isaiah 2:22,) and trust wholly and alone in Jehovah Tsidkenu, "The Lord our Righteousness."

Those of my beloved young brethren and sisters who have but just entered the sheep-fold will probably marvel at my words; but those who have for years borne the blunt of a perennial and perpetual struggle with the Satanic being and the forces of disintegration and evil, will fully understand me when I say that many, many more would have been their victories over "the world, the flesh, and the Devil," had it not been that in the very hour of conflict their own evil heart of unbelief took sides with the arch-destroyer, and betrayed them, even though they had but a short time before, (perhaps in a prayer and testimony meeting,) uttered that fervent ejaculation, as did one of old in the sincerest tones of fervent feeling and high resolve:—"Though all men should deny thee, yet will not I" (Matt. 26:33-35), and the actual result has been perhaps, precisely the same as in poor Peter's case, who knows?

When you are cast down by any deadly shaft of the destroyer, dear brother, let me implore you, as one who has spent many of his humblest and happiest hours laboring either with my brethren or alone in one or other part of this vast city—let me, I say, implore you not to give up or "cease the conflict," but instantly call on the Mighty One for strength, if you have not fallen; for pardon if you have. "Confess" your sin to him; you will find him faithful and just to forgive you your sin (1 John 1:9); then go forward to the conflict with renewed zeal, renewed hope, renewed energy, and renewed prayer. This will cause the evil one, that "murderer from the beginning" (John 8:44), the bitterest anguish to think that his deadly shaft, instead of causing you to relax or to cease, or even to suspend your exertions for God, has only caused you to go to him again in prayer, and to find out, for the hundredth, nay, perhaps thousandth time, that he is a God pardoning iniquity and passing by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage. (Micah 7:18.)

The more we know of him, (bless his holy name!) the more we can cling to him, and love him, and trust him.

I meant to have spoken of London's vicissitudes, and of Elder Caffall's arduous and devoted labors, and his wise and fatherly counsels to us all; but my mind was drawn out to write you instead, as I have done.

Dear saints, do not forget your morning and evening devotion if you would overcome the evil one. In hope of the eternal joy in God's covenant,

Your brother,

F. R. TUBB.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Nov. 13.

Editors Herald:—Experience of the past few years convinces me that Bro. H. N. Hansen's position in last Herald is a tenable one; i. e. the right of the general authorities of the church to nominate district presidents. May the time soon come when such a rule shall obtain!

I believe that the time must soon come when "the Twelve, in all large branches of the church, [will] ordain evangelical ministers, as they shall be designated unto them by revelation." Some of our districts and large branches are suffering because of a lack of available presiding material.

Work moving along as usual here; baptized two last Sunday. I am now passing through the throes of dental torture, but will be busy soon. Expect to hold a series of meetings at Quick and Neola soon. May God uphold his noble ministers in their fight against sin and evil.

Yours fraternally,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

NEW HOPE, Va., Nov. 13.

Editor's Herald:—In my letter a short time ago I told you I expected to baptize on the following Sunday. Well, I baptized one, a young lady; and on Monday the 9th I baptized five; six in all at Roxbury: Mr. Erwin Dickey and his wife, Mr. Corydon King and his wife, also Mrs. Orr, mother of Mrs. King. They are all fine people, and I have good faith that they will be a great help to the saints at Roxbury, especially Bro. Dickey. He and his wife belonged to the Disciple Church. There are others whom I believe will obey soon.

In bonds,
F. C. SMITH.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., Nov. 12.

Editors Herald:—We have been in this place about two months. My wife and I are the only saints in this part of the country; our nearest branch that we know of is about fifty miles distant, so we do not have a chance to hear any preaching, unless we go to the M. E. church; and it is not much enjoyment to go to that, for we do not believe as they do. They are holding a revival now. We went once and it made us feel glad to think we did not belong to them, and also very sorry for them and their lack of knowledge. The preacher preached awhile and then had them sing, and then got them all to come up to the mourners' bench and kneel down, and then he went on to tell them how Peter did, how he kneeled down and raised up his hands, and how he held up his head also; and he prayed loud and long, and got them to hold up their hands and heads, and then he said, "Let's sing the last verse of" such a number; and after that was sang he got them all to praying at once; and such a noise as they did make! one could hardly hear what was said at all. Well, one night did us for awhile.

Now if this finds a place in the Herald instead of the waste basket I want the Pleasant Grove, Missouri, saints to see it, for they know something of us, as we used to live there not very long ago; and we do ask all the saints to pray for us to this effect, that we may live more humble in spirit, have more faith, more knowledge, a better understanding, and that we may so live that when we ask God for any blessing that it will be his will to grant it to us; and we will pray for you all.

I know that God does answer prayer, and that he will punish us if we do not do as we ought; for I have done things that I know I ought not to have done, and been punished for it before night, and I have also asked for things in the morning and had my prayer answered before night.

I hope that if it is possible for any of the traveling elders to come through here they will let us know and we will try to get a place for them to preach, and give them a place to sleep, and something to eat, and make them welcome as long as they will stay; for I think several here would obey, for they ask us a good many questions that we answer as best we can, and pray God to give us a better understanding so we can make things plain to them.

We ask all the saints to pray for us that we may prosper in this world's goods as well as in spiritual things, for we are in need of both. The Lord has prospered us very much since we have been here, and we are truly thankful for it. May the Lord bless all the brethren and sisters inasmuch as they are worthy; and let us try to be more worthy of God's blessings in the future.

GEORGE H. PARKER.

If any of the saints have old Ensigns, or Heralds, or tracts, please send us some to scatter around. We take the Herald, but it gets worn out before it gets to all.

Original Articles.

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

BELIEVING with the Saints' Herald that discussion is necessary to liberty and progress; and also believing that the correctness of the subject matter of a Book of Mormon geographical map is of chief importance to us as a people; and also believing that in the investigations and conclusions arrived at should be carefully weighed before adoption, from the fact that the truth of the Book of Mormon in its geographical features must have been the chief object had in view in the appointment of a map committee by the General Conference;—laboring under these impressions, I beg leave to criticise an article appearing in the Herald of the 14th of the present month.

The Isthmus of Tehuantepec and the Isthmus of Panama as the narrow neck of land connecting the land northward and the land southward appear to be the bone of contention. The latter, however, is not mentioned in the article, but one of these has the same bearing upon the other as the Magdalena and the Usumasinta rivers as being the river Sidon bear toward each other.

One of these positions must be true and the other false; and no matter which position we may take, unless that position is substantiated by facts, it does not make it true. . . . The Nephites called some river "Sidon." . . . There are certain things stated in the Book of Mormon concerning Sidon and the countries and cities near it that may aid us in the solution of the question.

1. The River Sidon ran north. The same may be said of both the Magdalena and Usumasinta.

2. The head of Sidon was in the "south wilderness" which was the boundary line between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi.

3. The head of Sidon was near the "east sea." Here is where the main question hinges. The Magdalena does not fill the bill, . . . while the Usumasinta fills the bill nicely and its head is near the "east sea."

I have these quotations from the article as a basis for what may follow. This hinge I shall endeavor to break, with what success may be judged hereafter. In the first place the position taken that the head of the river Sidon was near the "east sea" is not a correct one and cannot be sustained by the record.

Second, that the course of the Usumasinta is chiefly northwest.

Third, that the Usumasinta River loses its name two hundred miles west of the east or Caribbean Sea, that is two hundred miles from the east coast of British Honduras.

Fourth, that none of the tributaries of the Usumasinta reach nearer the East or Caribbean Sea than one hundred miles. Of these there are two: the Machaquila and San Isabel rivers; these are tributaries of the De la Passion River, which in turn is a tributary of the Chixoy River which is the main tributary of the Usumasinta River. Neither of the above-named rivers, the Machaquila or the San Isabel, could by any possibility have had its head in or near "the narrow strip of wilderness" which was the dividing line between the lands of Nephi and Zarahemla, for the reason that the Tehuantepec idea places this strip in this wise:—

That Central America, northward of the Bay of Panama, to the Bay of Honduras . . . was the land of Nephi, and also that in the vicinity of the Honduras Bay was "the strip of wilderness, which ran from the east to the sea west;" and also that northward of the bay and strip of wilderness to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, was the country called "The land of Zarahemla."—Saints' Herald, Nov. 13, 1895.

From this showing there can be no mistake as to the intended location of "the strip of wilderness," it ran from the Gulf or Bay of Honduras to the Pacific Ocean according to the Tehuantepec idea. The head of the Isabel River is seventy-five miles north of the northern shore of Honduras, and the Machaquila River has its head ninety miles north of the same shore and both head in the same range of hills one hundred miles west of the east shore of British Honduras in the northern part of Guatemala, showing the utter impossibility of either of them having entered "the strip of wilderness" at all. The main tributary of the Usumasinta River is the Chixoy River, which after leaving the Usumasinta takes a circuitous route and has its head waters in the southwestern part of Guatemala, near two hundred and fifty miles southwest of the Bay of Honduras. No; the Usumasinta nor any of its tributaries will "fill the bill." The above needs no comment from me, all that is necessary is an examination of a map of the country. If "the strip of wilderness" claimed by the "Tehuantepec idea" ran from the Bay of Honduras to the Pacific Ocean, then it lay wrong as it must have ran from north to south, instead of from the east to the west, as demanded by the record; for both the Bay of Honduras and the Caribbean Sea wash the northern shores of Honduras, and to my mind "it does not require an educated man to see clearly" the misleading position of the "Tehuantepec idea" unless he "strain his conscience," not a little, but to the extreme if he can bring himself to believe that a "strip of wilderness" running from north to south, does actually run from east to west. This "strip of wilderness" does not "fill the bill," it runs in an opposite direction to the demands of the record. The Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea are north seas to the people of Central America and the Pacific Ocean is south to them.

We will now turn our attention to the Magdalena River. "The river Sidon ran north." This description "fills the bill nicely" when applied to the Magdalena River, for there is not more than seventy miles variation on either side of its line of longitude from its mouth to its head, a distance of nine hundred and fifty miles. And it bears the name of Magdalena its whole length from its head to its mouth as it did the name of Sidon in its ancient history.

The first thing we will now do is locate "the narrow strip of wilderness," the dividing line between the land of Nephi and the land of Zarahemla. There are certain chief things to be observed in running this line; it must run "in a straight course from the east sea to the west," or "from the sea east, even to the sea west," "from the west sea running by the head of the river Sidon," "running from the east toward the west." Alma 22:2; 13:11. And we must also not forget that the river Sidon ran "in the south wilderness, (the narrow strip), away up beyond the borders of the land of Manti." Alma 11:4.

The quotations above require that this dividing line shall run a straight course from the sea east even to the sea west, or "toward the sea west," which does not necessarily mean that this line ran upon a direct line of latitude, but may vary either to the northwest or to the southwest, but must be in a straight course whichever of these points is the true one, and must be toward the west, and run through a wilderness. That this "strip of wilderness" was made up chiefly of a mountainous range is, I believe, fully established by reading Alma 22:2, where it is said that Moroni fortified this dividing line between the land of Zarahemla and the land of Nephi from the west sea; running by the head of the river Sidon, not that this signifies a solid line or continuous fortified wall like the Chinese wall, but that he fortified the mountain passes, and thus endeavored to secure his people from their enemies. If this be correct, then we need, First, As near as may be a continuous mountainous range from the sea east, even to the sea west, and in a straight course of wilderness. Second, That this strip of wilderness must run by the head of the river Sidon. Third, That the river Sidon must run from its head into this "narrow strip of wilderness" before its final entrance into the land of Zarahemla. Fourth, That this "strip of wilderness" must be of sufficient width for the habitation of many of the more idle part of the Lamanites. Alma 13, 11; 16, 11.

Now take your map and lay your straightedge at the northwest shore of the Gulf of Guayaquil, upon the Pacific or sea west, then at Zamora Point on the Atlantic or sea east, this will be the northern line of the "strip of wilderness," you give the strip what width you choose. I have allowed seventy miles south of that line; in this manner you will find by examination, that every requirement is complete, and that the Magdalena River "fills the bill nicely" as being the ancient river Sidon. For, "the river Sidon ran north," the strip of wilderness line running by the head of the river Sidon, its head being about twenty miles west of the line, but enters the strip of wilderness and runs in the wilderness near one hundred miles east of north, when it turns north and enters the national land of Zarahemla, and thus continues its course to the sea.

If the above showing be correct and fills the record requirements, then the cities of Moroni and Nephihah could have found no abiding place in Central America but in the land "south" and the land of Moroni adjoined the "narrow strip of wilderness." And the geological argument in favor of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec being the narrow neck of land, fails in its object, notwithstanding the Atlantic and the Pacific were once united when once the earth was without form and void and the waters were in one body.

And now lest I should trespass too much on space I will notice the article but little more at the present; there is however, much that can be said in favor of the Magdalena idea, and the location of the cities and provincial lands of the national land of Zarahemla, and also of the national lands of Zarahemla and Nephi being located upon the land south, or South America, to which Lehi was brought by the Lord. (Hel. 2:27.) Evidences that cannot be disputed if the Book of Mormon record be sustained, and will require no "stretch of conscience" to believe that the whole was surrounded by water except "the narrow passage which led into the land southward." (Mormon 1,3—the Isthmus of Panama.) Nor that it needs a very great stretch of conscience to believe that the location of Nephihah was six hundred and fifty miles away from the river Sidon in the "strip of wilderness," especially when it took months for the Lamanites to travel through "the strip of wilderness" to the land of Manti on the west side of Sidon from the land of Jershon, which afterward became the site of the land and city of Moroni. To my mind the "narrow neck of land" being the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, the Usumasinta River being the river Sidon, and "the strip of wilderness" in Honduras having a straight north and south course from sea to sea which all destroy the idea of the lands of Zarahemla and Nephi being located in Central America and Mexico. These had all best be wrapt in their winding sheet and cast overboard.

Before closing I wish to say that I have the greatest of brotherly love and respect for Bro. Simon Smith, and honor the energy, perseverance, industry, and research he has manifested under the most disadvantageous conditions in his endeavor to establish what he honestly and earnestly believed to be a correct idea. So far as his readings of the Botturini chart is concerned I believe he is near correct, but when he took up the Gemelli chart by some means he took up the wrong track and lost his bearings.

Respectfully your brother for the full vindication of the truth of the Book of Mormon and the certainty of its geographical map.

WILLIAM HAWKINS.

WHITMERITE CLAIMS REVIEWED.

To Brn. Reynolds and Johnson. Beloved of the Lord; Greeting:—

Having heard of your desire to withdraw from our fellowship and unite with the Church of Christ (so-called,) commonly known as Whitmerites; and having traveled over that ground a few months ago myself, I thought a letter from my pen might be of some value to you. I do not ask you to stop investigating, but ask you to be not hasty in cutting yourselves off from our fellowship, as I know you will not find in that church what you are looking for or are expecting to. I will now give you my experience and counsel, trusting that you will receive the same in the spirit it is given, and hope that you will be able to overlook the weakness of my nature of the past, which you are acquainted with, and look at the principles that I shall try to set forth in this letter.

Having an earnest desire to overcome the evil of my nature and become a partaker of the divine nature and be made pure like unto our pattern, I have joined various churches in my time; but not finding the help I needed in them, when I heard the gospel preached by the Reorganization, I hailed it with joy, thinking that I would surely find it there, but I was sadly disappointed. The reason of this disappointment I now see, which I will speak of later on, not finding the help I needed, as you know. And then a few months ago, getting hold of one of David Whitmer's "Addresses," and some Returns, I read them with interest, and they took deep hold upon my mind, and the thought came like this, Now you have been deceived, and have not yet found the truth, and that is the reason you have not found the help you need, and if you join the Church of Christ you will get it. This is the way I reasoned with myself, and the meekness of the spirit shown in that "Address," and the reasoning set forth in it, so completely got hold of my mind, that all the pleadings of my brethren went over my head without effect or influence upon me; so I sent in my notice of withdrawal and urged it till I got myself cut off. All this time I was so taken up with Whitmerism that I could not reason or compare; I could only see their side of the question, so sent east for an elder to come out and baptize me; but before he got here I got my eyes opened to the fact that they really had no church regulation at all, this I found out by writing to different ones of their own brethren. You will find out the same thing if you go far enough. I have letters and Returns in my possession to prove what I here state.

I tell you, dear brethren, it is impossible to locate the Church of Christ among them, for they are not at an agreement among themselves, as to what constitutes the Church of Christ, and confess themselves to be in the dark more or less. This being so, how can they give light to the world. There are as many divisions among them as all the rest of so-called Mormonism put together. Some claim that there ought to be twelve men to govern the church, others claim that elders, priests and teachers, are all the officers that is in the church, while they all with one voice claim that there must not be a prophet, seer and revelator in the church, for that is placing a Pope over them.

So every man is left to follow his own vision, without any standard to test it by, this accounts for so much division among them. For example,

I have letters in my pocket from one of their elders that claims that he has been shown the sandy foundation of the church, and that he knows of no other save himself that has any authority to conduct men and woman into the Kingdom of God, and he withdraws the right hand of fellowship from all the rest till they repent and come to his standard, while the rest withdraw from him and require him to come to their standard. And I know of several others among them doing the same thing; all accusing each other of trying to set himself up as Pope over the rest. I tell you my brethren, it is a continual strife for the mastery, and in the very nature of things, it cannot be otherwise, so long as they have no recognized head on earth. We see all nature demands a leader, from the lowest insect to the highest society of men. Wisdom shows that no body of men can be put at anything and have them do it right without them having a boss, or a leader to follow; for just as sure as this rule is not carried out, the men get into contention, as to how it ought to be done; one man thinks he knows a little more about how it ought to be done than his fellows, hence he assumes the leadership, and the others knowing that he was not set over them by their employer, pay no attention to him, hence every man works in his own way and according to his own judgment. This brings disaster to the work they are doing.

Now this is equally true in spiritual things. You may say the church has a head and leader, which is Christ himself. True, but let us see what position Christ occupies in his church. He says, "I will build my church;" this makes him the owner and employer (so to speak). This being so, he can place master mechanics or master builders over his church, the same as an owner of a building can place master builders and bosses over the men in his employ. Then all the men need to bother their heads about is to find out if these bosses and master builders that are over them have been placed over them by the owner, or whether they have placed themselves over them. Thus every man has a right to find out for himself, by going to the owner and asking him about the matter. And if the owner has placed a master builder over his building, what has he placed him there for. Why we all know that it is to receive instructions from the owner's own mouth, to give to all the employees in regard to the work they are doing. This saves the owner from being present all the time, and personally telling every man what to do. Because the master builder looks out for all that, in carrying out the instructions of the owner. And if all the employees are working for the interest of their employer, they will obey the commands given by the master builder, because they know that he gets his instructions from their employer.

Now this is just the same in the Church of Christ, in building his church, we will prove from his word, that he has placed in his church different officers, such as master builders, to superintend his work, and other officers to work under them, and has provided a way through the gifts of the Holy Spirit whereby every member may ask him and find out for himself, if he has placed these officers over them, or whether they have placed themselves over them. It is also good proof that Christ is not giving the elders of the so-called Church of Christ direct instructions how to build his church, or they would be one, and would not be contending about what constituted the Church of Christ as they are doing, and different elders setting themselves up as leaders, (in principle) thinking they understand more about the building up of the Church of Christ than their fellow elders, and withdraw the right hand of fellowship from the rest, because they refuse to follow them. This is just the condition the so-called Church of Christ is in, just like a lot of men turned lose at a piece of work without a boss or leader. It is nothing but spiritualism turned lose in the church in the dark and cloudy day of its existence, when they that were not willing to abide the rules of the owner of the church, but gave heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, some to one thing and some to another, and have gone out from us because they were not of us. And many honest souls have been deceived because of their pernicious ways.

Now we will look into some of the principles of Whitmerism. In David Whitmer's "Address" we find where the seducing spirit began its work, (and the meaning of the word seducing is to entice, to draw us away from that which is right). It worked upon the mind of our Bro. David, and caused him to believe that God had given Joseph Smith no more authority than he had to him and the rest of the elders of the church. Hence he began to advocate his belief and cause contention, which resulted in many leaving the church and turning themselves loose without a leader, not being willing to acknowledge him whom Christ had set over his church as a master builder. But if he had thought for a moment he would have seen that Christ had given Joseph Smith more authority than the rest of the elders, and that he had chosen him (Joseph) for his master builder, to be his (Christ's) mouthpiece to the church, from the fact that he (David Whitmer) and the rest of the elders received their call and ordination by revelation coming through Joseph Smith. This is a fact that cannot be denied, and they cannot trace their authority to any other source than coming through Joseph Smith. This being so, we have got it narrowed down to one of two things, either Christ did make choice of Joseph Smith for his mouthpiece to the church, or Joseph Smith was an impostor. The latter no branch of Mormonism is willing to admit.

Now what do we find in the case of David Whitmer and others who followed his advice. Why, we find history repeated. We go to the twelfth chapter of Numbers, and we find that because Aaron and Miriam had been blessed with the spirit of prophecy, that they got lifted up, and thought that they had as much authority as Moses, whom Christ had chosen to be his mouthpiece in that age, and by whom Christ called Aaron to the priesthood. They said hath the Lord revealed himself to Moses, only, hath he not revealed himself to us also, and the Lord was angry, and called the three of them out and said unto them, "If there is a prophet among you I the Lord will make myself known to him in visions and dreams; but with my servant Moses it is not so, I will not speak unto him in dark similitudes or speeches, but mouth to mouth." Now we can see the reason of this. As Moses was chosen to be Christ's master builder, he needed to have everything spoken to him in plainness, that he might build aright.

Now we come down to our day, and we find Christ made choice of Joseph Smith to fill Moses' seat, and be his master builder, and mouthpiece to the church. And we find Bro. David Whitmer and others that were blessed with the spirit of prophecy, and they get exalted and lifted up, and we read in his "Address," words like this:—

The Lord poured out his Spirit upon us, and we all prophesied as well as Joseph Smith; and that the Lord did not give him any more authority than the rest of us.

Now, brethren, is not this almost the same language as is used in Numbers twelfth chapter; the principle is the same. So after he was seduced to refuse to be subject to the master builder, he was lead in 1838 to withdraw from the church. As he says:—

The same voice that spake to him and told him to bear witness to the Book of Mormon also spake to him and called him out of the church, to hold the pure authority, so as it would not be taken from the earth again.

Now this carried great weight with me, because I believed it, and still believe it. But I look at it different now from what I did then. I reasoned thus, If he lied about the voice calling him out of the church to hold the authority, then how could I believe his testimony to the Book of Mormon, and as I had too much proof in favor of the book I could not reject it; so I believed his testimony in both cases, and thought he held the truth, so left the church to follow him, for I was so blinded by Satan that I could not reason from any other standpoint and could not discern the seducing spirit that had seduced him, and was then seducing me to follow him.

But since I have got my eyes opened I have been able to see through it all. He did hear a voice commanding him to bear testimony to the Book of Mormon, and he did also hear a voice calling him out of the church to hold the authority. But the latter voice was the voice of the seducer counterfeiting the first voice, and as he already had been seduced to reject the directions of the master builder, he was left in darkness and was not able to detect any difference in the voices, hence honestly thought it was the same voice. But supposing all this is true, that Christ did call him out to hold the authority, what does it prove; why it simply proves that Christ had rejected Joseph Smith as his master builder, and accepted or chosen David Whitmer in place of Joseph; for if he was called to hold the authority, then all that got authority to build the Church of Christ must get it through David Whitmer, hence it placed him above the rest and over them. So they may take hold of either end of the horn they like, and it revolves itself into this one thought, that there can be no visible organization created, without creating a visible head or leader for it.

Now another thing I wish to notice in this letter, is that they claim there is no Aaronic priesthood in the Church of Christ under the gospel. Well, if this is so, will they please tell us how they come to have priests in their church, as the office of priest is not in the Melchisedec or holy priesthood, except the office of high priests, and this they deny. So how they come to have priests in their church we are unable to understand. Again, if the Aaronic priesthood is not in the church, will they please tell us where they with us get authority from to preach the gospel in these last days. As it all rests upon the angel that called himself John the Baptist, who appeared to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, and laid his hands upon their heads, saying, "Upon you, my fellow servants, I confer the priesthood of Aaron," and said that he (John the Baptist) was acting under the direction of Peter, James and John, who would later confer upon them the Melchisedec priesthood. Now to deny this is to deny the authority to preach the gospel in these last days, because the angel Moroni only brought and delivered the plates to Joseph to be translated, and then came and received them again. There is no history of him ever conferring any authority to anyone to preach the gospel. Now in some articles that I am writing, I have taken up this question, of the Aaronic priesthood, and proven by the word that it does exist in the Church of Christ under the gospel, and I defy the world to prove it otherwise. But as it is a long argument, I will not reproduce it here, but will read it to you the next time you come up.

Now there is very much I would like to write, but my letter is getting long, so must hasten to close. I presume you have read the letters in the Herald by Bro. J. J. Leabo, of Grant's Pass, Oregon, last winter, concerning Nephi the first who has appeared to him. Well, I have been keeping up a correspondence with him ever since, and have received some very important information, of which I herewith give you some quotations from letters received, in the way of questions put to Nephi, and answers received from him.

Did Jesus Christ come in the flesh?

Yes; he was born of the virgin Mary, crucified and resurrected.

Is the Bible and Book of Mormon true?

Yes; every precept taught in them is truth. Nephi speaking to Hagen, the Lamanite that he called and blessed, said the work whereunto you are called is not to hinder Joseph Smith; he is the head of the church on earth, you are to be subject to and a part of the church.

Is Hagen the Lamanite, the mighty one spoken of by Lehi in his prophecy to his son Joseph, that was to arise and do a mighty work after the Book of Mormon came forth, and they, the Lamanites had heard the words of the book?

No; he is only called to start the work, (among the Lamanites,) but in ten years the sealed plates are to come forth by the hand of a Lamanite indeed. The records of the north country are also to come forth in ten years, during the ten years to come, there is to be a religious war to break out in Europe, and extend to America. At the end of the ten years, the saints are to go up, while Popery goes down, Babylon fallen. At the end of ten years, the saints are to be called in. (Comment by myself.) This will be the gathering of the saints from among the gentiles, hence the taking of the gospel from them and restoring it to the Lamanites and Jews, as it is written. After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle (temple) of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and

I will set it up. That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord who doeth all these things. (See Act 15:14-17.) After this means after he had visited the gentiles to take out a people for his name, as stated in verse 14.

Is Joseph Smith (young Joseph) a prophet of God?

Yes, Joseph Smith deals direct with God. (Comment by myself): What a harmonious answer with the word, as referred to above concerning Moses, in Numbers, twelfth chapter, Joseph Smith sitting in Moses' seat by right as God's master builder, has a right to deal direct with God, mouth to mouth, and thus be his mouthpiece to the body, while the rest of us have the privilege to receive communion from God in visions, and dreams, and the other gifts of the gospel, if we will live for it. (Comment by Bro. Leabo): Nephi has always told us to look to Joseph Smith; he is the head of the church on earth. (Comment by myself): If God has placed him—Joseph—as a master builder over his church, then it is right that we as employees look to him—Joseph—for our instructions in the work, and not to look direct to the owner, or employer (God). The same as an employee would look to the master builder of an earthly building for his instructions in the work, and not to the owner, or employer. (Comment by Bro. Leabo): Nephi always has us open our meeting with him, with prayer to the eternal Father, pleading the merits of the blood of his son Jesus Christ, and for the guidance of his Holy Spirit, that our minds might be opened, and enlightened for the mission that is soon to be revealed to us, and we never fail to implore the eternal Father to protect us from evil spirits and the works of Satan, and if it be not Nephi, that he will rebuke him, and send him from us, and are often on our knees imploring his protection at the time appointed for Nephi to appear, when he—Nephi—appears with a hearty Amen.)

Now, my brethren, a short statement as to the organization of the church, and I will close. Now, as the order under Moses was a type and shadow of the true order of things, then the true order must look like its shadow, the same as you look like your shadow, or in other words you are the same shape and form as your shadow. Now if the church in the wilderness under Moses was the shadow of the true and everlasting Church of Christ, then the true church will be the same in form as its shadow. Now what did its shadow look like in form? Why, we find Moses, and Aaron, and Hur standing at the head, as master builders, then the Lord ordered Moses to set twelve princes over the twelve tribes, then take seventy of the elders of Israel to stand with him, whom the Spirit of the Lord came upon, then we find captains over tens and fifties and so on, and divers officers in the Aaronic priesthood. And when we come down to the New Testament we find by a careful reading that the true order has about the same form, so far as we are able to glean from the record; yet there is no writer either in the Old or New Testament, nor in the Book of Mormon, that has given a complete pattern of the church; they mention different officers in a haphazard way as they were writing upon different subjects for the instruction of those to whom they wrote in the church; they never wrote to anyone a pattern of the church. Had this been done, and left on record, any of the reformers could have organized a church after the pattern without revelation, so far as filling the offices was concerned, but then it would not be Christ's church, if he gave no revelation calling these men to fill those offices. Hence if the Church of Christ was ever to be set up again after its going into the wilderness, it would have to be set up by revelation, in order to set each officer in his proper place, and put the church in proper working order. And whoever Christ saw fit to reveal this plan and pattern of his church to, and give him authority to go ahead and build up his church according to that pattern, would be a master builder. And there has been no one of all the church-builders since the church went into the wilderness that has ever organized a church that came anywhere near the Church of Christ as revealed in the Bible, neither has there been anyone that has claimed authority to build the Church of Christ, till Joseph Smith, hence the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, revealing the different officers in their proper places, and their duties. And if all those officers had learned their duty and place and kept in it instead of putting forth their hands to steady the ark and climb up into Moses' seat, they would have been accepted of God, and they would not have been running about trying to establish a way of their own contrary to the will of heaven.

Now if I have said anything that will give you light, give God the glory, for I am not worthy of it. By the promptings of the Spirit I have written. If this is the means of showing you that you are taking a wrong course, and you think it might be a warning to others, if published. Please return it, and I will send it to the Herald. Now may the Spirit of God be with you and give you peace, and establish your hearts in the truth of his dear Son, and that we may be able to overcome all the snares of the Devil and be saved in the kingdom of Christ, is the prayer of your unworthy brother, ELIAS B. PORTER.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Conference of the Northeastern Missouri district convened at Salt River, Missouri, October 17, at ten a. m. President J. A. Tanner presiding, Louise Palfrey secretary. Branches reporting: Higbee 81, gain 4. Bevier 158; gain 7. Huntsville 13; gain 4. Carrollton 10. Polleck 17; gain 1. Elders reporting: T. W. Chatburn, M. M. Turpen, J. A. Tanner, J. T. Williams, D. F. Richards, J. F. Petre, C. Perry, W. H. Vincent, M. A. Trotter, F. A. Evans, W. J. Vaughan. Priests: F. T. Mussel, Dan Edmunds. Deacons: W. J. Griffiths, F. E. Perry. Bishop's agent's report approved and as follows: Total receipts and on hand $54.28; expenditures $32; on hand $22.28. Deviating from the custom in the past of holding conference with the older branches without exception, it was decided to place the conferences where they could accomplish most good for the spread of the work, and it was moved to leave the appointing of the time and place of next conference to district president to investigate and decide. Elders T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen were present, and the other speakers were of the local force, J. A. Tanner and J. T. Williams. The attendance was good, the tent being filled at preaching services, and the conference was the means of creating a livelier interest in that vicinity. Two names were given for baptism. The few saints at Salt River entertained cheerfully and unselfishly, and saw that every provision necessary was made.

Sunday School Associations.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Convention convened at Salt River, October 16, 1896, at two p. m.; Louise Palfrey superintendent, M. J. Richards secretary. Reports were received from Higbee, Huntsville, Bevier, and Salt River schools. Number of schools in district three; number of delegates present fifteen. Money on hand at last report $17.55; received since $1.30; total $18.85. A request was sent from the Huntsville school asking for the privilege of joining our district association, which was gladly granted. The question on "Uniformity of Texts" was taken from the table, thoroughly discussed, and decided unanimously in favor of "Uniformity of Texts." A motion prevailed that we purchase a rubber blackboard for the use of the district Sunday school. Upon inquiry being put by superintendent the convention expressed themselves as being willing to sustain her in personally visiting the schools through the district, and places affording opportunities for organizing schools as often as she deemed the needs required it. Every session consisted of music and literary exercises. An address of "welcome" was given by Sr. Allie Thorburn. The address contained many beautiful thoughts and it was very appropriate; song, "I love the Holy Bible," by Bevier school; essay, "Is it necessary for parents to see that their children attend Sabbath school?" by Sr. Lydia Edmunds; song, "When the roll is called up yonder," by Salt River school, which was rendered so pleasingly that they were invited to sing again, to which they kindly responded; essay, "A model Sunday school," by M. J. Richards; song, "Beautiful Days," by Higbee school; solo, Maggie J. Thomas; essay, "What is the best method to pursue to become earnest Sunday school workers?" by F. T. Mussel; anthem, "Shepherd," by Srs. L. Palfrey, A. Thorburn, Brn. G. Thorburn, J. T. Williams, and W. J. Richards; essay, "Intermediate Teaching," which was responded to by Allie Thorburn. Sunday morning found a large number present: the school was divided into two classes—Senior and Primary. A very peaceful time prevailed and all felt glad that they were there. The business throughout the entire session was transacted pleasantly and without a jar. The Spirit of God was present, bringing peace and that fraternal feeling so noticeable in such gatherings of the saints, and characterized the entire convention. Adjourned to meet the Friday previous to our next district conference at place designated by our district president.

EASTERN MICHIGAN.

Eastern Michigan district Sunday school convention met at Bay Port, October 9, 1896, at two p. m. William Davis president, Addie Grant secretary. Reports of schools: East Fremont, Bay Port, Buel Center referred back for correction. Reports of officers: W. Davis, J. A. Grant, and Addie Grant. J. A. Grant's resignation accepted; William Hartnell elected successor. Elder F. M. Cooper and Addie Grant were elected delegates to general convention. Resolution adopted that hereafter no reports of officers be accepted unless written, also that no person be elected to office who is addicted to the use of tobacco. Adjourned to meet one day previous and at the place where the next district conference shall convene.

ADDIE GRANT, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

DECATUR, IOWA, DISTRICT.

Geo. H. Hilliard of the Bishopric will hold meetings at the following places as per dates below in the Decatur District, beginning at Allendale, Missouri, Saturday, November 21, 1896.

Presidents of branches are requested to make arrangements for these dates and give due notice of the same so that the saints will have an opportunity of hearing Bro. Hilliard.

If for any reason the house cannot be had in any branch for these meetings at the time of the announcement, presidents or those in charge of the branches will please notify me at once, so that I may fix another date and make change of the appointment:—

Allendale, Missouri, 21st to 23d of November.

Lone Rock, Missouri, November 24 and 25, and at 11:00 a. m. on the 26th.

Green schoolhouse, Iowa, evenings of November 26 and 27.

Davis City, Iowa, Saturday evening, November 28; and on Sunday, the 29th.

Leon, Iowa, December 2 and 3.

Hiteman, Iowa, December 5, 6, and 7.

Lucas, Iowa, December 9, 10, and 11.

Pleasanton, Iowa, Saturday evening and Sunday, December 12 and 13.

All the appointments for week nights are for the usual hour in the evening, unless otherwise specified.

I trust that the saints will give full and earnest attention to these meetings; whatever part of the time it is possible for me to do so, shall be present to aid in the same.

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM ANDERSON, District Pres.

LAMONT, Iowa, November 20, 1896.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

To the Saints of North Dakota, greeting:— Being appointed Bishop's agent I hereby call upon you for your portion of labor in the Lord's vineyard according to Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 119:8, which says: "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work entrusted to all."

This can only be done by all doing their part. Section 75:4, Doctrine and Covenants, makes it the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those who are sent to preach the gospel to the world; and the Bishop of necessity must supply the needy in the church and the ministers' families being amongst that class, must look to him for their support, it being mutually agreed upon before they left their homes and little ones. Bring in your tithes and offerings into the treasury, so that the Bishop may have the means of support in his hands. How can they be supported otherwise.

Last spring the church only sent out those they thought they could support, and many elders who offered their services to the church were not given missions for lack of means, whereas some are now behind in their monthly supplies, this requires a new effort, seeing some of the elders are complaining that they have to leave their mission fields for the care of their families. This should not be so, because to love the Lord and neglect his work is not right.

The Lord says in section 42:8, "If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou has to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance to the poor, ye will do it unto me and they shall be laid before the Bishop of my church and his counselors."

Tithing is a part of the gospel law, (sec. 114:1, D. & C.) Hence a part of the celestial law, and if we want to inherit the celestial glory we must obey this law, "For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, cannot abide a celestial glory,"—D. & C. 85:5.

Let us show faith by our works, for faith without works is dead. Dear brothers and sisters, let each of us do our part, that this dispensation of the gospel may be preached for a witness to all nations, as Jesus said it should be, then cometh the end, for "the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repents and mends his ways,"—D. & C. 74:5.

Remittances may be sent by express, post office order, or registered letter. My address is THOMAS LEITCH, Bishop's Agent,
Box 8, CLIFFORD, Traill County, North Dakota.

To the Saints in the Northern District of California:—I am sorry that I am compelled to remind you again that the funds are all out and those under my charge in need. It is very distasteful to me to be compelled to ask you to respond to the call of the needy ones. I feel assured that any who have means will help to feed the needy worthy ones.

If we examine the word of the Lord we see that it is necessary for us to make sacrifices. "Gather my saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."—Psalms 50:5. Sacrifice is something that does not always come to us with favor, it is irksome. It is just as much an obligation of one as another. It is just as needful for the poor to make sacrifices as for those who can give by doing so. We are all to labor together for the purpose of carrying the gospel to the world.

We are all responsible together. The Bishop and his agents are under the same necessity of making sacrifices to aid God's work. "Gather together my saints" not priesthood. The ministry are set apart for a certain work which the members are not to do, but all are to do what is within their reach to help the cause. I can certify that we will be glad of having aided so grand a cause when we get over on the other side. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Surely those who love God will do what they can to promote his cause and to enjoy these things awaiting them. It is said somewhere: "To give to the poor is to lend to the Lord." Those who fail to honor the law of the Lord are losing the best opportunity offered to mortals. If we wait until we have no use for the means we have and then give it, or wait until we are ready to die and have no use for it, there is no sacrifice about that. Let us be "wise servants."

In bonds,
C. A. PARKIN, Bishop's Agent.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Far West district conference will convene on December 11 and 12 with the German branch, four miles north of Stewartsville, and three miles east of Clarksdale, Missouri. We would be pleased to see a good representation from all the branches. All will be taken care of who meet with us. As the German branch is in the vicinity of three other branches, these four branches believe in reciprocity. The Sunday school meets in convention on Friday, December 10, at the same place.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

Address orders and remittances to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3½ x 5½ inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush...25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

HESPERUS

The poetical works of David H. Smith, youngest son of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It contains upwards of one hundred of the author's best compositions, many of which are excellent poems of a high order of merit; all containing sentiments of exalted type, and of true religious spirit. The author was gifted as a hymn writer and employed his talent in the production of sacred psalms and other sonnets of an elevating, inspiring nature. His sacred numbers are general favorites, and much used in the song services of public worship.

The book contains 194 pages. Elegantly printed, bound in cloth, stamped, gilt edges; price $1.50—an excellent birthday or holiday gift book.

THE RESIGNATION OF BISHOP KEANE.

THE action of Bishop Keane in resigning from the rectorship of the Catholic University of America, located at Washington, is variously interpreted by the religious papers. The Protestant papers generally regard it as a virtual rebuke from the Vatican for the rising spirit of "Americanism" in the Roman Church in America, a spirit which is said to have a leading representative in Bishop Keane. It is in this vein that the Journal and Messenger (Baptist, Cincinnati) comments on the resignation. It says:—

"The virtual removal of Bishop Keane from the rectorship (or presidency) of the Catholic University at Washington reveals a fissure in the organism of 'the true church' in America which enables us to get some idea of the influences at work beneath the surface and behind the scenes. It is evident that two parties are developing more and more—Cahensleyism and Americanism. The two seem to be incompatible. Evidently, His Holiness is not pleased with the American spirit of which Bishop Ireland is the exponent and with which Bishop Keane is in ardent sympathy. It will never do for the American University to become American, any more than it will do to make an American prelate Papal Legate. The man who is to control Romanism in America must get his ideas on the other side of the sea. He must first become imbued with Vaticanism, or he is unfit to mediate between the Vatican and the American Roman Catholic. It is said that, at the headquarters of the Jesuitical, or Cahensley party, is Professor Schroeder, one of the best scholars of the University, but intensely Roman in his sympathies and plans. It is also said that the German Catholics of this country are in closer sympathy with the Cahensley movement than are any other of the adherents of the church, and that they have raised a large sum for the endowment of a chair of German philosophy and literature at the University."

The journals of the Roman Catholic faith, however, fail to see any special significance in the action of the bishop. They unite in speaking of him and of his work in the University in the highest terms. Thus the Pilot (Boston) says:—

"Nine years ago Bishop Keane entered on the double task of showing forth the ultimate Catholic University, the ideal, so to speak; and filling in the outlines with the material edifice. How definite, how forcible, how convincing, how magnetic in his faith and single-heartedness he was, must be judged from the results—one and a half million dollars collected, in addition to the fund donated by Mary Gwendolen Caldwell for the building of the Divinity College; the School of Philosophy and the Institute of Technology erected and equipped, a staff of professors and lecturers, many of them men of international fame, and a work done for the enlightenment of non-Catholics, as to the spirit and aims of the church, the benefit of which will be long in exhausting itself in this country.

"Before the faculties and students of Harvard and Yale—and many of the younger secular universities and colleges from the Atlantic to the Pacific; before the Unitarian Club and the Churchmen's Club, Bishop Keane spoke for the church, for Christian education and Christian patriotism, winning everywhere what he sought—the awaking or increasing of the spirit of justice to Catholics; and equally what he never sought, personal admiration and respect.

"He was dominated by the one idea—the spreading and strengthening of the church in America through the building of a place wherein Christian leaders, priests, and laymen, might be trained; and he spent himself for its realization.

"Leaving the work he loves his farewell is still in his wonted self-less spirit. He bids his friends think not of him but of the University, whose success will ever be more to him than his own comfort or distinction.

"While the wisdom of the American Episcopate and of the Holy Father will find a worthy successor to Bishop Keane, it can find none braver, more loyal, more devoted, or more thoroughly for God and His church."

The Catholic Review (New York) voices the same feeling in an editorial note. It says:—

"The resignation of Bishop Keane from the rectorship of the Catholic University will deprive it of the service of the man who so far has done the most for it. For nine years, so far as the endless anxieties attending the foundation of a great seat of learning are concerned—the labor of collecting funds, the work of planning and putting up buildings, the care of selecting professors, the responsibility of laying out courses of study, and the myriad details of administration—he has proved his ability. He has held a brave heart in the midst of ten thousand discouragements and has communicated his own hopefulness to most of his subordinates. He has given his whole self to the great enterprise and has raised it to its present plane. He deserves the thanks of the church in the United States. Had he consulted his own interests or ease, he would have thrown up his burdensome office long ago. Now that the Holy Father requests him to resign it, he does so in most docile and prompt and grateful manner. Like a good soldier he asks no questions, but obeys, and the church here, emulating his edifying example, is willing to accept the wisdom of the Holy See in the matter. Certainly the Pope, the Bishop, the Board of Directors, and the faithful in this country, all desire that the Catholic University should reach the highest possible level of success, and would do nothing, consciously, detrimental to its best interests."—Literary Digest.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDICES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayures of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

MOSES THATCHER DEPOSED.

OUR readers will doubtless be interested in the agitation in the Utah Church which commenced over one year ago when Apostle Moses Thatcher and Elder B. H. Roberts were disciplined for consenting to accept political office without consulting their ecclesiastical superiors and associates. At the April conference of 1896 a manifesto was prepared requiring leading authorities of the church to so consult in the future before accepting political honors.

This manifesto was presented to Mr. Thatcher and Mr. Roberts, together with other authorities; and Mr. Roberts signed it, thus deserting his companion in trouble, and submitting to the church lash, but Mr. Thatcher refused to sign it, for reasons given. At the October general conference of 1896, the most of the general church authorities took occasion to publicly criticise Mr. Thatcher, thus prejudicing the case against him before he had a hearing. They took pains on the occasion to definitely state that the political disturbance was not the origin of the trouble, and claimed that Elder Thatcher had failed for several years to harmonize with his brethren; but Apostle John Henry Smith, in his remarks on the occasion, came near spoiling this theory, if he is correctly reported by the Provo Enquirer of October 9, of which publishing company he is himself the vice president. The report is as follows:—

Apostle John Henry Smith said that within three days after Brother Moses Thatcher refused to comply with the request of the quorum of the Twelve he would have been dealt with had it not been for his illness. The explanations which had been given on this subject were necessary, that the authorities might not be blamed with fearfulness. There could be no doubt that the Twelve and the Presidency of the church were in full sympathy with the expressions of President Woodruff and Snow. The speaker stood by his president and the president of the church in the position they took in reference to this lamentable case. He still cherished a hope, however, that Brother Thatcher would yet, and at an early date, see his error. The speaker had been disposed to so express himself and act in this matter as to admit of the allowance of fully as much time to the principal as would be proper in which to completely make up his mind regarding his final action.

Elder Smith then discoursed upon the necessity of being guided by the counsels of those whom God had selected to preside over his work.

After having thus paved the way by publicly renouncing Mr. Thatcher, and thereby disqualifying themselves to act as judges, the Quorum of Apostles disposed of his case in the manner given below.

The following is from the Salt Lake Tribune of November 20:—

Moses Thatcher is no longer an Apostle of the Mormon Church, nor the holder of any other office in its priesthood. He was yesterday summarily deprived of all his official authority by the Council of the Twelve Apostles, and retired to the ranks of the small number of men in the church who are not elders.

The Apostles met at ten o'clock in the Historian's Office. President Snow and nine others were present, the full membership of the Council, excepting Mr. Thatcher, there being one vacancy, that of Abraham H. Cannon. The accused apostle did not appear. He had been notified that his trial would occur, but the notice did not invite him to be present. So he did not attend. It is probable that he would not have appeared, even if he had been invited, as his request for a public hearing was denied.

The Apostles, sitting as an ecclesiastical court, proceeded to consider the case before them. But little time was required to reach a conclusion. No evidence was presented. The official announcement of the proceedings states that each apostle expressed himself. What was said does not appear, but it was undoubtedly in line with the remarks made by members of the Council at the October conference, when Mr. Thatcher was stated to be out of fellowship with his quorum. The opinion was unanimous that as he was out of harmony with his fellow Apostles, and had refused to act in accord with them, he must be deposed. The order was accordingly made that the offending apostle be stripped of all his clerical functions.

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

President Snow and other apostles, after the action was taken, went across the street to the church offices and informed the First Presidency that the expected had happened. The following brief statement of the proceedings was drawn up and signed by President Snow, and as a notice to all Mormons was printed last evening in the Deseret News, the official organ of the church:—

"To the Officers and Members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:—This is to inform you that at a meeting of the Council of Apostles held this day (Thursday, November 19, 1896), there being present Lorenzo Snow, Franklin D. Richards, Brigham Young, Francis M. Lyman, John Henry Smith, George Teasdale, Heber J. Grant, John W. Taylor, Murriner W. Merrill and Anthon H. Lund, which meeting was called for the purpose of considering and taking action on the case of Elder Moses Thatcher—and of which meeting and its object he had been duly notified after a full consideration of all the circumstances of the case, and after each Apostle present had expressed himself upon the subject, it was unanimously decided that Moses Thatcher be severed from the Council of the Twelve Apostles, and that he be deprived of his Apostleship and other offices in the priesthood.

"LORENZO SNOW,

"President Council of Twelve Apostles."

LOSES ALL PRIESTLY OFFICE.

The offices of which Mr. Thatcher is deprived are those of apostle, President of the Cache Stake, high priest, seventy, and elder. He was made an elder in 1857, when he was but fifteen years of age. He became a seventy in 1859, to which office he was ordained by Brigham Young. In 1877 he was made President of the Cache Stake, and was ordained high priest. He became an apostle during the session of the April Conference in 1879, and has therefore been a member of the council that deposed him yesterday, for nearly eighteen years. While Mr. Thatcher is still a member of the church, he is disqualified from doing any church work. He could not even be a missionary without being again ordained.

The apostles who passed sentence on Mr. Thatcher decided not to give out any statement on the subject in addition to the notice given above, and those seen last evening were uncommunicative. "We have nothing to add to the notice that appeared in the News," said John Henry Smith. "Matters simply came to a head and we decided whether Moses Thatcher or the majority was to control."

EFFECT ON MR. THATCHER.

Mr. Thatcher bears up bravely under the blow he has received. He deeply regrets the severance of his official relations with the church he has served in various capacities for nearly forty years, but he feels that he could not have honorably conceded what was demanded of him in order to retain his fellowship with the apostles.

A close friend of Mr. Thatcher stated that the action of the Twelve was a surprise, as he supposed some ultimatum would be given him—some conditions imposed, a compliance with which would permit him to retain his high office. "I am safe in saying this was Mr. Thatcher's expectation," said he, "since he wrote to the quorum to that effect and had the letter delivered to President Snow just before the meeting of the Twelve. You see, while Mr. Thatcher was notified that his case was to be acted on, at no time was his presence requested, and as he had once sought to meet with the Twelve and as he was not permitted to enter their presence, he felt that he would be told when his attendance was necessary.

His friends concluded, therefore, that he was not to be tried, which conclusion was confirmed by a letter of recent date, but that the only business of the quorum was to decide what he must do to be restored to full fellowship and that he would be given ample time to determine whether he could comply with their requirements before he would be deprived of his position. For that reason the decision of the Twelve, stripping him of every vestige of the priesthood, was a grievous surprise, more especially as at no time has any charge been made against him save that he would not sign the political manifesto on ninety minutes' consideration."

"What position does he now stand in as regards the church?"

"He is still a member, but without any office whatsoever. No lower position is in the church."

STILL LOYAL TO THE CHURCH.

"Is there any foundation for the suggestion that he may now fight the church?"

"Fight the church!" exclaimed the gentleman. "The idea is absurd. Whatever else may be said regarding Mr. Thatcher, that never will be. I know that his love of and devotion to the work is undiminished and that he is happy to think that he is at least permitted to retain a fellowship with the great mass of the Mormon people, in whose interest and for whose cause over forty years of an active life have been spent.

"Let me add that there can no longer be any objection by the church or its officials to the use Mr. Thatcher may make of his time. On the plain declarations of the church contained in the manifesto (and because of his attitude to that document Mr. Thatcher has been deposed from a high and sacred calling), there can no longer be any possible ecclesiastical opposition by the officials of the Mormon Church to his political course. Any interference from this time on will convict the leaders of pursuing a man already punished by the church, beyond church bounds, and will be recognized as motivated by vengeance."

ROBERTS COMING HOME.

Great interest was manifested by the public in the proceedings of the apostles, and while their decision, when made known, caused little surprise, it provoked much discussion, and animated arguments as to the justice of the action taken were frequent.

Speculation has already commenced as to the successor to Thatcher in the Council of the Twelve. It was learned yesterday that B. H. Roberts was on his way home from his missionary work, and his return was regarded as having a significant bearing on the succession. It is evident that Roberts expects to remain here for some time, as a substitute has been sent to take charge of the work he has been engaged in in Cincinnati. It was reported that he was to be given editorial work on church publications, notably the Contributor. It may be, also, that there is more truth than has been thought, in the statement that Roberts is to be made the church champion in the Senatorial fight against Thatcher.

Mr. Thatcher goes to Logan this morning, to remain several days.

ORIGIN OF THE CONTROVERSY.

POLITICAL CAUSES WHICH CONTRIBUTED TO YESTERDAY'S ACTION.

THE Mormon Church controversy that resulted yesterday in the retirement of Moses Thatcher from his offices in the church, had its origin, so far as its political side is concerned, in the nomination of Mr. Thatcher last year for United States Senator. Criticism of him and of B. H. Roberts for becoming candidates without securing permission from the church authorities was indulged in at the priesthood meeting held during the session of the conference in October, 1895. This criticism was regarded by the Democratic managers as precipitating a crisis and as sufficient cause for reconvening the Democratic State convention, and the adoption of an address by that body, protesting against church interference.

At the conference held last April an address was issued by the church authorities, in which the rule was laid down that officers of the church must take counsel before running for political office. This address Moses Thatcher refused to sign, on the ground that it did not specifically state the officers that were to be governed by the rule. He objected to the use of language that would appear to make it necessary for not only the leading officials, but minor officers as well to obtain consent before becoming political candidates. For his refusal to sign, his name was not included in the list of apostles submitted a couple of hours later to the conference to be sustained. This amounted to a suspension from office.

At the conference held last month, President Woodruff and several of the apostles spoke to the people of the Thatcher case, and advanced additional reasons for their refusal to hold him in fellowship. Some of the speakers said that the cause of the trouble dated back several years, and that the reasons for his suspension were not confined to his refusal to sign the manifesto.

In a letter addressed to the reconvened convention, Mr. Thatcher expressed the following views on the issue the delegates were called to consider:—

"Many Democrats, if not the majority, in Utah, have been made to feel that they were, more or less, under a religious ban, and have had to endure the slurs, if not the direct insults, tauntingly and sneeringly put upon them by men who had espoused other political doctrines, and many have endured insinuations as to their religious integrity, and that which recently occurred in the priesthood meeting was but a natural sequence of causes leading up to that culmination.

"Personally, I have no complaint to make because of what then and there happened, in the allusions made to myself, because, as I view it, the individual peace, happiness, integrity, and reputation of one man or a score of men cuts but little figure in matters of great consequence to the people of Utah, like that which now confronts us; but I may be permitted to say in passing that nothing in the acts and words of myself should warrant any person in the church in the belief that I would not upon proper occasion show, as I always have done, the respect due my ecclesiastical superiors, and that without in the least degree doing a wrong or in any way affecting the honor of the political party to which I belong.

"I have always believed and now believe that there is abundance of room in Utah, as elsewhere, for a citizen to do his whole duty to the State without in the least degree interfering with his obligations to the church of which he may be a member. The thought had never occurred to me that I had, at any time, been a priestly hireling. Upon the least intimation from those who furnish means from which myself and others have received compensation, that such is their view of the matter, I would thereafter neither take nor expect compensation for ecclesiastical work, but would gladly do all in my power, trusting the future for the rewards to which I would be entitled.

"Recent occurrences intensify the demand as expressed in our State Constitution that State and religious matters must not be united, and that while it is the duty of the State to protect the church in the enjoyment of the fullest religious freedom, the church must not attempt to dominate in civil affairs, and on this point I am with my party, and do not hesitate to believe that our citizens, when given the opportunity, will vindicate their integrity and preserve their honor, as I expect to do. I shall vote for the Constitution, being ready and willing, in and out of season, to do my part in maintaining the political rights, privileges, and blessing of free institutions.

"And now, in conclusion, in view of what has recently occurred, should the members of the convention feel that it would be in the interest of the Democratic party in Utah to have my name withdrawn as a possible candidate for the United States Senatorship, you may regard my resignation as herein tendered; but should you still think that I should remain where your action at Ogden placed me, I shall be with you, head, heart, and hand, to the end.

Thus a pretty little fight is on the tapis. It is not our fight either politically or religiously, but we shall watch it with interest. It is thought by some that Elder Roberts, who deserted Mr. Thatcher in his extremity, will be rewarded, by the church, with the deposed apostle's place. On the other hand there is a disposition among the Democrats in Utah, who have a large majority in the Legislature, to reward Mr. Thatcher with a seat in the United States Senate.

This will be bitterly opposed by church influence, as the following editorial from the Deseret Semi-Weekly News, of November 20, plainly indicates.

MORE SENATORIAL ASPIRANTS.

The crop of candidates for the United States Senate becomes more and more prolific, day by day; and the element of the ludicrous, referred to in this connection by the News some days since loses none of its prominence, as name after name is paraded before the public, as being that of a man suited to the exalted position for which he aspires.

The multiplicity of candidates, the utter absence most of them display of qualifications for the place, and the unseemly scramble that is being made for legislative votes, in advance of the meeting of the Legislature make it appropriate to again urge the members-elect of that body to avoid committing themselves.

In behalf of one aspirant, it is urged that he is what has recently come to be termed, in American politics, a "logical candidate," whatever that may mean. Of another, it is insisted that he is a staunch and strong Democrat, as if radical partisanship were a great qualification for a high office. Of still another it is alleged that his party owes him a debt of gratitude which only a term in the United States Senate will cancel, and so on ad nauseam. In behalf of one who has long aspired to the office in question, a strong plea is being addressed to "Young Utah," based almost wholly on the alleged "independence" which the "receptive candidate" for the office is said to have shown. What constitutes real independence in the character of a man may be a matter of question; but unless all his competitors are slaves, this one trait would hardly be sufficient to distinguish him above all others as qualified for the senatorship. Furthermore, the News opines that the abandonment of an admitted religious principle, which an individual has been publicly and privately taught, if not himself testified to as such, for half a lifetime, and the disregard of sacred and fraternal ties and obligations, whose disruption have filled many hearts in the community with profound grief, all in pursuance of vaulting ambition, are not the fruits of that sort of independence which is admired or indorsed by the right thinking among "Young Utah," nor by the good, intelligent, and conservative men of any class.

It is yet to be shown that the members of the Legislature desire to cast their votes in a manner calculated to wound a vital principle of the discipline of the most numerous religious body in this State. Does the political party which will so absolutely control the next Legislature desire to array itself in pronounced and distinctly defined opposition to that religious body? Is it the purpose deliberately and flagrantly to insult that entire religious society, by gratifying the aspirations of any man who may have occupied an exalted station in its councils, and for whose present differences with his brethren his "independent political course" is given by the uninformed as the cause? Is it to be expected that a church thus assailed and antagonized will not try to protect itself, and strive to maintain its organic principles? Is it desirable to precipitate upon the State a conflict, whose end and consequences cannot but be deplorable?

Common sense as well as the commonest idea of good politics can give but one answer to these queries. All that is necessary in these premises is for the legislators to come together free and untrammelled, and under conditions that will admit of calm reflection and deliberation. The exercise of their better judgment will avert all danger of the nature here indicated.

In an editorial of the same issue entitled "Absurd Heroics," from which we take the following clipping, church members in the Legislature are notified that a vote for the objectionable candidate will be considered anti-Mormon, and that the church will take measures to protect herself:—

May we venture to ask our cotemporaries and all other critics to draw in the wanderings of their minds long enough to concentrate them upon one plain proposition? That proposition is this: The candidacy of the person to whom all this has reference, is antagonized by the News because it is an assault upon the doctrines and organic existence of the church of which this paper is the official organ. His appearance in the political arena at this time is nothing more nor less than this, and every candid voter in the commonwealth will admit it. He himself announces that he stands upon a platform equivalent to this very proposition. It is not a political question, for the candidate's politics cuts no figure in it. It is religious, pure and simple, in that it involves nothing more nor less than questions relative to the integrity of a religious organization, the maintenance of its discipline, and the perpetuity of its doctrines. Yet we note that "Young Utah" is appealed to to support this candidate. Why? That they may be prevailed upon to oppose their church discipline and doctrines; in other words, become anti-Mormon. When a candidate, therefore, steps out upon a distinct and unequivocal anti-Church platform; when it is expected by his friends that his "vindication" means the rebuke of the church, can any sane man deny the right of the church to put forth efforts to preserve itself, and to save the souls of its members from that condemnation which its theology teaches will be visited upon all who, having partaken of its blessings, become its opposers?

As we have said, this is not our fight; but when any church presumes to say who shall or who shall not be elected to a seat in the United States Senate, and makes covert threats to intimidate its members who may be honored with seats in the legislature, we are interested in asking, What will the legislature do about it? Will they rebuke this presumption, and be as heroic as Thatcher, or will they take off their hats to the church, saying, "As you please, sirs," and thus be as weak and yielding as Roberts?

UTAH'S WOMAN SENATOR.

It seems that Utah is first in some things; for instance, at the late election Mrs. Martha Hughes Cannon, fourth wife (one of the four) of Angus M. Cannon, the local president of the Mormon Church in Salt Lake City, was elected to represent the people in the State Senate. She is the first woman ever chosen to such honor. She ran on the Democratic ticket against her husband who ran on the Republican ticket, and beat him by four thousand majority. The San Francisco, California, Weekly Examiner, for November 12, has an article reported by Annie Laurie, on the circumstance, from which we quote the following bits of information:—

Martha Hughes Cannon, the Senator, is a doctor by profession. She lives in a neat little red brick house in a neat little tree-set street. She has a little girl eleven years old and a little boy seven years old. She is between thirty and thirty-five to look at, and she is a clear-skinned, slender, trim little woman, well-groomed and fresh, with brown hair plentifully sprinkled with gray and a pair of brilliant, alert, hazel eyes. She has little bits of thin hands and little bits of slim feet, and she wears good clothes of a quiet, unobtrusive kind. She has a clear voice and a good, serviceable vocabulary, and she is perfectly free from self-consciousness of any sort. I asked her how she came to go into politics.

"I worked pretty hard. I studied up on all the questions of the campaign and I made a lot of speeches. I did not do any personal work, talking to people myself, and why they ought to vote for me, I mean, I just stayed right with my party and spoke for that, and on election day I went to the polls and voted. Then I went and attended to my patients. I beat Mr. Cannon by a majority of something like four thousand. I heard a prominent politician say that he wished Mr. Cannon and I had both been elected. He said he'd liked to have seen the fight. He would have been disappointed. If a woman quarrels over politics with her husband she'd quarrel with him over whether he liked biscuit or raised bread or any other subject that came in handy.

"On the saloon question I stand with my party. Prohibition does not prohibit. So what earthly use is there of mixing things up with a party that's always preaching something that they never practice? I don't believe anyone who has lived in Europe much can scare up such a terrifically strong hatred of the demon rum. Europe? Oh, yes, I went there when I was under-ground. Oh, I forgot, you're a gentile. Well, when the anti-polygamy law came into force we plural wives went, as we called it, under-ground. We went away and waited for things to blow over. I took my children to Europe and then to California.

"Now you are going to ask me about women running for office." Mrs. Cannon leaned forward and laid a persuasive finger on the arm of my chair.

"I don't want them to run for unseemly offices," she said. "Take the Governor, for instance, that's too mannish altogether. I can't bear a mannish woman or a mannish man either. By mannishness I mean, you perceive, not an inherent quality, but an assumption, a sticking out of the elbows and a raising of the head and a strutting."

Mrs. Cannon pointed her elbows and raised her head and began to strut, thought better of it, and sank into her chair again.

"That is as offensive to me in a man as in a woman. All the best men I know are ladylike and all the best women I know are gentlemanly. You catch my idea, I perceive."

I did not catch the idea, but I gave a perfidious nod and Mrs. Cannon said:—

"Our great teacher, Brigham Young, understood all these. He said, I heard him say it with these ears of mine, 'The day shall come when men and women shall walk together side by side in the temple.' That day is dawning now. Electricity will soon do away with much of the domestic drudgery. Women are growing wise and men are growing gentle. I think the millennium is coming sooner than we dare to hope."

"In the millennium," I said, "will there be polygamy?"

"No," said Mrs. Cannon, "we won't need it then. Each will then find his affinity and be happy."

"And will there be legislatures, and ward politics, and women senators?"

"Oh," said Mrs. Cannon, "you are too literal. Women must not be too literal. Men," now Mrs. Cannon's eyes grew pathetic, and there was a platform ring in her voice, "men are wedded to the present; women are promised to the future."

"But you are not promised to the future," I said, "You have arrived."

"Arrived?" said Mrs. Cannon mildly, raising her delicate brows in an expression of sweet interrogation.

"Yes," said I, "the first woman senator in America."

"Ah," said Mrs. Cannon, "the first woman senator. I hadn't thought it in that light. I do seem to be a sort of milestone, don't I? Well, I will have to try to live up to my privileges."

If Annie Laurie has reported Mrs. Senator-elect Cannon correctly, and the view expressed by her in regard to polygamy in the millennium, is the understood sentiment of the "sixty per cent" of the voting population of Utah as stated by her that the women are, it is nice to have her state that there will not be polygamy during that happy period of time because it will not be needed then. One of the points of contention between the Utah Mormons and the Reorganization is that the work claimed to be done under celestial marriage, or polygamy, is an entirely unnecessary work and has no warrant in the law of God revealed unto the church; hence void as to the millennium.

It is rather singular to find a woman an advocate for the open saloon for the sale of intoxicants; but as Mrs. Cannon states that on this question she "stands with her party," it is to be understood that in Utah the Democratic party is in favor of the saloon, whatever the party outside of Utah may hold on the subject.

If "sixty per cent of the voters" in Utah are women, and the majority are Democratic, then they will control the policy of the State and liquor will be openly sold by women's vote. For the sake of the women's reform sentiment outside of Utah, we hope Mrs. Cannon has been misinformed in regard to the percentage of women voters in Utah.

SATOLLI MAKES CHARGES OF HERESY.

NONE are more interested than our readers in all that pertains to the development of religious movements. Especially are we concerned in the attitude and policy of the Roman Catholic hierarchy toward American affairs, religious and general.

Rome some time ago seemed to take on a spirit of apparent liberality and friendliness to American institutions and to democratic principles in general, and Pope Leo was hailed as the Grand Old Man in ecclesiastical affairs and accepted as a rival of Gladstone for that popular title. However, there was a remnant in republican and Protestant Israel who refused to believe that Rome could be anything else than dominant, unyielding, and imperative; who declined to overlook the course of years in which she manifested her real spirit and policy in refusal to brook opposition to her ecclesiastical mandates and hierarchical methods of speaking and acting authoritatively, hence they awaited developments, and developments have come; for Rome affable and apparently liberal until the Greek and English churches refused to accept her authority as a basis of union, now returns to her former and actual policy of authoritative supremacy and dictation, under which her priests must forego all contrariness and surrender individual ideas of principle that conflict with the precedents of prelates and Popes past and present.

But here is the press item that has gone the rounds of late concerning Pope Leo's present policy:—

LONDON, Nov. 12. [New York Journal correspondence.] Your Rome correspondent wires me:—

"Cardinal Satolli has just presented to the Pope his report on religious questions in the United States. Although this document is destined not to be published, what it contains is nevertheless perfectly well known, and I am thus in a position to give you interesting information with respect to it. Cardinal Satolli makes a veritable accusation against Dr. Keane and the University of Washington. He accuses Keane of having in several public speeches uttered opinions which bordered on heresy. In accord with Ireland, he endeavored to acclimatize a neocatholicism [new Catholicism] on American soil. Cardinal Satolli declares that the University of Washington had become the heart of these new ideas, where most bold and risky theories were put forward. Fortunately the removal of Keane has cut short the evil at its root, but he has left behind dangerous disciples in the person of numerous professors of this university, and Cardinal Satolli advises the Pope to deprive them of their offices. But the Cardinal shows himself much more severe against Ireland. He declares this prelate is the creator of neocatholicism in the United States, and he formally accuses him of being an apostle of heresy."

