TEA AND COFFEE DRUNKARDS.

WE have quoted several extracts recently illustrating the conclusion that many medical men are fast reaching regarding tea and coffee, which is well expressed by Modern Medicine when it asserts that "tea and coffee are medicines, not foods, and, if used at all, should be used as drugs in definite and carefully prescribed doses, and not as common beverages." We quote from an article in the magazine just mentioned some facts that go far to uphold this view:—

"An eminent Chicago physician recently remarked to the writer, 'Thousands of persons are unconsciously suffering from the pernicious effects of the use of tea and coffee.' The investigations made by Morton, of Brooklyn, and a number of other neurologists have clearly shown that the use of tea and coffee often develops a special form of neurasthenic symptoms which are evidently the result of chronic poisoning. Dr. Arlinge, an English physician, reported, a number of years ago, that there were thousands of tea drinkers in the British Islands. An Australian physician has made the same observation with reference to the people of Australia. Dr. Kimball, an intelligent practitioner of New Hampshire, reported an epidemic of a strange neurosis among the factory girls employed in a large factory of which he had the medical supervision, which upon thorough investigation was shown to be due to tea chewing, which had become almost universal among the girls. Many of them were disabled from duty by strange mental and choreic symptoms but they had become so addicted to tea chewing that it was found necessary to subject them to a most careful examination each day, when they entered the factory, to prevent their continuing the habit. Two young women were arrested in Boston, a few years ago, for being drunk and disorderly. On investigation it was proven that they had taken no alcoholic liquors of any sort, but were addicted to tea chewing.

'Professor Virchow, of Berlin, is credited with saying: 'We have at last arrived at the truth that caffeine (the active principle of tea and coffee) is nothing more nor less than a strong stimulant, and, taken in large quantities, a poison, like brandy.' Roberts, of England, has shown the pernicious effect of tea and coffee upon both starch digestion and the digestion of proteids."

The latest study of the subject, and a most careful one, has been made by two French physicians, Drs. Gasne and Gilles de Tourette, whose report on the subject to the Society of the Hospitals of Paris describe at great length and in detail the symptoms of what they term "chronic intoxication" by coffee. We quote a few paragraphs from a translation in The Medical Week:—

"Caffeic dyspepsia resembles closely alcoholic gastritis, being characterized by phlegm in the morning, pain in the epigastric region, with radiation toward the back, coated tongue, distaste for solid food, etc. . . .

"The most important symptoms, however, involve the nervous system; there is insomnia, or sleep is accompanied by frightful dreams; when the patient stands upright he suffers from a sensation of emptiness of the head, and frequently from vertigo. . . .

"In addition the muscles of the calf and thigh are affected by painful attacks of cramp, especially at night, which contribute toward making sleep impossible."

The authors add that with cessation of the use of coffee the symptoms subside, being much less persistent than those of alcohol poisoning.—Literary Digest.

THOUGHT IN PRACTICAL LIFE.

It is a very crude and mistaken classification which separates men into thinkers on the one hand and practical men of action on the other. No one can be practical in any effective way without much thought, and for want of it many excellent enterprises break down and come to naught. People full of enthusiasm and eagerness in some object, set to work at once to carry out hastily formed and ill-considered plans. Soon they meet with difficulties that they had never foreseen—obstacles which they know not how to surmount. Those upon whom they had counted for assistance do not share their enthusiasm or believe in their methods; everything seems to go wrong and they become discouraged, lose perhaps both patience and hope, and end by giving up all effort and throwing the blame upon others which rightfully belonged to themselves. Had they been thinkers, as well as actors, a very different result would have ensued. Had they pondered over their plans and their lines of proceeding, had they reflected on the probable impediments and the best way of overcoming them, had they weighed their own powers and estimated their own strength, much valuable time and energy would have been saved, and success instead of failure might have ensued.

One common result of lack of thought is the loose and vague way in which directions are frequently given. A man may be very clear in his own mind about what he wants done, yet seemingly incapable of conveying this knowledge to another. Instead of patiently explaining the various steps and accurately stating the details of the process, he gives his orders in a general and condensed form, which often leaves a vague sense of confusion in the mind of the listener. Ashamed or afraid to admit this cloudy condition, the subordinate professes to understand, and promises to do what is required. Eventually it is seen that he grossly misunderstood, and has, therefore, signally failed. Then ensues a displeasure, wholly out of proportion to the offence. The employer will descant upon the stupidity, or carelessness, or insubordination thus evinced, when in very truth the fault has been in his own want of insight and his failure to explain clearly what he desired to have done. He has lacked the thought and imagination which would have fathomed to some degree the mind of the other, and would have enabled him successfully to communicate what was in his own.

Every mother in her nursery, every housekeeper in her kitchen, every teacher in her class, every tradesman in his shop, every business man in his office, everyone, in fact, who is called upon to give directions to another, should cultivate the art of being so clear, definite, and explicit that he or she cannot be misunderstood. He should take nothing for granted, but make himself certain that his instructions are fully comprehended; for only then has he any reason to expect or right to require that they will be carried out.—Philadelphia Ledger.

FRUIT AS MEDICINE.

WHY for ages have people eaten apple sauce with their roast goose and sucking pig? Simply because the acids and pectones in the fruit assist in digesting the fats so abundant in this kind of food. For the same reason at the end of a heavy dinner we eat our cooked fruits and when we want their digestive action even more developed we take them after dinner in their natural, uncooked state as dessert. In the past ages instinct has taught men to do this; to-day, science tells them why they did it, and this same science tells us that fruit should be eaten as an aid to digestion of other foods much more than it is now. Cultivated fruits, such as apples, pears, cherries, strawberries, grapes, etc., contain on analysis very similar proportions of the same ingredients, which are about 1 per cent of malic and other acids, and 1 per cent of flesh-forming albuminoids, with over 80 per cent of water.

Digestion depends upon the action of pepsin in the stomach upon the food, which is greatly aided by the acids of the stomach. Fats are digested by these acids and the bile from the liver. Now, the acids and pectones in fruit peculiarly assist the acids of the stomach. Only lately even royalty has been taking lemon juice in tea instead of sugar, and lemon juice has been prescribed largely by physicians to help weak digestion, simply because these acids exist very abundantly in the lemon.—Popular Science Monthly.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

TO BRANCH AND DISTRICT CLERKS.

Nearly all clerks of branches and districts have done well during the past year in making and forwarding statistical reports, and in answering inquiries about differences and errors in records.

But from some districts no statistical reports of branches have been received since those for March, 1895, or for the previous September or December. They are as follows: Nova Scotia, Central California, Southern California, Idaho, Florida, Fremont (Iowa), Pottawattamie (Iowa), Spring River (Kansas), Northern Michigan, Central Nebraska, and the Ohio.

Perhaps a portion of these have been mailed, but, through loss of mails, or by reason of insufficient postage stamps, the packages have failed to arrive. At times packages come through that have on them only the stamps that pay for printed matter only, and it may be that others are thrown away by postal clerks because not stamped as first-class matter by the senders.

Aberaman, Cardiff, and Llanelly in Wales, and Lydney in England, are the only branches in those countries from which reports have arrived within the time named.

Quite a number of branches in America have not reported to their conferences, even in districts where the majority of them have done so. But every branch in the world ought to make a report to the winter conference of its district, so that the general Church Record may contain an exact account of all gains and losses prior to the making out of the Annual Report of the total church membership on March 20. Let this be especially borne in mind by branch and district officers.

In connection with this will say that I would like to receive reports direct from the branches which have no district conferences to report to, such as from Drew County, Ingleside, Shady Grove, and Silver Hill, in Arkansas; Cedar, Coal Creek, Denver, Fairview, and Rocky Mountain, in Colorado; Gallatin and Deer Lodge, in Montana; and from the branches in Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia, and Washington.

Also will district clerks kindly forward the December, February, and March reports as soon after their conferences as possible, as soon as they can write out their minutes and hasten to copy the reports upon their district record, wherever such copies of names and items are kept upon the district books. And, without doubt, that is the best method of keeping trace of district membership.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.

TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

New subscribers to Public Opinion are offered the opportunity to get two excellent periodicals for the price of one. That is to say, each new subscriber to Public Opinion, by paying merely the regular subscription price ($2.50) may receive in addition his choice of a year's subscription to one of the following monthlies: McClure's Magazine, Cosmopolitan Magazine, Munsey's Magazine, Ladies' Home Journal, Godey's Magazine. Or the subscriber may, if he prefers, have instead of one of these magazines a copy of the McClure "Life of Napoleon," written by Miss Tarbell and beautifully bound and illustrated, the best popular history of Napoleon published. This offer is an uncommonly liberal one. If you do not know what Public Opinion is, send your name on a postal card to the Public Opinion Company, 13 Astor Place, New York City, and receive a sample copy; or call at this office for information.

A drop of castor oil in the eye to remove a foreign body is said to be as efficacious and often more manageable than the frequently recommended flaxseed.

THE GOSPEL QUARTERLY.

SENIOR GRADE.

This popular lesson quarterly has already related the life of Christ and the Book of Acts. The present quarter covers the Book of Genesis from the Call of Abraham to the Death of Joseph. The quarter beginning with January, 1896, commences with the oppression in Egypt and the Exodus under Moses.

For the individual home study of children and families the Gospel Quarterly occupies a special place.

A suitable and useful present to Sunday school scholars, or to children located away from school privileges.

Price 25 cents per year; 8 cents per quarter.

INTERMEDIATE GRADE.

The same lessons as in Senior Grade, simplified for intermediate class study.

Price 15 cents per year; 5 cents per quarter.

THE PRIMARY QUARTERLY.

A separate series of lessons, by the Primary Lesson Committee.

The present series is the Life of Christ, adapted to the capacities of very young children, with special aids to teachers and scholars.

Price 15 cents per year; 5 cents per quarter.

ELDER'S DIARY.

Every minister should keep a concise record of work done, and of localities visited. This has been provided for in brief, comprehensive form in our New Elder's Diary.

It contains pages for general memorandums, also every item in the line of ministerial work—sermons preached, number baptized, etc., etc. The plan of the book is designed to insure completeness in recording items without a burdensome arrangement. A cash account for receipts and expenses is also included.

The minister using the Elder's Diary can with very few notes keep a record of his daily whereabouts and labors from year to year.

Convenient in size, for the pocket, well bound in black or red leather; attractive in style. Price 50 cents.

Our catalogue also contains the following works: Abstract of Evidence Temple Lot Suit; The Instructor, The Compendium; Joseph the Seer; Braden-Kelley Debate; Presidency and Priesthood; What Is Man? Objections to the Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants Answered and Refuted; The Christian Sabbath; Ruins Revisited; Sunday school supplies, including King James' Bibles for scholars and teachers tracts, etc., etc.

We fill orders for other books and publications, and solicit general patronage.

LENGTH AND DEGREE OF PUNISHMENT.

I FIND there is a difference of opinion among the priesthood of our church respecting the future state of the wicked who die out of Christ, at least so far as their final destiny is concerned. Some believe all will finally be redeemed; others that a portion will be consigned to an eternal punishment; others believe we are judged according to the deeds done, and punished accordingly. We are charged by our enemies with teaching Universalism, while it seems to me the Scriptures are plain on the subject, hence I don't understand this divergence of opinion.

Revelation 20:12, 13 says: "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened: and another book was opened which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works."

Now it seems clear that God will judge according to the deeds done, and the punishment must be graded according to the amount of sin committed; but as to the length of time or degree of punishment inflicted we are left to conjecture.

Now if a man die without having embraced the gospel and suffers out his measure of punishment, can he ever enjoy the celestial state without complying with the gospel provisions? In Matthew 25: 30-46 Jesus says: "When the Son of man shall come" and all nations shall be gathered before him, and he will divide the wicked from the good, and the righteous will inherit the kingdom prepared for them, and he will say to the wicked, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire." This is after the resurrection of the wicked, and after the millennial reign, is it not? Does Jesus here refer to those who here and hereafter reject the gospel after hearing it? What is meant by everlasting fire, as spoken of in Matthew 20: 41? Then among the finally impenitent we may include those who have once tasted of the good word of God, and the power of the world to come; and have made shipwreck of their faith. Does this class include all who have once professed faith in Christ and have backslidden?

The difficulty lies just where the brother suggests it—"the length of time and the degree of punishment inflicted we are left to conjecture."

Job in refuting the persuasions and answering the arguments of his quasi counselors and comforters uses language indicative of strong conviction regarding the wicked:—

Have ye not asked them that go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, That the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.—Job 21: 29, 30.

David was of the opinion that a similar fate was in store for the wicked; for he says:—

The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.—Ps. 9: 17.

The preacher stated years ago that God shall judge the righteous and the wicked.—Ecl. 3: 17.

Jesus in likening the kingdom of heaven unto a net, concludes:

So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.—Math. 13: 49, 50.

The same authority is given for the following:—

When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats; and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left.—Math. 25: 31-33.

From these passages of Holy Writ it is easy to conclude that at sometime in the future a divine court will sit, and a judgment be instituted to determine the merit and demerit of those who have been dwellers on the earth; and that in that judgment time those who are found by the Judge to be worthy shall receive the reward of the righteous; those who are unworthy of such reward shall receive a condition of punishment which the Book of Mormon designates as the torment like unto a lake that burneth with fire and brimstone.

Those judged are to be so judged out of the records made in the books, whether they have done good or have done evil. Those who have done good shall enter into a condition of life eternal in happiness and peace; those who have done evil shall enter into a condition of unrest, unhappiness and torment. The reward must, in the nature of the condition differ, from the bare enjoyment of a being freed from a state of subjection to loss, pain, and distress, with a possible failure to reach unto life, to the condition of wondrous exaltation in which there is a sense of the completest enjoyment of life, contentment, satisfaction, peace, and all the bliss of the most exquisite pleasure possible to a perfected being in a perfected state of existence—words absolutely fail to express the sense of promised joy in this highest condition promised to the faithful just.

As the condition of the most worthy in the world to come cannot be expressed, so the absolute condition of the finally unregenerated wicked cannot be told.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.—Paul, 1 Cor. 2: 9.

They shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, which is their torment; and the end thereof, neither the place thereof, nor their torment, no man knows; neither was it revealed, neither is, neither will be revealed unto man, except to them who are made partakers thereof: nevertheless, I, the Lord, show it by vision unto many, but straightway shut it up again; wherefore the end, the width, the height, the depth and the misery thereof they understand not, neither any man except them who are ordained unto this condemnation.—The Vision.—D. C. Sec. 76; Par. 4.

To us these facts, that the heart of man (his understanding) fails to comprehend the good things in store for the righteous, and the place prepared for them that love God and obey his commandments unto life eternal; and that no man knows, nor has it been revealed unto any to remain in their knowledge, the nature of the punishment inflicted on the wicked and the place where it occurs, are sufficient in themselves to explain why it is that there are different opinions regarding the final state of the wicked, upon the hypothesis that "whatever is revealed belongs to man, but that which is not revealed belongs to God."

There is in reality not so much difference between the ministry on the point inquired after as seems to be suggested. On the main points the judgment, the rewards of life in degree; the punishment, also in degree, to be meted for deeds done in the body, all agree. As to the time when this judgment occurs, as applied to individuals, and to the final condition of the supremely blest, and the extremely unhappy, there is not an agreement further than this, all must say, we do not understand. He who says he does understand contradicts the word as found in the Bible and other written law. For instance, as to the time of his coming, in his glory or power:—

Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.—Jesus, Acts 1: 6, 7.

But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.—Jesus, Math. 24: 36.

And in Mark 13: 32, it is stated that neither man, nor the angels, nor the Son, knoweth that day and hour; and that it is known only to the Father.

If, then, neither men, angels, nor the Son are informed in regard to that important day when this august Son of God shall come, and as a consequence that great judgment day be set; and the ultimate condition of the extremely good and the extremely wicked is also kept from the knowledge of man, purposely, by God, is it to be wondered at that men attempting to discover what has been so purposely kept from their power to know, should be left to imagine, speculate, and differ?

It is said, "Where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise." In this case, however, it may be justly said that it is not bliss to be thus ignorant. The fact remains, however, that for a purpose known to himself God has set the limit to which man may go in this direction; hence, it must be concluded that the purpose was a wise one, and such condition of ignorance in regard to the things treated of herein was and is to the best interests of man, and he should be content to remain in such condition until it pleases God to perm it him to know.

So far as we are concerned, if the punishment of the finally wicked, and the place thereof, are not to be known only to those who are to be partakers thereof, we never want to know. If the wonderful blessings and glories of God to be enjoyed by the finally faithful lovers of God, have not entered into the heart of man, and are only to be fully known to them who enter into the possession of them, we can, by the grace of God afford to wait for them; assured, as we are that God "is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

We conclude:—

1. We are universalist, in that we believe that all will be saved from the effects of the temporal death consequent upon the fall of man and the entering in of death as a result of disobedience, through the atonement of Jesus, which will bring to pass the resurrection of all.

2. That the highest and best salvation will come to man through his obedience to the command of God in the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

3. That no man will attain to this salvation who does not hear and hearing obey this gospel.

4. That all will have an opportunity to hear and obey it; in this life or the life to come.

5. That those who hear it, either here or hereafter, and refuse to accept and obey it will not be entitled to receive the salvation offered by Christ in the gospel. Whether there will be any of these finally disobedient, is a matter of conjecture on the part of man, of knowledge on the part of God.

6. That in the world to come there will be differences in degrees of peace, contentment, happiness, blessing, honor, and glory, to be enjoyed by those respectively entitled thereto by degrees of obedience and works in Christ.

7. That the condition of the highest is not fully known.

8. That there will be differences in degrees in the condition of those who fail to obey the gospel unto salvation, in the world to come; a sense of loss, unrest, distress, punishment, degradation, misery, woe unspeakable as men may merit for works of evil done in the body. Whether any will fail of final reprieve from unhaply conditions, is not known to man but remains in the knowledge of God.

9. That there will be any who will so continue in rebellion against God and resist his clemency unto a final loss of opportunity for relief unto a condition of peace and happiness, comparative or real, remains unknown to man.

10. What the condition of punishment of those finally and fatally impenitent will be is not known, nor will be known only to those who shall merit and receive it, being known only to God.

11. That the passing of the verdict upon those to be judged and the ascertaining of their merit unto the best, or their demerit unto the worst conditions of future life will occur in a day and at a time unknown to man, set and known unto God alone.

12. That man's duty under such conditions of imperfect knowledge, purposely designed of God, is to be obedient unto the heavenly mandate, and being ready by obedience and good works be prepared for that day, come when in the wisdom of God it is decreed.

OUR COLORED BROTHER.

WHAT SHALL BE DONE WITH HIM?

THERE is a puzzling question pending in the politics of the country, in the North and in the South as to what shall be done with the Negro, or as some put it, even among the race itself, the "Afro-American" citizen.

As the Negro was left by the Emancipation Proclamation he was nominally a free man, entitled to the exercise of all the rights with which citizenship could endow him. But, in certain quarters of the public domain the dominant race would not in practice concede the theoretical right; nor has it been enforced, as the race and friends of human freedom would like to have it. It is possible, however, that the rapid passing of human events, the onward march of principles indigenous to American soil will in time bring about a settlement of the status of the Negro, in the domain of political citizenship more nearly in accord with human freedom; let us so hope.

There is, however, a question of equal import to many among the Negro race, itself; and equally worrying to many of the white race, for reasons, and that is the status and privileges of the Negro in the church. Apropos of this subject, the following from the Freeman, a paper published by the Negro people at Indianapolis, Indiana, of the issue for Saturday, February 23, 1895, sent us not long since by some one who takes an interest in the moving and burning questions of the hour, will be read with interest:—

THE COLORED BROTHER IN THE M. E. CHURCH.

Prof. William Lewis Bulkley, Ph. D., of the M. E. Church, professor of Latin and German, Claflin University, Orangeburg, South Carolina, has addressed a circular letter to numerous of his brethren in the church, the import of which can be gleaned from the following excerpts:—

"There has been evidently growing for many years an uneasiness among the 250,000 Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. That restlessness has, to say the least, not been quieted by the appearance of Bishop Foster's book on 'The Union of Episcopal Methodism.' It is apparent to many that some steps must be taken to adjust more satisfactorily our relation to the Mother Church.

"Great embarrassment meets us at every step. Our sister churches (wholly Negro) reproach us with charges that militate against our success in nearly every part of our field. The charge with which they chiefly cripple us is, say they, we dare not hope for any but subordinate positions in our church; that there is among us no chance for capable men to reach positions to which their talents may entitle them. Naturally similar statements made by Bishop Foster are used by them as a means against us.

"With him we do not believe that the church is ready to have colored superintendents over white conferences. In the nature of things that is too much to expect. But we do believe that colored bishops could be elected without the addition of any restrictive clause; that they could meet with the board of bishops and be assigned each time to preside over colored conferences. When a man is consecrated to the work of the ministry, not a word is said as to his serving white or colored congregations, but it is tacitly understood, and he neither aspires to nor is appointed over any but the charge for which circumstances best fit him. The same thing is true of presiding elders. Cannot the like rule hold with regard to bishops? If not, why not?"

Nothing that is said by "sister churches, wholly Negro" in criticism of the limitations placed upon the Negro's growth in the M. E. Church can be nearly so embarrassing as the fact, the charges are true, have been true, and bid fair to be true if not ad infinitum for many years at least. To a man up a tree, or a resident of Protestant Europe, where the hateful, cussed American prejudice is unknown, the very natural query would be, why not a colored bishop be assigned to preside over a "white conference," if he possessed the right stripe of piety, and the necessary qualifications? We, to the manor born, residents of this "cesspool of unfairness," are not troubled by such interrogation as What does all this mean? etc. We know, and when pressed, can offer some excuse and palliation, but all the excuses and explanations this side of hades, cannot remove the fact that the great Mother Church has yet to attain to that breadth and charity of view, that will enable her to treat all her children out of one spirit—regardless of color, past or present condition, and thus prove her sincerity in the chant—"For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The animus of the foregoing may be a little warm; but the provocation is grave, as the editor who wrote it sees the situation.

At the late great meeting of the M. E. clerical clans at Omaha, Nebraska, there was a decided movement on the part of the African M. E. brethren to ask that a man be chosen from among them, and be made a bishop. This movement was for some reasons characteristic of the white man, engineered out; possibly because the convention did not care to be forced to an issue too closely on the point.

There would seem to be a sentiment among some of the clergy to concede the bishopric, as the church holds it, to the Negro; provided—ah, there's the rub—provided—that it shall be the understanding, positively agreed to by the black man, that his being installed in the bishop's office shall not be construed to mean that he may, or shall preside over charges of white people as parishioners. This is the poison in the arrow of refusal on the part of the ruling elders to grant the demand for a bishop; notwithstanding the utility of such an officer to look after charges of colored element in the church is tacitly conceded.

"If," and the argument seems to be valid, "if the demand is granted and a Negro is ordained a bishop, why burden such ordination by any restriction? What is the necessity to say anything about where, or over what congregations, whether white or colored, such bishop should preside? Why not leave the matter to be determined by personal merit, and the passing of time which brings about the succession of worth to place, the determining of place and work, according to the eternal fitness of things?"

This argument is potent. Who is prepared to answer it?

The offer of life in the gospel is universal. "Whosoever believeth."

The color of the skin, the place where one was born, or whence his parentage, the nation, or government in which he lives, his condition socially, whether rich or poor, learned or unlearned, wise or foolish, master or servant, are not provided for in the promise, nor excepted to in the command. Whence then the distinction?

It is confessedly left to the divine judgment of God to make the decision of worth at the final determination of all things earthly; and we know of no warrant given by him to draw lines of demarcation and ostracism where he has made none.

There is no thought or claim to impropriety in the act of a white bishop taking charge of and presiding over a charge where the congregations are either mixed, or wholly made up of the colored race; provided; the bishop be otherwise qualified. Why should there not be the same impropriety in a white man ministering to and presiding over a congregation of Negro men and women, as there is in a black man having such charge of congregations made up of men and women of the white race, qualifications other than color being equal.

Politically the emancipation of the Negro from the condition of slavery which the greed and custom of the white man of America had fastened upon him, was an experiment, a "necessity" in the military conduct of the war of secession on the part of the government.

In the conditions of the proclamation no disabilities of citizenship were imposed, or provided for; the issue was joined and the slaves were made free; but exasperated white men assumed the right to declare that other white men who might dare to take charge of and command Negro men as soldiers, would be killed without mercy if taken prisoners, or found in such command. This made the massacre at Fort Pillow possible. Is the determination to prevent the rising of the Negro to places of eminent position and trust in religion and the church, born of the same prejudice against equal rights as that which inflicted the penalty of death at Fort

Pillow, because white men were found willing, as well as able to command Negro soldiers? Is there anything more wrong, or disgraceful in commanding Negroes as soldiers in arms, than in ministering to them in the rites of religion, and presiding in charge of them as soldiers of the cross? If so, where is it?

The Book of books has it by the authority of one chosen and sent that "there is neither male nor female, bond nor free, but all are one in the Lord." To this the Book of Mormon may add, "There is neither black, nor white."

What will the M. E. Church finally do with the colored brother? And as a matter of inquiry to be settled in time, What will other religious bodies do with him, including the Latter Day Saints?

AGE OF CONSENT.

THERE will be an effort made at the opening of the Legislature of Iowa in January, to secure the enactment of a law raising the age of consent of girls from thirteen years, where the statute now fixes it to eighteen years, the period at which the law determines the legal age.

The bill to be introduced will provide protection for both boys and girls, though it is pithily said in the letter from the White Cross of Iowa, elsewhere found in our columns, that under our present law injury does not result to one boy where one hundred girls are ruined.

Those of the Herald readers interested in the work being done in advancing the cause of social purity, about which so much is being said and written, will find in this effort to secure legislation of the requisite sort a field worthy of their attention. We commend the letter to those who believe that public opinion should be crystallized into law when the people are sufficiently educated on any given needed reform of existing inadequate or vicious legislation to demand it.

We believe that people should be educated up to the point that our boys and girls shall be safe from evil, by the dissemination of the gospel of light; but while so many keep themselves outside of the influence of the gospel, the restraint of law, the deliberate expressing of the will of the sovereign powers, should be declared and enforced.

It is a pity there is need for the law asked for, but while the social fabric is of such a texture that the scoundrel who robs woman of her virtue, thereby dishonoring her among men and degrading her in the esteem of her own sex, is left free from legal condemnation, and is upheld and countenanced in society while his victim is despised and ostracised, there is necessity for such a law. And if there is a necessity to protect woman in her property interests by preventing her from becoming the legal custodian and active agent of her own affairs, before she is properly matured, there is the same necessity to protect her in the possession and safe enjoyment of her best and dearest treasures, her virtue and her womanly honor. We say, let the bill pass and become a law.

TIDAL waves—the sea heaving itself beyond its bounds—occasionally give striking evidence that they too bear witness to the declarations of the word in latter days.

CARTHAGENA, Dec. 23.—News has arrived here from Santa Marta to the effect that a tidal wave has destroyed a great part of the town. Many lives were lost. Santa Marta is in the Department of Magdalena, and is the capital of the province. A tidal wave inundated the same region in December last.

BRO. R. M. ELVIN was called to Grant City, Missouri, to preach the funeral sermon of a young woman not a member of the church. His effort was followed by others on gospel topics, in the Christian church. The Worth County Times of November 28 gives Bro. Elvin this excellent notice, which shows the friendly spirit in which he was received by the people of Grant City:—

Elder R. M. Elvin came down from Lamoni, Iowa, last Thursday and conducted the funeral exercises over the remains of Miss Addie Barber. His sermon was so well thought of that by special request of a number of our citizens he remained in our city and preached in the Christian church Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights, and also Sunday at eleven in the morning and at night. It is a pleasure to listen to Elder Elvin. He is a strong, argumentative speaker, talks slowly and deliberately, apparently weighing every word as carefully as the assayer weighs gold, draws rich comparisons that are readily understood, and then applies them with masterly logic. We admire his method, whatever we may think of his creed. He says "I believe," but disdains to say "I know." We do not believe it lies in the mouth of any man to say "I know" when speaking of futurity. To believe is the fulfillment of the highest obligation imposed upon man by the divine law. That at least is our belief. No man knoweth, because "at such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. JOSEPH CHESTER, Los Angeles, California, writes us that because some have been exercised concerning the present condition of litigation in the Temple Lot suit he would commend a careful reading of Doctrine and Covenants 98:11-13. Following the quotation of a large portion of the passages cited he says:—

Saints, give heed and understand, lest some of us also be found among those who kick against the purposes of God. In my opinion it will be by also conforming to what the Lord directs in thus bringing our cause before the judges, chief magistrates, and general earthly authorities that the work will be brought out of the wilderness and placed prominently before the people. Saints, it means not only to see what the Lord will do, but also action by the Saints, that they do their part; then the Lord will do his. May the Lord help us to see and understand.

Bro. Richard Ellis, Sydney, New South Wales, November 25.

I am pleased to say that our branch is still increasing in number, four more being baptized. This gives us seventy-five members, and every prospect of more being added. Splendid attention is paid to the preaching every Sunday to a fair-sized congregation of very respectable people. I believe that Brn. Kaler and Wells will be the means of doing a good work in this country; but they are greatly in want of assistance because this field of labor is very large. There are hundreds of miles of country in New South Wales where the word has never been preached; and the Colony of South Australia, of which the city of Adelaide is the capital, is much larger than New South Wales in area, where no preaching has ever been done by elders of the Reorganized Church. The Utah Church had a branch in Adelaide about thirty years ago, when they left and went to Utah. There are also Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania, and New Zealand where no preaching has ever been done. It is impossible for Brn. Wells and Kaler to be in these places. I hope the next Annual Conference will be able to see its way clear to send more laborers into this field.

Bro. William Thompson, Pekay, Iowa, December 24:—

I thought I should not be able to leave home this winter, but my companion suddenly made a change for the better, and being out of danger I started for my field on the 17th. Am holding meetings at Lott's Creek, a new mining camp near Eddyville, to small but attentive congregations. I feel encouraged; am enjoying good liberty. There are a few Saints here. We have organized a Sunday school and hold prayer from house to house Sundays and Thursdays.