This report has produced a very marked impression at the Vatican, where everyone foresees the Pope will adopt the greater portion of the Cardinal's suggestions, and will deprive the professors of Keaneism of their offices and call Ireland to Rome to there offer an explanation. This blow, which has just struck Keane, has, moreover, a more general effect. It is a complete and sudden change in the attitude of the Holy See.

At first Leo XIII. showed a marked preference for Ireland, which did not fail to seem to many to be extraordinary in view of the boldness of this attitude and doctrine of the Archbishop of St. Paul. The latter ostensibly enjoyed the favor of the Vatican, and Rome protected him against the attacks and suspicions of which he was the object. When he came here a few years ago he was accorded a triumphal reception. To-day the reaction is complete. Leo XIII. openly and energetically disavows the ideas of Ireland and his group. The neocatholicism which people are attempting to plant in the United States is completely discomfited. The Vatican has repudiated it, and its rival and antagonistic group, led by Mgr. Corrigan, has conquered the favor of the Holy See.

It is needless to call attention to the fact, how significant and interesting is this new evolution of Leo XIII. from the point of view of the general destinies of contemporary Catholicism. It is old Roman conservatism which has finished by regaining the upper hand. Moreover it is not only in the United States but also in other countries and other fields that the policy of Leo XIII. manifests a tendency to sudden change. The Pope finds it needful to take similar action in France. There is already a stop if not an actual backward movement in another field, that of the social question.

The Vatican is equally undergoing a change of front. The Holy See, which formerly seemed to cover with its protection the party of democratic Christians, is to-day frightened with their excess and disavows them, particularly in Belgium. The diplomacy of Leo XIII., led for a moment astray by imprudent advisers, is finding again its habitual qualities of tact, circumspection, and sagacity. Leo XIII. takes again in his own hands the reins which he was wrong to abandon to badly advised and unskillful instruments.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 13.—At the Apostolic Delegation here the opinion is general that the rumors of the possible deposition or reprimand of Archbishop Ireland on account of his celebrated campaign letter, originated in New York and not in Rome.

The Rev. Aloysius Sabetti of Woodstock College, Maryland, one of the most prominent Jesuits in the country, has just arrived in New York. The disclosures as to Cardinal Satolli's course toward the American Church and toward Archbishop Ireland in particular were simultaneous with Father Sabetti's arrival.

There is now no doubt that the liberalism of American Catholics has been absolutely disapproved of at the Vatican and Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland share with Bishop Keane in this condemnation. It was learned to-day that Satolli notified the St. Paul prelate that he would shortly be summoned to Rome to answer charges against his orthodoxy. It is said that Archbishop Ireland is guilty only of having incurred the dislike of Satolli, and hence will decline to appear in Rome to answer the vague charges.

The meeting of the propaganda on Monday will reveal probably just what the ex-delegate has charged against the Archbishop and the American Cardinal who brought him to the United States and were primarily the cause of his promotion.

It is intimated rather strongly in high clerical quarters that any unduly vigorous or malicious prosecution of Archbishop Ireland by a coterie of foreign prelates would almost certainly result in a serious schism in the Catholic Church in America.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 13.—An announcement made here to-night, when taken in connection with the rumors concerning Cardinal Gibbons, is deemed significant, and in the minds of many it is thought to indicate that there is no truth in them. It is that Archbishop Martinelli will visit Cardinal Gibbons in a few days. The occasion of the visit is the celebration of Patroness day at St. Mary's Seminary of St. Sulpice in this city, which will take place November 25. Archbishop Martinelli has announced his intention to celebrate high pontifical mass upon that occasion, and will be the guest of the Cardinal, the mass being celebrated in the cathedral. Those who are well posted in church matters say that this would not happen if the Cardinal did not stand in high favor at the Vatican.

THE HISTORY, ETC.

AS THIS number of the HERALD goes to press a portion of the forms of the Church History, volume one, goes with it, all type setting on the work being now concluded except a portion of the alphabetical index. Work has been pushed on the history, both day and night; no effort of a reasonable character has been spared to insure the appearance of the book during the season of the holidays. The binders will shortly have it in hand with a view to filling orders in time for Christmas and New Year's distribution.

Those who design giving presents would do well to remember friends with a copy of this valuable volume.

The reader is reminded also of the regular Herald Office list of books, periodicals, and general supplies.

Catalogues to any addresses on application.

A THANKSGIVING FEAST.

THANKSGIVING Day is of American origin, but certain European powers seem determined to slaughter the traditional bird on a different and more extensive scale. The many rumors concerning the partition of Turkey evidently show that such a step seriously is contemplated. It is a leading feature of the great political drama in latter-day fulfillment of prophecy and one that has long been expected. It will not be surprising, however, if great trouble arises out of the division of the territorial spoils:—

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent says that the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia has secured Emperor Francis Joseph's assent to a modified plan for the partition of Turkey, and has arranged with the Emperor of Austria for a visit to the Czar in January.

This correspondent adds that Germany does not share in the partition, but that Russia will support Germany's plans in China.

It is in this connection that Emperor William is sending an envoy to Peking with the order of the Black Eagle for the Emperor of China.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS.

THE General Sunday School Association has issued two Christmas Programs; one for Senior and Intermediate departments, and one for Primary departments, which are now being mailed to the various schools throughout the church.

The schools will no doubt appreciate this timely preparation for the Christmas season and accept the matter sent as an aid in their work to make the holiday season in their schools what it should be, a season of grateful enjoyment and celebration of the Saviour's birth and redeeming work. Those who have found it difficult to prepare satisfactory programs will find in the Programs what they require in that regard.

We understand that these Programs are mailed free, because of the lateness of the date of their issue; but do not know that the association intends to establish the precedent of free programs for the future. Should any schools be overlooked they may be supplied on application to the Herald Office, until the supply is exhausted. A limited number has been published.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. T. W. WILLIAMS, Council Bluffs, Iowa, the 24th:—

Am holding a series of meetings here in the city. Will continue till Thanksgiving. Brn. Smith, Anderson, and Gowell rendered valuable assistance last week. I go to Persia Thanksgiving.

The prison population of India, large as it is, is only 38 per 100,000 inhabitants, or less than half the proportion that prevails in Great Britain, Rain has fallen in portions of India and prospects for improvement of conditions in the famine districts are good. One hundred and sixty thousand men are employed on the relief works.

Options have been obtained on two thousand acres of land in Crawford County, Kansas, on which it is proposed to locate a colony of the unemployed on a cooperative plan.

The town of Hamilton, Washington, was practically destroyed by a rise in the Skagit River, on November 22. Buildings were undermined and fell, and streets and sidewalks washed out. The press report says: "Everyone is discouraged and heartbroken and the scene beggars description." Much damage was also done in the adjoining country.

James F. J. Archibald, of San Francisco, is reported to have proceeded to New Mexico for the purpose of exploring some hitherto inaccessible localities formerly peopled by Navajoe Indians, on steep mountain sides, by means of a balloon. Whether he will succeed and also prepare a way for fuller exploration of the cliff dwellers' resorts in Colorado, remains to be seen.

Recent press dispatches assert that Spanish authorities have resorted to the tortures of the inquisition in some of their worst forms to suppress the insurrection in the Philippine Islands. The rack and the thumbscrew are said to have been employed in many cases. This report comes through a leading correspondent who smuggled his communication, escaping the press censorship established by Spanish officials.

Edison and other scientists are experimenting upon the blind with the X rays, and have succeeded in causing some to distinguish outlines or objects. It is believed that the apparatus may be developed to a degree that will enable blind persons to see objects with a considerable degree of clearness; also that it may be simplified so as to be more readily adapted to the use of blind people.

Press dispatches from Cuba and Spain confirm the news of the repulse of General Weyler by General Maceo of the Insurgent forces. Weyler lost 2,000 in killed and sent as many or more wounded to the rear. Maceo is said to have inveigled the Spanish troops into a network of dynamite mines, which were exploded with terrible effect. He has now assumed the offensive and threatens Havana. The Spanish press is strongly denouncing Weyler and clamoring for his recall.

The French ministry narrowly escaped defeat in the Chamber of Deputies, of late. M. Rambaud, the Minister of Education, resisted a demand of the Radicals for the immediate installation of lay mistresses in 6,500 elementary schools which are still in the hands of Catholic nuns, instead of waiting until the nuns had resigned or died. The extra expense incident to such change alone saved the Government from defeat. The Radicals will redouble their efforts to gain their ends.

Sample copies of the HERALD will be forwarded to those not of the church on application with name and address. Branch presidents, missionaries, and others are requested to aid the HERALD list in this respect. We want to increase the HERALD's circulation with the increase of the church. Every member of the spiritual family should be in touch with the movements of the great household of faith.

One man was killed and forty-five were injured at foot ball games at leading colleges and universities in "this Christian nation" on Thanksgiving day. Some of the wounded are liable to die, others to be maimed for life. The whole series of such affairs is placed below the standard of prize fighting and at which it was generally demonstrated by the enthusiastic thousands of spectators present that there is a large element in American society not far in advance of the "crowd" who frequent the Mexican and Spanish bull fights. The Chicago Tribune urges restraint by civil courts, inasmuch as college presidents have failed to restrain the brutal ruffianism known as slugball. The silly practices that attach to some institutions of learning are out of date and should be dropped once for all by every institution that claims to be progressive and under common sense up to date management.

Terrible storms and floods caused immense damage at Athens, Greece, and the Piræus; some lives lost; November 27.

Reports from the northwest state that the late storm has proved to be the worst known in years at this season of the year. Yankton, South Dakota, dispatches of November 27 report over two hundred thousand head of cattle dead on the ranges, late rainstorms, freezing, and heavy snowfalls having rendered pasturage inaccessible.

Original Poetry.

THE SIN STRICKEN SOUL.

Ah, to the yearning of my soul there is but one reply,
Thou canst not reach infinity until the body die;
Then resignation muster now, bring patience to command,
And wait until the summons comes, "Go to the promised land!"
O soul, thou canst escape not through thy earthly prison bar,
Nor ever wilt thou find the gates that hold thee here ajar,
Not till thou hear'st the fiat loud, 'twill come from him on high:
Wait, then, thou poor imprisoned soul, wait till the body die!

It thoul't "endure unto the end," though by this world art blighted,
O wand'rer from thy Father's home, thou sore and sin benighted,
And plead with him in pity's prayer, who ne'er hath prayer denied,
He on himself thy sins will bear, for such the Son hath died.

Then turn, thou sore afflicted one, and seek the throne of God,
For he it is hath stricken thee! 'Tis his the chast'ning rod!
Go to Bethesda's waters pure, where sorrows have surcease;
Thoul't find "his ways are pleasantness, and all his paths are peace!"

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

NOTICE.

UNTIL requested otherwise, please address all communications intended for publication in the Home Column to Mrs. M. Walker, Beaconsfield, Iowa. Send to me communications only. All business matters should go to Bro. Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa. 46-4t

ORANGE PRAIRIE, Illinois.

Dear Sister Francis:—When my Herald reached me yesterday I turned at once to the Home Column, as I always do, and read the letter from Sister Ella Green and your remarks at its close, and I felt I must write and thank you that you did not keep that "soul-cheering" article to yourself. I wish I could tell you what an influence your life has exerted over mine, since I have known you; how many times your words have helped me and have given me renewed strength and courage. May God abundantly bless you and may you not become discouraged in your work for the church, for, in the words quoted, "you cannot afford it under any circumstances."

How easy to preach and how hard to practice! Yet that article will, I feel, do me untold good, and I am only one of the many who will read and take heart again. What an influence we are every day exerting over each other. By a few strokes of the pen we may give new life and courage to one who is unknown to us, separated by hundreds of miles. Yet God sees and takes all into account. What surprises await us when that great day comes and the "books" are opened and we hear read and measured "our life work." I fear that many things which we judged of much importance will sink into comparative insignificance beside the things which we deem of but little moment.

When I read these words, "It is a sin to be a hinderer," I said to myself, "Have you ever thus sinned? Have you ever hindered by your sighs and moans over the hardness of your lot, and left some poor, weak one feeling as if a cloud had suddenly obscured the brightness of his day; and I was afraid to answer, No. Instantly there passed before my mental vision numbers of my friends and acquaintances. I called to mind one sister that I never was with without feeling better. She was always cheery and hopeful and I could not fail to look at life's difficulties with more hopeful eyes after spending a day with her.

How many of us fall into the habit of thinking "our lot the hardest." "No one has such trials as we have." But if we look about us to find a perfectly happy person, where will we find one? The older I grow and the more experience I gain the more I think that burdens are more evenly meted out than we are apt to think. But I must confess that of late I had been growing despondent, and it is or has been well-nigh impossible for me to find the sunny side of the cloud as often as I could wish, and I fear my manner has not always been such as to be helpful to those about me. With my dear husband suddenly taken from me in the prime of his life, my home thus broken up, and having to give up the association of many friends whom I hold most dear, go away with my children to another place, and earn their and my own daily bread with my own hands, my lot seemed to me very hard. And I could hardly feel resigned, and would question, "Why?" My health so poor (heart trouble) that I would not think at night that I could possibly go the next morning. But when I count my blessings I find that I am not destitute. Indeed, I am blessed beyond measure and much beyond my deserts, and I have been wondering if these trials were needed to make a saintly woman of me, to make me of some account in the world. O, I hope so, and I pray God to strengthen me, that I may endure patiently to the end all that his loving hand may send.

God bless all the weary ones; and I pray that many others may receive the good that I have from this week's Home Column. Often I have felt prompted to write for our column, but being so pressed for time and feeling that I had nothing cheerful to say, put it away, thinking that others would write. Ah, I didn't realize that no one could take my place, and do the work God has designed for my hands.

Hoping to be more faithful in the future than I have in the past, I am, as ever, your sister in the work,

MARY E. HEGWOOD.

"Child of my love, 'LEAN HARD,'
And let me feel the presence of thy care.
I know thy burden, child—I shaped it,
Poised it in my own hand, made no proportion
In its weight to thine unaided strength.
Before ever I laid it on, I said,
'I shall be ever near, and while she leans on me
This burden shall be mine, not hers,
So shall I keep my child within the circling arms
Of mine own love,'—Here lay it down, nor fear
To impose it on a Shoulder which upholds
The governments of worlds—yet closer come,
Thou art not near enough: I would embrace thy care,
So I might feel my child reposing on my heart;
Thou lovest me? I doubt it not,
Then loving me, 'LEAN HARD.'"

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. BANKASTER, of Bay Minette, Alabama, asks for the prayers of the union that she may be restored to health.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

We thank Thee, O Father, for all that is bright—
The gleam of the day and the stars of the night;
The flowers of our youth and the fruits of our prime,
And blessings that march down the pathway of time.
We thank Thee, O Father, for all that is dear—
The sob of the tempest, the flow of the tear;
For never in blindness and never in vain
Thy mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.
We thank Thee, O Father, for song and for feast—
The harvest that glowed and the wealth that increased;
For never a blessing encompassed earth's child
But thou in thy mercy looked downward and smiled.
We thank Thee, O Father of all, for the power
Of aiding each other in life's darkest hour;
The generous heart, and the bountiful hand,
And all the soul-help that sad souls understand.
We thank Thee, O Father, for days yet to be—
For hopes that our future will call us to thee;
That all our eternity form, through thy love,
One Thanksgiving Day in the mansions above.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

THE Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana Sunday School Association rejoices over the organization of two new schools: one at Hartford, Michigan, November 15, and one at New Troy, November 22. What district can furnish us better news?

THE APPOINTMENT AND DUTIES OF A VISITING COMMITTEE.

BY W. N. ROBINSON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL VISITING COMMITTEE. OUTLINE.

1. How appointed.
 1. By superintendent.
 2. By virtue of office.
2. Of whom composed.
 1. Competent members.
 2. Teachers.
3. Duties.
 1. Solicit members.
 2. Secure regular attendance.

From the subject assigned one would be led to imagine that it is to be taken for granted that there should be a visiting committee in connection with the Sunday school and that there should be no valid objection urged against having such. But let us see if this is the case. I want to ask how many representatives of different schools here can say that their school has a regularly appointed and actively engaged visiting committee. Hold up your hands so that we may count. I see about five. Now then let all rise who represent different schools, and where you see one other representative of the school standing, then you sit down, because we wish only one of the school to remain standing. I count twenty-one. Is that correct, brother superintendent? If so, it means that only five committees are actively engaged in twenty-one schools. It, therefore, occurs to us that there is surely some objection to this feature of the work, otherwise on the theory that saints, when they know the right way, are taught to make every effort to walk therein, therefore there would be many more schools with this valuable feature. Let us consider some of the objections that we have heard given at various times. One brother remarks that if he were visited by a regularly appointed committee or person, that there would arise within him a feeling of chagrin, because surely he would not be visited if it were not that he had committed some public fault. Another declares he doesn't believe in being visited by any member of such a committee, because it would be simply an apparent or real exhibition of authority or presumption, and to him it looks like if we are free moral agents, we should be permitted to act on our own convictions without being coerced.

Another objection is (this time from a superintendent of a large school) that he believes no visiting should be done whatever because of jealousies that would be incurred among the children. Then there are the usual objections of lack of time and lack of disposition to attend to such duties, etc., etc., and because of these objections in our travels we have found a great many schools without such a committee, or if there had been one appointed, no attention whatever was given to the work, either by officers or members.

To my mind there should be an actively engaged committee in every school. This committee should be appointed by the superintendent, and here let me quote from the constitution.

Please turn to page 15 of the revised constitution, and there you will read: "The superintendent shall appoint a committee to visit and solicit the attendance of non-members and friends." Now let us read further and you will notice the requirements on the part of the teachers, who are thereby made ex officio members of the visiting committee: "Teachers shall visit and solicit the attendance of absent members in their respective classes," and from a theoretical standpoint, at least, it seems that the best committee would consist of such officers of the school as are adapted to the requirements of such work, and all of the teachers of the school. To get the proper work from such a large committee will require considerable activity and tact on the part of the superintendent, as well as having this committee divided into subcommittees for special work.

This theory you will notice must be subject to considerable modification on account of the different localities in which the schools are conducted and the sizes of them. We believe in visiting. Take it in active business life. The merchant who has no solicitors at work nor sends out printing matter of any sort describing his wares, and sits quietly in his store waiting for trade to come to him, is not the one who has the large trade nor the successful business in these times of keen competition; but it is the one who sends out canvassers, writes personal letters to the various residents of the community and county, and tries, at all times, to get acquainted with the various purchasers outside of his place of business, that can make the showing of greatest sales at the end of the season. We cannot say in religious life that there is no keen competition, but we do believe that we should be as diligent in seeking souls to save from the allurements of the world, as well as from the doctrines taught by those who have not the light that the restored gospel has brought, as our competitors in religion, who, not only have persons actively engaged in this line of work, but have every State, county, and township thoroughly organized for the work of getting and retaining scholars.

One of the requisites for the successful teacher is to have a love for the scholars, and by pursuing the policy just mentioned of having the teachers on the visiting committee, it would seem that there would be sufficient love manifested on the part of the visitor to completely invalidate both the first and the second objections previously noted; because where genuine love for the person visited and for the work being done exists, there can be no officiousness or presumption shown. If visiting was done for no other purpose than to show that the member of the committee is officially designated as such, then perhaps that one might go to such extremes with his work as to cause jealousies on the part of some scholars, but we do not conceive of such being the condition when we apply the remedy to all such ills of taking these matters "to the Lord in prayer."

The visiting committee has a thankless job at best, judging from the human standpoint, and one that requires sacrifice—note that thought, please—it is not a pleasurable social call, but one of duty which frequently occasions sacrifice to make, but we do not feel justified in even thinking that any would be in this work for personal emolument, and as we know and are continually being taught, we must sacrifice a little here because our heavenly Father loves humility and a willingness to bear the burdens, so that he may reward us one hundredfold thereafter.

One of the nice features of having the superintendent on the committee is that he may visit the teachers in his official capacity, become better acquainted with them and encourage them in the great work, as well as to look after any teachers who may become dilatory in the work and absent themselves occasionally from the regular school, or (if organized) the teacher's meeting. The teachers on the committee should look after absent members of their respective classes and the visiting should be done either personally or by a card or letter. Indeed this latter method has been adopted by a number of successful teachers and it has been found to be of much more value than oral conversation, for when the scholar is quiet and alone a thought written appeals more forcefully to him, and is cherished longer in memory than a number of thoughts given orally. The scholars, when not present on Sunday, should be looked after during the following week. There may be sickness either of the scholar or in the family, and a visit from the teacher or a kind note of sympathy will serve to endear both the school and the teacher to the heart of the scholar. There may be a lack of shoes or suitable coat or other wearing apparel that would hinder attendance, and if such be the case, the teacher guided by wisdom would be enabled to learn the truth without offending perhaps a sensitive nature and could supply the deficiency either by her own resource or by kindly reporting to the existing Mite or Aid Society or similar organization. Perhaps the scholar has failed to become thoroughly interested either because of not understanding the teacher or the teacher not understanding the scholar or even because of a positive dislike for the teacher, and a visit would either effect a cure by better acquaintance or a knowledge of the existing evil would result in a remedy being suggested. If the scholar was left without visiting and to drift wheresoever he would, the chances are that it would be the turning point in that scholar's life, and not for the better either.

These duties should be performed by this general committee, but the superintendent should appoint from among these a special committee for the purpose of bringing in new scholars, not that the teachers should be prohibited from doing this work but that there should be some one whose duty it is especially to look after that class of work. I know of an instance in Kansas City where a gentleman who had several children in his family and who lived in Kansas, moved into the city on one Wednesday, and in relating the case to me he said that he was very much surprised on Friday to find that his wife had been called upon by a committee from one of the large sectarian churches of the city and with a cordial invitation to send her children to their Sunday school, although they were not members of that church and had not attended it. It showed to me that there was thorough organization in that school, and that even in such a large city a person could not move into it without being invited by some earnest persons to what they term their "Sunday home," and this is one of the reasons for the great success in the sectarian world. We might enumerate a number of instances where we have seen good results gained from visiting, and your speaker can testify that good has been done him by a visit from the assistant superintendent of the school after having been absent from the school. The teachers here, who have made a practice of visiting, can also testify of the splendid results of visiting, hence we will let the citations of incidents pass for the present. This special committee should see to it that strangers and inquiring friends who have not yet even visited our schools should be both invited and urged to, at least, make a trial and if the preliminary work is successful, then the teacher in whose class the visitor is placed can have an opportunity of carrying out the thoughts before expressed. To get at this systematically we might suggest that territory should be divided into wards or sections and one of the special committee be put in charge of each district and made responsible to the superintendent for the successful carrying out of the work assigned.

With these few suggestions, I trust that the subject of "Visiting Committee" will be more strongly considered than ever before and that we may apply the theories that we accept as correct to a practical and successful culmination.

Letter Department.

DANVILLE, Pa., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—Two of the Utah elders have appeared in this quiet town on the banks of the Susquehanna River, which is the seat of Montour County. I was accosted by our chief burgess, Thomas Price, with the remark that two of the elders of the Latter Day Saints had been with him that morning asking the privilege of preaching in the town; to which he said they had the same privilege as other denominations, and he directed them to Mr. Benjamin Cook's house, as Mrs. Cook is a member of the Reorganized Church, and told me to go and see the brethren. So I went and found two good-looking young men, who gave me their cards as Elders Walter P. Rich, of Paris, Bear Lake County, Idaho, and G. W. Parrish, of Wood's Cross, Davis County, Utah.

They said they were going to stay in and around the county for six months, as they were sent without purse or scrip, as the disciples of old, to preach the gospel. I asked them if they were going to preach the worshiping of Adam as the God and the only God of this planet, and the blood-atonement, and plurality of wives, and Utah the place of gathering, the putting of the books on the shelves, and be guided by the counsel of the leading men of their church. To which Mr. Rich replied that "plurality of wives is an holy order;" and said it was revealed by Joseph the Seer in '43.

I asked him in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Cook if he was not ashamed to try to brand our martyred prophet as being guilty of such damnable heresies without the least shadow of proof, while we have nineteen of the best female citizens of Nauvoo to testify to the contrary, and the widow of the prophet (Mrs. Bidamon), of Nauvoo, in April, '67, testified that she never did see any such document, they as a church accuse her of burning.

They told that they were not at liberty to discuss the differences between us.

It does not require a very smart man to discuss with them. They did not have the Book of Mormon with them and did not know that the Book of Mormon spoke in such strong terms against the grosser crime, and they tried to brand the elect lady of falsehood. They did not know that the New Testament taught one-wife system.

WILLIAM CRUMB.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 17.

Editors Herald:—The struggling few of Cleveland, Ohio, are "toiling on." Bro. Edwin Garrett, son of that Independence Editor, presides over the branch well as a beginner. Edwin also superintends the school and has as devoted helpers, Sisters Emma Lutz and Anna Hanna among others. While others were reduced or laid off, pending the wave of prosperity, Sister Anna Hanna had something added to the compensation for her daily toil, and then, they did not forget to increase the toil, too, but we are proud of the people that rise. The nephew of that celebrated Kirtland usher, our Cleveland brother, John Gillespie, is winning laurels of credit by splendid advancement he is making. Our brother, John Burgett, is rated by an acquaintance of years and who attends services as a man to be prized among five hundred. Ere we assume the role of a wholesale eulogist we desist.

At Ashmont, Ohio, on the 9th, I baptized Sr. Helen Fox, who had been under peculiar conditions of life for twenty years, afflicted in mind and body. She had been confined in an asylum two years, and not bettered by it. A farm had been sacrificed to doctors, all to no purpose, by her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Kelsey. Sr. Fox had drank at the fountain of spiritualism till tired of some of its features. She had been furnished the Ensign for three years by the lately baptized Sister Riblet, and had quite a nice understanding of our position. After canvassing her condition and the gospel well she asked baptism at my hands, and as the gospel is to deliver from bondage I had but one course to pursue, trusting the Master for needed help. I administered to her two days before baptism and felt the acknowledging presence of God's Spirit. Sr. Fox was very fearful of the cold, for it was a very chilly day, and much more so of the water; but all went well, and I was thankful, though nothing more than peace and tranquility was realized. For days I had tried to prepare—and I may say in all of my ministry for such an event. What will be realized of course depends largely on Sister Fox. I ask the prayers of the church for her, and have devoted the space I have so the case may be understood.

Mrs. Kelsey, Sister Fox's mother, now seventy-seven years of age, cooked a week in her father's house (Solomon Riblet, of Wesleyville, Ohio) back early in the thirties, for the Seer and Sidney Rigdon. The Seer is spoken of as a nice young man, and Rigdon as a very smart man. They had come to Mr. Riblet's a stormy evening, announced themselves as Mormon preachers, and wanted shelter. The week was spent pleasantly, Mr. Riblet clearly telling the preachers he did not believe their story.

I believed Mrs. Kelsey's story and felt that both it and the service in those years so long ago were recognized of God and that the message borne by those weary wanderers in the days of her youth, now finding consideration by her ripened intellect, would yet bring peace and comfort to her widowhood, beset with poverty and affliction. The day after I baptized Sister Fox I felt to go and see them. I found Sister Fox's daughter Mary, a bright girl of seventeen, very ill. She had been very desirous for her mother to be baptized. After a chat of some length she was administered to and almost instantly relieved, and with us was thankful. May the effectual prayer of the righteous bring blessing to this household of three.

The series of meetings at Ashmont seemed to be fraught with comfort to the saints, and brought a deeper interest to a few, among them Mr. H. K. Riblet, brother to Mrs. Kelsey (and who also related what I have written), husband of Sr. Riblet mentioned. Mr. Riblet once tried to be a preacher but it did not go right; he stopped, was branded by those he left as a "heaven-daring and hell-deserving subject," and the meshes of spiritualism entwined him, and now in his seventy-fourth year he is at sea, not satisfied, don't sleep well. He says, "Susan can sleep from seven to seven." I was used well by him. I hope the gospel he listened to attentively may yet bring peace to his mind and heart.

May I say to the saints of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district that I am trying to discharge duty they assigned me, but I did not crave the task. If all local officers would diligently try to learn and perform their duty in branches and pioneer a little, they would grow. Try it, brethren. The field staff cannot furnish you all the preaching your localities need. Can't you see by the papers that many local men push out, make good preachers, and do a vast amount of good in this? This district is far behind many. Some recently have secured letters of removal who had permanent residence, but their membership at a distant branch. If all who are so situated will secure membership where they reside it will aid the work and benefit the families and outsiders who are looking on. Order is said to be heaven's first law. "To obey is better than sacrifice" was written long ago. "And to hearken than the fat of rams."

To be a law to oneself has many ways of expression in this world. Here and there the Sunday school Quarterly is adjudged sectarian and not used. Do you know that those Quarterlies are in existence by the act of the General Association and that supported by the General Conference, and that a committee of as competent persons have the oversight as are available that they shall not be sectarian?

I have noted for several years that where this cry of sectarianism is raised to avoid being sectarian, these careful people sing out of the Harp, and almost confine themselves to "Come thou fount of every blessing," "All hail the power of Jesus' name," "Jesus lover of my soul," "Nearer my God to Thee," and a few other old standard pieces good as gold, but, not suited best as Sunday school music. Will those so inclined please refer to index of Harp and note that these are not Latter Day Saint productions? The General Association selected, not to be sectarian, but to have suitable music, "Winnowed Songs." There are places where the young are starved, driven away, by such procedure.

The factions of the church that have whetted swords with the Reorganization, only wanted to correct it on some point or other of sectarianism, but, where are most of them? and what good are those accomplishing who remain? What promise of abiding does their work give?

Abide the rules of the body while you profess to be of the body. Let the excellent schools we have who do not see the need of district associations consider what they consent to by retarding the power of organization. There is a momentum gained by organization that works for good. These Sunday school observations are from a wider basis than this district, but sadly enough are to be met within its domain.

This district has made a bright record in furnishing the church means in the past, why should it not come to the front on all lines?

In bonds,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Oct. 26.

Editors Herald:—It is not often that I ask for space in our valuable paper, but just a few lines will be quite sufficient to let all interested in this mission know that, at present the work is in a good condition and prospering nicely. However, the people with whom we have to deal are very fond of pleasure, and it is a great task to get them to listen a few moments to the truth.

Bro. Caffall's description of the people in England and the difficulties in reaching them are very similar to what we have to meet out here; but when we realize that the Master is at the helm, there is nothing to fear; for he will pilot us through the storms and trials of life, and we shall land safely within the harbor of rest if we are energetic and faithful to our trust.

The work prospers slowly; and we are pleased to see it increased by twos and threes, for at this rate branches will be raised up in time.

Just at present the saints here are putting forth every energy to get a church building of their own, and are in a fair way to succeed, for a lot has been purchased and an order for the material is now ready to be sent in. We fully expect the building to be up in at least two or three months, which will be a great auxiliary in this city.

The saints at Hamilton have a little church of their own, and when there three weeks ago, I was greatly pleased to see it full of eager listeners. Both here and at Hamilton we have a prospering Sunday school, a thing that has long been needed in this country.

A few have been added to our numbers of late, and others are drawing near. I have noticed a marked change during the last year, that we have gained favor, both with God and men. The missionaries are laboring faithfully under the flag of truth and the prospects all around are good.

In bonds,

C. A. BUTTERWORTH,

PARK CITY, Utah, Nov. 21.

Editors Herald:—For the first time in this city the gospel in its purity was preached, plainer than ever I heard it told before, by our brother, H. O. Smith. He preached on the 12th and 13th in the hall that is occupied for preaching by the Utah Mormons. His subject was, "Why I am a Josephite." On Sunday night, the 15th, he was invited by the Bishop of the Utah Church at this place to preach once more, and once more they heard the law made plain by the power of God through his servant.

It just looks to-day as if a cyclone had struck the Utah Church, and some of their elders have been busying themselves all week trying to patch things up and put all in fair sailing again.

One lady said to one of her lady friends yesterday: "I heard you were going to join the Josephites."

"I am," said the friend, "and why not join with us, the two churches are just the same?"

"No," said the friend, "they are not the same, because I have heard your people preach for twelve years and I never could join them."

"But you just read that Saints' Herald and Ensign and hear Mr. Smith preach and you will see more difference between the two churches than there is between the sun and the moon—they are God's people and it is God's church, and I am with them."

May God help the honest in heart to come out from among them; and may God bless the elders in this field, because it is a hard one; but if they are all as able to unmask Utah Mormonism as Bro. H. O., and do it in as gentle and fearless a manner as he does it, they will surely win souls to Christ, and the enemy that has been hid in the cliffs of the mountains will have to come out sooner or later and face the servants of God; and that will be the end of their power.

May God bless the Herald, and may he ever have a watch and care for these good men that he has chosen to preach his gospel without purse or scrip to this wicked generation.

Yours for truth,

W. R. STEELE.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—I baptized Bro. Arthur Bickerton, of Fayette City, Pennsylvania, this evening. Bro. Arthur is a brother to William Bickerton and is, or was his first counselor up to the time of baptism. He is in his seventy-eighth year, but is as active as a man of sixty. I ordained him an elder, and I am confident that he will do some good yet, notwithstanding his old age.

Bro. Arthur is highly respected by both saint and sinner. His coming into the Reorganization has taken the backbone out of the Bickertonite Church on the Monongahela River.

I baptized Elder David Kennaday on the night of the 23d inst., of said church. Bro. Shinn is expected in the valley this week.

We feel happy and very hopeful. Surely the grand work of God is moving onward.

Yours hastily,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 27.

Editors Herald:—I find in this city some faithful men who toil hard during the week for the support of their families, and look after the interest of church evenings and Sundays. Bro. Arthur Allen has standing appointments out in the country, some twenty miles, that he visits twice a month. Bro. David Winn is in charge of the Kansas City branch No. 1, and he is always at his post. He too fills appointments outside of the branch. Bro. Joseph Emmett is president of Kansas City branch No. 2, a very willing worker. He baptized three last Sunday. I am glad that I can say that these brethren are indeed putting forth all they can to help the work along.

Last Sunday Bro. May delivered a very instructive sermon at the Armstrong branch, Kansas City, Kansas. That branch numbers nearly two hundred, and is passing through a very severe trial. I thought while Bro. May was speaking that his remarks were timely, and I trust the saints there will put into practice the instructions; if so, they will come out from under the cloud and the work there will move along.

I was much pleased with the movement now under headway by the four branches in the two Kansas City branches, assisted by the district officers to form a reunion and for the four branches to come together once every month for morning and afternoon service. I know that the move is a wise one for it has been tested by the four branches near Stewartville for the last five years or more. May it be put to the test, and I am satisfied that the result will be satisfactory. The four branches in these two cities can be a power for good when they work together in the spirit of the work.

I hope to form the acquaintance of the saints of the other two branches and to labor together in love for the spread of this work. If we would only all realize that this is God's work and that we will be held responsible for the part we take, there would be no need for us to stumble at others' mistakes.

Respectfully,

WM. LEWIS.

P. S.—As I have moved out of the Far West district, will the several branches in the district please instruct their delegates to our next conference who to support as district president, and to recommend as Bishop's agent. May the needed light and wisdom be given.

WILLIAM LEWIS.

FAYETTE CITY, Pa., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—I left home on the 3d inst. for Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and remained there over two Sundays. I truly enjoyed my short stay in the city. Bro. G. H. Hulmes is a true and faithful servant of God and he has a number of noble and able men as associate officers. All of these men seem to be alive to the interests of the work of God.

While in the city I had the pleasure of uniting Bro. Ralph G. Smith and Sr. Bertha S. Murdock, and Bro. C. E. Miller and Sr. Anna B. Shafer, in holy wedlock. Both of these young couples are held in high esteem, and truly they are true and faithful saints. They have been active workers in both Sunday school and church work for years gone by, and we have many reasons for believing that they will be a blessing to the work of God in the future.

How blest the sacred tie that binds
In union sweet according minds!
How swift the heavenly course they run,
Whose hearts, and faith, and hopes, are one.

I arrived in Banning, Pennsylvania, on the eve of the 20th inst., and preached in Mr. Wright's hall that same night. The next day Bro. Joseph Moxon and I came here and were kindly received by Bro. and Sr. Pirrie, also by Bro. and Sr. Hull. On Sunday I preached in the house of Bro. Hull at 2:30 p. m., and in Namoni Hall at night to a large audience. I speak there to-night again. Bro. Shinn will be here soon and I expect he will labor in this valley for some time. Mr. Arthur Bickerton attended both of my meetings yesterday and called to see me to-day. Bro. Joseph Moxon is busy at work and is doing a good work. Brn. Pirrie, John Kennaday, and all the rest of our people here are strong in the faith.

The saints at Wheeling are making a strong effort to procure a suitable lot farther up the city, on Jacob Street, with a view to build a new churchhouse. We will inform you of details later on.

All of my ministers are busy at work and report good being done.

Yours hastily,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

HARTFORD, Mich., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—Have held meetings here ten days up to date, evenings, conjointly with Bro. H. H. Robinson. Interest good; our little chapel crowded. Yesterday I buried by baptism into Christ Bro. and Sr. Hough. Others are thinking quite seriously. The effort of the saints here, of securing a house of worship, is commendable indeed. The work will grow as a result; has already moved; so speed along. Love to all.

In line,
S. W. L. SCOTT.

TILLAMOOK, Oregon, Nov. 6.

Editors Herald:—I left home on June 8 for the West, stopping at Independence, and heard a good sermon by Bro. J. R. Lambert. I met some of the saints and on the 10th left for Portland, Oregon, and arrived on Sunday morning and called on some of the saints—Mrs. B. V. Springer, Bro. and Sr. Cornell, and Bro. Bishop. Then I left for Tillamook City, close to Tillamook Bay, fifty miles from Astoria, Oregon, a fine little town.

I am in the Bible class in the M. E. Sunday school; sometimes I teach a class and sometimes open the school by prayer. I attend the Christian Church most of the time when not holding meeting, and have been called on to take charge of the same and preach several times in their church, with fair attendance.

I have been holding meetings of late in the Loterman schoolhouse, one mile in the country, but had to stop as the winter rains set in; but think I can make arrangement with the Adventists to use their chapel on Sundays; at least the ministers said there would be no trouble in getting it; then I will hold meetings every Sunday.

I am still in the faith. I find some opposition to the truth, but hope to be faithful to the end.

Yours,
B. F. DURFEE.

CANTON, Ill., Nov. 9.

Editors Herald:—My mind has of late been stationed upon these thoughts: We should never speak anything for truth which we know or believe to be false. Lying is a great sin against God, who gave us a tongue to speak truth and not falsehood. It is a great offense against humanity itself; for where there is no regard for truth, there can be no safe society between man and man.

As we must be careful not to lie, so we must avoid coming near it. We must not equivocate, nor speak anything positively for which we have no authority but report, or conjecture, or opinion.

Let us not be too earnest, loud, or violent in our conversation, when we are in company with light, vain, impertinent persons; let the observing of their failings make us the more cautious, both in conversation with them and in our general behavior, so that we may avoid their errors.

Speak well of the absent whenever we have an available opportunity. Never speak ill of them or of anybody else unless you are sure they deserve it; and not then, unless it is necessary for their amendment, or for the safety and benefit of others.

Be careful that we give no reproachful, spiteful, or threatening words to any person. Good words make friends; bad words make enemies. It is a great prudence to gain as many friends as we honestly can, especially when it may be done at so easy a rate as a good word, and it is great folly to make an enemy by ill words, which are of no advantage to the party who uses them.

When faults are committed they may, and by a superior, they must, be reprov'd; but let it be done without reproach or bitterness, otherwise it will lose its effect, and instead of reforming the offense, it will exasperate the offender, and lay the reprover justly open to reproof.

We will find that silence, or gentle words, are the most exquisite revenges for reproaches.

I hope, dear saints, that by these few weak thoughts, some one may be profited. I remain,

A sister in Christ,
IDA L. JONES.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

As a minute man and following advice of superiors—"to break up new ground," we started from a city in Northern Missouri on the mail cart, objective point twelve miles to the southeast, where we heard of a Union church (?) owned by the Christian brethren. Our mail carrier was of the Missourian type and rather a jovial fellow. Mail routes, politics, and religion, each demanded their share of time during the drive. Finally at a little post office store at the cross roads in the woods we were unloaded.

The church, a blacksmith shop, the little store, and the postmaster's house were all there was in view. While we took in the surroundings, feeling somewhat like a strange cat in a garret, the mail sack was relieved of a few letters, reloaded, handed back to the carrier, and he was soon lost in the forest. Arousing from our own serious thoughts, by a town chap of some seven summers, "Say Boss, who be you?" we stepped into the store, made inquiry as to the directors of the church, and were soon on our way to ask for a privilege to present a "doctrine everywhere spoken against."

Returning with the coveted prize, we next repaired to the country schoolhouse half mile away to publish our appointment for the evening. This accomplished we returned to the store to await developments, at the same time with our blandest smile trying to interest the postmaster, while eyeing a ten cent can of oysters, for which our stomach for the lack of dinner, to say the least, was anxious; and yet we had a gleaming hope that he would ask us to take supper with him and thereby save our ten cents; but in this we were disappointed, and as the darkness began to dim the shadows and the heavenly lights to gleam, we came to the conclusion that either the old man was not hungry or he was "onto our blandest smile."

Parting with the dime (which seemed loth to leave its lonely resting place) armed with the ten cent can of oysters, we repaired to the church, built the fires, trimmed the lamps, and then sat down to our frugal repast, wondering what the "harvest" would "be." Soon the natives began to come, in wagons, carriages, buggies, and the approved Missouri style—horseback "double," which means the young man and his sweetheart on one horse, she riding behind with her arm around him, merely to hold herself on of course. Crowds? well the woods are full of 'em: and, as Bro. Summerfield says, "Here her come."

T. W. CHATBURN.

FOREST, Ont., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here November 18th and since then have been busy, having preached every night but one, and three times on Sunday. I have preached four times in Arkona and twice in a schoolhouse.

To-night I enter discussion in Arkona. The gospel of Christ is to be thoroughly analyzed. I have no fears for the result, for God and truth make a majority in this world. I shall endeavor to do my part leaving the result with him, feeling assured he will take care of his own.

The work here progresses slowly. The people seem satisfied with the traditions in which they were cradled; and we hope through this discussion to reach many who have hitherto remained away from our meetings.

Yours in the faith,
BENJ. ST. JOHN.

THE NECESSITY FOR A REORGANIZATION
OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST
OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.—
NO. I.

BY ELDER HYRUM O. SMITH.

EVERYWHERE I go in Utah I am confronted with the question, "What was and is the need of a Reorganization?" It is a pertinent question, one of vital importance to all Latter Day Saints. Calling names, or denominating this one or that one an apostate, will do no good, but simply engender bitterness and remove farther away the ones we wish to reach and benefit; but none should object to being examined by what we find written in the books; in fact there cannot be any other way to judge and decide the question.

An apostate is one who has departed from a formulated system of belief or doctrine; and where such formulated belief or doctrine is known, it forms the only criterion by which to judge. All Latter Day Saints will agree that the Church of Christ was duly and properly organized on April 6, 1830, and that it moved along with great prosperity until June 27, 1844, when its earthly leader was killed. From that time it was scattered. Most of the different fragments have become extinct; either going back upon the faith entirely, or joining in with one of the two organizations: some with that in Utah, some with that known as the Reorganization; until the contention now lies between these two organizations as to which correctly represents the original church.

GOD'S WORD THE CRITERION.

My examination of the question at the head of this article and as to who departed from the faith will be confined to the examination of doctrines presented by the Utah Church, as it is that church that has constantly propounded this question to me. Other churches have what they call their discipline; Latter Day Saints have the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which answers the same purpose, setting forth the doctrine and usages of the church. Other church disciplines are man-made and can be changed; ours we claim is God-made and cannot be changed any more than God can change. So we have a sufficiently reliable and certain unchanging rule by which to examine and determine what is true and what is false doctrine; and to show that the above is true we quote from that authoritative standard:—

"And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings."

"Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things, shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues."—Doctrine and Covenants 42:5, 16. (Utah edition 42:12, 13, 59, 60.)

This plainly sets forth the fact that we must look to the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants for the doctrine or laws of the church; and condemnation is pronounced upon the one who departs from them if he indorses that departure.

Especially are these three books made the criterion by which the successor of the original founder of the church was to be judged. Speaking of Joseph Smith, the Lord says:—

"I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations, which are sealed, until I shall appoint another in his stead."

Then follows the statement:—

"And again, thou shalt take thy brother Hiram Page between him and thee alone, and tell him that those things which he hath written from that stone are not of me, and Satan deceiveth him; for, behold, these things have not been appointed unto him; neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants, for all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith."—D. C. 27:2, 4. (Utah edition 28:7, 12, 13.)

THE SUCCESSOR TO JOSEPH SMITH THE MARTYR.

What do the church covenants say in regard to the matter of a successor to Joseph Smith? I read:—

"But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."—D. C. 43:2. (Utah edition 43:4-7.)

There are several points in the above: The first is that no one is to be recognized as leader to the church and successor to the prophet unless he is appointed by Joseph Smith himself; the second (and the one I consider of the greatest importance) is that the one appointed to succeed the then leader of the church was to be ordained for an especial purpose; viz., "To teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."

This is a phase of the question that has been entirely ignored by Utah Church writers. They have considered the call that comes to a man sufficient to sanctify him, and that henceforth he should be above criticism, so far as his teaching and practice are concerned; or in the language of another: "Deeming the upright conduct as a matter easily dispensed with if so be they are called."

JOSEPH SMITH'S TEACHINGS ON PRIESTHOOD.

The Prophet Joseph Smith gives his views upon that question in a letter found in the Millennial Star, volume 17, page 85; (see also in the Utah edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, page 423,) which reads as follows:—

"Behold, there are many called, but few are chosen, And why are they not chosen? Because their hearts are set so much upon the things of this world, and aspire to the honors of men, that they do not learn this one lesson—That the rights of the priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven, and that the powers of heaven cannot be controlled nor handled only upon the principles of righteousness. That they may be conferred upon us, it is true; but when we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, or vain ambition, or to exercise control, or dominion, or compulsion, upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold, the heavens withdraw themselves; the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn amen to the priesthood, or the authority of that man. Behold! ere he is aware, he is left unto himself, to kick against the pricks; to persecute the saints, and to fight against God.

"We have learned, by sad experience, that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, they will immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion. Hence many are called, but few are chosen."

In this we are plainly given to understand that the approval of our work by God and the recognition of our acts officially will not depend entirely upon our call, but upon the righteousness with which we use the power given us. So with the one ordained and appointed to succeed the Prophet Joseph. He was to teach those revelations already given as well as to receive revelations to govern the church in the future; and even in the receiving of future revelations nothing was to be given contrary to the church covenants.

BRIGHAM AND HIS SUCCESSORS TESTED.

We shall now proceed to examine the claims of Brigham Young and his successors by the above, ignoring entirely the pompous claim made by his followers concerning his supposed transfiguration before the people, wherein he is said to have appeared and spoken as the Prophet Joseph, a transaction that has more of the appearance of spiritualism than of anything else, or an exhibition of his powers of imitation and mimicry, in which those who knew him claim he was an adept.

We will simply call attention to the fact, in passing, that Brigham Young never claimed to have been officially appointed by Joseph Smith as his successor; so in that he claimed something had been appointed to him contrary to the church covenants, which declares that no one shall be appointed except it be through Joseph, and even though he should so far transgress as to lose his prophetic power, that he would still retain the power to appoint another in his stead; and that this should be a law unto the church. Here was departure number one. The main departure from the faith, or that which at least made every other departure possible was Brigham Young's council tending to the ignoring of the written word and placing the "living oracles" above that which was written. This seems to have been a common error into which men have fallen in the past. The Jewish nation relied more upon their Rabbis than upon the law, and the tradition of the elders became a stumblingblock to their acceptance of Christ. Brigham Young was a shrewd man in some respects. He saw the love the people had for their martyred leader, and saw that nothing could be forced upon them, unless it bore at least his implied approval; consequently, every measure, no matter how absurd, was given to the people as one of Joseph's measures. One is forcibly reminded of some of the transactions of the Jewish Rabbis, as found in the Talmud. Rev. Bernhard Pick in his work, "The Talmud, What It Is?" relates the manner in which one Hillel, a Babylonian, obtained favor of the Jews and became the leading Rabbi in his day.

"On the death of Shemaiah and Abtalion there were no qualified successors to take their place and two sons of Betheria, otherwise unknown, occupied it for a time. They were discussing one of the trivial ceremonial questions of the day. It was the grave problem (as it seemed to them) as to whether the Paschal lamb might be killed on the Sabbath. In their perplexity they asked, 'Was there none present who had been the disciple of the two who had been so honored?' (viz., Shemaiah and Abtalion). The question was answered by Hillel, the Babylonian. He solved the difficulty with reasons from analogy, from the text and from the context. They refused his decision until he ended by saying: 'Thus have I heard from my masters Shemaiah and Abtalion.' Having before been regarded as a stranger from Babylon he was now welcomed as chief."—The Talmud, What Is It? page 18.

So Brigham Young knew the power of the name of Joseph Smith, and used it for all it was worth; and no measure failed to carry if it was backed up by the statement that "Joseph said this," or "Joseph said that."

DEPARTURE NO. 1.

As a proof of his ignoring the written word, and thereby forever establishing the fact that he was not the one to succeed the Prophet, let us read from the trial of Sidney Rigdon, as published in the Times and Seasons, volume 5, the extracts we quote being found on pages 647-666. The dishonesty and cunning of the man are displayed in the use of Joseph and Hyrum Smith's names in connection with the measures of the Twelve. This is found on page 647. His unfair statement of the case is as follows:—

"The business of the day will result in this thing: all those who are for Joseph and Hyrum, the Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the Temple and Joseph's measures, and for the Twelve; they being one party; will be called upon to manifest their principles openly and boldly. Then we wish all who are of the opposite parties to enjoy the same liberty, and to be as decided and bold, and to show their principles as boldly, and be as decided as they are in their secret meetings and private councils. If they are for Sidney Rigdon and believe he is the man to be the first president and the leader of this people, we wish them to manifest it as freely as they do in other places; because this will form another party.

"We want all those who are for Lyman Wight and his measures, to show themselves openly and boldly; and all those for James Emmett and his measures, to show themselves. We wish them to withdraw to-day without fear and to be as bold here as they are in other places. They may as well show themselves boldly, for I know where they live, and I know their names: I can point them out if necessary."

Notice here, that he says the Twelve are for the Book of Doctrine and Covenant, for Joseph, Hyrum, the Book of Mormon, etc.; and he says that all are at liberty to vote against them if they please, but they must do so evidently at their peril. If you will turn to pages 665 and 666 you will read that after a number had spoken against Sidney Rigdon that there is a call made for anyone that wishes to speak in favor:—

"President William Marks arose and said he felt disposed to say a few words in defense of Elder Rigdon. There has been a strong team against him. They all seem to speak against him and there is nothing said in his favor. I feel to take up the opposite side of the question and say something in his defense, for I have always been a friend to Elder Rigdon. It has always been the case before this High Council, that there are two sides to the question; there are some to speak in favor of the accused, but there seems to be only one side to this subject. There has been many things said which I know nothing about. But as it has always been the case before the High Council that some should speak in the defense of the accused, I feel to volunteer to speak in his behalf. It is no more than right that both sides should be represented. I don't wish to justify any man in an error, but there is a trial before this church and council."

Then follows an argument in behalf of Elder Rigdon, in which Elder Marks brings to his aid copious extracts from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. And upon commenting upon the Doctrine and Covenants we find that Elder Marks was right in insisting that some one should speak in behalf of the accused. In section 99, (102 Utah edition), the minutes of the organization of the High Council are given, and we read there that the council is to be equally divided and numbered:—

"Those councilors who draw even numbers, that is, 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, and 12 are the individuals who are to stand up in the behalf of the accused, and prevent insult or injustice."

In reply to this straight-forward, manly speech Brigham Young says, page 666:—

"I have known that Brother Marks 'had no evidence but the written word;' but if this people have no evidence but the written word, it is quite time to go to the river and be baptized for the remission of their sins. . . . Brother Marks says, if there are any ordained to offices equal with Elder Rigdon he don't know it. He don't know all the ordinations, nor he won't till he knows something more than the written word." . . .

"As to a person not knowing more than the written word, let me tell you that there are keys that the written word never spoke of, nor never will."

This illustrates how much Brigham was acquainted with the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and the Book of Mormon. Although he had just stated that the Twelve, Joseph, and Hyrum, and these two books formed one party, just as soon as Elder Marks used the books against him, he repudiated that which is written; and instead of agreeing with the word which says that the Book of Mormon contains the fullness of the gospel, he says, "There are keys which the written word never spoke of, nor never will." I agree with Brother Brigham that his religious philosophy at least contains things that God's written word never spoke of; but pardon me if I do not believe that he, Joseph, Hyrum, and the books form one party; I must look elsewhere for a more consistent mixture. Surely the reader can see that whatever the call of Brigham Young may have been, he failed to carry it out in accordance with righteousness and true holiness.

DEPARTURE NO. 2.

To show that this departure is still maintained and counseled in the Utah Church, I quote from speeches of men who are supposed to be representative men in that organization. Elder Joseph E. Taylor, counselor to Angus M. Cannon, President of the Salt Lake Stake, said in a speech made in a priesthood meeting held in Salt Lake City, the minutes of which appeared in the Semi-Weekly Deseret News, of August 7, 1894:—

"That he deprecated the conduct of certain persons, members of the church, who were always judging and criticising their leaders by what was written in the books, placing the dead letter above the living oracles. He showed that the written word, being a record of the past, was not always applicable to present conditions. Hence the necessity of inspired leaders, whose teachings had the precedence of instructions given under other circumstances and conditions."

Elder Abraham H. Cannon, one of the Apostles of the Utah Church, in a sermon delivered in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, at the October conference of 1894, is reported in the Daily News as follows:—

"Elder Cannon said he desired to speak against a spirit that had been growing to some extent among some of the younger members of this church who had given their time to the study of theology. There was a danger against which they should guard themselves, and this lay in a disposition toward a criticism of the doctrines of the church as presented by the living authorities. When any council came from President Woodruff which seemed to be in conflict with the written word of God, we should follow the living oracles, and the time would come when we would appreciate a reconciliation of these."

Honest criticism never hurts the truth nor the true man. Dishonest criticism hurts only the man who uses it; so why wait for a reconciliation? Such doctrine and teaching as this opened the door for all manner of evil and was and is the direct cause of every departure from the faith.

The Jewish Rabbis before alluded to, were supposed by their followers to be infallible in their decisions and counsels, and on one occasion Hillel and Shammai gave their decisions on the question of whether an egg laid upon the Sabbath day could be lawfully eaten, and it happened that in this famous dispute about the egg, as in similar ones, Hillel was right against Shammai. Here was a dilemma: the Jews had been committed to the doctrine of infallibility for their Rabbis, so it is reported that a voice was heard from heaven saying: "The words of both are the words of the living God, but the rule of the school of Hillel is to be followed."—"The Talmud, What It Is," page 24.

Some such method as this would have to be resorted to in reconciling the teachings of the Utah church leaders with the written word, but it is not satisfactory to the honest seeker after truth; and I must confess that I am not so constituted that I can appreciate it.

Conference Minutes.

INDEPENDENCE.

Conference convened at Lee's Summit, Missouri, November 7, 1896, President R. May and Bro. J. W. Brackenburg in the chair. Elders I. N. White, G. H. Hilliard, J. W. Brackenburg, and R. May gave short reports. Branch reports: Independence, First Kansas City, Lee's Summit, Pleasant View, Knobnoster, Chelsea Park, Holden, and Burtville. Bishop's agent's report read, also treasurer's report. Both referred to an auditing committee. Elders' reports: R. May, J. W. Brackenburg, I. N. White, G. H. Hilliard, James Anderson, Henry Resch, Arthur Allen, Jay Hoffman, Alfred White, J. Armstrong, D. F. Winn, B. J. Scott, Nels Abraham, S. J. Madden, C. Depew, R. W. Davis, G. W. Lush, and George Hawley. Priests: Walter Smith, A. J. Rudd, J. H.

Stratton, A. E. Weidman, G. H. Wells, J. I. Young, and G. E. Lush. Bro. R. May reported that he had ordained Bro. Nels Abraham an elder. Auditing committee reported the Bishop's agent's report should read as follows: On hand last report $27.21, received since $552, paid out $559.05, balance on hand $40.16. Also treasurer's report should read: On hand last report 45 cents, received since $8.55, paid out $5.79, balance on hand $3.21. A report from the Sunday school convention was read, which was very encouraging. A bill was presented to conference by Bro. James Anderson for $7.50. The treasurer was ordered to pay Bro. Anderson $2.50, and the balance $5, and was referred back to the Chelsea Park and First Kansas City branches. By motion the present officers were authorized to hold over until next conference. Preaching in the evening by Alfred White. Sunday morning sermon by G. H. Hilliard. Afternoon meeting was in charge of A. Allen and J. W. Brackenbury. One that was baptized during the conference was confirmed and a good meeting was enjoyed by all present. Sunday evening Bro. I. N. White preached after which a vote of thanks was tendered the Lee's Summit saints for their kindness in entertaining the visiting saints. Adjourned to Independence, Missouri, the first Saturday and Sunday after the first Monday in March, 1897.

NODAWAY.

Conference of the Nodaway district convened at Guilford, Missouri, October 17, 18, 1896. Bro. Henry Kemp was chosen to act as president. Elders reporting: John Hawley, Ole Madison, W. Woodhead, Bro. Powell, J. T. Ford, E. Fannon, R. K. Ross, H. Kemp, C. C. Nelson baptized 1. Priests, A. Jenson, R. F. Hill. Teacher H. Froyd. Deacon W. B. Torrence. Branch reports: Rising Hope 18. Ross Grove 34, Bedison 35. Sweet Home 44. Platt 78. Bishop's agent's report: On hand February 28, $14.50; received since $50.30; paid out $30; on hand $34.80. William Woodhead was elected president of the district. Bishop's agent and secretary sustained. Conference adjourned to meet at Sweet Home, February 12-14, 1897.

NORTHWEST KANSAS.

Conference convened at Goshen, November 14. H. Hart, president, C. D. Carson, secretary. Elders reporting by letter: L. F. Johnson, H. Hart, W. Landers, and V. F. Rogers. Priests, W. H. Bivens and J. S. McClure. Teacher, C. D. Carson. Branch reports: Elmira, 62; number baptized 8, 1 received, 16 removed. Blue Rapids, 78; 6 baptized. Goshen, 82; 1 baptized, 2 by letter. Solomon River, 16. Scandia, 18. Rural Dale 25. Bishop's agent reported on hand last report $2.42, received $16.50, expended $17, on hand $1.92. H. Hart president, and Ella Landers secretary, were sustained for the ensuing year. L. F. Johnson and Wm. Landers were granted elder's licenses. Preaching by A. Kent, J. Alfred Davis, and Bro. Bivens. After a vote of thanks to the Goshen saints for their hospitality, adjourned to March, 1897, with the Blue Rapids branch.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

Conference convened at Free Soil, Mason County, October 24, 1896. J. J. Cornish, president, R. E. Grant, associate, C. B. Joice, secretary. Elders' reports: J. H. Peters, David Smith baptized 14, R. W. Hugill baptized 1, R. E. Grant baptized 13, J. J. Bailey baptized 1, Jacob Kaplinger, W. D.

Ellis baptized 1, J. J. Cornish baptized 25, C. G. Lewis, R. Davis baptized 2. Priests R. W. Kenyon, James Davis baptized 2, H. D. McIntyre, John Pennels, Amos Berve, J. P. Titus, J. E. Hanson. Branch reports: Boyne City 54; Kingsley 41; Chase 55; Freesoil 108; Wilson 13; South Boardman 88; Coleman 128. Bishop's agent's report read, audited, and accepted. F. H. Brooks presented petition for rehearing of his case; after debate, motion was lost. It was the sense of this conference that parties cut off from the church cannot be legally received into this church by baptism until they have made proper restitution for former wrongs (as far as they can) and bring forth works that prove a sincere repentance of former wrongdoing. J. J. Cornish was sustained as district president and Bishop's agent; C. B. Joice as secretary. Preaching by R. E. Grant, F. M. Cooper, J. J. Cornish, and W. D. Ellis. Adjourned to June, 1897; date and place to be appointed by president.

DES MOINES.

Conference convened with the Valley branch at Runnels, October 3, 1896. W. C. Nirk presiding, assisted by Bishop Kelley, W. Johnson secretary, assisted by S. Armstrong. The conference was all that could be expected for unity and peace. The preaching was excellent; Bishop Kelley and Columbus Scott being the speakers. Yet in all our joy there was a tinge of sadness at the absence by death of Bro. William Thompson. Branch reports: Angus, Des Moines, Des Moines Valley, Richland, What Cheer, Oskaloosa. Ministry reports: Of the Seventy, C. Scott and J. S. Roth. Elders, W. C. Nirk, W. H. Kephart, J. W. Morgan, W. Johnson, N. Stamm, P. P. Batten. Priests, V. W. Gundersol and John Barnes. Bishop's agent's report: Received $149.26, expended $129.80, balance on hand $19.46. Speeches by Bishop Kelley, Columbus Scott, J. S. Roth, and W. H. Kephart. A resolution was adopted to draft a letter of sympathy to Sr. Thompson and it to be published in Herald and Ensign. Adjourned to meet at Des Moines, February, 1897, at the call of the district officers.

CLINTON.

Conference of Clinton district convened at Coal Hill chapel, near Eldorado, Missouri, November 14; Abner Lloyd president, Ella Miller clerk, E. W. Lloyd assistant. Elders' reports: A. DAVISON.—At Auburn, Nebraska, August 25, 1896, to Mr. Franklin Davison and Sr. Jane Davison a son, and named George Franklin. Blessed November 15, 1896, by Elder W. E. Peak.

KING.—To Bro. and Sr. King, of West Pullman, Illinois, September 27, 1896, a daughter, and named Annie Truth. Blessed at home, Sunday, November 10, 1896, by Elder William Strange.

KING.—To Bro. Corydon and Sr. Addie King, September 9, 1892, a daughter, and named Edna Fern. Blessed at Roxbury, Virginia, November 9, 1896, by Elder F. C. Smith.

MARRIED.

KRAHL—GARDNER.—Bro. D. J. Krahl and Sr. Grace L. Gardner were united in marriage Wednesday evening, November 18, 1896, at the church in St. Joseph, Missouri. Socially and religiously this young couple stand high in the estimation of church and social circles. They occupied similar and responsible positions in two of the leading wholesale houses of the city. Sr. Gracie was modestly and beautifully attired in light drab trimmed in cream satin and lace, and carried flowers. The church was profusely decorated with ferns and chrysanthemums banked about the altar. Many costly and useful presents were received, consisting of silver and cut glass, and china-ware, and furniture. After a hasty supper at the home of the bride they took the 8:45 p. m. train for St. Louis. They will locate in St. Joseph. Elder J. M. Terry officiated in the sacred rite in the presence of a large audience of invited guests.

MILLER—SHAFER.—At Allegheny City, Pennsylvania, November 19, 1896, by Apostle G. T. Griffiths, Sr. Anna B. Shafer and Bro. C. Ed Miller.

CHEW—BRITAIN. At the home of the bride's mother, Sr. Chew, in Atchison, Kansas, Sr. Maggie E. Chew and Mr. B. F. Brittain were united in marriage in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. A sumptuous supper was prepared and enjoyed by about thirty guests. Many presents betokened the high esteem in which the young couple were held. They will make their home in Atchison. Elder J. M. Terry, of St. Joseph, Missouri, officiated.

DIED.

BLACKMAN.—Shirley Deane, little son of C. H. and Amy Blackman, was born January 8, 1896; died October 8, 1896, aged 9 months and 6 hours. Funeral services from Latter Day Saint's chapel, Magnolia, Iowa. Sermon by Elder A. M. Fyrando.

RAPER.—At Los Angeles, California, June 15, 1895, Joseph F. Raper. Born July 1, 1861, at Forest City, Sierra County, California. Baptized into the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, at Santa Marie, Santa Barbara County, California, October 7, 1894, by Elder R. R. Dana, and confirmed same date and place by Elders R. R. Dana and Charles Baly.

FRY.—William F. Fry, born April 6, 1859, died November 10, 1896, after an illness of six weeks. He was not a member of the church, but his parents, Henry and Eliza Fry, were, as also his wife. These are left to mourn, as well as four little children. Funeral services from the Christian church, Missouri Valley, Iowa. Sermon by A. M. Fyrando.

WATSON.—Brother William Watson of Tacoma, Washington, of the firm of Watson, Olds & Co., died at his home November 1, 1896. Funeral services at the Congregational church, November 3, Rev. Smith officiating. A kind husband, father and friend has left many to mourn his sudden departure from this stage of action. Bro. Watson was noted in Tacoma and vicinity for his honest dealings with and his kindness toward his fellow-men. He remembered those in want, and never forgot the traveling ministry who called at his house. May the Lord comfort Sr. Watson in her bereavement. Bro. Watson and wife joined the old church in England, and some time after left England for Salt Lake City; but finding out the falacy of that organization they shortly after joined the Reorganization.

HOLT.—At Pawtucket, Rhode Island, November 9, 1896, Lydia A., wife of John Holt, in her sixty-fifth year. Prayer from her late residence, rear 45 River Street, Wednesday, November 11, at eight a. m. Funeral private. Burial at Woonsocket.

GRIFFITHS.—At Higbee, Missouri, Sr. Margaret Griffiths departed this life June 14, 1896. She was born May 11, 1835, at Dowlais, Glamorganshire, South Wales. She united with the church when ten years old. In the early days of the church was rebaptized into the Reorganized Church by Charles Derry, in South Wales. She bore her sufferings patiently and died firm in the faith, and in hope of a part in the first resurrection. Funeral sermon by Elder A. J. Cato.

Beloved friends, weep not for her,
Whose place is vacant here;
Your loss is great, but she has gained
A brighter, happier sphere.
You'll then behold her, face to face,
Where no rude hand shall tear
You from each other's warm embrace,
Nor cause a sorrow there.

WRIGHT.—Bro. William Wright passed from this life on the night of November 12, 1896, at his home in Hamilton Township, Decatur County, Iowa, aged 66 years, 4 months, and 27 days. He was born in Sandy Creek, Oswego County, New York, June 15, 1830. He united with the Saints' Church, December 12, 1875, and in that faith he lived a quiet and unassuming life until the end. Four sisters and two grandchildren survive him. Two of his sisters, Mrs. Lydia Ann Moffet and Acenath Dereemer, were with him during the closing days; he had been stricken with paralysis four days before the release came. Funeral services conducted by Elder M. M. Turpen November 14; interment in Dale cemetery; sermon by Elder Duncan Campbell at the Holden Baptist church, Sunday, November 15, 1896; Scripture lesson, Psalm 23; text, Hebrews 9:27.

WHEATON.—At his home in Reed City, Michigan, November 11, 1896, Bro. Silas W. Wheaton passed from this life and went to try the realities of another. Bro. Wheaton was born in New York, February 6, 1817, having lived nearly fourscore years. He was baptized into the church in 1844 a few months before the death of the martyrs; was at one time about to go to Salt Lake with others, but was hindered by some cause. Shortly after his baptism he was ordained an elder, and assisted in administering the word to some of his fellow men, as circumstances permitted. He lived a good exemplary life, and was respected by all who knew him. He was ready to go, and died happy. He leaves his wife (with whom he has lived over sixty years) two sons, several grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn his departure. The funeral sermon was preached in the Swedish church by J. J. Cornish.

COPELAND.—Jeremiah S. Copeland was born December 12, 1820, in Green county, Ohio, came to Fayette County, Iowa, in 1865, and to Decatur County in 1892. He died near Pleasanton, November 16, 1896, aged 75 years, 11 months, and 4 days. He was married to Margaret A. Lockhart July 17, 1842, and was the father of seven children of whom five survive him. His son, John, and daughter, Cynthia, were by his bedside when the end came. His wife died nearly six years ago. He had been from early youth a member of the Christian Church in which faith he continued till the close of his long life. Funeral services at the Saints' church, Pleasanton, November 18, by Elder Duncan Campbell. Interment in Hamilton cemetery, prayer at the grave by Elder A. W. Moffet.

REED.—At Chesterfield, Henderson County, Tennessee, Esther Naomi, daughter of S. and S. A. Reed, died October 10, 1896. She had been a great sufferer for about nine years. Deceased was born May 26, 1882; embraced the gospel August 28, 1895; baptized by Elder W. R. Smith, and was faithful until death. She leaves father, mother, three sisters, and six brothers to mourn her departure.

We laid her away in deep sadness,
Yet not without hope in our breast;
If faithful we shall meet her with gladness,
And enter that heavenly rest.

KEARNS.—Claricie Iona, daughter of N. E. and Sr. S. A. Kearns, was born October 24, 1892, in Thomas County, Kansas; died October 17, 1896, near Vera Cruz, Missouri. Claricie leaves her parents and three brothers to mourn her loss. She was blessed by Elder Samuel Paine. Funeral services by C. J. Spurlock.

WALLER.—Harold Burton, son of B. N. and Sr. K. P. Waller; born May 14, 1895, died October 29, 1896, aged 1 year, 5 months, and 15 days. Cause of death, diphtheretic croup. Owing to quarantine regulations the funeral was private; Elder T. W. Williams conducting the service, the funeral being from the home on Platner Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

CATO.—Sister Sabrinia Ann, wife of Elder E. W. Cato, was born June 2, 1819, in Alabama; died November 13, 1896; aged 77 years, 5 months, and 11 days. She was baptized by Elder William Litz, in Alabama; died firm in the faith and was a noble saint. She rests in the paradise of God and her works follow her. Funeral sermon by R. L. Ware, in Saints' church, Wakenda branch, near her home. She leaves three sons and four daughters and quite a number of grandchildren to mourn.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

POSITIVELY LIMITED TO DECEMBER 24.

Never will there be another special offer made on this great Standard Dictionary and Encyclopaedia of all the world's knowledge. This is positively the last chance you will ever have to secure the work on such extremely liberal terms. We fully intended to advance the price to regular rates on Nov. 30, but thousands of people in all walks of life have requested an extension of time until Christmas. After careful consideration we have decided to continue our special offer until the above date. This is done simply and only as a further means of advertising this wonderful storehouse of information. We do not expect to make money by this offer, as the very low price on such liberal terms barely pays for paper, printing and binding, saying nothing of the enormous investment of over $750,000 required in the production of the work. The tremendous amount of talk created will help to advertise this most modern and entirely up-to-date home reference library. No advertisement can do it justice—it is its own most eloquent advocate.

FOR A CHRISTMAS GIFT NOTHING COULD BE BETTER.

Your pastor, teacher, friend, parents, or your children will appreciate this great work beyond expression. It will last a life-time, and always give satisfaction. No business or professional man, teacher, student, mechanic, housewife, or any other person who wishes to keep abreast of the times, or who is interested in the laudable enterprise of self-education, can allow this rare opportunity to pass without careful investigation. The new and entirely up-to-the-times embodies all the features of a complete dictionary and a thorough encyclopaedia. Until December 24th this truly marvelous work will be furnished any reader of this announcement on receipt of only $1.00 in cash and the remainder in small monthly payments, amounting to about five cents a day. This is but little more than one-third the regular price. After December 24th prices will be immediately restored to regular rates—$42.00 to $70.00 a set, according to binding.

DON'T FORGET! This Special Offer holds good only until Christmas Eve, at which time the price will be advanced to $42 to $70 a set.

Superb New Edition, Revised to June 1, 1896, contains thousands of the newer words not found in any other reference book on earth, including the very latest coinages of '96, such as "Roentgen rays," "aseptolin," — "vitascope," — "sklagraph," "fluoroscope," etc. It is the only up-to-date dictionary, the most practical encyclopaedia, and also a genuine tronomy; Sir John Stainer, music; Hunter, Morris, Escofet, Herrage, Williams—the most brilliant educators of the nineteenth century.

More than $750,000 Required to Produce this Work.

IT IS THE ONLY REFERENCE WORK ON EARTH that contains satisfactory and up-to-date encyclopaedic treatment of such important topics of to-day as the following: Battleship, bimetalism, money, wages, germ theory, Arctic explorations, tariff, Christian Endeavor, appendicitis, shadow-photography, electrocution, steam navigation, and hundreds of others.

IT IS THE LATEST AND BEST DICTIONARY of our language. Each legitimate English word is exhaustively treated as to its origin, history, development, spelling, pronunciation, and various meanings.

IT IS A CONCISE ENCYCLOPÆDIA of anatomy, botany, chemistry, zoology, geology, art, music, physics, philosophy, mathematics, mechanics, theology, biblical research, etc. 50,000 separate encyclopaedic subjects, including the latest inventions and discoveries, tersely treated by educators of vast renown.

IT IS A SUPERB LIBRARY BOOK, printed on high grade white paper, from plates never before on press, durably bound, and containing the most superb illustrations, in 17 colors and in monotone, ever made for any reference work.

IT IS BETTER THAN ALL OTHER DICTIONARIES because it is the latest and most complete, containing nearly twice as many words as are in the largest "unabridged," and treating 20,000 more encyclopaedic subjects than are covered by other cyclopaedias costing from $50 to $200. There is no other publication in its class.

TWO EXPERT OPINIONS—THOUSANDS SIMILAR.

Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst.—"The Encyclopaedic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes; a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quintessence, and, what, as delicate in detail as it is comprehensive in contents."

"Scientific American," New York.—"It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."

HANDSOME ILLUSTRATED BOOK of 100 Specimen Pages Sent Free on Request.

HOW TO ORDER: Send $1.00 and the four handsome volumes will be forwarded. Subsequent payments are made as follows: Cloth binding, $1.50 a month for one year; Half-Russia binding, $2.00 a month, and Full Sheep binding, $2.50 a month. First payment in any case is only $1.00. To cash buyers we allow a discount of 10 per cent, and furnish the book-case free of charge; otherwise the book-case is $1.50, which must be paid in advance. This allowance represents cost of keeping monthly payment accounts. We recommend Half-Russia binding as most serviceable. When ordering be sure to mention style binding wanted. All transportation charges must be paid by purchaser. We refer to any Commercial Agency, any newspaper or any bank in Philadelphia. AGENTS WANTED. [Mention this paper.] Books Guaranteed as Represented or Money Refunded if Returned in 10 Days.

CAUTION! Beware of imitators who have copied our methods of advertising, even to the wording, and are offering old editions as "damaged" and reprints of ancient encyclopaedias, slightly revamped and under new titles, as new and original works. The genuine Encyclopaedic Dictionary is complete in four volumes, with 5,353 pages. We can be responsible for no orders except those sent directly to us.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush.....25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding....35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

RUSSIA AND CHINA CONVENTION.

ACCORDING to a telegram from Tokio, November 11, a convention was concluded in Peking on September 30 whereby some remarkable concessions were made by the Chinese Government to Russia, the consideration being, of course, the Czar's intervention to obtain Japan's retrocession of the Liau-Tung Peninsula and his procurement of the money needed to meet the first installment of the war indemnity. Let us mark what these concessions are and consider how they are likely to affect the future position of the Manchu dynasty.

The convention provides that the Russian Trans-Siberian railway may be carried straight through Manchuria, thus avoiding the great circuitous route along the Amoor River. It is also agreed that the projected Chinese system of railways shall be brought into connection with the Russian, and, further, that China may, if she chooses, delegate to Russia the task of constructing the contemplated lines from Kirin to Shan-Hai-Kuan and Port Arthur. It is also provided that lines forming part of the Russian system, but running through Chinese territory, shall be purchasable by China after a period of thirty years, and that lines forming part of the Chinese system, but built by Russia at China's request, may be purchased by China after a period of ten years. It is improbable that the option thus stipulated for will ever be exercised.

All the money that the Peking Government can secure for many years to come will be needed to discharge the indemnity due Japan, to equip a new army with perfected weapons, and to construct a new armored fleet. For the last named purpose alone a huge sum will be needed, if it be true that Li Hung Chang has determined to acquire no fewer than six great ironclads, besides twelve armored cruisers of the first class and twenty of the second and third class.

Pending the very doubtful exercise of the option mentioned, which is probably asked for merely to "save the face" of the Chinese Emperor, his Manchurian and Chinese subjects dwelling along the lines which are to be built by the Czar's engineers will become habituated to the presence and ascendancy of the Russians.

For the latter are to have the right not only to station troops along all the railways constructed by them, but also to work mines throughout Manchuria.

Other clauses of the convention provide that China's Manchurian levies shall be drilled by Russian officers, and also lease to Russia part of Kiauchow, and covenant that in cases of emergency Russia shall have the use of Port Arthur and Talien. Every facility is also stipulated for Russian traders and travelers.

The practical outcome of these extraordinary concessions will be that by the end of ten, twenty, or thirty years the whole of the Chinese Empire north of the great wall will be controlled by Russia, and the Gulf of Pe-chi-li will have become virtually a Russian lake.

A glance at the map will show that such a state of things would be incompatible with the maintenance of the capital at Peking, and there are, therefore good grounds for crediting the report that the Chinese court contemplates removal to a point nearer the center of the empire. As long as Manchuria afforded the foreign Manchu dynasty its only solid basis of support, the instinct of self-preservation would naturally fix the Emperors of that house at Peking, which is only a short distance south of the great wall. But the moment Manchuria becomes virtually Russian, Peking becomes insecure, and the sole expedient course left to the Manchu dynasty, if it would retain its independence, is to invoke the support of its Chinese subjects, and, to that end, to place itself in the heart of the country. If the court wishes to appeal to historical associations, it might be expected to go to Nankin, which was the capital during the brightest period of the Ming dynasty, but perhaps the connection of that city with the Tae-Ping rebellion would render residence there distasteful.

According to the report which comes to us, the place selected is Hankow, situated on the northern bank of the Yang-tse-Kiang, at its junction with the Han River, about 450 miles west of Shanghai. Hankow has been for some time the principal commercial center of the middle portion of the Chinese Empire, and there is a great concentration of population in the immediate neighborhood. Before the Tae-Ping war, the brunt of which fell on this region, the three sister cities of Hankow, Hanyang, and Wuchang are said to have had over 5,000,000 inhabitants. At present Hankow has from 600,000 to 800,000. It is, however, a free port, and there are four foreign settlements, belonging respectively to the Russians, the British, the French, and the Germans. The establishment of the seat of empire in an open port accessible at all times to foreigners would certainly imply a striking change of view on the part of the dynasty, and, at first, perhaps, would be regarded with misgiving by its Chinese subjects. It may be argued, however, that the great distance of Hankow from the sea and the ease with which the Yang-tse-Kiang might be fortified at many points, render the place exceedingly defensible; while the choice of it may commend itself to a progressive minister like Li Hung Chang, by the knowledge that the construction of railways northward to Peking and southward to Canton, would quickly follow the removal of the court to Hankow.

On the whole, there seems to be no doubt that a great awakening of China cannot be long deferred. The presence of the Russians in Manchuria, and the resultant development of that hitherto neglected province, cannot fail to operate as impressive object lessons; and the new and difficult situation created for the Manchu dynasty, whereby it is forced to seek new champions and new resources among the natives of China proper, must needs strengthen the intelligent hands of Li Hung Chang.—Ex.

WINNING ON ITS MERITS.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY CLOSES ITS SECOND YEAR WITH SALES INCREASED FOUR-FOLD.

A semi-humorous contemporary has recently referred to The Encyclopædic Dictionary as "the Jonah's gourd of literature," the allusion being, of course, to the rapid and altogether unprecedented development of that now famous reference work. It may be further said, however, that The Encyclopædic shows no signs of "withering," although it is reasonably certain that sundry worms have been unsuccessfully nibbling at its root.

It would not have been believed two years ago that a new-comer in the ranks of standard reference works could win a commanding place among the giants of lexicography already in the field; yet within that period The Encyclopædic has forged its way to the very front, with growing popularity and a steadily increasing sale, now said to equal that of all its competitors combined.

This phenomenal success is largely due to persistent and liberal advertising, more than $250,000 having been so expended by the Syndicate Publishing Co. during the two years; yet this vast sum would have been practically wasted but for the acknowledged superiority of the work itself, which combines all the essentials of a complete, up to date dictionary and a condensed general encyclopædia of the most practically useful character. The new edition, now on sale, is revised to date and contains hundreds of new words and definitions not found in any of the older works. The added illustrations are superb. One of the striking features is the magnificent array of chromatic plates in seventeen colors, among which we note 109 exact facsimiles of rare and beautiful postage stamps, representing more than 100 different nations; a large double plate showing lifelike types of all the human races; another presenting the wonderful creatures of the deep sea, etc. None of these appear in any similar work within our knowledge. Another very handsome plate shows "Flags of all Nations" in their correct forms and colors—115 separate designs. This plate has just been prepared under the special guidance of the U. S. Treasury Department, and is therefore entirely authentic.

The Syndicate Company now announce one last chance to secure this invaluable home library at less than half the regular prices, and on the easiest terms imaginable. A first payment of only $1.00 secures immediate possession of this entire work, the remainder being payable in small installments covering a whole year. Sample pages are sent free on request. We do not hesitate to advise every one of our readers to communicate with the publishers at once with a view to taking up their very liberal offer. The time is limited to December 24th, and all orders must be placed before that date. It should be remembered that the only genuine edition contains 5,359 pages, and is published in Philadelphia by the well-known Syndicate Publishing Co.

In the December Review of Reviews President Walter L. Hervey, of the Teachers' College, New York, writes on "The Sunday Schools: Their Shortcomings and Their Great Opportunity." President Hervey's article will attract general attention; it is written from the pedagogical viewpoint, and its suggestions are of the greatest practical importance to Sunday school teachers. The question of lesson-papers is discussed with great frankness and intelligence.

The December Arena is a brilliant number. It opens with a well-written and eminently sensible article on "The Relation of Art to Religion," by the widely known sculptor, William Ordway Partridge, and closes with another of Will Allen Dromgoole's inimitable short stories entitled "Sweet 'Laases," in which, as usual, the humor and pathos are deliciously blended. Within these limits are to be found valuable papers on a great variety of subjects, in proof of which it is sufficient to cite merely the names of some of their writers: Prof. Frank Parsons of Boston University School of Law, Edward Everett Hale, D. D., Mary A. Livermore, Lillian Whiting, Camille Flammarion, the great French astronomer, Eltweed Pomeroy, B. O. Flower, Ellen M. Henrotin, etc. Camille Flammarion contributes a psychical romance of great interest, entitled "A Celestial Love." There are two fine portraits of William Morris and Rev. E. A. Horton.

There are many clergymen, teachers and members of clubs who, in order to prepare addresses or papers upon the subject, desire definite and authoritative information with regard to the general situation in Turkey, and the Relief Work which is being carried on for the survivors of the Armenian massacres. The attention of all such is called to the fact that information and literature, together with leaflets for free distribution, may be obtained by writing to Rev. F. D. Greene, Secretary of the National Armenian Relief Committee, 63 Bible House,

New York City. All Relief funds, however, should be sent direct to Brown Bros. & Co., 59 Wall St., New York.

Rev. Walter Elliott writes on "The Missionary Outlook in Canada" in the Christmas number of the Catholic World Magazine.

An order known as Pentecost Bands has founded a home in Indianapolis for convicts just released from the penitentiary. The men will be maintained until work can be procured for them.

In those of the New York synagogues which are of the orthodox Russian-Polish type the attendance of men is very much greater than that of women. In the more fashionable synagogues the women out-number the men.

A SUGGESTION.

It is suggested that local officials who are not under obligation to travel and preach constantly could do a great amount of good by an occasional visit to neighboring towns and localities, by calling upon the people, distributing the printed word, and engaging with them in conversation on gospel themes. To those who feel unable to preach the word in public this opportunity is open, and is indeed a means for good not confined to the able preacher; for with but few exceptions the people in city, town, and country are accessible to men of friendly spirit; and could be reached and converted, or made friendly to the cause, did they have opportunity to come in touch with its spirit and become acquainted with the principles of the faith.

Our brethren, of the general and local ministry, if in the spirit of the work, are in a spirit that will be felt by the people and that will enable them to reach them. We believe that labor wisely and diligently prosecuted in this way would do much for the cause, and that men would be blessed in doing it. With the growing stringency of the times and lessening prospects for a great or any increase in the general missionary force, it becomes a question if the church must not have more labor of this kind performed by men in the local ministry; and if we shall not be required to branch out more in this respect, by more active prosecution of missionary work in the domains of branches and districts. We are admonished to sow with liberal hand, and that we cannot tell what the reaping may bring.

It certainly becomes more and more apparent that the work cannot be extended as widely and fully—and as rapidly as it should be, by preaching alone. Indeed the history of all great movements informs us that both private and public methods were brought into use in order to educate the public mind and enlist the sympathies of the people in their behalf. The printing press is a great educator for good; placed in the hands of capable, interested local ministers to introduce it and interest the people in the themes it advocates, very much could without doubt be done that now remains undone and that will not be accomplished until the opportunities to go among the people are improved and this promising field of evangelizing more fully and intelligently occupied.

We do not believe that such work should be carelessly done, however, or by spasmodic effort; but diligently, persistently, intelligently; and that men called to minister in word and in doctrine will find spiritual blessing and confirmation in making the effort under proper circumstances and at proper times.

We write thus because we know of quite a number of good and true men who love the cause and have done much for it, but who fail to do what they might and what in their hearts they are anxious to do, because not so gifted as others as pulpit preachers. People are not influenced alone for good by preaching; it is the spirit of and association with the minister in friendly converse in explanation of gospel principles that also does much to draw men and women to the church and its faith, and that induces them to desire a place among and to enjoy the privileges of the children of God.

We are aware that some sacrifice and exhibitions of faith and trust in God are necessary to do such work; but none the less are such required by the traveling ministry. They too are often required to make their way among strangers and alone in the prosecution of their missionary work; and the promise to them is to all who labor in word and doctrine, whether among the special witnesses or in the local ministry of the church. We are assured too that as the kindly disposition and love toward the people seen in the Savior's life drew the people to him and caused the influence of his example and teaching to be as great for good as his public preaching, so the same influence working through the kindly and benevolent natures of those in fellowship with the Master will prove a potent influence for good wherever those possessing make effort to reach the people in legitimate ways.

These thoughts have been hastily penned and without the arrangement that more time and reflection would have made possible, and caused them to be better and more fully expressed; but we trust they will lead to thought and result in good in the lines of work suggested. We have the best and most important message possible for humanity, and one without which the hopes and desires of life in its truest sense can never be realized. With a possession of this kind to impart and professing to be partakers of the life it conveys to the obedient disciple, it seems designed that we should be considering the conditions to be met and discerning the means necessary to be adopted to get the truth before the people. Hundreds have been ordained, many of whom through lack of opportunity or other causes do not find the avenues of usefulness that open to or are opened by others. What can they do? is a question that must suggest itself to them. Surely something, and as we have hinted, by occasional or frequent tract distribution and house-to-house conversation among the people, who if approached kindly and intelligently will hear and read the word.

During the past fall season the writer had occasion to travel over a portion of the State of Iowa through numerous small towns and cities never named in connection with the missionary work of the elders, because, of course, of the limited number of the latter in the field. We thought then and think now that much might be done in the way suggested to acquaint the people living in those towns with the truth, and to prepare the way for a greater work among them.

We have thought well to present the matter, trusting that it may lead to thought, and finally to fuller action in local ministerial work. There was a time in the beginning of the Reorganization when little else than local work was done, when the missionary force was composed of a very small number. Many among the church, however, faithfully applied themselves to the labor of sacrifice, the results of which are seen in the present growth and influence of the church as a power for good.

We have felt with others of the brethren that a spirit of lethargy and spiritual indifference prevailed to an extent, and that it was necessary to resist it, and to encourage the people to rise above it. The demands to be met are of such an important nature that no one who is called to labor, in any capacity, is justified in being less than fully in earnest and fully awake in doing the duties imposed under the law. By the effectual working of the measure of every part, as the Apostle Paul—that wise master-builder—admonished, can we hope for the results desired and necessary to be attained.

With all the discouragements to be met and overcome, we believe it remains true that the people of God never had a clearer field nor a better opportunity of pushing the work than now. Open violence in opposition to the elders is practically unknown; people are less creedbound and less under the influence of sectarianism than ever; and access to them comparatively easy, as witnessed by the numerous and repeated calls for labor.

We believe that we are all, if we love the work as we profess to love it, in duty bound to fully comply with the law, and are not justified if we neglect any proper effort to get the truth before the people. In saying this we are also reminded that a spiritually dead "member" of the church is also a hindrance to progress, as he stands as a negative influence, a resistance seen, known, and felt; an inert mass to be overcome, and often is a downright discouragement, as a man or a woman, in his sphere. Let us all try not only to improve, but to do something for the work, and not cease earnestly trying until we do, and continue to do, all in our power for the work.

The year 1896 draws to a close and the limited time allotted to each one for labor is passing with the years. Advancement, attainment, salvation, happiness are reached and only reached through labor, hence the propriety and justness of the demands made upon us as a people.

WANTON KILLING.

A LATE European press item states that the Prince of Wales shot over three thousand birds during a recent hunting trip. On reading it one is reminded of the statement of one of the revelations which pronounces woe upon "him that killeth, and hath no need;" and we suppose the presumption is fair that the promise of punishment for wanton killing for sport applies not only to royal sportsmen who keep immense tracts of land for game preserves in which to raise birds and beasts to kill, and who kill such, but also to the lesser lights who also shoot and kill when there is no need of so doing, but who find a pleasure in sport which uselessly inflicts pain and destroys life.

One is also reminded of what the Word of Wisdom teaches upon this point; namely:—

All these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving. Yea, flesh, also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter; or of cold or famine. All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts, to be the staff of life, not only for man, but for the beasts of the field, and the fowls of heaven, and all wild animals that run or creep on the earth; and these [wild animals?] hath God made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger.—D. C. 86:2.

From the foregoing we have understood that wild animals were not to be slaughtered only in times of famine and excess of hunger, in times of extreme need, when other food supplies were not available; while the use of domestic animals and fowls referred to, was to be "in times of winter, or of cold or famine." We have thought that a distinction was discernible here, but may be in error. The human system requires a moderate, a sparing use of flesh diet in the season of cold; this, according to the teachings of experience and of physiology.

But the tendency of the modern sporting craze seems destined practically to wipe out some species of animal life, from closely inhabited districts at least, and where some of them might do good. It is this spirit of useless shooting and killing that we refer to more particularly.

In this connection we publish an apt relation of a case in point, taken from a late issue of Our Dumb Animals, a paper published by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals:—

"The pastor of a Presbyterian church in Brooklyn was recently hunting with a friend when the latter mistook him for a quail and filled his left arm with bird shot. A sportsman who cannot tell a minister from a quail should confine himself to a bean gun in open pasture."—Boston Evening Transcript.

In Paris many years ago we proposed to our good friend, Mr. Burlingame, (then American minister to China,) to form a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals in that country.

He replied with a smile that cruelty to animals was unknown in China.

The same is true of Japan.

What a capital fellow the clergyman above-named would be to carry a knowledge of Christianity to the Heathen.

CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH.

WE have several times published items similar to the account that follows, as object lessons for any who might be careless and disposed to take unjustifiable risks in leaving small children alone, subject to dangers by fire, etc.; though we trust none of our readers needed to be reminded of duty in this respect. These children, it appears, were sacrificed because of "a dance."

We have frequently heard of small children being left alone at home exposed to danger by fire, while those responsible for their welfare went "to meeting," and have believed the risk, in some cases, unjustifiable, if not actually inhuman and criminal.

HAMILTON, Mo., Nov. 22.—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Snyder Neal, living five miles north of the city, were burned to death late last night. The Neal dwelling was burned while the parents were attending a dance.

Soon after starting home the Neals and those accompanying them discovered that the Neal residence was on fire. When they reached the burning building the father saw his eleven-year-old girl, lying, burning, in the front door, clasping her three year old brother in her arms. The flames prevented rescue. The children were then dead.

The father fell in a swoon and has been a raving maniac ever since. Nora, nine years old, is the only survivor of the fire. She says the children at home, Callie, thirteen, Hattie, eleven, Willie, seven, Clarence, five, Julian, three, and herself retired at the usual hour in an upstairs chamber. The next she knew the fire was coming through the floor and the building was enveloped in flames.

SPAIN RESTORES THE INQUISITION. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 25.—The Hong-kong newspapers which arrived by the steamship Pekin bring the first details of atrocious tortures which the Spaniards are using in Manilla to compel confessions from natives and half-castes suspected of aiding the revolution.

James W. Davidson, a well-known correspondent, was sent to Manilla by the Hong-kong Press to report matters as they were. He sent his letters so that they escaped the official censorship.

He declares that the Spanish have revived the methods of the Inquisition and that they are actually using machines of torture that were brought over to Manilla by Dominican priests two hundred years ago. Davidson says he has ample proof that men are permanently crippled by rough usage of the Spanish troops and that many rich Mestizos and natives have been arrested and condemned to deportation on flimsy testimony so that the Spanish officials could secure their confiscated estates. So great are the atrocities that Consuls of Japan and of several European powers are considering an appeal to the great powers to put an end to the torture, outrage, and deportation of those who have had no fair trial.

It is said the method is first to bind the prisoners' hands behind their backs so tightly that the cords cut into the flesh. In that climate mortification results and many have lost their arms, while others are permanently crippled. After a few days, if they refuse to confess their guilt, they are brought into the torture chamber. After being stripped the alleged culprit is first subjected to whipping with rattans—two hundred blows or more if the victim is especially obstinate. Then thumbscrews are brought into play and the poor wretch, already half dead from the beating, is obliged to undergo the exquisite pain that these little instruments produce.

In Neura Ecia Province one thousand women sympathizers of the rebels have been killed.

We have thought well to reproduce the foregoing apparently reliable press item, that those living under the influences of civil and religious freedom among our readers may see more clearly and realize more strongly the need of the diffusion and universal sway of the principles of Anglo-Saxon civilization.

There are many hopeful signs of progress and emancipation; but much yet remains to be done, before the race is freed from barbarism. Indeed, there yet remains so much of inhumanity and fanaticism within realms governed by and among the most enlightened and foremost nations that a picture like the one given in the item above, under the extreme of Spanish-Catholic rule, is not past belief. Reports from the seat of war in Cuba also credit Spanish soldiers with like cruelties.

Religious intolerance caused invention and use of the tortures of the Inquisition, and we have little reason for believing that Spain has overcome the tendency to suppress revolt against her rule by the means reported to have been used in Manilla. The Spanish people have practically been shut up under ecclesiastical influences at home and have not kept pace with the Anglo-Saxon and Teuton in that humanity of spirit that inclines toward the recognition and a disposition to concede the rights of others under their political sway.

Spain has fallen and continues to decrease in strength and influence among the powers of Europe, manifestly because of the spirit of avarice and injustice that has actuated her political conquests and policies. Once practically the ruler of vast territories in America and other lands, she now has little left but island possessions, in addition to her home territory; and what she has abroad bids fair to become independent of her cruel and arbitrary rule; while the Spanish monarchy may at any time go down in the throes of a revolution for popular government.

Any government that permits the tortures of the Inquisition to suppress resistance to its authority must finally go down. There is not enough of the spirit of submission to tyranny left in the world to submit to such terrible inflictions. There was a culminating day that tried men's souls, and men stood the test and were made politically free. Since that day men have been encouraged to test and overthrow ecclesiastical and tyrannical rule in affairs of state, and are constantly prevailing. The cruelties now being practiced by Spanish and Turkish soldiery are but hastening the downfall of the hot-blooded Spaniard and the cold-blooded Turk. The dark cloud has a silver lining.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. S. W. L. SCOTT, Hartford, Michigan, December 1:—

Meetings continue with unabated interest. Yesterday we repaired to the river and baptized Sr. Maggie Fair, a young and intelligent lady who we have cause to believe will adorn the church society and work at this place. Many more are believing, if they could muster the courage. But as in the days of Jesus they "fear the people." Nice winter weather here. Love to all.

Bro. John Wise, Donnelly's Mills, Perry County, Pennsylvania:—

There are no Latter Day Saints, at least of our faith, in this vicinity; but I am enabled to show forth the doctrines of the church in contradistinction to the dogmas taught in sectarian churches, which are little more than the traditions of men. I earnestly contend for the faith at every opportunity. I place much faith in the declaration of James: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

Bro. L. F. Daniel, Fremont, Indiana, December 1:—

Had a good meeting at Seafeld, Indiana; held over two Sundays, baptized four more; a new place; ten in all. I think we will have a branch there soon. The work is onward.

I am now in Fort Wayne, en route to Fremont, where we will remain for awhile.

The following is handed us by a Lamoni brother. It is a portion of a letter written him by his sister who, during a recent visit to the city of the saints, heard the gospel, believed and obeyed, and now rejoices in the truth. This sister at one time declined to hear anything said concerning the faith. The outcome, in her case, should serve to encourage those who fear that relatives and friends may never be willing to investigate and obey the gospel. Many reject it because of prejudice or misunderstanding of the doctrine. Patient and wise teaching by precept and consistent example will bring hundreds who will not come until well satisfied with the teaching of the church and almost actual demonstration of what the faith will do in forming character in its adherents:—

I suppose you wish also to hear how I am prospering spiritually and if I am looking backward to the flesh-pots of Egypt and regretting the step I have taken; or whether I am pressing forward toward the mark of the prize. I wish I had the power to express to you the joy, peace, and rest that have come to me—not through believing for I find and know I have believed to, these many years, but in obedience. I read, and read, and find nothing which I cannot readily say amen to accept what has reference to the Book of Mormon, which has been an enormous stumbling-block; but as I read the "lectures" which Bro. Stebbins brought me, the great chips are being hewn off from the block, and before I know I fear there will be nothing left. I wish I had the book that I may read it for myself, and mean to have it as soon as I can. I read Bro. Stebbins' book through before I arrived at home and there seemed to me to be so much of darkness and superstition removed and the truths it contained were made so clear to my mind, that I was led to rejoice in the light which was shed therefrom. Sometimes as I read it was all I could do to refrain from shouting aloud and giving glory to God for the day when he led me to accept the truth and to cast my lot with those who are not afraid to declare the whole counsel of God and preach the gospel in its purity. I don't wonder you call it a glorious gospel, and told me it would comfort me; I don't wonder you call it a gospel of joy, and peace, and rest. For years I have been searching the Scriptures and praying for light that I might be guided into all truth, and wondering why I was not satisfied. I have wondered why, when I read "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled," I did not enjoy that fullness promised; and knowing I prayed earnestly to be led why could I not realize that rest and joy which I sought? I never doubted for one moment God's faithfulness to fulfill his promises, but thought I was at fault, accusing myself of being carried away with every wind of doctrine when I went here and there to find the truth, and found it not. Now I know that his hand was leading me, his Spirit guiding me. He was filling my soul unutterably full as he had promised, only I did not at the time understand his dealings with me. Now I am led to rejoice in the truth as it is in Jesus and am glad that our God is a God of love and that his mercy endureth forever. O, how thankful that that awful doctrine of the burning of a large part of God's creatures is forever rooted out of my mind, not that I ever really believed it, but O, the horrors portrayed to my mind when reading or hearing the Advent doctrine, believing that we as a family were doomed to destruction! Now I repeat it and it is constantly sounding in my ears, "His mercy endureth forever." But I must close, lest I weary you; but you know that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. . . . I owe you both much for helping me to find the truth.

The late Chilean revolution has become widespread. The political system of the country is said to be honeycombed with corruption and serious results are feared from the uprising.

In the late opening of the Italian Chamber of Deputies the Premier presented a bill providing for a grant of 20,000,000 lire to the Prince of Naples, the heir apparent, who has lately been married. The Premier stated in connection with the presentation of the bill that King Humbert had decided to reimburse the treasury an equal amount from the civil list; from which it appears that Royal families continue to be expensive ornaments for the people; also that possibly King Humbert thought it necessary to avoid possible murmurings of discontent, hence his action. The Italian minister of war recommended that the government should cede to Abyssinnia the territory now in dispute between the two countries. Between the expenses of keeping up its royalty and the expense of foreign war and immense armaments, together with recent financial mismanagement and corruption, the Italian people are having a heaven burden of taxation.

A severe earthquake shock was felt at Cairo and other points in Illinois, during the afternoon of December 1. Buildings rocked and the people fled from them in terror, rushing into the streets. The vibrations lasted several seconds. No damage is reported.

Bro. J. W. Gillen returned to his field of labor—Colorado, Wyoming, Western Nebraska, etc., during the past week.

Bro. L. F. Daniel, writing from Seafield, Indiana, reports Brighamite elders at work in that field. They were to use the saints' chapel and he to reply. He writes for tracts showing the positions of the two churches in contrast. We are now running an excellent article in the HERALD, "The Necessity for a Reorganization of the Church;" written by Elder Hyrum O. Smith, of the Rocky Mountain mission. Those desiring to post themselves on the questions at issue would do well to note the points set forth in this article. It will run through four issues of the HERALD in all, from which it will be stereotyped and issued in tract form; price of tract will be announced later. This article is well written and contains matter not accessible, in its original sources, to many. Both brethren and sisters should be posted on this question and prepared to meet it in private as the elders are in public. One is able to render good service for truth by being posted; and, he is confirmed in the faith as he sees the foundations of the truth repeatedly tested by various forms of opposition brought to bear against it, which rebound from it and go to pieces as the weakness and error of the opposition is made manifest.

Bro. H. T. McClain, Coal Gate, Indian Territory, commends the preaching and general labors of Bro. W. B. Toney, who visited and preached the word in that region of late. The saints in that vicinity are alive, and glad to have an elder competent to minister the word to them.

The coming Sunday School Teachers' Institute which holds its sessions at Council Bluffs, Iowa, December 26-28, promises to be a successful and enjoyable affair. The workers will probably have the benefit of the usual holiday reduction in railway rates, also entertainment by saints of the Bluffs and at Omaha free of charge. Go if you can, and write Bro. T. W. Williams at 206 Harmony Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa, if expecting to attend.

Bro. Robert Winning, of St. Joseph, Missouri, spent Sunday with friends in Lamoni; arriving Saturday, attending service on Sunday and returning home Monday. We enjoyed his pleasant call at the office.

Original Poetry.

I PLACE THEM IN THY HAND.

I place them in thy hand,
The joys that daily come
To fill my heart with thankfulness
As I am traveling home.
Thy love prepared them all for me,
Oh! may I ever thankful be.

I place them in thy hand,
The sorrows that will come,
And all the griefs I daily meet
As I am traveling home;
Nothing can hurt me, Lord, I know,
Unless thy love hath ordered so.

I place them in thy hand,
The partings that may be;
For thou canst fill each void
With thine own constancy;
Whatever changes time may bring
Thou changest not, my Savior King.

I place them in thy hand,
The idols I have loved;
Too often they, alas!
My faithlessness have proved;
Take these things hence that I may be
A holy temple meet for thee.

I place them in thy hand,
The sins that soil my soul;

Savior, I need thy healing touch,
For thou canst make me whole;
Lord, take me in thy hands, I pray,
And keep me near thee every day.

SELECT READING FOR JANUARY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

OBEEDIENCE is our next corner-stone. Henry Ward Beecher says: "To neglect to teach obedience, to inspire it in the child, to require it and secure it, is to neglect the education of the child in one of the prime elements of success in after life.

"It is scarcely too much to say that a child brought up in the family not to know how to obey his parents, will be a bad citizen, a breaker of the laws of his country, and a violator of the rights of his kind; for although he may learn better, by and by, of himself, by the development of his reason, and his moral sentiments, there are thousands that do not learn this afterwards, and not learning it, become criminals. Nay, more, the submission of one's self to the law of God, the humbling of one's self before divine Providence, the yielding of one's heart to the supreme law of divine Love,—all that is very easy to one that has been taught to yield his will to the love of father and mother, and very difficult to one who has been reared in self-will and obstinacy. We teach our children how to walk, how to talk—we teach them a thousand things that are absolutely necessary; but there is no one of these things that is as important as teaching the child to submit its will to that of its parents. They are to it in the place of God, they are to it in the place of king and magistrate, they are to it in the place of nature itself; and the child ought to be taught as its earliest lesson, implicit obedience to parental rule. No land in the world needs this teaching as much as our own does."

We give this extract in full because it impresses the first point necessary in laying the corner-stone, the fact that training to obedience is necessary to the well-being and happiness of the child, as an individual, as a citizen, and in his relations to God.

The next point is, that systematic training is necessary to develop in the child's mind a love for the principle of obedience. Without such development, obedience will be a fitful and spasmodic thing, without any deep and underlying principle to insure its perpetuity. Obedience is not a natural instinct, like those instincts which impel children to eat or drink, to cling to their possessions or to resent injuries. Hence, obedience is not, as the action of many parents show they believe it to be, a matter of course. If gained, it must be the result of training. How shall we train children to obedience? Jacob Abbott, in his chapter on this topic, in his admirable book on "Gentle Measures in the Management of the Young," answers this question in such practical fashion that we advise every parent to read it.

Your object is to have obedience become a habit. Shape all your training to this end. Do not expect children to be spontaneously docile and obedient, and scold or punish them if they are not. Accept the truth that you have a work to do in making them so by wise, careful, persevering, and gentle training. If they have already formed habits of disobedience, do not expect these habits to be broken up by sudden, violent measures, by scoldings, threats, and punishments, or by any declaration that you are going to "turn over a new leaf." Turn over a new leaf in your own treatment of the children—for if you have had the charge of them from infancy, you are largely to blame for their habits of insubordination—but do not talk about it. "Deeds are better things than words, actions mightier than boastings." Instead of saying what you are going to do, or finding fault with the past, recognize the fact that the bad native tendencies of your children are probably inherited from their parents, and that whatever is wrong in their habits is the result of bad training. This will make you patient, a prime necessity if you would succeed.

Always recognize the good there is in your child, and give him credit for it. We are much more apt to blame children when wrong than to praise them when they do well. Guard against this if you would make obedience a pleasant thing to your child. He prizes your approbation; let him see that he has it when he does well. Your little one is busy at play; you call him to you. If he hesitates, you call again, perhaps sharply, and scold him when he comes for not coming more promptly; perhaps the scolding is deserved; but are you quite as apt, when he does leave his play promptly and come at your call, to commend him? A few words of appreciative commendation, as, "I know little boys do not love to leave their play, but you came at once when I called; it pleases me very much to find you so prompt to obey me," will make obedience easier and pleasanter next time. Thus, little by little, the habit of obedience will be formed. Of course, we do not recommend flattery on the one hand, nor disregard of faults on the other. The consecrated common sense of the parent will avoid both these evils. But we do believe the habit of noticing and commending children when they do right, and being as quick to show pleasure at the right as we are to show displeasure at the wrong, will prove a powerful aid in training children to obedience. . . .

The training of your own voice has much to do with your children's obedience. If you speak in a fretful, querulous tone, or an undecided one, you never need expect your children to obey you. Indeed, the very tone of your voice shows you do not expect it, and if you will honestly examine yourself you will find this is true. Down deep in your heart is the feeling, "I don't believe they will mind," and this disbelief makes itself audible in your tones. A command given with a rising inflection is seldom obeyed. Loud, angry tones are equally fatal to good government; they betray your lack of self-control, and no one can control others unless he first learn to control himself. Cultivate clear, smooth, pleasant tones. Their pleasantness does not at all interfere with their being firm; indeed, when you feel great decision is necessary, take all the more pains to have the tones pleasant. So far as possible, express your wishes in the form of requests, but when commands become necessary, as they sometimes do, remember that imperative sentences have the falling inflection. Keep the tone a little lower, if anything, than your ordinary pitch, but let its cadence be so decided as to leave no doubt in the mind that it is a command, and as such must be obeyed. . . .

Place obedience to parents on the foundation where God places it, "Children obey your parents for this is right." He gives no such reason for the obedience to masters by servants, but here, as everywhere, he draws a sharp line of demarcation between the status of a child and of a servant. Obedience to parents is right from the very nature of the relationship, and it lies at the basis of all other right government.

The correlative is equally true: parents should demand nothing of their children that is not right, nor should they take advantage of this divinely appointed relationship to be tyrannical. We know a lady whose sons were such models of obedience that she was often asked how she trained them to become so. "I never once, even in their childish days, took the ground that I had the right to require anything of them simply because I was their mother," was her somewhat startling answer. But, contrary as it is to the principle and practice of average humanity, I think there is something in her method that reaches down to the bed rock of philosophy and of principle. She required of them only what was right, irrespective of any personal relationship, and thus based their obedience on immutable principle.—Childhood: Its Care and Culture.

DO NOT pass over lightly, but discuss, ponder, and take to heart the necessity of requiring implicit obedience to parental rule.

Is it not a mistake for parents to think² that they deal kindly with a child when, rather than cross it's will, they allow it to be disobedient?

Why is the teaching of obedience more needed in this land?

Can a love for the principle of obedience be developed in a child? How?

Will obedience become a habit to a child unless it be constantly and firmly required of him?

Admitting that a parent cannot be too patient, is there not danger that some will wrongly exercise patience in permitting disobedience rather than in preventing it or even in administering punishment for it?

Give your ideas of using "consecrated common sense," mentioned in avoiding the error of flattering, where only deserved commendation should be given.

Do you think it possible for parents given to speaking in fretful or undecided tones, or in loud, angry tones, to adopt the pleasant but positive tone needed to secure obedience?

Is there any other standard for obedience so good as that which is based upon the principle of right for both parent and child?

TEACHER'S INSTITUTE WORK AT WOODBINE REUNION, 1896.

IN the consideration of the subject of Teachers' meetings, the following points were brought out by those who treated upon it:—

1. Teachers must attend teachers' meetings if proficient in their work.

2. Teachers who are necessarily deprived of assembling with other teachers in a teachers' meeting should conduct one for their own benefit, consisting of themselves alone if they cannot get anyone else to meet with them.

3. Superintendents must be qualified to make the teachers' meetings instructive so that the teachers will see the importance of attending.

4. It is thought best that there be regular stated times each week for these meetings.

5. The object of these meetings being:—

- a To study the lesson.
- b To study how to teach the lesson;
 1. To make plain;
 2. To make effective;
 3. To illustrate.

Some difference existed as to whether the study of the lesson or the methods of presenting it to the classes was of primal interest in these meetings.

In the study of the subject of Visiting Committees, the following were made prominent:—

1. Visiting committees should consist of such officers of the school as are adapted to such work, and all the teachers.

2. The one visiting should have love for the one visited.

3. The reason that teachers should be a visiting committee is that they may visit scholars that may be absent from their class. These visits should be made personally if possible, but otherwise by card or letter, the latter in some cases proving the most effectual.

4. There should also be a special committee whose duties are to visit scholars who have been absent for several sessions of school, and nonmembers, to solicit their attendance at the school.

5. Sociability is the keynote of gospel work, hence the good results of a visiting committee.

6. When one has been persuaded to attend through the solicitation of the visiting committee they should be specially taken notice of by the superintendent or his assistant, especially if they be little children.

7. Visiting committee's work is missionary work pure and simple.

8. Superintendents should understand the duties of a visiting committee.

VISITING COMMITTEE.

1. How appointed:—
 - a By superintendent.
 - b By virtue of office.
2. Of whom composed:—
 - a Competent members.
 - b Teachers.
3. Duties:—
 - a Solicit members.
 - b Secure regular attendance.

On the subject, "The use of the Quarterlies in Class Work," the following are presented:—

1. Every teacher should study the lesson in the Bible, Quarterly, and other books, and "study in their minds."

2. The key to success in class work is to study diligently, earnestly, and thoughtfully.

3. Teachers' meetings are necessary auxiliaries. If you have not the opportunity to attend such meetings study at home.

4. In studying your lesson be sure and study the Bible, the Quarterly is but a help.

5. The most successful teacher of the Senior grade is one who prepares the lesson most diligently outside of the class, from the Bible with the Quarterly, but uses the Quarterly least in the class.

6. An Intermediate teacher may make more use of the Quarterly in the class with benefit, as she has to use many different devices to interest the class.

7. The Bible practice work is to teach the pupil to turn more readily to passages in the Bible.

8. The Bible is the text-book.

9. The Quarterly is not the text-book, but should be used in the class as a reference book when it may be necessary to gain the truths from the text in the Bible.

10. The Lesson Story when read in the class should be commented on as it is read.

11. In using the "Words and Phrases" in the Senior Quarterly, first read the verse from the Bible to be commented upon, then read the comment.

USES OF QUARTERLIES.

1. Outside class work:—
 - a Uniformity in class work;
 - b Reference;
 - c Guide;
2. In class work:—
 - a Reference;
 - b Map work;
 - c To secure attention;
 - d For assigning lesson;

e For use of visitors in class.

In regard to secretaries' duties the following items were of special importance:—

1. The secretary should be accurate.
2. He should read reports and correspondence, loudly, plainly, and correctly.
3. He should make up record from teachers' class books. He should instruct teachers how to use class books.
4. Teachers should assist the secretary by keeping class book correctly, and secretary should see that they do it.
5. He should furnish proper instructions to committees.
6. District secretary should be wide-awake and should be prompt in sending instruction to local secretaries, both written and printed.
7. Programs should be made out a month before each convention, and they should be printed when convenient, and there should be sent out at least half as many programs to each school as there are members enrolled in the school.
8. See that all school reports are correct.
9. He should keep all records.

The following items were given in answer to some general questions:—

1. It is the duty of the superintendent to visit classes, and to conduct the review.
2. To get the knowledge of the Sunday school work gained at reunions to those schools and officers not present, it should be published in the church periodicals or in tract form and distributed at the expense of the General Association; and also by personal representation of the benefit from the knowledge thus received.
3. A good remedy for a teacher who makes no effort to attend teachers' meetings is to get acquainted with the hindrances, make them feel that they can help, and show them the benefit to be derived therefrom. Then if they are not interested to make an effort to attend drop them from the list of teachers.
4. We should mingle with other conventions that we may by contrast with and examination into their manner of laboring, but to become identified with them further would not be wise.
5. One of the means to be used to secure the attendance of idle people at the Sunday school sessions of the reunions is to give them some special work to do at those sessions.

Prepared by J. F. Mintun.

(The above is so nicely arranged and so full of good suggestions that we consider it worthy of careful study.—Ed.)

SANTA CLAUS.

CHARLES FRY.

AS THE Christmastide draws nigh we already hear of preparations being made by our Sunday school workers for the celebration of our Savior's birth. How can we best do this? is the leading question. It is not our object to answer this question except in regard to the part which Santa Claus usually takes in our Christmas programs.

Now I presume we all love Santa Claus, having never heard anything but good reports of him; in fact, his reputation is so good that we have been accustomed to accept it without question as to his real character, and some of us may be reluctant about giving him up.

The object to be kept in mind in preparing our Christmas programs should be to make Jesus the central figure, and by the giving of gifts to draw our minds to a better realization of the great gift of God. But how is it in many of our Christmas exercises? Is not Santa Claus made the central figure all through? Is he not made to be the giver of the gifts, to the uninitiated at least? Thus we see that the honor which belongs to another is given to a myth; or in other words, Santa Claus steals the honor which belongs to God and loved ones, and we invite him to do it, while the very object for which we celebrate that day is defeated.

It is urged that we need something to interest the children. If it is necessary to have a myth whose appearance often resembles that of a clown, in order that the interest of the children may be held at a Christmas entertainment, why not have something of the kind every Sunday? Of course no one would think of such a thing. Then why have it at all?

All that we can make of this myth is that it is a deception and has no place in the Sabbath schools of the saints of God. Many a child has been brought to grief on finding out that Santa Claus was not a reality; and, dear saints, what do you think is their opinion of those who have deceived them so long? Some parents have told us that they explain to their children the true nature of Santa Claus. This is well, but even this leaves a blank in the children's minds and they fail to see the object of having such a person.

Is it not time for us as saints and Sabbath school workers to take a step higher in this direction and leave the product of superstition to the ages that are past? We think so.

Letter Department.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 26.

Editors Herald.—This being Thanksgiving Day the saints met at the hall at 10:30 a. m. in prayer and thanksgiving service. The attendance was not very large, owing to the cold weather; the weather so far has been very fine up till last night, when there came a light snow, and it is very cold to-day. A collection of several dollars was taken up for the benefit of the general church treasury, which will be forwarded to the Bishop immediately.

Times are very hard and money scarce, and I think this western country feels the hard times worse than the East because of the lack of agriculture, having to depend more on mining; but with all the hard times I think if each branch of the church had adopted such a resolution as Bro. T. W. Williams recommended, there would have been a large amount raised to meet presents needs of the Bishop.

It is sad, indeed, after having reduced the ministerial force at the last conference that a great part of those remaining must leave their fields of labor to provide for their families, because the rest of the church fails to provide the means for their support.

How can we expect to inherit Zion and the New Jerusalem if we will not live up to a part at least of the temporal law while in a scattered condition? It seems to me to be just as inconsistent to think of entering into Zion when the call shall come to gather there without having prepared ourselves by keeping the law of tithing before the gathering time shall come, as to think of entering into the celestial kingdom of God without the thousand years' preparation of the millennial. I understand that after all the sacrifices and trials we have to endure in this life it will take a thousand years with the Savior to complete the work of perfection and fit us for the final entrance into the presence of God.

But some say, "O well, when we have to gather to Zion we will submit to the law of consecration and tithing." But would it not be much easier to submit then if we had made some preparation beforehand? It is very hard to bring ourselves into subjection to certain conditions sometimes, if those conditions are forced upon us suddenly; but if we have been led along gradually, it becomes quite easy to conform to the conditions; besides, Zion is to be composed of the pure in heart. If the gospel is not preached and the pure in heart gathered out, it seems to me that that beautiful city which is twelve thousand furlongs square will be rather sparsely inhabited. If the gospel is not carried to the people, who is to blame? The Savior said, "Ye are the light of the world." I think this applies to us in more ways than one. Simply because we are not preachers is no reason to say that we can do nothing to forward this great work. All that we have and are is from the Lord, and why should we be so stingy with what is not our own only as the Lord sees fit to bless us? Will a man rob God?" Let us all answer.

The promise in Malachi in regard to tithing is just as sure to those that obey as the promise of Christ that these signs shall follow the believer. Why not put the Lord to the test in this as well as other promises? "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Please compare the following texts and see how much more promise there is in one than the other:—

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not [and is not baptized] shall be damned."

"He that is tithed shall not be burned."

He that is not tithed—where is the promise?

Of course times are hard, but I suppose the Lord knows it as well as we do, and I don't know as his promises are restricted to prosperous times; therefore if we do our part the blessings are promised just the same. But I guess this is enough along this line.

The work in this great city is making some progress, not as fast as we would desire, but still we think we are gaining ground. Bro. Bozarth has just returned from New Windsor, where he has been preaching. He has a call to go to Boulder County and other points if the weather will permit.

I was called to Pueblo on the 15th inst. to perform a wedding ceremony; Bro. E. N. Beach, of Flora Vista, New Mexico, having tired of living alone, has taken him a helpmeet. From the little acquaintance I had with Mrs. B. I think Bro. Edwin has made a wise choice.

I was also summoned by telegram to Magnolia, Iowa, on account of sickness of my father, who has passed away since my return to Denver. He had reached the allotted threescore and ten.

Yours for truth,

E. F. SHUPE.

HENDERSON, Illinois, Nov. 28.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a week's meeting at Andalusia. It has been quite successful. But Bro. McKiernan was there and did a good work last winter. I left Rock Island on one of the boats plying between Rock Island and Burlington. When near Buffalo we ran aground. The efforts of the crew seemed in vain to get her off. I was timed for 7:30 p. m. to preach. It flashed through my mind that if they would carry out an anchor they could fasten to it a line and by that means get her off. For some time I hesitated but at last spoke to the captain. He swore, and said they could not get an anchor to hold, the bottom was so bad. Soon he changed his mind, and took my advice. In a short time the boat began to move; the captain seemed sorry that he had sworn to me, and very soon I landed at Andalusia.

It took me the least possible time to dress and go to the church where the services were to be held. I arrived within a few minutes of the time. I had a good hearing all the week. On Sunday morning I had a large congregation; in the evening the house was crowded. At the close a man and his wife desired baptism; but on Monday the man was very sick. Bro. Reynolds administered to him, and he was healed immediately.

On Tuesday morning I led the man and his wife into the waters of baptism. I believe Bro. and Sr. Bently are the firstfruits of Andalusia. They seemed determined to hold to the faith. Two or three others are to be baptized when I go again, they say. They wish to investigate a little further. I think there are good prospects, and we are all encouraged.

I commence a week's meetings at Soperville on Sunday.

Yours in hope,

T. J. SHELDON.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—Your editorial, "The siege is still on," was appreciated by me. Since I came to this place I have come in contact with some of Utah's cohorts. It is a new experience for us easterners, because heretofore their lines have not extended much our way. Here at Scranton a sort of a sub headquarters are established under Elder Gill, who is under Elder S. W. Richards, with headquarters in Brooklyn, New York. There are about fourteen hereabouts under Elder Gill. I have met as many as eight at one time. They are principally young men and inexperienced, even in their work as missionaries. They go two by two, from house to house, distributing tracts, and talk with people as opportunity affords, and when allowed hold meetings in private houses. Their success seems to be of a shady character. As far as I can learn about one half dozen converts have been made by the whole band in nearly a year's work here.

I have had several interviews with them and have repeatedly tried to draw them into public discussion and investigation of the issues existing between us, but to no purpose. I finally offered to furnish a house, including all expenses and have them call in only their own members, and I would invite ours and no outsiders to be allowed. Even such bait as that did not tempt them. I have appealed to their manhood, saying they ought not be cowardly, etc. As young men I do not think they are really cowardly, but would under ordinary circumstances show as much pluck as the common run of folks, but their allegiance to that dictum of the leaders to "obey counsel," "do as you are told," dominates, so that the better qualities of manhood are dormant. I therefore pity the young men, while I loathe and despise the system that enslaves them.

I begin now to appreciate the reports of our ministry who have labored in trying to reach the people in Utah, when they tell of the blindness of the masses there, if these I have met are fair samples. Yesterday I attended their sacrament meeting held in a private house where were gathered four elders and two of the laity. They were quite profuse in what they called "bearing testimony," and one stated for my benefit that the custom was to only "bear testimony" in sacrament meeting: but he went on and spent a half hour or so in argument against others who were not of them, using the term "blackguard" several times, of those who spoke against any of their leaders, whom he affirmed were holy men. I asked permission to speak and the young elder who had charge of the meeting said "Yes," but immediately the old elder said "No," although he was not in charge of the meeting, and the "no" carried unanimously. It was not my intention to say anything that would provoke contention for I had resolved in my mind that "discretion was the better part of valor." My motives were impugned, however. That shrinkage peculiar to weakness when confronted with the stronger could but assert itself in such ways.

In my interviews with these men so far they have not answered my charges against them of heresy and apostasy, but have asked for "time to look the matter up a little." As you have well said in your editorial, they are not informed upon the history of their own church. I have met two sons of Burton, formerly sheriff of Salt Lake County, who figured so notoriously at the time of the Morrisite trouble; also a grandson of S. W. Richards.

They have a branch in Cohocton, in Steuben County, New York, of thirty members.

I propose visiting them when convenient, and if any there want the facts and truth of the latter-day work, I hope to bless them. I am satisfied that some people prefer the corruption of Utah Mormonism to the purity of the gospel. With such we can do little if any good.

There is also some missionary work going on at Seneca Falls, in the neighborhood of what was formerly Fayette, where the church started. Fayette is now called Waterloo, I believe. Last summer some of their missionaries tried to work some around the Hill Cumorah section. The elders, some of them, wear watch charms in the shape of little beehives made from wood cut from Cumorah. They tell me the parties who own the farm on which the hill is, think they ought to have an extra price for it because of that.

I have baptized a few since I came here and started a Sunday school. The prospects are favorable now that the work may be renewed here by these younger ones and better results than came from the past be obtained. Rum and tobacco have done their part in the overthrow of gospel interests here in the past. Human (temples) bodies polluted with such stuff cannot long be temples of the Holy Ghost. Too bad that men will take the "Devil into their mouths to steal away their brains."

In the State of New York where I spent a few weeks before I came here, I preached fourteen discourses near Norwich, Chenango County, in a union church; also preached some at East Pharsalia and vicinity. This is the region where a year ago they talked tar and feathers, and the local papers published articles against us, and would not allow me to reply. I now have a chance to use a church in Norwich, and may yet reach the people, in spite of such contemptible newspaper influence.

I am rather expecting Bro. W. H. Kelley along this way ere I leave. Elder Richards is to be here from New York next week. Should both be here at the same time, there may be a possible clash of steel. I have no hope, though, for that silly subterfuge, "We are counseled not to debate" hangs like a pall over the poor benighted souls.

I am glad to see the interest shown by recent articles on the Book of Mormon geography. The elders ought to look it up sufficiently to act intelligently upon the matter at next conference. In all probability the committee will have its report ready. Keep up the agitation, for it is educational. Won't some of you give some points on Lehi, Nephi, Helam, waters of Mormon, Moron, Hill Shim? Will some one particularly try a hand on the location of Book of Ether, chapter 4, paragraph 1: "And the Lord warned Omer in a dream that he should depart out of the land . . . with his family, and traveled many days, and came over and passed by the Hill of Shim, and came over by the place where the Nephites were destroyed, and from thence eastward, and came to a place which was called Ablom, by the seashore"?

If you do not care to risk an opinion through the Herald, write to the committee, all of which will be fully appreciated. It is surprising how few have sent in their help to the committee so far. Brn. Etzenhouser, Hawkins, Weston, Simon Smith, and Duncan, are all I can now call to mind. There are others that we looked to for help; but nay.

Weather has been unusually warm and pleasant of late. McKinley's good times have not reached this coal mining region. Miners are not working much over half time, notwithstanding Pennsylvania is the Gibraltar G. O. P. If this is politics excuse me. The fellow in book of Job wanted to have his say for fear he would burst. I will explode here and save the Herald. Sincerely yours for Zion's weal, FRANK M. SHEEHY.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 29.

Editors Herald.—In your issue of the 25th inst., in the article, "Book of Mormon Geography," reference is made to my "readings" of the Botturini chart, and also to the Gemelli. By the reading of the latter I am represented as taking up the "wrong track," and as having "lost my bearings" (?) on the Botturini, if I understand Bro. William. If such was his idea, then he misunderstood my reading of the Gemelli chart; probably when I referred to the route that Mulek took from Jerusalem to America, it being a different route to that traveled by Lehi; the chart, too, showing a different landing place in America to the landing place of Lehi, as shown on the Botturini. Had it been stated what bearing I had lost by the reading of the Gemelli chart, it would have been better understood what was meant.

Yours hopefully,

SIMON SMITH.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald.—After the bloodthirsty insects had satisfied their enormous appetite and we felt we had done our duty in that direction, as well as in others, we (Bro. Davison and the writer) packed up and shipped the tent from Poquonnoc, Connecticut, on August 24; and on Thursday, 27, we got the tent from Woonsocket, Rhode Island, where we had shipped it, and put it up at Rakeville, Massachusetts, where Brn. Sheehy and Davison had preached the preceding season.

The weather was against us most of the time while at Rakeville, and when it did not rain it was so cold that both preacher and congregation would shiver. Notwithstanding these drawbacks we were pleased to see interest manifested on the part of the people, not only in attending the services, but in caring for our temporal wants. We continued preaching until Sunday night, September 6; and as Bro. Davison had decided to return to Nova Scotia, we concluded to pack up for the season. Bro. Davison left on Monday in a driving rainstorm. The writer remained to fold the white (?) wings of the tent and lay them away for the winter. The wind kindly (?) assisted me and folded part of the tent quickly if not gracefully. On Friday, the 11th, we laid the tent to rest in an old mill, and bidding the saints and friends goodbye, mounted the "silent steed" and headed for Providence. A good day after the storm, nice roads, birds singing, pure air, green fields, trees showing the autumn tints, speeding along at a lively rate, and one feels that it is a joy to live. Up hill, down dale, through thriving villages. Now I go through Valley Falls. What a change in means of traveling since I was a boy and traveled these streets footsore and weary, carrying messages to the business men of the town! If I could have had a bicycle then I would have been in the seventh heaven. Now through Central Falls. Ah! here is the old schoolhouse through whose doors one bright Monday morning I walked with my mother and had to be driven back at noon. What a crowd of memories come flashing up from the grooves of the brain as I ride down the old familiar street! how many joys, sorrows, heartaches, and! But, pardon me, I had almost forgotten I was writing for the Herald.

The genial face of Bro. Arthur Pierce looked out from a doorway as I passed through Pawtucket and I stopped long enough to have a pleasant talk. By the way, Arthur is always good-natured.

Sunday, 13th, I preached in Fiskville in the afternoon and at Providence in the evening. Met with the Providence saints on Wednesday evening and labored in Providence and Fiskville; also preached at Auburn until October 2, then went to Boston, and from there to Haverhill. Preached in the house of Bro. Thayer, and on Sunday night went to hear the Campbellite evangelist who believes he has the best thing on earth in the way of theology and is anxious to show where it is better than other religions and creeds. I called on him, had a pleasant chat, talked debate. He was more than willing; has signed propositions, but now thinks he may not have time to attend to the debate. However; I am to hear from him again. On Monday I preached by request in the mission on Water Street, and next night attended Religio at Bro. Frost's.

Wednesday found me in Boston, and while there I attended prayer meeting. On Saturday I left for district conference, which passed off nicely and all seemed to enjoy the sessions. Returned to Providence after conference. Preached at Auburn on Friday evening and at Fiskville and Providence on Sunday. Went to Brockton on Monday and remained until Thursday, but received word to preach funeral sermon at Fiskville; so left to attend to that, and preached again at Auburn; and on Sunday at Fiskville and Providence.

Monday, the 26th, found me in Fall River, where I found a home at Bro. Shaw's and Dr. Gilbert's. I remained in Fall River until Friday, then went to Little Compton with Bro. Whalley. Began meetings on Sunday in the chapel and labored as best we could at the chapel and at Adamsville. The preacher was out one night at Adamsville, but the gospel pills were too much for him and he left. I think I would sit and hear the Devil himself for forty minutes or an hour and give him a chance to explain his position anyhow. I was kindly cared for while at Little Compton by Bro. and Sr. Pearse and others. While here we doffed the ministerial garb and put on those of the painter, or at least clothes that were furnished me. I think the clothes fit pretty nicely, but the hat! O my! it was a shocking hat; the saints need not look for photographs. I did not have any taken. The church is painted all right, though, and looks better.

Well, here I am on November 23, at Sr. Rogers' in Attleboro, Massachusetts. Mr. Rogers is not in the church, but is an honest man and a good fellow. Yesterday I spoke at Plainville and here in Attleboro at night. Will continue meetings this week by request and then expect to go to the "cape."

Yours in hope,

GEO. W. ROBLEY.

CONCORDIA, Kan., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald.—I am here holding meetings in a private dwelling, as it is impossible to procure a hall, and the hireing priests determine not to open their churches to us. The reason for such actions on their part is because they are loth to hear and investigate the truth themselves, and do not want others to do so, for fear they will lose some of their flock; and as I reason with them sometimes that investigation is education and learning and that to choke investigation is to smother education, and that if that principle was followed throughout, our seminaries of learning and even the doors of our common schools would be closed, what folly it is then to be so uncharitable. But I thank God that their designs shall be frustrated, and that learning shall increase, as saith the prophet, and the "gospel be preached in all the world for a witness."

I am having moderate and very attentive congregations. Shall be here the rest of the week, thence to Minersville.

For the information of those that have written me from the Northeastern Kansas district, permit me to state that I have been transferred by the officer in charge to the Northwestern district, hence cannot meet their expectations at present.

As ever, in bonds,

JOHN A. DAVIS.

GLENWOOD, Iowa, Dec. 2.

Editors Herald.—Last week I closed a series of sermons in the small town of Bartlett, Iowa, where considerable religious excitement has been created of late by the Christian fraternity. Quite a number have been baptized by one of their ministers, who was formerly a preacher of the Free Methodist Church, and in this same place has testified that he was saved and sanctified; but who now thinks he has received the greater light without the Spirit, and has entered "the kingdom in fact," "as set up on the day of Pentecost, never to be destroyed or given to another people."

Some thought it was necessary that a debate should follow such a condition of things. Of course people talk, and some quite peremptorily, on both sides of these matters; but it is best, in our judgment, to be dispassionate and cool-headed, under such circumstances, as all things as we believe will ultimately terminate for the best,

I preached nine discourses presenting what we believe, and defending our position, and sustaining our claims, to the best of my ability, in the Spirit of meekness, and in as kindly a manner as I knew how, reasoning from the Scriptures; and I must say, and not boastingly, that I never had greater liberty or felt more of God's Holy Spirit aiding me in my work, for which I feel truly thankful, and feel to say from my heart, "Praise his holy name."

We were treated courteously and gentlemanly. The Christian minister attended the most of our meetings. I attended two of his preaching services. I baptized one. I am satisfied with the work done and sincerely believe that good will result for the truth.