Bro. W. S. Taylor, Sherwin Junction, Kansas, December 25:—

We are endeavoring to hold the fort. We have a united branch; have had some preaching by Brn. Pender and Baker, which did us good and helped to remove much prejudice.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn, Kingston, Missouri, December 21:—

I am in the heat of debate again, the Book of Mormon the subject. Remember us, please.

Bro. T. W. Williams, Council Bluffs, Iowa, the 27th inst.:—

Everything moving nicely here. Our entertainment was a success. Saints generally well. Have been holding meetings in the Berean Baptist church, in the west end of the city, with fair interest. I started a mission Sunday school and the second Sunday we had sixty scholars. Prospects are good.

Bro. Charles Derry, Woodbine, Iowa, writes December 26, to "Bro. Joseph":—

I was sorry to find Bro. David Chambers suffering greatly from neuralgia and other causes, yesterday, and I learned that in consequence he had resigned the presidency of the Little Sioux district, which he has faithfully held for a number of years; and I fear from present appearances, that his valuable services in the active ministry are nearing their close. He has long labored under conditions too trying to his physical frame, but while I regret the necessity of losing his labors as president of the district, I am thankful the conference at its late session selected Elder James Crabb for that office. He also has been tried and found worthy. Elder Donaldson baptized Mr. Clark Marsh of this town, to the great joy of Sr. Marsh and the whole branch. I have been trying to hold up the standard of eternal truth in this vicinity for several weeks on the Sabbath day. The Saints seem to be aware of the necessity of a more earnest and intelligent zeal, which may God inspire in every heart. The fact that as a church we were ignored by the so-called evangelical churches, may result in good to the cause. Many people, not with us have noticed it and condemn the course.

We regret the failing health of Bro. Chambers. He has filled many important positions of trust in the church, in the discharge of the duties of which he has commended himself to the people for his fearless sense of right and loyalty to truth.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. J. R. LAMBERT, by our request, has furnished the HERALD a report of the first proposition—an outline of the points discussed—of the late Lambert-Glendenning debate, held at Allendale, Missouri, in December. Elder Glendenning has shifted his position considerably since Bro. Lambert's book, "What is man?" was written, and had to be met on some new points or differing lines of argument from those formerly used by "mortal soul-ists." Bro. Lambert's report will show the general points and enable those who would keep posted to note the efforts made by believers in the soul-sleeping doctrine to meet the evidences by which it is disproved. We also expect a report of the second proposition from Bro. Lambert.

Bro. G. H. Godby, writing from Louisa, Kentucky, the 10th ult., reports good results following the efforts of Bro. Albert Haws in the late discussion reported in this issue. Public sympathy was with Bro. Haws, who manifested a Christian spirit notwithstanding the abusive methods of his opponent. Friends to the cause were made among all classes of people.

A brother writes a lengthy letter, announcing the merits of an article invented by him—a mole trap, and asking space to set forth its advantages to the farmer, etc. We must refer this brother and other advertisers to our advertising columns where such articles can be presented as business matters and on their merits. Our correspondence columns are already taxed to publish news concerning the church.

Sr. Mary A. Carter, of Bancroft, Nebraska, offers a home with her family to elders of that field who can labor there.

Mrs. John Jack, of Bryon, Illinois, asks that Saints living near that place will call on or correspond with her. Brethren of the ministry would be made welcome by her family while preaching the word. We find no "Bryon" in the post office list. Perhaps Byron is the place meant.

Bro. J. W. Wight left home for his field in Western Iowa on the 27th ult.

Bro. J. W. Gillen returned, some time ago, to his field, Colorado, New Mexico, etc.

Bro. F. M. Weld, laboring in the Nauvoo district in company with Bro. J. R. Evans, arrived in of late. He reports progress, also hard work necessary to meet all demands.

We acknowledge receipt of a letter from Mr. Adolphus Hendrickson, of Moorhead, Iowa, who though not a member of the church, evidently notes its progress with interest. His letter with others is crowded out by the demand for more communicated articles and a condensation of passing items in brief letters or extracts.

Bro. I. N. Roberts left Lamoni December 29, for Minnesota and the Dakotas, ready to enter promptly on the New Year's campaign.

"Take kindly all that is kindly meant;
Be first to thank, be last to resent;
Give smiles to all who give smiles to thee,
And those who come frowning feign not to see.
And O! believe me, this is the plan
To lighten, to brighten the lot of man."

A WORD TO MOTHERS.

TO OUR enterprising Business Manager, Bro. Frank Criley, but especially to the sisters, we owe an apology that we have not sooner called their attention to the little volume, "Footsteps of Jesus," issued by the Board of Publication and now on sale at the Herald Office. This little volume has an interesting history connected with it, which we have not time to give, but will simply say that it was written by the direction or command of the Holy Spirit. This command, like the call to the child Samuel, was thrice repeated. It is the third of the Birth Offering series and we hope there is not a mother in the church who will not send for this volume for her children. Perhaps it is the only book among the thousands written for children which was written by the command of the Spirit. We are growing old, but before we depart it is the earnest desire of our soul to see many volumes for the children published by the church. Send in your orders, mothers, for this little volume and so help to roll on the good work. Price twenty cents. Address all orders to Frank Criley, Business Manager, Lamoni, Iowa.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 9.

Dear Sister Walker:—It has often come to my mind to write to you; and this morning finding myself alone thought I would "heed the lesson" of the day, and pen a few lines.

After being freed from the responsibilities and care of several years (that had been mine) I left Lamoni to visit my kindred, (some of my sisters in the flesh;) also as a recreation and change. After leaving Ohio I came to Boston. I am now near scenes of my early childhood, Fairhaven, Massachusetts, my birthplace.

This morning while musing and thinking of Lamoni and loved ones there; the three dear, sweet little faces that have been with me so long, and their little voices that I love so well, the memory of these is almost constantly with me. Who but a kind Father has implanted this love in my heart for these dear little ones whom we so tenderly cared for when they needed a mother's care? What a grand and noble work is intrusted to those who have the rearing and training of the young, whether it be in the home life or the Sunday school! Great responsibilities rest upon those who have this work in charge.

Let not the sisters think they are not helpers in the great latter-day work. To them is intrusted a work of love that they alone can do; and if they seek help from their heavenly Father their way will be made plain, and the burdens of life will be lightened.

I often think of Lamoni, the quiet, peaceful home of so many of the Saints. I remember her broad expanse of sky. Nothing breaks the beautiful vision of the clouds and sunshine as each in its turn comes to the view. The Saints there have many privileges (more than they realize), and should treasure them in such a way that they may be benefited thereby.

I have had the pleasure of meeting with the Saints here. They seem to be alive in their duties, and we find the same good Spirit leading them as we find with all who are living after the "perfect law of liberty" in the gospel. We had Bro. Sheehy preach for us yesterday. Those who are familiar with his methods will understand his lines of argument, which are convincing and forceful in their nature, and can only accomplish good. May the kind Father bless his ministry in their labors; that they may in wisdom and humility declare the words of life and salvation.

My sister, Mrs. French, invited the Mite Society and Prayer Union to meet here last Thursday. On account of the snowstorm only Sr. Sheehy and Sr. Whitten came. The Lord's promise (where two or three meet in his name) was with us and we were blessed with his Spirit. In our prayer we were led to pray for Sr. Hattie Griffiths, having heard a few days before of her being very low. The Spirit came upon us, assuring us the Lord heard our prayer, and that he was holding her in remembrance. May the good Father comfort them all by his Spirit, and help them to lean upon him continually.

We go from here to New York to visit with our sister, Mrs. Wm. O. Dwyn. She too is not in the fold. I have been trying by my faith and example, to show forth the truth of the gospel. Each day as the opportunities come to us, we can do good. There are many avenues open to us for work, and the sisters of the church can and will accomplish much good if they make the effort.

Trusting I may be the means of encouraging some one to higher aims and nobler purposes in life, I am,

Your sister in gospel bonds,
M. E. S.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JANUARY.

Ask the Father in my name, in faith believing that you shall receive, and you shall have the Holy Ghost which manifesteth all things, which is expedient unto the children of men. And if you have not faith, hope and charity, you can do nothing.—Doc. and Cov. 16:4.

Thursday, Jan. 2.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church. Memory Verses.—2 Cor. 8:9-12.

Thursday, Jan. 9.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—Colossians 3:12-17.

Thursday, Jan. 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—Hebrews 13:20, 21.

Thursday, Jan. 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 61:10, 11.

Thursday, Jan. 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 51:3-8.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

WE regret that the "Suggestions for Christmas entertainment" by Sr. Louise Palfrey was so late in appearing in our column. The time taken for mail to reach us and then to reach the Herald Office must always be taken into consideration. We think the article worthy and trust that it may be preserved for future use.

We hope that many may lend their thoughts to our column. We do not believe it is beneath the consideration of any Saint to lend a thought to the Sunday school work.

We read many notices of Sunday school conventions but are not able to learn the address of the secretaries, so are unable to remind them that we are in need of items. Would it not be well for each secretary to name his address in full when sending such notice?

MUCH of the success of the Sunday school hour depends upon the preparation made by the teacher. Little good may be expected if the teacher has not thought of the lesson until Sunday morning, then hurriedly reads over the lesson in order to ask the questions and put in the time. Such course is often pursued by those who claim a devotion to their work. One of my teachers once said to me, "I hope you will excuse me for not being better prepared. My time for studying my lesson is Sunday morning, but to-day I had company, so could not." What could I, as superintendent, do but excuse her, since I knew that she was not the only one who made so ample preparation.

The true teacher loves the work to that extent that she meditates upon it night and day, in search of more light, of better plans, and closer application. She feels the weight of the responsibility; that she is a member of the church—the body of Christ—and is trying to fit others for the same; that she is building for time and eternity; that a false impression given now may influence a whole life; and that she must present truth in the way that she will be willing to meet it. She is not one who does great things, but one who has an eye to the small things that make up the sum of life. She needs to know her class individually; to know them in their homes; and to know their home influences whether helpful or hurtful.

In the preparation of the lesson, she studies it as a whole to determine its objective points and its connection with the other lessons of the quarter. An analysis of its parts will then enable her to divide the word severally according to the needs of each member. She will then question herself, Do I know this lesson myself? Have I absorbed it until it will tell upon my life? What application can I make of this to the needs of that heedless boy whose home training is wanting, or to that wayward girl who is the pride of an indulgent mother's heart, or to that meek child whose very soul delights in heavenly truth?

She, whose heart is thus filled with a love of her work, will be an ideal teacher, though she lacks what the world calls education. We would not underrate the advantages of an education, for we have neither talent nor accomplishment that may not be turned to use in this great work. But no one who loves the work need fear to undertake teaching, for there is a help to which all may turn. The true teacher will seek this help often. She will not think it an idle thing to present her needs and those of her class, and ask for guidance.

Teachers, are we alive to this work? It is a part of the great latter-day work, and we need to let whole-souled work be our daily watchword.

Jets of air discharged from flexible hose are made to do the work of brooms, whisks, and cloths in removing dust and cinders in passenger cars. The hose may readily be carried to any part of a car, and is used in the same manner as an ordinary hose carrying water.

ALLENDALE, Mo., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:—When I wrote you on the 13th regarding the Glendenning-Lambert debate there was one session to be held to finish the first proposition which was done on the 14th, after which a vote of the congregation was taken. Elder Glendenning received sixty-two votes and Elder Lambert ninety-eight. Elder Glendenning and his friends were evidently dissatisfied with the result, for he stated to the congregation, after the vote was taken, that he knew he had been an eyesore to our people around this country, "and," said he, "I suppose you will now be satisfied; but if you can outvote me, you cannot outtalk me." Elder Lambert and his friends were pleased with the outcome; and indeed they could easily afford to be, even with a less victory over the soul-sleeping theory.

The second proposition was commenced on the afternoon of the 16th, Elder Lambert having to affirm it. He presented the faith of the Latter Day Saints in doctrine and church organization in his usual forcible and clean-cut manner, taking the position that the kingdom of God was set up and in its incipency, and that though unobserved, yet it would grow and be prepared to receive Jesus when he comes with the kingdom triumphant in the glory of his Father and with his holy angels. Elder Glendenning took the position that the kingdom of God was not set up, neither would be until the end of the world, when Jesus comes; then it would spring up in its completeness. Considerable scripture evidence was presented by both disputants to sustain their positions. Elder Glendenning did not seem to be satisfied with the way he had left the first proposition before the people, for he kept on defending it, claiming that it was a part of the second. At the close of the last proposition, as in the first one, a vote was taken. Elder Lambert received eighty-three votes and Elder Glendenning ninety. We have reason to know that the Adventists for many miles around this country came to vote and I believe that if we had made the same effort to rally our people for that purpose that they (the Adventists) would not have been in it.

I was disappointed in Elder Glendenning's last speech, for I expected that he would try to make our faith and church organization look ridiculous after the usual fashion of our opponents; but, imagine my surprise when he treated us to a sound Advent sermon on the soul-sleeping dogma. He is a man of ability, worthy a better cause.

I never saw the deceptiveness of Adventism as I did during this debate, yet it is gathering in many bright, intelligent young people. A debate is a fine school of experience, for one can otherwise see how men can and do misinterpret and misapply scripture to gain their points. It may be that tradition and religious education are responsible for this condition of men's minds. It is more pleasant to think so, than to believe that they are willfully dishonest, although it sometimes requires a stretch of faith to do it.

Elder Lambert in his first speech on the last day of the debate gave evidence of his apostleship, for he spoke as one having authority. I am satisfied that the Saints were not the only ones present that felt the inspiration by which he spoke, for when he said with uplifted hand that God knew that he knew that this work was divine and that he would be willing to meet this people before the great God and answer for what he had taught them, I can but faintly describe the feelings felt or the solemnity that rested upon the congregation while he uttered those words under the divine influence, and how the writer felt the importance of the Saints living daily in harmony with the teachings that the elders are giving to the people of the world as the faith and doctrine of the Latter Day Saints. I could see that while conviction may come to the minds of the people how natural it is for them to turn and compare the lives of the Saints with the things taught by the elders, and then comes the trial, for it is not always that they are found to harmonize; but, thank the good Lord, wherever I find the Saints there are some noble men and women among them trying to live and make honorable the name of Latter Day Saint; and while they are sadly in need of an active, live minister here to lead the little band of Saints, there are some noble souls that are doing all they can. The battle is over and the church is still left intact in faith, doctrine, and organization, as the Master intended it should be; and to the writer it never appeared so grand as it does now.

The following were the propositions discussed:—

1. Does the Bible teach that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection, and that the final destiny of the wicked is the cessation of their conscious being? T. E. Glendenning affirms. J. R. Lambert denies.

2. Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the Church of God in fact, and is it in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and Church organization? J. R. Lambert affirms. T. E. Glendenning denies.

TULARE, Cal., Dec. 9.

Editors Herald:—Elders D. L. Harris and Walter Scott came here about October 20, and after making us a short visit, went to Tipton, a small town ten miles south. Bro. John Clark succeeded in getting the Congregational church for them to preach in, the minister giving up his pulpit to them, treating them kindly, and indorsing their words. The congregations were large and attentive, but alas! after awhile there was too much sound doctrine and the minister was afraid his flock would be scattered, so he had the church doors closed; but the way was opened and a comfortable hall given to the elders to use free of charge as long as they wanted it. They continued the meetings, baptized two, and left several investigating.

They were assisted some by E. S. Burton,

Joseph Burton's brother, who to my mind will make one of the ablest ministers in the church if he has the opportunity. He has a large family to support. I long to see the day when he may be free to go out in the ministry, having faith that he will accomplish a good work.

After the meetings were closed at Tipton the elders visited the Saints at Tulare and vicinity, giving us strength by their counsel and cheering words. They preached a few times ten miles west of Tulare, starting for home December 2, being called on business. We are expecting them back again. They will receive a hearty welcome from the Saints.

INDEPENDENCE, MO., Dec. 19.

Editors Herald:—I thought that a few lines in answer to those inquiring after the price of lands in this part of the country, or in the regions round about, would not be amiss. I am glad to see so many turn their attention towards this part of the country. Many families of the Saints have moved into this district of late, and I am glad to see it, as this is a great help in spreading the good work, and the traveling ministers can find better opportunities to open up the work. I believe the time has come when the Saints should take more interest in buying farm lands and making a living for themselves and families, rather than crowding into large cities to drag out an existence and be in poverty all the days of their lives. The man who lives in a city depending on days' work, and in dull times is out of employment, is a poor man indeed but, I believe that when Saints make a move it should be as the Lord has directed—by the counsel of the Bishop.

The price of land near Independence and Lee's Summit, Missouri, is rather high. Highly improved land is worth from forty to seventy dollars per acre. Unimproved land can be bought from fifteen to thirty dollars per acre. In Johnson county good farm land can be bought at very reasonable prices—from fifteen to thirty and thirty-five dollars per acre, and well improved and reasonably near large towns and cities such as Pleasant Hill, Holden, Warrensburg, and Knobnoster, Missouri; and people who would be willing to go out in the country, perhaps ten to twelve and fifteen miles, can purchase land cheap; and it is just as good land, and some of it a great deal better than near some of those places mentioned.

I am very anxious to see the church built up in this part of the land, but I would not like to see any come in here to suffer by making an unwise move. It would be well for the Saints who expect to move into the regions round about, to have all things prepared before them. I understand that to mean that we should be so prepared that we should not be a burden to our brethren or any other people. I have seen Saints who have moved to Independence because they thought that was the place they ought to live to receive the blessings of God, and who sold out the few things they had at a sacrifice, and arrived here without one cent of money to buy bread for themselves, and perhaps have large families; and the first man they wanted to see on arrival would be the Bishop's agent, of course. I do not wonder at the Lord giving us instructions in reference to those things as well as in other things, and when we heed his counsel then we are blessed, and we will make no mistakes.

I am pleased to say that the work in this district is in a very good condition spiritually. We are advancing in numbers and in prestige; and, taking a retrospective view of the condition of the church in those parts, I believe we have reached a higher standard than ever before. Our aim and object is to go still higher and higher, until we become a light to our neighbors. The prospects are good for organizing more branches in the district, and I hope the day is not far off when we shall have branches in every city and town in this district.

The Saints at Holden expect to build a church soon. At their meeting the other evening I advised them not to go in debt, and the intention is to have the means in hand before they begin the building. I wish them success.

Yours in bonds,
RODERICK MAY.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:—Permit us to call the attention of your readers to the present situation regarding "Age of Consent" legislation. Up to 1886, the age of consent of girls was fixed by our law at TEN YEARS. In 1886, a bill was presented to raise it to eighteen; but it met with such opposition that all that could be done was to raise the age to thirteen, at which it now stands.

At the last session of the Legislature, a bill was again introduced to fix the age at eighteen; and numerous petitions from every part of the State in its favor were sent in to both Houses. The Senate committee to which it was referred promptly reported, recommending that it be indefinitely postponed; but through the efforts of its friends, it was again referred, and finally, after being amended to fifteen, it passed the Senate unanimously; but even this bill was not allowed to come to a vote in the House.

The only objection to the bill worthy of notice was that it provided no protection for boys; and, while this omission would not work injury to one boy where the present law injures a hundred girls, it seemed a sufficient argument with many of the members to defeat the bill, notwithstanding an amendment covering this point was submitted.

A bill to raise the age to eighteen, and limiting its application to boys over eighteen, thus giving equal protection to both sexes, will be presented at the earliest possible day after the Legislature convenes in January. From replies received from over four fifths of the members, to an inquiry sent out by us, we are certain that the bill will become a law at the coming session, provided the people of the State will satisfy the Legislature that they desire it to be done. Of the replies received, nearly a majority of both Houses have given assurances of support for the bill; while the indications from many more are that they will also support it, if they have reason to believe that their constituents are on that side.

There can be only one side to this question among the good people of Iowa, and there are very few people of any other kind among us. There has been a great awakening of public sentiment upon this question during the past two years; a number of members who opposed the bill two years ago have promised their support for this bill, while others say that they will carry out the wishes of their constituents. Strong resolutions favoring the passage of the bill have been passed by the State conventions of many of the leading religious denominations and of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor and the Epworth League. But this should be supplemented by active, personal work in each locality. Such of the members as may be halting between two opinions, and those who are waiting for their constituents to take action, cannot be expected to champion this cause unless they are satisfied that their constituents really desire it; therefore circulate petitions, and, what is of equal importance, write personal letters to both your senator and representative now, urging them to give this matter their especial attention during the first week of the session, so that it can be passed and gotten out of the way before the regular business comes on. Write your letters and forward your petitions at once that your members will know your wishes before they go to Des Moines, and will be ready to act as soon as action can be taken.

If each person who reads this will act as if the success of the bill depended upon him alone, it will be passed within a week after the Legislature gets down to work; and the people of Iowa will no longer have reason to be ashamed of their present barbarous law; for their State will then stand in the front rank, along with New York, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, and Arizona, in the matter of suitably protecting its daughters.

FONTANELLE, Iowa, Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—I have just closed a series of meetings here, being assisted by Bro. S. Butler, who has been laboring in this part of the district for some time. The attendance has not been large, but the attention by those who did come to hear has been very good. A few not of the faith showed their appreciation by being promptly at each service, and we trust the word spoken will find lodgment in their hearts for their conversion to Christ. The few Saints here are striving amidst prejudice and various obstacles to keep up regular meetings and Sunday school, having procured the use of the Seventh-day Adventist church for Sundays, at a reasonable remuneration.

Bro. Butler has labored faithfully here and in the surrounding country for over two years, resulting in a few additions to the church and in a better understanding of our doctrine by those who cared to know. His efforts have been materially aided by his noble companion, and together they have gained the respect of the people. I believe that by a continued effort by the missionary force the work here can be established more fully. Bro. T. W. Williams, who made a flying visit here last spring, is remembered by some, and they would like to hear him again.

The work throughout the district is in fair condition, yet not moving with as much speed as we would like to see. At the present rate it will take a long time to bring the gospel to all nations and people. But, thank God for the testimony that the work is his. With that assurance we can afford to leave it all in his care, knowing all will be well provided if we be found occupying as he has intrusted to us.

PILOT OAK, Ky., Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—The way seems to be opening in the South for preaching. I find the people anxious to hear, except in old places where the people have heard the elders until they have got tired and want to freeze us out. I have been feeding them out of the same spoon this year and have been in new fields most all the time. This of course is my duty as a missionary to labor in new fields.

I can see some improvements in this district this year. Most all the labor that has been done for the last twenty years has been done in four or five places and this accounts for the freezeouts I guess; but under the wise counsel of Bro. T. C. Kelley and a little aid from the writer we have been induced to push out.

I don't want to be accused of faultfinding, but when I read the Herald and see those under conference appointment, some of them always telling us about the kindness of the Saints to them, how they minister to their wants, what Bro. B. did and Sr. C. said when he put in his appearance, and what lovely times, and he expects to go thence to such a branch, thence to the reunion, thence to the district conference, thence to the General Conference, thence home to stay a few weeks with loved ones, then back on the old track again, and all the time enjoying the hospitality of the Saints and telling what good things the Saints have done for them, I begin to think the branch officers have nothing to do only to make fires and invite the people out to hear the big guns, as some call them. If they will get out among strangers awhile then give their experience as a missionary it won't look so much like courting favor from the Saints.

Now I have known elders to whom the church has given missions and supported their families, who get to their fields of labor and make it a point to get into the old branches and probably travel through one whole State in order to get to some old branch. Now, do you think that if you were farming and were to lay off your field and planted the corn in but one little corner—do you think it would grow all over the field? Abraham went out, not knowing where he was going, but some of the elders have to know that some of the Saints live in the country before they can venture.

Some local elders are standing idle forgetting that it is their duty to labor as circumstances permit. I am sorry to say that in this district only a few observe the law of tithing. Let us remember that obeying the gospel means keeping the whole law. Now if some one don't jump on this with both feet I may write again.

Yours in the faith,

C. L. SNOW.

EUCLID, Ark., Dec. 15.

Editors Herald:—I thought your readers would be pleased to hear from the Arkansas traveler and of his labors. I have not met with as much success as I desired. I have labored in eight different counties in the State. I find friends most everywhere I go with now and then an accession to the church. The Saints have been kind to me, especially those of Midway, Bearie, Ogamaw, Stockton, Story, Coal Hill, and Hunt, Arkansas.

I am now at home, reading the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, also "The Antiquities of America" and "Discoveries in the West," the author's name torn out of book. Can some one give me the name? I now have a call to go to Stockton to baptize some. I have not been able to fill all calls received. Hope those I have not responded to will be met yet in due time.

WILLIAMSDALE, Nova Scotia, Dec. 12.

Editors Herald:—We are not dead in Nova Scotia by any means. The weather has been somewhat against us, nevertheless we have succeeded in holding a number of meetings in several places. Have baptized two since last writing and expect to baptize a few more next week. Those united with us were Srs. Mary A. Taylor and Isee J. Johnson, known among the traveling ministry for their hospitality and kindness; a feature of all the Williamsdale people.

The church is progressing finely, paying as we go. Bro. Hazen Johnson, the chief carpenter, had the misfortune to have his hand badly cut on the planer a few days ago, but is now doing well. Hope to see him at work again in a few weeks. Bro. Robley has proven a valuable helper to me in this field and has done splendid work for the cause in this country. We will all be sorry to have him leave for home, but am thankful the Saints have responded to my request in last letter and have provided him with the necessary means. The Lord will reward them. We were together at Amherst, where we came in contact with a zealous people who are having miracles and revelations galore; plenty of power, but denying the gospel form thereof; howbeit the two powers met, much to the confirmation of the Saints and the opening of the eyes of some that are investigating our claims. I tell you this is a beautiful gospel to defend; it comes out ahead every time.

Bro. Robley and I then separated, he going to Fort Laurence, a new opening made by Sr. Lois Graham. He writes me to-day that the war is on with him.

I went to Spring Hill, a town of five thousand population, also a new place, where I succeeded in getting one newspaper and three ecclesiastical guns leveled at our position, with the promise of more upon the evening of the 19th inst. from the Presbyterian stand. However, I had two good meetings besides the two that Bro. Robley and I held the Sunday previous, also got a good article in the paper with epitome of the faith, and am billed to reply to Mr. Wright, the Presbyterian, on the 20th. So goes the battle.

BY W. W. BLAIR.

YE men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.—Acts 1: 11.

Mr. Henry Varley, the noted English Evangelist, a minister who has traveled and preached and lectured in many parts of the Christian world, states for a fact that "there never was such deep conviction in regard to the immanence of the Lord's second coming as that which exists in 1895." He further says:—

There is literally a consensus of testimony amongst the students of the Prophetic Scriptures such as never has existed before that the time is fulfilled, and that the Lord's descent into the air in the near future is as certain as the fixed stars.

Mr. Varley seems to associate the second advent of our Lord with the end of "the times of the Gentiles," for he says:—

Many of us have long known that we are in the very latest years of the times of the Gentiles, but from lack of heavenly data we knew not actually how very near the time is. Mr. Dimpleby has proved alike from scriptural and astronomic data that these times run out in April, 1899.

The late Prophetic Conference held in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, almost to a man were sure the second advent was nigh at hand; but there was, nevertheless, much diversity of sentiment amongst them upon many points connected with that august event and revealed clearly that they, too, lacked "heavenly data" to guide them unerringly along the pathway of investigation. They wisely fixed no time, near or remote, for the Lord's coming, and claimed to be guided alone by their respective interpretations of Scriptures assumed to relate to that event.

Mr. Charles T. Russell, author of the Millennial Dawn, on page 99 of Vol. 2, claims to have sufficient "heavenly data" to warrant him in the following important conclusion:—

We consider it an established truth that the final end of the kingdoms of this world, and the full establishment of the Kingdom of God will be accomplished by the end of A. D. 1914.

Speculation, theorizing, and fixing dates for the second advent have increased rapidly since "Millerism," in 1832 and after, located 1843 as the certain time ordained of God when the Lord Jesus would appear in glory; and it is probably within the lines of truth to say that, by the Adventists many scores of times have been fixed when Christ would come in fulfillment of recorded prophecies, and all have failed.

From the foregoing it is painfully evident that, though there is general unity in the belief that the second advent of Christ is near, there is, nevertheless, with some a great lack of essential understanding and divine light on this momentous subject.

The Holy Scriptures assure us that the Lord's people, in the time of the second advent, will be equally as well enlightened on that event as were his people who lived in the time of the first advent in respect to that event. The words of Paul are very clear and comforting on that point and apply directly to his "brethren" living in the time of the advent:—

But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.—1 Thess. 4: 13-18.

But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.—1 Thess. 5: 1-6.

When we consider that the Lord, at all times in the past, when great events were to occur with which his people were to be connected, revealed to them directly the coming of such events, not only "the times and seasons" when they would occur, but also every essential fact profitable for them to know, it is reasonable to expect that, in regard to "the great and dreadful day of the Lord," terminating in the glorious coming of Christ and all his saints, he will thoroughly enlighten and instruct his people, then living, so that that day shall not overtake them unawares, but that they shall be well prepared for it and for all the important matters connected with it.

When the Lord would dismantle the world with the flood, he revealed his will to Noah and his house during one hundred and twenty years, and when the supreme moment for closing the ark arrived, immediate revelation made known that fact and secured Noah and his family against the destruction that overwhelmed the wicked.

When the Lord would destroy Sodom and Gomorrah, he revealed that fact to faithful Abraham and family, and in due time made the same fact known to righteous Lot and his house by immediate revelation and instructed them when and how to escape the impending doom.

When the time came for Israel to be delivered from Egyptian bondage, the Lord revealed that fact and gave needed instruction from time to time to his people until they passed over into Canaan.

When the seventy years' captivity in Babylon was nearly ended, the Lord made it known to Daniel and other faithful Hebrews, and raised up Ezra, Nehemiah, and others, to whom were revealed directly the will of the Lord in respect to the return of the Jews to Jerusalem, their organization under the law of Moses, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

When the time drew near for the first advent of Christ, whose coming then was to be in the character of "the perfect teacher of perfect truth," the "man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief," to offer himself a sacrifice for sin; to bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, ascend on high and give to faithful men divine assurance of immortality and eternal life, the Lord revealed his will to faithful men and women, identifying the time, the means, and all the essential items pertaining to that advent, and this he did by angel ministration to Zacharias the priest, to Mary the mother of Jesus, and to Joseph to whom she was espoused, to the shepherds who watched their flocks by night on the plains of Bethlehem, and by the spirit of prophecy and revelation the Lord made it known to Simeon and Anna and to John the Baptist, and by the luminous "star" he identified Christ in his first advent to the "wise men" from the far-off "east"; and may we not expect that the times of the second advent, and the principal events preceding and leading up to it will be revealed of God to the Saints then living, that they may be prepared in all things needful, so as to be ready, waiting, and able to abide the awful conditions preceding and attending "the great day of the Lord"?

The written, recorded word of the Lord relating to the deliverance of God's people from Egypt and from Babylon was then of high value to his people and to others, but there was added to that the direct revelation of God's will to the people living when such deliverance was at hand, to instruct, assure, and confirm. The recorded words of prophets, seers, and wise men were of great worth at the time of Christ's first advent; but more light, more direct and particular information, more instruction in detail were needed, and the Lord graciously added angel ministrations and direct revelation in many other ways for the guidance, edification, and comfort of his people. And will not the Lord, in and just preceding the times of the second advent, give direct and special light on all essential matters pertaining to that event? Will not angels minister in those times to the Lord's faithful people? And will not the Holy Spirit teach of "things to come" and "guide into all truth"? Will not the Lord make sure and certain to his faithful people "the times and the seasons" of Christ's second advent? the important events preceding and connected therewith? and will he not fully and specially prepare and point out to his people the way of the Lord when he "shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ"? Yes; the Holy Scriptures prove with great fullness that he will, as we shall now see.

The Lord has made known through the Prophet Malachi the following facts in regard to the second and glorious appearing of Christ; and one of the most important items is the promise that "Elijah the prophet" (doubtless in the capacity of an angel), shall be sent to the Lord's people for their enlightenment "before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord." Here is the full text:—

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: and he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.—Malachi 4: 1-6.

The above scripture reveals clearly that, prior to the second advent, the Lord will graciously instruct his people through the administration of the translated prophet Elijah, who will "turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I [the Lord] come and smite the earth with a curse."

It is no more strange that the Prophet Elijah shall be a ministering angel just before Christ's second coming, than that one of the apostle John's "brethren" ministered to him as an angel on the isle of Patmos, when he said,

I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren that have the testimony of Jesus.

Chief among the early Methodists was Charles Wesley, a great Bible student and the poet of that band of reformers, who put their faith and doctrine into songs and spiritual hymns and sang thus of Elijah's latter-day mission:—

Once he in the Baptist came,
And virtue's path restored;
Pointed sinners to the Lamb—
Forerunner of his Lord.

Sent again from paradise,
Elijah shall the tidings bring;
Jesus comes; ye saints arise
And meet your heavenly King.

Previous to the dreadful day
Which shall thy foes consume,
Jesus, prepare thy way,
Let the last prophet come.

When the seventh trumpet's sound
Proclaims the grand Sabbatic year;
Come thyself with glory crowned,
And reign triumphant here.

Our Savior, in Matthew 24: 31, informs us that his angels will minister just prior to the second advent in gathering the saints, saying:—

And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

To the above may be added his further promise, in Matthew 13: 41, concerning the ministering of angels among his people in the latter days:—

The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity.

Turning now to the Revelation of St. John we find many unmistakable proofs that the angels of heaven will minister to men on earth in the latter days preparatory to the second coming of our Lord, and I now offer of the many directly bearing on the point under consideration a few of the most important:—

And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication. And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb; and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name. Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus. And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them. And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle. And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for the to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe. And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped. And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle. And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe. And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God. And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs. —Revelation 14: 6-20.

Here, then, are no less than three angels mentioned who minister prior to the appearance of "the Son of Man" on the "white cloud;" one of whom restores "the everlasting gospel" that it may be preached unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come.

Surely this is preparatory to the advent, for the gospel in its fullness cannot be preached and leave out the glorious appearing of Christ, the resurrection of the righteous dead, and the separation of the righteous and the wicked, which involves the idea of judgment and rewards.

Let the reader reflect fully and calmly on the importance and the magnitude of the work involved in the restoration of the gospel as preparatory to the coming and kingly reign of our Lord on earth. Let due thought be given the angel's mission, of verse 8, in authoritatively proclaiming the impending downfall of latter-day Babylon with all its attendant tribulations and horrors. And, let all reflect well and wisely on the high responsibility laid on all men in verses 9 and 10 to shun fellowship with the errors and evils of Babylon. This done, and it will be readily seen how important that the Lord shall send his angels to instruct his people in regard to their environments, coming events, special duty and privilege, and thus protect, comfort, and confirm them in the ways and doings of the Lord, inspiring the souls of his "saints" with needed "patience" to "keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus" as they move up nearer and nearer to the supreme moment when the opening heavens will reveal the coming King of kings in power and great glory and all the holy angels with him.

Another Bible proof that God will send his angels in the latter days, preceding the coming of Christ, to prepare his people then living for all things that await them, and also that he will send them his word by revelation from heaven giving timely instruction how, when, and what to do, is seen in the following:—

And after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; and the earth was lightened with his glory. And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies. And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities.—Revelation 18: 1-5.

And are we indeed living in the last days? in the days of the coming of the Son of man? If so, to whom has the angel committed "the everlasting gospel"? To whom has the angel declared the downfall of Babylon? To whom has Elijah appeared and ministered in a work to "turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers"? To whom have the angels come and ministered in the great work of gathering the Lord's people? To whom have the angels come in the work of separating the wicked from among the righteous? To whom have the angels announced the speedy coming of our Lord and the great events preceding and attendant upon that coming? Certainly to none who either reject or ignore angel ministrations and direct revelation from God in these last days.

In another number I will seek to give incontestable proof that the Lord has sent his angels to minister to his people and has given direct revelation to them to prepare them in these days for "the great day of the Lord" and for the second coming of Christ our Savior.

GLENDENNING AND LAMBERT DEBATE.

HAVING been authoritatively requested to furnish some additional items for publication, I herewith present my summaries with a statement of the leading positions on the other side. I would be pleased to have Elder Glendenning's summaries published with mine; but as he presented no recapitulation in manuscript, nor from notes, we did not ask him to supply them according to his own notion after the debate was all over.

The first proposition debated reads as follows:—

Does the Bible teach that man is wholly mortal and unconscious between death and the resurrection, and that the final destiny of the wicked is the cessation of their conscious being?

Elder Glendenning claimed that man, the whole man, was made from the dust, (Genesis 2: 7,) and that anything which he received additional to this dust man, was and is no part of man proper.

This dust man goes down into the grave.

For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?—Psalms 6: 5.

At the time of death man's "thoughts perish."

The living know that they shall die; but the dead know not any thing.—Ecc. 9: 5, 6. (See also Psalms 146: 4.)

Elder Glendenning touched the question so lightly, and especially unconsciousness after death and the final destiny of the wicked, that I felt it to be necessary to set up a counter claim in order to bring the question into proper examination before the people. So I at once set up the claim that man is a duality; that spirit (sometimes called soul) lives on after death, and that the final destiny of the wicked is not the cessation of their conscious being. The following is my summary, but does not, of course, contain anything near all the positions held, nor the scriptures used:—

1. Man was created in the image of God, and was called man before there was a man on the face of the earth. (Gen. 1: 26, 27; 2: 1-9.)

2. This spirit-man, who was created in the image of the immortal God, must necessarily partake of the character of the Creator, hence is immortal. (Gen. 5: 1; 9: 6; Eph. 4: 22-24; Col. 3: 9, 10; Acts 17: 29.)

3. Man was made only a little lower than the angels, who are glorified and immortal beings. The fall did not take away his immortality any more than the transgression of the angels who kept not their first estate caused them to lose their immortality. They are now demons, but they are immortal; so, likewise, in the fall, man's character was greatly changed, but he did not lose his immortality. (Psalms 8: 4, 5; Job 7: 17, 18; Luke 20: 34-36.)

4. God formed the spirit within man. It possesses volition, or will power. It is the active, conscious, thinking part of man, and all the passions and qualities which belong to the human mind are ascribed to it. (Zech. 12: 1; Job 32: 8; 1 Cor. 2: 11; Ex. 35: 21; Math. 26: 41; 2 Cor. 7: 1; Romans 1: 9; 1 Cor. 7: 34; 6: 20, with about thirty-eight other passages of scripture as found in "What is Man?" page 66.) These passages show that spirit is a noun, not an adjective, and the adjectives and verbs show the character of the spirit, and what it can do.

5. This spirit is an important part of man. It was called man before the body was created; God gave it to man, or formed it within him.

The personal pronouns used to denote the spirit, are frequently found in the possessive case, as, "my spirit," "his spirit," "your spirit," "his own spirit," "thy spirit," etc.

The spirit of "the man Christ Jesus" "perceived," "rejoiced," and "sorrowed;" and at death he committed it into the hands of his Father. This was the spirit for which a body had been prepared, the one which dwelt in glory with the Father before the world was made.

The spirit is the subject of regeneration and salvation.

God requires us to purify both body and spirit, and serve him with both.

The spirit is called man; or the "inner" or "inward man." (Ecc. 12: 7; Zech. 12: 1; Psalms 77: 6; Daniel 2: 1; 1 Cor. 6: 20; Prov. 25: 28; 1 Kings 21: 5; Mark 2: 8; Luke 10: 21; Jno. 11: 33; Luke 23: 46; Heb. 10: 5; Jno. 17: 5; 3: 6; 1 Jno. 3: 9; 5: 18; 1 Cor. 5: 5; 2 Cor. 7: 1; 12: 1-4; 4: 16; Romans 7: 22; 1 Peter: 3: 4; Eph. 3: 15, 16.)

6. Spirit and soul, spirits and souls, are sometimes used synonymously and interchangeably. They are so used when reference is had to the "inner man." (John 4: 24; 2 Cor. 3: 17; Isa. 1: 14; Jer. 6: 8; Acts 17: 16; Luke 23: 46; Job 14: 22; Matt. 10: 28; Luke 8: 54, 55; Daniel 7: 15; 3 John 2; 1 Kings 17: 21, 22; Isa. 26: 9; Job 7: 11; 1 Peter 3: 19.)

In the last scripture cited we learn that Christ preached to the spirits in prison; and in the Peshito-Syriac Version we read that he "preached to those souls which were detained in hades," etc.

7. This vast amount of excellent proof, with another argument which my opponent has been unable to meet, proves that the spirit of man is a conscious entity, whether in or out of the body. If it were only an element, as our opponents contend, then it would have no plural form; but it is used both in the singular and plural forms; that is, we read of "a spirit," "the spirit," and we read of "spirits." (Job 32: 8; Numbers 16: 22; 27: 15, 16; Heb. 12: 9.)

8. Scripture already cited shows that the spirit which God formed within man is called "man," and the "inward man." (Rom. 7: 22-25; 2 Cor. 4: 16; 1 Peter 3: 4; 2 Cor. 12: 1-4.)

When this spirit, or soul, is transformed by the power of the gospel, it is always called the "new man," agreeing with John 3: 6,

That which is born of the Spirit is spirit.

The regenerated or converted person is never called the inner, or inward man, as falsely claimed by my opponent. (Col. 2: 11, 12; Eph. 4: 22-24; 2 Cor. 5: 17.)

The last quotation says,

If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature, etc.

9. The wicked enemies of Christ could kill the bodies of the disciples, but they could not kill their souls. Therefore, the soul is immortal—deathless.

(Matt. 10: 28; Luke 12: 4, 5; 3 John 1, 2.)

10. Death does not imply unconsciousness, or the annihilation of conscious being—but, rather, separation, departure, or a great change in the conditions of conscious existence. (1 Tim. 5:6; Rev. 3:1; Jude 12; Rom. 6: 18-20; Eph. 2:1-6; Rom. 8:6, 7.)

Paul called his death a departure. (2 Tim. 4:6; Phil. 1:21-24.)

11. "The man Christ Jesus," was the true type of all other men, in life and in death. He lived in glory with God, the father, before the world was. All things were made by him. His life was a union of body and spirit, and his death was a separation of body and spirit. (Gen. 1:26; Col. 1:16; Jno. 1:10; Eph. 3:9; Heb. 1:1-6; Jno. 1:1-5; 14:6; 17:5; Heb. 10:5; Rom. 8:3; Phil. 2:7, 8; Jno. 12:23, 24; 10:17, 18; 16:27, 28; 17:11; Luke 23:46.)

12. We begin to receive eternal life when we obey the gospel, and it continues with us till the resurrection if we remain faithful to God. (Jno. 5:24; Eph. 2:1-6; 1 Jno. 5:11, 12; Rom. 8:35-39; 1 Jno. 3:14, 15; Jno. 11:26; 8:51.)

13. Christ after having been put to death in the flesh, went and preached to the spirits in prison. That these spirits lived in the days of Noah, while the ark was being prepared. (1 Peter 3:18-20; 4:6.)

That Christ did this preaching in fulfillment of prophecy. (Isa. 42:6, 7; 49:8, 10; 61:1, 2; Zech. 9:11, 12.)

14. When Paul died, he expected to "be with Christ," which he thought to be far better than to remain in the flesh, or to live. He was in a "straight betwixt two;" and such a thing as translation that he should not see death, does not enter into the account at all, except as it is put in by our opponents as a necessary support to their theory. (Phil. 1:21-24.)

15. Paul believed that a man is conscious out of the body. Was Paul right? Can his theology be depended upon? (2 Cor. 12:1-4.)

16. Moses and John the Baptist, the Elias which was to come, appeared unto Christ in the holy mount, after their death and before their resurrection. (Matt. 17:1-9; Deut. 34:5, 6; Joshua 1:1, 2; 1 Cor. 15:20; Acts 26:23; Rev. 1:5.)

17. Part of the family of God was in heaven in the days of Paul; the other part, of course, was on the earth. (Eph. 3:14, 15.)

18. "Destroy," "perish," and such like words, do not imply a destruction of consciousness when applied to man. (Gen. 7:4, 23; Luke 17:29, 30; Jude 7; 2 Thess. 1:7-9; 1 Peter 3:18-20; Jno. 2:19, 21; Job 19, 10; Hosea 4:6; 13:9; Jer. 51:8; Daniel 2:18; Luke 15:17; Eccles. 7:15; Job 34:14; Matt. 10:6; John 17:12; 2 Peter 3:6, 7; Heb. 1:11, 12.)

19. The souls under the altar, after their death and before their resurrection, were conscious. (Rev. 6:9-11; 8:3; 9:13.)

Elder Glendenning did not reply to numbers 11, 17, and 19 at all while we were debating the first proposition; but near the close of the second proposition he made a faint attack on the preëxistence of Christ, the souls under the altar, and part of the family of God being in heaven; but his attacks simply served to bring out the strength and consistency of our positions.

Christ knew no sin, therefore was not conscious of sin! Souls under the altar. It is a vision. A representation of something future. No present reality about it. Elder Glendenning was informed that Christ knew no sin in the sense of giving way to temptation and sinning; but that he was exceedingly sensitive concerning sin, and highly conscious of the sinfulness of all sin. That, comparatively, the same is true of all who are "dead to sin," that is, separated from it. That while John "saw the dead, small and great, stand before God," yet the angel which showed him those things was an actual, living angel—a present reality.

A vote was taken, resulting in sixty-two for the affirmative, and ninety-eight for the negative. No preparation had been made for a vote by our people, for it was not known till the close of the debate on this proposition that a vote would be taken. More than one half—perhaps two thirds—of the vote on our side, was made up of outsiders. I think it is perfectly safe to say that there were more Adventists present than Latter Day Saints. Thus it will be seen that on this proposition we had a majority vote thirty-six. Elder Glendenning felt sore over the matter, made a little speech in which he raised a whine, and reflected seriously on the judgment of the people.

HAWS-SHORT DEBATE.

Sometime last summer one Silas J. Short of the "Church of Christ," after defeating the Rev. Potter of the United Baptist Church, was asked by Potter why he did not debate with Elder G. V. Moore of the Latter Day Saints, to which he replied that he would debate with him or any other man they would produce which brought about the following discussion.

Propositions were agreed upon. The Rev. Short would not agree to discuss any other subjects but the ones agreed upon, as follows: Resolved that the church I represent and stand identified with is the Church of Christ. S. J. Short affirms; A. Haws denies. Resolved that the church I represent and stand identified with is the Church of Christ. A. Haws affirms; S. J. Short denies.

The debate began December 3, in the Christian Church, in the town of Blaine, Kentucky. Both disputants were promptly on hand. Elder Short opened by saying he did not court controversy but did not wish to be henpecked around, and if he was not right he wanted to be set right and if wrong in any particular he wanted to be righted. He said he knew there was a diversity of beliefs in the world; he was going to take his stand on the primitive church and stand or fall thereon. This church was founded because of unbelief. The law of Moses was only the shadow of things to come. The Christian dispensation has its peculiarities and must be rightly divided. Things "spoken unto us by his Son" in these last days; we must notice that they belong exclusively to this age. Anything commanded under the Jewish dispensation is not binding on us unless spoken especially for the people in the last days and subsequent to the day of Pentecost and the setting up of the church or kingdom of God, the one that should never fall away, because he says he would be with his Apostles always, even unto the end of the world. The kingdom of Christ commenced when he was crowned king, after his crucifixion. John the Baptist was not a member of the Church of Christ. If a man is in the kingdom he must know it. Give me a church that you may know by its works.

Elder Haws opened by stating that we were called Mormons, but this was a mistake, as we had done more to put down polygamy than all other churches combined. He claimed we had the same right to establish a church as anyone else. The brother has failed to identify himself with any church. Matthew 16; 1 Corinthians 12:28. Quoted Christ's commission, Mark 16:16. Christ did establish his church before his crucifixion. (Matthew 16; Luke 10:1, 2; Acts 2:47.) Christ came to establish his church. Now let my brother establish his so I may have something to reply to.

Elder Short said he had a right to go his own way. Denied Jesus establishing his kingdom while on earth. Jesus' kingdom not of this world. Questioned Bro. Haws' honesty: denied Christ calling his apostles before the kingdom was established. The gospel of Christ and the gospel of the kingdom different. The twelve only to preach repentance and remission of sins until after Christ's death and to tell no man that he was the Christ. The kingdom of Christ only existed in prophecy until after his death. Christ kept the law of Moses until his death; no other saving law until his death. Christ's commission given, Matthew 28; Mark 16: 15, 16. John did not baptize in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Jesus said they should be baptized not many days hence with the Holy Ghost.

Elder Haws read the proposition and showed conclusively that Rev. Short had failed to set up a church or show any connection whatever with the "Church of Christ;" therefore he had nothing to say until his church was set up. He gave his time until this was done.

Elder Short said we had met to prove his identity to the "Church of Christ." We have no human name. No man has a right to establish a church. God has a right to damn a man for establishing a church, Jesus established a church. The law of life was given through the Apostles. (Galatians 1:8.) The same gospel extends to us. This gospel was to fall away after the death of the Apostles, in the adoption of creeds by men uninspired. We believe and teach the same as the apostles, and expect it to produce the same effect. Has the gospel been continued since the Apostles? I belong to the Church of Christ, not reorganized, but the old original. The only thing now is to show that we are practicing the same ordinances as the apostles. We want no Seventies, as they were only necessary prior to the organization of the church. In regard to the falling away, I claim the church went into the wilderness and emerged into the Roman Catholic Church, but there was a succession of good men until now.

Elder Haws.—My brother has laid some foundation at last, in his succession of good men. These good men spoken of by my opponent he has not identified with the church that went into the wilderness, neither has he shown that they had authority to administer in the ordinances of the Church of Christ. A man cannot become a member of Christ's Church without obeying the initiatory ordinances thereof; and these ordinances can only be administered by legally qualified officers of the Church of Christ. We deny that the Bible alone gives this authority; therefore these good men could not receive any authority whatever from the New Testament—by the reading thereof, or by taking the Bible for their only rule of action, as claimed by my opponent. In regard to the church emerging into the Catholic Church, I deny. (Revelation, chapters 12 and 17.) For if the Catholic Church is the wilderness, or the place prepared of God for the woman (the Church) to remain a "thousand two hundred and three-score days," then the Catholic Church is the Church of Christ until that time shall expire, and out of which we must expect the church to emerge. These good men having denounced and repudiated the Catholic Church and all other churches said, Let us take the Bible and go back to the Jerusalem Church. Now I claim that in doing this they lost all authority, either from the Catholic Church or from the Bible; for if the Catholic Church had authority to give, she had authority to take away; and she most assuredly excommunicated all heretics.

Elder Short.—An intelligent man would not ask how a man got into the church, for in Revelation 22: 17 we read, "Let him that heareth say Come;" and also, "as many as the Lord our God shall call." (Acts 2: 39.) This has reference to the call of the ministry. My opponent wants to know who has the right to preach and baptize. Anyone who has obeyed the gospel—man, woman, or child, has this right. (Acts 11: 19; also 18: 24-28; Hebrews 5: 11-13; 2 Tim. 2: 15.) I might die and go to hell waiting to find who had authority.

Elder Haws said that Revelation 22: 17 says "come" instead of "go," which could not have had reference to the sending of the ministry. (Romans 10: 15-17; Hebrews 5: 4.) The ministry were called for four thousand one hundred years either by direct revelation or by visitation of angels, without an exception. I now demand to know where Alexander Campbell, or anyone else, gets their authority to preach if not as Aaron? Was it from the following quotations: Mathew 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 15, 16? Now if these give any person authority, it is by reading them. Therefore, God being no respecter of persons, this gives all who read these quotations equal authority one with the other; men, women, and children. And when reading of Apostles, Seventies, or elders, they receive the same authority they are reading about; and everyone that reads of these officers would come in possession of the offices read of. These quotations, therefore, could only be applicable to the eleven apostles. My opponent says he recognizes no human agency in the setting up of his church. In answer to this read Ephesians 4: 11-14.

Elder Short.—There can only be one high priest at a time, but we are all kings and priests. (Rev. 1: 6; 5: 10; 1 Peter 2: 5-9.) The only sure foundation is on the revelations of God. Our apostles are found only in the New Testament Scriptures. We need none now. The divine authority is extended through them to us. Christ is our head; we have no creed, no articles of faith.

Elder Haws.—If all are kings and priests, where are the subjects? Why lay on hands to ordain the ministry if the authority extends through the apostles? My opponent accuses me of adding to the Bible. Which is the greater sin, to add to or take from? He has taken from until he has only elders, overseers and deacons left. On apostasy read Isaiah 24: 29; 60: 2; Matthew 11: 12; 2 Thesalonians 2: 3-7; Rev. 12: 1-6; 13: 5-8. I want my opponent to show what officers his church is composed of.

Elder Short.—My opponent wants to know who took the apostles out of the church. They died like the little pig on the clover. He wants to know what officers are in our church. We have overseers, elders, evangelists, and deacons. We have the right to select some of the officers, but apostles we do not need. On apostasy, I claim the church went into the wilderness, but it came out again through the Reformers. All denominations have some good in them. I believe there could be a unity of the faith brought about if it were not for the preachers. Alexander Campbell said the Reformers never got in gunshot of the truth and only built cob pens and said, "Let us throw them down and go back to the Jerusalem Church." I have now sustained my position that I am in harmony with the Church of Christ, and shall now close my affirmative.

Elder Haws closed his denial by quoting 2 John 1: 9; John 7: 16, 17, showing that the Church of Christ as represented by his opponent has transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant. My opponent says that laying on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost was only conferred on the apostles to give them power to perform miracles, which could not be performed by any but an apostle. Read Hebrews 6: 2; Acts 8: 15-19; 19: 6; 9: 17. Concerning spiritual gifts. My opponent says these are not for us and quotes, "whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." In answer to this read 1 Corinthians 12. My opponent says signs were only to follow the believer in the apostles' day. Read Mark 16: 17, 18.

Elder Short said he had no Holy Ghost but can testify that Jesus is the Christ. Said he believed all the Bible, even the fish story.

Elder Haws opens his affirmative by reading the Epitome of Faith of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and asked if Joseph Smith and co-laborers did not have the same right to organize a church that any man or set of men had. Said he upheld all that the Reformers did that was right and thinks much good was accomplished by them. Now I propose to show that the church I represent is identical with the apostolic church, in organization, doctrine, and practice, and shall defy the world to show a discrepancy. I only ask that you follow us closely in our scripture quotations. On the setting up of the kingdom in the last days read Daniel 2: 34-42; Rev. 14: 6; Matt. 24: 14; 13: 41. Elder Haws showed that the gospel was not in word only but in power, and in the Holy Ghost.

Elder Short denied that any man or set of men had a right to set up a church. Christ's kingdom was set up in the days of the ten Caesars and was to stand forever. God reveals himself only by word, and that is all fulfilled in the New Testament. Disputes the right of the signs following the believer. Calls the gospel we preach a pet; thinks it needs nurturing. Here we are standing waiting for a revelation. What kind will you have? Called the "Instructor" that lying little book, and thought it ought to be burned, and that at once. Bro. Haws complains of me calling him names. Jesus called people hard names.

Elder Haws.—My opponent accuses me of being ignorant and parades it before the people. Is this Christian? On authority Elder Haws quoted Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 13:1-4; Mark 16:15, 16; Rev. 22. Every man must receive authority from God to preach his gospel. All Protestants came from the Catholic Church. (Rev. 14:6, 7.) The covenant given by Moses not the everlasting covenant. On apostasy he quoted Isaiah 24:5 and said this applied nicely to Elder Short's church.

Elder Short.—Nearly this entire thirty minutes was taken up in abuse of Elder Haws, Joseph Smith, and the Latter Day Saints in general. Reads a letter from Joseph Smith in a book entitled "Religious Denominations." Said he would not believe one of the latter-day apostles on oath; said the gospel was to be hid in men's hearts, which is the new covenant. (Heb. 8:7.)

Elder Haws.—Gave notice to Short that he would not discuss any outside issue, but would confine himself to the question at issue. Showed that all the Reformers believed in an apostasy. Quoted the following scripture: Rev. 12; 2 Thess. 2:3-7, 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; 2 Tim. 3:1-5. Referred to the apostasy in the days of Noah, also in the days of Moses, and showed that the gospel was restored each time by an angel. Read Malachi 3.

Elder Short.—We cannot have the Spirit without the word. I deny that my opponent has the Holy Ghost. We are going to question Joe Smith's honesty and show it to be bad, for on this hangs the whole fabric of my opponent's doctrine. God used to reveal himself to man, but not now. I deny that the man child spoken of in Revelation was the power or authority. Speaking in tongues in these last days are signs of the Devil. Signs were not given to the believer but to the unbeliever. My opponent will have to go to the jungles of Africa to perform his signs, not on this enlightened people.

Elder Haws.—God set in the church first, apostles, secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that helps, gifts, etc. (1 Cor. 12:28; Eph. 4:11.) On God revealing himself to man in these last days read (Zach. 2:3, 4; Rev. 11:3; Joel 2:28-32.) This could not possibly refer to John the Baptist nor Jesus Christ. We believe in the visitation of angels. (Mathew 24:31; Rev. 14:6) My opponent asks for a sign to make him believe Jesus Christ. Read Romans 10—that faith comes by hearing, and not by signs. He told him that the Devil was the first sign seeker, and that a wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign.

Elder Short.—John the Baptist was the messenger spoken of in Malachi 3:1. My opponent says the two witnesses spoken of in Revelation 11:3 were to come in these last days. Here Elder Short misrepresented Elder Haws by saying that he claimed that the two witnesses were Joseph and Hyrum Smith. He here read from Beadle's novel to show that Joseph Smith was a bad man. Brigham Young said Joe Smith was tricky and dishonest. The Aaronic priesthood set aside eighteen hundred years ago. O the absurdity of present revelation! It reminds me of the tale of the sheep butting the maul.

Elder Haws.—We should never take the evidence of our enemies to impeach them. Showed that the diversities of churches was making more infidels than all other things combined. All officers of the original church to be retained. (2 John 1:9; Eph. 4:8-12.) We now want to see if we are in harmony with the Scriptures in ordinances. We believe in faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, laying on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, and all the gifts and blessings enjoyed by the Apostolic Church. I now demand that you give us a sign to show your right to leave out the apostles and prophets from your church, as you have demanded one of me.

Elder Short.—He here made quite a lengthy speech to show that apostles of these last days could only be false ones, as they must be men who had seen the Savior. (1 Cor. 9:1; Acts 22:14; Acts 26:16.) Now concerning signs following the believer, if my opponent will drink a dose of strychnine and it does not kill him, I will believe. All the healing ever done by the Latter Day Saints has been on some timid person anointed with dog oil or some other kind of oil. He here assailed the character of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, and was presented with a challenge to debate the same, but refused to accept it.

Elder Haws.—On more apostles than twelve quotes the following: Acts 1:23-26; 14:14; Gal. 1:18, 19; 1 Thess. 1:1; 2 Thess. 2:5, 6; 1 Cor. 4:6-9; Rom. 16:7. How shall we know the true church of to-day? by showing its similarity to the primitive church. He showed that Apollos was not called of God to preach, so his baptism was not valid, and Paul had to rebaptize them. (Acts 19:1-6.) On laying on of hands, We believe it is for the gift of the Holy Ghost for ordaining the ministry, for the healing of the sick, and the blessing of children.

Elder Short.—I deny that anyone has the right to put apostles in the church, and any put in in any way would be false ones. Said the Bible did not say the signs should follow all that believe. As well try to prove this by an almanac as by the Bible. Signs given now are nothing but witchcraft. We have all come to a unity of the faith because all believe in Christ. Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost could only be done by an apostle. (Acts 8.)

Elder Haws.—I am glad that I am worthy to bear reproach, (Luke 6:22, 23; Math. 5:10-12,) for my Master promised this blessing. We believe and practice the washing of feet as commanded by Jesus Christ. (John 13:4-15.) My opponent has brought in trash and filth not fit to go into a political speech, which I shall not attempt to answer. On the body of Christ he showed that the more excellent way was charity, for without it man was as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. (1 Cor. 12:13, 14.) Showed that the gifts of the Spirit were not of man, but of God.