I am here for a few days, and shall move on to other places where I am needed, as fast as possible. May the good work move on in harmony with the Master's divine will and to the salvation of many souls, is my prayer, Still in the faith,

HENRY KEMP.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 2.

T. W. C.

TACKING up our "chart" which caused no little wonderment in the minds of the uninitiated, with such exclamations heard as, "I wonder where old Joe Smith is on that thing?" "Those long black lines must be the railroad to Salt Lake," etc., and securing a few of the young folks to aid in singing "Nearer my God to thee," and a short prayer, we started out on our introduction, telling them who and what we were, and laying a broad general foundation on which to build our structure in the discussions to follow; keeping off the sharp points so as not to antagonize too much; for I was thinking of a warm bed in some one's cabin, rather than the hard benches in the church.

Sermon finished with the thought that we had done fairly well, and we were now ready for an invitation to go home with some martyr. To be without purse or scrip among strangers in a strange land, presenting a doctrine on which pulpit and press have frowned, until the mind is so poisoned with prejudice, fear, tradition, superstition, and ignorance, is a trial and a testing that none but the Latter Day Saint elder knows. It tests the elder, it tests God and the people; and a man must have the courage of his convictions and an unflinching confidence in God and the truthfulness of the angel's message, to endure. And he will have an eye open for the genial smile of some friendly countenance with the cheering words, "Come home with me."

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick;" and when the last lingering hope had almost gone, one of God's noblemen, bronzed with honest toil, says: "Mr. Preacher, you had better go home with me." "Thanks to you, my friend, I shall be glad to accept your kind offer;" and with a heart full of gratitude and with a pride in such a loving Father whom we love and serve, and whose promise never fails, our guide leads the ways and we gladly follow.

Over the hills, through the brush, across the rippling streams we wend our way, until we catch the gleam of the friendly light which is like "the light in the window for me." The cabin reached we entered the humble home amid the barking of dogs and scampering cats, to meet the unpretentious, smiling, and loving country wife, who is ready to welcome the strange preacher.

It was the Grecian sage (Heathen?) which said: "Man originally was complete in himself, but subsequently became divided up into sections, and the matrimonial impulses are simply the longing with which the fragments go about seeking for their disjointed counterparts; or, in other words, marriage is the normal condition of man and he is only a "vulgar fraction" until he has found his counterpart.

The humble country life in the "cabin home" amid all nature's virgin conditions is the real embodiment of the above sentiment. One more Bible injunction seems to be harmoniously complied with—"It is not good for man to be alone;" for as we rest our satchel upon the well-scrubbed floor and pull off our greatcoat, a half dozen or more little ones scamper away and hide in the corners like so many quails. A short talk with the host and hostess, thanks offered for the blessings of the day, and for watchcare through the coming night, the room is darkened, and the lonely missionary seeks his couch to dream of loved ones at home with a scanty larder, and nothing in the "storehouse."

WOODBINE, Iowa, Nov. 26.

Editors Herald:—We have just closed a very spiritual Thanksgiving meeting. God was manifest by his loving spirit from the start. Appropriate hymns were sung, and spiritual prayers offered, and suitable scripture was read expressive of the goodness of God; and while owing to the storm, the worshipers were few, God acknowledged the offering of his children. Truly it is good to praise the Lord and acknowledge his goodness. "O, that man would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" The Lord says in section 59, speaking of the blessings he has given: "And it pleaseth God that he hath given all these things unto man; for unto this end were they made, to be used with judgment, not to excess, neither by extortion; and in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments."

It is truly good to cultivate and cherish the excellence of gratitude in our hearts; it lifts us nearer to God, it makes us pleasing in his sight, and exalts us to a higher and better condition physically and spiritually. But our gratitude must shine in our lives, or our hymns of praise will be as "sounding brass or tinkling cymbals," and will never reach the throne of God nor render us worthy of his blessings.

Winter is with us and with all its chilling blasts it will leave countless blessings behind it.

Fraternally,

C. DERRY.

SULPHUR WELLS, Ind., Nov. 25.

Editors Herald:—I came to this place yesterday from Whitetop schoolhouse, Harrison County, where I held some good meetings, it being a new place. Some are ready for baptism at that point. It is near the county seat, where I am trying to get a place to preach.

I have been somewhat disappointed by not getting to my appointed field of labor in Michigan. The first three months of my year's labor I was hindered about one half of my time by preparing to go to my appointed field and looking after my family, as the treasury was low. Since then I have been kept busily engaged in preaching and trying to get new openings. I have preached in the counties of Orange, Harrison, Crawford, Pike, Gibson, Daviess, and Jefferson in the State of Indiana; also in Meade County, Kentucky. Have baptized ten. Had some trouble trying to get new opening at the Whitetop schoolhouse. Rev. James Fowler did me lots of good, as the citizens found out that he knew me. They asked him in regard to my reputation, on which point he lauded me very highly. So much for the reverend. He is of the United Brethren faith.

My health is not so good as I desire, it is lung trouble, caused perhaps by over-speaking, as I have been in the pulpit most every night and twice on the Lord's day during fall and winter so far. I ask the prayers of all the saints in behalf of my health.

Yours for the truth,

G. JENKINS.

LIBERTY CENTER, Iowa, Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—On Sunday evening last I closed a series of eight meetings at Medora, a small hamlet six and one half miles west of this place. The condition of the weather and roads were against us last week; but as both became more favorable audiences increased to the last. Mr. A. H. C. Nyswonger and wife entertained us in their kind and social way while at Medora. Some prejudice there. Began meetings last night at the West Liberty schoolhouse, some three miles northwest of here. May not be there very long as urgent calls for labor come from Madison County and other parts of the district.

Elder Almus Adams, of the Church of God (Adventist Restitutionists) and I have at last reached agreement to debate, as to propositions and rules governing; so that now, after long waiting, it looks somewhat like discussion. The debate is to begin January 11, 1897. The nature of man, and the time of the establishment of the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2: 44, are the subjects of discussion.

Brother J. F. Mintun, now laboring in Nebraska, informs me that he and his late opponent in debate in that State have signed agreement to meet again in controversy, at Marion, Iowa. Brother Hills, a son-in-law of Samuel Powers, lives at Marion, who, I trust, will assist in local arrangements for the debate there. No doubt those in charge will be duly consulted concerning the matter.

The demands of the work are so great, and the laborers are so few compared with the number needed! Will not the saints everywhere "pray . . . the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest"? Even our Savior cannot send them unless the saints—the church—unite in the great effort and work. (Luke 10: 2.)

Let the church and the Sunday School Association unite with the Prayer Union continually in the effort, and at the same time remember that "all victory and glory is brought to pass unto you through your diligence [righteous works, labors] faithfulness and prayers of faith." "Behold, I, the Lord, utter my voice, and it shall be obeyed. Wherefore, verily I say, let the wicked take heed, and let the rebellious fear and tremble; and let the unbelieving hold their lips, for the day of wrath shall come upon them as a whirlwind, and all flesh shall know that I am God. And he that seeketh signs shall see signs, but not unto salvation." (D. and C. 100:7; 63: 2.) This language is addressed to you that call yourselves "saints." What, with all the world moved as it is, may we not expect at any time now? What urgent necessity that we move forward in all our duties of divine appointment, that we be not carried along in the whirlwind of men's passions! Shall we rouse, labor diligently, and await results at God's hands?

C. SCOTT.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—After a nine weeks' tour in the Northern Michigan district I again find myself at home; not for the purpose of a vacation, but to assist in a spiritual campaign in this city which we sincerely hope will prove effectual. Bro. Rathbun (Junior) has been doing some nice work here, as the people all speak well of his effort. Brn. Evans and Cavanagh have not been idle during our absence; and the Sunday school has grown to be a perfect success.

During our stay at Reed City the writer assisted district president J. J. Cornish to organize a branch, to be known as the Reed City branch. It will have about thirty members. This is the fruits of Bro. Cornish's labors at that place in tent this summer. Also organized a branch at Brinton with about thirty members, to be known as the Brinton branch.

The work opened with large crowds in South Bay City, but bad weather hindered some the last week I was there. Bro. J. A. Grant will carry on meetings there this week. The work in Bay City is doing very nicely. We hope to be able to do something there by the way of holding meetings in January, the Lord willing, as we get a church building all seated, with stoves and lamps, ready to occupy, for four dollars a month.

It is snowing here to-day.

More anon,

R. E. GRANT.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—The fruits of past labor are still appearing; three were baptized yesterday, all young people, one a young man, son of Bro. and Sr. Lewis. The other two were young ladies from Germantown; Sr. Anna Clark, whose mother recently preceded her in the gospel covenant, and Sr. Emma Miller, my wife's cousin. She is the first of her family to obey the gospel. So the work still moves.

I think of going to Brooklyn in a few days.

H. E. MOLER.

MT. CARMEL, Ill., Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—On the 10th inst. I took my valise in hand and started out into the field again. I had been about home some time, partly on account of the indifference of the people to the gospel, due to political enthusiasm; but chiefly to work in preparation for winter. Shortness of finance has made it necessary to lay off sometimes to look after home affairs. I went to Decker, but a young minister of the Christian Church was holding meetings there, so there was no chance for me to preach. I attended two of his meetings. He treated me very kindly and asked me to assist him. The people seemed anxious to have me preach for them. While there I went out six miles and paid the Beall saints a visit. Bro. H. H. Rose did not forget to give me a little "filthy lucre" to help me along. It was very much needed, too, just at that time.

It had been my intention to go from Decker to New Harmony, but not getting a letter from there containing something to smooth the track for the trip, I came to Patoka and from there here. I take this means of hinting to the saints in general and of this field in particular, that the best way to get an elder to preach where they live is to send the money to pay his fare. Don't be particular about the kind—either redemption or credit money will do. Remember that the general church fund is not intended for bearing elder's traveling expenses.

I am preaching in Indiana and am staying with Bro. John Critchfield. He and wife are all the saints there are in this community. They have set an example worthy of imitation. Almost everybody calls them "Grandpa" and "Grandma." He has been a member of the church twenty-three years. His experiences, like every other Latter Day Saint's, have been various.

I have preached at two points here so far—East Mt. Carmel and Sugar Bluff school-houses, but I may preach at Lyle station before I leave. In bonds,

THE NECESSITY FOR A REORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

—NO. 2.

RULES OF CHURCH SET ASIDE.

WE next notice the manner in which men are expelled from the church, and in which difficulties are settled between members:—

"And if thy brother or sister offend thee, thou shalt take him or her between him or her and thee alone; and if he or she confess, thou shalt be reconciled. And if he or she confess not, thou shalt deliver him or her up unto the church, not to the members, but to the elders. And it shall be done in a meeting, and that not before the world."—D. C. 42:23. (Utah edition 42:88, 89.) This agrees substantially with Christ's teachings in Matthew 18:15-17:—

"Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."

"Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican."

Let us see how Brigham Young and his colleagues carried out this just and holy principle. We turn again to the trial of Sidney Rigdon. The church was in a condition when if she ever needed to be handled with care and her subjects in a lawful manner it was then. Hearts were bleeding over the severe blow that the church had received in the murder of those whom they were wont to look upon as their leaders and counselors. They needed to be patiently and lovingly led and piloted through this the darkest hour and the heaviest trial that they had yet had to pass through. Their martyred prophet had instructed them in the way the powers of the priesthood should be exercised. Hear him:—

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood, only by persuasion, by long suffering, by gentleness, and by love unfeigned; by kindness, and pure knowledge, which shall greatly enlarge the soul without hypocrisy, and without guile, reproving betimes with sharpness, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, and then showing forth afterwards an increase of love toward him whom thou hast reproved, lest he esteem thee to be his enemy: that he may know that thy faithfulness is stronger than the cords of death; thy bowels also being full of charity towards all men, and to the household of faith, and virtue garnish thy thoughts unceasingly, then shall thy confidence wax strong in the presence of God, and the doctrine of the priesthood shall distill upon thy soul as the dews from heaven. The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth, and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion, and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever."—Mill Star, vol. 17, page 85. (Utah Ed. D. C. p. 424.)

Did those holding the priesthood heed these wise teachings? Let the record of events answer. William Marks was dropped from his quorum, the High Council of Nauvoo, and from the presidency of the stake, for no other reason than that he stood up in defense of Sidney Rigdon before the High Council; a thing which he not only had the right to do, but which some of the High Council are in duty bound to do, the law governing that body requiring that half of its members shall stand in defense of the accused.

"Elder S. Bent explained and said the reason why the High Council dropped Elder Marks, was because he did not acknowledge the authority of the Twelve, but the authority of Elder Rigdon."—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, page 692.

Again we read:—

"Elder W. W. Phelps arose and offered a motion that Elder Sidney Rigdon be cut off from the church, and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repents. Bishop Whitney then presented the motion to the High Council, and the vote was unanimous in the affirmative. Elder W. W. Phelps then offered the same motion to the church, upon which President Young arose and requested the congregation to place themselves so that they could see all who voted. We want to know who goes for Sidney and who are for the Twelve. He then called upon the church to signify whether they was in favor of the motion. The vote was unanimous, excepting a few of Elder Rigdon's party numbering about ten. He then requested those who were for Sidney Rigdon to manifest it, and as before-stated there was about ten. Elder Phelps then motioned, that all who have voted to follow Elder Rigdon should be suspended until they can have a trial before the High Council. An amendment was offered, as follows: 'or shall hereafter be found advocating his principles.' The vote was unanimous in the affirmative."—Ibid, page 686.

Not much "long-suffering, kindness, and love unfeigned" about that proceeding sure. Not only is the above instruction in regard to dealing with offenders entirely ignored here, but in the cutting off, or suspending of those who voted in the negative, one of the very foundation laws of the church was violated.

In a quotation previously made from section 27 Doctrine and Covenants (Sec. 28 Utah edition) the law of common consent is laid down:—

"For all things must be done in order and by common consent in the church by the prayer of faith."

Here were two parties placed before the church for acceptance or rejection, to be voted upon in a manner similar to the method used at our presidential elections in the United States; and, the majority cites the minority to trial. What a spectacle for free men to contemplate! You have the right to vote as you please, but remember that if you do not vote for me, I will have you up before the High Council and cut you off from the church

if you don't repent. All the sacred feelings of a man who loves freedom would revolt at such a spectacle; and yet they have the audacity to tell us that God sanctioned such things, and chose the very men who not only permitted, but who abetted the wrong, as his only representatives on earth. My mind goes back to a statement previously quoted:—

"When we undertake to cover our sins, or to gratify our pride, our vain ambition, or to exercise control, or dominion or compulsion, upon the souls of the children of men, in any degree of unrighteousness, behold the heavens withdraw themselves, the Spirit of the Lord is grieved; and when it is withdrawn, amen to the priesthood of that man."

But the chapter does not end here; we read on:—

"Elder Hyde arose and stated that Elder Samuel James had promised to preach a funeral sermon at the request of President Young. He came at the time appointed and preached anything but a funeral sermon, and after he got through he said, if Brigham Young wanted a funeral sermon preached, he might preach it himself. He considered that this was unchristianlike conduct, and he moved that Samuel James be disfellowshipped from the church. The vote was unanimous. He further said, Whereas Jared Carter has gone on some mission, contrary to council, under the new revelation, I move that fellowship be withdrawn from him, and that it be published in the next Neighbor and Times and Seasons. The vote was unanimous. Elder Amasa Lyman motioned that Samuel Bennett be cut off from the church, for having received a false ordination. The vote was unanimous. Elder Lyman motioned that Leonard Soby be cut off for the same cause, with Samuel Bennett. The vote was unanimous. It was motioned and seconded, that Joseph H. Newton be cut off from the church. The vote was unanimous. It was motioned and seconded that John A. Forgeus be cut off from the church. The vote was unanimous."—Ibid. page 687.

In none of these cases does the record show that the accused were labored with; neither does it show that they were cited to trial, nor that they were allowed to speak for themselves; nor that there was a chance to move for a new trial. But snap judgment was taken upon them, and in the last two cases not even the formality of preferring a charge against them was gone through with—all contrary to the laws and usages of the church. Did these men who that day sat in judgment on their brethren correctly represent Christ, who is "full of compassion, and gracious, longsuffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth"?—(Psalms 86: 15.)

It may be urged that these were extraordinary times and needed extraordinary measures; but there is no time when God's law can be trampled upon without suffering loss; and the more extraordinary the times the closer should men have adhered to the law and the testimony. There is special provision made in the law for such occasions as this under consideration. In section 104, Doctrine and Covenants (107, Utah edition) we read of the organization of the different quorums of the church. The Presidency, the Twelve, and the Seventy, all equal in authority. Specific directions are given as to the manner in which decisions, to be binding on the church, shall be made: "And every decision made by either of these quorums must be by the unanimous voice of the same; that is, every member in each quorum must be agreed to its decisions, in order to make their decisions of the same power, or validity one with another. (A majority may form a quorum, when circumstances render it impossible to be otherwise.) Unless this is the case, their decisions are not entitled to the same blessings which the decisions of a quorum of three presidents were anciently, who were ordained after the order of Melchisedec, and were righteous and holy men. The decisions of these quorums, or either of them, are to be made in all righteousness, in holiness and lowliness of heart, meekness and long-suffering, and in faith and virtue and knowledge; temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, because the promise is, if these things abound in them, they shall not be unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord."

I am not going to deny here that the Twelve had the right to regulate the affairs of the church at the time of Joseph Smith's death; for I believe they not only had the right, but that the law makes it their specific duty to do so; and had they not attempted to stand in the breach at that time they would undoubtedly have been subject to just censure; but I do deny their right to attempt to regulate contrary to the covenants and commandments, and the rules that had become fixtures in the church law, not only by the command of God, but also by having been accepted by the church in legislative assembly.

THE MARTYR'S STATEMENT, ETC.

That the church needed to be regulated and that it was trembling to its fall, I learn by a statement made to W. W. Phelps by the Prophet Joseph Smith, in a letter dated November 27, 1832; and which partakes of the nature of a revelation from God. The extract I wish to call attention to is as follows:—

"Yea, thus saith the still small voice, which whispereth through and pierceth all things, and oftentimes it maketh my bones to quake while it maketh manifest, saying: 'And it shall come to pass that I the Lord God will send one mighty and strong, holding the scepter of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words; while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot the inheritances of the saints, whose names are found, and the names of their fathers, and of their children enrolled in the book of the law of God: while that man, who was called of God and appointed, that putteth forth his hand to steady the ark of God, shall fall by the shaft of death, like a tree that is smitten by the vivid shaft of lightning.'—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 673; Millennial Star, vol. 14, p. 284. D. C. Utah Ed. p. 301.

Language could not be plainer than this, and the interpretation could not be surer than that the ark of God—the church—was trembling to its fall, and that the man of God chosen and appointed—Joseph Smith—would put forth his hand to steady it and in that act would be smitten suddenly. One of the very last official acts of Joseph Smith was to exercise his appointed right to designate who should be his successor, and following out the covenants and commandments, appointed and anointed one from his own posterity to succeed him, and while he could not install a successor while he himself lived, he could and did designate who that one should be; and in solemn assembly anointed and blessed his eldest son, Joseph, to that office, conferring upon him all the powers that he himself held, as can amply be proven.

It is true that B. H. Roberts, of the Utah Church, devotes several pages of his book on "succession" to attempting to prove that Joseph never conferred any blessing on his posterity, except to will them a house to live in; but George Q. Cannon, in a sermon delivered on the birthday of the Prophet in 1894, said that he did, and instructed the people of the Utah Church to make the matter a subject of prayer that Joseph's posterity may come into the inheritance of the promised blessing. "We need a voice from heaven now to tell us which to follow, Rabbi Cannon, or Rabbi Roberts; for of course both must be right.

PROMISES CONCERNING JOSEPH'S SEED, ETC.

To show that these promises were made, I will quote. Joseph says in his history: "December 6, 1832, I received the following: [Then follows the revelation explaining the parable of the wheat and the tares; and in that revelation we find the following:] 'Therefore, thus saith the Lord unto you, with whom the priesthood hath continued through the lineage of your fathers, for ye are lawful heirs, according to the flesh, and have been hid from the world with Christ in God: therefore your life and the priesthood hath remained, and must need remain, through you and your lineage, until the restoration of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began.'—D. C. 84:3. (Utah edition 86:8-10.)

After all the quibbling done by Utah elders to make it appear that Joseph Smith was not alone referred to here, the fact remains that he at least was referred to, and he is the only one of whose identity we are certain, in connection with this revelation.

But God does clearly reveal himself on the question. In a later revelation in regard to the Nauvoo House he says:—

"Let it be built unto my name, and let my name be named upon it, and let my servant Joseph and his house have place therein, from generation to generation; for this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall also be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, in thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed."—D. C. 107:18 (Utah ed. 124:56-58).

Did the Twelve recognize and acknowledge one of the last acts of their martyred prophet? No. They ignored this, or most of them did; and yet Brigham Young as their spokesman could arise before the people and say that the Twelve and the measures of Joseph and Hyrum and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, etc., formed one party. The Twelve as a quorum did not in their decisions become unanimous. Three of the Twelve (to their honor be it said) refused to follow the lead of Brigham. These were William Smith, brother of the prophet, Lyman Wight, and John E. Page. The first two mentioned we know were loyal to the cause of the eldest son of the prophet, and recognized the official act of his father in his appointment. Lyman Wight always bore testimony that he had his hands upon the head of young Joseph with his father when he blessed him to be his successor; and any claim contrary to this was scornfully rejected by him. B. H. Roberts claims that no such claim could be true, because of the silence of history on the subject; but we find that he was not careful enough in his search, for in a letter written by James Kay, and dated St. Louis, Missouri, November 22, 1845, he says that William Smith and G. J. Adams were at that time in St. Louis, advocating the claims of young Joseph. He says:—

"He [William Smith] contends the church is disorganized, having no head; that the Twelve are not, nor ever were, ordained to be head of the church; that Joseph's priesthood was to be conferred on his posterity to all future generations, and that young Joseph is the only legal successor to the presidency of the church."—Millennial Star, vol. 7, p. 134.

This shows that the claim was made and had advocates immediately after the death of the prophet. But the main thing that I want to show is that the Twelve ignored the rule laid down in the law that upon all things there should be a unanimous vote in order to make their decisions valid and binding on the church—a wise provision to protect the church from evil.

CONDITIONS, ETC., AND METHODS USED.

Every quorum of the church was divided upon the questions at issue. Quite a number of the Seventy, including some of the presidents, withdrew from Brigham Young's party and opposed his measures. The High Council was divided, and in order to get a set of men that would do Brigham's will, the council was reconstructed, the recalcitrant ones dropped, and more obedient ones were put in, as anyone can see by the reading of the history of those times, with the quotations above given.

Excuse is made for this that the clause inserted in parenthesis in the revelation requiring unity reads: "(A majority may form a quorum when circumstances render it impossible to be otherwise.)" But note, it does not say that a majority may form a decision, but a majority may form a quorum; but when that majority is formed into a quorum, all must without exception agree to its decisions. The Twelve were present in full as a quorum in Nauvoo, but they failed to agree, and instead of going prayerfully and humbly to work and forming measures from God's word upon which they all could agree, they set the three disagreeing ones aside, and went on to form a quorum out of material that would agree to the theories set out by those who were ambitious of power, a most dangerous policy for the establishment of truth and the carrying out of righteous principles. So with the High Council.

At the beginning of Rigdon's trial said council was composed of Whitney, Marks, Rich, Bent, Allred, Wilson, Cutler, Fulmer, Harris, Grover, Johnson, and Sherwood; at its close, they were Bent, Allred, Wilson, Harris, Huntington, Knight, Cutler, Johnson, Sherwood, Grover, Benson, and Fulmer. Three had been dropped out—Whitney, Marks, and Rich. Whitney and Rich were promoted. Marks for daring to speak and vote his sentiments and perform what it was his duty to do, was entirely left out. So with all the other quorums.

The departures from the law here are too numerous to mention, so I will cease to enumerate and pass on to the next.

The law as found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants provides for only seven quorums of Seventy.

"And it is according to the vision, showing the order of the seventy, that they should have seven presidents to preside over them, chosen out of the number of the seventy, and the seventh president of these presidents is to preside over the six; and these seven presidents are to choose other seventy besides the first seventy, to whom they belong, and are to preside over them; and also other seventy until seven time seventy, if the labor in the vineyard of necessity requires it."—D. C. 104: 43. (Utah ed. 107: 93-96).

As soon as Joseph Smith was dead Brigham Young and his associates organized enough at least, to complete eleven quorums. At the October conference of 1844, one item of business reads:—

"The remainder of the afternoon was spent in filling up the quorums of seventies, and at the close, eleven quorums were filled and properly organized, and about forty elders organized as a part of the twelfth quorum."—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, page 696.

The reader can see that this, when compared with the above quotation from the Doctrine and Covenants, is a direct violation of law; but Brigham had to have some place for his pets, and in order to accommodate all he had to make places for them, and this departure from the law has gone on until there are in the Utah Church to-day over one hundred quorums of seventy.

The law as contained in the books says:—

"The president of the church, who is also the president of the council [general High Council], is appointed by revelation, and acknowledged, in his administration, by the voice of the church; and it is according to the dignity of his office, that he should preside over the council of the church; and it is his privilege to be assisted by two other presidents, appointed after the same manner that he himself was appointed; and in case of the absence of one or both of those who are appointed to assist him, he has power to preside over the council without an assistant; and in case that he himself is absent, the other presidents have power to preside, in his stead, both or either of them."—D. C. 99: 6. (Utah Ed. 102: 9-11).

The latter clause of this was violated in denying Sidney Rigdon his right, as one of the First Presidency, to preside; the first part was violated when the remaining members of the Twelve elected Brigham Young President of the Church and Heber C. Kimball and Willard Richards his counselors, without even the semblance of a revelation, in December, 1847, at or near Council Bluffs, Iowa. The taking of these three from the Quorum of the Twelve only left six (as Wight, Page, and Smith did not leave Nauvoo with them); and, as a majority alone could form a quorum, hence the action was illegal from that standpoint.

A rather poor beginning towards regulating the church, I hear some one say. Bad enough, surely, but the end is not yet, and it seems as though when men start out in the wrong way, the farther they go the farther they stray. Jacob, in the Book of Mormon, says:—

"And were it not that I must speak unto you concerning a grosser crime, my heart would rejoice exceedingly, because of you. But the word of God burthens me because of your grosser crimes."—Jacob 2d chapter.

So in the contemplation of this latter-day apostasy I wish it were possible to leave out the grosser departures from the faith, but the interests of truth demand that all be told. A bolder stroke in the departure from the faith was about to be made, but it needed preparation. The people must be taken to a place where law could not reach them. So a resolution is passed to move in a body to the West. (Millennial Star, vol. 6, p. 197.)

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.

District conference convened with the West Plains branch, November 14, 1896. C. J. Spurlock president, W. A. Brooner secretary. Branch reports: West Plains 56; Burnham 40; Vera Cruz 89; Woodside 36; Ozark 46; Springfield 34. Ministry reporting: Elders C. J. Spurlock, C. M. Bootman, A. M. D. McGuire, J. P. Knox; Priests E. Coose and G. W. Bootman. A petition from the saints near Bruner, asking for a branch to be organized there was presented, and on motion the district president and missionary in charge were requested to organize said branch as soon as practicable; the same to contain all saints living nearer to Bruner than to other branches. The Bishop's agent's report showed there had been paid in tithes $9.75; balance last report $19.40; total $29.15; paid out $29; on hand 15 cents. Due elders' families $157. C. J. Spurlock was chosen president; C. M. Bootman vice president; W. A. Brooner clerk and treasurer. Preaching by Elders McGuire, Bootman, and Spurlock. Adjourned to meet with the Burnham branch, on Friday before the third Sunday in March at ten o'clock.

ST. LOUIS.

District conference convened in St. Louis, Missouri, on Saturday, November 21, 1896, at ten a. m. Elder M. H. Bond chosen to preside, George F. Barraclough, clerk pro tem. Elders M. H. Bond, N. N. Cooke, J. E. Betts, Sr., J. E. Betts, Jr., W. Jaques, A. S. Davison, C. J. Peat, H. Roberts, R. Hughes, and Ivor Davies reported. Teachers G. Elliott, G. F. Barraclough, and F. Wiley, and Deacon J. A. Swift reported. Branch reports: St. Louis 287. Belleville 55. Oak Hill 12. Moselle 10; 1 baptized, 1 died. Bishop's agent, John G. Smith's report: Balance due agent $5.85; received $166.80; paid out $166.85; due agent 5 cents. Report was audited and found correct. A communication from Elder I. N. White was read, urging the propriety of transferring Phelps County, Missouri, from the jurisdiction of the St. Louis district to that of the Southwest Missouri district. By motion was so transferred. Tent service report was given by Bro. A. D. Greer as not having been so successful as desired, owing to the weather, lack of interest, etc. Receipts $26.01; expended for oil, hauling, etc., $3.45; for Bro. G. F. Barraclough $10.35; A. D. Greer $12.21; total $26.01. Report approved. An appeal was taken by Bro. George A. Forbes from the action of the St. Louis branch in disfellowshipping him. The chairman was authorized to appoint a court of elders to hear the appeal and he be granted a new trial. In the appeal case of Bro. William J. Price, the court of elders recommended a milder penalty than that of expulsion. This recommendation was not granted. Sunday morning preaching by Elder M. H. Bond; afternoon, sacrament and testimony; evening preaching by Elder R. Archibald. Adjourned to St. Louis, Missouri, the second Saturday in March, 1897.

WESTERN MAINE.

District conference convened with Brays Mountain branch, November 14, 15, 1896; W. G. Pert chosen to preside, J. E. Eaton clerk pro tem. Elders reporting: J. C. Foss, U. W. Greene, W. G. Pert, J. B. Eaton. Priest, J. E. Eaton. Branches reporting: West Surry, Little Deer Isle, Greens Landing, Brays Mountain. Bishop's agent's report referred to an auditing committee and found correct: On hand last report $3.35; received $81.75; paid out $74.24; on hand $10.86. U. W. Greene and W. W. Blanchard were chosen delegates to General Conference. Sr. Lucinda C. Carle was received on her original baptism. Preaching by J. C. Foss and U. W. Greene. One baptized during conference. Adjourned to Little Deer Isle, the Saturday and Sunday before the full moon in May, 1897.

A NECESSITY AS WELL AS A PRIZE.
THE CHURCH HISTORY.

THERE are some things the saints cannot afford to be without. The first of these, is the truth; this I trust all have received and greatly prize. The second, is the history of the work and events which acted an important part in bringing this truth to us.

The first we must have because in it is our hope. The second we must have so that we may be enabled to properly prize, promulge, and defend that truth. Jesus prays: "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." This word is also called "The Gospel," which is the truth referred to as containing our hope.

In the Church History, the facts bearing upon the work of this gospel truth is more fully and accurately set forth than in any other work published, or as yet attempted.

The saints need it for themselves; they need it for their neighbors; and they must help send it to all the world.

Let the facts be known, and if we cannot succeed in the light of these, we do not deserve success. But on the contrary, the facts harmonizing with the work and teaching of the Reorganized Church, the old "ship of Zion" will move forward majestically, and every lover of the truth should bear aloft the banner.

The first volume of this work is now ready. It contains 675 pages with index, and is put in at the low figure of one dollar and fifty cents a copy. We wish full subscription at once so as to help us in getting out the second volume which is awaiting in manuscript. We should have two thousand names by January next.

Let us hear from you at once. Remit to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa. E. L. KELLEY, PASTORAL.

Dear Saints and Friends of Oregon and Washington:—Having been forced to leave my field of labor in the month of September, on account of sickness, and knowing that many of you feel a deep interest in me, I wish to say that I am yet very feeble, only able to sit up a part of the time; but feel that I am improving through the tender nursing of my wife, and the anxious prayers that have been daily offered for me; but yet my case is a very doubtful one; I can say I never felt more anxious to labor in the Lord's vineyard than I do at present; in fact I feel more anxious—for I feel that the church is now passing through trials and difficulties, and that she needs all of her strength; that every one who is capable of bearing gospel armor should be on the watchtower. All I can say now is, if I recover, and the wisdom of the church so direct, I would gladly come to you again and labor as God might give me strength.

I remember with a grateful heart your every act of kindness and words of encouragement, and pray that the Lord of the harvest will abundantly reward you.

Our mission president, Bro. Luff, writes me that he is improving in health slowly, but I hardly think he will be able to visit you this year; but will venture to say that he will do all he can for you at the spring conference. Until such time, let me exhort you, dear saints, to be faithful, don't let a spirit of jealousy get among you; be as Paul exhorts: "Let the members have the same care one for another," and see that no evil speaking, or backbiting, or talebearing gets a lodgement among you; for such is the cause of very much of the evil that befalls the saints. It is now just as it was in Paul's day.

Let the local ministry do what labor they can consistently with the hard times, and so labor and wait, that when the Lord sends you a minister, that he will have nothing to do but to unfurl the banner of Christ, and preach what he finds you preaching, so a two-fold testimony will be offered that may not be impeached. And may God bless you, one and all, is my earnest prayer.

RAILROAD HALF FARE PERMITS.

Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger Association, writing under date of December 2, 1896, has requested an official list "showing the regularly authorized clergymen or missionaries . . . who devote their entire time to religious work, depending on that for support and who have no other occupation."

He has been furnished a list of all General Conference appointees known to be actively engaged and entitled to permits.

District and branch presidents, also those appointed to labor in fields or districts, who may come within the rules of said Association, should obtain and forward certificates of indorsement from general missionaries in charge. The Chairman has been furnished a list of said general missionaries in charge and notified that indorsements by them are authoritative.

All applications are required to be made by applicants individually. Blank forms can be obtained from local agents of Association lines, or on application to B. D. Caldwell, Chairman Western Passenger Association, Chicago, Illinois. Said blanks contain full particulars concerning rules governing issuance of permits to both missionaries and local pastors.

The Association authorities have been requested to issue permits promptly to avoid delay in the work of the coming year.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Eastern Maine district will convene with the Indian River saints, December 19, 20. The brethren holding priesthood are requested to bring or send in written reports of labor.

S. O. FOSS, Pres.

The Northern Wisconsin district conference will convene with the Evergreen branch, at Valley Junction, Monroe County, Wisconsin, December 19, 20. All are cordially invited to attend. We want branch reports with all the changes since last report; also the officers' reports in full. Come, and with the Spirit of God, and let us have a good time.

MARRIED.

BREW—SPENCER.—At the home of the bride, Omaha, Nebraska, November 26, 1896, Sr. Ellen Spencer to Mr. John Brew, Elder F. A. Smith officiating. There was quite a gathering of friends present to see them start on life's stormy sea; quite a number of useful presents were given, and all seemed peaceful and bright.

WALDEN — TABBUT. — On November 26, 1896, at the residence of the bride's parents, Bro. Henry Walden to Sr. Grace M. Tabbut, both of Otter Tail County, Minnesota; Elder Marcus Erickson officiating.

DIED.

PYLE.—At Lamoni, Iowa, November 24, 1896, of dropsy, Mr. Cortez Pyle, aged 79 years, 9 months, and 10 days. He was born in Kentucky. In 1818 his parents removed to Perry County, Illinois, where he grew to manhood and was married in 1842. In 1855 they removed to Worth County, Missouri, and thence to Lamoni in 1881. He lived an honorable life, but never united with any religious body. His wife became a member of the Reorganized Church of Christ in 1870, and he had great respect for it, but held that a proper life of morality and honesty was all the preparation needful for the future. After nearly fifty-five years of companionship with him his wife is left to mourn. Of nine sons and daughters born to them seven remain. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Elder A. S. Cochran.

MONROE.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, November 29, 1896, Sr. Anna M., wife of Bro. Isaac Monroe, aged 32 years, 5 months, and 23 days. She was the daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Jane Buckingham, and was born in Salt Lake City in 1864. They removed thence to Idaho and then to Oregon, where they united with the Reorganized Church, being all baptized by Elder J. C. Clapp on October 3, 1875. Never having been connected with polygamy their lives were free from any taint of it. The parents were pure and just in their natures, and the daughters inherited like dispositions. The family came to Lamoni in October, 1881. The father died that winter and the mother two years later. Sr. Anna married Bro. Monroe, January 3, 1886. She leaves five children, the youngest but ten days old. She was very amiable, patient, generous, and unselfish in her character, and has left a spotless record as a member of the church, and as daughter, wife, mother, sister, and friend. The loss to husband, children, and three loving sisters, is very great. The sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Elder T. J. Bell.

SHUPE. — Elder Isaac Shupe was born March 21, 1826, in Wythe County, Virginia; was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ when about sixteen years old. Removed from Virginia to Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1843; from thence to Lee County, Iowa, in 1846. Was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth M. Durfee, October 17, 1849. He and his companion became identified with the Reorganized Church, December 11, 1859; they removed to Harrison County, Iowa, in the spring of 1880, and settled in Magnolia in the spring of 1885. Their union was a happy one, and was blessed with nine children, three of whom are now living, and with his faithful and widowed companion deeply mourn his loss. He departed this life after a long and painful illness November 18, 1896, at his own home. During all his great suffering he never lost faith in God nor in the gospel of Jesus Christ, but was resigned to the will of God, come life or death. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." The saints in Magnolia deeply sympathize with the lonely aged widow. May God give her comfort, both spiritual and physical, and may his children never forget their duty to the widow. Charles Derry preached his funeral from Psalms 116:15, Isaiah 25:8, assisted by Elder Fyrand.

TAYLOR. — At his home near Bartlett, Iowa, Bro. William Taylor, October 11, 1896. He was born in England, May, 1827; baptized into the Reorganized Church of Christ, in the spring of 1863, in California; came to Fremont County, Iowa, by way of Utah, in 1865. He leaves three sons, one daughter, quite a number of relatives, and a host of true friends. Bro. William was a true man in all his dealings with his fellows, and was considered strictly honest. As such has passed over to receive his reward. Funeral services at the home, and sermon at the schoolhouse in Bartlett, by Elder Henry Hemp.

KINZIE.—At his home three miles east of Maysville, Missouri, Cecil, son of Bro. and Sr. Kinzie, passed peacefully away at the age of 8 months and 8 days, on October 30, 1896. His little body was laid away in mother earth; his spirit went back to God. The funeral was preached at the Gospel Hill church November 22, 1896, by Elder J. M. Terry, assisted by Elders J. T. Kinnaman and J. D. Flanders.

HODGE.—At his home in Springfield, Sarpy County, Nebraska, November 5, 1896, Bro. George C. Hodge. He was born June 18, 1820, in Glasgow, Scotland; came to Canada, thence to the United States, going as far as Utah. He joined that faction of the church in 1850, and April 10, 1878, was baptized into the Reorganized Church, at Plain City, Utah, by T. A. Robson, and by him ordained an elder November 10, 1878. Came to Sarpy County, Nebraska, in 1880, where he remained until his death. He leaves an aged companion, four daughters, and several grandchildren to mourn his loss. Funeral sermon by Elder F. A. Smith in Congregational Church to a crowded house.

WEBB.—At Knox, Indiana, Miss Bertha Irene, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Samuel Webb, died November 23, 1896; aged 13 years and 21 days. Dying of diphtheria, there was no public funeral. She was loved by almost everyone that knew her; she was a sister in the Latter Day Saints' Church.

JONES.—Sr. Louisa Jones passed from this life in Malad City, Idaho, at the hour of midnight, Sunday, November 15, 1896. She was born at Brymbo, Denbighshire, North Wales, September 16, 1816; her maiden name was Edwards. In 1837 she was married to Richard P. Jones, which union was blessed with ten children; the remaining four sons and three daughters were present at the funeral services, which were conducted at the saints' chapel in Malad, Sunday, November 22. Sermon by Elder R. J. Anthony. She was laid to rest in the Malad cemetery by the side of her companion, who preceded her to the other shore some seven years. She united with the church in 1846; in 1856 emigrated to America, and in 1861 to Utah. Not satisfied with the Utah philosophy, her husband cast his lot with the Reorganization, and immediately after his death, in September, 1889, she united with the church, and remained a devoted believer to the last, passing away in full hope of the promises made to the faithful.

PURCELL.—Daniel Floyd, son of D. M. and Laura B. Purnell; born October 2, 1894, died October 18, 1896. Services from Latter Day Saint's chapel Logan, Iowa. Sermon by A. M. Fyrand.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portrayures of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders.

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL, WORDS ONLY.

Popular, Low-Priced Edition.

All the hymns—words without music—of the Saints' Hymnal. A popular low-priced edition, issued to meet the demand for hymn books at lowest possible prices. Size about 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches; handy for the pocket.

This word edition is arranged with hymns numbered to correspond to the regular "word and music" edition of the Hymnal, also to the "Saints' Harmony," numbers corresponding to both being indicated with every hymn.

In plain limp cloth, cut flush..25 cts.

Full cloth, durable binding...35 cts.

N.B.—The "word edition" will be supplied in any style on order. However, purchasers wanting higher-priced binding will do well to order it in the "music and word" edition.

Branches ordering the Hymnal in lots for branch use can have the name of branch stamped free in gilt on each copy.

DENUNCIATIONS OF CHIEF JUSTICE COLERIDGE.

THE courts of any country are especially qualified to render authoritative opinions regarding the effect of the liquor business. There is probably no man who ever won a higher place in the judicial circles of any country than the late Lord Chief Justice Coleridge of England. After years of service at the head of the highest court of Britian, Lord Coleridge died two years ago and was succeeded by Lord Charles Russell, the present Chief Justice. Lord Coleridge was profoundly impressed with the evils of the rum business from his experiences on the bench, and frequently spoke his opinions in the plainest language. At Durham in 1877, referring to the drink business, he said:—

"The crimes of violence, which in a large proportion fill the calendar, without a single exception have begun in public houses, and are due to drunkenness. . . . I think it is in the course of my duty to say that, within my experience as a judge, and having lived some considerable time in the world amongst other judges, and judges of much larger experience than myself, it is certainly the case that if we could make England sober we might shut up nine tenths of the jails."

The next year, at Bristol, he expressed himself thus:—

"I suppose it is because the fact is so plain that nobody pays the slightest attention to it; viz., that drunkenness is a vice which fills the jails of England, and that if we could make England sober we could do away with nine-tenths of the prisons."

At Manchester, in 1881, he made this remarkable statement:—

"All the cases that have come before me, with one exception, have had their beginning or ending in drink."

Ten years later, in a speech at Birmingham, he gave it as his opinion that:—

"Drunkenness is mainly the cause of the commoner sorts of crime, and if England could be made sober, three-fourths of her jails might be closed."

Two years before his death, at Liverpool, he made this public declaration:—

"At a moderate estimate something like nineteen twentieths of the crime that has to be tried in courts is due to drink."

This is the cold opinion of one of the greatest judicial minds that Great Britian ever produced.

On another occasion, Lord Justice Coleridge said:—

"I can keep no terms with a vice that fills our jails; that destroys the comfort of homes and the peace of families, and debases and brutalizes the people of these islands."—The Voice.

A PLEA FOR PLAIN FOOD.
HINTS THAT MAY SAVE MANY DOCTORS' BILLS AND VALUABLE LIVES.

IT is not a generally understood fact, but a fact nevertheless, that some of the wealthiest and most luxurious appearing people live on the plainest food. There are children in the families of millionaires who would no more be permitted to partake of such meals as are given to the children of many a laboring man than they would be allowed to use articles that were known to be poisonous. Many a mechanic's little ones live on meat, warm bread, all the butter they want, and that of an inferior quality, coffee as much as they choose, and cheap bakers' cake, which is in itself enough to ruin the digestion of an ostrich.

The children of one family make their breakfast of oatmeal or some other cereal and milk, with bread at least twenty-four hours old, a little, very little, butter, sometimes none at all. The breakfast is varied by corn bread, well done, a little zwieback and sometimes stale bread dipped in egg and cracker crumbs and browned with butter. A fresh egg is often the only article outside of farinaceous food that they are allowed. For dinner, which is the middle of the day, they have some well-cooked meat, one or two vegetables, a cup of milk if they like it, or weak cocoa, with plenty of bread and butter and a simple dessert. Supper, which is a very light meal, frequently consists of graham crackers or brown bread and milk or the pudding, eaten with a little molasses or maple syrup.

A few days ago, in a call at the house of a workingman, there were five children seated at a table, on which was a large dish of meat, swimming with gravy, in which potatoes had been cooked. These potatoes were saturated with fat and almost impossible of digestion by any person of ordinary constitution. There hot rolls, soggy looking and smoking from the oven; parsnips fried in lard and reeking with the grease. A pile of cheap cakes, sufficient to fill a good sized four quart measure, stood on one corner of the table; also two pies, with crust containing so much lard that they looked absolutely greasy. There was coffee, dark and rank looking and worse smelling, and this the children were indulging in quite as much as they pleased. They ate like little wolves, with an unnatural and ferocious appetite. Two of them had pasty, unhealthy looking complexions; one was evidently suffering from some skin disease; the elder of the group had an ugly looking eruption on his face and ears, and the entire lot were living examples of the results of a mistaken system of feeding. It was no surprise to the visitor to hear, a few days later, that two of them were very ill, one hopelessly so, with cholera morbus.

That the death rate among such people does not increase with frightful rapidity is the one thing that the thoughtful persons and philanthropists never cease to wonder at.

The parents of these children would undoubtedly have said that they gave the little ones the best they could afford, but this was just exactly the cause of all the troubles. They gave them too much and too expensive food. A proper diet would have cost a third of the money and would have saved health and doctor's bills, to say nothing of their lives.—New York Ledger.

President Lincoln's profound respect for the Constitution of his country, the religious faith which sustained him in the many trials to which he was subjected, and his earnest solicitude for the welfare of the private soldiers of the Union Army, exemplified in many striking instances, are interestingly narrated by Ex-Senator James F. Wilson, of Iowa, in an article entitled "Some Memories of Lincoln," in the December number of the North American Review.

Dr. S. B. GOWELL,

305 Independence Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, will send till further notice "How not to be sick" for 12 cents; former price 50 cents.

LAMONI, IOWA, DEC. 16, 1896.

THE SPIRIT OF IT.

WE give the following extracts from a press report of a congress of the American Secular Union and Free Thought Federation, that our readers may judge as to its spirit and intent. We agree with one speaker in his opposition to the uniting of church and state affairs, but are just as strongly opposed to narrowness and intolerance toward religious societies or persons. Lengthy comment seems unnecessary:—

The occasion was the annual congress of the American Secular Union and Free Thought Federation, and also the convention of the 296th year of the Era of Man, which began with the martyrdom of Giordano Bruno, the Italian anti-Christian writer, in A. D. 1600.

The speakers of the morning were President Samuel P. Putnam, George W. Foote, editor of the London Free Thinker, President of the British Secular Society and the successor of Charles Bradlaugh; ex-Judge C. B. Waite of Chicago, and Charles Watts, Vice-President of the British society.

George W. Foote electrified his hearers by saying:—

"I would rather breakfast with the Devil to-morrow, if there is such an individual, than with any clergyman. The Devil is noted all over the world for his cleverness, his experience, and his information. On the other hand, it is generally the fool of the family who goes into religion."

President Putnam opened the congress with an address on "The work we have to do." He said:—

"Our American Republic in its beginning was a wonderful outburst of freedom, and yet to-day in this republic we are threatened with tyranny and superstition. It is our work to place the republic on its original foundations; to anchor it to the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

"We have been drifting away from these principles; we are repeating again the errors of the past. What we oppose is not religion in itself, but the union of religion with the State. The exemption of church property from taxation, the Bible in the schools, the enforcement of Sabbath laws, these are instances of the degeneration of the government. A great conflict is before us. A powerful effort is now being made for the enthronement of Christianity in the Constitution. A vast number of petitions are circulating throughout the country in behalf of this Christian movement. The issue is direct, and we must meet it by every means in our power.

"Our platform is universal. No true American can oppose it. It is not a question of doctrine, of philosophy, or a theory of science. We may differ in regard to these things. We do not undertake to settle the problem of the universe. We cannot solve the mysteries of death. We do not enter the world of speculation. We stand upon fundamental and unquestionable principles. We stand for human freedom and the rights of man. We admit the vast importance and profound interest of other questions.

"All differences are lost in this one tremendous and vital question. We must work for the rights of man; to give to each human being the same rights which we claim for ourselves. We labor not to divide, but to unite, the human race. There can be no union except by equality of rights. We do not war upon religion. Let religion be free is what we ask. Let it depend upon reason, upon science, upon education, but not upon the sword of the State." . . .

Charles Watts, Vice President of the British Secular Society, spoke on the agnostic fundamentals.

"The free-thought philosophy is based on three fundamental principles," he said. "The first is that supreme attention should be paid to this life. The second is that reason, aided by experience, is the best guide. The third is that the eclectic principle should be applied to all thought and movements." . . .

George W. Foote, the English free-thinker, told of his experience in what he termed a "British Bastile." . . .

"Preachers are paid nuisances," Mr. Foote said in conclusion. "They are professional guessers. They get up every Sunday and tell the people, for cash payment, what they have guessed during the week. And I guess the people are fools enough to pay."

INTERVENTION TO CONTROL TURKEY.

ANOTHER great step forward in the interests of humanity and in fulfillment of prophecy has been taken by the leading powers of Europe, who practically have concluded upon a course of action concerning the regulation of Turkish affairs. Full particulars regarding the action of the powers are not yet obtainable, but this much seems to be known: Russia, France, and England have agreed to compel the Sultan to adopt radical reforms under a joint supervision of the powers, and have asked and obtained the consent of Germany, Austria, and Italy to send a combined fleet through the straits to Constantinople if necessary to enforce their demands.

It is said that English and French influences have finally awakened the Czar's government to a sense of responsibility for its past policy of inaction; that Russia consented some time ago to intervention, but discussion of ways and means occupied some three months and those dictated by Russia were finally accepted.

Demands for reforms will be made upon the Sultan that will guarantee the safety of all races in his domains, where Russia will maintain a practical mastery. Said demands are in the hands of M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador, who will consult with the French and English ambassadors at Constantinople, after which they will make a joint representation to the Sultan without delay.

Orders have been given to the British, Russian, and French squadrons in the Levant to prepare to enter the Bosphorus in the event of the Sultan's failure to yield immediate obedience to formal demands.

News to this effect has already reached the Sultan and has created a great sensation in his capital.

THE Church Union, a religious newspaper published in New York in the interest of the union of Christian churches, has issued a circular setting forth a formula written by "Ian Mac Laren," Dr. John Watson, the popular Scotch clergyman and writer, who recently visited America, which it requests the religious press to publish in furtherance of its efforts toward unity. The formula is denominated a "Life Creed," and reads as follows:—

I believe in the fatherhood of God. I believe in the words of Jesus. I believe in the clean heart. I believe in the service of love. I believe in the unworldly life. I believe in the Beatitudes. I promise to trust God and follow Christ, to forgive my enemies, and to seek after the righteousness of God.

We publish this excellent sentiment, not because we think it contains anything not included in the divine message of Christ to man, nor because we believe there is another basis of union than the gospel; but in harmony with the sentiment that recognizes the Christ life in the Christ message. We cannot agree with the statement made by the Brotherhood of Christian unity that this formula "changes the emphasis . . . from Christian doctrine to Christian character." Christian creeds are admittedly in error, but "the principles of the doctrine of Jesus Christ" are now as ever the power of God unto salvation, the only true basis of "church unity," and Christian doctrine and Christian life one and inseparable. The wording of Dr. Watson's Life Creed is comprehensive. If the Brotherhood accept this creed and "believe in" and proclaim "the words of Jesus" and "seek after the righteousness of God" revealed in "the gospel" (Romans 1:16), it will find it absolutely necessary to cast aside popular "Christian" creeds, so-called. But, does it really mean that it is willing to adopt the Christianity of Christ—original Christianity pure and simple—in their stead?

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOHN KALER, writing from Tuncurry, New South Wales, November 7, forwards some conscience money to the Herald Office. We let him speak for himself. His letter is addressed to the Business Manager:—

My conscience won't let me any longer keep my Herald and Autumn Leaves on the free list, in face of the fact that the office has standing out nearly $30,000. How saints can so treat their publishing house is a great wonder to me. I send you money order for $6 to pay for my Herald and Autumn Leaves for two years (combination price), from January 1, 1897; so please mark labels paid to January 1, 1899. I would have done this ere now, but money has not been very plentiful here for the past three years, or since I came to this mission. The work is moving along here; saints building a chapel in city of Sydney now, and twenty have been baptized since completion of the chapel at Hamilton. Success to you all at home in Zion, lovely land of Zion, for there is no land like it under the sun. God bless Bro. Joseph and all the faithful saints.

Bro. H. J. Hudson, Columbus, Nebraska, December 3:—

After nearly forty years of expectation to secure a reliable "history of the church" it is very consoling to know ere I close my eyes to earth's scenes that the young people of the church will have an effective weapon to combat the dignity of darkness now so arrogant in our popular church organizations. Please find two dollars for Vol. 1.

Brother Hiram Rathbun, Sr., sends the following:—

NOTICE.

No. 500 Logan Street,

LANSING, Michigan, Dec. 8, 1896.

Editors Herald:—We are now having preaching every Sabbath in Lansing, at 2:30 in the afternoon, and prayer meeting every Wednesday night. We will have special branch meeting on Christmas, the 25th inst. We very much desire and would very highly appreciate the attendance of Bro. E. C. Briggs. Please, Brother Briggs, come if you can.

HIRAM RATHBUN, SR.,

Branch President.

Bro. S. W. L. Scott, Kalamazoo, Michigan, December 7:—

Am enroute to Coldwater. Closed services last eve at Hartford with full house, many being turned away. We occupied eighteen times and baptized four, the last one, a young lady, was inducted into the body yesterday. This gives Hartford branch ten additions since the two days' meetings in October. The Sunday school is in nice progress and the work in general at that point seems onward. Interest enlarges. Bro. H. H. Robinson was at New Troy at last report.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

OUR list of letters is unusually large this week, much more so than for some time past, necessitating the omission of quite a number, because of lack of space.

Bro. J. A. Robinson wrote from Peoria, Illinois, where he was suddenly called upon to preach the funeral sermon of one who, distressed and deranged by long-continued illness, had committed suicide. Though pained by the distressing occurrence and somewhat at a loss concerning what to present, he was greatly aided as he proceeded to set forth the love and justness of Deity in dealing with man. Many heard who otherwise might never have listened to the restored gospel. Bro. Robinson's notice to the Nauvoo district president has received attention; this to him. Bro. R., is active, according as opportunities permit, sometimes preaching twice or three times on Sundays.

Pres. Joseph Smith arrived home from Illinois and Western Iowa on Wednesday, the 9th inst.

Bro. John Hawley, one of the veterans in the service, recently visited Lamoni, remaining over a Sunday and enjoying himself with saints and friends. We were pleased to see him again.

Sr. Celesta Beckstead, of Hamburg, Iowa, writes good words in the spirit of Thanksgiving day. She pleads for kindly remembrances of the poor; that their wants be supplied; that sympathy for them be not confined to sentiment alone, which latter in some cases causes the placing of time locks on pocketbooks and possessions.

We acknowledge receipt of a Thanksgiving day essay written by Sr. Mattie M. Morgans, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

Gen. John Eaton, of Washington, D. C., United States Commissioner to Utah, is contributing a continued article on "Mormonism of the present day," to the Christian Herald and Signs of Our Times, the first installment of which appeared in the number dated December 2. The article is copiously illustrated with scenes and portraits connected with Salt Sake Mormonism, and thus far makes little or no distinction between the true faith, and the perversion of it in Utah. It is misleading, so far. We shall endeavor to keep track of it. A sample copy of the Christian Herald containing said article was forwarded, addressed to Pres. Joseph Smith, by the publishers, whether for information to invite criticism, or for subscription purposes, we cannot say.

Bro. W. B. Toney, of Allen, Indian Territory, writing from McCloud, Oklahoma, desires to inform the brotherhood in Oklahoma, that he has entered into the work in his field of labor, and will be pleased to correspond with those desiring labor in their neighborhoods. He may be addressed at Allen P. O., as above. Bro. Toney was laboring at McCloud, on December 5.

Australian news in this number of HERALD. Good and encouraging, as usual. Ministry and laity are working in harmony and the work is moving notwithstanding the closeness of the times. There is compensation in the thought that hard times may induce the people to think more of their dependence upon God and lead them to realize the necessity of obedience to the law of life, to self-preservation, said to be the first law of nature.

Washington advices dated December 8, report that the Cuban forces under General Maceo have executed a brilliant flank movement on the Spanish forces under General Weyler by which they have cut him off from Havana, his base of supplies. The situation at Havana is regarded as critical. It is not thought that the Cubans possess artillery heavy enough to successfully besiege Havana, but their presence in the immediate vicinity is expected to create a reign of terror among those loyal to Spain, who fear that Weyler has been led into a trap in the mountains of Pinar del Rio. The Spaniards in turn claim to have killed Maceo, the brilliant Cuban general; but the report lacks confirmation.

The HERALD readers will be interested in the College Dedication, notice of which appears in this issue, in the Miscellaneous Department. It speaks for itself in behalf of Graceland College and its important future, for the success of which the coöperation of all lovers of the cause is invited.

We hope to give the HERALD readers a description of the Saints' Home, together with other items of interest concerning it, so soon as data can be obtained.

Returns from various branches indicate a general time of enjoyment during the Thanksgiving exercises among the saints. A good spirit attended a good sermon by Bro. Heman C. Smith at the Lamoni chapel, witnessing the propriety and acceptance of such efforts to express that excellent grace—gratitude.

Washington advices state that a heated interview recently took place between the Turkish minister and Secretary of State Olney, as a result of President Cleveland's reference to Turkey and the Armenian outrages, also because of public utterances of the American citizens. The minister was instructed by his government to demand a retraction of the President's statements, and hinted that diplomatic relations might be severed in case of refusal. The dispatch says that Washington may be minus the presence of the envoy of the Sublime Porte.

Bro. C. H. Jones, of Lone Rock,

Missouri, left Lamoni on the 11th for Chariton, Iowa, and vicinity to do missionary work.

Woman suffrage has been granted in the State of Idaho.

Fifty children born in polygamy in one county in Utah since the alleged abandonment of polygamy, and probably not all the returns reported; see Bro. R. J. Anthony's letter in this issue. How now about the consistency of those who claim polygamy in Utah to be a thing of the past?

Teachers Institute at Council Bluffs; see latest notice to Sunday school workers in this issue, especially that referring to railway reduced rates.

Bro. T. W. Williams requests correspondents to notice his change of address. It is now No. 206 Harmony Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

PERFUME.

"A blind man, being led one day
Where fragrant roses blossomed gay,
Said to his guide: 'Here roses bloom;
I know them by their sweet perfume.'
O, when blind souls around us go,
Led by the eyes that watch us so,
Blessed the Christian life that throws
The sweet perfume of Sharon's rose."

WE HAVE KNOWN.

SR. ALMIRA.

WE have known, and do know, that there are fallible men as well as fallible women. We have known of their making many fair, smooth promises, and voluntary, too, that they might secure the affections and life service of an Eve; such as, "If you will be mine, I will never speak an unkind word to you, and you shall not work. I don't want you to work, or not to work hard," etc. Another might say: "I will leave off using tobacco, drinking, or swearing," as the case may be, etc., "just to please you, my dear, and all I desire for the sacrifice is your heart and your hand. I will provide you a good home and supply you every want." All this sounds very pleasing to a young, inexperienced girl, and especially one who is tired of helping mother.

Out of respect to the memory of our father, and our husband, and all who have fairly kept their promises, we will say we know that there are noble men who have been all to their families that a sensible woman, and well-trained children could conscientiously desire, but they were not found among those who made the most promises, or held out the most inducements to catch the beautiful object of their fond desires.

We would ask right here, Why is it that the wives of such men frequently are not exemplary women? Can anyone solve the problem? Why are there so many cases of matrimony that show a lack of good judgment?

In some cases wives have not been obliged to work; but girls, if you marry a poor man and he is a kind,—or was a kind,—thoughtful young man in his own home, you may believe him, if he says he does not want you to work very hard, but if he says you shall not work, don't believe any such foolishness, for you know that his stomach must have its daily supplies as well as your own. And he wears garments, too, as well as yourself, and it requires work, you know, to accomplish all that; and it's woman's work, too, and no man wishes to do it. You can rely upon my word he will expect you to keep the house, and it will be wise in you if you qualify yourself for the business before undertaking it. Any man is as pleased to have a good housekeeper for a companion as a good pianist, and she is much more desirable when he is tired and hungry. Pardon me, girls, for I think it would be fine to be both.

As for unkind words, neither of the parties know what may arise in the future to call them forth, so don't flatter yourself, but cultivate a gentle, forbearing disposition.

We have known the promises in question to be very much like morning glories, or like the promises made by one who is engaging domestic help—not much work to be done, a plenty to do with, and everything convenient—we want you for company. All this is very fair, only the work is more, and the company less than expected, until one has had experience.

We have known in our limited knowledge of the ways of mortals, three men, two members of the church, and the other indulged in the hope of sins forgiven, who each promised his affianced that he would leave off using tobacco. It was very disgusting to the ladies, but it was so bewitching to the gentlemen they could not keep their promises. One took it up again before marriage, the others soon after. One used it years on the sly from his wife, but his children knew it, and it seems as though she must have known it unless her sense of smell was paralyzed. The third used it when absent from his wife, because he was lonesome, but after awhile used it in her presence. It was not a bone of contention, but sometimes it was an awful tobacco contention.

There have been many similar cases in regard to liquor and profanity, and yet there have been cases in which gentlemen have reformed. We call them gentlemen, for if they overcame their evil propensities they must have possessed the elements of true manhood, and under favorable circumstances they were brought out.

We forgot to name that in the second case referred to the gentleman did lay his tobacco on the shelf more than eight years ago, and has not used any since, unless recently. We think it was brought about by prayer.

No one knows who will keep their promises, only time and circumstances can give the proof, so all one can do, or the best way to do, is to go to God in all stages of the case for guidance and wisdom and try and work accordingly, yet leaving the result with him, and all will be well. We have known it to be so.

23 Avon Terrace, MORRISTON, S. W.

Dear Sister Walker:—Will you kindly give me a tiny portion of your valuable column to say a little about us Welsh women of the church. I must first say that we appreciate the good lessons which you write very much. We have about six sisters here, but we are going to have a few more shortly. As it is we are getting along very well. I do not know whether you American women take out tracts, but we do here every Sunday morning; we go in twos each to separate districts; I go with my father. One woman in our district did not believe in baptism because she said it was impossible to baptize as many as it says in Saint Matthew in so short a time; however, I think she sought more for criticism than for truth. People in Morryston are not as bigoted as they are in other places in Wales; they like going to the most fashionable place and for that reason very few attend Latter Day Saints' chapel, though it is a very nice little place of worship. I believe nearly all Morryston people know now that we do not belong to Brigham Young, because the apostles and all the missionaries and all of us have explained it so well. However, I feel very proud of the profession of my church, or rather that of Jesus Christ's Church, and only wish I could do much more for it, but somehow we mortals are so weak and so very prone to let temporal things run before spiritual.

I hope, Sister Frances, that you will find room for this letter if it is not too long, as I have so often wished to write to you.

Your loving sister in Christ,

LIZZIE GIBBS.

SOME are now asking for a plain work on the subject of Sunday school teaching, and as many of our workers now use Trumbull's work we give notice of same as clipped from Sunday School Times. The helpful hints contained in this book will be found valuable to teachers of all grades.

TEACHING AND TEACHERS BY H. CLAY TRUMBULL.

Dr. Trumbull's book "Teaching and Teachers" has already found its way into the hands of many thousand Sunday school workers. It is to-day the popular hand book on Sunday school teaching.

"Every teacher in Sunday school will feel his work widened in scope by reading this book. It is by far the best that has yet appeared, or is likely to appear, on this topic, and the thoroughness for which this calls would be an unmistakable blessing to every school in the land."—The Outlook.

A book of 390 pages (7½ x 5½ inches), bound in cloth. Price $1. For sale by booksellers, or mailed, postpaid, by the publishers.

Indeed, the Sunday school work is moving. During the past few weeks contributions have been pouring in, and all of them worthy of the place they shall have as soon as possible. Our heart is made to rejoice over a contribution from Bro. Arber, of Sheffield, England. This is the first offering from over the sea. In distant lands, as well as at home, God's children are alive to this branch of the church work. One brother writes, "The Sunday school department is a part of the missionary work of God, and so long as I am a missionary I am under obligation to render service to the Sunday school. Sometimes I have longed to be so situated as to spend my whole time in that work, as to me there is where I find the most continued enjoyment. Little children appreciate the work done for them more than the older folks who have not accepted the gospel; but, as all who accept the gospel become little children, we find ourselves in our Sunday school work teaching little children of all ages."

The outlook is encouraging, and we trust that we may continue to hear from all parts of the vineyard.

The word that we may deem of little account is often just the needed word to create interest in the heart of another.—ED.

A HARVEST FESTIVAL.

HAVING read so many interesting articles in the department of Sunday school I thought a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard would not be amiss. At our last business meeting it was resolved to hold a harvest festival and sermons in connection with the Zion's Hope Sunday School. In accordance therewith a committee was appointed consisting of Brn. H. Hoole, F. Beaumont, and J. Arber. Not having had any experience in harvest festival work we did not expect to make a very grand display. It was accordingly announced for October 18 and 19. The committee with what help they could solicit went to work. A platform decorated with white and red material was erected for the scholars. The organ was arranged in the center with evergreens and flowers beautifully arranged above. The day previous to the festival the children, even the youngest, evinced a desire to help in making it a success. One could not help noticing the dear little ones bringing their baskets filled with offerings. A few brothers and sisters did nobly, while our friends came to our help more than we could have expected. All the provisions having come in which consisted of fruits, vegetables, flowers, and other things too numerous to mention which make up a harvest festival. The setting out and arranging of all these good things was very creditably done by Srs. Hoole and Harlow. Sunday found us enjoying the beautiful sunshine and as we entered the meeting room which is located in Channing Street off Langsett Road, one could not help admiring the grand sight before them. A sight not soon to be forgotten. Service at 2:30 in charge of J. Arber, superintendent. Elders J. Austin president of district, S. Platts vice president, and H. Hoole president of branch were the speakers, who talked very appropriately for the occasion. The children rendered very creditably the hymns they had been trained to sing. Evening service at 6:30, prayer by Bro. W. Sharpe. A solo was sung by Sr. S. E. Harlow entitled, "We plough the fields and scatter." By request our esteemed friend, Mr. Joseph Dungworth, gave a very racy and graphic speech of about fifteen minutes, followed by a duet by Srs. Alice M. Stacey and Annie E. Stacey entitled, "Beautiful River," after which Elder Henry Hoole preached the sermon, which was very edifying to all present. This was the largest gathering ever held in the new meeting room. On Monday evening a fair number greeted us, when the children rendered songs, solos, recitations, and dialogues. The fruits were next disposed of, bringing in a balance, with the collections on Sunday, of about £1 ($5). The expressions from outside friends were very cheering. One gentleman said there was not one dull child amongst all the scholars. We felt proud to pronounce the proceedings a success. We are greatly encouraged to make a still greater effort next year.