Elder Short.—On speaking in tongues he said that a lady belonging to his opponent's church had spoken in tongues, and a boy interpreted it to say things that were all of the Devil. These signs only given in the apostles' days for the work of the ministry and to show who had authority to preach. He read 1 Cor. 13:8-13 to prove that prophecies and tongues had ceased. The church my opponent represents is the worst counterfeit I ever saw. No danger of any sensible person being deceived by its teachings. I would not believe my opponent nor any witness he has produced on oath if they were to testify that the signs do follow the believer. Feet washing not a tenet of the church, nor never commanded to be practiced by the Savior; blessing children not to be done in this day and age.

Elder Haws.—On Mark 16:17, 18, says these are our inalienable rights, and are not to make believers, but to confirm those that do believe. We know we have the gospel by obedience thereto as promised in the divine word.

Elder Short.—Says his opponent is a false prophet because the signs did not follow him to this place. Miracles only given to make people believe on the apostles and were not to continue. The Holy Ghost received by Paul was not through the laying on of hands. (Acts 9:17.) If I am not right I want God through my opponent to strike me blind. I dare him to make the attempt. No man that believes your doctrine has sense enough to go to heaven in a baby wagon. I know I am a child of God by reading the words of God. Your whole fabric hinges on the testimony of Joe Smith, as his three witnesses denied him and died drunkards.

Elder Haws.—Compares the human body to the body or Church of Christ (1 Cor. 12). My opponent says he is going to whistle, and if I do not get out of the way he will run over me, comparing me to a donkey, polecat, skunk, etc. Will say he reminds me more of a buzzard than anything I know of.

Elder Short.—Says if my opponent had spent more time reading the Bible instead of reading Joe Smith he would have been better posted. We have no discipline in our church; will give my horse for a copy of one. I know I have a dirty job on my hands and have to wash my hands with soap every time I eat. Reads from Beadle's novel that Joseph Smith sanctioned polygamy.

Elder Haws.—My opponent denies their establishing a church but that Campbell and others got together and said, Let us go back to the Jerusalem Church. Has he showed any similarity between his church and the Jerusalem Church? Shows that we must become as little children by obedience to law before we can enter the kingdom of heaven.

Elder Short.—This speech was nothing but a mess of slang and abuse of Elder Haws, Joseph Smith, the three witnesses, and Bro. Moore. He finally took a vote of his members to show they had no discipline and wound up by saying that Paul said the signs would cease to follow the believer.

Elder Haws.—The moderators being called upon to decide whether or not the revelation to Joseph Smith as to the founding of the church which I represent should be brought into this discussion, was left to a vote of the house, and resulted in a majority of two in favor of same. On authority I again quote Luke 10: 2; Matt. 9: 37, 38; John 5: 41-44; Hebrews 5: 4; 2 Chron. 26: 16-19.

Elder Short.—I hope we shall have a decent debate from now on as the moderators have so decided. God set the apostles in the church first, and they are still teaching us. Paul said no matter who preaches just so they preach Christ. Judas was a thief but his works were accepted of God. Bob Ingersol could go and preach, and baptize, and it would be valid. We are all kings and priests and have a right to preach and administer in the ordinances of the gospel. No matter who plants the seed, if it is the Devil, if we are honest we will be saved. Anybody with three ideas above a last year's bird's nest knows this, and knows my opponent is mistaken when he tells you different from this.

Elder Haws.—No scripture given only by inspiration. (2 Timothy 3: 16.) My opponent says there is no Aaronic priesthood. Now and then he says we are all kings and priests. Where, then, I say are the subjects? (2 Tim. 3: 14, 15.)

Elder Short.—On baptism, I will say I never questioned the man who baptized me to know whether he had authority or not. It had nothing to do with the case. In regard to the kingdom over which we should rule—that is, ourselves, we are the subjects, and are all kings and priests. We should never question a man's authority to preach and administer in the ordinances of God's house. Told of the man being called to preach by the ass; said that was the only way men were called now. The law governing the call of Aaron does not refer to the calling of the ministry.

Elder Haws.—On more prophets to come in the last days, read Revelation 11. The two prophets here spoken of, my opponent says, are the old and New Testament Scriptures. In regard to the signs and wonders spoken of, read Isaiah 40, also 11. Here now is what my opponent believes: Faith, repentance, and baptism—good that far; but is that the Jerusalem church?

Elder Short.—In regard to setting men in the church, God never chose a bad man; he never set Judas in the church. My opponent says that greater miracles than Jesus had done were yet to be done. No one could do greater miracles than were done by the Savior. I have shown that the church I represent is identical with the Jerusalem church; in fact, it is the Jerusalem church arisen. My opponent says Christ will come and reign on the earth. Christ never said so.

Elder Haws.—Read the first revelation to Joseph Smith; also evidence in support of same; also Zechariah 2: 1-4; Revelation 14: 6. Read from the Book of Mormon of the twelve witnesses, and referred to other sworn testimony at Kirtland, Ohio.

Elder Short.—God never sends dead men to reveal things to others. Is Joe Smith the only young man that could be spoken of in Zechariah 2: 1-4? Joe Smith kept his revelation a secret for a long time and then tried to run away without giving it, but was captured and brought back and made tell it. I now pray for my opponent and ask that God may forgive him.

Elder Haws closed by giving a brief summary of the evidence adduced, bringing the three decisions of courts to show we were not polygamists, and bore his testimony to the signs following the believer, and stated that he could bring thousands of others to testify to the same thing.

There were four ministers of other denominations present who expressed themselves to the effect that we had the best of the argument. I hereby tender my thanks to the people for their kindness and hospitality, their presence and patience in hearing us through.

Note.—This report is not verbatim, but from notes taken at the time and is as near correct as could be given in that way. I have endeavored to give the essential points, so the reader could draw his conclusions therefrom. If there are mistakes, they are of the head, not the heart. We were forced by a decision of the moderators from the question under debate to a discussion of the revelations and prophetic mission of Joseph Smith contrary to all parliamentary rules, but this only made friends for us. W. R. ODELL.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The Herald readers will doubtless be glad to learn further about the work and condition of the publishing department of the church, especially since this is a matter in which all are, or should be, at least, financially and personally interested.

At this time I propose to call up some of the adverse things that hedge up the way to success, that the Saints may consider them first, which if they do and remedy, the chief obstacles to the department will be removed.

First and foremost among these is the enormous delinquent list, reaching the sum of TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SUBSCRIPTIONS. What to do in this is apparent to all without multiplying words. Let us pay the amount we owe and at once. If you find upon looking at the label on your paper that you are already paid up, just take a glance at your neighbor's Herald wrapper and see if he is paying attention to the necessity of prompt action in the matter; and, if he is not, stir up his mind, and if he does not have the money, help him raise it and forward and see that the debt is cancelled. It may be asked, Why should each member thus take a personal interest in such a matter? The answer is this: The interest of the Publishing House is yours, if you are a member of the church. You are blessed in its success and lose with its failure. Why, then, should not each one personally interest him or herself in the work and insure the lifting of this burden at once?

Second of importance in hindering the work are the arrearages on book accounts amounting to nearly four thousand dollars. Now there are no true Saints who will stop and cavil over the drawbacks to the Herald Publishing House and dispute as to what is the cause of its cramped condition when they learn these facts. There is no institution that could run and live with such enormous sums taken out of its earnings as these lists show. The wonder is that the office has thrived as long as it has under such a burden.

The remedy, if not a strictly cash system, is a strictly honorable and prompt payment of dues. No Latter Day Saint can hope in any event to discharge his or her duty and do less than this.

Third, Another misunderstanding on the part of many, both among the ministry and members, if we may judge by the letters received, is as to the Herald being sent free to the ministry.

The action of the Board of Publication in making the paper free lies in the fact of the minister or missionary acting as agent for the Herald as missionaries have been so authorized to act; and when they so fully act and discharge their duty, then they should have a copy of the paper. Are there any so receiving the paper who do not labor for its success as a part of the general church work? Inquiries come to us saying: "Am I not entitled to the Herald free? I am a missionary." The last part of the statement is not a sufficient reason. It should be, "I am a missionary and working diligently for the interest of the Herald as other church work."

All will be able to see that in this way the Herald can be sent free to such and the HOUSE succeed; but not the former.

The subscriptions of the Herald and Hope to the ministry and poor who are not able to pay would amount to ELEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS A YEAR, and all must readily see that this loss must be recovered in one of two ways; first, by the missionaries pushing the work as agents, collecting and extending subscriptions; or, second, by cutting off the free list and extending it to none but the poor.

Now, brethren, after carefully considering the matter, can there be any difference of opinion between us as to what should be done?

Many of the ministry and the poor ask that we send them the Herald, Autumn Leaves, and the Hope—all three publications—free. To send the Herald and Hope alone free to such would take ten per cent of our profits from those two publications. It will therefore be apparent at a glance that to send the three publications free is an impossibility; that no business enterprise could live with such a drain upon it. We shall send the Herald free to the ministry and the poor, but must have the help of all in pushing the interests of the publishing department, as stated heretofore.

The letters heretofore sent out by me have met with various criticisms and commendations according to the knowledge I have found had by those writing of the circumstances and conditions of the office; and I have thought that if I let the people know the true state of things we would have little difficulty in seeing eye to eye touching the work to be done to move the church publishing interests ahead where they should be.

I am glad to be able to state that the Hymnal is out and on sale, gotten up in the manner outlined by the committee at the last General Conference. The only trouble is that the character and cost of the work as recommended by the committee are all too good for to be sold at fifty cents a copy. It will require the sale of 2,000 copies at these prices to bring anything into the office. But the work is in hand and all should have one. To have your order filled soon, send at once, inclosing the price. See price list for gilt and morocco binding.

We especially request the traveling ministry to help us in subscriptions and sales of books, and are thankful to say that some of them are helping us very much.

Ever laboring for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

HESPERIS.

The poetical works of David H. Smith, youngest son of the prophet, Joseph Smith. It contains upwards of one hundred of the author's best compositions, many of which are excellent poems of a high order of merit; all containing sentiments of exalted type, and of true religious spirit. The author was gifted as a hymn writer and employed his talent in the production of sacred psalms and other sonnets of an elevating, inspiring nature. His sacred numbers are general favorites, and much used in the song services of public worship.

The book contains 194 pages. Elegantly printed, bound in cloth, stamped, gilt edges; price $1.50—a excellent birthday or holiday gift book.

THE NEW STATE—UTAH.

THE Territorial census taken this year credits Utah with a population of 247,321 persons, being an increase of more than 14 per cent over the number as ascertained from the Federal census taken in 1890. The males outnumber the females by 6,000, and nearly four fifths of the population is American born. The valuation of the State is $98,000,000, of which nearly half is land, $17,000,000 personal property, and $11,000,000 railroads. The total value of property assessed is stated separately as $99,500,000, against nearly $124,000,000 four years earlier, and 6,387,000 acres of public lands have been disposed of by the land office in the last quarter of a century. The number of acres under cultivation last year was a little less than 500,000, about nine tenths of which was under irrigation. These lands were irrigated during the season from three to twelve times, the duration of each wetting ranging from an hour and a half to twenty-four hours. The area of unimproved farm lands is stated at less than 1,000,000 acres, and the area capable of irrigation with profit to the cultivator is about 3,500,000. The number of farms last year was about 21,000. The census of four years earlier showed only 11,884 families living on farms, of which 85 per cent were owned free of incumbrance, 5 per cent owned subject to incumbrance and 10 per cent hired. The 3,000,000 bushels of wheat grown last year averaged 21½ bushels to the acre. There are in the soon-to-be-State nearly 2,500,000 sheep valued at more than $12,000,000, though wool was worth only 6 to 8 cents per pound last year. Manufacturers are credited with the use of $5,500,000 of capital and more than 11,000 horse power. They employ 5,000 hands. There are nearly 2,000 stores, with more than $14,000,000 of capital and annual sales of $33,000,000. The bank capital is $5,000,000 and the deposits more than $9,000,000. The silver production decreased from more than 8,000,000 ounces in 1890 and 1892 to 6,660,000 ounces last year, while the gold production has increased from 5,000 ounces in 1884 to 56,427 ounces in 1894.—Chicago Tribune.

STRIKES IN THE UNITED STATES AND EUROPE.

WE have before us the first number of the Bulletin of the Department of Labor, which is to be issued bi-monthly in accordance with the law of March 2, 1895. In the preface the editor, Commissioner Carroll D. Wright, sets forth the aim and scope of this publication, as compared with the already existing Annual and Special Reports. It will contain "such matters as cannot in the nature of things find a place in the Annual or Special Reports; but it is confidently expected that, through the Bulletin, the department will be able to bring much of its work closer home to the people." Its aim will be "to furnish to the public" current "facts and information relating to industrial affairs which cannot readily be secured in any other way."

The first number, among other topics, deals statistically with the question of strikes and lockouts in the United States and in certain European countries.

These statistics cover a period of thirteen and one half years, from 1881 to 1894. During this time there occurred 14,390 strikes, involving 69,167 establishments, and throwing out of employment no less than 3,714,406 employes. The quietest year was 1884, when there were 443 strikes affecting 2,367 establishments and 147,054 employes; the most disturbed year was 1886 when 10,053 establishments were involved and 508,044 employes thrown out of work as the result of 1,432 strikes.

The greatest number of strikes, 18,787, occurred in New York State; then come Illinois, with 12,828, and Pennsylvania, with 10,661.

Out of 69,167 establishments affected, about 90 per cent were in the following industries: Building trades, 26,860; coal and coke, 8,018; tobacco, 5,465; clothing, 4,769; food preparations, 3,817; metals, 3,454; transportation, 2,805; stone quarrying and cutting, 2,461; and five others in proportions under 1,000.

During these thirteen and one half years, 32 per cent of the whole number of people thrown out of employment by strikes succeeded in gaining what they asked; 12.46 per cent only partly succeeded; and 55.50 failed altogether.

From the table marked "Leading causes of strikes" we learn that 42.32 per cent struck for increase of wages; 19.48 per cent for reduction of hours; 7.77 against reduction of wages; 7.59 for increase of wages and reduction of hours; the remaining 22 per cent of the strikes occurring for minor and very varied causes.

The tables from which the above figures are taken are very startling, and they will come as a revelation to many. But the most sensational figures are those which deal with the actual losses incurred during these thirteen and one half years of strikes and lockouts. The actual wage loss of employes was $163,807,866. It cost the various labor organizations to assist the strikers $10,914,406. The loss to employers was $32,590,386. The corresponding losses due to lockouts were: Employes, $26,685,516; assistance by labor organizations, $2,524,298; employers, $12,235,451.

Summing up these figures, we find that the various labor disputes of the past thirteen and one half years have cost the country no less than $298,757,923!

Statistics may be dry reading; but they are often as in this case very eloquent.

It is pretty well understood, both by capital and labor, that strikes and lockouts are a crude and costly means for the adjustment of employer's profit and employe's wage—but just how costly can only be realized when we look at the appalling loss that is spelled out by the nine figures given above.

The statistics for Great Britain and Ireland cover the five years from 1889 to 1893 inclusive. Of the 4,526 strikes which occurred, 3,428 were reported in detail. They affected 1,852,193 persons. The successful strikes affected 44.5 per cent of this total number; the partially successful 32.9 per cent and the unsuccessful 20.7 per cent. These figures would seem to indicate either that labor is less under the control of capital or that its organization is stronger in those countries than it is in the United States. This would seem to be further proved by the fact that in the three years 1891 to 1893 there were only 35 lockouts, as against 4,526 strikes in the five years 1889 to 1893.

In France during the years 1890 to 1894 there were 1,866 strikes, affecting 7,698 establishments and 500,475 employes. The average of successful strikes was 25.24 per cent; of partly successful, 29.26; and of failures, 44.64 per cent.

In Italy from 1878 to 1891 there were 1,075 strikes, affecting 254,668 employes. Of these, 24 per cent were successful; 47 per cent partly successful, and 29 per cent failed.

In Austria, during the year 1891 there were 104 strikes, affecting 1,916 establishments and 40,486 employes. Of the 104 strikes, 23 succeeded; 26 succeeded partly; and 51 failed.—Scientific American.

Suppurating wounds, ulcers, lupous and tuberculous sores, have been treated by Dr. G. Stoker with remarkable results by surrounding them with an atmosphere of pure oxygen, by means of rubber bags. Not only were old sores rapidly healed, but pain was almost immediately alleviated.

HERALD PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The Herald readers will doubtless be glad to learn further about the work and condition of the publishing department of the church, especially since this is a matter in which all are, or should be, at least, financially and personally interested.

At this time I propose to call up some of the adverse things that hedge up the way to success, that the Saints may consider them first, which if they do and remedy, the chief obstacles to the department will be removed.

First and foremost among these is the enormous delinquent list, reaching the sum of TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SUBSCRIPTIONS. What to do in this is apparent to all without multiplying words. Let us pay the amount we owe and at once. If you find upon looking at the label on your paper that you are already paid up, just take a glance at your neighbor's Herald wrapper and see if he is paying attention to the necessity of prompt action in the matter; and, if he is not, stir up his mind, and if he does not have the money, help him raise it and forward and see that the debt is cancelled. It may be asked, Why should each member thus take a personal interest in such a matter? The answer is this: The interest of the Publishing House is yours, if you are a member of the church. You are blessed in its success and lose with its failure. Why, then, should not each one personally interest him or herself in the work and insure the lifting of this burden at once?

Second of importance in hindering the work are the arrearages on book accounts amounting to nearly four thousand dollars. Now there are no true Saints who will stop and cavil over the drawbacks to the Herald Publishing House and dispute as to what is the cause of its cramped condition when they learn these facts. There is no institution that could run and live with such enormous sums taken out of its earnings as these lists show. The wonder is that the office has thrived as long as it has under such a burden.

The remedy, if not a strictly cash system, is a strictly honorable and prompt payment of dues. No Latter Day Saint can hope in any event to discharge his or her duty and do less than this.

Third, Another misunderstanding on the part of many, both among the ministry and members, if we may judge by the letters received, is as to the Herald being sent free to the ministry.

The action of the Board of Publication in making the paper free lies in the fact of the minister or missionary acting as agent for the Herald as missionaries have been so authorized to act; and when they so fully act and discharge their duty, then they should have a copy of the paper. Are there any so receiving the paper who do not labor for its success as a part of the general church work? Inquiries come to us saying: "Am I not entitled to the Herald free? I am a missionary." The last part of the statement is not a sufficient reason. It should be, "I am a missionary and working diligently for the interest of the Herald as other church work."

All will be able to see that in this way the Herald can be sent free to such and the HOUSE succeed; but not the former.

The subscriptions of the Herald and Hope to the ministry and poor who are not able to pay would amount to ELEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS A YEAR, and all must readily see that this loss must be recovered in one of two ways; first, by the missionaries pushing the work as agents, collecting and extending subscriptions; or, second, by cutting off the free list and extending it to none but the poor.

Now, brethren, after carefully considering the matter, can there be any difference of opinion between us as to what should be done?

Many of the ministry and the poor ask that we send them the Herald, Autumn Leaves, and the Hope—all three publications—free. To send the Herald and Hope alone free to such would take ten per cent of our profits from those two publications. It will therefore be apparent at a glance that to send the three publications free is an impossibility; that no business enterprise could live with such a drain upon it. We shall send the Herald free to the ministry and the poor, but must have the help of all in pushing the interests of the publishing department, as stated heretofore.

The letters heretofore sent out by me have met with various criticisms and commendations according to the knowledge I have found had by those writing of the circumstances and conditions of the office; and I have thought that if I let the people know the true state of things we would have little difficulty in seeing eye to eye touching the work to be done to move the church publishing interests ahead where they should be.

I am glad to be able to state that the Hymnal is out and on sale, gotten up in the manner outlined by the committee at the last General Conference. The only trouble is that the character and cost of the work as recommended by the committee are all too good for to be sold at fifty cents a copy. It will require the sale of 2,000 copies at these prices to bring anything into the office. But the work is in hand and all should have one. To have your order filled soon, send at once, inclosing the price. See price list for gilt and morocco binding.

We especially request the traveling ministry to help us in subscriptions and sales of books, and are thankful to say that some of them are helping us very much.

Ever laboring for the welfare of Zion, I remain,

LAMONT, Iowa, Dec. 21, 1895.

The investigations of Mr. Robert E. Lewis, College Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Associations, to determine whether the Christian ministry deserves to rank as the "distinctly learned profession," show that in eleven representative theological seminaries the proportion of college graduates to the whole number of students is 66.8 per cent; and in nine leading law schools the proportion is 34.6 per cent, while in nine of the principal medical schools the proportion is 23.9 per cent.

The 124 largest cities in the country show a steady, uniform decrease in the average size of the family.

WHO WAS THE PROPHET?

ON Saturday, January 16, 1886, Apostle Lorenzo Snow, after having been convicted of "unlawful cohabitation" on three indictments, was arraigned before the United States Court, Judge Powers presiding, and asked:—

Have you anything to say now why the sentence of the law should not now be passed in each case?

He said in reply among other things:—

The prosecuting attorney was quite mistaken in saying, "The defendant Mr. Snow, was the most scholarly and the brightest light of the apostles;" and equally wrong when pleading with the jury to assist him and the "United States of America," in convicting Apostle Snow, and he would predict that a new revelation would soon follow, changing the divine law of celestial marriage. Whatever fame Mr. Bierbower may have secured as a lawyer, he certainly will fail as a prophet. The severest prosecutions have never been followed by a revelation changing a divine law, obedience to which brought imprisonment or martyrdom. Though I go to prison, God will not change his law of celestial marriage. But the man, the people, the nation, that oppose and fight against this doctrine and the Church of God will be overthrown.

We agree that God does not change his law because of opposition, or other cause; but from Apostle Snow's standpoint is not Mr. Bierbower's inspiration superior to his own? (See Biographical Supplement to Tullidge's History of Northern Utah and Southern Idaho, p. 21.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Has an elder, being a conference appointee, the right to go into the limits of a branch, the president being present, appoint meetings and baptize, without advising or consulting with such president, or even inviting him to assist in the services?

Ans.—As a rule no. There might be conditions under which such an act would be justifiable, or excusable.

Q.—Is it in harmony with the law governing branch organization for the members of a branch to choose a member who is a priest to preside over them, in the absence of the branch president, this priest not being a member of said branch, and refusing to become one?

A.—Yes; providing the conditions of the branch were such that such choice was either necessary, or proper; otherwise, no.

ELDERS, ATTENTION!

WE have received the following letter from the Chairman of the Western Passenger Association, which will explain itself. We call the attention of the ministry to it.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30, 1895.

Mr. Joseph Smith, President,
Mr. H. A. Stebbins, Gen'l Church Sec.,
Lamoni, Iowa.

Gentlemen:—Your favor of December 10, inclosing list of those of your denomination who will probably apply for half-fare permits for 1896, duly received and for which we beg to thank you.

In this connection would say, that the question raised by you as to the granting of permits to that class of your ministers known as "self-supporting," and who, while acting as local pastors, also engage in secular work, has had the careful consideration of the Clergy Committee, but it has not been deemed that it will be proper under the rules to issue permits in their favor.

Respectfully,
B. D. CALDWELL, Chairman.

HAWAII'S ORIGINAL INHABITANTS FROM AMERICA.

CAPTAIN H. G. MORSE, late of the steamer Alameda, has developed into a lecturer since his retirement. His first appearance will be in San Francisco on November 22.

Captain Morse commenced his long and eventful career back in 1844 on a thirty ton schooner, which was engaged in the fishing trade on the Eastern coast, says the San Francisco Chronicle. Since then he has sailed the Mediterranean, spent four years in the pepper trade on the west coast of Sumatra, has been engaged in the fur trade on the east coast of Siberia, and has made many trips to the coral islands of the Pacific, besides innumerable visits to every inhabitable spot in the broad Pacific Ocean.

During his long career at sea Captain Morse has had an opportunity for observing and studying the queer people who inhabit the many groups of small islands with which the broad Pacific is flecked, and at his lecture he will develop an interesting idea in respect to their origin. Captain Morse disputes the theory advanced by most writers, that the inhabitants of the Society Islands, the Hawaiian Islands, and the other island groups in the tropics came originally from Asia. He has satisfied himself that they came from America, and he is full of intelligent arguments in support of his theory.

"In the first place," said Captain Morse, in speaking of the matter, "we have every reason to believe that the natives of the Sandwich Islands came originally from the Society Islands. They have a tradition, which has been handed down by the forefathers, that the progenitors of their race came in canoes from the southward. Now, in my estimation, it would have been impossible for the natives of the Society Islands to have made their way eastward from the coast of Asia in small canoes, when the winds and currents are all against them.

I do not believe that the important question of winds and currents was considered by the historians who have attempted to settle this matter. The trade winds in the tropics blow from the east and strike the equator at an angle of forty-five degrees. To be more specific, the trade winds north of the equator blow from the northeast. Below the equator they blow from the southeast. The currents in the tropics follow the direction of the trade winds—that is, from east to west. Now all the islands referred to are in the tropics, and it stands to reason that the slight canoes in which these ancient navigators traveled must have gone with the winds and currents.

That the inhabitants of the islands off the east coast of Asia came from Asia, there is no doubt. We find on the Marshall and Solomon islands an entirely different race of people from those who inhabit the islands further east. They are as black as jet, and their hair is short and curly. The natives of the Society and Sandwich Islands are light complexioned and their hair is long and straight.

"These are not the only facts in support of the theory that the people in question are the descendants of the native Americans. There is a lot of old stone work in the Hawaiian Islands which bears a striking resemblance to similar work found in Mexico. In the big Mexican Museum are many relics of the Aztecs which have a striking resemblance to relics of past generations of Hawaiians. It seems to me very plausible that at some remote time, ages ago, the Islands I have referred to were a part of the American continent, for I cannot conceive how any canoe, built of the largest trees then growing, could survive the storms and rough weather such as are encountered on the Pacific. However, in whatever way the natives of the Pacific islands might have reached those isolated places, I am satisfied that they came from the coast of America, and not from the coast of Asia."—Honolulu Advertiser, December 6.

The foregoing is from the Honolulu,

Hawaii, Advertiser, of December 6, sent us by Bro. G. J. Waller. Captain Morse seems to have traveled extensively among the Pacific islanders and to have studied their manners, customs, and traditions, from which he concludes, as stated, that the inhabitants of the Hawaiian, Society, and other islands of the central and south-western portions of the Pacific are descended from the ancient Americans—the Indians. This seems to confirm the opinion of brethren who have labored in those islands, that they are descendents of colonies from America—those referred to in the Book of Mormon, (Alma 30:3, 4,) Hagoth's migrating companies. Captain Morse's statements are interesting in that connection.

TWO GENEALOGIES OF JESUS.

THE whole subject of the genealogy of Jesus is treated with carefulness in Andrews' new edition of "The Life of our Lord," as published by Charles Scribners' Sons, New York. In view of all that is known on the subject, there is good reason for supposing Mary and Joseph were first cousins," and that they were both descendants of David. Hence Dr. Andrews says: "We conclude that the two tables given by Matthew and Luke are to be regarded as those of Joseph and Mary, and are in beautiful harmony with the scope of their respective Gospels. Through that of Matthew, Jesus is shown to be the heir of David as the legal son of Joseph; through that of Luke, to be of David's seed according to the flesh by his birth of Mary. The former, beginning with Abraham, the father of the chosen people, descends through David the king to Christ the royal heir, in whom all the national covenants should be fulfilled; the latter, beginning with the second Adam, the eternally begotten Son of God, ascends to the first Adam, the Son of God by creation. Each evangelist gives his genealogy in that aspect which best suits his special purpose: to the one he is the Messiah of the Jews; to the other, the Savior of the world."

We publish the foregoing, an answer to a query in the Sunday School Times of December 28, because of some late references, in the HERALD, to the two genealogies of Christ. It may prove helpful.

CHURCH unity quite often comes to the front of late. Here is a brief reference to it in the "church and clergy" column of a late issue of the Chicago Tribune:—

It ought to be as clear as day by this time, remarks the Central Christian Advocate [Methodist], of St. Louis, that there can be no unity in the right sense between the great Christian bodies without mutual recognition. The Presbyterian, Congregationalist, and Methodist denominations, for example, are just as genuine churches of the New Testament pattern (with an apostolic ministry, and with divine sanctions for their existence, and with divine blessings on their work) as are to be found on earth. Whenever the Protestant Episcopal Church and the Anglican communion come to recognize these facts, the way may be opened for closer relations between all the churches of Christendom.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. R. E. GRANT, Grand Rapids, Michigan, December 28:—

Although the weather is rainy and wet here, the crowds are on the increase. Last night the hall was so full there was not seating room for all. Some nights there are three and four preachers to hear me. Some shake hands and bid me God-speed, others speed out of the hall without shaking hands, while one old fellow with his head white as wool told me, "Once in hell always in hell;" "Where their worm dieth not and their fire is not quenched." I let the old sword cut where it chooses for about an hour each evening, and then tell them if there is anyone got hit to come to the light and we will examine the wound. No one has come thus far. Some are talking of baptism. The Saints are rejoicing and all seems well.

Sr. D. A. Hutchings writes from Little Sioux, Iowa:—

Mother and I are living alone this winter, my husband being in Missouri preaching. We are lonely, although the Lord blesses us. We can go to church every Sunday, and to prayer meetings Wednesday evenings; and I can say that I know that this work is of God, and my faith grows stronger as the days pass away, and my desires are to be able to keep the commandments and be saved at last with a great salvation.

Bro. H. S. Tibbels, Elliott, Iowa, December 28:—

I would like an elder to come to Elliott, Iowa, to do some preaching. Will furnish a home and place to preach. There never has been any of our elders here, and I am certain the labor will be well repaid, as a great many are disgusted with the denominations here and will attend our meetings. I am doing all I can to spread the truth. Am located twelve miles south of Red Oak, Montgomery County. There are several interested in this cause and anxious to hear the word in its purity.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. ANNIE E. HILL writes from Mount Sidney, Virginia, the 25th ult. She was baptized by Bro. James Moler and received light and satisfaction as a result of her obedience. Looking over the past she regrets not having done more for the work of God, but is determined to be diligent in future. Bro. Parsons had also labored there, and acceptably; prejudice runs high. She asks prayer that she may do good.

Bro. J. M. Hooper, Hiteman, Iowa, writes a description of a very comforting manifestation to him of the atonement and light of Christ. He rejoices in the fulfillment to him of the promise: "These signs shall follow them that believe."

Bro. G. H. Brush sends us a portion of "Washington's Vision" for publication. We published the vision entire some years ago. Should we republish, it will be the entire document—when there seems to be a demand for it. Bro. Brush narrates a comforting manifestation to him—of the building of the "holy city."

Bro. J. M. Smith, of Cato, Arkansas, writes a good letter of his faith in the work and the confirmation of its truth given him by obedience. He reports well of the labors of Brn. J. D. Erwin and Joseph Ward in that field.

The transcript of the records in the Temple Lot case in the United States Circuit Court and in the Court of Appeals has been duly prepared and printed and is ready for use in the Supreme Court of the United States. The printing has been done at the Herald Office, occupying all day and much of the night for two weeks. The transcript makes a book of seven hundred and six pages of printed matter, the petition for certiorari sixty two pages, the brief and argument of counsel for petitioner seventy pages. As soon as the petition is passed upon by the Supreme Court the readers of the HERALD will be duly notified.

Bro. James Thomson reports the Nebraska City branch as alive and in general good condition as a result of the labors of Bro. Forscutt and the local brethren. The branch has been divided into four districts, and each district placed in charge of a priest, teacher, and deacon, who, doing their work regularly and attentively, have accomplished much good. They hoped to continue the good work. Bro. Forscutt had been called elsewhere.

Bro. M. T. Short was at Standley, Indian Territory, January 1, preaching while visiting his aged mother, brother, and other relatives. He left Bro. Pitt's domain—Northern Illinois —on a working furlough, visiting St. Louis enroute, meeting with brethren there in district conference, of whom he reports well.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt arrived at Lamoni on Saturday, the 4th inst. to labor for a time on some special work in the Bishop's office.

Bro. A. J. Vickrey, Alaga, Alabama, asks that ministers in that part of the South will make him a call. He is isolated and desires the ministrations of some of the eldership there.

Bro. M. R. Scott secured the insertion of a good defensive article—a column in length—in the Versailles, Indiana, Republican of December 25. He exposed the false positions of some who challenged him to discussion of onesided propositions. The article is designed to do good by enlightening the people concerning the faith and the peculiar methods made use of by its opponents.

In the article, "Christ's second coming," in last issue, in second paragraph read imminence for "immanence."

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., sends us a clipping from the Versailles, Indiana, Republican of November 20, in which a writer, under a nom de plume, urges that Bro. Scott or others of our representatives should agree to discuss the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, notwithstanding they refuse to affirm the correctness of the Christian or Campbellite faith, on the ground that "if" Joseph Smith's prophetic calling is not successfully defended, that ends the matter. We notice several points about such pseudo representatives of Christianity: They are willing to attack the faith of the Saints—when they can secure agreement to propositions by which they are permitted to slur and resort to questionable methods of attack, while themselves free from any responsibility to advocate and defend their own religious systems in discussion before the public. They are morally bound to affirm their faiths and submit them to examination. The people are interested in knowing the character of and evidences upon which all religious bodies stand. Our ministers are not under obligation to meet the challenges of irresponsible parties; nor are they obliged to affirm the truth of their own faith unless opponents do the same of theirs. Bro. Scott expected to reply to "Veritas," the no-name writer of the article. It is not strange that a man asking agreement to discuss an unfair proposition and himself advocating a faith based upon the doubtful, unsubstantial fabric of an "if"—"If we have authority to preach we have authority to baptize" (Campbellism)—it is not surprising that he refrained from signing such a communication. Unfairness, unjustness, has its peculiar methods of action. Truth is open and fair.

Original Poetry.

I ASKED HIM ONE FLOWER.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

I asked him one flower to bloom,
In my garden plot barren and chilly;
But his patient hand findeth room
For the rose and the beautiful lily.
He warmeth the wind from the plain
To the strength of the violet tender,
Nor sendeth too heavy the rain
On the poppy stalks graceful and slender.
He gives me so much when I seek,
And so much when I ask him he bringeth;
My spirit is humbled and meek,
But my heart in its gratitude singeth.

GOING WITH OR AGAINST THE CURRENT.

It is easy to do as everybody else does: it requires character to act by oneself against the current of popular opinion and practice. This is true in little matters and in great, in dress or diet, in occupations or amusements, in political or religious beliefs. An advantage that some of the European watering places have over American, is not so much in the springs themselves as in the enforced regimen and discipline in connection with them. At Carlsbad, for instance, everybody inclines to regular habits, for all are regular. Bands of music begin to play at the springs at six in the morning, and cease at eight. Meanwhile the health-seekers form in procession and get their morning draught. A visitor who comes to the springs at a later hour finds himself quite alone, and feels himself singular. Evening concerts begin at seven and close at nine. Early hours are the order of the day and night. The burgomaster of the city directs the cooking at the hotels, in accordance with the counsel of the physicians. It is easy to live regularly at Carlsbad, because everybody lives regularly. That counts for more than the salts in the springs. The same principle is operative in other spheres. In war time a deserter from the Confederate ranks came into the Federal lines before Petersburg. He was asked the question, "What did you go into secession for?" His natural answer was, "Cos all of 'em did." And that reason would account for many a man's action, North as well as South, in time of war or peace. The real question ought to be, with every man, "What is right and best?" not "What do others think or do?"—Trumbull.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Seem blind when the faults of a friend appear;
Seem deaf when the slanderer's voice you hear;
Seem dumb when the curious crowd you meet,
And they bid you the slanderous tale repeat.
And O, believe me, this is the plan,
To lighten and brighten the lot of man."

FROM THE MISSION FIELD.—NO. 4.

AFTER viewing the prune works we hastened to prepare to resume our journey toward Lower Lake. Bro. and Sr. Butterfield drove up in a two-seated buggy to take us to the stage office. At quarter before twelve o'clock the stage driver gathered up his long lines, cracked his whip, and our team of six horses started off with the heavily laden coach, fourteen passengers, besides numerous parcels and valises. Among the interesting features of the journey over the mountain were, that the driver's "box" contained as much silver coin as one man could carry from the stage office across the sidewalk to the coach, and that the United States Marshal was one of the six outside passengers with his gun loaded all ready for highwaymen. The coach had been robbed about a month previous and they thought this precaution necessary with such valuable freight. The day was very warm, and the long mountain grade—Calistoga Mountain—became quite tedious. Occasionally a pretty view opened up before us, but for the most part mountain peaks and dark, scrubby looking trees were all that could be seen by those within the coach, except on either side of the road for a short distance the manzanita and madrona trees vied with each other in their glossy beauty; the manzanita being a dark maroon, while the madrona was a light buff color but equally as smooth and glossy, with larger leaves of lighter green.

At length the summit was reached. The panting horses were let stand and rest awhile and refreshed with a drink of good cool water, and then we began the descent. A small and perhaps nervous man who sat on the outside of the same seat on which I sat, settled his hat a little tighter on his head and grasped the iron stanchion at his elbow. I do not suppose he was really afraid, but like Mark Twain, he "held on because he wanted to." I found myself wondering if stage drivers here wend down mountains on the round run, as they did in Australia, but soon found that there was no need for anxiety: we were being driven very cautiously.

We passed the highwaymen's lurking place without molestation, and arrived in Middletown about three p. m., warm, tired, and dusty. We were met there by Brn. Graulich and Cobb, who took us to Lower Lake, some sixteen or eighteen miles farther on, in a private conveyance. Bro. Cobb had his gun along too, and shot eleven squirrels while on our way in. Those eleven reports right at one's ear—he shot them while standing in the wagon—were not restful to the nerves of a tired body. It was nearly eight o'clock in the evening when we arrived at Sr. Cobb's.

The few Saints in Lower Lake who have not been visited by an elder for twelve years —were hungering for gospel food. Others besides the five that were baptized were very much interested in the discourses, and some believed who did not obey. One week before the branch was to be organized, Mr. Burton requested the Saints to make the selection of officers an especial subject of prayer during the week; that nothing might be done except by the direction of the Spirit; for there were none of the Saints there who had been called to the Melchisedek priesthood, and it was yet unknown who should be the presiding elder. Sunday morning came, and still no indications. While the ordinance of baptism was being performed a three-seated wagon filled with strangers drove up, alighted, and came to the water's edge. As soon as the baptism was over the strangers introduced themselves as Bro. and Sr. Fisher and family from Lake Port, twenty-five miles distant, and upon further inquiry learned that he was an elder, and did not belong to any branch in California, not having been in the neighborhood of a branch since they came from the East, and we at once recognized in him the answer to our prayers. The other officers were designated and the branch organized, after which a spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

Upon one occasion while at Lower Lake Mr. Burton and I drove out a little way to see as much as we could of the big lake, a miniature ocean, thirty-five miles in length and ten miles in width in the widest places. This lake lies at the foot of a broken range of mountains, so it has its capes, bluffs, points, bays, coves, and inlets just as are found on the margin of a real ocean. It boasts of one island, several steam launches, varying in size, and numerous yachts, all on an elevation of some two hundred and fifty feet above the level of the sea.

On the Monday after the organization of the branch in Lower Lake, Bro Cobb took us by wagon to Lake Port. The road for the most of the way was over mountains, rough and rugged. On the route we had a good view of three sides of the "Uncle Sam" mountain that was formerly a volcano. It might correctly be called the glass mountain, for it has belched forth glass till miles of ground around it are literally covered with little glass pebbles that look black on the surface, but when broken are a deep bottle green. So literally covered, that after we entered them I did not see a square foot of ground on either side of the road where there was no shrubbery that was not black with these glass cinders. As we drew nearer the mountain they began to be the size of a man's head and larger till we got to great rocks of it. Of course I wanted specimens. Bro. Cobb picked one up and threw it down on another and broke it in small pieces, handing me several of them. They were pretty to look upon, unrefined, deep green glass with light gray waves all through them. We were told that the Indians made their spearheads of it. I cut my finger on one of their sharp edges. Farther on we passed through the neighborhood where the centennial cheese was made, the largest cheese in the world. Bro. Cobb told us its exact weight, but I could not venture to reproduce the figures; I only know that they were away up somewhere among the number that makes tons. Our stay at Lake Port was more brief than at Lower Lake on account of a Baptist revival. Those were the first Latter Day Saint meetings ever held in that place. Some were interested, but there was an entertainment of some kind each night we had meetings, apparently to draw the crowd away. On the Sunday before we left there we few Saints—we two, and Bro. and Sr. Fisher and family—had a sacrament and testimony meeting in Bro. Fisher's house. A real spiritual season was enjoyed. Bro. Fisher spoke in tongues, first to Joseph, then to me, and gave the interpretation. Our meeting was in the morning. During the afternoon while Mr. Burton was looking over a pile of old Heralds, and I was pondering upon the words that had been spoken to me, Joseph passed me the Herald containing Sr. Mary Twaddle's letter in which she rehearsed some of the promises made by Elder D. S. Mills while his hands were upon my head at the Tulare reunion, being the same in purport and some sentences just the same as Bro. Fisher had said that day. Do not look for the statements here; in the Lord's own time it will come to pass, then I will rehearse it.

GARLAND, Ala., 1895.

Sister Walker:—I heartily indorse Sr. Mary E. Doss' letter concerning the "Gospel Chats." I have thought many times if they were published in book form they would be a great help to mothers in teaching their children the principles of the gospel. They are such good bedtime reading; chats on the pure, unadulterated gospel of the Son of God that was by an angel again restored to the earth in its fullness. Many times while reading them my heart was made to rejoice for such a staunch piece of literature to go in the homes of the Saints. How I wish every family of Saints would take the Hope for the instruction it contains for the rising generation! Yes, and the Herald, too; the price of them is a trifle to their worth, for through them we learn the progress of the church and it is cheering to read the many letters contained in its columns and the good instruction through the Home Column.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JANUARY.

Ask the Father in my name, in faith believing that you shall receive, and you shall have the Holy Ghost which manifesteth all things, which is expedient unto the children of men. And if you have not faith, hope and charity, you can do nothing.—Doc. and Cov. 16:4.

Thursday, Jan. 9.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—Colossians 3:12-17.

Thursday, Jan. 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—Hebrews 13:20, 21.

Thursday, Jan. 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 61:10, 11.

Thursday, Jan. 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 51:3-8.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SISTER WINNAZAL, of Warren, Ohio, requests your faith and prayers in her behalf that she may be restored to health as she is very sick. It is her desire that she may live to care for her invalid son.

Bro. and Sr. Farley, of Bisbee, Arizona, request the prayers of the Saints in behalf of their child that his life may be spared.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

In Lower Egypt lies a pentagonal piece of land bounded on the north by the Mediterranean Sea, on the east by the Suez Canal, and on the other sides by railways. This tract known as the "Menzaleh district" has long been inhabited by fishermen, who build their mud huts above high water mark that they may not be washed away by the annual floods, which, in winter, give the country the appearance of a network of lakes.

Beneath this unattractive surface lay buried, for centuries, the homes, camps, tombs, and monuments of a once important people.

In keeping with Egyptian custom this historic spot had names almost without number; but for our purpose, two will suffice—the classical name Tanis and the Bible students' Land of Zoan. The 78th Psalm and 12th verse says: "Marvelous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan;" and since these marvelous things enter into the texts of the present quarter, archaeological revelations from that region will not be uninteresting.

In Numbers 13:22 we find a mention of the founding of this city in these words: "Now Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt;" but this leaves the date unfixd. About a century ago this tract was surveyed but as the country was engaged in war, nothing was done in the way of excavation till peace prevailed and then began the raid of the relic hunters. Soon the galleries of European museums abounded with Egyptian collections, which, to the sellers, were measured by their value in dollars and cents. Soon nobler aspirations filled the minds of explorers and hither came Mariette in search of lost links of history. Ten hundred and fifty feet of the temple ruins were unearthed through his efforts, but he was not permitted to finish the work so dear to him. His discourse pleading the necessity of prosecuting the work, and known as his "archaeological will" attracted the attention of M.

Neville, who after a survey of the grounds, wrote so glowing a description of the beautiful ruins that he caused an exploration fund to be created and himself to be sent Egyptward. Having but a short time at his disposal he turned his attention to the excavation of the mound of Maskhûtah and thus gave to the world a knowledge of the "treasure city" of Pithom.

Soon Tanis delivered its hidden treasures into the hands of M. Petrie to whom we owe much for his diligent research.

We make the following brief extracts from Amelia B. Edwards:—

"It was Rameses II. who reëdified Tanis—that Rameses popularly known as 'the Great,' whom Egyptologists agree in identifying with the oppressor of the Hebrews, and whom the ancients called Sesostris. He found the place given over to the 'abomination of desolation;' he left it one of the most magnificent of Egyptian cities. . . . What he found ready to his hand he appropriated; for the rest, he laid all the quarries of Egypt under contribution, bringing red granite from Syene and black from the valley of Hammamat, sandstone from Silsilas, and limestone from Toorah. Then a new temple arose larger and more splendid than ever graced the Delta. This temple, ostensibly consecrated to the worship of Ra, Horus, and other gods, was, in truth, erected to the glory and honor of Rameses himself. His name and titles cut in gigantic hieroglyphs were everywhere conspicuous. . . . A stranger entering Egypt by the old caravan route and here for the first time seeing an Egyptian temple would have taken it for granted that Rameses was the chief deity of the national Pantheon."

She speaks of a statue of himself that is a marvel. A single figure cut from a single stone of red granite stands ninety feet in height and weighs at least nine hundred tons, "Crown, plinth, and pedestal all counted, it stands one hundred and twenty feet above the level of the pavement." . . .

"Tanis was unquestionably the city in which Manepthah was residing when Moses and Aaron went up with their demands for a free passage for their people. They must have seen all the splendor of the great temple."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 27.

Editors Herald:—It is simply marvelous to see the throngs of people that gather at the Gospel Hall each evening to hear the old Jerusalem doctrine presented. Yesterday we added to our already large seating capacity forty more seats, and last night there was not seating room for all. To-night our numbers were swollen beyond all expectations; and, should the audience continue to grow with such increased magnitude, by Sunday there will not be standing room.

Last night I gave a lecture on the Sabbath question and it stirred Adventism from center to circumference. There was a lot of cross firing at the close of the lecture, all of which made more plain the ways of truth. An infidel said, "You have knocked Adventism higher than a kite." I told them if they thought I had treated the subject unfairly, to bring their minister along and I would give him half time to correct me. To-night they returned with a minister (not of their faith) who said he wanted to meet me in debate on the Sabbath question. I told him that if Adventism would give him proper indorsement and agree to stand or fall by his arguments I would meet him. Thus far no propositions have been signed.

This afternoon the young lady who has been playing the organ so ably for our meetings told me she wanted to be baptized. Several others have made up their minds to embrace the truth, so on New Year's day, the Lord willing, we will trouble the waters of Grand River, and will welcome all who are desirous of following the Master in the ways of righteousness. It would not surprise the writer to see half a hundred baptized here within the next six weeks.

A few nights after I came here I dreamed of helping my father hoist a large flag of stars and stripes, and the last I saw of it it was waving over a large grove of green timber in which all the underbrush was cut and piled up nicely. I am preaching every night and twice on Sundays with perfect ease. I expect W. J. Smith will join me here in a few days.

Hopefully yours,
R. E. GRANT.

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., November 21.

Editors Herald:—Since writing last I visited Tuncurry, after a year and three months absence, and spent one month. Gave what assistance I could to the branch and organized a local of the Daughters of Zion. Had a smooth passage of one hundred and twenty miles back to Sydney, where I stopped over Sunday and part of week. Four were baptized and another "local" organized with about fifteen members. One encouraging feature is the work of the Sunday school. They lately opened a library of about forty volumes, mostly church literature, which can be taken out for one penny a week per book. I was given to understand that the Herald and Autumn Leaves would be on file and bound at the close of each volume. Contributions of books to this library will be thankfully received and acknowledged by Bro. J. W. Smith, No. 83 Nelson Street, Balmain, Sydney.

Leaving Elder Kaler in Sydney I came here to prepare for conference which convenes December 28. I found the new chapel nearly completed, but much small work to be done yet. The brunt of the work has fallen on Bro. Broadway (president of branch), who has done nobly. We expect to have all things in readiness to entertain the conference. In the meantime I shall labor in the vicinity, where Elder Broadway has "opened up" several places for preaching. We expect a large attendance at conference and a good meeting.

General Booth of the Army is now in the Colony, also Robert Roberts, of Birmingham, England, the leading writer, thinker, and lecturer of the Christadelphians. Two main tenets of this body are, that man is wholly mortal, and that the kingdom of Christ was not set up at his first coming and will not be till his second advent. Roberts is exciting some interest. He is very interesting on the prophecies. GOMER WELLS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald:—In your issue of Dec. 18, 1895, page 817, I find the minutes of a special conference, held in Birmingham, England, November 16, in which, over the signatures of Bro's. James Caffall and G. T. Griffiths, is given an account of the investigation of the case of Andrew Thompson and Lovina Shaw. At the close of said report the above-named brethren add a postscript, in which they express the opinion that their predecessors failed to execute the law (presumably in the above case,) consequently the fair fame of the church had not been fostered, and she had suffered shame.

Being one of those who preceded the above-named brethren in the European mission, and as my attention was called to this same case while there, I deem it not out of place to offer a brief statement of what took place regarding the matter, so far as I had anything to do with it. It appears from the brethren's report that the case was first investigated at Hanley, in 1869.

Together with Bro. Forscutt, I was appointed to the mission in 1872. Bro. Josiah Ells, of the Quorum of the Twelve, had preceded us and while in England had become informed of the case, and had taken such action as he thought best with all the facts before him, as he informed me in St. Louis, where the General Conference of '72 was held; and I may state here that his account of the case and my subsequent finding on my arrival in England agree substantially with the present published report of Bro. Caffall and Griffiths, so far as their report goes; but Bro. Ells informed me that after investigation of the case he came to the conclusion that he would be justified in uniting Andrew Thompson and Lovina Shaw in marriage, and that he did so privately.

I found that this was well known to the Saints in that part of England. Bro. Forscutt presided over the mission for one year, after which he returned to America, and the mission was left in my charge. On my first visits to Clay Cross, where the Thompsons then resided, and where a branch had been organized, all appeared to be in peace; but subsequently some feeling sprung up between the Thompsons and others, and I was then approached by some of the Saints whose names I do not now remember and urged to take immediate action in the Thompson case, and expel them from the church. I stated the case to them as I understood it, and they appeared to understand it as I did. I then explained to them that I, being only an elder and Bro. Ells being an apostle, I had no power to sit in judgment on his official acts; but if they wished the validity of his decision in this case tested, if they would get it put into writing over their signatures, I would forward the document to the church in America for their investigation. I also offered to give them all the assistance I could in preparing the papers; but, up till the time of my leaving England, in the summer of 1874, I heard no more from the case.

I talked the matter over occasionally, as I recollect it, with Brn. Taylor, Caton, and others, but no request was made of me that I remember, to institute official investigation. Whatever my private opinion might have been regarding Bro. Ells' action in the case, I knew that I held no right to sit in judgment on his official acts. With the brethren who have now judged the case, it is different; they belong to the same quorum he did, and when on foreign missions, hold the right of judgment in such matters.

If in taking the course I have stated above, I have in any way violated or dishonored the law in such cases made and provided, those brethren will confer a favor on me by pointing it out.

Yours for the truth,

JOHN S. PATTERSON.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald.—Since our quarterly conference held at Kingston, October 6, I was called by telegram to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. J. G. Bauer, at Burlington, Iowa. Sadness was turned into joy when John, the only son of Bro. Bauer, asked me to baptize him. It seemed a burden to the old man when he was called home that John was still outside the church. I have good reason to believe that Bro. John's wife and children will follow.

The work in the district is in a fair condition. The branches are trying to let their light shine. The Alma branch is an exception. Through hard times they lost their church building and the branch is almost in a disorganized condition. Bro. Ware is trying to help them along. The branch officers live far from the branch and meetings were not regularly kept up. Some moved away and left them in rather a bad shape. They hold regular meetings again on Sunday and I hope they will "shake the coals from their garments and arise in the strength of the Lord."

The local ministry are doing what they can. Bro. C. P. Faul, also Bro. Head, and Wm. Haden are holding forth at Carrol school-house, north of Clarksdale; Bro. J. C. Anderson, lately from Wisconsin, now from Maysville, Missouri, preached at the German church last Sunday morning, and at Pleasant Grove at night. He expects to fall in line with the army of the Far West district and help to rebuild the waste places of Zion. May God bless the young soldier.

Sunday before last we dropped in on the St. Joseph folks and found Bro. Terry busy at his post. Six were added by baptism at the night meeting; so the good work goes on. Bro. Lewis, our Bishop's agent, is canvassing the district, teaching the tithing law and encouraging the Saints. Bro. William E. Summerfield, our missionary, puts in full time in the district and reports prospects good.

We understand that Bro. T. W. Chatburn has a debate on hand again. May the Lord strengthen his lungs for the occasion. So, you see, we keep the camp fires blazing, believing that the hastening time has come; the time when the Lord said, "Ye shall find favor in the eyes of the people." Therefore, brethren, let us live humble and prayerful and work for the upbuilding of Zion; and let us arise in the strength of Israel's God till victory is ours. No furlough will be granted. We will work till Jesus comes. We are at the end of another year. May the peace of God and his Holy Spirit abide with his Saints.

Your coworker,

T. T. HINDERKS.

ROMAN, Va., Dec. 21.

Editors Herald.—Since last writing for your columns a fortnight was spent in the city of churches—Brooklyn, New York. Four additions were made to the church by baptism. Only one could be credited as the result of tent work. Brn. Potts, Cocks, Squires, and Watez rendered valuable assistance in preaching, while most of the Saints did their best to make the music interesting and attractive, with Sr. Box presiding at the organ. Bro. A. R. L. Gunn closed the series with a stereopticon lecture, which was appreciated by all present.

Conference time having arrived we hastened to Baldwin, Maryland, to be in attendance and have gospel tent in readiness for the comers thereto. Enroute I preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Hopkins, of Horners-town, New Jersey, in the Baptist church, to quite a large audience. One by one we pass over to wait the sound of the trumpet that shall awaken the dead in Christ. Conference passed off pleasantly, Brn. F. M. Sheehy and George Potts making the tabernacle resound with their eloquence in setting forth the gospel story, in clear and concise thoughts. Bro. F. M. in his logical way startled some of the good people with a map of original America, illustrating the travels of the aborigines, their cities, wars, and temples. It made one feel kin to this "branch" of the house of Joseph. Bro. Gunn gave two or three lectures using his stereopticon views, which was a treat in this village.

Farewell was said and Saints and friends returned home. We lowered the canvas tabernacle, folded it up, and laid it away for the winter; thence to the city of brotherly love; but you would not think this a proper name if there now while the strike is in vogue, as you see by the newspapers; however, we hope for better times. Sad yet true,

"The voice of the awful trumpet
Arresteth the march of time;
With terror, woe, and judgment
It soundeth through every clime."

By request of Bro. W. H. Kelley I left Bro. Smith, of Providence, Rhode Island, to look after the work in the city, and turned my face southward, stopping at Baldwin, Maryland, a fortnight, baptizing two whom I think will be numbered with the workers of that place. Brn. Smith and Stone, our old-time veteran in his seventy-third year followed up the effort on Thanksgiving, which was appreciated by those who heard. Bro. Aaron N. Watez has been at New Park, Pennsylvania for two months, doing gospel work with some interest manifested; so he writes. Bro. George Potts is doing what he can in Brooklyn, with the assistance of the local ministry, to get the work before the people. Bro. Gunn, I hear, is rendering acceptable service with his stereopticon views and lecturing. May success attend them. Bro. Joseph Squires has been holding aloft the banner of truth at Broad River, Connecticut, since we left with tent, every two weeks. He writes that some few are ready for baptism.

Continuing my journey I arrived at Staunton, Virginia, the 29th of November. Next morning I walked out to Bro. Cleveland's, a distant relative of the president. Not finding him at home I continued my walk till I found Bro. Isaac Coffman, where I spent a few days and preached four sermons in his house to fair sized audiences, thence to this place; but ere I came I learned that in former times some of the good people of this place had given way to their lower passions and stoned our stalwart brethren, Moler and Shinn, furnishing them with a few eggs to buy candy with.

If such fare had gone on record, it is doubtful whether the Quaker would have submitted to apostolic authority. However, he is here, and as yet has received no damage.

They had a nice church building here which took fire last April and burned, hence as the doors of other public places have been closed in the past to our ministry, I consoled myself by occupying a private house. The way to do much at present seems closed; first, for lack of some one to assist in adjusting affairs; second, for lack of time, as other engagements demand my time.

One of the mysteries the ministry come in contact with occasionally is, "I want my name off of your church record; yet I want you to know I have not apostatized." Such statements always put me in mind of the Indian who was lost and said, "Indian was all right, but wigwam was lost." It is one of the failings of humanity, and to be lamented; for it is apparent without investigation that when statements are made charging everybody as being in error and not willing to follow the Scripture rule for settling difficulties there is something wrong with the one or ones making such charges, to say the least. It is natural for man to want an honorable discharge, yet the church said how they were to be admitted and submission was manifest, and the church ought to have something to say as to how its adherents shall go out. This is logical. I hear a wedding is in vogue for Christmas Day and the Parson is to be invited at Baldwin, Maryland; so the world moves on, "marrying and giving in marriage;" as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the "coming of the Son of Man."

"The day of the Lord, it cometh;
It comes, like a thief in the night,
It comes while the world is dreaming
Of safety, and peace, and light.
It cometh, the day of sackcloth,
Of darkness, storm, and fire;
The day of the great avenging,
The day of his burning ire."

These poetical thoughts portray the present condition of things.

I shall close my effort here Monday eve and leave for Baldwin. I trust my stay although short may be of some benefit to those who have a desire to hold fast to the rod of iron at least. It has been hard for some to survive the trials of the past, yet I feel hopeful that the worst is over, as the darkest hour is just before day. Be encouraged, all ye who are called to be Saints in the grand old State of Virginia. In gospel bonds,

A. H. PARSONS.

IRVING, Minn., Dec. 24.

Editors Herald:—I have been preaching here about four weeks, and can begin to see the effect of the work done. The Spirit of the Lord has been with me in power, and it is having its effect upon the people. I have had a mixed congregation—Methodists, Adventists, Catholics, infidels, Episcopalians, etc., and have gained in favor with many of them.

While I have gained favor with the Adventists, yet they are going to make war upon our faith and have written to headquarters for one of their best men to try and answer the evidence I have presented in favor of our faith, as against that which they are presenting to the world. By request of some, I told them why I believed in the first day of the week as a rest day and a day of worship, and I had the best liberty I ever had upon that question. The Adventists themselves said it was the best discourse they ever heard on that subject, and that unless their people could clear it up they would drop it. Some that had been leaning that way said they were fully satisfied now, and will be lasting friends to our faith.

I think that a dream I had while laboring here last winter is in process of fulfillment. I can now hear the mutterings of the coming storm. I saw myself building a house—a nice, cozy building—and before I had it completed I left it and went away. After I had been gone a short time I came back to complete it, and while at work I saw a cyclone pass by which made quite a stir, and could see things whirled about and flying in the air. But as I looked at it, it seemed to be mostly straw that was being whirled about. I looked to see what effect it had upon my house, as it stood in line of the storm, and saw that it had not been injured at all, but stood there in good condition, finished and ready to occupy. I had thought that the opposition would come from another source, as the presiding elder of the Methodist Church lives in Minneapolis, just across the street from where I stop while in the city; but it now seems that it will be an Adventist cyclone of straw that the work will have to meet. Well, let it come. I shall continue to preach the gospel, and shall not run when the storm comes, but take shelter under the gospel and preach while the storm blows and goes by.