J. ARBER.

143 Petre Street, SHEFFIELD, England, October 29, 1896.

"A life can't glow alone!
The smile seems sad, the senses start,
The will lies useless, limp, and prone;
Unchallenged and uncheered the heart;
And one by one the stars depart
From all one's sky, to darkness grown,—
A life is death alone."

IT is good to pray together. Life warms life. Heart quickens heart. Two logs together will burn, and the fire will become bright, and the room will grow warm. Two friends praying together stimulate each other, and the earnestness of each is increased.

When two pray together, their chief burden usually is intercession. Perhaps we do not realize the value of intercessory prayer. Love desires always to be helpful to others; yet how little can we do! We may be willing enough, but we do not know what our friend really needs, how we can most truly help him. Perhaps the service we would render, even at much cost to ourselves, would do him harm rather than good. We would lift his burden and carry it for him. We would do the hard tasks ourselves, to spare him. We would lessen the strain of the temptation for him, that the struggle may be easier. We would take out of his life the unpleasant things, that he may have ease and comfort. That is the way human love usually seeks to help. But it is almost certain that we thus do harm instead of good. It is better that we keep our hands off our friend's life, not trying to make providences for him. It is safer to commit all such cases to God, that he may do what is best.

We know far less about people than we think we do. Here is a man in grief; he has lost a child, or he is in poor health. He has suffered in business; he has had a sore struggle with adversity. You pity him. It makes your heart bleed to think of his sorrow or trial. You would like to help him, to relieve him of his hard condition. But perhaps if you could see within, you would not pity him, but would bow your head in reverence before him. His heart is filled with the peace of God. He is living victoriously. He needs no pity, no help, from you.

Here is another man who seems to be the favorite of fortune. Everything he touches turns to gold. Sunshine floods his pathway. You congratulate this friend on his prosperity. You would name him as the most favored man in the community. Ah! perhaps if you were to see within his soul, where fierce passions and unrestrained desires hold sway, your congratulations would turn to sad pity.

We really can know but little of the lives about us. It is scarcely safe even to try to help another by changing his condition or circumstances. We may only mar the Master's work in him if we try to make life easier for him. It is better that, as we pray, we let God do what his wisdom knows is best for him.—Selected.

Letter Department.

GARDEN GROVE, Cal., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—Things are moving slowly along in these parts. The saints, and some not of the faith, of Southern California, were made glad by seeing J. B. Price, president of California. It did us all good to hear the old veteran of many summers declaring the truth, in his peculiar, logical, and forceful manner. I sometimes think there is a clearer ring to the story as told by those old soldiers. Brother Price did an excellent work at San Bernardino. He reached and stirred the memory of a number of those "old timers," as we call them. They were stirred up and past blessings were brought to mind which may lead them to renew their covenant again. I do hope they will. I don't know why it is, but I have a more tender feeling for those old ones of other years.

Our debate is over; it lasted four evenings, two hours to the evening in half-hour speeches. Our opponent was a Mr. Littell, of the "Church of Christ," better known as Campbellite. He is a man of good ability and acted quite fairly. He threw but little mud, only told one story on the saints, one of those "trade stories;" questions those usually discussed. It was well attended, many standing up every night. We feel well satisfied with the outcome.

Brother Price was with me and rendered me much assistance. I wish we could always be associated in our ministerial work. Labor in the ministry would not be so arduous with such company. I wonder if God's way will ever be conformed to—that we will go two and two? Some, of course, keep or go his way in part, by taking the wife along; but the church could not afford all such a luxury; not at present anyway. But we must be content, and as we can, watch, work, wait, and pray, that better times may come.

The winter rains are commencing, which make it almost impossible for us to do missionary work; mud, rain, and the rush in putting in crops, give but little opportunity for preaching. Tent work is the only really practical way to reach the people of the Pacific Slope; but it is hard work. Those who don't hanker for work better keep clear of tents.

HIRAM L. HOLT.

NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 30.

Editors Herald:—I closed my meetings in the city of Camden, New Jersey, November 3. On the 1st I baptized two more in the Delaware River, which makes twenty I have baptized there.

I left Camden on the 5th for Brooklyn, New York, and arrived there in the evening at the home of Bro. George Potts, and was made welcome there, and commenced a series of meetings lasting two weeks with good attendance and good attention, and on Sunday the 22d I led two souls into the waters of Jamaica Bay and baptized them into the kingdom of God; and this bay is the salt water from the great ocean. On that night the hall was full, and our heavenly Father was with us, and at the close of the meeting there were not many dry eyes in the audience. There is a noble band of saints in Brooklyn; they treated me very kindly. I left them rejoicing in the work of God, and others near the kingdom.

I left for Norwalk the 24th. I find a little flock here that is alive in the gospel work. During the last few months they have erected a nice little chapel, the first chapel of ours in this State. There are about seventeen saints here, the fruit of the labors of Bro. A. H. Parsons, Joseph Squires, and George Potts.

I am holding meetings here with small attendance, but good interest. Bro. Parsons preaches here every fourth Sunday. When he first came here one of the ministers warned the people from his pulpit to beware of him, for he was a bad man, and told them he was a horse thief; and used all such names. But our worthy brother showed the Spirit of Christ and said within his soul, as the Master did when upon the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," and he continued his preaching till he has baptized about seventeen, and instead of the people looking upon him as a thief they look upon him as their spiritual leader, and he is respected by saint and sinner, where the other man has lost prestige with the people. And O, how it makes me rejoice to go into a place where my brethren have been and find the respect for them that they have for our worthy Brother, A. H. Then brethren, let us all live so we may have that loving Spirit with us.

I walked eight miles yesterday through the mud and snow and preached twice and attended one Sunday school. So the good work goes on in this part of God's vineyard.

I am looking fondly toward the time when I can return and see the dear faces of my western brethren and sisters; not that I am tired of the faces of the saints and friends in the East, for they have been so kind to me; and their kindness will always cluster around my memory. But it is natural for me to want to see the faces of my old friends, where I have been raised from childhood days, and especially the faces of those that are near and dear to me by the ties of nature.

Everything looks bright ahead in the work of the Lord. Then saints let us continue to help roll forth that little stone till it fills the whole earth. My prayer is for the welfare of Zion.

Your brother,

W. A. SMITH.

KEWANEE, Ill., Nov. 27.

Editors Herald:—Quite an interest is manifested in the preaching of the word by high priests, elders, and priests; each taking turn as called upon. This with weekly and alternate Sunday morning prayer services, young people's and sisters' union, and Sunday school, each a service a week, keeps us wide-awake in the work, and our zeal warms.

For the first time our branch met as Bro. Joseph advised, to hold Thanksgiving services; and such a profitable time was had! It would appear that no excuses will ever hinder our yearly public thankful services in the future.

All our meetings of late have especially been beneficial, the Spirit of God bearing witness that we are his children, and that we follow no cunningly devised fables; but joy, encouragement, and determination seem to be prevailing among the saints generally. May it continue.

Your brother,

ALMA WHITEHOUSE.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 8.

Editors Herald:—I returned home from my mission field on July 3d, and since that time, my field labor has been very limited.

In August, I attended the Bluff Park Reunion, presided, in connection with Bro. A. H. Smith, and spoke three times.

In September, Bro. J. S. Snively and I conducted a two days' meeting, at Lone Rock, Missouri. We did not find the branch in a condition to receive the benefit that it was their privilege to receive from such an effort, but tried to do the best we could under the circumstances. I spoke three times.

I also spent a couple of weeks at Allendale, Missouri, and vicinity. Preached twelve times and had good company in my labors. When the Spirit of God is with us, as an abiding "Comforter," what joy, what peace and light, it brings to the soul!

While at Allendale I attended a debate on the nature of man and his condition in the intermediate state, between Elder Dillen, of the Baptist Church, and Elder Glendenning, of the Christian Advent Church. I enjoyed the opportunity of hearing, comparing, and learning. Do we realize how many opportunities we have to learn the right, be confirmed in previous methods and positions, if found correct, or corrected, if found wrong, if we only have the wisdom and disposition to improve them? We need all these opportunities, for they help to broaden our thoughts, make us more humble, and increase our charity. I am under the impression that it is wrong, decidedly wrong, and injurious to us and the cause we have espoused, to apply God's tests of truth and right to others, while we are unwilling to have them applied to us in matters of religion, politics, and all the affairs of life.

Bro. Keeler stood by me and assisted me in all the services held. He has done a good work at Allendale. As usual, Bro. and Sr. Hunt furnished me with a good home, and they, with Bro. and Sr. Robedau and others, were kind to me, and they did what they could to move on the work.

Passing by an occasional sermon at Lamoni, Davis City, and Leon, also the October conference at Lucas, which was a good one, I come to the latter part of November, which found me at Lucas, Iowa, kindly cared for by Bro. D. E. Daniels and his mother, and others. We had good meetings. The kind Father, ever mindful of the needs of his children, did not leave us alone. Those who attended, and who cultivate a love for the practical duties which belong to their profession, and are willing to be corrected as well as instructed, were benefited, and, I believe, satisfied with the services.

I was about nine days at Lucas, and preached nine times, including the Thanksgiving address. There is some trouble in the branch, but if all concerned will cultivate the true Spirit, try to get at the right, rather than to have their own way, and submit with good grace to the provisions and operation of the divine law, all will be well in a short time, and the work which we all claim to love will move on there as in the past.

Now, at the close of this heated political campaign, I take pleasure in saying to all Herald readers that I am confident I am yet in the faith. Indeed, I have a higher and better appreciation of the work than ever before. It has indeed been an educational campaign. I may have less confidence in the wisdom and integrity of some men than I had one year ago, but there has been a corresponding increase of faith in God, and in the revelations of his will concerning Zion, "the pure in heart," and the ultimate triumph of right. "In the last days," said Paul, "perilous times shall come." And some of the peculiar conditions to obtain are that "men shall be lovers of their own selves," and "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

If we keep ourselves clear from these blighting sins, we will do well. Let us with one heart and one mind turn to God and pray, as never before, that he will give us a clear revelation concerning Zion, and the more complete organization of his church. Let us "pray with the Spirit," and "with the understanding also." With love to all and ill will to none, I am your coworker in the vineyard of the Lord.
J. R. LAMBERT.

GEELONG, Victoria, Oct. 30.

Editors Herald:—I am making a small effort here in conjunction with the locals: Elder Trembath and Priest William Craig. Prejudice is very high and strong. The people will persist in associating us with Utah Mormons. I wish they were here to take the consequences of their own folly. It will take a lot of printer's ink and patient, persistent, and wise open-air preaching to overcome it. Not until the people find out that we are here to stay, and that we mean to be understood, will they pay any attention to our message. A few efforts from the missionary every six months or a year at all such places means putting off this desired recognition indefinitely. We must cover less ground and stand by the work in these large cities of Australia if our mission is to be a success. But, a scarcity of funds, and laborers who are both willing and capable makes the above dictum impracticable at the present time.

By sticking to the work in Sydney we have proven what can be done in Australia's principal city. It is encouraging to know that our work is fairly established there and at the great coal port of New Castle—in the two principal cities of New South Wales.

At this time last year the writer was at New Castle preaching in the various suburbs and assisting in erecting a new chapel under great difficulties. We have seen the building completed and nearly paid for, and about twenty converts added to the branch since then, besides a school organized of some fifty or sixty pupils. Our fondest wishes have been realized there.

Word just received from S d a y informs me that the branch with Brother Butterworth's help has just purchased a building site, for three hundred and ninety dollars, the money being a loan from a friend who is favorable to our gospel. With the promise of fifty dollars worth of lumber from Brother Wright, the sawmill proprietor of Tuncurry, and some money in hand, they think they can build, if local members (who are carpenters and builders) can donate their labor (which is promised) I believe, by some two or three. Brother Butterworth being a fair carpenter, it is his privilege and delight to pull off his ministerial garb and put on the leather apron. By Christmas, when we hold district conference in Sydney, the building will be well on the way, and before this Australian summer is over the Sydney branch will occupy quarters all under their own control. With every night open, the auxiliary societies heretofore handicapped by the want of a meeting room, will have a chance to develop. Mission work can also be carried on without obstruction. There will be about two dollars and fifty cents to raise each week in order to meet their obligation, but all are willing, and therefore hope is bright.

It is to be hoped our work in Victoria will take on a new lease of life soon. At present there is little to encourage in a missionary way. Elder McIntosh, of Queensferry, has taken the field, but by letter from the Bishop our missionary in charge is informed that no financial help can be sent over and it is probable that the force at home may be curtailed before the conference year expires. For this reason one of the force here may have to stop, as the funds locally have not supported even two families properly.

Failure of crops is the threatened famine ahead in Australia, especially in the three colonies of South Australia, Victoria, and New South Wales. Queensland has the "tick pest" which has worse than decimated the stock of that colony. Over in South Africa the "rinder pest" is playing similar havoc among the cape cattle. India has her wheat famine, which has caused the price of bread to go up all over the world; and Japan is suffering from a rice famine so distressing that the government has issued permits to parents to sell their daughters to obtain bread. Europe has her aggravating "Eastern Question," making the probability of war more imminent than before. And the United States is in the throes of a Presidential election, which according to some, is as bad or worse than a famine. From this island continent, connected with the rest of the world by cables, we are admirably situated to get a quiet view of what the world is doing. Since coming here I have wondered why I didn't take a greater interest in current events in all the world while at home. Perhaps we were too engrossed in domestic and internal affairs to cast a glance abroad. With your seventy-four millions of people you are a sort of a world by yourselves.

The sample pages of Church History is at hand and greatly admired. Our order went in a month ago. It is just what we want in style and matter.

Inclosed find a clipping from the Geelong Times concerning the baptism of the Rev. Geo. Grubb, a missionary of some note in the Church of England. It may interest your readers if put in Herald or on cover pages. To me it shows there is a native force in truth that must be felt when it has half a chance—even when no preacher is at hand to present it, in the gospel sense, in power and demonstration. Of course he hasn't grasped all the situation yet. To Latter Day Saints it is absurd to talk of first "becoming Christian infants" (or babes) and then being baptized because it is commanded. In other words: first cast ourselves on Christ and "become" babes; and "then," because we are babes we must be born!

Trusting we have not trespassed on your space, we close. On account of the long time and distance involved in publishing conference notices in Herald I send the same by post direct to the various branches concerned. The day is coming when this field will have a small mission paper.

In gospel bonds,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—Will you kindly give space in the Herald for me to say to my children in different parts of the country that the old disease which has troubled me for the last six years is still on me, and unless it is the will of God to miraculously interpose, I feel that my time on earth will not be long. I cannot write to you all personally, so take this method of informing you of my condition and would be pleased to hear from you all soon. I pray that God's rich blessings may rest upon you and all the faithful of God's people.

Very affectionately yours,

T. J. FRANKLIN.

CONDON, Oregon, Nov. 23.

Editors Herald:—Condon branch is not dead, although we are few and meet with many things hard to bear; yet we remember that Jesus said, "If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you."—John 15:20. The many letters from others tell us that the Lord is remembering his people.

I am striving to hold aloft the banner of King Immanuel and to support myself and family. I will soon start out for the winter, all alone in this part of the State; and yet not alone, for one with God is a majority. Calls from all sides "Come and preach for us," come. They have been fed husks long enough. Will report my success later. I ask the prayers of all saints.

Yours in bonds,

W. A. GOODWIN.

WOODFORDS, Cal., Nov. 24.

Editors Herald:—Our conference at Fairview the 15th inst. was all that could be expected under the circumstances. There are but few, comparatively speaking, that manifest any interest. Brn. T. R. Hawkins and D. R. Jones are the only two active elders in this part of Nevada. However, there was enough assembled to hold conference, and a good feeling prevailed. Business was done in an orderly way, and some feel more hopeful for numerical and spiritual strength for the future. Several that had intended to be at conference were prevented.

This country is poorly facilitated for conveying people from place to place. There is but one main line crossing the State, and but few branch roads. Railroad and stage fare is high; five cents a mile on main line, about seven on branch roads and stages. The people, though rather rough and irreligious, are kind and liberal. We have very little opposition in country places from any of the sects, but in towns the usual monopoly has to be met with if anything is done there.

When coming into the mission I made a short stay in Salt Lake City; preached twice in our church there. Visited the different places of interest; among them Brigham Young's grave. In the same lot lay a few of his dead wives. The adornments were simple and substantial. I visited the graves of Apostles John Taylor, George A. Smith, and Orson Pratt. The last-named has no headstone,—simply a piece of painted board to designate the spot where his remains are interred. I felt sorry that so little interest is taken in their greatest apostle of the nineteenth century; one that had done a life service for their church. He stood head and shoulders above the very chiefest of them.

The Temple is a grand structure. The tourist instinctively feels an admiration for so grand and great a display of skill and judgment as is seen in this noble edifice. Brigham's monument stands a little to the south of it, with his left hand stretched out as though appealing to the people, or in an appealing attitude.

I visited their printing office. While I did not see the presses, the building and arrangement and supply of books are back numbers to compare with ours at Lamoni, Iowa.

Their prices for small books are higher than ours. Space forbids that I should give further description of what I saw. Let it suffice to say that I was treated with kindest attention by those people, and their hospitality to me will not soon be forgotten. I received better treatment from them than I have in many instances received from our own people.

We made our first stop when entering the mission at Elko City. We remembered that our beloved brother, Glad Rodger, fell asleep while laboring at this place. We made inquiry and soon found the sacred spot where he rests. His grave is fenced and a painted board at the head has his name on it, and date of his death. He is buried in what is known as "the old graveyard." There is a new yard and much more respectable, owned by the Free Masons and Odd Fellows. The members of the Elko branch live sixty-five miles north, so we staged it out to Stofiel. We did the first preaching done there by any sect and the only preaching heard by Sr. Stofiel for twenty years past. There were six baptized while we stayed there. One of the candidates had written a work against Mormonism; she is a talented lady. Four of these candidates are largely the results of Bro. Alex Penrod's labors, the other two are Sr. Stofiel's daughters.

Bro. Emmanuel Penrod, known to and remembered by many of your readers, resides at Stofiel and his heart is warm with gospel zeal. His wife is sickly and other causes hinder his doing as much as he would like in gospel work. Sister Stofiel's faith is unshaken and her zeal unabated. The Herald has been her only preacher for the last twenty years. She keeps herself well posted in church matters. We went to Ruby Valley, over one hundred miles to the southeast. Stayed at Bro. Leonard Covert's, who also came twenty miles to fetch us. We preached a number of times and there was a splendid interest manifested. Bro. D. S. Mills did the last gospel work here ere we came. It was in Arthen, Ruby Valley, where Bro. Rodger got his sickness that terminated his earthly existence. I am told too that he (Bro. Rodger) had dreams that indicated his death; and that an active rest awaited him; but he didn't understand it. I may state too, that he was resigned to his fate. He asked Sr. Tucker (E. Penrod's daughter) to play the organ for him while he died, which she did. Bro. Covert is the only member we have in Ruby Valley, but there are several that believe and favor our work.

Our next stop was at Lovelock, over two hundred miles away. We were both sick at this place on account of poor water. Here we occupied the Methodist church. Rev. Wealthy and wife treated us kindly. We baptized Mrs. Stauts, then made to Reno, and visited Sr. Gault. She will be remembered by Brn. Duncan Campbell, J. S. Snively, and Bro. Mather who baptized her in Canada. She is a noble, liberal-hearted sister. Then called at Dayton. Bro. T. R. Hawkins resides here. He has held the office of Justice of the Peace for the last seventeen years and elected again this last election by a large majority. We labored at Fairview, in Carson Valley, and at Genoa and Reno.

Since October 13, the time of Bro. Davis' return home on account of expected sickness in his family, I have labored alone, and am blessed. I suffered with catarrh in my head, sore throat, and a running ear for several weeks; but am much better now. While writing I am at Bro. Trimmer's whose kindness and hospitality will be remembered by Brn. Daly and Holt and the writer. Bro. D. R. Jones is the branch president here, and he is certainly possessed with commendable zeal. I would say in conclusion that the fruits of reading the church papers and periodicals is made more apparent and important to the writer than ever before. The weather has been very bad here of late. Yours,

E. B. MORGAN.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., Nov. 28.

Editors Herald:—We have at this place a branch of seventy members, a neat little chapel, and hold regular meetings; also have Sabbath school every Sunday. Our meetings are quite well attended, but if the progress of the work here is to be determined by the addition of new members, we can have nothing to boast of. There is, however, a slow but steady increase here, as elsewhere.

Thanksgiving services were observed here by holding prayer and testimony meeting, there being present nine out of the seventy members in the branch. All expressed themselves as being grateful for the multitude of past favors and blessings, and a desire to live more worthy in future.

As the excitement over politics is now, to some extent, a thing of the past, we give it as our opinion that if the saints who so thoroughly informed themselves on the issues of the day would now try in like manner to make themselves better acquainted with the law and requirements of God's word and in the manner of life make a due and more rigid application of them, that they would receive more lasting benefit.

I am unable to express my gratefulness for the solid comfort, consolation, and peace I receive from my heavenly Father through the gospel. I desire to live worthily and to perform every known duty devolving upon me and let the gospel take its perfect course in reforming the manner of my life.

In Zion's cause,

WM. E. LARUE.

MANCHESTER, Texas, Nov. 26.

Editors Herald:—A few of us are left here to raise the warning voice of the gospel. We are realizing the literal fulfillment of Isaiah 24: "Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof." The like of moving and traveling and dissatisfied people was never known in the history of this country as it has been this year; the roads are full from morning until night, and thousands of them haven't anything to eat.

We had the pleasure of leading two noble men into the water on the 25th. They came about thirty miles to be baptized. Neither one of them ever heard a sermon; one of them, Bro. John Towns, had met with Bro. C. M. Fulks and talked with him concerning the gospel. We had spent one night with him at his home some months ago and this brother told the other man about the restored gospel. He said that was what he had been praying for.

Bro. Towns is a man of considerable learning; has a beautiful family, and bids fair to do much good in the church. The other one, Bro. Quinn, is a young man, and while we were confirming him the Spirit made known to us that he would be quite a bright light in the church. What time he remained with us he was preaching. This is three noble men baptized in this branch that never heard a sermon. God is moving on the hearts of men. Your brother,

E. A. ERWIN.

PATERSON, Iowa, Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—On the 18th of November I went to Summerset where I had made previous arrangements to commence a series of meetings, but on arrival there found that the directors decided to have the house plastered, and so I was shut out for a time. I then went to Winterset, Madison County, and eight miles north of that town I found Bro. and Sr. Chandler who have lived there for several years all alone until about a year ago, when Bro. C. J. Peters accepted the gospel in its fullness. I arrived there on Wednesday evening, and had the pleasure of addressing the saints and a few neighbors at the home of Bro. Peters. (Sr. Peters was not in the church.)

The next evening the brethren secured a schoolhouse and I held a week's meetings with small congregations. I think it the most prejudiced place I ever came across, but think this can be accounted for from the fact that there are three sectarian churches within two miles. At the close of our meetings I had the pleasure of burying Sr. Peters and her son in the waters of baptism.

I am now preaching in the union church, six miles east of Winterset, and fifteen miles from any of the saints. I am having good congregations here, and am trying to present this latter-day gospel to the people as best I can, the Lord being my helper. Pray for me.

Yours in bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

ROXBURY, Va., Dec. 4.

Editors Herald:—It may be of interest to some, especially to those who have labored here, to know how the work speeds in this part of the Old Dominion, "the hard mission," as it has been most appropriately called.

The first gospel sermon was preached in Charles City County, nearly seven years ago by Elder James Moler, followed by Elders Duncan, Goodrich, Ebeling, and F. C. Smith. They labored faithfully and heroically, but under great disadvantages, for until the arrival of Bro. Smith there was no convenient place in which to preach, and what was worse, scarcely any to listen but those of marvelously dull comprehensive powers. What wonder, then, that they met with little success!

In August of the present year Elder F. J. Ebeling organized a Sunday school here of about nine members and we met at the house of a friend (now brother) until by the courtesy of Mr. Walker, of Roxbury, we obtained an old building of his (formerly used as a saloon), rent free. We cleaned it, put in seats, and now have a house, though somewhat small and rough, in which to meet.

I might mention, also, as a fact of paramount importance, that we have the intelligent listeners, too, as a number of Western families have moved here. The native Southern people are very loth to hear the gospel, much more so to obey it.

Our Sunday school has increased to forty-five members, and while the Sabbath schools of the sectarian churches about us are languishing greatly, ours flourishes like the green bay tree; witness, it will shortly celebrate the Christmastide with a goodly tree. We also have weekly prayer meetings, and with the six saints recently added to our number feel that we have made a long stride forward.

We are all striving to live humbly and faithfully that others may desire to enter into the work. Elder Smith will be with us again on the 5th inst. and we expect to see others baptized. He is greatly beloved by the saints here, and though he wrote so modestly of his work, we know how faithfully he labored while among us.

Elder Ebeling will please take notice that I have redeemed my promise.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. A. H. BARNETT.

GEELONG, Victoria, Nov. 7.

Editors Herald:—The news of the loss of our "Evanelia" was received this week, and is a matter of deep regret. The saints in Australia watched with much interest, through the Herald, every feature of the project from the agitating for to the final completion and delivering of the little craft in the harbor at Papeete. The "Evanelia" was almost a living being to many. At the news of its death some actually shed tears, as though a dear friend had departed. Having had a taste of sea travel, some of us can appreciate the expression of regret on the part of Brother and Sister Burton who are about to depart for that field, deprived of the convenience of a boat controlled by the church.

Comparisons come to mind. Two just now occur which show the difference between our difficulties and those of other churches. The London Missionary Society has for several years had a large boat (the John Williams) in commission among the islands of the South Pacific, the East Indies, and Australasia. Besides serving the mission work, it earns considerable money in carrying common freights. Recently it was replaced by a new and larger vessel, this time a steamer.

The Presbyterian Mission Board of Australia lately put a new steamer called the "Dayspring" in the same waters. This boat had a short life, as it has just suffered the same fate as our own, being wrecked on an uncharted coral reef not far from Australia, off the coast of New Caledonia. This, too, caused deep regret among its friends. But no sooner is her fate known in London, than the cables announce that a wealthy lady sympathizer and philanthropist (name withheld) has offered five thousand dollars toward the cost of building another vessel to take her place; and that this has been supplemented by other substantial sums. What matter to them that the "Dayspring" was wrecked? It's pounds—thousands of them—for the churches of men, but pennies for the Lord's own church; and so it has always been. Nevertheless the Lord has pulled through, some way. It is seen not only in sending out of gospel boats laden with Bibles, tracts, and missionaries; but also in building and endowing church presses, colleges, homes for the indigent and infirm, etc. However, I am not jealous, nor do I envy their superior temporal resources, as long as I have more truth and a deeper experience and hope than they. What does concern me at times is the question, am I as energetic, zealous, and true in proportion? If so, God will take care of the rest. He is as much interested in the salvation of the race as we are, surely.

And how do we know but that an important civilizing and preparatory work is being thus done by our coreligionists—a work by which the last and greatest of human dispensations will be facilitated? Only those with large resources can do it; we could not were the whole of it this moment placed directly on our shoulders. What difference is it to us that they preach not the fullness of the gospel, as long as they are the means, indirectly, of preparing the way for the new evangel, the larger hope? Of the Salvation Army I have remarked that it seems an excellent and social reform, of its class, to many struggling and degraded people who are so far fallen that it requires just that peculiar and special work to start them upward—a class that cannot be reached all at once by the fullness of saving truth (the "submerged" sections of London and New York, for instance). I once thought if they would only call the movement by its proper name,—"moral and social reform,"—not one objection could be offered. Have been a little impatient to see them labeling it "salvation" in the highest sense. But more mature thought has brought me to see that as long as men labor under the belief that they are emissaries of heaven and actually "saving souls," they are possessed with the motive power of zeal which moves them out against all sorts of danger and difficulty into all the world. (General Booth once said that if explorers discovered the north pole they would most likely find an Army captain there ahead of them.) Without this conviction, what stimulus would there be? Even philanthropy is quiescent or sluggish without it. Jehovah is not a mere onlooker in the affairs of this world. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work," said Jesus; but he works through agencies. It is too much to believe that his only agencies are the various departments of his own church.

Other thoughts crowd in, but space and time forbid expression; so we close, trusting that we who have the fullness of saving truth will exhibit evangelizing zeal and energy in proportion, that we may each receive our "penny" when the world's great day closes.

GOMER WELLS.

POST MACQUARIE, Aus., Oct. —

Editors Herald:—I have often felt like writing something for the good of others; for I have received great help and encouragement when reading the contributions of others, and it does seem selfish, to receive so much good and not try to help any in return. So I thought I would write of my experience; perhaps it may assist some soul that may be struggling for light as I was.

For nearly twelve months I sat and listened to the gospel proclaimed in its fullness and turned a deaf ear to it, too self-satisfied and proud to even investigate a doctrine put forward by such a despised people. I knew in my Christian experience I had twice had very direct answers to prayer and had at times received great blessings in the church to which I belonged; and I thought it presumption in them to say their church was the church. But as I look back it seems to me now that God gradually began to take away from me the portion of his Spirit that I had had, and when I tried to pray God seemed so far away and my prayers seemed just words; and when I tried to read my Bible the words seemed to have no meaning to me, and old faults and failings that I had thought overcome long ago seemed to keep tripping me up and yet I never thought of looking for light or for help in any church but the one I attended. I often longed to get back the experience I once had, yet try as I would I could not; and so I struggled with this unrest of soul for many weeks, and one Sunday morning I took up a book of daily texts from my table and opened it at the verse, "Thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul."—Deut. 4:29. In the afternoon I attended the church in Balmain (Sydney) where I was living at the time. It was a sacrament meeting, and while sitting there listening to the members testifying of the peace and surety they had that they were in the right way, I wondered if they were right; and then that verse came to me, "Seek the Lord thy God, and thou shalt find him, if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul;" and I thought when I had time I would investigate.

In the evening I attended the church where I always worshiped. It was consecration service, being the first Sunday in the new year. After the service the prayer meeting was kept on for over an hour. I tried to take part and be interested, but in vain; for me there was no spirit there at all. When I reached home I determined to find peace if it was to be found, so taking my Bible I went on my knees and prayed as I had never prayed before for light and guidance. I opened my Bible at the beginning of Acts and as I read on and on a hand seemed guiding me and for hours I read on. My Bible seemed a new book to me, and the eyes of my understanding seemed to be opened, and I saw that these people whom I thought not worth while listening to had the truth. But then the thought came, "What! Join that church? No, never." I thought of what it would mean; of the displeasure of all my friends and those at home, for I was soon leaving Balmain and going home where I would be the only Latter Day Saint in the town. And I thought, No, I'll never join that church; and then I looked back to the church where I had been and already there seemed a great gulf between me and it, and I saw I never could go back there. It just meant going where God led me or giving up my profession of religion altogether.

As I look back now I wonder how I could have hesitated over it, but there was a struggle before I was willing to give up everything and to walk alone with God—to be satisfied that he knew, whoever else might misunderstand; but when I came to that point such a peace and joy filled my soul that I dropped on my knees and thanked God for the way he had led me.

The following Sunday I was baptized and with the laying on of hands received the gift of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter that Christ promised to his disciples. I was just as conscious of it as that I live. Many times the joy and gladness in my soul has been so great that while going about my work I have dropped on my knees in thankfulness to God for his great goodness to me, and both by visions and healing he has made manifest his Spirit upon me; and although since then there have been dark times, and I have made many mistakes and many failures, yet to-day my trust and peace in God is firmer than ever, and my desire is to let my light shine that others may be led into this light. I fear I have made my letter too long so I will close. Still rejoicing in the fullness of the gospel, I remain,

A sister in Christ,

MAGGIE WRIGLEY.

CRENSHAW, Pa., Dec. 5.

Editors Herald:—In my letter in issue of 2d, following a sentence on branch officials doing some "pioneer" work, occurs the sentence: "This district is far behind many," which should apply to the thought of the preceding sentence. If the sentence were taken apart from the former, it would be an injustice to me and an unjust statement by me of the district.

The local officers of this district do not push out as those of many districts do, was the thought designed to be conveyed. Good branches within its domain have hardly given that support to conferences due them. Good Sunday schools have been almost too content with their own excellent work and in the thought possibly, that district organization hardly being necessary for them. It may be well for them to survey wider. Organization is adapted to harmonizing, and is also a stimulus. If the carrying out of routine church work which has now been running sixty-six years needs conferences, then for the very same reasons Sunday school work needs conventions. The organizing and massing of forces in the political, industrial, military, or other realms where man may occupy, is the secret of success. The classification by God, of men in the several quorums is on the same basis as to principle. Workers of a kind associated organized, that the best results may come.

The late conference, at the suggestion of the missionary in charge, considered the division of the district. The conference submitted it to the several branches to be acted upon before the next conference. We suggest to the Sunday school workers the earnest consideration of organizing their forces at the next conference. Australian work seems to have taken on a new impetus since the advent of the Sunday school. Southwest Missouri, a very prolific mission, is a network of Sunday schools. At the reunions Sunday school work fairly booms.

Reunion work too should be considered as a means of advancement on all lines, and economy. "And what!" says some one. Well, just consider a little and see if it is not reasonable. In 1895, at Limerick, Ohio, was held a reunion. Thirty dollars was the sum of expense aside from living and fares paid; the living was as cheap as at home, and as nearly all came by conveyance of their own, but little in fares was paid out. Now suppose in 1897 that section holds no reunion, and out of four hundred who could assemble on the same plan, say four go to Park Bluff, at an expenditure of twenty-five dollars each, that would be one hundred dollars, and four benefited, as against four hundred. The seventy dollars would almost buy a tent. The Ohio district tent cost but sixty and answered well its purpose. Suppose that Southwest Missouri had held no reunion in 1896; their incidental expense was about thirty dollars. Don't you see that a very few going to Bluff Park or Woodbine would have made a vastly greater expense, and to the railroads too, with but a few benefited, instead of many?

Do you remember that President Smith at the conference of 1896, suggested to missionaries in charge holding conferences jointly, from ocean to ocean. Conferences, reunions, and conventions have been associated. Even Utah brethren got together this year at Pleasant Grove on something approaching such plan, and proposed to next year. Reunions have come to stay, and saints will go to them. If you don't have them near they will go farther. That means more expense and less benefit.

That too many ministers may have attended some reunions, may be true; but that is correcting itself. It could hardly be said of more than one held in 1896, or possibly two. Let the reunions pass around on a sensible economic plan; by so doing we will have tents scattered all about and reach hundreds rather than scores.

I am here among a devoted, earnest band of saints who with might and main are trying to warn this region. Am in the midst of a two-weeks' effort. For some reason attendance was light till last evening, when on entering the hall scores more than had been in attendance greeted us. Some of the saints who had felt somewhat dismayed, toned up about seventy-five degrees. Good liberty and sometimes aided light and power have been ours, and to the Author of it we are grateful. Let all not make effort to visit all the branches because of pressing needs elsewhere, unless I shall find it necessary.

My address is Box 28, Cleveland, Ohio.

DEER LODGE, Mont., Dec. 3.

Editors Herald:—As time rolls around we discover that another year is almost gone and by looking back we see so little done that we are almost ashamed to say we have had a hand in the great conflict for the salvation of man while others have been able to record great victories achieved, we look upon our own efforts as insignificant; yet our desires to do good have been just as great as ever, and in the field assigned to us we have tried to tell the story when and where we could.

I at one time felt hopeful. Bro. A. B. Moore came to our assistance in Montana early in the summer and labored faithfully for a time with splendid results, but a lack of finances compelled him to lay down his ministerial armor and labor for food and raiment for his wife. In his report to me, written November 25, he says: "My wife has had only sixteen dollars this year, and as I saw no likelihood of getting anything from the Bishop, I drew out and went to work." Again he said: "It looks hard to stop when there is so much to do and people who are interested, but thus it is." I was sorry to lose the service of so able a man, a wise counselor, and a devoted servant of the church. Bro. Gomer Reese also was appointed by the Missionary in Charge of the Rocky Mountain mission to labor in Montana, but up to date he has been held at home by sickness in his family and other hindering causes; and he too writes me of favorable prospects in his vicinity and elsewhere, but up to date he has not been able to meet the calls—one in particular, from Bro. Premo, in the eastern part of the State, where prospects are fair. I also have calls that I may not be able to reach.

Opportunities are good since the thunder of the political guns has ceased to be heard and the smoke of the battle has cleared away. It will be possible to preach the gospel of peace to some, while others are just as wistfully turning the eye and ear to the East, watching for the dawning of that glorious and happy day, and to hear the clanking of machinery and hum of all the industries promised by the standard bearers of the "honest dollar." Those who turn their attention to the former may possibly realize the good and sweets of both, if the latter comes. Should it not materialize, then what?

In Idaho we are just as badly crippled as in Montana. Only Brother S. D. Condit is now laboring there. I left Montana early in September for Idaho. I met Leon, my oldest boy, at Oxford, Idaho, and with team we went to Soda Springs, Chesterfield, Little Blackfoot, and other points. After he left me I again visited the above places, Montpelier, Thomas Fork, Pocatello, and Blackfoot. In my travels in Idaho I baptized five and administered to the sick, and did what I could for the cause.

The last of October I went to Salt Lake City and spent twelve days at home, then returned to Oxford and drove to Malad to attend conference there. On November 14 and 15 I remained there over one week, then drove to Blackfoot, a distance of about one hundred miles, over the worst roads I ever saw, and on the last day I drove twenty-five miles through one of the worst blizzards of the season. When I got to Sr. Shoemaker's place I was glad to stop. Her son Ed took the team and I went in the house and thawed out. The ice and snow had formed on the buggy wheels until they were like truck wheels, made of ice and snow. The thermometer next morning registered ten below at nine a. m., and fourteen earlier. Altogether I had traveled nine hundred miles with team this year. Next day Ed took me to Blackfoot, thirteen miles, and there I took train for Deer Lodge, so as to meet with the saints in conference, November 28 and 29.

I got here the evening of the 28th and found the people badly disappointed. The president of the district and the clerk had failed to put in an appearance. I got there at the eleventh hour, and really thought I had done fairly well to do that. One Sunday I had the honor of preaching in one of the neatest little chapels to be found anywhere. Withal it was dreadfully cold, we had a good little turnout. We intended to begin a series of meetings then, but it was too cold for the people to turn out, so have deferred that till a more convenient season.

At this writing the weather has moderated greatly. The saints here have built a house that is an honor to them and a credit to the town. A committee of three was appointed to purchase a lot and build the house. Andrew Christofferson, John Eliason, and G. L. Wellington, composed the committee. They have built the house at a cost of about nine hundred dollars, and but little remains unpaid.

I left Bro. S. D. Condit in Malad, with instructions to labor there for a time, and if possible in connection with the brethren there to free the church from debt. Two brethren, Morgan Jones and John Price, heading the list to pay off a little over two hundred dollars by Morgan subscribing eighty-five and John twenty. It is to be hoped the people will free the house from debt.

The Utah elders have visited some places in Montana, but as yet we have not met them. I understand they are operating in Anaconda. I shall certainly make them a friendly call and see how they stand. I will be sure to tell them what I know. They can meet the issue, or skip the country; if their President puts a gag on them and they wear it they can make up their minds to hear what we have to say. I surely will expose them and their false teachings. Polygamy is believed in and practiced by the church all the same. In conversation with a man but a few days ago he said he did not think they practiced the doctrine now. I called his attention to a man he knew and asked him what about his four wives. He didn't know. I asked him if he didn't know women who were known to be polygamous wives who had children since the manifesto, and he didn't know that. One man told me he could count fifty children born in one county in the last two years to polygamous women. That delectable doctrine started with falsehood and has been fostered and sustained by lying and misrepresentations, and the same obtains to-day. I confess my faith in a "dyed-in-the-wool" polygamist not as large as a mustard seed. I understand one of the men at Anaconda is by the name of Tempest. I shall try to see him; he may be an old acquaintance. I hope the mass of the people holding to the Utah philosophy may see the better way. May good be to them.

Yours in bonds,

R. J. ANTHONY.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 3.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

THE Scottish bard said, "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-glee." So with the missionary, for when seemingly the coast is clear and every indication bids fair for the honest to hear the gospel, the theological rocks are rolled against the doors, the bolts are shot against us, the cry goes up, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," to the apparent detriment of the "sect everywhere spoken evil against." On the third night just after the close of the sermon one of the Christian lights comes up to the front and handed us a paper from which we read as follows: "Mr. Chatburn: You will please see the directors before continuing your meetings longer—;" which meant virtually a lockout; nothing could be done until Monday next, when the "board" would be called together to discuss this and other matters.

On the morrow, starting from the cross roads store, with our genial mail carrier amid a driving rainstorm, in an open rig, we traveled twelve miles over hill and dale back to Macon, where we found in Bro. Palfrey and family, saints indeed, who are always ready to pay the bills and extend the warmest sympathy for the wandering ones. Here indeed the sun shines, and from the "Father to the baby," the most cordial welcome is extended. Such bright spots in the pathway in striking contrast, aid materially in smoothing the "jots by the wayside."

Drying and warming our benumbed body, a few hours are pleasantly passed around the hearthstone, a fervent prayer offered by the husband and father, and we pass into the cosy room waiting for the tired elder. On the morrow we are again on the road to Bevier to offer our services to the president of branch for the day (Sunday), domiciling with "the wheel man," Bro. George Fry, and who, together with his good wife makes it pleasant for the missionary.

On Monday morning we are away again for the cross roads, to meet the "board" and continue the warfare there. Arriving at the church eleven a. m. found the board in session, before whose august body we appeared to find that the pressure brought to bear by

WITHOUT OBEDIENCE NO PROMISE.

REPENT, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

In taking these words as a starting point, I am aware that it is an old subject with my brethren. And the world—the sectarian part of it at least—object to the stress we as a church place upon baptism as a necessary element in the salvation of man, and insist that without obedience to the principles embraced in our text, there is no promise to the world either of the remission of their own individual sins, or of a reception of the Holy Ghost as a gift from God.

The Apostle Peter, upon the memorable occasion when he commanded the people by the words of our text, was filled with the Holy Ghost, and because of the promise made by Jesus unto Peter and his brethren, that when he the Comforter, the Holy Ghost is come, he shall guide you into all truth, and shall bring to your remembrance all things whatsoever I have commanded you. Therefore, we believe that when the apostle commanded the people to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, he wished and intended that they should understand that by obedience to the principles of repentance and baptism they should receive a remission of their sins, with the further promise that after this obedience they should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

But now comes the objector and says, When Peter used the expression “for the remission of sins,” he did not mean that by their obedience to the act of baptism they should receive a remission of their sins, but when he used the word “for,” he meant that because of the remission of their sins they should be baptized, for so soon as they believed the words of Peter that the Jesus whom they had taken and slain had arisen from the tomb and had ascended to the Father and had become both Lord and Christ, they were justified by their faith and received a forgiveness of their sins, and their baptism as our Baptist friend would say was merely an outward sign of an inward and spiritual grace, which would bear a semblance of truth if the inward and spiritual grace was recognized as received because of obedience to the commanded outward form of baptism or birth of the water.

As a proof of their position they say just get your dictionary and you will find that the meaning of the word “for” is “because of.” Very well, we will, and I find the word “for” a preposition, and means “because of,” “in consequence of,” etc. They say, Did I not tell you so? Yes, of course; but this position would give the answer of the Apostle Peter, if placed in accordance with his definition, quite a strange appearance when compared with the part he took at Samaria a short time afterwards, as recorded in Acts 8: 14-17.

When the people cried out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” according to the above definition, Peter’s answer should have read something like the following, to have been fully understood at this distance of time: Because of your belief in my word that Jesus is the Christ, therefore you are justified by your faith, and you have received a remission of your sins, and also have received the gift of the Holy Ghost; and now because of this, I command you to repent, every one of you, and as a matter of form be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, because of the inward and spiritual grace you have already received.

This answer being in accord with present sectarian or so-called Christian ideas, places both the remission of sins and the reception of the Holy Spirit before repentance and baptism; that is they had received a remission of their sins before they had been taught that it was necessary that they should cease to do evil and learn to do well; for Peter had not, until his answer to their question, taught them repentance as a principle necessary to their salvation.

If we now go a little farther with our dictionary we will discover that this word “for” occupies two distinct positions in the English language. One of those we have presented above, which presupposes something gone or done before, as “because of.” The other occupies a very different position, to wit: “For, a conjunction, signifying, union, league, associathose donating money for the building of the church with the avowed understanding that it was to be a union church, said it should be opened or their money refunded, hence the board magnanimously offered us the church for the week; and so we toil on, forcing the battle under adverse conditions and circumstances; for I have found by experience that the battle never comes to us; we must force it into the dark corners that men may see the light.”

There is another line on which we wish to speak; there are two sides to the question; one has been given, which no doubt is interesting to some. What will the other be? We shall see.

BRADFORD, Eng., Nov. 27.

Editors Herald:—A tribute to dear Bro. Caffall’s labors amongst us at northeast Manchester. We have been blessed to have him discourse to us and teach us the way of life more fully. Wednesday, November 18, and following days will long be remembered by those whom he has taught. We were hungry, he fed us; we were thirsty, he led us to the fountain of living waters; and by so doing he has manifested to all the children of God that he is a duly authorized servant of the living God. Long may he be spared to do the work which his God and ours has assigned to him.

The first subject was, “What is truth?” and by God’s blessing on his word we know more fully what truth is. The next was, “Has the church established by Christ continued until now? If so, through whom?” He showed us clearly that it has not. He also testified to the restoration, showing by the written word that in the dispensation of the fullness of times God would bring back his people from their long dispersion among all nations and gather them together; and that as he had punished, so will he bless all his covenant people.

I try to be one of them. I have had such testimony beyond all question to the truth of this glorious latter-day work that I feel that my feet are on the rock and cannot be shaken. I believe I voice the feeling of the saints in these parts, by what I am writing, and wish to convey to the Church of Jesus Christ at large my sense of the honor God has bestowed upon us in sending his servant to teach his little ones how to walk.

I wish I could see dear Sr. Caffall, to thank her for sparing her dear one for the Master’s work. May our Father in heaven bless her and if it is his will send her to England to comfort and strengthen him as God intended.

Our hearts yearn over all the brethren and sisters in the land shadowing with wings, that they may be kept from all error. This is my prayer in Jesus’ name.

ELIZA ALICE RHODES.

“He has hard work who has nothing to do.”

“It costs more to revenge wrongs than to bear them.”

tion,—one of the parts of speech whose use is to join words or sentences together." Thus the word "for," in our text, united, joined, and associated together the words repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and thus the act of obedience to the command to repent followed by the rite of baptism would produce the result of a remission of sins.

The Apostle Peter at the time he uttered it, being "full of the Holy Ghost," and the promise being that this Comforter should guide him into all truth, should teach him all things, and bring all things to his remembrance whatsoever Jesus had said unto him, we believe that when Peter spoke he placed the principles he uttered in their proper order of required obedience, and the effect to be produced was not because their sins had been remitted, but that they must repent and be baptized "for," or, in order to, the remission of their sins. The obedience and the blessing, or the cause and effect, are united together with the promise that the Holy Ghost—the gift of God—shall be their future Comforter and guide into all truth, if ye abide in me" (Jesus).

And this position is confirmed by the command of Ananias to Saul, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord: by obedience to the act of baptism, his sins would be washed away. But we have another objector: Saul could not wash away his sins, God must do that. Fully granted. But unless Saul had placed himself in the condition of obedience to the command of God given through Ananias, Saul's sins would still have abided with him, and never would have been remitted or washed away. Just upon the same principle that Naaman the Assyrian's leprosy would still have abode with him if he had not washed seven times in the river Jordan according to the command of the prophet of God. And this idea is made clear by the Apostle Peter when writing of the temporal salvation of Noah and his family by water, they having obeyed the command of God by building an ark and entering into it, and thus their lives were saved from the flood of water which covered the earth and drowned the disobedient. Peter says:—

The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.—1 Peter 3: 21.

Yes, baptism in water, properly administered by a servant of God called and ordained under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, is indeed "for" the remission of sins, and will under God-appointed administrations insure the inheritance of the promise—the gift of the Holy Ghost unto all who obey as an indwelling Comforter, who will lead and guide them in the way of righteousness, provided always that their obedience was and their continued life is with a full purpose of heart to do the will of God and keep his commandments.

THE NECESSITY FOR A REORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

—NO. 3.

BY ELDER HYRUM O. SMITH.

UTAH IS NOT ZION.

It is asserted that the move to the valleys of the mountains was Joseph's measure; that he prophesied of it, etc. But I find nothing published in the history of the church, that even hints at the idea, until long after Joseph's death. I do find, however, that when Henry Clay suggested that Joseph Smith should take his people to Oregon, that he replies in this language:—

"Why great God! to transport two hundred thousand people through a vast prairie; over the Rocky Mountains, to Oregon, a distance of nearly two thousand miles, would cost more than four millions! or should they go by Cape Horn, in ships to California, the cost would be more than twenty millions!"—Times and Seasons, volume 5, page 547.

This letter is dated May 13, 1844; just a little more than a month before his death. He would hardly write that way about a move which he himself had under contemplation. But whether it was Joseph's measure, or Brigham's, the move to establish Utah as Zion, and a gathering place for the saints, was a direct violation of the revelations of God.

But something had to be done to establish the doctrines Brigham and others had in contemplation; it became necessary to go beyond the pale of civil law. What they wanted was to form a government of their own. In a speech made at a special conference held at Manchester, England, December 14 and 15, 1845, Wilford Woodruff said:—

"There is no safety under the government of the United States. It is time to go where we can enjoy our rights, and no longer be hemmed in, but be placed where Jacob's nobles shall be of themselves, and their governors shall proceed from the midst of them."—Millennial Star, vol. 7, p. 2.

In an editorial by the same man, I find this:—

"We can at any rate by and by escape round Cape Horn, and sail up the Pacific Ocean when informed of their precise locality. All possible information will be given as it is obtained, and we shall endeavor in our approaching General Conference to explain all things to the best of our ability. Let the saints lift up their heads and rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh. Mark well the signs of the times. Be thankful unto God that for the present the saints must not gather within the jurisdiction of the States, save it be in the wilderness, beyond the mountains."—Millennial Star, vol. 6, p. 201.

These quotations show: first, that they did not know where they were going, but that the general idea was that they were going to some place in California; second, that they wanted to establish a government of their own wherein their governors should be from the midst of them, or from their own number.

But we will now see what the church covenants say in regard to the matter:—

"Hearken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints; wherefore this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion."—D. C. 57:1. (Utah Ed. same.)

And that Zion should not be moved we read:—

"I, the Lord will contend with Zion and plead with her strong ones, and chasten her, until she overcomes and is clean before me; for she shall not be removed out of her place. I, the Lord, have spoken it. Amen."—D. C. 87: 8. (Utah Ed. 90: 36, 37).

And again:—

"Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion. And all these things, that the prophets might be fulfilled. And behold, there is none other place appointed, than that which I have appointed, neither shall there be any other place appointed than that which I have appointed for the work of the gathering of my saints, until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them; and then I have other places which I will appoint unto them, and they shall be called stakes, for the curtains, or strength of Zion."—D. C. 98: 4. (Utah Ed. 101: 17-21.)

So we find that every move made was a departure from the law.

FALSE TEACHINGS AND PRACTICES.

I shall now content myself with presenting as briefly as possible some further departures from the faith, by quoting extracts from sermons delivered by Brigham Young and those who have adhered to him. They left Nauvoo and established themselves in Utah, and the very first move they made after arriving was to invalidate all the baptisms that had been performed before that time, by being baptized, confirmed, and re-ordained again; thus treating lightly one of the most sacred ordinances of God's law and house. And every one must submit to this rebaptism as soon as they come to Utah, or be considered apostates. Brigham too, began to assert his authority, claiming that he alone had the right to dictate both in temporal and in spiritual things. Let us read what he says on these two points:—

"I am the controller and master of affairs here, under Heaven's direction."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 48.

"I will refer again to the brethren and sisters who have lately come over the plains. My counsel to them to-day is, as it has been on former occasions to all who have come into these valleys, Go and be baptized for the remission of your sins, repenting of all your wanderings from the path of righteousness, believing firmly in the name of Jesus Christ, that all your sins will be washed away. If any of you inquire what is the necessity of your being baptized, as you have not committed any sins, I answer, it is necessary to fulfill all righteousness."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 8.

The Book of Doctrine and Covenants teaches that Christ is our Savior and God, to whom we must look for salvation:—

"And now, remember the words of him who is the life and the light of the world, your Redeemer, your Lord, and your God. Amen."—D. C. 9: 18. (Utah ed. 10: 70. Also D. C. 10: 12; Utah ed. 11: 28, 29.)

Brigham taught:—

"Now hear it, O inhabitants of the earth, Jew and Gentile, saint and sinner! When our father Adam came into the garden of Eden, he came into it with a celestial body, and brought Eve, one of his wives, with him. He helped to make and organize this world. He is MICHAEL, the Archangel, the ANCIENT OF DAYS! about whom holy men have written and spoken. HE is our FATHER and our God, and the only God with whom we have TO DO."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 50.

The Bible teaches that Jesus was born of the Holy Ghost:—

"Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost."—Matt. 1: 18.

"And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God."—Luke 1: 35.

Brigham Young taught that Adam was the father of Jesus Christ, and that he was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. Hear him:—

"I have given you a few leading items upon this subject, but a great deal more remains to be told. Now remember from this time forth, and forever, that Jesus Christ was not begotten by the Holy Ghost. I will repeat a little anecdote. I was in conversation with a certain learned professor upon this subject, when I replied to this idea—if the Son was begotten by the Holy Ghost, it would be very dangerous to baptize and confirm females, and give the Holy Ghost to them lest he beget children, to be palmed upon the elders by the people, bringing the elders into great difficulties."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 51.

Such language is actually blasphemous; and this from a man who we are told represents Christ!

We read again in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:—

"And again, verily I say unto you, concerning your debts, behold it is my will that you shall pay all your debts."—D. C. 101: 13. (Utah ed. 104: 78.)

Then the Lord goes on to promise them that if they will be diligent in trying to pay their debts he will soften the hearts of their debtors, so they will not press them, until they are able to pay. But Brigham taught thus:—

"I wish to impress another thing upon your minds: An elder, who is willing to preach the gospel, borrows a hundred or a thousand dollars from you, and you never breath the first complaint against him, until you come home to this valley; but after you have been here for a few days, you follow me round and fill my ears with complaints against this brother, and ask me what he has done with your money? I say, 'I do not know.' Thus you are distressed and in misery, all the day long, to get it back again. If an elder has borrowed from you, and you find he is going to apostatize, then you may tighten the screws upon him; but if he is willing to preach the gospel, without purse or scrip, it is none of your business what he does with the money he has borrowed from you."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 340.

Rather a queer way to preach the gospel without purse or scrip, when they are allowed to borrow from whom they please and not obliged to pay it back. It is a good way, however, to keep men from apostatizing.

Some more of Brigham's teaching is directly in point, and I quote it:—

"I might here use a just and true comparison which will apply to the church. The rulers of Great Britain have tried to make every capitalist identify his interest with the Government—that has sustained the kingdom, and is like a powerful network around the whole. Apply this comparison to the kingdom of God on earth.

"Brethren, do you wish this heavenly government to stand? There is no government more beautiful, no confederacy more powerful! What shall we do to accomplish this? Imitate the policy of that earthly kingdom, identify our interest with the kingdom of God, so that if our hearts should ever become weaned from loyalty to the sovereign, all our earthly interest is bound up there, and cannot be taken away. We must therefore sustain the kingdom in order to sustain our lives and interests. By so doing, we shall receive the Spirit of the Lord, and ultimately work with all our hearts.

"This is a policy which I have not reflected upon until this morning, but before we get through with the conference, I shall, perhaps, see it entered into; not as the result of any premeditation in the least, but when the condition of our temporal affairs is read from the stand, you will find the church in considerable indebtedness. If any man is in darkness through the deceitfulness of riches, it is good policy for him to bind up his wealth in this church, so that he cannot command it again, and he will be apt to cleave to the kingdom. If a man has the purse in his pocket, and he apostatizes, he takes it with him; but if his worldly interest is firmly united to the Kingdom of God, when he arises to go away, he finds the calf is bound, and, like the cow, he is unwilling to forsake it. If his calf is bound up here, he will be inclined to stay; all his interest is here, and very likely the Lord will open his eyes, so that he will properly understand his true situation, and his heart will chime in with the will of his God in a very short time."—Jour. Dis., vol. 1, p. 202.

WRONG ON TEMPLE BUILDING.

Brigham also erred on temple building. I read in the church covenants that the Lord in speaking of the building of temples, says:—

"My holy house, which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name."—D. C. 107:12. (Utah Ed. 124:39).

It is rather hard to locate Brigham Young on temple building, as he does not seem to be settled in his own mind about it. He says:—

"When the people refused in Kirtland to build a temple, unless by a special revelation, it grieved his [Joseph Smith's] heart that they should be so penurious in their feelings as to require the Lord to command them to build a house to his name. It was not only grievous to him, but to the Holy Spirit also. He frequently said, that if it were not for the covetousness of the people, the Lord would not give revelations concerning the building of temples, for we already knew all about them."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 278.

A misinterpretation of the passage in the Doctrine and Covenants above quoted is evident. The Lord there says he always commands when a house is to be built unto him; but here in the statement of Brigham it is said that he never does, unless forced to do so by the covetousness of the people. We find, however, that Brigham talks differently soon afterward. This was uttered on February 14, 1853; but on April 6, 1853, we have this from the same man:—

"Joseph not only received revelation and commandment to build a Temple, but he received a pattern also, as did Moses for the Tabernacle, and Solomon for his Temple; for without a pattern, he could not know what was wanting, having never seen one, and not having experienced its use. Without revelation, Joseph could not know what was wanting, any more than any other man; and, without commandment, the church were too few in numbers, too weak in faith, and too poor in purse, to attempt such a mighty enterprise."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 31.

No comment upon the contradiction is necessary, as it will be evident to all. The Utah Church, in all the temples built, do not claim special revelation for any one of them; but interpret the words, "my people are always commanded to build," to be a perpetual command to build; but such an interpretation cannot be made without doing violence to the language. If it had read "my people are commanded always to build;" then their interpretation would have been all right; but it does not read that way.

BRIGHAMITE ENDOWMENTS.

In regard to the endowments, Christ and Brigham differed. Which shall we follow? Christ told his disciples to tarry at Jerusalem until they had been endowed with power from on high. He told them what the endowment would do for them.

"But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."—John 14:26.

"But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me."—John 15:26.

"Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come."—John 16:13.

Paul wrote that the fruit of that endowment is:—

"Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance."—Gal. 5:22, 23.

And Peter wrote:—

"According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness."—2 Peter 1:3.

All useful here in this life. Brigham represents heaven as a great secret chamber, at the door of which we must be able to give signs, grips, passwords, etc. Hear his definition:—

"Let me give you the definition in brief. Your endowment is, to receive all those ordinances in the house of the Lord, which are necessary for you, after you have departed this life, to enable you to walk back to the presence of the Father, passing the angels who stand as sentinels, being enabled to give them the key-words, the signs and tokens, pertaining to the Holy Priesthood, and gain your eternal exaltation in spite of earth and hell."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 31.

I am told here in Utah that the endowments given in Kirtland were identical with those given in the temples here; but Brigham says they were not. Hear him:—

"And those first elders who helped to build it, received a portion of their first endowments, or we might say more clearly, some of the first, as introductory, or initiatory ordinances, preparatory to an endowment. The preparatory ordinances there administered, though accompanied by the administration of angels, and the presence of the Lord Jesus, were but a faint similitude of the ordinances of the house of the Lord in their fullness; yet many, through the instigation of the Devil, thought they had received all, and knew as much as God; they have apostatized, and gone to hell.

But be assured, brethren, there are but few, very few of the elders of Israel, now on earth, who know the meaning of the word "endowment." To know, they must experience; and to experience, a temple must be built.—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 31.

Then follows Brigham's definition of the word "endowment" as given above. All those people, and they are many, who testify that they received their endowments in Kirtland and Nauvoo must be mistaken, because Brigham says, "You did not!" Only a few, and that a very few, received them. Christ's endowments and teachings were open, as witness the endowment of the apostles on the day of Pentecost, where all the multitude witnessed it and heard the apostles speak in tongues.

I read:—

"The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine. Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why askest thou me? ask them which heard me, what I have said unto them: behold they know what I said."—John 18:19-21.

But Brigham was afraid that people would ask his followers what he taught. In speaking of some who wanted their endowments he says:—

"Well, he gets his endowment, and what for? To go to California, and reveal everything he can, and stir up wickedness, and prepare himself for hell."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 144.

Christ was not afraid of any revealments. He stood there among his enemies, defying them to find any fault with his teachings; but Brigham was afraid of what his followers might reveal of his doctrine and secret works. Did he represent Christ?

LYING.

"Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent, shall be cast out."—D. C. 42:7. (Utah ed. 42:21.)

The repeating of this command in this nineteenth century seems almost superfluous, but events have proved that the repeating of the command was prophetic of that which was to come.

From the death of the Prophet Joseph, until the 29th day of August, 1852, the literature of the Utah Church is full of denials of polygamy. But now they tell us that they were lying all this time, and that it was practiced as early as 1841. Orson Hyde says in "Journal of Discourses, vol. 2, p. 83, that they had more than one wife when they were in Nauvoo; and George A. Smith says, in his autobiography in the Historical Record, that he had as many as five wives before he left Nauvoo.

In volume 12, Millennial Star, page 29, there is a list of lies and their refutation by Thomas Smith. These lies, he says, he took from a book by one Bowes, and in that list I find the following:—

"12 Lie. Joseph Smith taught a system of polygamy."

Then follows the refutation of the lie, by quoting the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. This was published by Orson Pratt in 1850. Two years afterwards, polygamy was publicly proclaimed by the Utah Church leaders, and palmed off on Joseph Smith, and given out to the saints as his doctrine. If it was a lie for Mr. Bowes to say it in 1850, it was a lie for Brigham Young to say it in 1852.

Andrew Jensen, in his Historical Record, says, in speaking of John C. Bennett, that he told some very wicked lies about Joseph. He said he taught one thing in public and practiced another thing in secret; and by this means was enabled to get some of the sisters into trouble. But we are told now, everywhere in Utah, that Joseph taught and practiced polygamy in secret, and denied it in public. Was it a wicked lie for John C. Bennett to tell it in 1842, and a sacred truth when told by Brigham and his minions in 1852 to 1896? Does time make then a difference in the sin? I could mention many more instances, but let this suffice.

WHAT WILL YOU DO FOR GRACELAND COLLEGE?

Eighteen months ago the question of a college under the fostering care of the Reorganized Church, was theoretical; and its only appreciable existence in the hopeful imagination of the projectors.

To-day it is a fact. The school itself, organized and making commendable progress, under the zealous care and supervision of able and efficient professors and instructors, and the new college building, finished complete from basement to dome—a magnificent structure—bringing credit to the church, in undertaking to furnish an institution for the education of the youth, who so greatly need its work, which shall be nonsectarian in character, and yet, demanding the highest moral and Christian training and development. The college building is of such solid and beautiful proportions as to properly impress its alumni with the idea of striving to excel, and form in their work proper taste and character.

What has been accomplished, however, has been only through the utmost tact, energy, and sacrifice of the friends of the institution and those in charge of the work; and doubtless all who have in any way contributed to the success of the enterprise feel strengthened with the results.

To build and successfully carry on a first class institution of learning without the aid of an endowment fund, is a difficult task in this day of rich schools and colleges. To succeed the first few years without this, will be one of the marvels of the times; and, but for the fact that we have faith and confidence in the friends who have thus far unselfishly authorized and sustained the undertaking, those in charge of the work would doubtless ere this have been overcome with discouragement. But we are not overcome; "Perplexed, but not in despair."

While the work is thus far on its way there is an immediate and pressing demand for aid, and it is from its friends, not enemies, or the indifferent, that this aid may be expected. Following the example of that courageous leader, Joshua, we appeal to you, "Choose ye this day whom you will serve."

A little help from every friend of this institution of learning will be a wonderful aid at this time and will forever stamp as erroneous the statements that the undertaking of a college by the church would end in failure.

The trustees have faithfully considered this effort to aid the college and begun arrangements by which the dedication and opening of the college may be made a personal one to every friend and wellwisher of the institution, and at the same time benefit the college in the amount absolutely necessary to its success. We want your help at the

whether you live far, or near; and for this purpose have arranged to receive special gifts and donations for that time, and preserve and publish a list of the names, together with the proceedings of the day, and have them duly entered in a book for that purpose and kept in the college archives. In this way the rich and poor, old and young, —all—may properly perform a part and do good. Contributions are solicited in the amount you are able to give, and we wish to receive your name with the amount, however large or small, for they should come in amounts all the way from a few pennies, to tens, hundreds, and even thousands of dollars. It is the hope of the trustees that sufficient shall be raised at this time as to avoid the necessity of coming before the public again for aid, at least for years. By united effort this will be done. Will you consider the matter at once? We wish to hear from you by the first day of January, 1897.

Committees have been appointed and arrangements are being made for the dedication and opening on

the dedication services beginning at 1:30 o'clock p. m. These exercises will last about two hours, and in the evening an entertainment of music and eloquence will be given in the brick church in Lamoni.

At the first of these special exercises parties will be present to register names and receive contributions; but the thousands who are so far away that they cannot be present on that day, may be present in spirit and by offering, such offerings to be duly recorded with others; and we ask your gift, your encouragement in lending your influence and sending your name, and your prayers for the good of the institution.

For this dedicatory work those at a distance may send funds directly to the Treasurer of the College, William Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa; or when more convenient send to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa; or to the Bishop's agent in the district where you reside.

You may also send to Frank Criley, Manager Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

Missionaries, District Presidents, and Presidents of Branches in all the various parts of the country are asked to give special notice of this and arrange for receiving and forwarding the contributions so as to help those who are desirous of sending; and may the favor and peace of the Master be with you and each of you in your devotions and work.

Full proceedings of the dedication exercises and contributions will be duly furnished all aiding the work.

By order of the Board of Trustees and Directors of Graceland College.

BISHOP'S AGENT'S NOTICES.

To the Saints of Colorado; Greeting—I wish to stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance, as Peter said, that ye may be mindful that the year is now fast drawing to a close, and also that the summer is over and the harvest is past; and I would like to see the names of all the saints in the State of Colorado on my books as Bishop's agent.