I rejoice in the truth and feel the best when standing in its defense. All that is grand, good, and ennobling is embraced in our faith, and, like a piece of gold, shines the brighter by rubbing. We have all the truth that others have and besides that have the fullness of the gospel as restored by angel hands.

The fire that was transmitted by the hand of the angel when he ordained Joseph and Oliver still burns in the bosoms of the servants of God, aiding them to present the gospel in burning words of eloquence, thus reaching the hearts of the people, leading them out of bondage and out of the creeds and ruts of sectarianism. My hope is in the gospel as the power of God unto salvation, as nothing else can save us in the kingdom of God. My desire is to labor to establish it among men.

Yours,

E. A. STEDMAN.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, Dec. 27.

Editors Herald:—The holiday season finds us here with a series of services just opening, and with fairly good prospects and weather before us, and calls for labor coming to hand, reminding that there is no time to loiter by the way.

On November 7-12 I was here and held several services with good interest. I left on the 13th, and went to Radcliff, Hardin County, where resides Bro. Oden Jacobs, formerly of Mission, Illinois, and well known to Ye Editor, who received me with all readiness, and who, with his excellent lady, of Lutheran religious inclinations, did his share to make my stay pleasant. Bro. George Houck, wife, and two daughters reside near, and give the elders a "home welcome" when going that way. I preached six times while there; in the ex-Christian church, which was procured by Brn. Jacobs and Houck, at fifty cents per service, and furnished the fuel and lights. Good liberty was granted the preacher, though the attendance was not large. Some were very attentive to the word. Elders should not forget these brethren when going near Radcliff; they are lonely and worthy. They remembered and supplied my necessities.

From Radcliffe I went to Newton, where I remained and labored till the 3d inst. Only a remnant of the branch of other days resides there. Bro. W. S. Barbee, Srs. Needham, Amos, and two or three others, including Bro. Jimmie Prosser of "pleasant memory," who try to continue branch meetings, but with the tide bearing strongly against them. Held ten services while there, with congregations numbering from eight to thirty persons. It was pulling against the stream, but I do not think we lost ground.

We celebrated Thanksgiving at Bro. Barbee's, while the social event that united himself and Mrs. Caroline Winslow as husband and wife, transpired. Sr. Barbee is not far from the door of the kingdom, and I hope she will soon enter, and walk in the full light of gospel truth. I must not omit to say that I had the pleasure of baptizing Sr. Julia A. Pence, wife of Dr. Pence, of Runnells, on Sunday, October 20, and on December 8, baptized Bro. Ab'jah Clark and wife, of Runnells, the latter being a niece of Sr. Pence. Both come from the Christian Church.

On the 10th inst. was present at the wedding of Sr. Vinnie Russell, to Mr. Elbert J. Clarke, both of Grinnell. By request took charge of the ceremonies, being assisted by Professor Parker, of the Iowa College. The occasion was pleasant. A number of relatives of both parties were present, and all wish the happy pair joyful success while rowing over the ripples and waves of life's river.

From Grinnell I went to Olivet, Mahaska County, and while abiding at Sr. Rebeca Laughlin's, who with her two sons, one daughter, and one son-in-law, are the only Saints residing there. I preached ten times, one of the services being at the Olivet M. P. church, the others being at the Disciple church, at Leighton, where Brn. F. A. Smith and F. M. Weld had such an auspicious opening about one year ago. Our stay at Olivet was made pleasant by the kindness of the Saints and friends. What the results of the labor done at Olivet and vicinity will be, the future must reveal. A religious dearth has prevailed there to an extent, since the days when the people rejected the testimonies of Bro. I. N. White and others. I do not think the labor done there is lost, however.

A great "calm" seems to have been over the church for a season; a quietude prevails that to us seems almost portentous! What does it mean? Nothing to especially incite objectively. Are the virgins falling to sleep? Are there just a "faithful few" left with the branches, who are keeping faithful watch, while the great majority are dropping into inactivity? Are their family altars left to desolation? Are they nearly always absent from church services? Have they little or no interest in branch business meetings? no means to expend in the development of the kingdom? no interest in the salvation of souls? Is the church resting while it gathers strength for the accomplishment of a special work in the time just at hand? Let us hope it is this last mentioned.

I most heartily agree with the statement in the Herald for December 25 that a properly prepared history of the church is one of the growing, pressing necessities. Just think of it, a church movement of sixty-five years' duration in this age of the world, and no authentic historic statement in full ever yet given to the world! We have its history in parts, but no successive statement yet compiled or published. Biographies of the leading men of the church do not necessarily constitute church history; nor is a compilation of their personal sayings and teachings church history; such are only elements in church history at most. An authentic historic review of the rise and acts of the church can be made, should be made, at the earliest possible time, I think. Whether those "acts" be right or wrong, when compared with an accepted standard is not the question. An authentic history of the rise, spread, and work of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, covering the years from 1805 to date of conclusion of such history, designed for the information of "the whole world," is demanded of us. It would be one of the most satisfactory means of correcting the grave errors that exist in the mind of the popular world relative to the church and faith, as well as of removing the clouds of ignorance that exist concerning the same. As it will take about four to five years to place such a work before the public, the sooner the church sets about the work, the better. Of course this is my opinion. It is a conviction, too.

Am glad to learn by recent utterances published in the Herald that the ministry, especially the seventies, begin to realize that the Sunday school cause has attained such degree of development and has such able Sunday school workers for its advancement that they now feel relieved of the burden of that work, and can therefore give their undivided time and energies to their divine calling—the missionary work. Glad also for the reason that the Sabbath school work gives these workers such a grand field in which to accomplish so much good, and that they are capable of doing it. We are anticipating great and good results from this army of workers in this line, great spiritual development among the young of the church, as also carrying the light of the gospel of Christ to many yet without the church.

"Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act IN THE OFFICE in which he is appointed, in all diligence."—D. C. 104: 44.

Local laborers in our district are improving the opportunities offered for labor, and are doing most of the baptizing. Bro. N. Stamm, notwithstanding his disadvantages, is battling away in the interests of the work as he is able, being deaf and growing old; he is courageous. Saints seem firm.

Anxiously,

C. SCOTT.

GRANT'S PASS, Ore., Dec. 23.

Editors Herald:—Inasmuch as many of the Saints are inquiring in regard to the letter I wrote in regard to the visit with Nephi, please allow me to say that it is a fact; it was no delusion. On the evening of November 24 he appeared to the Lamanite and told him he was Nephi. The Lamanite, not knowing who Nephi was came to our house the next day at two o'clock and was relating what had occurred, when Nephi appeared, passing behind my family, laying his hands on each of their heads in turn, saying a ceremony that we did not understand. But when he came to the Lamanite he knelt in front of him and went through a ceremony similar to the one he did with us, laying his hands on his head, and said that he was of his own flesh and blood and one of his brethren (as stated in Herald).

He was dressed in the Jewish high priest costume, apparently two robes, one was long, nearly sweeping the floor, while the top one came about his knees. The long one was white, the other purple. He had a girdle round his waist. His cap was after the high priest style, white, too hard to describe. On the 18th day of December he appeared at one o'clock again, in the same costume.

But while I am contemplating this letter he appears, in the same costume, but all white. He raises a sword and says, "Keep the commandments, and keep the Sabbath day holy. Read your Bible daily. Have charity for those who do not believe." He warns me to instruct my children in the right way or their blood will be required at my hands.

He has on a breastplate (if I might call it so), for I don't know what else to call it. It is square and covers his whole breast; and it has twelve squares, all of different colors, each square is set with what seems to be diamonds, or small stones of some rich quality, of various colors. He says they represent the twelve tribes of the children of Israel.

Now Saints, this is all I can tell you, though he said much more; but probably it would not be of interest, for it was for the Lamanite. However, I will say that the Lamanite is a mixed blood, an offshoot of the Mohawk tribe. Nephi said he would come again. Your brother,

J. J. LEABO.

LUCAS, Iowa, Dec. 22.

Editors Herald:—I have been laboring in a new field in Warren County, where the Reorganized Church had never been heard of until I started meetings there two months ago; and as usual we found the crank who ran when he was not sent, howling "Mormon polygamy;" and, of course, by professed Christians. But how true it is that the angel of the Lord shall go before his servants.

I went to Cool, in Liberty Township, on Friday to secure the schoolhouse, and was informed by Mr. Black, the M. E. deacon who had charge as janitor, that the M. E.'s would hold services in the house on Sunday, and that he would see that an appointment was given out for me on Monday evening; but when I arrived Monday evening I found the house all dark, and Mr. Black could not be found; but by the kindness of Mr. Hyrum Nisong and Uncle Harry Butler, (who was acquainted with Joseph Smith while living in Nauvoo, and had sold him grain and other farm produce, and never knew anything wrong about him,) who took the matter in hand, we got the key and went to Mr. Black's, got the lamps, and filled them with oil, and by 7:30 we had a full house of the very best of people, who were anxious to hear. Many of them told me they were tired of the skimmed milk of the word, and they knew it did not accord with the teachings of the Bible.

I staid there two weeks, had a full house every night, and from one to five took down the references as I gave them. Some say they think the deacon will be a better man after this. He came to hear me one evening; and it is reported that he heard all that was said other evenings—outside of the window.

I left many good friends there desiring to know more of this latter-day gospel, which they all say is the Bible truth. Many of them say there has been more Bible reading and investigation going on in that neighborhood for the past two weeks than in five years before. I left with many requests to return. As a neighborhood a more clever or kinder-hearted people I never met. I will return after the holidays if not called to another field.

I forgot to mention that the Rev. Pond, of the Christian Union Church called his flock around the altar and prayed earnestly that they might not be deceived or led astray.

Yours in the gospel,

W. H. KEPHART.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 24.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned home from a trip in the Eastern and Northern Michigan districts. All along the line so far as I have been, the watchword among the Saints seems to be "Onward to victory!" And that air of confidence usually seen in the returning warrior's face seems to shine forth in the countenances of the great majority of the Saints, expressing their faith in the great and final triumph of the latter-day work.

In Bay City it was my pleasure to meet with quite a large number of Saints whose experiences are rich in faith, and who by well-ordered lives are reflecting the glorious gospel which they most assuredly believe and know to be the "power of God unto salvation." Bro. F. M. Cooper is in charge of the work there, and by his wise counsel and untiring energy has succeeded in establishing the work on a firm and solid basis, though not without loss of some of the members who first went to that city. The pruning knife is sometimes necessary in order to the healthy growth of the tree, and so among those of the faith recommitted to men, dead and fruitless branches should be lopped off that the work be not hindered.

From Bay City I went with Bro. Cooper to Applegate, Sanilac County, where he was to engage in debate with a Mr. William Ellerthorpe of the regular Baptist Church. They had met and discussed one proposition some three weeks before, involving the claims of the Latter Day Saints, but now the tide is changed. It was the regular Baptist Church that was to be brought before the scrutinizing gaze of the public; and by the general demeanor of Mr. Ellerthorpe we were rather inclined to the idea that he had been considering that fact. It was his business to prove that "the regular Baptist Church is in faith, doctrine, and organization in harmony with the Authorized Version of the Bible."

He started out with the statement that the Baptist Church believed in the God of the Bible; that he was a God of mercy, love, justice, etc., etc., and by his opening speech it was plainly discernible that if Bro. Cooper succeeded in getting anything before the people in which the Baptist Church should be shown up as it is, it would be by forcing his opponent to answer questions pertinent to the issue. Bro. Cooper, in replying to Mr. Ellerthorpe, held the Baptist Manual in his hand, and told the people that he purposed to show by a comparison of it with the Bible that while his opponent professed to believe in a God of love, justice, and mercy, that they endowed him with all qualifications of an incarnate devil; and that there was no more similarity between the Baptist Church and the Church of Christ as found in the Bible than between a bag of bran and a man. But without delineating further, though the disputants had agreed to debate eight sessions of two hours each, when the time for the third session rolled around Mr. Ellerthorpe had come to the conclusion that it would not be profitable to the Baptist Church to continue the debate further, and he therefore made himself conspicuously absent. Quite a large number of people had assembled to hear the discussion, but were disappointed in that; so by the request Bro. Cooper, and others, the writer discoursed with considerable freedom on "The signs of the times."

From there I went to Port Huron, met with the Saints, and by persuasion of the members and of some who are friendly to the work, consented to stay over Sunday. It seemed quite fortunate, too, that I stayed, for a Rev. Mr. Wilson advertised on Saturday a lecture on Mormonism for Sunday at two o'clock, and all the ministers in the city were invited to be there; and, as I was in the city, I accepted the invitation, took notes, and replied to him. It resulted in the formulating of a proposition involving the claim of the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, to be discussed in that place, beginning the 28th of January. Mr. Wilson expects to secure the services of Mr. Musser, with Mr. Ellerthorpe as an assistant. We await further developments.

I expect to go from here the first of next week to Grand Rapids to assist Bro. R. E. Grant in opening the work. He writes me that a good interest is being developed there. I hope to see the time speedily come when the large cities may be stirred and shaken from center to circumference with this glorious work; and I believe it is a mistake to think the cities cannot be effectually worked now. Where elders adapted to city work may be permitted—without being hampered for financial aid for their families, nor circumscribed by some one else's policy—to make a persistent effort, work in the cities may be as effectually accomplished as in the rural districts or country towns.

In conclusion, permit me to say that the work here in Detroit seems to be in good condition in general, the Saints trying to do the best they can; at least there are but few exceptions. I expect to baptize a Mr. McDonald and wife here next Sunday. They are members of the Disciple Church, and are splendid people. Others are interested in the city, and will obey soon. That God may speed his work and give grace and strength to his people to endure to the end, is my humble prayer.

WILLARD J. SMITH.

SHENANDOAH, Iowa, December 28.

Editors Herald:—I preached here twice last Sunday; attended the Sunday school entertainment on Christmas eve. We had a nice tree. The exercises of the evening were good; the children did their part well. Much credit is due the superintendent and teachers of this school for services so cheerfully rendered in so noble a cause. The Saints here are striving to do the best they can, as a general thing. There are, of course, many obstacles in the way and difficulties to surmount, but with energy and constant diligence we hope to gain the victory.

Bro. O. B. Thomas has returned from the Eastern Iowa district, where called to do service for the Master and is now at home for a few days with loved ones, but will commence work in this district the first of the coming year in the places where they are anxiously awaiting his return. We hope to push the work in this district this winter as best we can. We have quite a number of new places in which to preach, and shall, by the help afforded by him who stands at the helm, occupy as the way may open.

We believe the presidents of branches and officers are doing what they can for the advancement of the work in their immediate neighborhoods, also endeavoring to build up the Saints in the faith; but O, what a work, what a task, to discharge this all-important duty acceptably to God and to preach this gospel to those who attend their meetings! They feel their weakness and inability to perform this work, hence are more than glad to have the missionary drop in by the way once in awhile to give them a lift. And then there are times when it is impossible for the president of the district to attend to calls made upon him, in consequence of secular duties necessary to be done, then this of course falls upon the missionary, by request of district authorities; and so we labor together having no conflict or jealousy between one another, but in the love and fear of God we work harmoniously, to the end that all may be benefited and the interest of the work advanced.

Now let me say to all in this district, let us take hold with renewed courage and press forward in so great a cause. May the God of peace bless every effort put forth in the interest of the work.

Your brother and servant,
HENRY KEMP.

BONANZA, Mo., Jan. 1.

Editors Herald:—The battle is over and victory perches on our banner. God wondrously blessed me in the defense of Nephi's record. Never in all my ministerial life had I such floods of light and such liberty of thought, and while my opponent, J. H. D. Tomson, is a scholarly man and considered to be brilliant, yet he was confounded and it was apparent to many of his brethren. Not only was God's power manifest with me in light and liberty, and with him to the dulling of his brilliant mind, but it was manifest upon the people, both Saint and sinner and some Campbellites. Bro. I. N. White was my moderator, rendering valuable assistance. He also is pitted against one Rev. Carter for a debate at the same place.

I write you this short letter merely to go upon record to the world that there is a God in Israel and that he will stand by his servants in the defense of his truth when they are humble and faithful. I know I was inspired. I did receive floods of light in the very moment needed. My tongue was unloosed and in voice and lung power I was wonderfully blessed—not a break in voice in the whole four days' discussion; and herein is a fulfillment of prophecy given by Sr. W. A. Head, of Pleasant Grove branch, when my voice was despaired of.

I lift up my voice and heart this morning to my heavenly Father and thank him for the green spots in memory made so by his power made manifest. Binding these together make a bundle that cannot be broken, and cheers our heart oftentimes when on the bleak plains of winter's despondency; and I bear my testimony that Jesus lives and there is a power in this latter-day glory; and that if his servants will live pure and humble, watchful and prayerful, there is "no weapon" that can prevail against Zion. God bless you, dear Herald, with a happy and prosperous new year.

T. W. CHATBURN.

SARGENT, Mo., Dec. 30.

Editors Herald:—My work for the past two months has been principally among the Saints in different parts of the district. I have been preaching regularly and have been enjoying good liberty, and with the Lord's help have been able to leave the Saints feeling renewed in the work. My experience is that it is very needful to "feed" the "sheep." If they are not fed and kept nicely nourished, they get in a stupor and become indifferent, especially those who have not cut their teeth sufficiently to properly handle stronger food than milk.

I find so many who think they have done enough when they were baptized. If we become men in Christ, it will take more than "milk" to make us such; and it seems to me that every Saint should be able to tell when they are cutting or have "cut" their teeth. The time is here for us, as Saints of God, to "wake up" and "let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

I am here with Bro. Sparling, from Willow Springs. He returns home, and on to assist Bro. Ward in a debate, in Arkansas to commence about January 8. I go from here to Zonker, the 4th, and to Vera Cruz the 11th. There I will meet our district president, Bro. C. M. Bootman. I will travel with him for awhile. We go from Vera Cruz to John's Mill for the 17th, from there to Blue Springs, where I baptized several in October last.

Dear Saints, Let us do all we can to be faithful in this work, and as 1 Peter 2:1 says, "Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings." Also 2 Peter 1:5-8: "... giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

These are qualities that to keep in possession of we are constantly in war with our common foe, the Devil, who rages in us as well as without. Let mad ignorance and vain superstition give way for the truth of God, and let the inspiration of his Holy Spirit fill the earth, and his knowledge so be in us, that when the angel cries, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," we may be up, wideawake, and go.

WHO IS AWRY?

SOME wise sage or poet of renown is credited with saying, "Comparisons are odious." Perhaps that is true, but comparisons are both forceful and convenient to exhibit a superior utility or truthfulness of one statement over another, and thereby discover the greater truth which should be the primary and zealous desire of every lover of gospel truth. With malice toward none and good will toward all I put the following in contrast:—

GEORGE DERRY.

I admit that it is a good thing to heal the sick and afflicted in body, but what shall it profit to heal and restore to health for a time the outer man, if the inner man is by that means blinded, perverted, and deceived; and however charitable I may wish to appear, I cannot close my eyes and say that I believe that those persons that are so zealous and persevering in imitating some of the sins that were to follow true believers,—I am not ready to believe or admit the good there is with them comes from God.—Herald, vol. 42, p. 831.

MORONI.

Wherefore, all things which are good, cometh of God; and that which is evil, cometh of the devil; for the devil is an enemy unto God, and fighteth against him continually, and inviteth and enticeth to sin, and to do that which is evil continually. But behold, that which is of God, inviteth and enticeth to do good continually; wherefore, everything which inviteth and enticeth to do good, and to love God, and to serve him, is inspired of God.—Book of Mormon, p. 536.

Of late there has been a wave of admonition in the Herald to the effect that we should be sure of the tenableness of our statements or positions taken upon gospel topics. Christ said:—

Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.—Matt. 7: 16-18.

Bro. Derry says:—

I am not ready to believe or admit that the good there is with them comes from God.—Herald, p. 831.

Moroni said:—

All things which are good cometh of God.—Book of Mormon, p. 536.

A wonderful good criterion in self-examination as well as the examination of others is,

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.—Matt. 7: 2.

Whoever attains unto the acumen of perfection that they can give an absolute definition of what is good and what is evil in the superlative sense may with a degree of safety pass judgment upon the acts and words of his fellow being.

There must come inspirational comfort unto all who have trust in the promise that our final hearing shall be before Him who was made of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth.—Isaiah 11: 3, 4.

In religion as in food; one man's meat is another man's poison. What to one is of vital importance to another is nonessential. Even we of the same faith see things in a different light. Blessed are those who dwell in unity, Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.—Eph. 4: 3.

So mote it be. Amen.

GLEN DENNING AND LAMBERT DEBATE.

SECOND proposition:—

Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the church of God in fact? And is it in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine and church organization? J. R. Lambert affirms.

To my definition of the terms of the proposition, my opponent offered no objection. Hence it does not make any difference how many other churches may call themselves Latter Day Saints. We might call a thistle a rose; but would that make it one? I defined what I meant by being in harmony with the New Testament, and no objection was offered to it; hence that which is additional makes no conflict, unless it is condemned by what is written in the New Testament. The Bible contains additional revelation from Genesis to Revelation, but it is not in conflict with itself.

The following points were established in the discussion, and my opponent has not been able to remove them:—

1. Phrases used in describing the New Testament church: "Church of God" (Acts 20: 28); "body of Christ" (Col. 1: 18); "kingdom of heaven," and "kingdom of God" (Luke 16: 16; Matt. 11: 12; Acts 20: 28, 29).

"The Church of Jesus Christ" is eminently a suitable and proper name. (Eph. 3: 14, 15; Matt. 16: 18.) The people of which the church is composed are called saints. (Rom. 1: 7; 1 Cor. 1: 2; 2 Cor. 13: 13); with about fifty-nine other passages in the New Testament as proof.

2. But one true church. Local organizations, such as "the churches of Macedonia," "churches of God," "churches of Christ," "churches of the saints," "churches of Galatia," are but integral parts of the one church. All these believed the same gospel and lived under the same divine law. Under this law they had the same sympathy for one another that the different members of the human body have for one another. (Eph. 5: 25-27; 4: 4-6; 1 Cor. 12: 4-20.)

3. The church is a divine institution; and, through the gospel, men and women are placed in it in order that they may be saved. (Eph. 5: 25-27; Matt. 16, 18; Acts 2: 37-41; Rom. 1: 16; 2 Cor. 4: 3, 4; John 8: 31, 32; Acts 8: 5, 16; also scripture found in Acts chapters 9 and 22.

4. But one true gospel. It is called "the doctrine of Christ," "perfect law of liberty," "the truth," and "the word of God." (John 7: 16; James 1: 25; Eph. 1: 13; 1 Peter 1: 22-25; 2 Cor. 11: 4; Gal. 1: 6-8; 2 John 9-11.)

5. But one true Spirit, which we receive through obedience to the gospel. (Eph. 4: 3, 4; 2 Cor. 11: 4; 1 Cor. 12: 13.) This one Spirit is the light and power of the gospel. It represents God and the gospel fully and correctly. When we are in harmony with it, we are right; when in conflict, wrong.

6. Importance of the gospel, or the doctrine of Christ. It is the only means of salvation. The true ministers of Christ always teach it, and all who are willing to hear the voice of the Good Shepherd, obey it, when they have proper opportunity. It is, therefore, a divine test by which we may know who are the people of God, hence who are his church. (John 7: 16, 17; 1 Tim. 4: 16; 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17; 2 John 9-11; John 3: 34; Rom. 10: 14-17; Matt. 28: 19, 20; John 8: 45-47; Deut. 18: 18, 19; Isa. 55: 4; John 18: 37; John 12: 46-50.)

7. First principles of the gospel. Their importance and relation to other principles of the divine plan. Their binding character in all ages. (Heb. 5: 12; 6: 1-3; John 7: 16; 2 John 9; Matt. 28: 19, 20; 4: 4.)

8. Examination of the principles. Faith. True and living faith required. A traditional faith in the God who once lived and blessed his people, will not save us. A true and genuine faith will lead us to teach and obey the truth, and to truly believe in all the provisions and promises of the gospel. (Heb. 11: 6; John 14: 1; Eph. 6: 16; Matt. 15: 9; 28: 18-20; Rom. 10: 14, 15; Matt. 7: 21-27; Luke 8: 19-21; James 2: 17, 20, 26.)

9. Repentance. Reformation of character. It requires us to turn away from sin. God will save us from our sins, but not in our sins. Our part is to obey; God will remit our sins and send the promised blessings. (Matt. 4: 17; Mark 1: 14, 15; Luke 13: 3; 24: 45-47; Acts 2: 38; 2 Cor. 7: 10; Luke 3: 7-14.)

10. Baptism. It is an important part of the gospel, and essential to salvation. (Mark 1: 1-5; Luke 16: 16; 7: 29, 30; Matt. 3: 13-17.)

For the remission of sins. (Mark 1: 4; Luke 3: 3; Acts 22: 16; Gal. 3: 26-28; Acts 2: 38.)

Immersion the proper mode. Both Jesus and the eunuch went down into the water to be baptized. John baptized where there was "much water." Those who received John's baptism were baptized of him "in the river Jordan." It is called a birth. (Jno. 3: 5.) It is also called a burial. (Rom. 6: 3, 4; Col. 2: 12.)

11. Laying on of hands. It is one of the principles of the gospel which originated with God. (Heb. 6: 1, 2; Jno. 7: 16; 2 Jno. 9; Matt. 4: 4.)

It was practiced, first, for the giving of the Holy Ghost (Acts 8: 14-17; 19: 1-6); second, for ordination into the ministry (Num. 27: 18-20; Deut. 34: 9; Acts 6: 6; 13: 1-4; 1 Tim. 4: 14; 2 Tim. 1: 6); third, for the healing of the sick (Mark 16: 15-20; James 5: 14, 15; Mark 6: 5, 13); fourth, for the blessing of little children (Matt. 19: 13-15; Mark 10: 13-16. Compare with Doctrine and Covenants 17: 19.)

12. Resurrection of the dead. Through the redemptive work of Christ all will be raised from the dead. If their personality and individuality are preserved, conscious existence between death and the resurrection is a necessity. Christ was the "firstfruits of them that slept." He was the true type. His resurrection was the reunion of body and spirit, and so will ours be. (John 5: 25-29; 1 Cor. 15: 21-23.)

Two resurrections, first and second.

13. Eternal judgment. It is the judgment of God, who is an eternal Being, hence eternal judgment. All will be judged, rewarded, or punished, according to their works. (Matt. 16: 27; Rev. 22: 12; 2 Cor. 5: 10; Eccl. 12: 13, 14.)

Degrees of reward and punishment. (1 Cor. 15: 40-42; Matt. 10: 41, 42; Jno. 3: 19; Acts 17: 30, 31; Matt. 11: 20-24; James 4: 17; Luke 12: 47, 48.)

14. The Holy Spirit. The promise and office work of the Spirit. All the true children of God are entitled to it. Different phrases of the New Testament applying to the promise, which are all used interchangeably and synonymously. (Jno. 14: 15-17; 14: 26; 15: 26; Luke 24: 49; Acts 1: 4, 5; 2: 1-4, 32, 33, 37-39; 10: 44, 45; 11: 15-17.)

It is a gospel promise. (Jno. 14: 21-24; Acts 5: 32; Matt. 3: 11; Mark 1: 1-5; Luke 16: 16; Acts 2: 37, 38; Acts 4: 4, 31; 8: 14-17; 19: 1-6.)

This promise vouchsafes to us every promise, gift, and blessing resulting from the operation of the Spirit upon the different members of the church, as God may choose to dispense them. (Eph. 1: 13, 14; 2 Cor. 5: 5; Gal. 5: 22, 23; 1 Cor. 12: 1-12; Eph. 1: 15-20; Jno. 7: 16, 17; Mark 16: 15-20; Rom. 12: 4-8.)

15. Moral conduct, or good works. We attach special importance to good works, as enjoined in the New Testament, and in all the sacred books of the church. The Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants are more pointed in the condemnation of sin than are some parts of the Bible. We are taught to live in obedience to the laws of the government under which we live. "He that keepeth the law of God hath no need to break the laws of the land." (Gal. 5: 22, 23; Rom. 12: 1-3, 9-21; Phil. 4: 8; 2 Peter 1: 4-12; Book of Mormon pp. 115, 116, 99, 249; D. and C. Secs. 41, 42; 49: 3; 59: 1-3; 58: 5; 95: 2.)

16. Organization of the church, authority to administer, etc. Beginning of the kingdom of God on the earth. Divine law must be administered by divine authority. Organization results from obedience to law, and partakes of the character of the law which produces it. The perfect and unchangeable law of the gospel requires and produces a perfect and unchangeable organization for the church. The work of organization is gradual and progressive, but must always be done in harmony with the pattern. (Luke 16: 16; Matt. 11: 12; Mark 1: 1-5; Luke 17: 20, 21.)

General form of the organization of the church. Officers placed therein. What for? How long to continue? (1 Cor. 1: 1, 2; 12: 27, 28; Eph. 4: 7-15.)

Authority needed in order to administer in the things of God. (Deut. 18: 18, 19; Acts 3: 22, 23; Luke 4: 18; Heb. 5: 4, 5, 6, 10; Luke 6: 12, 13; John 15: 16; Luke 10: 1, 2; John 13: 20; Acts 13: 1-4; 20: 28; D. C. 17: 5; 1 Cor. 7: 17; Titus 1: 5.)

17. Restoration of the gospel. Restoration implies that apostasy has preceded it. Such an apostasy is plainly indicated in the following scriptures. (Rom. 11: 20-22; Acts 20: 28-30; Matt. 11: 12; 2 Thess. 2: 1-3, 7; 2 Tim. 4: 1-3; John 12: 35; 2 Peter 2: 1-3; Daniel 7: 21-24; Rev. 12: 1-6; 13: 7; Isa. 24: 5, 6.)

The gospel to be restored and the church and kingdom of God to be built up among men just previous to the Second Advent of Christ, to reign in glory. (Matt. 24: 14; 4: 23; 9: 35; Mark 1: 14, 15; Gal. 1: 6-8; 2 Cor. 11: 4; Rom. 1: 16.)

The restoration will take place just before the "end of the world," or the destruction of the wicked. (Matt. 24: 3; 13: 24-30, 37-50; Acts 3: 19-21; Eph. 1: 8-10; Rev. 14: 6-8; Psalms 102: 16.)

The great restoration has begun. The gospel has been again committed unto men. Contemporaneous events described in prophecy have been and are being fulfilled in such an unmistakable manner as to definitely locate the restoration of the gospel as a past event. (Isa. 29: 11-24; 32: 13-18; Psalms 85.) Evidence was adduced to show that the restoration of Palestine and the Jews has fairly commenced.

Elder Glendenning made no objection to our claim that there is but one true church, one gospel, and one Spirit; nor did he object to the claim that the church is a divine institution. All the principles of the gospel were allowed to pass without any opposition, including the laying on of hands. When talking on baptism, I made the claim that there can be no gospel baptism except it is administered by one having proper authority. To this no objection was offered. Even the restoration was allowed to pass without a word of opposition!

Concerning the gifts and powers of the gospel, Elder Glendenning claimed that this was no proof for us, because other factions of the Latter Day Saints Church, and some other churches, such as the Seventh-day Adventists, enjoy them; and that there are persons in all churches which enjoy them. We replied that if the true and faithful of all churches enjoy these gifts of the Spirit; and if they are believed in and taught by some other churches, that does not prove that we are in conflict with the New Testament, and are not the Church of God in fact, inasmuch as we teach all the gifts of the Spirit, and enjoy them in proportion to our faith and diligence in keeping the commandments of God. The truth is, we have met with general and strong opposition on this point, from the ministers and members of other churches from 1830 till now. If some have become converted on this part of our faith, we are glad to know it. We do not claim that this alone proves that we are "the Church of God in fact," but we could not be that church did we not teach and practice in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures.

The strong fight was on the time when the kingdom of God has its beginning, on the earth. I claimed that when God has an authorized minister on the earth, there is the kingdom of God in its incipiency. Its growth is gradual like that of the mustard tree, or the good seed sown in the field. But Elder Glendenning claimed that the kingdom will not be here before the second advent of Christ and then it will be let down from heaven all at once. Many texts were quoted on both sides, his texts referring to the establishment of the kingdom in its completeness, mine showing that the kingdom in its incipiency was on the earth in the days of Jesus and the apostles. Our position stood the test and stood it well; but his was always in conflict with a large number of scriptures applying to the kingdom, such as Matthew 20: 1-8; 21: 43; Luke 17: 20, 21; Matthew 23: 13; 16: 19; 12:

Elder Glendenning spent one half of his time, or more, on the first proposition, endeavoring to show that we are not "the Church of God in fact," nor "in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in doctrine," because we believe in and teach the immortality of the soul; and yet he was so forgetful of the principles of consistency and right as to claim (near the close of the debate) that no one religious denomination is the Church of God in fact. They are but integral parts of the "one body." "Every person who is honestly seeking the truth is a part of the Church of God." This gave us a good opportunity to show what he had been doing while spending more than one half of his time in an effort to prove that we are not in harmony with the New Testament in doctrine, and are not therefore the Church of God, because we believe and teach that the soul is immortal; and that man is conscious between death and the resurrection; and that the final punishment of the wicked is conscious suffering! What about these other churches that believe and teach the same things? To this he made no reply, but the people evidently began to see that he was fishing after votes.

On church organization he urged the following objections: First, he read the expressed opinions of David Whitmer, contained in his address, in order to show that it is contrary to the Book of Mormon, the early revelations of the church, and the New Testament to have apostles and high priests in the church. "He will not dare to go back on David Whitmer, for he is their leading witness for the book of Mormon." Elder Glendenning failed to see that if my acceptance of David Whitmer's testimony to the truth of the angel's message, delivered more than sixty years ago, bound me to accept, as correct, all his subsequent testimonies and opinions, that by the same rule he was bound by all that David Whitmer has previously said or testified to just as soon as he placed him on the stand to testify. But when he tried to scare me out by a strong appeal to popular feeling, without a proof text either from himself or David Whitmer, he made a mistake.

His next objection was that the apostles, prophets, teachers, etc., of 1 Corinthians 12: 27, 28, are not officers, but "spiritual gifts. He read first part of the chapter, and Whitmer's testimony to prove it.

The outcome of the contest was gratifying indeed. The Lord did not forget his cause nor the needs of his people. When the vote was taken it stood eighty-three for the affirmative and ninety for the negative. More than one half of those voting on our side, however, were not Latter Day Saints, and four of them were Adventists, or at least so we have been told by Saints and those not Saints, and I am not aware that it has been contradicted. There were a number of our people not present on the last day.

The vote stands thus: On the first proposition thirty-six of a majority for us; on the second proposition, seven of a majority for the Adventists. Combining the two, which is perfectly fair, we subtract seven from thirty-six which leaves us a majority of twenty-nine.

The results of this struggle can best be appreciated by those who were present and able to discern the true situation at the beginning and the close.

In conversation with Elders Bailey and Snively, Elder Williams, Elder Glendenning's moderator said: "Lambert is not so able as O. B. Thomas; but I would rather debate with Thomas, because he is not so particular." (I give the sentiment—perhaps not the exact words.)

The above being true, and I have neither purpose nor disposition to deny it, we have what, to us, is good evidence that they suffered defeat at the hands of Bro. Thomas. However, it is quite evident that Bro. J. W. W. is not the only one who has proper regard for the writer "outside of controversy." Clark Braden, the Adventists, and others are of the same opinion.

Job and his three friends did nothing for Elder Glendenning on the first proposition. He would not allow me to present him as a witness for them. So we heard nothing about the Bible declaring that man is mortal, in so many words, but nowhere affirming that he is immortal. Is this just an experiment? Or has it been decided to relegate Job to the retired list now after such a long and faithful service for mortal soulists?

1 Timothy 6: 16, "who only hath immortality," etc., was not quoted. Indeed these are not the only changes witnessed in their use of proof texts, and in their manner of defense. Let the shifting processes go on, here as elsewhere, that the wise and good may see the truth.

FURTHER JUSTICE.

AFTER reading Bro. C. Derry's article entitled, "Tardy justice," it reminded me of another case of historical justice that is done the Reorganization in a history entitled "Our own country," by Hamilton W. Mabie, LL. B., and published by the Monarch Book Company, Chicago, Illinois.

The author, while giving a condensed history of the different denominations, on page 412 gives a short sketch of the Reorganization as follows:—

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which had its first conference in 1852, and now has headquarters, with a large publishing house, at Lamoni, Iowa, which at that conference disowned the leadership of the Mormon officials in Utah, must also help towards this issue [the doing away with polygamy]. In 1890 it had a total membership in the United States of 21,773, in thirty-six States and three Territories, including that of Utah. It accepts three books as of divine origin: First, the Bible; second, the Book of Mormon; third, the Book of Covenants. The latter consists of the revelations given to the church in the present century as a guide in church government.

The Book of Mormon is accepted as a history of the ancient inhabitants of America and the revelation given them by God; beginning at a period two thousand years before Christ, and continuing until four hundred years after Christ. In doctrine they adhere to the Trinity, to the atonement by Jesus Christ, to the resurrection of the dead, to the second coming of Christ, and to the eternal judgment; believing that each individual will receive reward or punishment, in strict measure, according to the good or evil deeds done in life. They hold that men are to be saved by faith in God and Christ, by forsaking sin, by immersion for the remission of sin, and by the laying on of hands. They believe that revelations of God are still given by the Holy Spirit for the guidance of the church, and that the gifts, blessings and powers of the Holy Spirit in Bible times are continual. Their order of church government is such as they find authority for in the New Testament, and such as they understand that the apostolic church observed. . . .

As to marriage, they believe that it is ordained of God, and that there should be but one companion for man or woman in wedlock, until the contract is broken by death or transgression. They characterize the doctrine of polygamy, or plural wives, as an abomination.

If you consider this of sufficient importance to publish, please do so. The writer thinks it is simply giving honor where honor is due.

SPECIAL OFFERINGS.

The aid called for in special donations for prosecution to a hearing upon the merits of the Temple Lot Case has been duly furnished, and it is hoped that no further efforts in the matter will be required. The readiness with which the Saints have met this demand and the counsel received from them in every part of the world not to stop short of the highest judicial tribunal of the land in urging righted the grievous wrongs done the Saints, unless justice and equity shall have been sooner meted to the church, has been greatly appreciated and should not the final decree be in favor of restoring the church to its rights, we feel that it will be no fault of theirs. These sacrifices and offerings on your part I trust the Lord may accept and bless in the interest of justice and right, and in his own time and way reward those who perform his commandments.

Ever confident in the faith of the gospel,
I am, very respectfully,
E. L. KELLEY.

THE CHATBURN-TOMSON DEBATE.

The Chatburn-Tomson debate of four sessions upon the Book of Mormon is a thing of the past. Bro. Chatburn did well to excel—was greatly aided by the Lord in defending that marvelous book which has caused rejoicing among the Saints of these parts and led the enemy to declare, "There is no good coming out of such debates."

Elder Tomson is an able and scholarly man, and made a great effort to parade his scholarly egotism before the people in offering to speak in tongues and interpret languages, etc. It was apparent to the humble discerning ones that God was ruling in support of his sayings, that are so closely allied with the coming forth of this great latter-day work and the Book of Mormon; to wit: "For the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."—Isa. 29: 14.

Bro. C. followed the line of Bible argument in favor of the subject that is familiar with our people. This was untouched by Elder Tomson save in two instances—Isaiah 29 and John 10: 16. There was a sickly attempt to apply the first to the fall of Jerusalem after the Savior's death for its fulfillment—the dead and wounded lying in the dusty streets of Jerusalem, "whispering out of the ground like a familiar spirit;" the "prophets, rulers, seers hath he covered—closed your eyes and you stagger like a drunken man out of a deep sleep just as though you were suddenly awakened from a slumber and would go staggering around as they did at the fall of Jerusalem." The "sheep" of John 10: 16 were the Gentiles. The main burden of proof relied upon by Elder Tomson was from newspapers and an attempt at picking up ungrammatical expressions and sayings thought to be found in the Book of Mormon, together with some statements that he thought contradicted the sayings of the Bible.

Bro. C. introduced a liberal amount of evidence on archæology in support of his Bible evidence and the statements from the Book of Mormon itself which fit in so snugly that Elder Tomson dare not attempt to do more than to storm Bro. C's fort by saying: "All of these antiquarian works, such as Josiah Priest's, etc., are nothing more than romances, a set of novels which have been written by men who have been running over the country getting up books for speculation." This will be a "jawbreaker" to be sounded in the ears of the many leading and brainy men of the nations of Europe and America, who have spent their thousands of dollars and years of valuable time to delve into the hidden archives of the musty past and unbowel the hidden mysteries of millions of mounds and dilapidated cities that are now being found in Europe and America. We cannot account for this "desperate break" from the lips of this scholarly reverend, only upon the grounds of being placed in desperate straits for anything better to answer his opponent's argument, and that rather than to be accounted unable to meet the argument he assumed the liberty to risk his reputation as a scholar and to deny the whole premise from which his opponent produces his evidence. We are pleased to think the truth was unsullied.

Early in the debate Bro. C. asked Elder T. if he would not affirm his church after the Book of Mormon question was over. Elder T. said he would consider that, but one thing at a time. At the close of debate Elder T. was asked what about his church question, when he presented the following: "Is the church of which I, J. H. D. Tomson, am a member, the Church of Christ? J. H. D. Tomson, affirms." This Elder T. said he would affirm. The management of this affair was placed in my hands, and I offered the following substitute, as I claimed the question as Mr. T. presented it did not fully state in plain terms an issue: "Is the church which I, J. H. D. Tomson represent, the Church of Christ, and as such identical in faith, organization, doctrine, and practice with the Church of Christ as described in the New Testament Scriptures?" This called out a speech from Mr. Tomson and one from his moderator, both opposing my substitute; whereupon I reread it, and asked them to say before this people that their church was not identical in faith, organization, etc., with the church of Christ as described in the New Testament, then I would agree to drop from the question the words, faith, organization, etc., and drop the debate altogether as unnecessary, they having acknowledged theirs out of harmony with the New Testament church in these things. This they refused to do. It was easily seen that their people had caught a ray of light which could not be covered up merely by bolting my substitute, whereupon they agreed to add to their question the words: "and identical with the New Testament church." This we accepted, and Elder J. H. Carter was appointed by them to meet me for five nights,—commencing February 3, at the same church where the present debate was held.

Elder Tomson also said he would meet me upon the same question either in Kingston or Richmond at the Christian church sometime in the future when we could mutually arrange the time. Thus ended the Chatburn-Tomson debate.

KINGSTON, Missouri, January 1, 1896.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Northeastern Missouri district conference will convene with the Higbee branch, February 1, 1896, at nine a. m. for prayer service and at ten o'clock for business. The clerk requests that all branch clerks be careful in making out their reports and have them correct if possible, for this saves time; also that the priesthood forward their reports one or two days earlier so she can have time to study out the different handwritings and read them without delay to the meeting. Please forward reports to Louise Palfrey, Macon, Missouri. Bro. T. W. Chatburn will be with us; so come all who can and let us have a good time.

J. A. TANNER, Pres.

The Kewanee district conference will meet at Kewanee, Illinois, the second Saturday in February. Saints are cordially invited to attend. Sunday school meets the Friday before conference.

ALMA WHITEHOUSE, Sec.

Conference of the Northern Nebraska district will be held near Waterloo, Nebraska, with the Platte Valley branch, on January 31, at 7:30 p. m. It is hoped that all branches will take action on the matter of finances, as was acted on at the last conference and delegates be instructed how to vote on the per capita tax.

JAMES HUFF, Dist. Sec.

Conference of the Southeastern Illinois district will convene Saturday, February 15, at ten a. m., at Springerton, White County, Illinois.

J. F. HENSON, Pres.

Conference of the Des Moines district will convene at 10:30 a. m. on the last Saturday of February with the Des Moines branch, on the corner of 16th and Des Moines Streets, East Des Moines, Iowa. We expect a large delegation as there will be much business to be transacted. We will have the annual election of district officers, delegates to General Conference, etc. Brethren, come prepared to liquidate the debt we owe on our district tent. Our worthy president still bears the burden of it. Branch clerks will please send their reports to William Johnson, Angus, Iowa, in time to examine them and correct errors if any.

WILLIAM JOHNSON, Sec.

Conference of the Northeastern Illinois district will convene February 1, 1896, at 10:30 a. m. at Custer Post Hall, 85 Sangamon Street near West Madison Street. Full representation and reports from all the branches is desired. Chicago Saints will be pleased to welcome all who come. Sunday meetings will be held morning, afternoon, and evening at Franklin Hall, 70 Adams Street near State Street.

ELDER F. G. PITT, Pres.

FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

About the 1st of February I will mail blank reports to all the quorum. I would like all who have changed their addresses to let me know, so I may forward you a blank. All who know of any deaths in our ranks please send me names, time, and place of death and other items you may have. If any of you need a diary write to our secretary, D. W. Wight, Ridgeway, Missouri. Should you not receive blank send items anyway. If you need help as regards our quorum work, write Bro. T. J. Bell or F. M. Weld, Lamoni, Iowa, or myself. Send reports to me.

J. H. WELLS, President of Quorum.

BORN.

PARISH.—To Mr. A. G. and Sr. Gertrude Parish, April 23, 1895, at Newton, Iowa, a son, and named Fred. A. Blessed December 1, 1895, by Elders C. Scott and W. S. Barbee.

DAVIS.—On June 12, 1895, at Runnells, Iowa, to Mr. John and Della Davis, twin boys, and named Leo Eli and Cleo Elias. Blessed Dec. 29, 1895, at Runnells, Iowa, by Elder C. Scott.

COLON.—October 14, 1895, at Hamburg, Iowa, to Mr. B. S. and Sr. Metje Colon, a daughter; blessed November 28, 1895, by Elder Henry Kemp, and named Ruth.

MARRIED.

KIZZIRE—BLACK.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Black, near Lamoni, Iowa, December 24, 1895, Mr. Charles Kizzire and Miss Minnie E. Black were united in marriage, Elder H. A. Stebbins officiating.

BATH—GOLLIAR.—At the residence of Elder W. S. Taylor, Sherwin Junction, Kansas, on Sunday, December 7, 1895, Mr. John Bath to Miss Carrie Golliar. May their love never grow less.

MATHEWS—RICHARDS.—At Bevier, Mo., December 25, 1895, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Richards, Bro. William T. Mathews, of Centerville, Iowa, and Miss Phoebe Richards, of Bevier, Mo., Elder J. T. Williams officiating. Bro. Mathews is an intelligent young man, and Miss Richards stands high by all who know her. After enjoying an excellent supper the happy couple took the evening train for Brookfield, Mo., to visit relatives and friends. On their return to Bevier they were congratulated highly by their many friends. The good people of Bevier regret their departure, as they will make their future home at Centerville, Iowa; but they go highly commended and loaded with the good wishes of their many friends.

WATERMAN—HALL.—In the Saints' church, Persia, Iowa, December 25, 1895, Elder Charles Derry officiating, Mr. John A. Waterman and Sr. Mabel Hall, eldest daughter of Bro. David and Sr. Emmeline Hall. The large number of guests followed the happy pair to the hotel, where a generous and sumptuous feast was prepared. Hearty congratulations were given, also many useful wedding presents, which testified to the high esteem in which the wedded couple were held. May the sweet love and tender endearments that now charm their newly wedded life never be embittered nor weakened, but as the sorrows and cares of life press stronger and stronger upon their now devoted hearts and minds may that love increase in sweetness and strength, binding them closer to God and each other; then shall their lives be crowned with a glory unspeakable and joys that shall never cease.

WATKINS—DUNSDON.—At the home of the bride's parents, Egypt, Mills County, Iowa, Wednesday, January 1, 1896, Mr. Charles Watkins and Sr. Mary Dunsdon, were united in wedlock in the presence of a number of relatives and friends, Elder S. Orton conducting the ceremony, Bro. George Kemp offering prayer. May the peace and blessings of the Master be with this young couple through life.

DIED.

DINEHART.—At Rogersville, Missouri, December 21, 1895. Sr. Mary E. Dinehart. She was born June 27, 1866, at Richland, Oswego County, New York; was married to Bro. John Dinehart March 18, 1885. Five children survive her. She was baptized October 8, 1892, by Elder Henry Sparling. During her life she was kind and generous-hearted, as a wife she was faithful, and as a mother she taught her children principles of righteousness. By her death another good Saint has gone to the paradise of God to await the resurrection of the just. Funeral services conducted by Elder C. J. Spurlock.

SIMPSON.—At Carbon, Wyoming, December 14, 1895, of heart disease, Sr. Clara Simpson (of the Lucas branch, Iowa), aged 43 years, 5 months, and 25 days. At Streator, Illinois, November 27, 1873, she was baptized into Christ by Bro. J. H. Hansen, and she lived a faithful and an honorable life. Though having some of the most severe trials that a woman can have, yet she maintained her integrity and tried to perform her duty to God, to her children, to the church, and to humanity, so far as she had power. Her son-in-law and daughter (James McDonald and wife), were called from Diamondville by telegram after her sudden death. He writes Bro. Stebbins as follows: "We regret that no minister of your faith is here to officiate at her funeral, for she never wavered in her allegiance to your church." Her aged mother was almost overcome, and may not long survive the loss of the mainstay and comfort of her life.

LYLE.—Elder Robert Lyle was born in Scotland, May 27, 1820, and he died near Lamoni, Iowa, December 29, 1895, aged 75 years, 7 months, and 2 days. He came to America in 1845 and lived in Bureau County, Illinois, for many years. He received the gospel and was baptized at Kewanee, Illinois, by Elder Adam Fletcher in October, 1865. He removed to Decatur County, Iowa, early in 1877, and has dwelt here ever since. His death was due to asthmatic and lung troubles, connected with old age and feebleness. He was known as an honest and an upright man in his dealings. Funeral services were held at his house, sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins.

OLESON.—At his home near Nevada, Missouri, November 30, 1895, William Oleson, aged 55 years, 7 months, and 14 days. He was born in Sweden; obeyed the gospel August 4, 1873, and has lived a consistent life as becometh a Saint of latter days. Several years ago he got badly hurt, from which he never fully recovered. Owing to the inclemency of weather, funeral services were dispensed with, which will be attended to in the near future.

HAYES.—In Lillis, Fresno County, California, September 29, 1895, Emma Orsely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orsamus Hayes, aged 5 years, 2 months, and 14 days.

WILKINS.—December 28, 1895, Allie, daughter of W. C. and Anna Wilkins, aged 11 months and 15 days. It was a sweet flower plucked from earth to adorn the paradise of God. May its mourning parents secure the right, through obedience to the gospel, to meet and embrace their sweet darling in that atmosphere of undying love. Funeral sermon by C. Derry, assisted by J. W. Wight, in the Saints' church in Woodbine, on Monday, December 30, 1895.

How it is possible to measure wind by its sound has been told by Prof. Carl Barus to the National Academy of Sciences. The whistling of the wind across a wire varies with the velocity, and this can be computed from the pitch of the note observed in case of a given diameter of wire and for a given air temperature. A special micrometer attachment can be made to convey the sound, isolated from other noises, to the observer at a distance. Every gust and variation can be studied, and an idea of the direction of the gust can be had from sounds from three wires placed at right angles to one another. Micro-aulmometry is the name proposed for observations by this method.

The existence of the Colossus of Rhodes is considered by some historians extremely doubtful. There is no evidence that the ancients were able to cast pieces of metal of such size as must have entered into its composition.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHECIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE DYING YEAR OF 1895.

ON this last day of 1895, anticipating the detailed statements of its happenings which will be printed as usual in the Tribune of January 1, 1896, it will be of interest to glance briefly at what the dying year has brought to this world in the way of misfortune as well as of benefaction, especially as compared with its predecessor, 1894.

Fortunately 1895 has not been as prolific in disasters as 1894. The record of losses of life by shipwreck, for instance, aggregate only 4,250, as compared with 6,881 in 1894. The railroads of this country have killed 3,600 persons, as compared with 3,648 in 1894. In the general record of fatalities, such as those by drowning, fire, mines, explosions, cyclones, lightning, etc., both at home and abroad, the aggregate is 23,094, as compared with 28,719 in 1894. The loss by fires in the United States for 1895 was $131,578,206, as compared with $115,590,842 in 1894. The loss of life by epidemics has fallen off nearly one half, the total being 79,461, as compared with 179,910 in 1894, the most of this loss having been occasioned by cholera in Russia, Japan, China, and India. On the other hand the loss of life in battle has been nearly twice that of 1894, being 157,986, as compared with 82,570. The increase is mainly accounted for by the fatalities in the closing weeks of the war between Japan and China, the uprising of the Cuban patriots, the numerous revolutions in South America, and the horrible atrocities practiced upon the helpless Armenians by the unspeakable Turks, for which no indemnity has yet been made, owing to the selfishness and jealousies of the European treaty powers.

The blackest feature of the year is the alarming increase of suicides and murders—an increase out of all proportion to the natural increase of population. In 1894 there were 4,912 reported cases of suicide in the United States; in 1895 there were 5,759, an increase of 847. For the last ten years suicides have increased at an average rate of nearly 1,000 a year. Murder is increasing at a still more rapid and alarming rate. In 1894 there were 9,800 murders reported and 10,500 in 1895, an increase of 700. It is an unusual coincidence that the same number of criminals was hanged in 1895 and 1894, 132 in each year. The lynchings, on the other hand, show a gratifying decrease, there having been 171 in 1895, as compared with 194 in 1894. It goes without saying that the great majority of victims of Judge Lynch were negroes in the Southern States, and it is an additional disgrace to that section that there were several women among them. But under the influences of a healthier condition of public sentiment and the repressive action of several of the Southern Governors and Legislatures there is unquestionably a determination in many parts of the South to set the wheels of justice in better running order and to minimize the dreadful evils of mob violence. Embezzlements and violations of financial trusts may be classed in this general category of crime. It is most gratifying to observe, however, that this form of rascality is diminishing, the stealings of 1895 being less than half those of 1894. The record for 1895 shows a loss from this source of $10,423,205, as compared with $25,234,712 in 1894.

Turning from this black record of human weakness and dishonesty it is gratifying to contemplate the results of human generosity and philanthropy. The generous men and women of the United States, either by bequest or by gift outright, have given to colleges in 1895 the large sum of $12,379,820; to charities, $5,745,670; to churches, $2,089,150; to museums and art galleries, $1,724,500; to libraries, $532,433; and to other institutions, $6,471,976—a total of $28,943,549, as compared with $19,967,116 in 1894.—Chicago Tribune.

HOW TO LIVE LONG AND HAPPILY.

Wouldst thou fashion for thyself a seemly life?
Then do not fret over what is past and gone,
And spite of all thou may'st have lost behind;
Live each day as if thy life were just begun.—Goethe.

In a little book just published, entitled "The Art of Living Long and Happily," [G. P. Putnam's Sons,] the author, Henry Hardwicke, brings together a number of interesting things bearing on the subject, the best of which one takes the liberty of lifting to this column. The author starts out with the truism that the things indispensable to happiness are far more subject to our command than we sometimes imagine. No one, moreover, will disagree with him in the statement that the imaginary ills of life are more troublesome than those which are real. One of the chief secrets of happiness, he says, lies in not suffering trifles to vex us, and in prudently cultivating the small pleasures of life, since great ones are so rare. Marcus Aurelius is quoted as the wisest of ancient philosophers who systematically sought happiness through the cultivation of the virtues; and immediately after Marcus Aurelius is quoted the wisest of the modern philosophers—Benjamin Franklin. Strangely enough it is the Franklin "autobiography" that the present author quotes—that book which a certain obscure Mr. Wright of Philadelphia recently objected to as detrimental [even in an expurgated form] to scholars of the present day.

In this "autobiography" the American philosopher tells how he conceived the bold and arduous project of arriving at moral perfection. He soon found that he had undertaken a difficult task; while he was guarding against one fault he was often surprised by another; habit took the advantage of inattention; inclination was sometimes too strong for reason. He concluded at length that the mere speculative conviction that our interest to be completely virtuous was not sufficient to prevent our slipping; and that the contrary habits must be broken and good ones acquired and established before we can have any uniform dependence on a steady rectitude of conduct. He therefore proposed a method to himself. Under thirteen names of virtues he included all that at that time occurred to him as necessary or desirable, and annexed to each a short precept, which fully expressed the extent he gave to its meaning. Those virtues were:—

1. Temperance—Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.
2. Silence—Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversation.
3. Order—Let all your things have their places; let each part of your business have its time.
4. Resolution—Resolve to perform what you ought; perform without fail what you resolve.
5. Frugality—Make no expense but to do good to others or yourself; that is, waste nothing.
6. Industry—Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions.
7. Sincerity—Use no hurtful deceit; think innocently and justly; and, if you speak, speak accordingly.
8. Justice—Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty.
9. Moderation—Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries, so much as you think they deserve.
10. Cleanliness—Tolerate no uncleanness in body, clothes, or habitation.
11. Tranquility—Be not disturbed at trifles, or at accidents common or unavoidable.
12. Chastity.
13. Humility—Imitate Jesus and Socrates.

As the philosopher intended to acquire the habitude of all these virtues he judged it would be well not to attempt the whole at once, but to fix his attention on one at a time. "Temperance" he placed first of all as it tends to procure that coolness and clearness of head which is so necessary, and as a constant vigilance must be kept up to preserve it against the force of ancient habits. "Silence" he placed second, confessing at the same time that he found himself in danger of becoming a punster. This and "Order" would allow him time for his studies. Resolution once become habitual would keep him firm in his endeavors to obtain the subsequent virtues. He saw that daily examination would be necessary, and contrived a method for making that examination. He ruled each page with red ink so as to have seven columns, one for each day of the week, marking each column with a letter for the day. He crossed these columns with thirteen red lines, marking the beginning of each line with the first letters of one of the virtues, on which line and in its proper column he could mark every fault by a little black spot. He gave a week's attention to each of the virtues successively. Proceeding thus to the last he could get through a course completely in thirteen weeks, or four courses in a year. That Franklin attached great importance to this plan will be seen from what he says in the following passage:—

"It may be well my posterity should be informed that to this little artifice, with the blessing of God, their ancestor owed the constant felicity of his life, down to his seventy-ninth year, in which this is written. What reverses may attend the remainder is in the hand of Providence; but, if they arrive, the reflection on past happiness enjoyed ought to help his bearing them with more resignation. To temperance he ascribes his long-continued health, and what is still left to him of a good constitution; to industry and frugality the early easiness of his circumstances and acquisition of his fortune, with all that knowledge that enabled him to be a useful citizen, and obtained for him some degree of reputation among the learned; to sincerity and justice, the confidence of his country, and the honorable employments it conferred upon him; and to the joint influence of the whole mass of the virtues, even in the imperfect state he was able to acquire them, all that evenness of temper, and that cheerfulness in conversation, which makes his company still sought for, and agreeable, even to his young acquaintance. I hope, therefore, that some of my descendants may follow the example and reap the benefit."—Ex.

LATE LITERARY NEWS.

No one ever thought of introducing so expensive a feature as lithographic color work in the days when the leading magazines sold for $4.00 a year and 35 cents a copy. But times change, and the magazines change with them. It has remained for the Cosmopolitan, sold at one dollar a year, to put in an extensive lithographic plant capable of printing 320,000 pages per day (one color). The January issue presents as a frontispiece a water-color drawing by Eric Pape, illustrating the last story by Robert Louis Stevenson, which has probably never been excelled even in the pages of the finest dollar French periodicals. The cover of The Cosmopolitan is also changed, a drawing of page length by the famous Paris artist Rossi, in lithographic colors on white paper takes the place of the manilla back with its red stripe. Hereafter the cover is to be a fresh surprise each month.

LITERARY NOTES.

During the closing weeks of 1895 the daily papers have published an extraordinary amount of interesting and important news. It is worth something to the busy newspaper reader to have this mass of information taken up, arranged, digested and reviewed in a calm and intelligent manner. The Review of Reviews performs this service very efficiently every month. The number for January, 1896, is especially strong in this respect. The editorial department, called "The Progress of the World," is distinguished for its able handling of national and international topics of the hour. In fact, the Review occupies a unique position as a truly "international magazine." Its soundly "American" stand on the Venezuelan question is significant.