Let every one give a little as the Lord has prospered you in the past year, so let every one give cheerfully, little or much as the case might be; for the Lord loves a cheerful giver. And then, every little will help to roll on this great latter day work; and as the coffers of the church are low, let each one send in their tithings and free-will offerings that there may be meat in the storehouse of the Lord to feed those that are depending on the same to be fed.

We are all anxious to see the work of the Lord speed, and to this end we often pray; but we must remember that prayer alone will not carry this gospel forth to the ends of the earth; it requires means as well as the saints' prayers. We are commanded in a revelation given April 11, 1887, to "prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may. All are called ac-ording to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all." So we see by this that the work is ours and that we must all be interested in it alike, we must all labor together, for the Lord is not pleased with those that do not work, as he said in a revelation in 1831: "Now, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them." So we must all be workers in this latter-day work.

Now this law of tithing is one of the celestial laws of the kingdom of God; and the Lord has said that "Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer." Therefore if we want to enjoy the blessings of the Lord we must keep his commandments, for I read in Revelation 22:14: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Now, dear saints, it is one thing to believe in the commandments, but another thing to keep them and live by them. May the Lord help us all to see the necessity of keeping all of his commandments, is my prayer.

All moneys can be sent to me by post office money order on Evergreen Post Office, Jefferson County, Colorado; or to Denver Post Office; but please address me and send all letters to Conifer, Colorado.

RAILROAD HALF FARE PERMITS.

Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger Association, writing under date of December 2, 1896, has requested an official list "showing the regularly authorized clergymen or missionaries . . . who devote their entire time to religious work, depending on that for support and who have no other occupation."

He has been furnished a list of all General Conference appointees known to be actively engaged and entitled to permits.

District and branch presidents, also those appointed to labor in fields or districts, who may come within the rules of said Association, should obtain and forward certificates of indorsement from general missionaries in charge. The Chairman has been furnished a list of said general missionaries in charge and notified that indorsements by them are authoritative.

All applications are required to be made by applicants individually. Blank forms can be obtained from local agents of Association lines, or on application to B. D. Caldwell, Chairman Western Passenger Association, Chicago, Illinois. Said blanks contain full particulars concerning rules governing issuance of permits to both missionaries and local pastors.

The Association authorities have been requested to issue permits promptly to avoid delay in the work of the coming year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

It will be necessary for those attending the Sunday School Teachers' Institute to be held at Council Bluffs, Iowa, to notify T. W. Williams, at No. 206, Harmony Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa, at once so as to have accommodation provided for them. This matter should not be delayed. The Institute convenes on Saturday, December 26, at ten o'clock a. m.; and as holiday rates are effective only on December 24th and 25th, it would be necessary to leave the last connecting point about midnight of the 25th. See your regular agent about this, he can provide you with time tables and give instructions relative to the latest time of departure prior to the 26th. The program will be interesting and the work done should prove beneficial to all Sunday school workers, and we ask for a large attendance.

DIED.

HUNT.—Sarah Hunt, widow of the late Enoch Hunt, died November 5, 1896, at the home of her grandson, Allen Hunt, near Logan, Harrison County, Iowa, aged 84 years and 6 months. Nine children were the fruit of her union with Enoch Hunt, four of whom are living; also there has been fifty-eight grandchildren and sixty-eight great-grandchildren; of the grandchildren, she and her husband raised at least six. She was baptized in an early day, and ever remained true to God, and died as she had lived in the faith of the Lord Jesus Christ. Her rest in Christ is assured, for "he is faithful who has promised eternal life unto those who endure unto the end." Her funeral was preached by Elder James Donaldson, at the request of Brother Derry, who could not attend, as was her wish.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

POSITIVELY LIMITED TO DECEMBER 24.

Never will there be another special offer made on this great Standard Dictionary and Encyclopedia of all the world's knowledge. This is positively the last chance you will ever have to secure the work on such extremely liberal terms. We fully intend to advance the price to regular rates on Nov. 30, but thousands of people in all walks of life have requested an extension of time until Christmas. After careful consideration we have decided to continue our Special Offer until the above date. This is done simply and only as a further means of advertising this wonderful store-house of information. We do not expect to make money by this offer, as the very low price on such liberal terms barely pays for paper, printing and binding, saying nothing of the enormous investment of over $750,000 required in the production of the work. The tremendous amount of talk created will help to advertise this most modern and entirely up-to-date home reference library. No advertisement can do it justice—it is its own most eloquent advocate.

FOR A CHRISTMAS GIFT NOTHING COULD BE BETTER.

Your pastor, teacher, friend, parents, or your children will appreciate this great work beyond expression. It will last a life-time, and always give satisfaction. No business or professional man, teacher, student, mechanic, housewife, or any other person who wishes to keep abreast of the times, or who is interested in the laudable enterprise of self-education, can allow this rare opportunity to pass without careful investigation. The new and entirely up-to-date times embodies all the features of a complete dictionary and a thorough encyclopedia. Until December 24th this truly marvelous work will be furnished any reader of this announcement on receipt of only $1.00 in cash and the remainder in small monthly payments, amounting to about five cents a day. This is but little more than one-third the regular price. After December 24th prices will be immediately restored to regular rates—$42.00 to $70.00 a set, according to binding.

DON'T FORGET! This Special Offer holds good only until Christmas Eve, at which time the price will be advanced to $42 to $70 a set.

Superb New Edition, Revised to June 1, 1896, contains thousands of the newer words not found in any other reference book on earth, including the very latest coinages of '96, such as "Roentgen rays," "aseptolin," "vitascope," "skilagraph," "fluoroscope," etc. It is the only up-to-date dictionary, the most practical encyclopedia, and also a genuine

More than $750,000 Required to Produce this Work.

IT IS THE ONLY REFERENCE WORK ON EARTH that contains satisfactory and up-to-date encyclopedic treatment of such important topics of to-day as the following: Bathism, bimetalism, money, wages, germ theory, Arctic explorations, tariff, Christian Endeavor, appendicitis, shadow-photography, electrocution, steam navigation, and hundreds of others.

IT IS THE LATEST AND BEST DICTIONARY of our language. Each legitimate English word is exhaustively treated as to its origin, history, development, spelling, pronunciation, and various meanings.

IT IS A CONCISE ENCYCLOPEDIA of anatomy, botany, chemistry, zoology, geology, art, music, physics, philosophy, mathematics, mechanics, theology, biblical research, etc. 50,000 separate encyclopedic subjects, including the latest inventions and discoveries, tersely treated by educators of vast renown.

IT IS A SUPERB LIBRARY BOOK, printed on high grade white paper, from plates never before on press, durably bound, and containing the most superb illustrations, in 17 colors and in monochrome, ever made for any reference work.

IT IS BETTER THAN ALL OTHER DICTIONARIES because it is the latest and most complete, containing nearly twice as many words as are in the largest "unabridged," and treating 20,000 more encyclopedic subjects than are covered by other cyclopedias costing from $50 to $200. There is no other publication in its class.

TWO EXPERT OPINIONS—THOUSANDS SIMILAR.

Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst.—"The Encyclopedic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes; a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quintessence, and, withal, as delicate in detail as it is comprehensive in contents."

"Scientific American," New York.—"It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

MEANS PEACE TO ALL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13.—The negotiations between the United States and Great Britain for a treaty of general arbitration covering all subjects of difference between the two English-speaking nations, present and prospective, have advanced to a stage of completeness far beyond what the public has had reason to believe. The purpose of Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote is to conclude the negotiations within the next three weeks.

All of the substantial features of the treaty have been agreed on. From the present status of the negotiations it is believed the following will be the important terms of the treaty:—

First—A term of five years from the date of the exchange of ratification within which the treaty shall be operative.

Second—A court of arbitration of six members, three to be drawn from the judiciary of the United States and three from the judiciary of Great Britain.

Third—The submission to this tribunal of all differences between the two nations now pending are to arise within the period of five years, this not to include the Bering Sea question or the Venezuela question, now before independent commissions, but to include the question of the boundary between Alaska and British North America.

IMPORTANCE OF THE DOCUMENT.

The completion of this treaty will mark an important epoch in the relations between the two English speaking nations and in the judgment of those who have been most identified with its consummation it will be the most important document of a peaceful character in the history of their mutual dealings.

The President made passing allusion to the subject in his recent message. It had been understood, however, that the main purpose of Mr. Olney was to reach an agreement as to Venezuela, and that, having accomplished this, the larger question of arbitrating all differences would require considerable time for its complete development. But the negotiations have proceeded with surprising unanimity, so that those engaged in the work confidently believe it will be fully agreed upon and the signatures of the contracting parties placed to the document within three weeks. This will give fully two months for the consideration and ratification of the treaty at the present session of the United States Senate, and unless some unexpected obstacle should arise in that quarter there is every reason to anticipate the treaty may be made effective before the close of the present administration. At least this is the confident hope and expectation of those most concerned in the negotiations.

PENDING ISSUES ARE PUT ASIDE.

Aside from the previously-referred-to points, it can be stated in a general way that the terms of the treaty are such as to "clear the board" of all the vexatious questions which have arisen between the United States and Great Britain. These have been numerous in recent years, and some of them have threatened serious consequences.

Those familiar with the exact terms of the negotiations say not one of the causes of friction will remain. Some of them are withdrawn from the operation of the treaty from the fact that other methods of settlement already have been agreed upon. This is the case with the Venezuelan question, which, by the recent agreement pertaining to that subject alone, is committed to a special court of arbitration. The Bering Sea claims are now before a commission created by special treaty, so that this, too, will not fall within the scope of the new treaty. Other questions have been similarly disposed of, and, considering them all, it is said by those familiar with them that the Alaskan boundary will be the only pending controversy likely to come within the scope of the new treaty.

INTERNATIONAL CONFLICTS AVOIDED.

The main purpose of the treaty, however, is to guard against future differences threatening a rupture, and in this the negotiators believe the terms of the instrument will be such as to avoid all possibility of international conflict for the future.

This is regarded as the main achievement. It is said to be peculiarly advantageous to the commercial interests of both countries, assuring them against rumors of war or the serious prospect of war. As one of those concerned in the negotiations sums up the result:—

"When a serious difference arises between the two countries, instead of a public feeling that war may result and a consequent unsettling of commercial interests, as occurred during the Venezuelan crisis, the public will know beyond all possibility of rumor or report that the difference is one which will be settled by arbitration instead of a possible resort to arms. This public sentiment against alarm is felt to be no less beneficial as one of the features assured by the treaty than the plan of arbitration itself.

The reasons for limiting the treaty to five years are doubtless to place a measure of this extent to a fair trial, after which, if the results are as good as anticipated, the treaty can be renewed or be made permanent.

It is felt that the character of the men on such a court will remove it from the usual divisions based purely upon the nationality of the arbitrator, and, moreover, a majority vote of the arbitrators will doubtless be required.

POSSIBLE EXCEPTIONS TO BE MADE.

As yet it cannot be stated definitely whether the treaty will cover differences involving national honor and sovereignty. This was a point of disagreement early in the negotiations. It is probable, however, that an exception will occur in this respect, as the treaty is meant to cover the usual and ordinary differences which arise between nations, rather than such extraordinary events as an insult to the flag or any other national indignity, which are usually considered outside the scope of arbitrations.

All the negotiations have been carried on in Washington, and the signing of the instrument will occur here.

Mr. Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote have borne the brunt of the work, the latter executing the views of Lord Salisbury in such a way as to expedite the final arrangement.

Mr. Bayard has not taken part in the negotiation, although indirectly he has contributed to the result.—

DEDICATION.

Graceland College, Lamoni,
Iowa, January 1, 1897.

The Dedication of Graceland College will take place January 1, 1897, at 1:30 p. m.

This institution is now in the midst of its second year's work. It was founded some two years since under the auspices and management of the church which has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. It is one of the leading institutions of learning in Southern Iowa, and its course of study is second to but few in the land. Its faculty is composed of competent educators. It has now students enrolled from five different States. And while the college opened for work only in September, 1895, it is already known in nearly every State and Territory in the United States, in Canada, Europe, Australia, Mexico, and the islands of the sea; and in all these countries there are those who are friends of Graceland College.

We are now just moving into our fine new building which is not surpassed by any in this part of the State, and by but few in the country. It is surrounded by grounds which for beauty of arrangement and healthfulness, it would be difficult to excel.

At this our dedication time we appeal to everyone to aid us who is interested in the better education of the masses; for the existence of such an institution in our midst does materially assist in such education. It will reach many teachers who could not go abroad to better qualify themselves for their work. Many young men and women will avail themselves of the advantages of a higher education who would not do so, did they have to go abroad for it. No man has done his entire duty to his children and to his neighbor's children, who has not done all he can to place within their reach the advantages of an education.

We solicit your cooperation and support in this our time of need.

The Boards of Trustees and Directors have arranged programs of dedication, January 1, and an entertainment for the same evening. The entertainment will be for the benefit of the college fund. The committee have prepared a souvenir ticket as a memento of the occasion, which contains the programs for the afternoon and evening, beautifully printed in the college colors. This souvenir ticket will admit to both dedication and evening entertainment; price fifty cents to adults, twenty-five cents to children under fifteen.

Again we appeal to everyone to aid us by the purchase of these tickets. Nearly every member of the church would like to possess one of these souvenirs of the first college the church has built. Each one feels an individual interest in the success of our college, and rightly so, too; and all desire to see it succeed. This it cannot do without support in both students and means; and the means is particularly needed now in starting. It is confidently expected that when our attendance of students swells to hundreds it will be self-sustaining; but now we need aid. A little help from each who can help will put us upon a firm financial basis.

Do not put this aside thinking that plenty of others will respond. Can't you assist some, now?

In bonds,

WHAT WILL YOU DO FOR GRACELAND COLLEGE?

Eighteen months ago the question of a college under the fostering care of the Reorganized Church, was theoretical; and its only appreciable existence in the hopeful imagination of the projectors.

To-day it is a fact. The school itself, organized and making commendable progress, under the zealous care and supervision of able and efficient professors and instructors, and the new college building, finished complete from basement to dome—a magnificent structure—bringing credit to the church, in undertaking to furnish an institution for the education of the youth, who so greatly need its work, which shall be nonsectarian in character, and yet, demanding the highest moral and Christian training and development. The college building is of such solid and beautiful proportions as to properly impress its alumni with the idea of striving to excel, and form in their work proper taste and character.

What has been accomplished, however, has been only through the utmost tact, energy, and sacrifice of the friends of the institution and those in charge of the work; and doubtless all who have in any way contributed to the success of the enterprise feel strengthened with the results.

To build and successfully carry on a first-class institution of learning without the aid of an endowment fund, is a difficult task in this day of rich schools and colleges. To succeed the first few years without this, will be one of the marvels of the times; and, but for the fact that we have faith and confidence in the friends who have thus far unselfishly authorized and sustained the undertaking, those in charge of the work would doubtless ere this have been overcome with discouragement. But we are not overcome; "Perplexed, but not in despair."

While the work is thus far on its way there is an immediate and pressing demand for aid, and it is from its friends, not enemies, or the indifferent, that this aid may be expected. Following the example of that courageous leader, Joshua, we appeal to you, "Choose ye this day whom you will serve."

A little help from every friend of this institution of learning will be a wonderful aid at this time and will forever stamp as erroneous the statements that the undertaking of a college by the church would end in failure.

The trustees have faithfully considered this effort to aid the college and begun arrangements by which the dedication and opening of the college may be made a personal one to every friend and wellwisher of

SOME FIRST PRINCIPLES.

BAPTISM OF THE REV. GEORGE GRUBB.

On Thursday last (September 10) the Rev. George Grubb (who carried on a successful mission throughout the Australian Colonies some years ago), the well-known Church of England missionary and "Keswick" speaker, was baptized at Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road, by the Rev. F. B. Meyer. Before his baptism, at the invitation of Mr. Meyer, Mr. Grubb, amid evident emotion, gave the following testimony:—

"I bless God," he said, "that I have been brought to this day. I have now come to the end of a wilderness experience. Twenty-one and a half years ago an aged sister, present this morning, took me to attend an adult baptism at Grosvenor Hall, Dublin, and that sight my heart never forgot. At that time I had entered Trinity College, Dublin, to prepare for the ministry of the Church of Ireland. After that service I went to my Bible for the purpose of finding arguments in support of infant baptism, and I succeeded in doing so. I satisfied my intellect and all questionings with regard to the validity and scripturalness of infant baptism left. I did not know then, as I know now, that the truth must be learned to the satisfaction of the heart and not of the brain. I was perfectly satisfied with the well-known argument that, because an infant was circumcised under the Jewish dispensation therefore it was quite right to baptize it under the Christian. I did not see that the real analogy was this; that the Jewish infant is analogous to the Christian infant, and that this analogy was in the Spirit; that circumcision is to the flesh what true baptism is to the spirit; and that we do not live in Christ until we cast ourselves on him. Then we become Christian infants, and then God commands us to be baptized in his name. I went on satisfying my intellect with all these arguments, but my heart was restless; and God in his mercy spoke to my soul again on the subject when I was reading my Bible perfectly quiet on the steamship Scotsman, coming home from Canada last May. Quite unexpectedly I took my Bible and thought I would look out all the passages on baptism once more. My heart was in full communion with Jesus, and I said: 'Blessed Lord Jesus, if I do not know the truth really on these things, show it to me.' Well, I do not think one hour had passed before I was as certain in my own soul as I stand here this morning that it was the Lord's will that I should be buried with him in baptism; and then, when I got home, I just waited that the voice of the Lord should be confirmed in my soul. I did not want to do anything rashly, for I was quite aware of the consequences of this step. And then, when I met my beloved brother, Mr. Meyer, at the Keswick Convention, the Lord told me to ask him to baptize me in the name of the Lord. And so I stand with a conscience as clear as daylight before God, and the wilderness experience is over. There were words which I heard twenty-one years and a half ago, as one man was baptized—I think it was Lord Carrick. As he stepped into the water these words were spoken: 'When thou passest through the waters I will be with thee;' and those words are in my soul this morning. God has revived them in my soul after twenty-one years' experience, and so, once more, I cast myself on God that he will show me the path of life henceforth."—Geelong, Victoria, Times.

We have the foregoing from Bro. Gomer Wells, of Australia, who is alive and taking notes among his ministerial brethren on the Island-Continent.

A few thoughts suggest themselves in connection with this item. The spirit of dissatisfaction with existing formulas of faith is not confined to any one particular land, but has been disseminated so widely as practically to have become almost universal. Men who desire satisfactory spiritual communion and who have the welfare of fellow man at heart instinctively realize that something is wrong with their religious beliefs, and have set themselves to work, many of them studiously and prayerfully, to locate and to rectify the trouble. The reverend gentleman referred to in the item above has, to say the least, taken a step forward in abandoning infant sprinkling and sprinkling itself for immersion; and he is not alone in so acting. His confession in the matter adds another to the long list of theologians who are publicly proclaiming in favor of some principle of the original faith, coming a step or two nearer to the truth.

As to whether the influence that moved upon his inner conscience leading him to action was direct and a prompting of the Spirit of truth, we are not prepared to affirm or deny. His earlier analogy confronted with the fact that the Jews both circumcised and baptized. While we are prepared to believe and accept the statement of fact that the Lord blesses and acknowledges men in proportion as they move forward in any line of right doing, we are also reminded that when the angel directed Cornelius in answer to his prayers, he instructed him to send for an authoritative representative, one called and chosen to instruct and administer as a servant of God, to induct him into the kingdom of God by baptism, and that his obedience by authoritative baptism was ratified by bestowment of the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Rev. Grubb is evidently a sincere man, one whose services bespeak his interest in the cause of religion and of fellow men, and for all of which service we are not disposed to withhold due credit from him. But the question forces itself upon the mind, Has he not been moving in the same circle in which so many are confined and by which they are prescribed, limited, bound, and prevented from appropriating and receiving the benefits of truth—truth entire, complete?

He has been immersed, but by whom, and by what authority? He has made a new departure, but by whose direction, and by what "scriptural" provision as to the right of the officiating minister? In America an organization called the "New Light" sprang into existence based upon the proposition, "If we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize." That organization, however, has virtually repudiated its founder, or at least has abandoned the claim of his having divine, authoritative sanction or direction; has become divided and subdivided, and has also abandoned some of its specific items of belief; and all this after years of successful missionary work, resulting in thousands of converts and the building of many churches, etc., peculiar to the methods of popular evangelical churches.

Rev. Grubb has adopted a peculiar method of reasoning concerning infant baptism, but has finally reached the conclusion that immersion is the proper mode of baptism, being satisfied that said form is scriptural. However, to many it will appear strange that it did not occur to him that the official acts of fellow ministers and churches who practiced sprinkling and other things manifestly unscriptural also required examination; that there was a strong probability of men who proclaimed and practiced unscriptural forms and tenets being themselves out of harmony with divine law to the extent that their official acts were null and void. And, with all due regard for this gentleman's general statement, the query also arises, If it took twenty-one years of his Christian experience to bring about the one step referred to, and he a Church of England clergyman with special theological training for his ministerial work, how long may it not take him and his religious associates to get right on all items of faith? And further: Can his work bring to him and to all affected by it the present and future satisfactions desired and necessary? What prospect has the religious world, of getting right, with the slow progress it is making, if really making any sure progress toward coming to "a knowledge of the truth"?

As a people we have been regarded by some as critical, straight-laced, and illiberal, because disposed to question these and other lines of religious policy and belief; but now that churchmen without number are confessing that they have been wrong, and are making almost all kinds of effort to correct the errors of the past and present, we have been confirmed in the course we have pursued in this respect. It has not been our understanding of our mission that we have been commissioned to tell the people they are right; that religious opinions out of harmony with themselves and causing confusion ad infinitum were all true and in harmony with God. It would be just as consistent in us to indorse absolute monarchies, semi-barbarous systems of tribal relations, constitutional monarchies, and all forms of republics—all dissimilar and antagonistic—as all right and correct as systems of government, as to pursue the course referred to. One would be as inconsistent and untrue as the other; and such a course of action would prove our incompetency to estimate and properly to deal with the political conditions of the world, as the other would manifest our incapacity and ignorance of the situation. To indorse wrong systems of government would remove from the people under their imperfect rule our aid and encouragement to rise to higher levels and ideals of life, and encourage contentment with false and unjust systems that would keep them in conditions of partial and complete bondage, and which the longer entailed would the more effectively hold them in partial or complete subjection politically and socially. We would thus be influencing contentment and satisfaction with conditions and forms that hampered, distressed, and prevented human welfare and happiness; and could not consistently lay claim to liberality of spirit or to justness of action. The same principles run through and actuate our course religiously. We recognize the necessity of consistency in this respect, hence insist that God has not changed; that if he has not spoken since the New Testament canon closed (as both Protestant and Catholic affirm) no principle there recorded has been abrogated; hence what "is written" must be taught and observed, in harmony with the conditions of the great commission.

We can neither be liberal nor consistent by departing from or encouraging disregard of the principles of truth; indeed those who profess such liberality as would justify such course of action are themselves illiberal and narrow; and are out of harmony with the Master himself, who declared that "straight is the gate, and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it;" who also declared, to the young man, spurred by the hopes and aims of youth, "If thou wouldst enter into life, keep the commandments." It is only by manifestation of the truth that we can truly commend ourselves to the hearts and consciences of men and women.

All liberty, general and personal, is secured to man by law. Long centuries of human experience, including both intellectual and civil liberty and slavery, have demonstrated the principles by which the rights of man have been revealed and secured. What we have of liberty social and political has been obtained by recognition of and obedience to manifest, well-known principles that govern the race in its regulations and comminglings. Those who violate such principles are justly recognized as out of harmony with law essential to the public weal, hence are restricted and made to conform to principles that conserve the general good. There is a class which repeatedly has urged the principle of "personal liberty" so called, but which has been generally recognized as a "misguided" element, to speak mildly. Another class, in things moral and spiritual, would disregard some plain and necessary restrictions governing in social and church affairs, and free society from the limitations of certain moral restraints. Such have been called pseudo-reformers. Still another, who would drive the Almighty from his own dominions and proclaim humanity independent of his directings and government have been called by the religious world "infidel." Yet all these claim to be liberal minded and "freethinkers."

It is this free thinking that disregards divine restrictions and encourages man to become a law unto himself; it is this so-called liberality that leads him everywhere and nowhere, finally without God and without hope in the world; that exalts and worships the creature more than the Creator; and against the systems which such a course builds up the Lord in these last days declared to the young Seer, "Join none of them for they are all wrong!"

A good man is good because of the restraints he imposes upon himself in his recognition of the moral and spiritual principles that have been revealed to instruct and govern humanity. He brings himself into subjection and rightly educates and uses his faculties of mind and powers of body, and for good, because of due and necessary restraint. Forces within him made to do duty for good to himself and to others would, if miseducated and perverted, become forces for evil. He submits to the principle of control and governs himself by law. A steam engine, a horse, or any other force is controlled and made a beneficent instrument because of this same principle of control; but which if unmanageable creates consternation and becomes a destructive force; and this in harmony with the principle proclaimed by the Savior who recognized and taught it in all his wonderful nature-teaching during his ministry, that obedience to law was essential to preserve, direct, and redeem.

God himself ceases not to be God because of this principle of limitation. While he has power to destroy in one sense, his power is wisely and beneficently directed to control and uphold by the spirit of intelligent application of the forces of nature; and he is great because of this. He furnishes us a perfect illustration of consistency and liberality, in contrast with the so-called liberality and "free-thinking" and "free acting" seen in humanity's inventions of religious systems and manifold departures from truth; all of which are failures, and have but caused and added to the confusions of ancient and modern Babylon—the world.

It is well that truth—truth in principle and in power—is being proclaimed in Australia by the faithful brethren, that all who will may finally heed and be blessed by it, as truth alone can satisfy and redeem the race.

We referred to the principle of recognition of men in right doing. We have no reason to doubt that good men and women have been blessed and are often markedly blessed with evidences of God's love and compassion in their labors; it would be strange were it otherwise. But while the seal of approval of good deeds and efforts to further the cause of right by teaching moral principle, have been received, it by no means follows that men should regard such as indorsement of all to which they cling, especially when their tenets are in direct conflict with the written word. God cannot approve what is in direct violation of what he has revealed. His paths are straight, his course one eternal round. That once a truth is always a truth. God's works fail not because he is exact, correct, true, in harmony with the eternal fitness of things. The foundations of the faith once delivered to the saints are sure, substantial, eternal.

We have received a kingdom "that cannot be moved."

We like to hear "first principles," and while aware that to many of our readers the foregoing may contain "nothing new," we shall content ourselves with the thought that many, if not all, require plain and simple truths; and that with all they bear repetition. The world, at least, needs the spiritual alphabet, not the principles of theological astronomy.

CHURCH HISTORY.

THE Board of Publication has placed the prices of volumes of the Church History so low that it cannot allow a commission on sales of the book.

Herald Office agents and the ministry will please take notice, in making sales and remittances.

The agents and ministry will be allowed, as heretofore, to deduct the cost of remittances.

The History has been issued on so narrow a margin that this rule becomes a strict necessity.

The book is sold at about cost in the interests of the church in general.

All are requested to push the sale of it. It is an excellent work and is worth far more than its cost to any reader.

The prices are: Cloth $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50

WE have received from several brethren, either copies of the Christian Herald, or clippings from it of an article on Mormonism and the Mormons, by Gen. John Eaton, with requests that it shall be noticed. To all these and others we say that Bro. T. W. Williams, of Council Bluffs, has written a reply, and a letter to Gen. Eaton, in reference to the article, asking that the errors affecting the Reorganization and its faith be corrected. Bro. Williams is quite able to the task of securing a correct representation of the church, if it is possible to get a hearing. It is quite possible, however, that the Christian Herald may do as the publishers of the Century once did, while Dr. J. G. Holland was Editor; when, after publishing an article from the pen of Miss Ellen Dickinson in regard to the Spalding Manuscript Story, grossly misrepresenting the facts, they refused to publish a correction written by us and duly sent them; assigning as a reason for such refusal that they did not wish to foster a controversy in their journal. The Christian Herald has suffered an attack to be made, in an indirect manner, in its columns, but it may not be Christian enough to permit a defense. It seems that the average Christian, from minister and editor to layman, is impressed with the idea that no class of believers in the latter-day work is entitled to fair and just treatment from so-called Christians. We shall be pleased if the Christian Herald is an exception to this rule and will accord Bro. Williams a hearing; but long experience makes us to be doubtful of it.

ROME has authorized a denial of the report that charges of heresy have been preferred against leading American Churchmen. The statement has been reaffirmed by the Rome correspondent of the New York Journal.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

THE January or holiday number of Autumn Leaves contains a choice variety of Christmas and New Year's reading, and such as will add zest to the spirit of the season with its enjoyments. It is unnecessary to particularize the articles; all are good and up to the demands of the season and the wants of its readers, and indicate that the future of the Leaves is to continue an improving, advancing development in the interests of the literary and general teaching of the young people of the church, in whose especial interests it is issued, though read by both youth and adults of the church, and to whom it comes as the friend and help of all who love the good and the true.

We commend to subscribers and others the Leaves, and its mission for good in the education of young and old. It has found and occupied an important place, and solely on its merits, and we trust will still continue in years to come as a growing power for good within and without the church.

Sr. Walker, well known as a friend to and worker for the young, will continue as its Editor, which insures the method of conducting the magazine for 1897.

The subscription price is $1.25 per year; the Leaves and HERALD, both, for $3.00 if paid in advance.

Subscriptions solicited. Address the Business Department.

THE following from the Bay City, Michigan, Independent, is confirmed by a similar statement in the Detroit Journal of the 28th ult. If of special value fuller developments will probably appear in due time:—

NEWBERRY, Mich., Nov. 19.—About two weeks ago Jake Gordon and Geo. Howells were out shooting about six miles from Newberry and they noticed what appeared to be a man's head sticking out of the ground where a large hemlock tree had been upturned. They dug and unearthed what appears to be three stones or clay idols. The largest weighs 500 pounds and is as large as a full grown person; the other two are smaller and all are in a sitting position. A tablet was found with them. The tablet weighs about 150 pounds and is 32x16 inches and is divided into one-half inch squares. Altogether 140 squares are on the tablet and on each square there are different characters or figures, which appear to be a mixture of old Greek, Phœnician, and Egyptian, while others claim to be Aztec hieroglyphics. It is undoubtedly the only tablet of the kind found in North America.

MISSOURI MOUND BUILDERS.

MANSFIELD, Mo., Nov. 23.—To-day, while exploring an onyx cave near this place, a party of hunters unearthed four human skulls. It was supposed at first that they were the remains of Indians, but the subsequent discovery of several pieces of pottery and crude instruments of war, which it is known were not the handiwork of Indians, leaves no doubt that they were the bones of some prehistoric race, probably the mound builders. The skulls were sent to the Smithsonian institute at Washington for a further examination.—Kansas City Times, Nov. 24.

WANTED.

THE Herald Office desires to obtain one or more copies of "The Word of Consolation," also of "The Voice of the Captives"—pamphlets issued by the Reorganization to the scattered saints, in its early days.

Anyone having copies to devote to church use would favor us by forwarding them addressed to the Herald Editors.

Other pamphlets or books issued by the church or by any faction of it, would prove acceptable and be put to good use in the Church Library or editorial department, for the general good.

L. L. WIGHT, a minister of the "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" will preach in the "Christian" church next Sunday at eleven a. m. In making a notice of services by the same party some weeks ago the Bee erroneously stated that Rev. Wight was a Mormon. While claiming Joseph Smith as a prophet and founder of the church the organization to which Rev. Wight belongs has no fellowship with the church in Utah calling itself the Latter Day Saints, and better known as Mormon. The church which Rev. Wight represents has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa, and is the original church founded by Joseph Smith.

The Beeville Bee, of Beeville, Texas, for December 4, 1896, sent us by some one contained the above notice of the work of Bro. L. L. Wight, one of the sons of the one time apostle Lyman Wight, of Crooked River fame; "Capt. Dreadnaught," as he was called because of his bravery.

COLLEGE DEDICATION SOUVENIRS.

IN connection with the appeal of the College Committee asking donations to the college fund, in which notice was given that remittances could be made to them or through Bro. Criley, our Business Manager, the latter desires us to state that handsome souvenir cards have been mailed to branch presidents, Herald Office agents, and others, to be sold at fifty cents each. The cards will contain a cut of the college building, date of dedication, program of exercises for dedication and evening entertainment, with names of the directors and trustees, printed in the college colors; and will admit holders to both. It is desired that all in position to so aid in forwarding the work of education by sustaining this institution of learning will both contribute and canvass for the sale of tickets.

The college fund is low and needs the reliable aid of every one interested. Sunday school officers and those of other organizations might aid, and are invited to help the movement in this special instance.

It is desired that all who take a pride in fostering the cause of education will now lend substantial aid in placing the first college built by the church on a better financial basis, that its educational work may the more speedily be pushed forward.

Since writing the foregoing we are requested to state that the prices of tickets have been placed at fifty cents for adults and twenty-five cents for children. This will give the children a better opportunity to aid a work in which they have a special interest, and it is hoped that they will be encouraged to lend their aid to the support of the college, which is destined to do so much for them. Help in this good work will impoverish no one; indeed the amount asked for would never be missed and will return to the givers manifold in good to them, to the church, and to others. To sustain this laudable endeavor now is to sustain that that will promote the wellbeing of the rising generation as workers for good in the various avenues of usefulness now opening and widening before them. Every lover of truth and progress should see that his aid is given, willingly and gladly.

Bro. Criley requests that branch presidents make an active canvass for the sale of the souvenir tickets; that more than mere announcements be made—that active work be done among the people in their behalf. Anything must be worked up to prove successful, hence the earnest work of branch presidents, and of others who can do so without interfering with them, is earnestly solicited.

Saints not in branches may forward their remittances direct to the Herald Office. Souvenir tickets will be forwarded to them on receipt of contributions of the amounts named. However contributions are not limited as to amount. See committee's appeals on Herald cover.

Remittances may be addressed to Bro. Frank Criley, Lamoni, Iowa.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. S. MACRAE, Miller, Oklahoma, the 9th:—

Bro. and Sr. George Pearce, of Florence, Colorado, sent an urgent request for some one to come and preach for them. I do not know the address of the Colorado missionaries, therefore ask that they be informed of the request through the Herald.

BRO. J. W. WIGHT, Little Sioux, Iowa, the 14th:—

Our late conference passed off nicely, with a good attendance from other branches. Bro. Chambers unable to attend and at last accounts very poorly. I remained to hold series of meetings and we are having a very good attendance, considering the roads are about as bad as they can be. The weather has been so warm that the snow and ice have melted and made the roads almost impassable. The interest in the preaching is marked and the preacher having splendid liberty. It was especially so at the morning service yesterday, when a number were in tears. Such inspirations are grand to both speaker and hearers. Officiated yesterday at the funeral of a four year old child of Bro. and Sr. George Vredenburg. Poor little thing was taken from them under peculiarly distressing circumstances. "Black canker" had eaten one side of her face away, part of the bone being taken! Am located at Bro. Scott's, and they together with the other saints here are doing what only saints can to make my stay pleasant. Would write for the Herald only that I feel others have that which is of more interest to the public.

Bro. J. M. Terry, St. Joseph, Missouri, December 17:—

We are moving on as a branch, our meetings spiritual, peace and unity prevails, our numbers increasing; yet the enemy is not idle. Our quarterly conference at German Stewartville branch was very peaceful and quite spiritual. The same officers were retained. The work is onward.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. L. L. WIGHT reports success as a result of persistent labor, in the face of unpromising conditions. He baptized an excellent lady on the 6th inst., and is to baptize others so soon as he can reach their localities. He was at Beeville, Texas, on the 10th, enroute to San Antonio, Medina, and other points. Press notices in favoring the cause, and waning prejudice, are among the promising features that help the general work.

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger, writing from Moordale, Pennsylvania, December 12, states that German Baptist or Dunkard friends who once forbade his preaching are now offering him places in which to set forth the truth. He accepts this as a vindication of the correctness and power of friendly treatment in contrast to the harm done by anger or resort to forceful methods. While visiting at Harrisburg and vicinity he hopes to do good.

Wong Chinn Foo, a Confucian priest, has been stationed at Chicago to do missionary work in behalf of his native religion. He argues for polygamy on the ground that it would prevent divorces. That argument, so-called, has been heard before in this country, in Utah, where both polygamy and divorce with kindred evils exist. Wong Chinn Foo said some good things however — concerning inequality, want, and irreligion among the American people; and that they "tried to force down the Heathen a doctrine" they were "at sea on themselves."

Sr. A. C. Hart, Catoosa, Indian Territory, wishes to obtain copies of Autumn Leaves for December, 1892, and October, 1895. Can anyone furnish her the numbers?

Forty millions of people are said to be actually starving, out of India's population of 287,000,000. Prices of food are very high; grain riots are common; nothing can be raised before the lapse of ten months and in the event of a good season. Disease and other direful results are adding to the general distress; parents are said to be abandoning their children in some instances.

The HERALD cover contains an account or outline of the proposed arbitration treaty now in process of consummation between the United States and Great Britain. It is to be hoped that the great end sought will be realized and a basis for lasting peace between these two great nations be established. They have been and should continue to be foremost among nations in promoting peace on earth and good will to man.

By letter from Elder Jason W. Briggs, from Denver, Colorado, mailed December 16, we learn that one of his daughters is in a very critical condition of health, "hovering between life and death." Bro. Briggs' eyesight is growing very dim, and his vigor of body seems to be failing under the weight of years, but his logical mind seems to retain its force and power. We trust that his anxiety may soon be relieved by the complete restoration of his daughter.

General Weyler has returned to Havana, where the Spanish forces have held public demonstrations of rejoicing over the death of General Maceo, commander of Cuban forces in Pinar del Rio. Weyler has occasioned the displeasure of his government because of the slowness of his movements and other unsatisfactory matters connected with the conduct of the campaign. The death of Maceo is said to have been brought about by Spanish treachery and cruelty, contrary to the laws of civilized warfare. It has added greatly to the sympathy manifested in behalf of Cuban independence, and troops are being raised in many parts of the United States, by private parties, as volunteer forces for the patriot army. Cuban headquarters at New York have been obliged to decline most if not all offers of volunteer service. American sympathy has been awakened to such a degree that many public demonstrations disapproving Spanish methods of conducting the war have been held, including efforts in Congress to induce the government to recognize the Cubans as belligerents.

Severe storm along the Atlantic coast on the 16th, said to have been the worst since 1888. A number of vessels wrecked, the coast storm followed by a blizzard in which a number of lives were lost.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, completed a tour of the Decatur district on Sunday, the 20th inst., preaching two sermons on that date, having previously spoken to the Lamoni saints on Thursday, the 17th.

The steamer Salier recently went down off the coast of Spain. Four hundred lives were lost.

French statesmen advocate increasing the naval strength on the ground that Germany is strengthening her navy by added battleships. President Faure, of France, has accepted the Czar's invitation to visit Russia.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, of the Minnesota field, at home for the holidays, reports excellent health, splendid field for labor, and great liberty in presenting the word.

Bro. J. D. Erwin, writing from the Mississippi field, reports baptisms of some people of excellent repute in his field. Also the baptism, calling, and ordination of one of the colored people, for whom Bro. Erwin thinks there is a fine prospect of usefulness to his own race.

Mr. Joseph Wing, assistant superintendent of George Street Asylum, Paramatta, New South Wales, writes the Herald Office, stating that H. E. Hamilton, to whom the HERALD and Leaves have been addressed, and presumably one of our brethren, died September 27, 1896. Mr. Wing requests that Hamilton's friends be notified. We make this note, not knowing the brother. Possibly this may be known by Australian brethren by this time.

Bro. I. N. Roberts, of the Minnesota and Dakota mission, arrived at home, Lamoni, on Wednesday, the 16th. He reports the work in good condition in his field.

Correction.—In Lesson 1, Intermediate Quarterly for January, 1897, read "Othniel was the son of the younger brother of Caleb," instead of as given, as erroneously taken from Smith-Peloubet's Bible Dictionary. It is correctly given in Lesson 1 of the Senior grade.

An English expedition to the Antarctic is being fitted out.

A typhus epidemic is decimating the naval station of Pola, Austria. Public gatherings are suspended; seven hundred patients are in the hospitals, with the sick list rapidly increasing.

An earthquake, the most violent known in the experience of the country, is reported from England, December 17. Every shire from Durham to Surrey and from London to the west coast was shaken. Buildings rocked and furniture was shifted in some places. Rumbling sounds and other phenomena accompanied the visitation.

Rome advices state that Pope Leo will renew negotiations with the United States for the creation of American legation to the Vatican; that he has little hope for present success, but takes the steps by way of homage to a principle which, according to the Vatican, must sooner or later triumph.

President Joseph Smith and Bro. G. H. Hilliard left Lamoni for Independence on the 21st.

Bro. M. H. Bond, writing from St. Louis, the 19th: "Unless more money and eloquence is imported into St. Louis by the Utah people matters will probably go into bankruptcy. Hellman, one of our members whom they baptized, was really a good man, and it was a puzzle that frightened some weak-kneed people when Roberts' circus opened at first. But we stood our ground and know our friends better than we should have done. There is a lot of Brighamism and spirit of careless living that characterized the apostasy and that still rules in Utah that we have to deal with in St. Louis. Hellman will be rebaptized into our church. He gave me order for Herald and Ensign yesterday. Matters moving upward decidedly. Excellent spirit coming in. We are going to try for a revival after holidays."

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO THE CHILDREN, FROM THE EDITOR.

READ for home reading to the children first twenty verses of second chapter of Luke.

For songs and poems, "Watchman, tell us of the night."

"Christmas Carol," "Bells are ringing."

"Songs for Little Children," by Eleanor Smith.

Also read Hans Anderson's "Fir Tree."

Talk to the children of God's provision for taking care of plants in winter, of his extra clothing of animals, of the migration of birds, etc.

A CHRISTMAS MESSAGE.

(For the school.)

There is silence high in the midnight sky,
And only the sufferers watch the night,
But long ago there was song and glow,
And a message of joy from the Prince of Light,

And the Christmas song of the messenger through
The echoes of life shall forever prolong.

What was the first angelic word
That the startled shepherds heard?
"Fear not!" Beloved, it comes to you
As a Christmas message most sweet and true:
As true for you as it was for them
In the lonely fields of Bethlehem;
And as sweet to-day as it was that night,
When glory dazzled their mortal sight.
—Frances R. Havergal.

CHRISTMAS.

HYMN, LUTHER'S CRADLE SONG.

[TUNE.—"Home, Sweet Home."]

[This hymn, composed by Martin Luther for the children, is still sung by many of the German mothers to their little ones.]

Away in a manger,
No crib for His bed,
The little Lord Jesus
Laid down his sweet head.
The stars in the sky
Looked down where he lay.
The little Lord Jesus,
Asleep in the hay.

The cattle are lowing,
The poor baby wakes,
But little Lord Jesus,
No crying he makes.
I love thee, Lord Jesus;
Look down from the sky,
And stay by my crib
Watching my lullaby.—Sel.

WHAT THE LETTERS SPELL.

[PROVIDE large cardboard letters, either printed or covered with evergreen. See that they are properly adjusted by means of a thread around the neck. Have them reversed when they come out,—each child turning hers as she begins to speak. Or the word "Christmas" may be made on the board in large stencil letters, and each one touch her letter with a pointer as she speaks.]

Teacher—

When Christmas is written on all around
Have you thought what each letter spells
In the word that the children love so much
And the wondrous story it tells?

First Child—C.

My letter tells of the Child who was born
On that Christmas long ago;
Of the Christ who came from his home above,
To us on the earth below.

Second Child—H.

Mine tells of the far-away Holy Land,
The land of the Christ-child's birth;
Of the Homes he blessed, of the Happiness
He brought to the sin-cursed earth.

Third Child—R.

And my letter tells why the Savior came,—
To Redeem the world from sin,
To Rescue the fallen, Relieve the sick,
And gather the children in.

Fourth Child—I.

I would tell you of how the Savior came,—
As an Infant, tender and mild;

Of the Inn, where the people had no room
To receive the Holy Child.

Fifth Child—S.

I tell of the Star that the wise men saw,
Shining far up in the sky,
And their path through the trackless desert, led
By the light that gleamed on high.

Sixth Child—T.

And I of the Treasures the wise men poured
At the feet of the baby boy,—
Of the gold, and the myrrh, and the precious stones,
That told of their love and joy.

Seventh Child—M.

I would tell of the Manger where they laid
The infant Lord of all,
Who found no home on the earth but this one
In the lowly oxen's stall.

Eighth Child—A.

I tell of the Angels that bore the news
To the shepherds watching near,
While the glory of God shone round about,
And filled all their hearts with fear.

Ninth Child—S.

I sing the Song that the angels sang,—
'Tis echoing now as then;
"Glory to God in the highest, on earth,
Peace and good will toward men."

All—

And we all sing the song with glad, full hearts,
As the angels sang it then,
"Glory to God in the highest, on earth,
Peace and good will toward men."

CHRISTMAS CUSTOMS.

IN GERMANY.

IN Berlin, at Christmas, the streets are lined with fir-trees. The royal square is filled with booths made of evergreen boughs, containing toys and all manner of gewgaws for sale. They are lighted with myriads of wax tapers, and as a recent writer tells us, they look, with their kaleidoscopic ornaments, "like huge Christmas trees."

IN ITALY.

In many of the principal churches of Italy a corner is set apart at Christmas time in which, amid some rude rock work intended to represent the cave or stable at Bethlehem, wax or papier-mache figures of the Holy Child and its mother are to be seen—and often ignorantly worshiped by the less enlightened. The central figure is called the "bambino," which is the Italian for "baby."

IN ENGLAND.

In England it is still the custom for a band of choristers, called "waits," to go about on Christmas Eve and sing carols. The practice of decorating the churches, houses, and even the shops and markets, with branches and wreaths of evergreen, holly, box, rosemary, ivy, laurel, bay, mistletoe, and "whatever the yeare afforded to be greene," existed from the earliest times, in spite of the Puritan protests against such "heathen abominations."—Adapted from The Outlook.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 11.

Editors Herald:—Leaving Troy and the work in that vicinity, the writer arrived in Atchison in time to enjoy the greater part of a prayer service with the saints on Wednesday evening, November 11. Remained over Sunday, preaching two sermons to the saints and a third Lord's Day evening to a full house, and doing "missionary work" among the branch officials. While it was apparent that a goodly number would give the gospel consideration in Atchison, we could only think of the Scriptural injunctions: "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye" (Matt. 7:5); "Firstly set in order thy house" (D. C. 90:7). In order, therefore, "that the work and church may not be put to shame and the preaching of the word be hindered" we made an effort to assist in adjusting some matters and passed on to Topeka. There is evidently a better feeling among the saints in Atchison than in the past, and may we not hope that, in the near future, through the goodness of God, and an exhibition of sterling integrity on the part of all concerned, a minister may go there and feel it a privilege and a pleasure to represent "the way, the truth, and the life," to the people? I verily think so. Let all work to accomplish this and the result will be satisfactory and surprising "and peace come to the people as a cherishing fountain."

Topeka branch is small, but strictly alive. The members all seem to have imbibed the idea that the "great salvation" is worth laboring for, that it can be secured in no other way, and that he who is warned should warn his neighbor." Though they number but sixteen, they have subscribed seventeen dollars toward the purchase of a tent for the district, as provided for at the last conference. Will the other and more numerous and wealthier branches of the district contribute as liberally in proportion? We shall watch, with interest, their several reports to the February conference. We trust the importance of securing the tent and thus providing a means to reach hundreds with the message of life next summer who otherwise may not hear it at all, will be an incentive of sufficient magnitude to induce every member of the district to do what he can to aid in purchasing the tent. At "Gospel Hill" schoolhouse, a suburb of Topeka, I preached seven sermons, beginning November 17, closing November 22. Maintain regular appointments there each alternate Lord's Day at three and 7:30 p. m. A few are investigating. These mention favorably the past labors there of Brn. John Arthur and John Alfred Davis. Brn. James Baillie and N. S. Dunnington render all the assistance that a proper attention to their secular matters will allow.

Reports come to me of successful work in Northwest Kansas district by Brn. C. R. Duncan and A. Kent, and also Brn. L. F. Johnson and James McClure. Bro. John Alfred Davis has recently gone to that district. With Brn. E. A. Davis and J. W. Hudgens busily engaged in north part of Northeast Kansas district, and our venerable president, Bro. P. Cadwell, securing a hearing for Bro. J. W. Gilbert in south part of the district, we will do what we can to tell the "good news" in these parts. We need more help. Let the armies of Israel and the representatives of her ennobling truths become very many and very great, I pray.

December 21, I expect to go home, returning here December 31. Brethren will please send reports, due January 1, to me at Topeka, Kansas. Would like also that all reports specify, not only the number of sermons preached, number of baptisms, etc., in a county, but the kind and amount of labor done in each community.

Yours faithfully,

W. S. PENDER.

MONTROSE, Iowa, Dec. 7.

Editors Herald:—After we had cast our vote at the late election and before the excitement was fully over, on November 6, we took train for our mission field again. Our associate, J. R. Evans, joined us at Chariton, and together we landed at Ottumwa that evening, finding the saints well but somewhat disturbed over the unwise acts of those not belonging to the district. After giving the advice we thought best under the circumstances, took train for New London to be with that branch over Sunday, the 8th, as per previous arrangement, Bro. Evans stopping with the Ottumwa saints over Sunday. We arrived at New London and found no one at the depot, but after a little inquiry found it was only one and one half miles out to Bro. Lawrence Willey's, so with grip in hand we started, and on arrival found Bro. Willey away from home and that my letter had not been received. Here I found a branch of nearly fifty members, with only two deacons as its corps of officers. Its former president, Bro. C. E. Willey, having moved away. Bro. Willey, however, just before leaving called the branch together and offered his resignation, but before doing so recommended three of the brethren for ordination, stating he believed it to be the mind of the Spirit to him. Upon motion the three brethren recommended were sustained by unanimous vote, and were referred to the district president for ordination. Bro. Lawrence Willey (deacon) was chosen president. At about eight o'clock at night Bro. Willey came home and at once set a movement on foot to notify the saints of my arrival and announcing a meeting at his place the next evening (Sunday). In the morning, in company with Bro. Lawrence Willey, drove about twenty-five miles to notify the saints of our meeting. Despite the bitter cold weather a goodly number of saints assembled bringing with them a degree of the Holy Spirit. After talking to them awhile as to duties of officers and of the members to sustain them, etc., we proceeded to ordain the three brethren recommended as above: Lawrence Willey a deacon, to office of priest, F. M. McDonald to office of priest, and G. W. McComas, a deacon, to office of teacher. These three young brethren, if faithful, will make useful men in the church; they are energetic and have imbibed the spirit of the work.

We can see no need of the New London branch holding second place to any in the district, with such officers at its head, if the membership will only do their part and work with and sustain them properly.

On Monday, November 9, took train for Ottumwa and Keb to look after matters previously mentioned, in which we had given advice. Arrived at Ottumwa in the afternoon, walked out to Keb five miles to be in attendance at their regular monthly business meeting.

Labored in Keb and Ottumwa in company with Bro. J. R. Evans until Thursday, November 19, when I took train for Vincennes where we expected to join Bro. J. S. Snively, whom we had requested to go and look after our interests there, as the Baptists of that place had made an attack on us. On my arrival at Vincennes I found the saints all well, but no Bro. Snively; but after looking over mail awaiting me found he had been hindered in the Decatur district, (suppose by district president,) and would be here on Saturday, the 21st. The Baptist smoke of battle had blown over and the enemy considerably tamed down.

Bro. Snively arrived Saturday and as next day was the Baptists regular Sunday, we both attended the morning services and heard the Rev. Drew who had made the cowardly attack on us some three weeks prior. Our presence was unexpected and it confused the gentleman greatly.

In the afternoon Bro. Snively and I drove twelve miles to Montrose in time to hold evening services. Bro. Snively held a series of meetings over the following Sunday. The writer assisted the branch president to appoint a court of elders to try four parties for unchristianlike conduct, and on Saturday walked back to Vincennes, twelve miles, stopped over night, and Sunday morning walked up to Dumas schoolhouse, some five miles, to fill an appointment at eleven a. m. with the intention to hold a series of meetings in that place; but on our arrival found only a very few out, and that the Baptists had started a revival in the adjoining schoolhouse; so we thought best to postpone our meetings until later; and after taking dinner with a Mr. Wheatley, walked back to Vincennes, to assist Bro. Snively, who was billed to begin a series of meetings, December 1. Bro. Snively's efforts were not appreciated as they should have been at Montrose, only a few of the saints attending his meetings. At Vincennes his efforts were well received; at first the attendance was not very large, but it increased until we had a full house of the very best citizens of the community. He seems to be just the man for this district, or at least this section. By the aid of the Holy Spirit he has delivered some of the best sermons we have heard for a long time; the Lord has blessed him wonderfully of late.

On Monday, the 7th, in company with Bro. Snively, we drove to Montrose to look after another elders' court, of which Bro. S. was a member. To-morrow the writer goes to New Canton, Illinois, to look after the work there. Bro. Snively will continue his meetings at Vincennes over the 13th, then go to Farmington a few days, then to Keb, on his way home for Christmas.

After we left Bro. Evans at Keb and Ottumwa he remained there over the following Sunday, then went to Burlington, and when last heard from was calculating to go to New London where we expect he is now holding the fort.

The work in this district is onward, but very slowly, owing mostly to carelessness of local officers. O, if we had plenty of good local men to take active oversight of the branches, it would be so much better for the work!

Yours for the truth,

F. M. WELD.

SPARKS FROM OUR ANVIL.

AFTER an effort Brother Barker succeeded in procuring a hall for a series of lectures here in Rolfe, Iowa, on the Book of Mormon—illustrated. Have had good attendance, excellent attention; closed series last evening. This evening (December 7) we open a course of sermons for seven days. We are feeling well in spirit and thankful for an opportunity to tell the story of his love! The converts who were baptized here last summer, by other of our missionary force, are rejoicing in the light, and inform me that continued investigation produces increased joy and blessed satisfaction. I am really glad of it! Yester-afternoon many eyes were moistened as the Holy Spirit bore witness of the preciousness of the message we bear—"the fullness of the gospel." Words fail me to express the profoundness of the desire that fills my soul that the people would open their eyes and perceive the truth as it was and is in Christ; the tear-bedimmed eye alone speaks this feeling of heart and mind. What a feast of fat things stands in all readiness for them, did they but know it.

The Presbyterians declined when asked for their chapel for our lectures: "You do not believe as we do;" "it might have an influence over our young folk."

There are some people here investigating "our claims," and we are inclined to the thought that the preaching of the last two years is quietly working as leaven. We thank God the truth makes people free and fearless, broadminded and true, if those who are baptized into Christ will permit the Spirit to effectually operate upon their souls; for the gospel can do no more for a man than he is willing it should.

The information respecting Mr. B. Young's call to Presidency, furnished by Brother H. O. Smith for Utah inquirers a few weeks since, was very proper, and quite opportune. Brother Hyrum, when the Deseret News fails to furnish facts for its illiterate ambassadors, and you have items at hand, please supply the deficiency! The answer of the News was very "tweedly-twaddly," savoring of the touch-me-not policy of staid orthodoxy! The editorial, "Note It," of November 18 issue, was excellent; the latter portion gave impress of the presence of an inspiration of no uncertain sound; and we thanked the Lord for it.

That letter from Brother Toney in Herald of November 11 last past, cheered the heart; if some other searchers were as honestly disposed the result would be similar. How many are there who can say "amen" to this? God is no respecter of persons, for if honest, humble, righteous desiring inquiry is made concerning the validity of this "work," the Author thereof has pledged himself to answer, and tens of thousands affirm this as correct; and we are his witnesses of these things, and so also is the Holy Ghost which God giveth to them that obey him. We need not say, the Lord liveth that appeared to Saul of Tarsus, or to Cornelius, or to Peter; but the Lord liveth that hath appeared unto Joseph Smith; and we have received his word by the disposition of angels sent from paradise in this momentous century; and the whole civilized world trembles yet at this announcement. If this work was the petty attempt of an illiterate, stupid impostor, why all this uprising of chief priests and scribes; why this furore of Pharisee, of Sadducee? Why this array of nineteenth century intellect, educated, graduated erudition brought to bear against the message we present, if there is no divine genius therein, no pulsations of a Christ life, no penetrating rays of infinite light, no awakening power from forms of a sterile religion; no revealing of a transforming grace, no opening up of the avenues of truth? There is somewhere a consciousness of right, a perception of credo instability in the world; hence the unrest.

In a copy of the Christian Evangelist, Disciple paper, I think of last October issue, we are treated to a hint of a prospective exposé of Mormonism! A Mr. Brown, of Persia, Iowa, has found a new expositor who was a member of the Reorganization, and also a member of the "sandhedrin" of said church.

He thought, "in casting about for a proper medium" through which this new exposé might be given, the Evangelist would be that one; beginning with January or February issue; "might serve as a drawing card for new subscribers." Certainly! Well, we're promised, shall the exposé be had, "it will be without the old slander," rather clean, I presume! The "characters will be submitted to an Egyptologist;" to prove there is no semblance to Egyptian writing about them. The writer has some Egyptian characters, genuine, for use in illustrated lectures on Book of Mormon our new expositor might get hold of, and compare. His "polemic powers led him to the discovery of weaknesses" in the Latter Day Saints' position on doctrinal matters. He is said by Mr. Brown to be a good one for the job. Let it come, we will, all of us, be on hand; that negro in the Mormon woodpile will be let out this time sure!

In the "Christian Herald," etc., edited by Dr. Talmage, in issue for second of present month, contains first installment of a series of articles about Latter Day Saints, written by John Eaton, once United States Commissioner in Utah. Mr. Eaton, like many others of his kind, is unfair, as we view it, because he confounds historical items, misleads in his statistical references, and pertaining to matters in doctrine under Joseph the Martyr.

Why cannot, why will not these men be fair? He says: "These Latter Day Saints affirm their belief in our Bible, but they proceed at once to reject its teachings." That is incorrect. "We believe that miraculous revelation for man's guidance closed with the apostles of the Lord." We know they do—Catholic and Protestant alike, and it is wholly untenable according to Bible statement and promise. "They destroy the teachings of the Bible by accepting the 'Book of Mormon,' 'Book of Doctrine and Covenants,' . . . as their guides in faith and doctrine." Mr. Eaton is sadly mistaken; if he is ignorant of their contents, it is an inexcusable ignorance, for he had opportunity to ascertain to the contrary. "Joseph Smith, their first leader, proclaimed thirteen articles of faith, intended to be so near to Christian beliefs as not to create alarm at first, but to appeal to the discontented element among the Christians." Indeed! Those thirteen articles harmonized with the Bible, and were quite far removed from the prevailing "Christian beliefs," as doctrinal assertions prove. Who were "the discontented element among the Christians?" We have them yet in our midst; honest inquirers after the whole truth as Christ gave it his apostles; people who are choking on the dry husks of a perverted, spiritless gospel; people who are "hungering after righteousness" as revealed in "the old paths." He is uncomplimentary to the honest, struggling souls who dare express their dissatisfaction with a Christless creedology! He also recites the silly story of Joseph "digging a well for a neighbor Chase" and finding a "peek-stone;" other writers call it a "peep-stone," synonymous terms, I suppose! Ha, ha! Joseph "had the reputation of being an ignorant, idle youth, given to chicken-thieving." It used to be sheep stealing; but he has exchanged the wool for feathers! O, ho! how long O, Eaton, how long? Presume this series are for a drawing card for the "Herald and Signs of The Times." The other installments may deal more largely with apostate Mormonism; we shall see. Guess we can live through it, and, preach the gospel, rely upon God, trust his promises, and "persuade men."

May divine blessings attend the faithful ministry, sustaining them in all their arduous labors for benighted, misguided humanity.

Hopefully, prayerfully,

J. F. MCDOWELL.

ROLF, Iowa, December 7.

MILLER, Okla., Dec. 11.

Editors Herald.—I wish to announce through your columns to the saints and ministry of the Southwestern mission, that Bro. Macrae and myself have just arrived in Oklahoma and would like to hear from the different points in the mission where labor is needed, and to the best of our ability we will respond to calls for active work. Address Miller, Oklahoma.

I would be pleased to hear from Bro. Toney.

Ever praying for Zion's weal, I remain,

Your brother in gospel bonds,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

DIXFIELD CENTER, Me., Dec. 3.

Editors Herald.—Whether to write or keep silent is sometimes difficult to decide. It would be uncharitable to write of one's troubles, disappointments, and failures, for every one is supposed to have sufficient encouragement (?) of this kind, without being compelled to help carry what belongs to some one else. I don't know that anything worthy of special note has come within the scope of my experience or observation, of late; and, noticing that the Herald has once advised to "be sure you have something to write" before taking up the pen, I have been silent. But, asking pardon for now ignoring the Herald's excellent advice, I shall beg the privilege of inflicting upon the readers some of the straggling thoughts that steal through my mind as I labor and sojourn in the State of Maine.

I can't report that multitudes flock together to hear the gospel; nor that dozens are being baptized, and many more near the kingdom. Wish I could. I can say, though, that I find as good saints in the State of Maine as one needs wish to see, and that they have endeared themselves to my heart, by their deeds of love and kindness, so closely that they seem brothers and sisters indeed. The association and companionship of such noble souls would surely make a heaven of any place—whether above, on, or under the earth. Yet there is much room for improvement, in many respects. "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone," is just as "sound doctrine" and as binding on the saints of God now as when Jesus uttered it. So also is this: "So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not everyone his brother their trespasses;" that is He will "deliver him to the tormentors."

"Awake saints, awake,
No time now for reposing."

And, then, I wonder how many branch officers are doing their whole duty. All who are will please hold up your hand. Brethren, please turn to and read Ezekiel 3: 17-21, and you will there get some idea of the responsibility resting upon those whom God has honored with the authority of "standing ministers unto the church." I have never yet seen a branch in a prosperous condition where the branch officers neglected their duty, and I no more expect to find such a thing than I expect to find a human body in a healthy condition with the liver inactive.

And, in reading the word of God to Israel of old, I find a commandment like this: "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: And thou shalt teach them diligently." Do you catch the thought, saints? DILIGENTLY. Not in a careless, leisurely, unconcerned manner. No, no. "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."—Deut. 6: 6, 7. (See also Deut. 11: 18-20, and Psalms 78: 4-6.)

In the New Testament I find this: "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me."—John 5: 39; Acts 17: 11.

Also this: "And from a child thou hast known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus."—2 Tim. 3: 15.

Timothy had known the Scriptures from childhood, his mother having, no doubt, heeded the instruction given to Israel, through Moses, and taught him diligently.

And to us direct the Lord has said: "And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or any of her stakes, which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and of the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; . . . and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord."—Doctrine and Covenants, page 200.

On page 251 the Lord says: "But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth," and then proceeds to reprove some of the leading authorities of the church, because they had neglected to obey this command, telling them they were under condemnation for neglecting this duty. "How shall we escape if we neglect" our duty in this respect? How many, O how many are neglecting to teach their children the way of truth! Can you, parents, expect your children to be interested in the gospel and in their soul's salvation if you show but little or no interest in this matter yourself? "Teach them DILIGENTLY," both by precept and by example. And, while teaching your children, don't forget to teach yourselves. Don't think of trying to live without the church papers. Take them, pay for them, and read them; they will do you good.

At present writing I am in Oxford County, Maine, enjoying the hospitality and kindness of the noble little band of saints and friends here. Have made my home most of the time with Bro. John Terule and family. And a pleasant home it has been indeed. Expect to leave here the 7th for Boston or Green's Landing.

In bonds,

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald.—Since last September to the present month I have been so engaged in business affairs that I could not do much for the work, except what I could do on Sundays, and also in directing by correspondence the local interests of the work in the district, but now I have a little more time, as business is not so pressing.

Some of the local ministry have been doing good work in the recent past. Our tent work was kept going all summer and fall and has done us good work; and I am glad to say that our work is getting to be better understood and we are getting more favor in the eyes of the general public. We can see this manifested on every hand wherever we go.

I wish my circumstances were such that I could be out in the district all the time. I see so much work to be done and people so anxious to hear. Last Sunday I preached twice near Gardner, Kansas, thirty-four miles south of Kansas City. Had a fair audience in the morning, but in the evening the house was well filled. The people seem to be in earnest. A good interest manifested. This is the place where Elder Arthur Allen, of Kansas, and the Rev. Albert Brown, of the Christian Church, held a debate last September. The people there speak of Elder Allen in the highest terms, and state that he gained a decided victory.

The Rev. Mr. Brown thought he would try us again on a Book of Mormon debate. We informed the gentleman that if he would allow consideration of his church to follow we would be glad to accommodate him, but he was like the burned child, he dreaded the fire. He barked a little but would not bite.

The fame of the Brown-Allen debate has spread all over that part of the country. Rev. Mr. Brown and a few others thought something must be done to restore confidence, and they started a protracted meeting over two weeks ago, and up to last Sunday had not made a convert, when last we heard of them.

The people at Gardner are anxious for us to hold meetings there and offered a large hall free, except fire and light, which will be seventy-five cents per night. We expect to take advantage of this offer after the holidays.

We commence union meeting at Kansas City, Missouri, next Sunday and expect to put forth a larger effort in Kansas City this winter than ever before.

Yours in bonds,

R. MAY.

CUCAMONGA, Cal., Dec. 1.

Editors Herald:—It is said the course of true love seldom runs smooth, nor does one's course in the ministry, as you will see by the following:—

At the close of the debate at Ocean View, of which I wrote you, I intended to go direct to Riverside to commence meetings, but got a letter on the eve of departure not to go just then, so concluded to go to Azusa where meetings had been talked of. I started for the train, which had changed time, and was two minutes late, so had to walk back some four miles; and next day took horse and cart and got there, to learn that on account of unforeseen occurrences it was on unpropitious time.

I then concluded to go on to San Bernardino and hold meeting at Rialto. Unavoidably I got a late start, and to make matters worse got on a wrong road and lost time; next when hurrying by a depot my horse shied out of the road on a sidling place and over went the cart. I held onto my horse and some men came to my rescue, and I was soon in going trim again, and on I went with ruffled clothes and feelings, not looking or feeling much like a minister. Soon I discovered I had lost my laprobe, but to return was out of the question; time was fleeing and twenty-five long miles lay between me and San Bernardino, and it then one o'clock. I must make it by daylight or not at all, for I am strictly a child of the light and not of the night. Driving on a number of miles I stopped and hallooed to a man about the way, and was answered by a familiar voice, which proved to be Bro. Frank VanFleet, who told me it was quite impossible for me to reach San Bernardino before dark, and that I had better go home with him. I do not usually turn back in an undertaking until I have to, but this meeting him seemed providential and as a terrible north wind was blowing, I went, was kindly cared for at their hospitable home, administered to Sr. VanFleet in the morning, got ready to start, went to get my horse, got too near one that was in the stable, and was kicked under another horse that was being led out, that walked over me, stepping on my foot and in some way hurting my breast. The one kicking me hurt me the most; it struck my knee, and between the two I am considerably bunged up. Am suffering considerable pain, but no bones are broken and we think I will be on deck again before long.

Surely it is hard to see the hand of Providence in our many afflictions. I think I can more clearly see the hand of another power in some of mine; but I believe God can and will if we trust him bring good out of all misfortunes.

If I am not on hand to fill some appointments as expected, this will explain the reason why. Trusting we may all meet where horses will not kick and places to preach be easier to find, I remain,

A coworker,

HIRAM L. HOLT.

FAYETTE CITY, Pa., Dec. 6.

Editors Herald:—I have recently been among the West Virginia hills in the county of Wayne, where our faithful and enterprising saints have erected a new chapel. I was there with Brn. Devore and Godby at the dedication service. We heard an instructive discourse delivered for the occasion by Bro. Devore. The house was well filled with attentive hearers from the regions round about Centreville. We rejoiced to see and hear again our beloved coworker so long absent from us on the islands of the sea. He was one of the most devoted and successful pioneers for the cause in West Virginia and there are many who gladly welcome him back into the old field.

Prospects are now bright here for founding, and building up the church, and we pray and labor to the end that many more will enroll their names among that countless number "out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." We are expected to speak to-night at "Frogstown"—Naomi. We were excluded from the hall when Bro. Griffiths spoke a short time since.

A man by the name of Edwards offered his house, having a large and commodious room attached, where we will hold forth for the present. We find great good was done hereabouts in June and July last, when our labors culminated in a clash with "the Disciples" at Lucyville.

We are wooing the Bickertonites, and they are not, as a rule, hostile toward us now. What they are we frankly confess; what they are not we do not forget to speak as the Lord gives utterance. There is a goodly number of noble ones among them, who only lack one thing, and that is, to be introduced into the fold of Christ. They are used to singing:—

"We want no cowards in our band,
Who will our colors fly."

They are not afraid to come when they understand us. My heart swells for them in prayer that they all may enlist in the army of the Lord and help us in the fight for the "rescue of the truth." It looks now as if the next clash would be with the "free will" Baptists.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 7.

Editors Herald:—The work here is steadily onward, membership steadily increasing by letter and baptism, Sunday school moving right along nicely, officers, teachers, and scholars alive in the work. The Z. R-L. Society meets every alternate Friday evening, attendance good and programs well rendered. The young men met last Monday evening week, and effected a temporary organization to become permanent. Later on, the society is to be an independent organization from the church, to be composed of young men both in and out of the church. The society is to discuss any proper question either theological or secular that may come before it. Also a blackboard will be used by society upon which questions will be written by members that wish them answered by society. This will call for much research by its members.

It is cheering to see a disposition in the rising generation to investigate and improve mentally. The saints cannot afford to stand still. We are in a day and age of the world that will not admit of it. The writer often stops and wonders, is it possible that we are living in the last and greatest of the dispensations of time? yet it is an undeniable fact. The signs of the times point that way. The predictions of Christ foreshadow this fact. Then, brethren, can we fold our hands and idle our time away when there are so many unsaved souls in the world, so much to be accomplished before the church is ready to receive the Master? Can we afford to become discouraged because some things do not adjust themselves as we would have them? No, we cannot. We have seemingly lost the Temple Lot so dear to the saints, yet is not this matter in the hands of a true and just God? Why should we fret? Sufficeth us to know that a Temple will be built by whom God will and in his own way and time.

A true and tried friend of this latter-day work has been called home, yet the work must move on. The Master had other work for him to do and we must get along without him.

The little gospel boat so dear to many a heart lies to-night beneath the waves of the broad Pacific. Must we give up and say that there is no God in this work because he has permitted this to be? All things are possible with him. Is it not possible that if God saw fit and so willed that it could be restored to us again? Other vessels have foundered and gone down and afterwards been raised and put afloat. The writer does not say that in this case it will ever be done, but does say that if the saints were less faithless there would be greater works done among us. Let us be faithful, trusting God, walking circumspectly before him and the world, keeping the whole law, and if there is anything that we do not understand, not to ridicule it, but go to "him that giveth liberally and upbraideth not." He will hear our cry and answer.

H. N. DAVIS.

FREMONT, Ind., Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here yesterday, having closed a very good meeting at Seaford, Indiana, where we had the privilege of baptizing four precious souls and left many more investigating. There are ten saints there now and some good material. As nearly all are heads of families and own their own homes and are likely to stay there, we look forward to an organization at that place in the near future, as there are others that will no doubt follow soon. One quite old lady, seventy-six years old, would have been baptized, but there were hindrances which we think will be removed soon. Then Mr. Fleegar and two more of his family are investigating. His wife and one of his daughters were baptized during this meeting, but he wants to read the Book of Mormon and make a little further investigation. They are good people and I think will make good saints when once converted.

We have written Elder Briggs to come to Seaford and help us, but received no answer as yet. We expect to return there in the spring and if he can go or send some one we would be pleased and think an organization could be effected soon. The saints are going to meet and hold their prayer and testimony meetings, and we advised them to and gain all the strength they can in that way. I told them to fast and pray and live their religion every day.

We left there a few days sooner than we would on account of the Utah elders' work. In the Clear Lake branch they have been scattering tracts and doing all they can; last year in this county, and at Metz just south of here they have a few members and some of the saints here thought best for me to come and give them a little following up, and let others know the difference between us and them. I learned this morning that they held meetings at the Lake Chapel Monday and Tuesday evenings and will continue this week. We will step in on them this evening if God will and occupy half of the evenings the last of this week and the first of next.

L. F. DANIEL.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 14.

Editors Herald:—Nothing but good reports can be told of the gospel work in this city. Just one year ago I preached my first sermon in this city to an audience of about fifteen including the preacher. Since that time we have told the gospel story to hundreds, broken down mountains of prejudice, and let the gospel light so shine that nearly fifty have been baptized into Christ. We have a lovely choir of singers, with Sr. Etta Marshall as organist. The large Sunday school is swelling its numbers every time it goes into session; while at the evening services last night the hall was packed right to the door with attentive listeners. We expect to continue the services every night while I am home on vacation. Some are talking of being baptized and among the rest is a prominent Baptist deacon, who tells me this gospel is going to work marvelous changes in the Baptist Church here in the year to come. Those that have murmured are now learning doctrine; while the scorner, infidel, and unbeliever go away to consider the matter.

Bro. Rathbun, Jr., who has been so ably assisting us, returns to his home in Lansing, to-morrow.

More anon,

R. E. GRANT.

NEW WASHINGTON, Ohio, Dec. 9.

Editors Herald:—I held forth on Sunday at Cleveland, morning and evening; and on Monday night I preached in Akron, and came here last evening, having been sent for to administer to Sr. J. A. Hamilton, who has been very ill for some time. She is very, very sick, and if our heavenly Father does not raise her up there is no hope for her recovery. She is some better to-day since I administered to her.

I shall return to Akron on the 26th inst. and hold a week's meeting there. Bro. L. W. Powell baptized one man there on the 30th ult., and we expect more to follow soon. I shall reorganize the branch there when I return. Bro. H. Palmer is doing well in the work; Bro. Jenkins and wife and Sr. Wike are strong in the faith.

JOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.—NO. 4.

BY T. W. CHATBURN.

SOME one has said, "When the fetters fall, humanity rises." We are fully persuaded that humanity is being studied to-day as never before; nothing escapes notice, in either religion, politics, or science.

Our fathers thought the ground was holy because the angels hovered over it, but we are fast coming to the conclusion that holy places in which we should stand are made so by our own actions.

Freedom in the strictest sense may not mean to do as we please, yet as individuals we are ever ready to rear "our" standard of freedom to the exclusion of all others.

One brother writing in the last Herald, who has been studying the political lines apparently, declares "that after this heated campaign is over, I am still in the faith." This would imply there are some men whose faith in this great latter-day work has become wrecked during the "heated campaign." We hope not, and while the brother may have "less confidence in some men," we must remember it is a principle that works vice versa and may at last only be measured by "our" standard of freedom.

Freedom, to our mind, is the removal of every obstacle that lies between man and every great end that belongs to his being. He should be and is a progressive being, hence mistakes can and will be rectified by proper education, and for this reason he does not carry in his hands autumn leaves, but buds that promise blossoms. He will prefer to ride in the bow of the ship that he may look into the progressive future rather than into the gloomy, dismal, and mistaken past. Greatness does not paint sadness and failure, but joy and success, nor weep over life's ruins, but sings over its victories and rejoices in its triumphs. O, how oft we mourn because of a failure in saints to see these virtues, and be benefited thereby; and while we are only a "minute man" striving to obey counsel, forcing the battle into the dark places, and noting a few "jots by the wayside," we are painfully reminded that when statements are heard from those of whom we expect better things and which in reality are thrusts that pierce the very vitals of the sensitive missionary, it has a tendency, as has been written, to weaken faith and confidence in humanity. There is a law which is calculated to remedy all the ills, but our standard is again reared, and we too often want our freedom in doing as we please, to obtain.

The trials of the missionary are not hard to bear from the outside world because we expect nothing from them, but when the wife and children complain of nothing to eat or wear and no credit at the store, with the hands of the Bishop tied because of the lack of funds to supply the wants and at the same time the missionary looking shabby in dress, holes in his shoes and not a cent in his pocket, and with the instructions that the minister is to live off the gospel and not apply to the Bishop until it is the last resort, to be supplied, I admit that with the man that is too proud to beg, it's a trial. I remember of giving flour, clothing, and money to the ministry; and nothing done in life gives me more pleasure now, than to think I assisted as I could.

To beg for the necessities of an elder is to make him sick. And to hear from those who should take such matters in hand, "Let him apply to the Bishop," and at the same time not paying a cent of tithing to support the ministry or their families is an anomaly that is hard to explain.

ALCOHOL IN TEMPERANCE DRINKS.

English temperance drinks have a large proportion of alcohol, according to recent testimony, before the Liquor Commission. Of 638 samples of herb beer examined in 1894 by the Inland Revenue Department 318 contained more than 2 per cent of pure spirit and 130 more than 3 per cent. Parsnip beer was found to contain over 18 per cent, which is much stronger than ordinary beer. "Teetotal sherry," containing no grape juice, but compounded of sugar and bisulphide of lime, is declared to be a "most objectionable drink." A startling declaration was that old whisky, though more grateful to the taste, is no more wholesome than new.

THE NECESSITY FOR A REORGANIZATION OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

—NO. 4.

BY ELDER HYRUM O. SMITH.
ABOMINABLE TEACHING.

THE next departure from the law that I shall mention will account for this lying propensity. I have already quoted Joseph Smith's statement in regard to the manner in which the power of the priesthood should be exercised, but I will give it again:—

"No power or influence can or ought to be maintained by virtue of the priesthood only by persuasion, by longsuffering, by gentleness, by meekness, and by love unfeigned; . . . without hypocrisy, and without guile."—Times and Seasons, vol. 1, p. 132. (Utah edition D. and C. 121:41, 42.)

In giving directions how the quorums shall render decisions he says: "It must be by 'faith,' 'virtue,' 'knowledge,' 'temperance,' 'patience,' 'godliness,' 'brotherly kindness,' and 'charity.'"

Now let us hear how Brigham's minions exercised their priesthood, letting him be his own witness:—

"I have many a time, in this stand, dared the world to produce as mean devils as we can. We can beat them at anything. We have the greatest and smoothest liars in the world, the cunningest and most adroit thieves, and any other shade of character that you can mention.

"We can pick out elders in Israel right here who can beat the world at gambling; who can handle the cards; can cut and shuffle them with the smartest rogue on God's footstool. I can produce elders here who can shave their smartest shavers, and take their money from them. We can beat the world at any game."—Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 291; Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 77.

Now comes the reason why they are all this,—liars, thieves, rogues, etc:—

"We can beat them because we have men here that live in the light of the Lord; that have the holy priesthood, and hold the keys of the kingdom of God. But you may go through all the sectarian world, and you cannot find a man capable of opening the door of the kingdom of God to admit others in. We can do that. We can pray the best, preach the best, and sing the best. We are the best looking and finest set of people on the face of the earth; and they can begin any game they please, and we are on hand, and can beat them at anything they have a mind to begin. They may make sharp their two-edged swords, and I will turn out the elders of Israel with greased feathers, and whip them to death. We are not to be beat. We expect to be a stumbling block to the whole world, and a rock of offence to them."—Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 291; Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 77.

Quite a contrast between the manner in which Joseph instructs his elders to use their priesthood power and the way Brigham instructs his elders to use theirs. But you will remember that immediately upon entering the valley, Brigham caused all to be rebaptized, and reconfirmed, and reordained; and it is probable that here is where they laid aside the true priesthood that was full of longsuffering, gentleness, mercy, and truth, and took upon themselves that priesthood that caused them to be the "greatest and smoothest liars, and the most adroit thieves." But for truth's sake, oh, Utah people, don't call it God's priesthood!

"And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die."—D. C. 42:7. (Utah edition 42:19.)

John also says:—

"If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John 1:7.

Brigham taught differently from either of these doctrines. He taught that there were sins which could not be atoned for by Christ's blood, but could only be atoned for by the shedding of the offender's own blood. Hear him:—

"All mankind love themselves; and let these principles be known by an individual, and he would be glad to have his blood shed. That would be loving themselves even unto an eternal exaltation. Will you love your brothers and sisters, likewise, when they have committed a sin that cannot be atoned for without the shedding of blood? Will you love that man or woman well enough to shed their blood? That is what Jesus Christ meant. He never told a man or woman to love their enemies in their wickedness. He never intended any such thing. . . . I have known a great many men who have left this church, for whom there is no chance whatever for exaltation; but if their blood had been spilled, it would have been better for them. The wickedness and ignorance of the nations forbid this principle being in full force; but the time will come when the law of God will be in full force.

"This is loving our neighbor as ourselves; if he needs help, help him; and if he wants salvation, and it is necessary to spill his blood upon the ground in order that he may be saved, spill it. Any of you who understand the principles of eternity, if you have sinned a sin requiring the shedding of blood, except the sin unto death, would not be satisfied nor rest until your blood should be spilled, that you might gain that salvation you desire. That is the way to love mankind."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 4, p. 220. Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 397.

Jedediah M. Grant, Brigham's counselor, says:—

"I say there are men and women here that I would advise to go to the president immediately, and ask him to appoint a committee to attend to their case; and then let a place be selected, and let that committee shed their blood."—Deseret News, vol. 6, p. 235.

I am aware that there are hundreds of the people in Utah that do not know, and will not believe, that such doctrines have been taught. To such we have only this to say: Search and see. Do not sell the freedom to think for yourselves that God has given you, and in time you will be delivered from your intellectual and spiritual bondage.

You will notice that in the above quotations, especial mention is made of those who have left the Utah Church, and of how much better it would have been for them had their blood been spilled. This was only one more link in the chain of bondage into which the Utah leaders sought to bring the people and to make it impossible, through fear of them, to leave the church.

My mind reverts again to the promise made to the priesthood, if they would only exercise its powers in righteousness:—

"The Holy Ghost shall be thy constant companion, and thy scepter, an unchanging scepter of righteousness and truth; and thy dominion shall be an everlasting dominion; and without compulsory means it shall flow unto thee forever and ever."

Brigham tried to use "compulsory means," hence could not have been acting righteously.

In connection with this we wish to call attention to Paul's statement or instruction:—

"And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will."—2 Tim. 2: 24-26.

Compare this with the following from Brigham:—

"I say, rather than apostates should flourish here, I will unsheath my bowie knife, and conquer or die. (Great commotion in the congregation, and a simultaneous burst of feeling assenting to the declaration.) Now, you nasty apostates, clear out, or 'Judgment will be put to the line, and righteousness to the plummet,' (voices generally, 'Go it; Go it.') If you say it is right, raise your hands. (All hands up.) Let us call upon the Lord to assist us in this, and every other good work. . . . I want you to hear, Bishops, what I am about to tell you, Kick these men out of your wards."—Journal of Discourses, vol. 1, p. 83, 84.

It is sometimes denied that anyone was ever interfered with in Utah on account of their leaving the Mormon Church; but I want to ask the candid reader what in his opinion would have been the chances for safety to an apostate, after the inflammatory speech just quoted, and, especially, when the speaker was looked upon as the mouthpiece of God? I say again, this man did not correctly represent Christ and his gospel.

In 1852, August 29, as everyone knows, the doctrine of polygamy was introduced by Brigham Young. Of this I shall say but little, as it has been handled by abler pens than mine. It is, however, a direct violation of certain passages found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and book of Doctrine and Covenants; such as:—

"For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh."—Eph. 5: 31.

"Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously; yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant. And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the Spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth."—Mal. 2: 14, 15.

"Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2: 6.

"Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else."—D. C. 42: 7. (Utah ed. 42: 22.)

"And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbideth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made."—D. C. 49: 3. (Utah ed. 49: 15-17.)

Christ taught:—

"It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: but I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery."—Matt. 5: 31, 32.

I was told by a lady who had been a polygamous wife, that when she was sealed to the man to whom she belonged, he having taken three women, two besides herself, the same day, Brigham called the man up to his desk, as they were about to depart, and said: "Bishop, when you get tired of these women, come to me, and I will give you a divorce from them for ten dollars apiece."

I could hardly believe it true; but I afterward found this in the Journal of Discourses, vol. 8, p. 202:—

"The teasers who come all the time after women, and soon get tired of them and want to divorce them, I make pay ten dollars for each divorce, and that is my individual bank."

He thus corroborated the information given by the lady.

That makes the system of marriage taught by Brigham Young squarely against that taught by Christ, by Joseph Smith, and the Book of Mormon. According to the above, Brigham's system was nothing more or less than a system of legal prostitution. He gave the "teasers" the privilege of having all the women they wanted, keeping them as long as they pleased, and then by giving Brigham ten dollars, secure separation and turn them loose, and take others.

In all the annals of the great cities I find nothing as cruel as this. In most places the poor erring women have the right to set their own prices upon their virtue; but here they have nothing to say. May God deliver me from ever being brought to acknowledge that man as a true representative of Christ on earth, and his followers to-day as the only ones to whom we must look for salvation.

THE REORGANIZATION.

I have now traced the apostasy of the church down through its various stages, until we see that in 1852 it culminated in the establishment of a doctrine from which has grown the evils of which Mormonism, in all its phases, has had to bear the stigma, and which has made it hard to teach the people those pure principles of which it was originally composed. There were those, however, who did not partake of the evil, but held themselves aloof from all factions, only nominally partaking of, or identifying themselves with the various organizations just long enough to prove that they had departed from the faith. To these the Lord spoke almost simultaneously with the establishment of the culminating evil, polygamy, in Utah; and they were told to organize themselves, and God would send a leader from the seed of the Martyr. And in 1854, January 29, at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, thus came the word of the Lord to these faithful ones:—

"Ye ask truly, but ye ask amiss; cleanse ye yourselves of all bitterness and come before me as one man, and prove me hereby, saith the Lord, by the voice of his Spirit; and lo! I will scatter the darkness, and thy watchmen, oh! mine Israel, shall see eye to eye, and this remnant shall arise out of obscurity and out of darkness. Uphold the first elder, or senior, by your faith and prayers, and I will give you knowledge and strength, even hidden wisdom, concerning this remnant, of whom I have spoken in days of old, whom I have appointed to speak comfortably unto the captives, and give them bread and water in their journey. Therefore seek the preparation, for that which I have promised, even power over false spirits and disease; and if you seek it in unity, with all your hearts, I will bless the sacrifice, and you shall have peace and joy, beyond that which you have before tasted in Zarahemla."—The Messenger, vol. 2, p. 37.

Christ says: "The truth shall make you free."—John 8:32.

Error, then, would have the opposite effect, and would bring them into bondage. God recognized, then, the necessity of a Reorganization "to speak comfortably to the captives," and that has been our endeavor as ministers of the Reorganization; to speak words of comfort to blind, bleeding Israel everywhere. But, like Israel of old, so modern Israel says, "We will not hearken to the watchmen, neither will we walk in the good old way," wherein is rest to their souls.

NOT DEAD ISSUES.

What I have written is not written because I have malice toward any, but to show that there was and is to-day a need of a Reorganization. I expect to be censured by those whom this article condemns, and they will probably say that I have resurrected the dead to slander them; and others probably will say, "Why not attack Mormonism of to-day and not the Mormonism of thirty years ago?" And that these things "are all dead issues." To this I reply, that so long as there shall be one person holding to the belief that Brigham Young was the true and lawful successor of Joseph Smith the Martyr and that he was acknowledged by God as such, the doctrines set forth by Brigham Young will never be dead issues. If any man says that he is representing the Mormonism of to-day (I use the term "Mormonism" to designate the people in Utah), and not the Mormonism of thirty years ago, then he tacitly acknowledges that all we claim of Mormonism as taught by Brigham Young and his colleagues is true; and by acknowledging this acknowledges that they were not and are not correct representatives of the faith.

I would that God would work upon the hearts of the younger members of the Utah Church—and older ones, too, for that matter—until they would arise and emancipate themselves from the intellectual and spiritual bondage in which they are, and come out into that glorious liberty vouchsafed under the true gospel law. I do not blame the younger members of the ministry of the Utah Church for being ashamed of what has been done and said, and for declining to be bound by the sermons preached by Brigham Young in early days; but let them renounce the men as well as their sentiments, and all will be well. But as long as the decree of God stands, that men shall be judged according to their works, just that long men cannot be acceptable to God and preach and practice things contrary to his laws; no matter how much they have been in his favor at one time.

I believe the sentiment expressed by one of Utah's leading young men, as quoted below, is the sentiment of thousands; but they hesitate to express them. Frank J. Cannon, son of George Q. Cannon, in a speech at the Republican Convention at Minneapolis, Minnesota, in 1892, when opposing the seating of certain delegates in that convention, said:—

"When the Republican party declared in its platform that it would exterminate the twin-relic of barbarism, it fought one with the sword, and it fought one with intelligence. Thank God it conquered. It conquered with the sword; and when it had finished its work in the South, it wrote with the hand of peace Fiat finis. Now it has accomplished just so much in Utah by schoolhouses, by newspapers, by law, and by the growth of intelligence in the younger people of the Territory. I say that now has come the time to let the angel of peace write with the hand to Utah again, that it may no longer curse the nation with the annoyance which has always been springing up in the demand for legislative measures. We want freedom: where shall we appeal for it except to the Republican party, which is the only guardian of freedom? I say if you seat these men, you seat them on the old issue; they do not know that Brigham Young is dead. He died when I was in knickerbockers, and I decline to be responsible for old sermons that he uttered in the early days of Utah."

Politically, perhaps, the old issues may be laid aside; but from an ecclesiastical standpoint the old issues will and must come to the front in determining who represents Christ and who does not. Mr. Cannon here admits that the doctrines introduced by Brigham Young have cursed the nation, and if they have cursed the nation they could not have been of God.

My only apology for writing this is that the Utah Church is making a desperate effort to get a foothold in the East, and the saints and others need fortifying against its encroachments; and I pray God that these pages may do all the good that can be hoped for by the writer.

It is confidently asserted by the people of Utah that the members of the Reorganization are apostates from the faith, because they were permitted to stay in Illinois. I have already quoted to you how the Lord has said that Zion should not be moved out of her place, though her children were scattered. Then I read this:—

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land: for, verily, I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out."—D. C. 64:7. (Utah ed. 64:31-36.)

Who were the obedient: those who stayed, or those who were sent away?

Again; it is said by the people in Utah that:—

"We know we are right, because Daniel says: 'And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.'"—Dan. 2:44.

They predicate their claim to being right, upon the statement that Daniel says "the kingdom shall not be left to other people." But we of the Reorganization can with equal propriety make the same claim. The church, according to a statement by Joseph Smith, before alluded to, consisted of about two hundred thousand members at the death of its leader. The most that the Utah leaders can possibly claim that followed Brigham Young to Utah, were between ten and twenty thousand. The majority of its recruits have been from the countries of Europe, mostly Scandinavia and England, and those who have been born here now compose the largest part of their membership. While on the other hand, the Reorganization is largely composed of those who either were members of the old church, or their children; and one by one it has absorbed all the small factions that sprung up at the death of Joseph Smith. A large number of its ministers are sons of elders in the early church. Its President, and the President of its Twelve Apostles, are sons of the founder of the church; so we could make the same claim, and with much more propriety, because the inheritance of the priesthood and its offices are the birthright of the seed of Joseph and some of his laborers. And we say to all Israel, that we are not only preaching the Latter Day Saintism of to-day, but the Latter Day Saintism of thirty and sixty years ago; having had no occasion to change, having never taught anything that has cursed the nation, nor the individual; but that unchangeable law of liberty, that truth that shall make you free; that perfect law of God mentioned by the Psalmist David. We have never had to apologize for the doctrines taught by our leaders, neither have we had to reverse our doctrines. We have laid well our foundations in God's holy law, and have continued therein as a church.

Conference Minutes.

FAR WEST.

Conference convened with the German Stewartsville branch, on Saturday and Sunday, December 12 and 13; William Lewis in the chair, assisted by W. E. Summerfield; Charles P. Faul secretary. Short talks were given by W. Lewis, W. E. Summerfield, J. M. Terry, and M. F. Gowell. Bishop's agent's report for nine months: On hand last report $114.32; received and on hand $545.33; paid out $540.96; on hand $4.37. The report was audited and found correct. Branch reports: Edgerton Junction 42; gain 5. Kingston 101; loss 5. St. Joseph 344; gain 2. Wakenda 49; loss 1. Pleasant Grove, no change. Stewartsville 111; loss 1. German Stewartsville 74; gain 3. D. Iano 108; gain 2. Ministry reporting: Elders W. Lewis, J. M. Terry baptized 4, T. T. Hinderks baptized 3, M. F. Gowell, W. E. Summerfield baptized 2, M. M. Turpen baptized 2, R. L. Ware baptized 1, A. W. Head, L. L. Babbitt, D. J. Powell, B. Dice, T. J. Mauzey, D. E. Powell baptized 1, R. Archibald, J. D. Flanders, J. N. Cato, J. C. Elvert, A. Nesser, Jr., R. A. Marchant, W. Hawkins, J. T. Kinnaman, and C. P. Faul; Priests C. Householder, W. C. Duncan, T. Curtis, C. Hinderks, D. Schimdt, P. Peterson, T. H. Hinderks, J. Moorman, and J. S. Constance; Teachers J. Piepergerders, R. Garlich, W. Worden, T. McKee, J. Friend, L. Hovenga, and W. Haman; Deacons L. Furgerson, and J. Wood. The committee in the Dr. Hamilton matter reported that it was waiting for an answer from Bishop E. L. Kelley. The committee was continued. Committee appointed for the purpose of organizing a branch at Gospel Hill and Spickardsville, Missouri, reported having corresponded with Joseph R. Lambert in regard to the matter. Committee stated that the missionary in charge has referred the matter to William Lewis and J. M. Terry. Bro. Lewis said as for Gospel Hill no branch would be organized now. Possibly there would be one organized at Spickardsville in the coming three months. Voted that hereafter all clerks of branches be instructed to forward to the district secretary, the statistical reports together with credentials of delegates as soon as possible, the secretary of the district being hereby authorized to act as committee on credentials, calling to his aid such as desired by him, he or they to arrange the report to be given at the beginning of the conference. The Stewartsville branch requested the ordination of Andrew Lewis to the office of elder. Conference granted the request. Voted that hereafter on Sunday after the morning preaching services a few minutes recess shall be given, after which the social meeting shall convene. A recommend to ordain Bro. D. H. Graham to the office of elder, came up for consideration. Referred to the president and vice president for their judgment in the matter. District officers for the ensuing quarter: William Lewis president, W. E. Summerfield vice president, C. P. Faul secretary. William Lewis was sustained Bishop's agent. Notice was given that at our next conference a resolution will be presented that we change our conference from quarterly to semiannually. The several branches of the district are to instruct their delegate to the next conference to vote for or against. Resolved that the president and vice president arrange for two days' meetings in the district and to furnish elders to conduct the same. A general mission was given to J. T. Kinnaman in the district. Resolved that J. T. Kinnaman take charge of the work at Gospel Hill. M. F. Gowell, J. T. Kinnaman, and J. M. Terry did the preaching during conference. Adjourned to meet the second Saturday in March, 1897, with the St. Joseph branch.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Quarterly conference met at Little Sioux, Saturday, December 5, at 10:30 a. m. J. C. Crabb, G. M. Scott, and C. Derry were chosen to preside; A. M. Fyrando and S. B. Kibler clerks. Reports of branches: Logan; loss 2. Magnolia; loss 1. Woodbine; gain 21. Missouri Valley; gain 6. Persia; loss 2. Little Sioux; loss 2. Union Center; gain 3. A goodly number of the priesthood reported. Report on district tent: Expense fund showed a balance on hand of $15.33. Bishop's agent's report from June 1 to December 1, 1896, was: June 1, 1896, due agent $1.11; expended for support of elder's families and poor $390; amount received $394.20; amount on hand $2.27; and that December 1, 1896, due and unpaid elders' families and poor $354.50. On motion David Chambers was sustained as district president and Bishop's agent, and A. M. Fyrando as secretary, with G. M. Scott and J. C. Crabb as associate vice presidents of the district. On motion the following was adopted: "Whereas, the question asked at the district conference convened at Moorhead, September 5, 1896, relating to letters of removal, and the authority vested in a portion of a branch isolated from the main body, and answered by resolution, the purport of which seems to have been misunderstood; therefore, resolved that we understand said resolutions to be in harmony with the rulings of the church, relative to members connecting themselves with the nearest branch to which they may reside, and as not referring to any one or more individuals, but general in its nature." Preaching by elders A. M. Fyrando, C. Derry, and J. W. Wight. Adjourned to meet at Magnolia, first Saturday and Sunday in March, 1897.

LONDON.

Conference convened at St. Thomas, Ontario, October 10. J. H. Lake chosen to preside, assisted by R. C. Longhurst and R. C. Evans. Maggie Campbell and John Shields, secretaries. Branch reports: Walsingham Center 29. Osborne 24. St. Thomas 107. Masonville 119. Selkirk 12. Proton 112. St. Marys 52. Corinth 41. Otterville 24. Stratford 19. Low Banks 35. McKillop 35. Cameron 70. London 248. Waterford 57. Toronto 48. Windham 62. Niagara Falls 41. Garafraxa 98. London district: last report 1,385; present 1,477. Elders' reports: J. C. Foss, R. C. Evans, J. H. Lake, R. C. Longhurst, M. F. Derby, G. C. Tomlinson, S. Langs, W. Jenkins, S. W. Tomlinson, W. Place, G. Virgin, D. McGregor, A. E. Mortimer, C. Pearson, W. Fligg. Priests: H. Dickhout, A. Wingrove, A. F. Sturman, A. Knisley. Deacon R. Gray. R. C. Evans, S. Johnson, and W. Bird delegates to General Conference. Officers for ensuing term: R. C. Longhurst president, G. C. Tomlinson vice president, Maggie Campbell secretary and treasurer, R. C. Evans Bishop's agent. Whereas, there are many spurious books afloat in Ontario which are misleading, and thereby prejudicing the people against our faith and the Book of Mormon; be it resolved, that this conference take steps to have the Book of Mormon, and epitome of the faith and doctrine placed in the libraries of all the leading cities and towns in Ontario, as far as wisdom directs. Preaching by B. St. John, J. C. Foss, R. C. Evans, and J. H. Lake. The prayer services were good, at one of which God spoke to his people in the gift of singing in tongues and interpretation. Adjourned to St. Mary's branch, third Saturday and Sunday in June, 1897.

POTTAWATTAMIE.

District conference convened at Hazel Dell, November 28, 1896; J. P. Carlile presiding, assisted by Robert McKenzie, J. C. Jensen secretary. All branches represented except Wheeler's Grove and Fontanelle. Statistical reports from all the branches give no changes except Council Bluffs; loss 3, marriage 1. Crescent City; gain 2, total loss 1. Total branch enrollment in the district 697, including 1 apostle, 3 high priests, 3 seventies, 27 elders, 22 priests, 11 teachers, 5 deacons. Written reports from J. P. Carlile, D. Parish, Joshua Carlile, and S. Butler; verbal reports from R. McKenzie, T. W. Williams, C. C. Larson, A. E. Madison, A. B. Smith, Hemming Hansen. Bishop's agent reported: balance on hand 99 cents, received $172.10, total $173.09; paid to ministry $175, to poor $17.35, total $192.35; due agent $19.26. Report audited and approved. The action of Boomer branch in taking in by vote William Chapman was approved. By motion it was ordered that hereafter all scattered members, in the district desiring to unite with any branch shall procure a certificate of membership from the district secretary. At his request, T. W. Williams was released from his two weeks' appointment in Carson, and that mission left in his charge to provide for. On report of the district president that Elder Hans Peterson was willing to retain his license, the conference expressed approval and confidence. The secretary was authorized to send lists of scattered members to the various branches, with request to the officers to look them up and get them enrolled on their records. Council Bluffs and Crescent City having been presented as the place for holding the next conference, Council Bluffs was selected. The secretary gave notice that at the next conference he will offer a resolution to make the district conferences semi-annual instead of quarterly. The present officers all continued, and district missionaries sustained. Conference adjourned to meet on February 27, 1897.

Sunday School Associations.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Convention of the Little Sioux district met at Little Sioux, Iowa, December 4, 1896, at 2:30 p. m. The superintendent being absent, J. W. Wight was chosen superintendent pro tem., Lenna Strand secretary. Reports were received from the following schools: Mondamin, East Union Center, Little Sioux, Persia, Woodbine, Union Center, Logan, Magnolia, and Missouri Valley. Number of schools last report 12; discontinued since last report 2; present number 10. No report from Pleasant Valley. Delegates present 11; total membership 528. On hand last report $1.40; received since last report $5.95; money expended $3.50; balance in treasury $3.85. Topic, "What is to be gained by attending Sunday school conventions?" Paper by Sr. L. McDowell. General discussion by Brn. S. B. Kibler, J. W. Wight, and Sr. Hoffman. In the evening a very interesting program was rendered by the Little Sioux school. Saturday morning a profitable session was held, during which the following questions were discussed: "When to elect officers of Sunday schools;" "Method of studying lesson," and "How to interest scholars from twelve to sixteen years of age." Sunday morning after a short session of Sunday school we had a very interesting chalk talk by district superintendent, A. M. Fyrando. Adjourned to meet at Magnolia, Friday previous to quarterly conference.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, and Northeastern Kentucky; Greeting:—I have felt impressed for some days to request the saints in the mission to go before the Lord in great humility, and in earnest prayer and fasting, in behalf of the grand work of the Lord, that we so dearly love, and the sick in the mission, as there are quite a number who are prostrated upon beds of affliction, and others are suffering intense pain, but are able to move around the house. I herewith extend an invitation to all those who are concerned or interested in their brethren and sisters, and have faith in the efficacy of fasting and prayer, to come together on Sunday, December 27, 1896, fasting and praying. The presidents of branches can arrange the time of prayer services as will be best suited to all concerned. I suggest that all those who will comply with this request, if able physically, will abstain from eating food till the evening meal. Will the presidents of branches please place this request before the saints in their respective branches. I feel that our heavenly Father will bless our weak effort in great good to the sick and his grand cause. Yours,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS,
President of Mission.

I would say to branch presidents of the Northern and Central districts of California, that at our last reunion at Santa Cruz, California, a committee of three; namely, J. B. Price, Bro. Putney, of Gilroy, and C. A. Parkin, were appointed to make selection of a place to hold the next reunion. We would like to have an expression from all the branches as to who wants it and what inducements can be offered. We would like to have the matter placed before the membership of the two districts, so as to give satisfaction to the greater number. Please address all communications to C. A. Parkin, 3010 Sixteenth Street, San Francisco, California.

C. A. PARKIN,
For the Com.

EXECUTORS' NOTICE.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM W. BLAIR, DECEASED.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested, that on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1896, the undersigned were appointed by the Clerk of the Circuit Court of Decatur County, Iowa, executors of the estate of William W. Blair, deceased, late of said county. All persons indebted to said estate will make payment to the undersigned, and those having claims against the same will present them, legally authenticated, to said court for allowance.

the institution, and at the same time benefit the college in the amount absolutely necessary to its success. We want your help at the

whether you live far, or near; and for this purpose have arranged to receive special gifts and donations for that time, and preserve and publish a list of the names, together with the proceedings of the day, and have them duly entered in a book for that purpose and kept in the college archives. In this way the rich and poor, old and young, —all—may properly perform a part and do good. Contributions are solicited in the amount you are able to give, and we wish to receive your name with the amount, however large or small, for they should come in amounts all the way from a few pennies, to tens, hundreds, and even thousands of dollars. It is the hope of the trustees that sufficient shall be raised at this time as to avoid the necessity of coming before the public again for aid, at least for years. By united effort this will be done. Will you consider the matter at once? We wish to hear from you by the first day of January, 1897.

Committees have been appointed and arrangements are being made for the dedication and opening on the dedication services beginning at 1:30 o'clock p. m. These exercises will last about two hours, and in the evening an entertainment of music and eloquence will be given in the brick church in Lamoni.

At the first of these special exercises parties will be present to register names and receive contributions; but the thousands who are so far away that they cannot be present on that day, may be present in spirit and by offering, such offerings to be duly recorded with others; and we ask your gift, your encouragement in lending your influence and sending your name, and your prayers for the good of the institution.

For this dedicatory work those at a distance may send funds directly to the Treasurer of the College, William Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa; or when more convenient send to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa; or to the Bishop's agent in the district where you reside.

You may also send to Frank Criley, Manager Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa:

Missionaries, District Presidents, and Presidents of Branches in all the various parts of the country are asked to give special notice of this and arrange for receiving and forwarding the contributions so as to help those who are desirous of sending; and may the favor and peace of the Master be with you and each of you in your devotions and work.

Full proceedings of the dedication exercises and contributions will be duly furnished all aiding the work.

By order of the Board of Trustees and Directors of Graceland College.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

POSITIVELY LIMITED TO DECEMBER 24.

Never will there be another special offer made on this great Standard Dictionary and Encyclopedia of all the world's knowledge. This is positively the last chance you will ever have to secure the work on such extremely liberal terms. We fully intended to advance the price to regular rates on Nov. 30, but thousands of people in all walks of life have requested an extension of time until Christmas. After careful consideration we have decided to continue our Special Offer until the above date. This is done simply and only as a further means of advertising this wonderful storehouse of information. We do not expect to make money by this offer, as the very low price on such liberal terms barely pays for paper, printing and binding, saying nothing of the enormous investment of over $750,000 required in the production of the work. The tremendous amount of talk created will help to advertise this most modern and entirely up-to-date home reference library. No advertisement can do it justice—it is its own most eloquent advocate.

FOR A CHRISTMAS GIFT NOTHING COULD BE BETTER.

Your pastor, teacher, friend, parents, or your children will appreciate this great work beyond expression. It will last a life-time, and always give satisfaction. No business or professional man, teacher, student, mechanic, housewife, or any other person who wishes to keep abreast of the times, or who is interested in the laudable enterprise of self-education, can allow this rare opportunity to pass without careful investigation. The new and entirely up-to-the-times embodies all the features of a complete dictionary and a thorough encyclopedia. Until December 24th this truly marvellous work will be furnished any reader of this announcement on receipt of only $1.00 in cash and the remainder in small monthly payments, amounting to about five cents a day. This is but little more than one-third the regular price. After December 24th prices will be immediately restored to regular rates—$42.00 to $70.00 a set, according to binding.

DON'T FORGET! This Special Offer holds good only until Christmas Eve, at which time the price will be advanced to $42 to $70 a set.

Four massive volumes, each 9 in. wide, 11 1/2 in. long, 3 in. thick, containing 5,359 pages, 16,000 columns of clear type matter, 3,000 illustrations; 250,000 words defined, 50,000 encyclopædic topics. Weight, about 40 lbs.

JUST AS THEY LOOK

THIS HANDSOME BOOK-CASE FREE OF CHARGE.

Superb New Edition, Revised to June 1, 1896, contains thousands of the newer words not found in any other reference book on earth, including the very latest coinages of '96, such as "Roentgen rays," "aseptolin," "vitascope," "skiagraph," "fluoroscope," etc. It is the only up-to-date dictionary, the most practical encyclopædia, and also a genuine

Triumph of Art! with its magnificent array of chromatic plates in 17 COLORS, dozens of single and double page engravings in delicate monotone, & 3,000 text-illustrations.

100 EDITORS and thousands of special contributors from all over the globe have devoted their best talents to the preparation of this marvellous condensation of all the world's knowledge.

Look at the list! The great Prof. Huxley on zoology and physiology; Prof. Richard A. Proctor, astronomer; Sir John Stainer, music; Hunter, Morris, Estoclet, Herrtage, Williams—the most brilliant educators of the nineteenth century.

More than $750,000 Required to Produce this Work.

IT IS THE ONLY REFERENCE WORK ON EARTH that contains satisfactory and up-to-date encyclopædic treatment of such important topics of to-day as the following: Battleship, bimetalism, money, wages, germ theory, Arctic explorations, tariff, Christian Endeavor, appendicitis, shadow-photography, electricity, steam navigation, and hundreds of others.

IT IS THE LATEST AND BEST DICTIONARY of our language. Each legitimate English word is exhaustively treated as to its origin, history, development, spelling, pronunciation, and various meanings.

IT IS A CONCISE ENCYCLOPÆDIA of anatomy, botany, chemistry, zoology, geology, art, music, physics, philosophy, mathematics, mechanics, theology, biblical research, etc. 50,000 separate encyclopædic subjects, including the latest inventions and discoveries, tersely treated by educators of vast renown.

IT IS A SUPERB LIBRARY BOOK, printed on high grade white paper, from plates never before on press, durably bound, and containing the most superb illustrations, in 17 colors and in monotone, ever made for any reference work.

IT IS BETTER THAN ALL OTHER DICTIONARIES because it is the latest and most complete, containing nearly twice as many words as are in the largest "unabridged," and treating 20,000 more encyclopædic subjects than are covered by other cyclopædias costing from $50 to $200. There is no other publication in its class.

TWO EXPERT OPINIONS—THOUSANDS SIMILAR.

Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst.—"The Encyclopædic Dictionary is a library condensed into four volumes; a ton of diffusiveness reduced to forty pounds of quintessence, and, withal, as delicate in detail as it is comprehensive in contents."
"Scientific American," New York.—"It forms in itself a library for the busy man of affairs, the mechanic ambitious to advance himself in his line, or the student or apprentice just making a beginning."

HANDSOME ILLUSTRATED BOOK of 100 Specimen Pages Sent Free on Request.

HOW TO ORDER: Send $1.00 and the four handsome volumes will be forwarded. Subsequent payments are made as follows: Cloth binding, $1.50 a month for one year; Half-Russia binding, $2.00 a month, and Full Sheep binding, $2.50 a month. First payment in any case is only $1.00. To cash buyers we allow a discount of 10 per cent. and furnish the book-case free of charge; otherwise the book-case is $1.50, which must be paid in advance. This allowance represents cost of keeping monthly payment accounts. We recommend Half-Russia binding as most serviceable. When ordering be sure to mention style binding wanted. All transportation charges must be paid by purchaser. We refer to any Commercial Agency, any newspaper or any bank in Philadelphia. AGENTS WANTED. [Mention this paper.] Books Guaranteed as Represented or Money Refunded if Returned in 10 Days.

CAUTION! Beware of imitators who have copied our methods of advertising, even to the encyclopædias, slightly revamped and under new titles, as new and original works. The genuine Encyclopædic Dictionary is complete in four volumes, with 5,359 pages. We can be responsible for no orders except those sent directly to us.

THE THREE BOOKS
AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE DESTRUCTION OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH.

THE destruction of the oldest seats of civilization and culture in the Jordan Valley and the Dead Sea districts, namely, that of the four cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zebaim, is one of the fixed facts of earliest tradition, and for the critical geologist the phenomenon presents no difficulty, as far as it can be traced at all. The tragedy was caused by a sudden break of the valley basin in the southern part of the Dead Sea, resulting in the sinking of the soil, a phenomenon which, without any doubt, was in intimate connection with a catastrophe in nature, or an earthquake accompanied by such a sinking of the soil along one or more rents in the earth, whereby these cities were destroyed or "overturned," so that the Salt Sea now occupies their territory. The view that this sea did not exist at all before this catastrophe, or that the Jordan before this period flowed into the Mediterranean Sea, contradicts throughout all geological and natural science teachings concerning the formation of this whole region. . . . That the Pentapolis at one time was situated in the southern part of the Dead Sea, which is now called Sebcha, is proved also, among other things, by the probable location at this place of Zoar, the place which escaped destruction in the days of Lot; in accordance, too, with the writers of antiquity and of the middle ages, including the Arabian geographers. As yet nothing certain can be determined concerning the location of the four other cities, viz., Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zebaim, of which names only that of Sodom, in Djebel Usdum, is found reflected in any place in these precincts. And even apart from geological and geographical reasons, this seems to be the natural thing, as the Book of Genesis represents these places as having been thoroughly destroyed without leaving any trace or remnant behind. The fact that now these districts are a dreary waste, and by the Arabian geographer Mukaddasi called a "hill," is no evidence that in earlier times this was not different, and this valley not really a vision of paradise.—Dr. Max Blanckenhorn, in Scientific American.

EYESIGHT OF CHILDREN.

WHY COUNTRY LADS HAVE STRONGER EYES THAN OUR CITY YOUTH. SHORTSIGHTEDNESS and other defects of vision are happily not so prevalent among children attending elementary schools in London as was feared two years ago, when inquiry into the subject was initiated by the education department. Mr. Brudenell Carte, who voluntarily conducted an extensive investigation, observes, in his report, that the great cause of alarm to school managers has now for some years been progressive myopia, but he has failed to find evidence of any extended existence of this condition. He points out that "vision, like every other nerve function, must be cultivated for attainment of a high degree of excellence. The visual power of London children is not fostered by their environment. They see the other side of the street in which they live and the carts and omnibuses of the thoroughfares. They scarcely ever have the visual attention strongly directed to any object which it is difficult to observe, and hence their seeing function is never exerted, or at least is not habitually used, to anything like what should be the extent of its powers. With a country child the case is widely different. He has an expanse of landscape before him, presenting numerous objects rendered small by distance. He finds attractions in every hedgerow—flowers, insects, birds, nests, many of them disguised by their resemblance in color to their surroundings, and requiring close scrutiny in order that they may be distinguished. His eyes are exercised beneficially in his daily life, and his vision would probably be found somewhat to exceed the very moderate standard of normality, just as that of the town child is apt to fall below it." He recommends that an effort should be made in London to cultivate "the art of seeing," and suggests that public competitions should be held for excellence of vision, for which prizes should be awarded.—London Telegraph.

EDISON ON SLEEP.

DISSERTATIONS on the subject of when people should sleep and how long they should sleep are renewed by some statements of Edison as to his habits in that respect. Being asked if it were true that he sometimes works 40 hours without sleep he replied in the affirmative, and added that he not infrequently goes 60 and 70 hours without sleeping. Then he may sleep 18 hours without waking. He also explains that he can go to sleep anywhere at a minute's notice—that he has always been perfectly well; that people who claim to be regular in their sleeping habits are broken up by a day or two of irregularity, while he, who is irregular all the time, has no such trouble. The average individual who thinks he may be like Edison in these respects will be as far wrong as in supposing he may be like him in other respects. The special habits of Edison are no more a satisfactory rule for other people than those of other people are for him. It is said of Lincoln that he was once asked how long he thought the legs of an average man ought to be, and his reply was that he thought they ought to be long enough at least to reach to the ground. The length of time people should sleep is until they are refreshed. Whether Edison or anybody else sleeps either more or less is no rule for them. As has been said before, there is no substitute for sleep, and one of the best ways to invite a proper and regular supply of it is to have a regular time for seeking it.

ENGLAND MAY USE METRIC SYSTEM.

Washington, D. C., October 5.—United States Consul Sawter at Glauchau reports to the State Department that as a result of the strong agitation in England for the introduction of the metric system of weights and measures it would seem that its actual use is not far distant and a bill is already pending before Parliament legalizing the system.

The British merchants, he says, are at last becoming convinced that they can no longer retain their hold of the world's markets with their old and cumbersome system of pounds, shillings, pence, yards, feet, and inches. Germany's great inroads into the British South American trade are attributed largely to the British retention of these old measures, which are now absolutely unintelligible to the Latin races.

The fear, too, that the United States will soon adopt the metric system, thus leaving England and Russia the only non-metric countries in the world, is stimulating the agitation.

DEDICATION.

Graceland College, Lamoni,
Iowa, January 1, 1897.

The Dedication of Graceland College will take place January 1, 1897, at 1:30 p. m.

This institution is now in the midst of its second year's work. It was founded some two years since under the auspices and management of the church which has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. It is one of the leading institutions of learning in Southern Iowa, and its course of study is second to but few in the land. Its faculty is composed of competent educators. It has now students enrolled from five different States. And while the college opened for work only in September, 1895, it is already known in nearly every State and Territory in the United States, in Canada, Europe, Australia, Mexico, and the islands of the sea; and in all these countries there are those who are friends of Graceland College.

We are now just moving into our fine new building which is not surpassed by any in this part of the State, and by but few in the country. It is surrounded by grounds which for beauty of arrangement and healthfulness, it would be difficult to excel.

At this our dedication time we appeal to everyone to aid us who is interested in the better education of the masses; for the existence of such an institution in our midst does materially assist in such education. It will reach many teachers who could not go abroad to better qualify themselves for their work. Many young men and women will avail themselves of the advantages of a higher education who would not do so, did they have to go abroad for it. No man has done his entire duty to his children and to his neighbor's children, who has not done all he can to place within their reach the advantages of an education.

We solicit your cooperation and support in this our time of need.

The Boards of Trustees and Directors have arranged programs of dedication, January 1, and an entertainment for the same evening. The entertainment will be for the benefit of the college fund. The committee have prepared a souvenir ticket as a memento of the occasion, which contains the programs for the afternoon and evening, beautifully printed in the college colors. This souvenir ticket will admit to both dedication and evening entertainment; price fifty cents to adults, twenty-five cents to children under fifteen.

Again we appeal to everyone to aid us by the purchase of these tickets. Nearly every member of the church would like to possess one of these souvenirs of the first college the church has built. Each one feels an individual interest in the success of our college, and rightly so, too; and all desire to see it succeed. This it cannot do without support in both students and means; and the means is particularly needed now in starting. It is confidently expected that when our attendance of students swells to hundreds it will be self-sustaining; but now we need aid. A little help from each who can help will put us upon a firm financial basis.

Do not put this aside thinking that plenty of others will respond. Can't you assist some, now?

In bonds,

WHAT WILL YOU DO FOR GRACELAND COLLEGE?

Eighteen months ago the question of a college under the fostering care of the Reorganized Church, was theoretical; and its only appreciable existence in the hopeful imagination of the projectors.

To-day it is a fact. The school itself, organized and making commendable progress, under the zealous care and supervision of able and efficient professors and instructors, and the new college building, finished complete from basement to dome—a magnificent structure—bringing credit to the church, in undertaking to furnish an institution for the education of the youth, who so greatly need its work, which shall be nonsectarian in character, and yet, demanding the highest moral and Christian training and development. The college building is of such solid and beautiful proportions as to properly impress its alumni with the idea of striving to excel, and form in their work proper taste and character.

What has been accomplished, however, has been only through the utmost tact, energy, and sacrifice of the friends of the institution and those in charge of the work; and doubtless all who have in any way contributed to the success of the enterprise feel strengthened with the results.

To build and successfully carry on a first-class institution of learning without the aid of an endowment fund, is a difficult task in this day of rich schools and colleges. To succeed the first few years without this, will be one of the marvels of the times; and, but for the fact that we have faith and confidence in the friends who have thus far unselfishly authorized and sustained the undertaking, those in charge of the work would doubtless ere this have been overcome with discouragement. But we are not overcome; "Perplexed, but not in despair."

While the work is thus far on its way there is an immediate and pressing demand for aid, and it is from its friends, not enemies, or the indifferent, that this aid may be expected. Following the example of that courageous leader, Joshua, we appeal to you, "Choose ye this day whom you will serve."

A little help from every friend of this institution of learning will be a wonderful aid at this time and will forever stamp as erroneous the statements that the undertaking of a college by the church would end in failure.

The trustees have faithfully considered this effort to aid the college and begun arrangements by which the dedication and opening of the college may be made a personal one to every friend and wellwisher of

MOSES THATCHER, AND THE RIGHT OF OPINION.

THE following is an extract from an open letter to Pres. Lorenzo Snow, of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles of the Mormon Church in Utah, published in the Salt Lake Tribune, of December 13, 1896, and in reply to one by President Snow, previously published in the Deseret News, supposed to be explanatory of the reasons why Mr. Thatcher was deposed from the priesthood and his membership in the quorum, by action of such quorum:—

UNDERSTOOD THE MANIFESTO.

As I have already stated, I understood the manifesto at the time it was handed me for approval, just as I understand it now. While it ostensibly appeared not to restrict the liberties of the people, yet there was no limitation to its application, and in view of the fact that nearly every male member of the church holds some office, and as there has, as yet, been no public decision announced as to the officers to be controlled by it, there have arisen disputes and differences of opinion as to its intent. This being true, and the danger being that it could be applied to restrict the liberties of the people, I cannot sustain it. I thought then, as I think now, that such a course would be a stultification. I had never dreamed that a condition would arise in my life where I could not serve God fully and yet yield my complete allegiance to my country and to my State. The spirit of the manifesto, as it appealed to me, was in violent antagonism to all I had believed and publicly proclaimed for many years, and I could not, and, so far, have not been able to, bring myself to a point where I believed I should yield my political judgment to any set of men, however praiseworthy their intentions.

The position taken by me in political affairs was one that I could not alter. Through my veins and into them for generations has been sifted a blood that acknowledged the supremacy of the people only in civil affairs. Because of this it was easy for me to understand and accept the principles of Christ as explained by our church, which, as I understand them, accord the right of freedom and grant the free agency of man before God and among men. And it is because these rights are accorded men under the gospel of Christ, as accepted by Latter Day Saints, that I have yielded obedience to the gospel, have labored for it, and love it for the labor I have given it.

This assertion may not be accepted by you, but such activity as I have shown in politics has been caused by an anxiety to preserve the reputation of my file leaders when they gave assurances of political honesty among the saints, for there were intimations—and they are well known—that in pledging political freedom to the people of Utah, the authorities were insincere in their declarations. My unwillingness to take part in Democratic campaigns, in face of the course of my Republican brethren, was one of the grounds on which it was asserted that the church authorities had broken faith. While I have loved Democracy, because to me its name embodies all of civil liberty, yet I did not want to take an active part in politics because of my poor health, and because I did not deem it wise for one holding my position in the church to become aggressive in the division movement. Yet, against my own judgment, in defiance of the demands of my health, and that it might not be said of the First Presidency that their pledges were given to deceive, I made some political speeches. For the same reason—having in mind the honor of the people and the reputation of the church leaders and against my solemn protest—I consented that my name should be used as a Senatorial candidate. For this act I was taken to task at a priesthood meeting. When the manifesto was presented to me it appeared to my mind as a command on all to recognize the right of the church authorities to control political concerns; it meant, so far as I was concerned, a recantation of the principles I had for years advocated—a receding from the ground I had occupied during the division movement, and, above all, it made me feel that I would be untrue to myself.

I do not claim that I cannot be wrong. But with the light I have, the manifesto (applied as its construction will allow, or, as it would be interpreted by men whose personal ambitions might control and subvert their sense of right,) could be operated to the injury of the State. If, as I hold, the people have enough intelligence to deserve citizenship, then they have sufficient intelligence to become acquainted with the responsibilities of citizenship, and they have no more right to yield their judgment in respect of the exercise of the franchise than have any set of men to attempt to control that judgment. Whatever the cost, with the knowledge now guiding me, I must still stand where I have stood for years.

Mr. Thatcher was deposed from his quorum without the benefit of a trial, or an opportunity to defend himself against charges regularly made of which a copy was furnished him; no formal charges having been made and no specifications being presented to him for consideration, either for explanation or apology.

The manifesto referred to was published in Herald, and is understood by many outside of the church in Utah, to read as Mr. Thatcher understands it; and he in his rendering of it does not pretend to read between the lines.

To an honorable man, of a frank, sensitive spirit, the severing of the ties which have bound him for many years to official associates, on the plea of inharmony, or contumacy, and the publishing of such deposition from official position and ministerial standing, without an opportunity for explanation, and without being put into possession of the things complained of, is hard to bear; much harder than to submit to such deposition and deprivation of standing after due notification of charges, and trial thereon; and dismissal on account of official shortcoming fully and properly proved. It certainly seems to be of doubtful policy to adopt such tactics in the dealing with men who may have ideas and opinions of their own, and courage to assert them against priesthood domination.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—A brother in California asks the following question: When the communion plate, containing the emblem of our Master's broken body is passed in sacrament meeting to a teacher, deacon, or lay member, is it right or proper for either, or all of them, to place money thereon as an offering?

Ans.—Yes; if the party desires so to do. It is a common practice in some branches to pass a plate or basket for contributions at sacramental services.

Q.—Has a deacon the right to go out to the world, make appointments, and preach?

A.—The language of section 17, paragraph 11, gives warrant to the belief that both the teacher and the deacon may do what may be technically called preaching. Either is to "take the lead" of meetings when their superior officers are not present; and, of course, preach if it is a preaching meeting. Section 85, paragraph 22, states:—

Behold, I sent you out to testify and warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned to warn his neighbor.

From this we conclude that both teacher and deacon has the right under proper conditions to make appointments and fill them, according to his ability, of course laboring in harmony with the officers of the branch and district where he resides. The primary duty of both teacher and deacon is to act as ministers to the flock in their ministrations, "teaching, expounding, and inviting all to come to Christ," that is pretty near preaching anyway.

Q.—Does a presiding elder do wrong in declining to allow a deacon to make appointments and preach to the world?

A.—We think so, if such presiding elder knows the deacon to be worthy, able, and to have a gift to teach the word.

Q.—In Herald for September 23, we find concerning duties of deacons, that he was to open the doors of the meetinghouse at the hours of gathering for preaching and fellowship, prayer or business meetings; shall we understand that he has no jurisdiction at Sunday school or other gatherings of saints, except those just mentioned? Or is it his duty to look after and have control at all times and at all gatherings of the saints in the church building, either to open the door, or have some one appointed to see that the house is cared for and doors opened at the proper times?

A.—Precisely. If the deacon has the care of the house, he should look after all gatherings, either in person or by agreement with some other to do it for him.

Q.—"To have charge of the treasury; to receive; to disburse," etc. Does it mean that the deacon should disburse moneys at his pleasure, buying what he deems wisdom for the use of the church, without consulting the saints? Or, is he not subject to the law of common consent, giving the saints a chance to say how he shall disburse their moneys?

A.—A deacon who is not competent and qualified by honesty to discharge the routine duties of caring for the house, and providing for such things as are ordinarily required to make the meetings successful, and for the comfort of those attending, should not be chosen to act for the saints. The fact that he is chosen and appointed to act for the branch gives the 'common consent' of the saints to his routine, or ordinary duties. But the deacon should not incur expense for repairs to house, changing it in any way, or for new furniture, stoves, desks, lamps, and other such articles as might be needed, without authority of the branch, expressed by vote. For the common supplies such as oil for lights, fuel for warming, brooms for sweeping, dust pans, and such things as fall in the line of care for the building and providing for the comfort and wellbeing of the saints, he must be allowed to act upon his discretion.

It is not necessary for the deacon to be ordered by vote to do what his duty requires, nor is it either needful or becoming in the deacon to wait for such order. Of course the deacon is subject to the authority of the branch and his acts may at any time be inquired into, and determined upon by such inquiry.

Q.—Is it the duty of the priest, teacher, and deacon to listen to the counsel of the presiding elder, being subject to him when his advice is in harmony with law?

A.—Certainly. The presiding elder is the leading officer in the branch, and so far as his duties and the duties of the priest, teacher, and deacon engage them in the work of the church his counsel and direction should be sought and heeded. All officers are of necessity to act within the lines of their respective callings, and in harmony with the law; for they are all creatures of the law, so far as their offices are concerned. However, no presiding elder has a right to dominate and lord it over his fellows, or to rule dictatorially; his rule should be in meekness, humility, and in firmness of purpose and wisdom of both precept and example.

Q.—Is it proper for the saints to address those of other denominations as brothers and sisters?

A.—There is nothing improper in persons of kindly spirit, used to Christian influences, addressing believers in Christ by the terms of brother and sister. The Savior cautioned the disciples to call no one master, for there was but one entitled to the title, God who is in heaven.

All mankind are of a common brotherhood, having as Father the Divine Being; and in this sense every man is "my brother," every woman "my sister." All men are brothers, all women sisters, as belonging to the race and springing from a common source; hence it is not improper, where men meet, having a mutual reverence for God, the Father, to address each as brothers. If, however, it is intended by such salutation to recognize the brotherhood in the family of Christ, by reason of having been adopted into Christ by the ordinance of baptism, it might be improper to use the appellation.

A brother asks us to harmonize Alma 10: 14, "And Alma established a church in the land of Sidom, and consecrated priests and teachers in the land, to baptize unto the Lord whosoever were desirous to be baptized," with the position taken in Doctrine and Covenants that teachers have not authority to baptize. We answer that in the Doctrine and Covenants the title of "teacher" refers specifically to those holding the office of teacher; while in the Book of Mormon, in this instance, the terms "priest" and "teacher" are used in a general sense as referring to those holding the priesthood and those authorized to act as teachers. In 2 Nephi 4: 5 these words were evidently used in the same general sense: "I, Nephi, did consecrate Jacob and Joseph, that they should be priests and teachers over the land of my people." They could not be both priests and teachers in a specific sense, but in a general sense they no doubt were, and in this sense should both passages be understood.

BOTH the Return, (Whitmerite), and the Searchlight, (Hedrickite,) Church of Christ papers, seem to be lacking in financial support, as statements in the last issues received by us indicate.

A letter published in the Return for October, latest issue received, from Provo, Utah, contains the statement that Elder J. J. Snyder had been expelled from their fellowship; which letter is signed by A. B. Frisby, H. A. Exstrom, and others, though the specific wrongdoing of the man is not named. In his editorial, Editor C. A. Wickes says:—

It is charged that the Return is doing little good. How can it be otherwise under present conditions, when it goes only to the few who have subscribed. We have a list of 5,000 names who ought to get the Return as often as once in three months, but it will cost in time and money over $20 to print and mail that many extra copies. We cannot do it and the other executors refuse to allow the fund used for that purpose, because of the articles on the Sabbath.

For some numbers back the Return has been strongly advocating the Seventh-day, Jewish Sabbath as the Sabbath to be observed under the Christian dispensation. To this some have objected, hence the editor's explanation in reply to the unfriendly comment from some of the members that their paper was doing but little good.

The Searchlight in the December issue states that it will be compelled to suspend unless the majority of its present subscribers shall consent to an advance from twenty-five cents to fifty cents per year. It acknowledges that the patronage given it had been liberal considering the field from which it drew its subscribers.

We are pleased to note this acknowledgement, as we think we have some reason to believe that a portion of the support both the Return and the Searchlight has had come from the members of the Reorganization, the great majority of whom have been inclined to see what others of the believers in so-called Mormonism, no matter what they styled themselves, might have to say about their faith, and incidentally the faith of others.

We know from the letters received from HERALD subscribers that the times are hard and that some of our members find it difficult at times to spare the sums needed to pay subscriptions for our own papers; hence can readily believe that our neighbors, the Return and Searchlight, find it difficult to make the ends meet, from the support of a much smaller number of communicants.

CHURCH HISTORY.

THE Board of Publication has placed the prices of volumes of the Church History so low that it cannot allow a commission on sales of the book.

Herald Office agents and the ministry will please take notice, in making sales and remittances.

The agents and ministry will be allowed, as heretofore, to deduct the cost of remittances.

The History has been issued on so narrow a margin that this rule becomes a strict necessity.

The book is sold at about cost in the interests of the church in general.

All are requested to push the sale of it. It is an excellent work and is worth far more than its cost to any reader.

The prices are: Cloth $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50.

WANTED.

THE Herald Office desires to obtain one or more copies of "The Word of Consolation," also of "The Voice of the Captives"—pamphlets issued by the Reorganization to the scattered saints, in its early days.

Anyone having copies to devote to church use would favor us by forwarding them addressed to the Herald Editors.

Other pamphlets or books issued by the church or by any faction of it, would prove acceptable and be put to good use in the Church Library or editorial department, for the general good.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. WILLIAM HART, writing from Oakland, California, December 8, 1896, states:—

Bro. Luff has been with us and the saints here think a great deal of him. I only wish we had a little church of our own so that we could make more use of him, as it is we only have one meeting a week, Sunday afternoon. We have about $1,400, or near that, with the Bishop; and now that property is remarkably cheap I think it would be a good idea to purchase a lot. Real estate in Oakland will never be any cheaper than it is now. Our branch is doing fairly well. The branch has chosen Bro. John Cockerton for president. He is a good young man, but has had very little experience; but Bro. Vernon and myself can assist him, when there are none of the missionaries here.

Bro. S. D. Payne, writing from Maxwell, Nebraska, the 24th inst.:—

I expect to commence preaching near Beaver City before long and I would like to ask the saints through the Herald to send church papers to distribute among the people. Send to S. D. Payne, Beaver City, Nebraska.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. H. Mollenberg, of Deer Lodge, Montana, we learn that the conference which was to convene at that place November 28, failed because of the failure of district officers to either attend or send records, and the saints were greatly disappointed.

The attendance of the officers, it is said, was prevented by sickness. Bro. R. J. Anthony was with them and compensated for the disappointment, as best he could, by preaching for them. Such disappointments should be avoided if at all possible, as it may frequently happen that such staunch defenders as Bro. Anthony may not always be available to stand in the breach.

Bro. J. S. Snively and F. M. Weld, of the Nauvoo district, arrived home, Lamoni, on Tuesday, the 22d inst.

Bro. A. M. Merrill, of Pawtucket, Rhode Island, who signs himself "formerly a missionary to Africa in a wrong cause," writes in expression of his thankfulness for the truth. He appreciates the gospel the more as he discerns the contrast between it and the religious errors he once accepted. We are obliged to omit this letter, with others.

Bro. J. B. Roush sent a request for prayer in behalf of a sister, which when published appeared as coming from "Sr. J. B. Poush." There is no Sr. Poush nor Sr. Roush that we are aware of—at least no Sr. J. B. Roush. Bro. R. is laboring now at Rhone, Colorado.

The Spanish forces, 14,000 in number, were repulsed by the Phillipine Islands' insurgents, according to late advices from Manilla.

The United States consul at Jerusalem reports to the State Department that there are 530 citizens of the United States in Palestine, 438 of whom are Jews. The protection afforded to their citizens by strong governments will no doubt have an influence for good in tranquilizing and developing that country.

Brn. A. H. Smith from Illinois, and Fred A. Smith, of Omaha, arrived home to spend the Christmas season with their families.

Bro. J. F. Mintun received a friendly notice of his meetings in the Meadow Grove, Nebraska, Tribune, of the 25th inst.

The Pioneer, published at Ida Grove, Ida County, Iowa, contains a two-column account of a writer's visit to Lamoni, in its issue of December 24. It is friendly in spirit, though it contains some errors in statement. It speaks well of the church and of its people located in and about headquarters.

Sr. E. I. Sargent, of Vincennes, Iowa, writes of continuing progress being made by the branch there. Bro. J. S. Snively had done some good preaching there of late and had baptized one. The joint labors of Brn. Snively and Weld had made the people more friendly to the work.

Bro. A. M. Chase, of the Decatur district, has been laboring of late at Hitman, Foster, and Cedar Mines, Iowa. He organized a mission Sunday school at Foster, among outsiders, and in which he succeeded in placing our Sunday school literature.

Sr. G. H. Parker, of Fagundus, Warren County, Pennsylvania, writes in testimony of God's goodness to her. She believed the work for eighteen years, but did not obey till two years ago. Since then she has had marked evidences of divine goodness, being healed of long-standing illness and blessed in various other ways. She is a witness of the good received by obedience.

Bro. J. A. Amerson, of Greggville, Alabama, requests that we notify Bro. Erwin that it is desired that he visit that place as soon as possible, to defend the cause.

Brn. T. W. Chatburn and M. M. Turpen were at Higbee, Missouri, on the 25th; interest in their work all they could ask. They were working southward into new fields.

Brethren who desire prompt insertion of matter in the HERALD should not withhold it till the last moment. Matter received as late as Monday afternoon cannot always appear then, for the reason that forms are made up on that day for the press.

A TESTIMONY WORTHY OF NOTE.

ELDER CHARLES DERRY, of Woodbine, Iowa, sends his contribution to GRACELAND COLLEGE, with statement which we copy below. Elder Derry is a man of great experience and mature judgment. He has traveled and preached the gospel of Christ on two continents and is still active and efficient in labor as his health and strength permit. We extract as follows:—

Bishop Kelley:—Inclosed please find three dollars to apply to GRACELAND COLLEGE DEDICATION FUND. I do not send this because I can afford it, but because I want to help in every good work, and I recognize the proper and complete education of the rising generation a noble work. This is a boon that was denied me, and I have long labored under the disadvantage. The donation is small but it is a gift from the heart. I have no desire for my name in the list of donors, as I do not believe in "sounding the trumpet" to parade my good works. We feel the hard pressure of the "hard times," but sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven.

CHARLES DERRY.

We appreciate Bro. Derry's wish not to parade his offering for a show; but a good example is worthy of commendation, as it may aid others in forming a true decision.

THREE GATES.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold:

These narrow gates—First, "Is it true?"
Then "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer. And the next
Is last and narrowest, "Is it kind?"

And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result of speech may be.

The first virtue is to restrain the tongue. He approaches nearest to the gods who knows how to be silent, even though he is in the right.—Beth Day.

EDUCATION AND CULTURE HAVE BUT MULTIPLIED MAN'S DEVICES FOR EVIL.

"MEN seek to make excuse for sin," writes Dwight L. Moody in the initial discourse to "Mr. Moody's Bible Class" in the November Ladies' Home Journal. "They call it by other names and try to explain away its power or cover up its hideousness. They tell us that it is merely ignorance, which culture will eradicate! that in each and every man there is good, and that with culture and education this will be developed. . . . Antiquity has proved that education and culture are powerless to combat natural sin. They seem to have but multiplied the ingenuities and devices of man's evil passions. The corrupt and degenerate days of cultured Rome, even during her proud 'Golden Age' of wealth, of literature, of beauty and philosophy, have left to us monuments of her obscenity and vice. The wisdom of Greece and the learning of Egypt never saved their subjects from the corruption of sin. The Epistles of Saint Paul to the churches of Asia Minor are a sufficient commentary upon the efficacy of their boasted refinement in the development of noble and pure lives. Nor have we to go into ancient history for a vindication of the awful truth of a fallen nature. Do our own times offer no illustration of inherent sin? Does not the presence of sin, often the most vile and dark in its offices, reveal itself in lives which from earliest infancy have been surrounded by only that which was pure and good? Are our convicts made solely from those who have not had advantages? . . .

"Sin is always man's bitterest enemy. "It separates him from his Maker. It separates him from his fellow beings. No position is too high for sin to debase; no place so hallowed but it seeks to corrupt; no home so sacred but it seeks to destroy. 'Sin, like holiness, is a mighty leveler,' says a distinguished divine. And what may be the cause of the thousands of suicides which have occurred during the past year if it is not a loathing of self? It is sin then which makes a man loathe himself. It is sin which makes man's life become a burden from which he so often seeks to free himself by his own hand. . . .

"The sin which is going to condemn the world is the root of all sin; it is the willful refusal of God's priceless gift. A life of outward sin is the result of an impenitent soul. The disease of sin has laid fast hold of mankind, and while man is not blamable for the disease being in his heart God accounts it the sin of sins if he refuses the sole remedy for his recovery."

HOPEVILLE, Ontario.

Dear Sisters:—Being interested in the work of the Daughters of Zion, and having been requested by my superiors in that work, I take pleasure in the attempt to write for it. In these days of secret vice and increasing immorality and impurity of almost every kind, a work like this is almost indispensable. It is true that by many ignorance is considered bliss and knowledge a vice, but Latter Day Saints should readily perceive that true intelligence is a knowledge of things as they actually exist, and that in order to do right we must first know what is right and then we can with a mind illumined with light understandingly obey whatever duty lies before us.

In all God's works there is not a single flaw. Whatever failures appear either in spiritual or natural things is the direct result of some disobedience to law somewhere. In nature, as in the gospel, obedience is life, and disobedience is death every time, for every act of obedience produces an increase of life, health, and enjoyment, while every time we transgress her laws we lose a portion of life, health, and enjoyment. How very, very needful then that all humanity, and more especially the saints of God, be thoroughly instructed with regard to those natural laws governing their bodies and minds. And let me here say that every saint thus instructed will find himself much more in harmony with the gospel, and healthier in body, clearer in mind, and happier in spirit than they could be were they ignorant of those truths, for knowledge is power.

Nature has no favorites, but with equality she deals out her sure rewards and punishments for every act of obedience or disobedience committed by her subjects. Yet how few are taught anything about her requirements except what they learn by chance or by hard, cruel experience; how few men or women reach the estate of manhood or womanhood with the degree of development in body and mind that was naturally their right. Why is it? Simply because no one taught them the laws of their being, and like they who travel in strange places without a map or guide, they have often gone astray and suffered untold loss thereby.

Think you that your son or your daughter will thank you in years to come for keeping them in ignorance of that which would have made them manly or womanly in their deportment all through life, whereas they may now have to suffer the consequences of their ignorance while life remains? The right use of any faculty of mind or body gives pleasure and benefit while the wrong use of any of our faculties brings distress and weakness; if not immediately it will surely follow in time. All our powers are good when properly used, and they were all placed within us to be used for our good and God's glory, and when we so use them we are happy, healthy, loving, and lovable; but when we misuse our faculties, either wilfully or ignorantly, we become unhappy, unhealthy, unloving, and unlovely, ugly to look upon, and to the degree that we are out of harmony with the laws of our nature we are out of harmony with God and ourselves, and are unfitted for all our surroundings — are, in fact, a discordant chord in the music of nature. How foolish it is, then, to try to crush out by a false education or to cloud over by a veil of ignorance the proper use of any of those faculties; for, be assured, that whatever faculties nature has given us will yield a crop of some kind, be it wheat or tares, and the crop yielded will largely depend on the cultivation received. If left to chance you may look for thistles and weeds; but if educated and sown with the seeds of truth and purity you may well expect to see a crop of good, well-filled wheat, which shall wave its heavy golden heads in the sparkling sunlight to the admiration of all beholders.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL UPON THE CONDITION OF SOCIETY.

IT would be admitted by all thoughtful, fair-minded people that man, rich or poor, was not intended, by his Creator, to lead an idle and useless life.

We are expected to work for ourselves and for others and the man who does nothing for himself, his country, or his God, is a man justly despised. Almost every pursuit in life needs special training before the mind or body is fitted for it, and the most successful in after years are those who, in their youth, were instructed in the duties of the future. If this applies to the physical and intellectual phases of our natures, will it not also apply to that of the spiritual? If so, what better means have we of providing this training for the youth than that obtained in our Sunday schools?

Man is not in this world to follow his own caprices, but to secure and obey the purposes and laws of his Creator. His conscience must either accuse him, or defend him. The question is not what man may be, nor what he can be, but what he should be. All our actions must depend upon the basis of morality, which teaches us to shun the evil and cling to that which is good. It is the science of human duty and embraces all the actions of humanity.

The ultimate end of all education is to lead men toward their highest moral destiny.

Character building, that which will make good, moral men and women, is the chief aim of the Sunday school. Education must be based, not on utilitarian considerations, but purely on the considerations of humanity. We owe it to the young, to the rising generation, to see that nothing is left undone that will secure for them a good moral standing in society along with their fellow creatures.

Parents take a great interest in the intellectual wants of their children and do all in their power to give them a liberal education, but the moral wants of their children (which I am sorry to say are often sadly neglected) are of as much importance in the makeup of their lives as it is to make them rich intellectually.

It has been argued against education that it makes men rogues, but this cannot be said of the education that gives culture to the moral as well as to the intellectual nature. An intellectual giant without a moral nature on which to base his intellectual strength, and to serve as a guide and controlling power, does but little toward advancing the condition of society.

Moral instruction is needed in all classes of society. The discipline which produces a well-balanced mind will have its due effect in giving this instruction, and nothing provides for this discipline so much as a good, well-organized Sunday school. This, together with intellectual training, will serve to elevate the child's nature and also to prepare him for a fuller appreciation of his responsibilities as a future citizen.

The standard of life in the Divine Example must arouse our humility and urge us to further effort toward goodness.

Seeing how much the future happiness and the eternal welfare of our race depend upon the way in which the children of to-day are brought up, we can but say, "Let us have God-loving, God-fearing men and women to lead us on our way."

KALKASKA, November 30.

Editors Herald.—I take pleasure in presenting a few lines for publication regarding our Thanksgiving exercises. On no occasion have we all enjoyed such a fullness of the Spirit as we did during our Thanksgiving exercises at Bro. Geo. Eckhardt's. None of the branch officers being present, Bro. Webster took charge of the meeting for the first time and to say the least we that were present were all satisfied with his modus operandi. There are but seventeen of us in this part of South Boardman branch, and four of that number could not be present. However, there were thirty happy faces seated around two heavily laden tables soon after the more important exercises were over, friends of the cause having been invited. And three dollars in cash were freely given as a thank offering that our heavenly Father has been so mindful of us, and has deigned to bless us in so many ways. Our Sabbath school is prospering nicely, over twenty being in regular attendance.

I do not know any place where the saints enjoy the blessings of the gospel better they do here, and truly they have great reason for enjoyment. My prayer is that they may all continue faithful, so that they may continue to enjoy God's blessings. Hoping that the saints everywhere enjoyed at least as good a time on Thanksgiving as we did, I shall endeavor by God's help to remain your brother in Christ,

CHAS. L. SESSIONS.

FAGUNDUS, Pa., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald.—I wish to give thanks to the brethren and sisters in different parts of the country for the papers sent in answer to my request for them to scatter here among our friends, which we have. And O, how we did enjoy the sermons in the Ensigns, for we had not heard a sermon for so long.

Now, dear saints, please accept my thanks, and may the Lord bless you all; also the elders that wrote in answer to my letter in Herald.

Your brother,
GEO. H. PARKER.

VASSAR, Mich., Dec. 14.

Editors Herald.—I have neglected writing for your pages for some time not because I had nothing but writing with me gets neglected.

Our district conference was largely attended and a good spiritual time was enjoyed.

It was arranged for me to join Bro. Cooper in Bay City. While there we held several meetings; I baptized a man while there and listened to both sides of the political question from W. J. Bryan down.

Since leaving Bay City I have made two new openings. Yesterday I baptized four, all heads of families, and others are interested. The prospects for presenting the gospel are splendid. One of those baptized Sunday has been a leader in the neighborhood where he lives, holding cottage prayer meetings. He has a good influence, and I trust will be a useful man.

After hearing the gospel by us he dreamed the following dream: He seemed to be traveling on a road, where he could hear music. He followed the road until he came to another, which led to the right, but he kept the left road and the farther he went the darker it was. He asked if I could interpret his dream. I replied that I was not good at interpreting dreams, but I would interpret his. I told him the road he was traveling—the left-hand road, was the wrong road; and as it was so dark that he could not travel it, his duty was to take the right road; and in order for him to get light it would be necessary to take the right-hand road; and so accordingly he and his wife were buried beneath the liquid wave, and are now rejoicing in the light. There are many calls for preaching and I feel blessed in telling the gospel story.

E. DELONG.

ESCATAMPA, Miss., Dec. 14.

Editors Herald:—We have just closed a very fine conference at Three Rivers, Mississippi. I challenge the entire church for a better one. Two elders were ordained; one priest of the negro race was ordained, Bro. Louis Le Pree. I believe he will do a great work among his race. I baptized three fine people yesterday; Mr. E. B. Smith, of this place, the one who got up the debate a year ago between Bro. Brock, Baptist, and me; Bro. Ferrell, another fine man of this place, and Sr. Britt, were the ones baptized. A colored man gave us his hand last night for baptism. I am glad the work is starting among the colored people.

I have been laboring, opening up new places of late in and around Mobile, Alabama. I have spent the most of my time in the branches since I came into this mission, but I think the branches are getting in a condition so I can leave them to the local officers and branch out into new fields.

If I am kept on this mission another year I aim to labor in new fields mostly. Very few in Mississippi and Alabama have ever had opportunity to hear the gospel. The work has never been opened up in Georgia, and North and South Carolina. I hope to be able to establish several branches in said States if I am kept on this mission. Bro. W. L. Booker (Lawny) is now presiding over the Mobile district. He is a fine man, and the one for the place. The church should give him a mission if possible. He lives here in the South, hence would be less expensive to the church; he also has a large acquaintance; could do much good.

Bro. C. I. Carpenter is doing all he can to advance the Sunday school work. He is just the man needed in these parts. He has accomplished much good in this line in the Mobile district. The Sunday school is improving.

We are glad to hear that our missionary in charge, Bro. T. C. Kelley, is getting well. He has not been with us since General Conference, but we hear from him often, giving instructions and trying to keep us and the work straight and in harmony.

I find the people anxious to hear the gospel in every place. I get no time to read much and post; work, work all the time, summer and winter. But this is no field for kid glove fellows. We must slip off our gloves and fight the Devil both inside and out. The plain gospel truth is what the people want and need.

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

STOCKTON, Utah, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—Utah is the field of peculiar people—the remnant of those that were led astray in the “dark and cloudy day.” They have been led to certain channels of belief that they were led to the accomplishment of certain things that will affect the condition of their salvation in “this world and the world to come.” Very hard to change them; for the authority has been placed above the law—“do as you are told,” etc. The popes did the same thing, and the results in both remnants of apostasy, ancient, and modern, are to be found similar. Both undoubtedly, enjoyed the spiritual blessing contained in the gospel of Christ at one time. But now conditions are changed; “cursings” instead of “blessings,” drinking, swearing, chewing, smoking, and dancing, are not the exceptions any more among saints (?) here, but the rule. They are the “signs” that follow the believers (?) here.

All things, both great and small, are celebrated with a dance. The missionary is sent out with a dance, and his return is hailed with a dance. I find that a dance will wonderfully dwarf religion. I ask them, “Did Jesus Christ ever attend a dance? or any of his disciples? Or did he at any time give instructions to regulate a dance?” No. Not a line of revelation since the death of Joseph. “Did he or his brother Hyrum dance by command or revelation?” If not, then the dance is not ordered of God, but something that has been fastened upon latter-day Israel by man.

Some will say, “Well, there is no harm in the dance,” etc. That puts me in mind of a Methodist lady in answering a similar question in regard to card playing; she said: “True, there is no harm in the cards, but the Devil is in the spots.” I read lately of a preacher who was laboring hard in his sermon to discourage dancing in his congregation, and finally, to emphasize what he said, stepped down from the stand and gave several jigs, just to show how ugly it appeared, and that the Devil was in the steps. He got a clear vote against dancing. We need it here because the minds of both old and young are so occupied with the dance that they cannot keep pace with the age in taking on education in day nor Sunday school, nor yet in religious matters. The mental powers become more or less dormant. It is no wonder that it is stated through the columns of the Herald “that their missionaries are not informed in the principles and history of their own religion.”

I presented the book “From Palmyra to Independence” just the other day to one that is now danced out on a mission, and he looked and said, “Palmyra? Never saw that word before; is that the title of a novel?” It is quite a field for wise teachers (preachers) to educate this community. We need the aid of good literature. I am glad that their missionaries are coming in contact with our ministry. Write them up, brethren, through the Herald, but let your criticisms be wise and just, for we have to meet all here. I took pride in showing Bro. F. M. Sheehy's letter to a number of them here. That's right, Bro. Frank, let us hear from you again and again.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Dec. 2.

Editors Herald:—If the Gentiles of Christ's time looked after food and raiment only, they had but little faith as they only thought of “these things. The laws of this world will clothe, feed, and keep from the severity of the elements. If the children of God measured their faith in accordance to their surroundings they would go contrary to Christ's commands, when he said, “Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you,” to use in righteousness. All these things would be given only by a perfect obedience to its righteous laws.

Daniel says: “that in the last days those who lead many to righteousness shall shine as the stars of heaven. A faith that ends with money, clothes, and food, makes a complete surrender to a dead faith, but with Christ an empty purse, no scrip, one coat, backed up by living faith and preaching of righteousness “laid on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, will discount all wavering and doubting of a worldly nature and prepare to more fully come on earth as in heaven.

The unity of faith would make an undivided church and body on all lines of scriptural and righteous protection. It would bring complete fellowship to earthly blessings as well as in spiritual lines and teachings.

The testimony of life with God can feed the hungry spirit and thirsty soul, while God keeps his book of remembrance as we fear the Lord and speak often one to another. There is also a righteous law that remains yet to be recognized and fulfilled, whereby the saying shall be fulfilled, when each man can sit in peace under his own vine and fig tree.

The proclamation of gathering together to Zion means a declaration of independence from the world's little faith to the unity and blessing of the people of God on earth, thus awaiting the kingdom of Christ on earth based upon a righteous law of government.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I have spent nearly three weeks in this city, endeavoring to labor for the good of the work. Bro. W. A. Smith preceded me here and held a two-weeks' meeting with good interest; leaving here he went to Norwalk, Connecticut, where I learn he had quite an interest, and baptized four. He had also baptized two in this city.

We will remain here over another Sunday and then return to Philadelphia and Camden. On the evening of Tuesday, December 15, I solemnized the marriage contract between Bro. Ephraim Squire and Sr. Ella Tyson. Bro. W. H. Kelley had been engaged to perform the ceremony, but as he was unavoidably detained at home, the job was awarded to the writer. Bro. Smith had returned from Norwalk, and was present, and assisted in the ceremony. About one hundred and fifty guests were present, and spent the evening in feasting, recitations, and other amusements. Quite a display of useful and ornamental presents decorated one room in the house. Our brother is a book-keeper for the firm of Browning, King and Company, New York, and our sister was formerly a telegraph operator for the "Western Union," which position she resigned to become the happy bride of Bro. Squire. All joined in wishing them joy, peace, happiness, and prosperity.

We are now having winter in true style; snow has fallen to the depth of about ten inches, and indications are that we will soon have more. "Jots by the wayside," by T. W. C., are quite interesting; the more so to the writer, perhaps, because he has passed through some similar experience. We could imagine his feelings, reflections, anxiety, etc. It does me good to hear from my brethren in the field; although some of them I never met, save at the General Conferences; yet it seems that I had known them always. The secret is, we are brethren indeed; engaged in one great cause of a divinely appointed work, and moved upon by the "one Spirit."

While this is a hard field in which to labor, the Lord has abundantly blessed us during the present year.

DOW CITY, Ia., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—We have had the worst roads for the last month or six weeks that I ever saw in this part of the country during this season of the year, which has been a great drawback to missionary work. On this account work could not be done in some localities that we had hoped to reach ere this. However, some profitable work has been done. Bro. Henry M. Daniels baptized two sisters of late in Calhoun County; Bro. J. T. Turner baptized a brother and sister, husband and wife, at Deloit; the writer buried three in the likeness of Christ's death at Dow City, who were the fruit of the labors of Brn. J. M. Baker, D. M. Rudd, and others; Bro. J. F. McDowell had the ice cut near Rolfe and led a gentleman and his wife through the waters of regeneration into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Bro. McDowell's lectures on the Book of Mormon, delivered at Rolfe, were well received: so I am informed.

Bro. C. J. Hunt, when last heard from, was battling for the right in Cherokee County, his efforts being seconded by the officers and members of the Pilot Rock branch. I presume Elders W. W. Whiting and H. M. Daniels are laboring in the vicinity of Elm Grove, Calhoun County.

President Joseph Smith's visit and preaching in this district of late were much enjoyed by all who were favored with his company or who attended services and listened to his discourses. Each branch in this district is anxious that Presidents Joseph and Alex. Hale Smith should visit them.

Local ministers will please continue to do all the preaching they can during the winter months and if anything special is needed they can notify Bro. J. M. Baker or the writer, at Dow City, and we will render all the assistance possible.

In bonds,

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—Since the Bronson-Musser debate, of which I wrote, I have labored in Livingston County, also in Cadillac, as well as here in the beautiful "City of the Straits." I am glad to report good having been done, and shall briefly refer to some things which may be of interest to your readers.

When I first went to Cadillac, a number of years ago, a lady belonging to the Baptist Church, Mrs. Warden, well known and recognized throughout the city as a lady of superior intelligence, and preëminently a Christian, heard the gospel, and recognized it as the voice of the good Shepherd; but circumstances surrounding her life were then of such a nature as to prohibit her embracing the truth, though she desired with all her heart to do so. But notwithstanding hindering causes restrained the exercise of her God-given right to associate herself, religiously, with the body of Christians whose faith, doctrine, and practice commended itself to her best judgment as being nearest the New Testament standard, yet secretly and silently she prayed for grace and divine favor in the manifestation of providence in removing the hindrance to her uniting with the church of her choice—the Church of Christ.

The Lord continually blessed her, and this last summer opened the way for the free exercise of her will, though in bringing it about it seemed like a dark cloud shutting out the rays of sunlight which during all the weary years of the past had imparted peace and comfort to her soul. Her youngest daughter, aged about seventeen, was severely afflicted, and physicians told them the only hope for her recovery was to have a surgical operation performed, and that even then she might not live through it. Her mother in this trying hour sought in faithful supplication for strength to enable her to endure, and asked the dear Father that if it was consistent to heal her daughter in testimony to her of her acceptance and to convince her husband of the divinity of this great latter-day work; and true to the promise that no good thing would be withheld from those who walk uprightly, was his word vindicated. Her daughter was suddenly and miraculously healed in answer to her prayer. The attending physician came on Saturday, having been making preparations to take the daughter away on Monday, but was told that they could now dispense with his service as God had healed her girl. He protested, thinking her deceived; but on the following Monday came again, and after a careful and thorough testing he declared the girl was well. It was no delusion, the Master had healed her; and with mingled tears of gratitude and thanksgiving to him from whom all blessings flow they rejoiced before God, the daughter praising our heavenly Father for a praying mother.

Mr. Warden then told his wife he would not hinder her any longer, and that she might be baptized the first opportunity; and accordingly I was privileged to lead her and her two daughters, together with Mrs. Walter Kennedy and her mother, into the clear sparkling waters of Clam Lake to bury them with Christ in baptism. Our hearts were made glad by the presence of the Holy Spirit in confirmation, and after about three-weeks' stay at the place during which I was preaching nearly every night, baptizing one more, a Mr. Chamberlain, a worthy young man, and leaving several others near the kingdom, I retraced my steps to this city, where I have since been trying to do the best I could under existing circumstances.

Another thing over which I feel pleased is this: On the evening of November 26 I closed a discussion here of four evenings' duration with a Rev. J. L. Rickman, of the Baptist Church. Mr. Rickman is a talented man with a good education, having been admitted to the bar in 1869, ordained to the office of an elder in the Baptist Church in 1873, and received the degree of D.D. at the Wilberforce University, Ohio, in 1879. He reads the Scriptures in seven different languages, and withal is a gentleman. During the debate not a single slur was thrown nor an epithet used. He was engaged by a Rev. Mr. Meade here to meet Mormonism. He came at the appointed time, thinking to meet a Brighamite; but when I opened the debate with the Epitome of our faith he saw matters had been misrepresented to him, and has since confessed to me that had it not been for the purpose of eliciting principles of truth and sounding our faith as best he could, he would then and there have acknowledged that what we there presented was the doctrine of Christ. Since the debate he has been studying both night and day to get hold of the gospel rightly, and by invitation I went to his place on the 8th inst. and presented to him the prophetic claims of the Palmyra Seer, the Book of Mormon, and the general outline of the faith and organization of the church, all of which he indorsed; and to-day I baptized him and his wife into the true Church of Christ.

When it begins to be rumored that Elder Rickman was about to leave the Baptist Church and unite with us, a delegation of ministers and other church dignitaries to the number of eight in all waited on him to persuade him of the great mistake he was making; and though they stayed with him all the afternoon, during which time they held out various inducements for him to remain with them he proved to be invincible—he could not be bought with their offers of "filthy lucre," nor moved from his design.

Again last night, the Baptist preacher in Windsor was so troubled on hearing of Dr. Rickman's contemplated action of to-day that he could not sleep, hence he arose from his bed, left his home, and plodded his way to Bro. Rickman's house, and at two o'clock this morning might have been seen earnestly pleading with him not to sever himself from their connection nor join the Latter Day Saints.

When the Rev. Mr. Mead was making arrangements with me for the debate (Mr. Rickman and I never having met until the first night of the discussion) he said to me: "Well, Elder, you're a good talker and can quote the Bible freely; but Elder Rickman will just paralyze you in debate. There won't be enough of your church left to make a grease spot, for Rickman will have all the saints converted to our faith and your hide on the fence;" but, alas! the beautiful vision of future glory was punctured in the first volley, and passing away like an exploded bubble without gaining a single point in the debate, nor a single accession to their faith, but resulting in the conversion of their champion, he now realizes perhaps more fully than ever before that "The best laid plans of mice and men

Gang aft a' glee,
And leave us nought but grief and pain
For promised joy," and having now hung his harp on the weeping willow, may be seen with a countenance which reminds one of Jeremiah receiving his Lamentations; and when last heard of was developing patience and long-suffering in his congregation by his eloquent perorations on "the five great thunderbolts of Jehovah's wrath."

I have hired a hall here on the ground floor, and am preaching six times every week and expect to baptize more soon. Am billed for a lecture on Mormonism on Thursday p. m., and arrangements are being made by other parties for me to deliver a series of lectures on spiritualism and other topics early in January. Am feeling quite well, and hopeful of the speedy triumph of Zion's cause, when in the silent shades of forgetfulness and cold oblivion proud oppressors of God's people, with all who seek to illegitimately retard her wheels of progress shall be humbled, and the laurels of victory in transcendent loveliness and radiant splendor crown the brow of every faithful, trusting child of the great King. May the peace of God's Holy Spirit with all its sanctifying graces, distill—like dew upon the mountain side—within the hearts of all his dear children, assisting in the hour of trial, comforting in deep distress, and inspiring with earnest zeal, determination, and active energetic labor in Immanuel's cause, that when the great clock of time shall say: "It is done," we may be found habilitated in the beautiful garments of righteousness, and in glory resplendent with immortal bliss and grandeur upon the golden strand of the shoreless sea of eternity arise in the likeness of Christ. Then, O, then we shall be satisfied!

Very truly and sincerely yours,
WILLARD J. SMITH.

WEST CONCORD, Minn., Dec. 19.

Editors Herald:—Last Monday I came to this place and found that Brn. Gibbons and Prall had secured a hall in town for the week, and announced meetings to commence that night. Have preached every evening since to good and attentive audiences. Will continue over Sunday and then return to Minneapolis for a few days.

It is my intention to return to this (Dodge) county after holidays, and would like for the scattered saints in the surrounding counties to write me as to the chances for work in your neighborhood. Write to Box 113, West Concord, Dodge County, Minnesota. If you can secure churches, halls, or schoolhouses to preach in, do so; if not I am willing to speak to a few in private houses. There are a few good saints in this vicinity and prospects seem fair for more to come.

What we need here in Southern Minnesota, and South Dakota, in order to do more effectual work during the summer season, is a gospel tent. Brethren in different parts of the field have called attention to it and I promised to make mention of it in the Herald, so that those interested might unite in taking the necessary steps to secure one. We should have a tent ready for use by the first of June by those who may be sent here from next conference. Will all the saints in Minnesota, North and South Dakota, but more especially those of South Dakota, and Southern Minnesota, including the city of Minneapolis, please consider this matter at once, and at as early a time as possible report to the Bishop's agent, Bro. W. W. McLeod, Cormorant, Becker County, Minnesota, as to what you can and are willing to do? I am sure Bro. McLeod will be glad to receive your contributions for this purpose and report in due time when sufficient means are at hand to purchase a tent.

Brethren, do not delay; let us begin at once to make preparations for a vigorous campaign next season, so that whoever may be sent here may have the wherewith to commence work in due time. The season for tent work in this country is but short and if we put off this matter too long we will have but little use of the tent next summer.

Few only have been baptized in this field during the year but we trust that the seed sown will bear fruit in due time.

Perhaps it may interest those of the ministry who have labored in Minneapolis in the past to learn that one J. Wesley Hill, at one time pastor of the M. E. Church at Ogden, Utah, afterwards of one of their churches of Minneapolis, and who threatened to do all in his power against our work, has been discharged by his own congregation because of his abusiveness and lack of veracity. Last summer the congregation asked him to take a good long vacation, and now another man is preaching in his place. It really seems as if these "Mormon eaters" were destined to get into trouble sooner or later. Is it vain for us to believe that this happens in fulfillment of the prediction that "no weapon formed against thee shall prosper?"

Some of those who have attended my meetings here still remember the preaching of Bro. W. H. Kelley, they say, about thirty years ago; and while they think that he was "a very smart man," and have since heard the truth spoken here by others perhaps less "smart," they have as yet failed to receive it practically. I hope, however, that they may do so while it is yet called to-day.

Yours in the work,
PETER ANDERSON.

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

I HAVE read several articles in the Herald concerning the Book of Mormon geography, and I wish to ask a few questions on the subject.

If we suppose that the Isthmus of Panama is the narrow neck of land, we find by looking at the maps of the present time that it runs northwest from South America, then west and southwest, and northwest again; or we find that the general direction of the whole isthmus is east and west, and it is situated between the seventh and tenth parallels of latitude, and extends about three hundred and fifty miles east and west from the eightieth meridian, making it about seven hundred miles long.

What I wish to have explained is this: Can the seas on the north and south of the Isthmus of Panama be called the sea on the west and on the east, as in Alma 22: 28, as follows?—

And it came to pass that they did not head them until they had come to the borders of the land Desolation: and there they did head them, by the narrow pass which led by the sea into the land northward; yea, by the sea, on the west and on the east.

I wish to ask another question concerning that which is written in the Book of Ether 4: 57-60:—

And in the days of Lib the poisonous serpents were destroyed; wherefore they did go into the land southward, to hunt food for the people of the land; for the land was covered with animals of the forest. And Lib also himself became a great hunter. And they built a great city by the narrow neck of land, by the place where the sea divides the land. And they did preserve the land southward for a wilderness, to get game. And the whole face of the land northward was covered with inhabitants.

If I understand the writer there was a colony of people living in the country, north of the narrow pass. And there was no game in their country, for it had been driven out by the poisonous serpents. So they did go into the land southward to hunt food for the people. And we must conclude that they returned, with the game, to the land northward, again. If the narrow pass was the Isthmus of Panama, which we find to be about seven hundred miles long, would it not be quite a trip for people who had no way of traveling only on foot or on horseback, to go down across the isthmus seven hundred miles, and return, making the round trip fourteen hundred miles that they would have to go to get food for the people?

And they must have made the trip frequently, for they preserved it as a general hunting ground.

We read that they built a city by the place where the sea divides the land. The location of that city is known by the words, "where the sea divides the land." I would take that to mean a very short neck of land, where the seas on each side come near together.

If we apply the expression to the Isthmus of Panama we could not locate the city nearer than seven hundred miles.

Here is a quotation from Alma 13: 66, 67:—

Thus the land on the northward was called Desolation, and the land on the southward was called Bountiful; it being the wilderness which is filled with all manner of wild animals of every kind; a part of which had come from the land northward, for food. And now it was only the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite, on the line Bountiful, and the land Desolation, from the east to the west sea.

Here we find the animals going from the north country into the south country across the narrow pass, for food, like the people did in the days of Lib, when the animals had all been driven out of the north country, by the poisonous serpents.

It is not plain to me how people and animals could travel so far for food, as we will have to conclude they did, if we say the narrow pass was the Isthmus of Panama.

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

EDITORS HERALD:—In response to note of Bro. Simon Smith in your issue of the 9th inst., I beg leave to say that I believe I understand the brother's theory of route and where Mulek was brought to from Jerusalem to America. That is a part of their history of which the record gives no definite clue, only making the following statements in regard to it:—

And they journeyed in the wilderness, and were brought by the hand of the Lord, across the great waters, into the land where Mosiah discovered them; and they had dwelt there from that time forth.—Omni 1: 7.

The next gives us a little more light:—

And it [Bountiful] bordered on the land which they called Desolation; it [Desolation] being so far northward, [from Zarahemla where the record of these present events were recorded by Alma,] that it came into the land which had been peopled, and been destroyed, of whose bones we have spoken, [in the account written of the report given to Limhi by his men,] which was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; it being the place of their first landing. And they came from there up into the south wilderness. Thus the land on the northward was called Desolation, and the land on the southward was called Bountiful. . . . And now it was only the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite, on the line, and the land Desolation, from the east to the west sea; . . . there being a small neck of land between the land northward, and the land southward.—Alma 13: 11.

I will refer to this directly. In "Geography of the Book of Mormon," I took no note of how Mulek was brought or where he landed, because the account of that is not in the record, and what I have written or may write will be confined to the record, as I do not pretend to know anything archæologically of the matter. The brother retaining the people of Mulek in Central America, as shown by the quotation I made from his letter published in the Herald of November 13, 1895, is the place where I believe Bro. Simon "missed the track and lost his bearings." Of the impossibilities of the claims made as to the location of the "strip of wilderness" in the quotation, when compared with the record, and the advocacy of the Usumacinta River or any of its tributaries having been the ancient river Sidon are fully shown in the article of Herald, November 25, 1896. If these with other things noted fail, then the Tehuantepec idea falls flat.

In reference to the quotations made above they to me are among the strongest evidences in support of the truth that the Nephites discovered the people of Zarahemla in the northern part of South America. Other evidence in favor of this is not lacking. The quotation from Alma 13: 11 must have been placed in its original form upon the plates of Nephi by Alma not less than one hundred years after the discovery of the people of Zarahemla by the Nephites, and strange to relate this is the first historical mention we have of the existence of a narrow neck of land which separated the two continents, a circumstance made more strange if it were true, that the whole body of Nephites and Lamanites migrated from the "land south," their original place of landing, and passed through this "narrow neck of land" to take up their residence in Central America, and not mention that fact in their history; or if it found a place upon the plates of Nephi stranger still that Moroni should fail to note such a prominent feature in the history of his people when writing up the abridgment we now have.

Far better to take the evidences as they present themselves in abundance in the record and believe that Lehi and his company were brought upon the "land south," and that after his death his posterity inherited that land for more than four hundred years and then dividing it between the two nations formed out of that posterity and the acquisition of the descendants of Mulek and that that division line ran in a straight course from the sea east even to the sea west, as shown in the record, rather than to believe that which will not stand the test. Respectfully, your brother,

WILLIAM HAWKINS.

THE WHITE-SEWELL DEBATE.—NO. I.

AN agreement was entered into between Elder I. N. White, of Independence, Missouri, and Elder C. W. Sewell, of Dot, Texas, to conduct a written debate, comprising three articles each, and to be published in the Gospel Advocate, of Nashville, Tennessee, and the Saints' Herald, of Lamoni, Iowa, upon the following question; to wit:—

Do true baptized believers in Christ of our day have a scriptural right to claim or possess the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit as promised by Christ to his disciples, and are they actually possessed by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?

Dear reader, I pick up my pen in the hurried moments of life, to try and flash a gleam of light down the pathway presumably occupied by the many lo, heres and lo, theres, upon this important question of the perpetuity of the inspirational gifts of the Holy Spirit, promised by Christ to "every creature" that "believeth and is baptized," as found recorded in Mark 16: 15-18. Had this question been propounded to "true baptized believers in Christ," of Paul's day, asking if there were any promise left to others than the apostles to warrant them in making such a claim, what would have been the answer? Since miraculous gifts were actually enjoyed by others outside of the apostles, there must have been some warrant or scriptural guarantee from God for it. Philip, of Acts 8: 6, 7, was not of the apostles, and yet he enjoyed miraculous gifts. Stephen, of Acts 6: 8, enjoyed such gifts, as also did Ananias of Acts 9: 17. These men were ministers of the word, the gospel that Christ had taught and commanded to be preached to "every creature." Common, ordinary men—laymen if you please, enjoyed miraculous gifts, when they became "true baptized believers in Christ;" "spake with tongues, and prophesied." (Acts 19: 1-6.) Women enjoyed the miraculous gift of prophecy. (Acts 21: 9.) In fact, the whole household of faith seemed to enjoy the gift of the Spirit in some way or other, just as God pleased to distribute it. Paul, in 1 Corinthians 12: 3 says:—

That no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost. This Spirit was to testify of Christ to the believer.

Again:—

But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.—Verse 7.

Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.—Verse 4.

These gifts all came from the "Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." (James 1: 17.) Miraculous gifts, supernatural, having come down from God to his "true baptized believers in Christ," in fulfillment of Christ's words — to "every creature" that "believeth and is baptized." (Mark 16: 15-18.)

Paul, further elucidates it thus:—

For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body [the church of Christ], whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

The life of the body was that inspirational Spirit, which the members composing that body drank into, from God. "The body without the spirit is dead," says James. (2: 26.) "I am the vine, ye are the branches," says Christ. (John 15: 5.)

Through faith and obedience men and women are grafted into this Vine, and, are entitled to its spiritual blessings, by reason of being "one" with it:—

For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.—Gal. 3: 26-29.

Thus, were they "true baptized believers in Christ," being "born again;" (John 3: 3,) "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (John 1: 13.) Thus they were all entitled to the inspirational "Spirit of adoption." (Rom. 8: 15.) Then Christ's children, "then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." (Verse 17.) Yes, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body . . . and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." (1 Cor. 12: 13.) And, "But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." (Verse 7.)

We now ask, How did God manifest the Spirit's power to "every man," to "every creature," that was a true baptized believer in Christ?

Here is the answer:—

For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues; but all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will.—1 Cor. 12: 8-11.

Thus, it can easily be seen that there must have been a scriptural right and promise left to the early saints, not only to claim, but to absolutely possess the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit in common with all "true baptized disciples in Christ," so long as the old ancient gospel was preached and obeyed.

Why not? God is unchangeable and is no respecter of persons. "But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." (Acts 10: 34, 35.) Man is forbidden to change the gospel; obedience to it brings the Holy Spirit; the Holy Spirit brings the inspirational gifts that God's children always enjoyed under its administration. One Spirit to all, you see.

Now, it is a fact that all the spiritual manifestations and blessings that came from God through the Holy Spirit to these ancient saints were received when they were lawfully and legally baptized into the "one body," or Church of Christ. Paul says:—

For by one Spirit are we [Paul, Peter, John, and all the obedient Jews and Gentiles] all baptized into one body . . . and have been all made to drink into one Spirit.—1 Cor. 12: 13.

No respecter of persons here, you see. All "drink into one Spirit." Paul, in speaking of this spiritual body, or Church of Christ, pictures it to us as a man with all his limbs in perfect order; every joint in its place just as God pleased to set it there. Head, feet, ears, eyes, etc.; some joints acting the part of apostles; others of prophets; others of teachers, etc.; all being a component part of the whole, thus making the complete body. All drinking into the one Spirit, God giving the "manifestation of the Spirit" to every part to "profit withal," that there be no schism in the body; "diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit;" giving to one "working of miracles;" to another, "gifts of healing;" to another, "speaking with tongues;" to another, "interpretation of tongues;" to another, discerning of spirits;" to another, "prophecy;" to another "wisdom," "knowledge," "faith," etc., etc. This all by one Holy Spirit, to "every man severally as he will."

To perpetuate this body or Church of God is to perpetuate every joint and limb that it took to compose it when Christ said he was its head, eighteen hundred years ago. Seemingly, the inspirational Spirit-life was breathed into this body in a marvelous manner on the day of Pentecost, and it became a "living soul." That Spirit-life sent miraculous vitality to every joint and limb of that spiritual body of Christ; setting no difference between apostles, evangelists, teachers, laymen, Jew or Gentile, bond or free; male or female. "Old men" were to dream dreams under the influence of that Spirit; "Young men" were to "see visions;" the "sons and daughters" were to "prophesy." And in fact, says Peter:—

For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

May not this reach down to the Latter Day Saints? Bro. Alexander Campbell said:—

We want the old gospel back, and sustained by the ancient order of things.—Christian System, p. 234,

To have the "old gospel back," is to have a full realization of Christ's promises in Mark 16: 15-18.

To be "sustained by the ancient order of things," is to have a full realization, a restoration, if you please, of the officers—gifts of Christ to the church, such as apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, teachers, etc., men called and sent of God to preach and administer the ordinances of God's house.

What a glorious picture left us of the true church of God! This harmonizing with 1 Corinthians 12: 28; Ephesians 4: 11-13. Were we to place a New Testament in the hands of an intelligent, unprejudiced person, who wanted to find the true church—without knowing a single thing about denominations, would he not be safe in taking the inspired apostles' description of it for authority in this matter? When the true Church of God is found this way, with every member animated by the divine Spirit, how would this divine New Testament order be superseded by human order and law to introduce another church, and another gospel, and another spirit shorn of all of these divine examples, without doing violence to one of the most superb and divinely appointed systems of church and inspirational Spirit power that was ever devised by God and his Christ?

Nothing short of another revelation—another New Testament—another gospel—another Holy Spirit, can displace this divinely arranged plan of God and Christ. Therefore, every "true baptized believer in Christ, of our day, has a scriptural right to claim, or possess the miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit as promised by Christ to his disciples."

I. N. WHITE.

MIRACULOUS GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT.

REPLY TO I. N. WHITE.—NO. 1.

Dear Reader:—Occupying the negative of this question it is my duty to show that Elder White's position is incorrect, that his proof does not prove. It is not often that you read a discussion between an uninspired man and one who claims to be inspired, but such is the nature of this discussion. Mr. White's first argument, if expressed logically, is this: Philip, Stephen, and others, baptized believers, who were not apostles, received the miraculous gifts of the Spirit, therefore true baptized believers of our day have right to claim them. But Balaam, a wicked prophet (Num. 22, and 23), Saul, a wicked king (1 Sam. 19: 18-24), and Caiaphas, a wicked priest (John 11: 47-51), also received miraculous gifts of the Spirit; therefore wicked men of our day have a right to claim or possess them. But this proves too much and therefore proves nothing.

That many baptized believers possessed these gifts in the days of the apostles we freely grant, but we need to inquire, For what purpose were they bestowed upon them? And does there exist to-day a like necessity? Take the Samaritans in Acts 8, as an example. Remember, the New Testament was not then written. After Philip preached and baptized them and had gone on to other parts how are they to know how to act? They can't look into the New Testament and act according to its teachings, for it is not yet written. How is this church to edify itself? God meets this emergency by bestowing on them supernatural gifts of the Spirit. But is this the object or purpose of these gifts? We will let Paul answer:—

Forasmuch as ye are zealous of spiritual gifts seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.—1 Cor. 14: 12.

But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification and exhortation and comfort."—Verse 3.

He that prophesieth edifieth the church.—Verse 4.

I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied; for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues except he interpret that the church may receive edifying.—Verse 5. (See also verse 26.)

Thus we see the object of these gifts was to edify the church.

Can't the church do this work now without these gifts? We now have the New Testament and from it men can learn to speak to edification, and exhortation, and comfort. Then there is no longer any necessity for these gifts; and as God does not do an unnecessary thing, he does not now bestow these gifts.

If this inspirational Spirit were possessed by the church to-day it would not reveal anything not contained in the New Testament. If you think it would or does, just cite us one new truth revealed to the Latter Day Saints that is in anywise essential to salvation. Why should inspiration be kept up just to repeat what has already been given?

Our strongest argument against his proposition is that the apostle tells us these gifts should pass away. In 1 Corinthians 12 Paul discusses these gifts, and in verse 31 says:—

But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.

More excellent way for what? A more excellent way to worship or serve God and edify the church. But Elder White would have us believe there is nothing more excellent than spiritual gifts. Paul proceeds in the thirteenth chapter to show the more excellent way to be "charity" or love, and that these gifts are worthless without it:—

Though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.—1 Cor. 13: 1-3.

Then in verse eight he proceeds to show it to be more excellent, thus:—

Charity never faileth, but whether there be prophecies they shall fail; whether there be tongues they shall cease; whether there be knowledge it shall vanish away.

Then after illustrating how it would be, he says in verse thirteen:—

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

Thus we have Paul's positive declaration that these inspirational gifts should cease, be done away, vanish. And what proof does Mr. White offer to the contrary? Simply this, "Since these miraculous gifts were actually enjoyed by others outside of the apostles, there must have been some warrant or scriptural guarantee from God for it." Reader, whose word will you take, Paul's or Mr. White's? If there is such a guarantee let him show it.

He makes a point by quoting part of Mark 16:15-18, and referring to it several times; but if he thinks it proves his position let him come out and make his argument. I don't care to waste space on it till he takes a position. Most of his article consists in quoting those passages of scripture that speak of the spiritual gifts as they were possessed by the early church, with little or no effort to show they were to continue in the church. We all know they were in the church then, but does that prove they should be now? They were necessary then; nor do we see how the church could have been established without them. But after the revelation was completed—the New Testament written—there was no longer a need for them.

Again, he refers to Ephesians 4:11-13, but does not give us a clear-cut argument of it. Now, Mr. White, you complain for the want of space. Why don't you use what you have to better advantage? Are you trying to throw me in the lead or are you afraid to take a position? I don't think you are afraid, so give us clear-cut arguments.

No man can say that Jesus is Lord but by the Holy Ghost.

If this power is only imparted by the Holy Ghost dwelling in the man in a miraculous way, then sinners must receive it in order to conversion, which Elder White does not believe. The passage chiefly relied upon in the article before me seems to be 1 Corinthians 12:13:—

For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body.

This can mean no more than by the authority of one Spirit, otherwise we would make the Spirit the administrator of our baptism, and what the element into which the Spirit baptizes us the passage does not say.

And have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

The Revised Version renders this "to drink of one Spirit," the preposition eis (into) being omitted from the revised Greek text. How do we drink of the Spirit? Paul, in 1 Corinthians 3:2, says: "I have fed you with milk," literally, "I gave you milk to drink," using the same Greek word, potidzo, from which we have "drink" in 12:13. For what purpose did he give them milk to drink? That they might grow. For what did they drink of the Spirit? That they might grow. Upon what do Christians feed in order to grow? 1 Peter 2:2:—

Desire the sincere milk of the word that ye may grow thereby.

From whence comes this milk of the word? It is furnished by the Spirit. Hence when the Corinthians heard the word—drank the milk—at the mouth of Paul, they were "made to drink of the Spirit." So baptized believers of our day may drink of the Spirit by partaking of the word.

After quoting from A. Campbell Mr. White argues that to have a restored gospel we must have all the gifts by which he confirmed that word at the beginning. (Mark 16:20. Heb. 2:4.) If a Jew should call for a restoration of the primitive law would that mean a restoration of the thunderings of Mount Sinai by which he confirmed that law at first? One is just as reasonable as the other. But there is another clause in his proposition. He is to show that these miraculous gifts are actually possessed by the Latter Day Saints. He proves nothing in behalf of his church were he to prove that God intended these gifts to be perpetuated till he proves that his church actually possesses them. There are perhaps a dozen other churches that claim these gifts. Each of them can make the same argument that Mr. White makes, but none of them can show that they actually possess them. What did Christ promise that the Spirit should do for his disciples? He promised that it should guide them into all truth:—

Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth.—John 16:13.

Does he do this for all Latter Day Saints?

But the comforter which is the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you.—John 14:26.

It is said of Christ after his resurrection that he continued with them forty days "and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3.) Will Mr. White tell us what it was he said during those forty days? He will not for the simple reason he cannot, for the Spirit does not bring them to his remembrance.

He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do.—John 14:12.

Can Mr. White or any of his brethren do greater works than opening the eyes of the blind, raising the dead to life, and calming the raging waves of the sea? Please give this your attention.

There are some things in the article before me that I have not noticed because they have no bearing on the question. We all become the children of God by faith and obedience, and thereby become heirs of God—heirs of Abraham, etc.; but I can't see what bearing that has on the question at issue, so I subscribe myself,

Yours for the truth,

C. W. SEWELL.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Conference convened at Maine, Minnesota, Saturday, October 10, President I. N. Roberts in the chair, T. J. Martin secretary pro tem. Branch reports: Oak Lake 73; 1 baptized. Audubon 33; 9 baptized, 1 died. Union 88; 2 baptized, 1 received. Minneapolis 46; no change. Elders reporting: H. Way, W. Barnhard, T. J. Martin, and I. N. Roberts. W. W. McLeod, Bishop's agent, reported. I. N. Roberts, chairman of reunion committee, reported: Received of Bishop's agent $33.40; expenses of reunion $15.36; traveling expenses $7.50; on hand at present time $0.54. A recommendation was received from Audubon branch, recommending that Marcus Erickson be ordained to the office of elder. The recommendation was approved, and it was voted that the district president should attend to it. Voted that we petition General Conference to return Bro. Roberts to this mission for the coming year. Voted that when this conference adjourns it does so to meet at Fergus Falls, with the reunion in June, 1897. Preaching by Elders Henry Way, T. J. Martin, A. Whiting, and I. N. Roberts.

MOBILE.

Conference assembled at Three Rivers, Mississippi, December 12, at ten a. m.; President W. L. Booker in the chair, C. I. Carpenter secretary pro tem. Branches reporting, Three Rivers and Theodore. The last named was referred back for correction. Elders reporting: F. P. Scarcliff, J. D. Erwin, J. Mizell, S. Cochran, W. L. Booker; Priests C. I. Carpenter, G. W. Sherman. By separate motions it was ordered that Louis Le Pree (colored) be ordained to the office of priest and G. W. Sherman and C. I. Carpenter to that of elder. On account of the inability of our present Bishop's agent under existing circumstances to perform the duties of his office satisfactorily to the district W. L.

Booker, of Van Cleave, Mississippi, was recommended to fill that office. Licenses were granted to John Mizell, elder, and Reuben C. Mizell, priest, who had been previously ordained. The president was ordered to appoint a committee to solicit means for the purchase of a gospel tent for the use of this district. Those named thus far are, F. P. Searcliff, C. I. Carpenter, S. McDowell, Katie Goff, David Tillman, and W. L. Booker. District officers were sustained; namely, W. L. Booker president, J. L. Booker secretary. The ordinations as ordered were attended to by J. D. Erwin and F. P. Searcliff. The spiritual authorities of the church were sustained and conference adjourned to meet with Bluff Creek branch the Saturday and Sunday nearest the full moon in February, 1897. The Spirit of the Master prevailed throughout all the sessions, which were pronounced by all to have been the best ever held in the district. J. D. Erwin did the preaching and baptized E. B. Smith, Addie Ferrill, and Sr. Jane Britt on Sunday afternoon. After the Sunday night service a colored man offered himself for baptism.

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

Conference convened with the Sandwich branch, October 17; F. G. Pitt in charge, assisted by A. H. Smith; M. J. Danielson and E. E. Johnson secretaries. Branches reporting: Plano 196; gain 9. Mission 139; gain 2. Sandwich 65; gain 3. Unity 25; loss 1. Chicago 119; gain 5. Streater 31; no change. Braidwood 59; loss 3. West Pullman, no change. Ministry reporting: Elders F. G. Pitt baptized 8, W. Vickery baptized 2, C. G. Lanphear, I. L. Rogers, G. Scheidecker, A. J. Keck; Priests F. J. D. Earl, L. Houghton, G. H. Henley baptized 6, T. J. Sheldon. Bishop's agent, F. G. Pitt, reported: On hand last report $260.89; received since $271.62; paid out per order of the Bishop $385.35; balance on hand $147.16. A petition was read and carried that this conference petition the General Conference of 1897 to return to this district F. G. Pitt, and also appoint F. M. Cooper and J. B. Roush to this district as missionaries. F. G. Pitt was sustained president of the district, W. Vickery vice president, and W. Vickery secretary. The following was read and ordered spread on the minutes: "Sunday school association held its convention October 16, at Sandwich, Illinois. Reports were read from all the schools, showing total number of schools in district 8. Total membership 337; loss 8. Cash on hand last report $35.63; received during quarter $7.60; paid out $11.50; balance in treasury $31.73. In the evening an excellent entertainment was given by the Sandwich school." The preaching was by Brn. G. H. Henley, A. H. Smith, and F. G. Pitt.

Sunday School Associations.

FAR WEST.

Convention was held at German Stewartsville branch, December 11; C. P. Faul president; J. M. Terry secretary pro tem. Short talks were made by Sr. M. M. Peterson, Bro. R. Garlich, Sr. M. Head, Bro. J. N. Cato, Sr. Ann Summerfield, Bro. W. C. Flanders, all expressing love for the work and great desires to press on. Reports were read from Stewartsville, Mt. Pleasant, Kingston, Wakenda, Aspey, and German Stewartsville, showing a total enrollment of 316 scholars with an actual attendance of 222, with $19.05 on hand in all the schools. A paper was read by the secretary written by Sr. Rosa Elvert on "What constitutes a good teacher," which was followed by discussion by Brn. M. F. Gowell, L. L. Babbitt, P. Peterson, and T. T. Hinderks. "Where can we find one to fill all the conditions?" was asked. J. M. Terry gave an illustrated lesson from "Trumbull" quite profitably. The time was one hour, but by vote was extended thirty minutes. The question of holding the convention separate from conference appointment was debated and a motion to that end was lost. Brn. T. T. Hinderks, C. P. Faul, and Sr. M. M. Peterson were appointed a committee on program for next convention. A question was asked, "In what way if any is the Sunday school connected with the conference, and how much, if any, authority has the conference over the Sunday school? The chair answered, "Not any—being a separate concern." The answer was not discussed because of the lateness of the hour. Thus closed a very peaceful convention. Instead of the usual entertainment at night Bro. M. F. Gowell preached a good logical sermon. Adjourned to meet at St. Joseph, Missouri, March 12, 1897.

Miscellaneous Department.

RAILROAD HALF FARE PERMITS.

CENTRAL PASSENGER COMMITTEE'S TERRITORY.

Brethren laboring in the Middle States "in territory east of Chicago, Peoria, and St. Louis, and west of Buffalo, Pittsburg, and Wheeling," who may be entitled to half-fare permits, should make application to Mr. F. C. Donald, Commissioner Central Passenger Committee, Chicago, Illinois, who has been furnished a copy of General Conference minutes containing official list of appointments.

Local pastors and others in said territory, who may come within the rules, should furnish certificates of appointment from General missionaries in charge when making applications; the Commissioner having been instructed that said applications should be accompanied by such authoritative indorsements.

In bonds,

R. S. SALYARDS,
Church Secretary.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of Minnesota and the Dakotas; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—As our heavenly Father has blessed us in the year now drawing to a close, I feel to express my feelings to you for the assistance you have given me in prosecuting the work of God. I am satisfied that we have made advancements in spiritual matters this year that if cultivated will prove a greater blessing to all. You did well in responding to the call of the committee on reunion by sending your mites to purchase the tent, and the success of our reunion was in evidence that our heavenly Father had accepted your offering. Therefore I feel to thank God for the blessings that have accrued to each and all of us for the sacrifice. You are no doubt able to see how much more the missionaries have been blessed in their labors than ever before and that the branches have grown more spiritual under the administrations of their respective officers; and as we are soon to enter upon a new year let us not forget that the order is, "Onward to victory." You are aware that all voted to hold another reunion in Fergus Falls in 1897. The committee on arrangements met and has agreed to solicit means to make seats to accommodate at least two hundred or more people. Will you please come to our aid and help us in this matter? I feel confident that you will be blessed even greater than before. Bro. T. J. Martin is secretary and treasurer of the committee, so please recognize the appointment of the committee and send your mites to him at Detroit, Becker County, Minnesota. The amount to accomplish the above will be about fifty dollars. I hope and pray that you will kindly respond to this call for help and receive the greater blessings of our heavenly Father. Send all your mites to T. J. Martin, Detroit, Becker County, Minnesota. With brotherly love and humble prayers I am,

Yours in bonds,

I. N. ROBERTS,
Chairman Com.

MARRIED.

JOHNSON—HAYER.—About one hundred and sixty-five invited guests assembled at the home of Bro. and Sr. G. L. Hayer, of Mission, Illinois, on the eve of December 16, to witness the marriage of their daughter, Bertha, to Bro. Oscar Johnson. The words making them husband and wife were said by Elder Thomas Hougas. The many useful and beautiful gifts presented them, very ably attested the esteem in which they are held by friends and saints of Mission, of which branch both are members.

BRITAIN—CHEW.—At Atchison, Kansas, October 28, 1896, Mr. B. F. Brittain and Sr. Fannie E. Chew were united in marriage by Elder J. M. Terry, of St. Joseph, Missouri. A large number of well-wishing friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony. Many presents betokened the good wishes of friends. They will reside in Atchison, Kansas. (This in correction of notice in Herald of December 2, 1896.)

LAMBERT—ANDERSON.—At the home of Bro. William Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa, December 12, 1896, President Joseph Smith officiating, Bro. Richard J. Lambert and Sr. Claribelle Anderson were joined in marriage, a family party of guests witnessing the ceremony. These young people begin their married life with the wishes of all for a long life and a happy one.

DIED.

LYSINGER.—Franklin P. Lysinger was born in Fairfield County, Ohio, October 18, 1852; died near Eagle Grove, Iowa, December 2, 1896. He was married to Sr. Caroline Hayer, October 16, 1879. To them were born five sons and two daughters. He leaves besides his family and aged parents, five brothers and four sisters, to mourn his untimely death. Funeral services by Elder Thomas Hougas, December 4.

BARKER.—At New Bedford, Massachusetts,

December 6, 1896, Bro. Llewellyn G. Barker, aged 17 years, 10 months. Funeral services December 9, with sermon by Elder John Smith. His faith in the gospel had fitted him for the change, and he was ready to go. "Bless God," "for a faith that will not shrink."

VANMETER.—At Peoria, Illinois, on Thursday, December 3, 1896, Bro. Jasper H., son of Bro. J. B. VanMeter, of Lamoni, Iowa, in his thirty-first year. Deceased was born at Washington, Tazewell County, Illinois, September 15, 1866; was baptized at Lamoni, Iowa, by Elder A. H. Smith. He was earnest and devoted to the faith of the church.

SMITH.—At Clear Lake, Indiana, December 10, 1896, Warren Jesse Smith, aged 15 years, 10 months, 19 days. Funeral sermon, Sunday, the 12th, at the chapel, by L. F. Daniel, to a large and sympathizing audience, many of whom were relatives of the deceased. The mourners have the sympathy of the saints.

the institution, and at the same time benefit the college in the amount absolutely necessary to its success. We want your help at the

whether you live far, or near; and for this purpose have arranged to receive special gifts and donations for that time, and preserve and publish a list of the names, together with the proceedings of the day, and have them duly entered in a book for that purpose and kept in the college archives. In this way the rich and poor, old and young, —all—may properly perform a part and do good. Contributions are solicited in the amount you are able to give, and we wish to receive your name with the amount, however large or small, for they should come in amounts all the way from a few pennies, to tens, hundreds, and even thousands of dollars. It is the hope of the trustees that sufficient shall be raised at this time as to avoid the necessity of coming before the public again for aid, at least for years. By united effort this will be done. Will you consider the matter at once? We wish to hear from you by the first day of January, 1897.

Committees have been appointed and arrangements are being made for the dedication and opening on the dedication services beginning at 1:30 o'clock p. m. These exercises will last about two hours, and in the evening an entertainment of music and eloquence will be given in the brick church in Lamoni.

At the first of these special exercises parties will be present to register names and receive contributions; but the thousands who are so far away that they cannot be present on that day, may be present in spirit and by offering, such offerings to be duly recorded with others; and we ask your gift, your encouragement in lending your influence and sending your name, and your prayers for the good of the institution.

For this dedicatory work those at a distance may send funds directly to the Treasurer of the College, William Anderson, Lamoni, Iowa; or when more convenient send to Bishop E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa; or to the Bishop's agent in the district where you reside.

You may also send to Frank Criley, Manager Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa.

Missionaries, District Presidents, and Presidents of Branches in all the various parts of the country are asked to give special notice of this and arrange for receiving and forwarding the contributions so as to help those who are desirous of sending; and may the favor and peace of the Master be with you and each of you in your devotions and work.

Full proceedings of the dedication exercises and contributions will be duly furnished all aiding the work.

By order of the Board of Trustees and Directors of Graceland College.

LAMONI, Iowa, December 12, 1896.

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MATERIAL for the first volume of this work, provided for by the General Conference of 1896, to be published entire, is now in the hands of the printers, and will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible.

It will be published in two or more volumes at the following prices: Cloth binding $1.50; half leather $2.00; full leather $2.50; per volume.

It will begin with the rise of the church, narrating the early history and experiences of the Prophet Joseph Smith, and include the main and many of the minor incidents of his life.

It is impossible now to state where the first volume will end, as the work will be full and complete in subject matter and detail in all essential points, and be replete with historical and general documents connected with the church's history and progress. No labor and pains have been spared to make the work all that its importance as a record of the past and its influence upon the future, demands. It is an impartial narration of the facts as they were and as they are, gleaned from the records of the past and present. Every available source of genuine and authentic information has been drawn from that no essential fact might be overlooked.

The work is the production of President Joseph Smith of the First Presidency, and Bro. Heman C. Smith of the Quorum of the Twelve; both of whom have spent their lives in the service of the church, who have made it their business to acquaint themselves with the leading items and general details connected with its development and vicissitudes, and who are eminently qualified to write the history of the church.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

The work as written will refute the leading objections of opponents of the faith. It will prove invaluable as a historical narrative, as a means of conversion to truth, and as a defensive weapon in meeting old and new objections manufactured to oppose the great latter-day work.

CHURCH DOCUMENTS.

It will contain many public documents connected with the internal and external affairs and growth of the church, including letters and pastoral epistles of the Martyr and his coworkers in the First Presidency, of the Twelve, the Bishopric, and other councils of the church of the past and of the present day. Official church documents and State papers connected with the Missouri troubles will be included.

THE REVELATIONS.

The revelations given to the church will be inserted in connection with the narrations and descriptions of the events and circumstances under which they were given. This will add new interest to them, will facilitate their study, and result in a better understanding of the word of God given to his people in these last days—an item essential to the personal and general interests of the membership.

BIOGRAPHICAL APPENDIXES.

Biographical sketches of the lives of leading men will be published in appendixes—those of the early church in the volumes of the early history, those of the Reorganization in a later volume. These biographies will be in addition to the narrative mention of the personalities referred to.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

Plate engravings of prominent elders and others will adorn and add value to the work. The engravings will be good reproductions of correct pictures of the persons, and may be relied on as faithful portraiture of the originals.

CHAPTERS, NOTES, AND INDEX.

The work will be properly divided into chapters with synopses of tables of contents. The pages will also contain "side notes" in smaller type, for convenient reference. Each volume will also contain a complete alphabetical index, arranged for ready reference.

For many years both the church and the general reading public have made frequent demands for such a history. Repeated efforts have been made to supply those demands, but not until of late has the church seen its way clear to place the history in the hands of the people. It is with pleasure that now we are able to announce its speedy publication, with the belief that candid readers will be entirely satisfied with the general plan followed and the subject matter of the volumes.

It should be in every home of the saints; the Board of Publication desires to place it in such homes. It will prove an invaluable aid in disseminating the truth, in removing prejudice, and in pushing forward the missionary and local work of the church.

ORDERS, TERMS, ETC.

Under present conditions it will be necessary to require payment in advance. Orders should be sent in at once, and are now solicited for the first volume. Order through agents when possible. Cash to accompany all orders

LIMITED EDITION.

A limited edition will be issued; orders should be forwarded early. Remit soon and secure a copy. The book is valuable as a personal possession, and will also prove an acceptable gift.

The Board of Publication asks orders and remittances in advance that the work may be issued at once and be made immediately available for good. Collections are close; money is needed to place this important book on the market at the service of the church.

The first volumes sold, the second will then be published, then the third, should the material require more than two volumes.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

Dr. S. B. GOWELL,

305 Independence Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, will send till further notice "How not to be sick" for 12 cents; former price 50 cents.

Webster's International Dictionary

Successor of the "Unabridged." The One Great Standard Authority. So writes Hon. D. J. Brewer, Justice U. S. Supreme Court.

Standard of the U. S. Gov't Printing Office, the U. S. Supreme Court, all the State Supreme Courts, and of nearly all the Schoolbooks.

Warmly Commended by State Superintendents of Schools, College Presidents, and other Educators almost without number.

Invaluable in the household, and to the teacher, scholar, professional man, and self-educator.

THE BEST FOR PRACTICAL USE.

- It is easy to find the word wanted.
- It is easy to ascertain the pronunciation.
- It is easy to trace the growth of a word.
- It is easy to learn what a word means.

The Chicago Times-Herald says:— Webster's International Dictionary in its present form is absolute authority on everything pertaining to our language in the way of orthography, orthoepy, etymology, and definition. From it there is no appeal. It is as perfect as human effort and scholarship can make it.—Dec. 14, 1895.