The experiments of Lieut. B. Baden-Powell with military kites have been sufficiently encouraging to give interest to the curious suggestion in aerial navigation made by him to the British Association for the Advancement of Science. He pointed out that the wind is nearly always stronger at an elevation than near the earth, often blowing at 1,000 yards with three times its velocity just above ground. He proposes to take advantage of this difference by connecting two kites by a long line and sending them up to different heights, the weight carried being attached to the line near the lower kite. The lower kite would thus supply a retarding medium to the upper, the effect being the same in principle as if the upper kite were held to the earth by a string and the lower kite were towed through the air by a boy running with the string in his hand. Both kites would be kept flying, although not held to earth by a string in the usual way, and it is quite possible that they might be navigated considerably out of the wind's course.

UTAH NOW A STATE.

THE proclamation of President Grover Cleveland, by which Utah was officially made a State of the Union, was signed January 4, and at ten o'clock that day Utah was one of the States.

The event was made one of rejoicing in the cities of the new State; and on Monday, the 6th, Heber M. Wells was inaugurated as the first Governor.

Of the probable condition of things under the new State regime, President Wilford Woodruff is reported among other things to have said:—

Under a State government there will be no change that I am aware of in the attitude of the church towards the local or the national government. The State Constitution guarantees religious freedom as does the Constitution of the United States, and it is provided that no church shall dominate the State nor interfere with its functions. This church has neither the disposition nor the need to attempt any such control. It will occupy its own place as a religious organization on an equal footing with other religious bodies before the law.

The polygamy question may be regarded as settled. Since the manifesto issued by me, September 24, 1890, and indeed for some time before that date, no polygamous marriages have been solemnized with my permission or to my knowledge. They are strictly forbidden by the church and forever prohibited by the Constitution of the State. All rumors to the effect that it is the intention of the church to revive polygamy or to assume control of State affairs are entirely without justification and are utterly untrue.

Editor C. C. Goodwin, the veteran editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, the long time organ of the Liberal party in Utah, stated on the same topic:—

This could not all have come from the pressure exerted without. A part, at least, was due to the silent demand from within the church, from the people themselves.

From what I know of the Mormon priests there is no intention nor desire on their part to restore the old order of things; from what I know of the Mormon people, were there any such intention or desire, the people would not permit the carrying out of any such program.

Young Utah is ambitious for honors; anxious that there shall be no just reproaches against the people of Utah; anxious that every opportunity to achieve fame and acquire property shall be secured to the men and women of this new State.

But there are honest fears on the part of many people that the Mormon organization being largely in the majority will do what political majorities always do, take all the officers and the full control of the State into their own hands.

It is expected that there will be Republican senators chosen, and representatives of ability to take care of Utah interests in Congress.

The people of the territory are to be congratulated on the plucky contest they have made for statehood; and it is to be devoutly desired that fears that have been entertained that when statehood was achieved and the machinery of the State in working order there would be a return to the practice of plural marriage, the pledges to the contrary ignored, and the statutes of the new State so made that infractions of the constitutional guarantee forever prohibiting it could be evaded, and those who should be guilty go unwhipped of justice, because the officers of town, county, and state being chosen from the Mormon people would either neglect, or refuse to prosecute, or convict the offenders, are entirely groundless.

The expressions of Pres. Woodruff and Editor Goodwin, given above are an assurance; on the one part, that no such thing is contemplated by the church; and on the other part, that the manifesto and the protestations of good intentions made at the time of its promulgation and subsequently, are accepted in good faith and believed by the Gentile element.

We congratulate Pres. Woodruff on the issue of the effort for statehood, without reference to the political party complexion that the entrance of the new State may have taken on; believing as we do that American citizens are entitled to self-government, whenever and wherever the national statutes governing in such cases are complied with. With the hope that the sisterhood of states may never have just occasion to be fearful of, or shamed by sentiment or deed of the new accession to their number; we hail the new star in the blue field of the American Flag.

UTAH POLITICS.

THE election is of course over, but yet the political pot boils, and Statehood is the main topic of the hour, on the street, and everywhere. Candidates for the United States Senate are bobbing up everywhere and Mormons and Gentiles who used to be sworn enemies are buttonholing each other and having confidential talks.

Of course one party is sidetracked and war is transferred to rival factions of the dominant party. It is rumored that George Q. Cannon is a candidate for the United States Senate. We do not know that he has ever admitted or denied the rumor. However, the way is now clear for him to enter politics if he desires. The Presidency last fall raised a great furore about Thatcher and Roberts entering politics without counsel, but almost immediately began to fence against the effect of their own action and to leave the way clear to enter politics if so desired.

The December Forum contains an article on "Has the Mormon Church reentered politics?" by Glen Miller. He says:—

In order to get an expression on this important matter for the use of the Forum, I addressed a note to the Mormon Presidency, and received the following answer:—

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, October 29, 1895.
"You ask us, 'Do you consider it expedient either from the standpoint of the State or the church for high church officials to accept nominations for public office in Utah?' This question came up for consideration at a meeting of the officers of the church held in October, 1893, and we expressed ourselves to the effect that under the circumstances which then surrounded us, it was inexpedient for the leading officers of the church to accept nominations for public office in the Territory. We thought it probable that both parties might desire to make such nominations with the hope that in doing so they could catch votes, and that as we were then situated it would be better for leading men to decline the acceptance of political nominations, it being soon after the division on party lines.

"In taking this stand, however, we did not do so because we thought there was an incongruity in such men holding office; for many men who hold ecclesiastical positions are the most practical men in the community, and have the greatest experience in the laying of the foundation and the building of the commonwealth, and are fully qualified therefore, to fill with dignity the various offices in the gift of the people.

This, with the answer to another question, was signed by Wilford Woodruff, George Q. Cannon, and Joseph F. Smith.

So we see that it will not now be a breach of church discipline should President Cannon aspire to a position in the Senate.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—In Herald of December 25, 1895, I see some teaching with reference to the office of deacon and I would ask further what should be expected from a man in the deacon's office in case of a separation of him and his wife?

Ans.—If the deacon is not in the fault he is at liberty to act in his office as usual. The fact of his being in the fault or no, should be determined by a proper inquiry. If either party refuses an investigation, such refusal gives fair presumption of consciousness of wrong, and the other should be held free from blame, until the contrary is shown.

BUSINESS AND SPIRITUAL MATTERS.

By request of the Business Manager we make the following statement to the Herald Office patrons—the copartners in the publishing plant.

In response to the request that book agents be appointed in the branches, about two hundred agents have been so authorized to act for the Saints and the office, the result of which has been advantageous to all concerned. The business has been more correctly and more promptly transacted and the people thus educated to more systematic, businesslike methods of action in their dealings, with this department at least.

This good work, the department wishes to continue until a further and more general improvement results. It is strictly necessary that such a condition should be general throughout the church. It is a decided detriment to any people to owe any man or any department of the work of God anything. It is a positive benefit to men and women to be free from "the bondage of debt" and the consequent sense of unrest it entails upon those who are conscientious, as all, without exception, should be. We therefore join, as we have from the first, with the Business Manager in urging upon our people to observe the principles of the law of God, by paying what they owe, and that they pay it promptly, and, when possible, to the regularly appointed agents of the branches, or to others, such as the traveling ministry and Bishop's agents, where the local branch agent is not accessible.

Of all people those who expect under God to establish Zion according to the principles of law—the law of economics—of business, of frugality, of good management, including industry, absence of idleness, equality under the law—we say that of all people, the people of God who expect to be redeemed by keeping the law of God (which includes all the principles referred to) should be honoring those principles, that we may be disciplined, educated by them and thus be prepared to join together and work together for the mutual prosperity of one another and the extending and upbuilding of the work of God, both in the branches and in the gathering places of the Saints.

All this and much more in detail the law of God provides for and requires. It is the diligent, industrious, spiritual-minded workers among the people of God that are pushing the work—not the idle, the careless, the unbusiness-like, and the complainers. Those who are studying the work and word of God and living in such condition as to receive his Spirit compose the progressive leaven that is causing the work of the Reorganization to move forward.

We state these facts in this connection with business matters because all are one with the Lord and must be with his people. To be in harmony with the Lord and in touch with the developments of the work his people must be comprehending the movements of events and be prepared to step forward and take advantage of the opening avenues and means by which their opportunities to strengthen and extend the work are presented. If we do this it will not be long until we shall see all departments of the service—general and local—brought to a high standard of effectiveness and pressing forward in constant improvement.

We refer to them in general that the importance of rendering complete, intelligent, faithful service in our respective work may be realized. The body is to be compacted by that which "every joint supplieth." The work of every individual is necessary. One cannot do without the work of another, nor can one do work for another. It is essential that laity and ministry, male and female, old and young, be moving by a united, progressive impulse that shall inspire all—every one—to work in his appointed sphere and to do faithfully the work that his life opportunities present before him. In the economy of nature nothing is wasted, nothing lost. Every element, every atom however small, every force however strong or feeble, does some very necessary and important part in Nature's economy. The labor of the feeblest, though apparently unnoticed, is found, by close examination, to be indispensable. So in the spiritual economy; those members which seem to be feeble are necessary. The thought should obtain, then, and become a working principle among the Saints, that the work of the ministry while a leading part, is for the purpose of bringing people into the church and of educating them to become live, intelligent, working personalities for good. The work of the highest apostolic officer down to the least degree of official station is designed for that work, hence in that sense each one of the ministry is a servant for the common good, as the Master declared himself to be.

We therefore plead for a proper conception of the work, duties, and privileges of all, and the intelligent activity of each in his sphere, that progress and the satisfaction and blessings that come to all who serve may be realized by God's people. This done the law of God will be honored, his people become prosperous and honorable in his sight and in the sight of one another and their fellow man, and the influence of the church as a power for good be extended and Zion be established.

We reach and maintain unity by united, lawful, intelligent coöperation. By such methods alone can the desired end be reached.

Zion cannot be built up except it be by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself.—Doctrine and Covenants.

In this word of the Lord we see the scientific, the exact, the mathematical character of spiritual law. It comprehends every true principle—the application of such. It requires the observance of divine rule in everything. It means that men and women who do observe it and thereby keep in the line of progress must inevitably move forward and “go on unto perfection,” while those who do not will be left in the rear. Let us go forward and not backward, by studying and comprehending the law of God and thus giving the work an individual, intelligent support. That kind of support will tell for good and that alone. The effective workers in the church and in the world are those who work intelligently and move forward; who understand what they are doing and do it well.

A divine work necessarily requires that those who engage in it shall continue to grow in every good thing and away from every evil thing. The standard is Jesus Christ, hence to his stature are we called to attain. God in his infinite love cannot be satisfied to see his children below it. While the work of progress is necessarily gradual, it is sure, continuous. The very operation of the Spirit of the Lord is designed to lead and guide into all truth and show things to come. The divine economy is gradually revealed, made plain to the comprehension of the one taught, and he is enabled to advance, step by step, surely, steadily, uniformly. It is right in the activities of life, in our surroundings, duties, habits, and thoughts, that we find our opportunities and our usefulness. The man or woman who is impatient at home, for instance, will be impatient and lack self-control elsewhere; and so we might take up every element and duty of life and trace out the educational and disciplinary character of the ordinary things of life.

We emphasize the thought, then, that spiritual matters are scientific, mathematical, exact, practical in their character for the reason that right in them and by them alone are we personally disciplined, experienced, qualified; and that by a right application and use of them we benefit society by improving its conditions. This is done by reliable, faithful, improving service. Under such conditions men and women could and do depend upon one another, knowing that not only a desire to do what is right exists in the hearts of brethren and sisters, but that such desire is realized or worked out in fact because men and women have an intelligent conception of what is to be done and go about it understandingly.

The desire to do good—the sincere wish to be and do just right—is of first importance. This—“the love of the truth,” if received in such degree as to lead one to be a learner—a doer of the work, will lead one up to study and improve until his desire is made possible of accomplishment by a comprehension of the means essential to execution.

We understand the spirit of God's work to be consistent with the character of God; that he proposes to call men and women into intelligent coöperation, cöwork, with him. This is manifest in the teachings of the word in which the Lord promises that his people shall come to that “knowledge” of the truth that is life eternal. To know God is to “know the truth.” Knowledge of the truth is cumulative, progressive. The spirit of the times is one of advancing knowledge in theory and in practice. Many principles and utilities are now used in civilization that were unknown in past ages, or even fifty, forty, or ten years ago. Every year, every month, every day, we may say, brings some new thing to light. New demands are upon us as a people as a result, and new applications of old truths and new principles of action are brought into requisition to meet them. The truth is the same and ever will be, but surrounding conditions and general demands may be and often are quite different; hence the need of that personal discretion, that individual understanding and spirituality that makes men and women forces for good and workers together with God and with one another for the good of all concerned—the world of mankind.

is because we can find no feature of the work of God that does not bear upon every other part of the divine economy; this in harmony with the principle that if one member suffers or is benefited all other members are likewise affected. We have believed and do now understand that the work of God includes every principle of truth; that by recognition and application of such principles—by such means and such only—can any man or woman be redeemed. We therefore urge upon the people of God the necessity of coming up to what we have been called to do; to the necessity of understanding that God has called his people to come to a high standard that they may represent him. We cannot conceive the work to represent anything else; we cannot believe that ignorance, idleness, carelessness, or anything unworthy of the character of God is representative of him or should be seen in his children. We are thankful that the Lord does not propose to permit his people to remain in such conditions, if he can succeed in persuading them to move forward and upward, unless indeed they fail to heed his voice and become indifferent, listless, or careless; in which case his “Spirit will not always strive with man.”

There is a delight in doing right, a deep sense of satisfaction when one is conscious of God's love and approval; that he is strengthened and permitted to give evidence of appreciation of the goodness of God by rendering service to him. The Spirit of godliness is not the theory of godliness alone;—it is the power of godliness, the power to do, the power to realize and to feel the force of right, and to do what it prompts;—to accomplish good by overcoming and in seeing manifest the superiority, the supremacy of right over wrong. No weakness need remain, no selfishness rule, no blindness be within the mind and heart of the child of God who places himself in position to heed the tuition of the Spirit of truth. It will bring him into such close communion and touch with God as to cause him to discern and reject every semblance, every suggestion of pride, folly, improper ambition, and lead him into the permanent and true things that

"abide forever," that "cannot be moved."

We started to say something for the Business Manager's department of the work. We trust we have succeeded in showing the connection between the business and the spiritual phases of the work in general. We reprint the following instructions, at Bro. Criley's request, for the information of all whom they may concern. He desires the Saints to order through their appointed agents when possible. It saves time and money to do so. Agents should be paid promptly, as they are required to make settlements of all accounts within sixty days.

TO BOOK AGENTS AND BRANCH PRESIDENTS.

The following instructions are issued in order to promote the circulation of the church publications and facilitate the transaction of business with the Herald Office.

1. Branches are requested to appoint competent agents, either the president or another, through whom all orders and remittances should be sent. Such agents are requested to make an active canvas for subscriptions for the Saints' Herald, Autumn Leaves, and Hope, the publications of the church; to make sales of books, tracts, pamphlets, Sunday school supplies, etc.; and to collect accounts promptly.

2. Agents will not be furnished stocks of books to carry, but will be given sixty days on all orders. A discount of ten per cent will be allowed on all books sold. No discount on Herald, Leaves, Hope, Gospel Quarterlies, or tracts.

Ten per cent will also be allowed on all old accounts—due July 1, 1895. (Collections requested.)

3. Delinquents will in all cases be stricken from the mailing lists when their subscriptions are one year overdue.

4. Those who receive the Herald free must be vouched for as entitled to it, by some of the ministry acquainted with their circumstances.

5. The Saints are requested to order through their local book agents in branches; or scattered Saints through the traveling ministry. If impossible, order direct.

6. The traveling ministry are allowed ten per cent on book orders, and the cost of money orders and postage on remittances for the church papers. Those sending orders are looked to for settlement.

7. Orders amounting to less than fifty cents must in all cases be accompanied by the amount.

8. Remit by post office or express order, or draft. Do not send checks on local banks. Registered letters are at the risk of senders.

9. Write all addresses in full, giving Town, County, and State.

Send addresses in the names of parties to whom papers or other matters are sent.

When changing address, give post office to which papers have been going.

Dates on yellow labels tell when subscriptions expire.

10. Agents or branch presidents are requested to keep the Herald Office card (sent herewith) posted in a conspicuous place, with the name of agent attached.

DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUES SENT FREE ON APPLICATION.

Your active cooperation is asked for the success of the cause.

In bonds, yours,
FRANK CRILEY,
Business Manager.

FOR "THE SERVICE OF SONG."

AS A special and further means of aiding all to participate in "the service of song in the house of the Lord" the Saints' Hymnal, which was provided for by action of the General Conference of 1895, has been issued by the publishing department, and nineteen hundred (1900) copies of the book are now in the hands of the Saints.

The work is giving universal satisfaction, both in the selections of words and music and in the arrangement of music and words together—on the same page. The binding of the book is also durable and attractive in style. Altogether the Hymnal is and will continue to be a source of satisfaction to all who use it.

It contains the most popular words and music used by choirs and congregations of our people. This fact is an assured one, for the reason that leading choirs throughout the church made selections of their favorites from the larger book—the Harmony—from which the Hymnal was mostly compiled, and the committee was governed in no small degree by that expression of choice.

The Hymnal will henceforth largely regulate the song service of the church—at General Conferences, reunions, at branch, district, and other meetings. The convenient size of the book and the arrangement of words and music together will promote general participation in the song service and we shall probably have more "congregational singing" as a result.

This will be as it should be; for the service of song is part of the spiritual exercises and should be participated in and enjoyed by all.

The office is getting out another edition of the Hymnal. All orders can now be filled promptly. The low price of the book places it within the reach of all.

At the coming spring season of district conferences and the General Conference the Hymnal will be in use. All singers and those who value the benefits and appreciate the enjoyment of church music in the congregations of the Saints and in their homes will want the new book. By its system of page numbers it can be used with the Harmony, the larger book of words and music, hence the use of one will not conflict with the other.

The prices are as follows:—

Cloth, leather backs,.....	$ 50
Imitation morocco,.....	1 00
Imitation morocco, gilt edges,.....	1 25
Imitation morocco, flexible, gilt edges	2 00
Full morocco, flexible, gilt edges....	2 50

MR. LAND'S APOLOGY.

THE "Church of Christ," (Whitmerites, so-called), at Davis City, Iowa, having refused to sustain Elias Land, of Rogers, Texas, at their council, last September, until he should have apologized through the HERALD for a letter written by him and published in the HERALD, by such action placed us under an honorable obligation to permit Elder Land to so apologize in the HERALD, in order that he might, if he chose, close up the gap of disaffection between his brethren and be at peace with them. We elsewhere present the apology of Elder Land, stating in connection therewith that we are not responsible for that apology, nor for the provocation and offense calling for it.

WE again remind brethren that fifteen, eighteen, and twenty-page letters are too lengthy for the HERALD, unless they contain matter of decided importance to the body. No one should use space unnecessarily, when so many are to be heard and when the HERALD readers expect to hear from all their representatives.

The essential features of almost all lengthy letters could be stated in few words. The habit of condensing, the faculty of being brief in statement, should be cultivated. It would be to the decided advantage of readers and to the benefit of writers to boil it down. We shall have to summarize lengthy letters hereafter, unless the hint is taken. Due and sufficient notice has been and is hereby given. Reading is said to make a full man, speaking a ready man, writing an exact man. Speakers, as a rule, use many words to express their meanings, hence cultivate too free use of words, rather than terseness of style, which if not carried to an extreme, is good, even in a speaker. The practice of carefully selecting words, those that express exactly what the speaker means, is an excellent and effective mental drill and one that better qualifies for conversation, for speaking, and for writing. This done, one's ideas can be expressed with reasonable brevity. All that one does can be made part of the life educational process if one wills to see and do in the light of "constant improvement."

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

"It was under these circumstances, and to meet this exigency, that England and the United States took counsel with each other, and resolved to intervene against this intervention of the Holy Alliance powers, and demand that the question between Spain and her rebellious colonies be left to themselves, as a purely internal matter, with which outside powers should not meddle. That is, England and the United States resolved to assert the doctrine of non-intervention in the purely internal affairs of a state by any other state as a principle of international law, and to make the principle of non-intervention effective by intervening against intervention.

"This was the Monroe doctrine as understood by its originators, nothing more and nothing less. . . .

"It is true that in an entirely different part of Mr. Monroe's famous message there occurs the declaration that the American continent was, at that time, all occupied by sovereignties capable of governing the entire territory of it, and that nothing more was open to occupation by any power as a new discovery. But this was not then considered as any part of the Monroe doctrine nor for many years afterward, although generally conceded."—Prof. J. W. Burgess, of the Chair of Political Science, Columbia College, New York, in the Evening Post.

NOT AN OBSOLETE DOCTRINE.

"It was in the summer of 1823 that this illustrious English statesman [George Canning] became convinced or suspicious that the Holy Alliance had it in mind to extend its operations to America and reestablish Spanish rule in those colonies. He communicated his belief or suspicion to Mr. Rush, then American Minister in London, and suggested (confidentially) that the United States assist England in preventing any such mischievous action. He thought a public declaration would be useful. Mr. Rush transmitted the proposal to Washington, and the President and Cabinet took it into immediate consideration. Mr. John Quincy Adams, then Secretary of State, was inclined to pooh-pooh it,

Not so his colleagues. All of them—notably Mr. Calhoun—thought the matter pretty serious. So did President Monroe. Many meetings were held. Two ex-Presidents, Jefferson and Madison, were asked for their opinions. The Eighteenth Congress met on December 1, 1823, and the President's message was received and read the following day. In the seventh paragraph Mr. Monroe told the Congress about the arrangements made with Russia for an amicable determination of her rights and interests on the northwestern coast of this continent, and added:

"The occasion has been judged proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power."

"In the thirty-ninth paragraph of the message, the President used the language here following:

"In the wars of the European powers, in matters relating to themselves, we have never taken any part, nor does it comport with our policy so to do. It is only when our rights are invaded, or seriously menaced, that we resent injuries or make preparation for our defense. With the movements in this hemisphere we are, of necessity, more immediately connected, and by causes which must be obvious to all enlightened and impartial observers. . . . We owe it, therefore, to candor, and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers, to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European power, in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

"In these extracts from the message of seventy-two years ago is embodied the Monroe doctrine, so-called. It grew, as we have seen, out of a suggestion made by the greatest English statesman of the time, and it had his cordial approval. It was a very courageous declaration, all the circumstances considered. It astonished and impressed Europe. It accomplished its immediate purpose. It has been shaping our policy and diplomacy ever since, as Mr. Olney has pointed out. A few distinguished public men beginning with Mr. John Quincy Adams have busied themselves with efforts to minimize it. They are dead; the Monroe doctrine has survived them. Like all living doctrines it is made up of letter and spirit, and the spirit is more important than the letter. George Canning's successor at the British foreign office now tells us that it is obsolete. It does not appear to be so in the view of the United States of America."—The Courant (Rep.), Hartford, Conn.

BUSINESS REQUEST.

THE Business Manager requests that we mention a matter that has caused considerable loss to the Herald Office; viz., the practice of some of leaving localities to which church publications have been sent without notifying the office to discontinue or stop their publications. Neglect to order the papers changed or stopped has resulted in their being sent for years and lying in post offices or destroyed, subscriptions often running from one to seven years over time because of such carelessness and indifference. All Saints should contribute to the success of the office, not to its detriment. If we do not help, we should not hinder.

The office receives hundreds of government postal notices of HERALDS, HOPES, or Autumn Leaves that remain uncalled for. We request that those who because of inability to pay or for any other reasons do not care to lift their papers will order them stopped and thus save unnecessary loss to the publishing department.

Where it is known that subscribers have deceased we should also be so notified. Please oblige us in these things, when possible. The amounts lost by the practice referred to run all the way from 50 cents to $15 and the list amounts to a large sum in the aggregate.

MAKE A NOTE OF IT.

A HIGHMINDED, honorable person will be careful how he speaks of the personal affairs of another. He will not needlessly invade, refer to, parade, or comment upon them. Character is revealed in the manner in which such matters are treated. The idle, perpetual talker and neighborhood critic should be quietly but firmly discouraged. "Receive him [or her] not into your house, neither bid him God speed," might properly be advised concerning such; for they that give them audience are apt to be partakers of their "evil deeds," by forming such habits or by taking up such stories. Let the gossip be calmly but quietly rebuked and sent to the parties of whom he or she talks or to the teacher of the branch, with his stories. The law makes special provision for the prevention of "backbiting" and "evil speaking." While the ministry proclaim against it let the membership do their part to suppress it, otherwise it will continue to flourish. It is too little for man or woman to indulge in. Its practice is an indication of the degree of intelligence or status of the one indulging in it. There is a probation of character in all such things.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

FROM a letter by Bro. R. M. Elvin, dated January 6, we quote the following, not having place for all:—

In the pulpit the minister stands not to represent himself, but as the representative of the Father, who has vouchsafed peace and salvation in the gospel, which is an authoritative message. Even as it was anciently, so must it be now; and we should be able to say as did the great apostle to the Gentiles: "For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life." And indeed with Paul we may exclaim, "And who is sufficient for these things?" Shall we be successful in winning proselytes unto our faith, we must first gain the ear—attention—and the respect of the people; that their hearts may be touched and made tender by the truth, and their intellects enlightened by the restored gospel. God has so amply furnished his ministers with evidence upon all essential principles necessary to preach to this generation, that we are safe in saying to the people that, "They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." And also, "To the law and to the testimony." In our sheltering behind this bulwark we may speak in meekness, kindness, plainness, and power, and not compromise any principle of truth, nor our dignity of character as servants of Christ.

Bro. A. C. Hart, writing to the editors from Eagle, Indian Territory, January 3, says:—

I send you the name of Rachel Overstreet, of Pepsin, Missouri, who has been convinced by reading the Herald. Her son, J. B. Overstreet, of Blue Jacket, gave in her name. I hope some elder near Pepsin will see to her baptism. She is an aged lady. We came here from the Spring River district conference and convention. All passed off pleasantly at both. Bro. J. H. Davis is with me, doing all he can. Are having moderate success considering the weather.

Sr. Emma Steckel, of Amber, Iowa, writes in praise of the Hymnal and the children's book "Footsteps of Jesus." She says:—

Received four copies of the Saints' Hymnal this morning. We are perfectly delighted with them. What fine, good paper, binding, and print! And, well, I don't see how they could be very much improved upon! They are handy little books; why, an elder could carry a half dozen around in his pocket with little or no inconvenience. We also received three copies of "Footsteps of Jesus," and think them perfect for the little ones; so nice to read to them; so easily understood; put up in such short interesting chapters, just long enough not to tire them or lose their interest. They are so nice, the "Birth Offering Series," to loan to children not of our faith. Have loaned ours a great many times.

Note from Bro. M. V. Klarman, Cantril, Iowa, to Independent Patriot, of Lamoni, states:—

Should any of the Latter Day Saints stop at this town they will find a stopping place with me.

Bro. A. J. Shores, Dalles, Arkansas, writes that he has been calling for twelve months for a minister to visit that part of the State. He hopes the missionary in charge can send some one; thinks good could be accomplished. He also says:—

There is a good chance here to get homes cheap. We have good health, good range, and good water. Land is not rich but is adapted to fine fruit and vegetables. Will soon have a railroad.

Bro. F. L. Sawley, Quincy, Missouri, January 10:—

Elder T. L. Noblett, of the Christian Church, and I, will enter into a public discussion of nine nights, commencing February 6 and closing the 14th. This will be the second discussion for me. I ask for the prayers of the Saints in my behalf for the truth's sake. We have created a big interest in this community. The people are reading and asking questions to learn all they can—some for and some against our work. We expect a large crowd will attend this debate. It will be held in Quincy, a small town sixteen miles east of Osceola, in Hickory County, Missouri. We hope the Saints who can, will try and attend, all or a part of the time.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THERE were ten thousand, two hundred, and twenty-two letters received and registered in the business department of the Herald Office in the year 1895. This does not include the letters received in the literary department, nor represent all the business done in the accounting room, for considerable business was transacted over the counter, not registered in the letter mail. This is the largest number of letters received in any one year; we trust it is an augury for good during 1896.

We have a quantity of letters from different brethren which we have not room for at present; and by the time space can be used they will be out of date; so brothers, be not irritated when you discover that yours are not published.

Pres. W. W. Blair was to remain at Pittsburg, till after Sunday, January 12, possibly longer, would then likely go to Wheeling, St. Louis, Independence, St. Joseph, thence home in due course.

Bro. J. F. Petre reports progress at Pollock, Missouri. He presides over the branch there and is preaching at points near by. He baptized one of late; others interested. Bro. Petre was ordained a priest in February, 1895, and has been at work ever since.

Bro. and Sr. F. M. Oldham, Clyde, Callahan County, Texas, would like to receive Bro. E. W. Nunley at that point. They have tried to set forth the truth and hope for help in that good work.

Sr. Latta Fordham reports a better outlook for the cause at Elmira, Michigan. The efforts of Joseph Musser caused much persecution for a time, but some affected by him are now seeing their errors and will soon be baptized. The Saints are standing by the work. That is right; those who learn to withstand the brunt of attacks firmly, wisely, and to move right along, will find that after the smoke clears away the truth remains, fixed and strong, unmoved and unhurt; that the people will see the facts after reflecting upon both sides of the question. He who stands by the faith unmoved by the falsehoods of its opponents, who keeps cool and clear-headed, shows strength. "The strongest natures are ever the calmest."

Bro. Joseph Ward was to discuss with a representative of the "Christian faith at Center, Arkansas, January 5.

RECENT EARTHQUAKES.

TEHERAN, Persia, Jan. 9.—Two earthquakes have occurred in the District of Khalkhal, the first on the night of January 2. Upon that occasion the large village of Janjabad was destroyed, several others were partially destroyed, and three hundred persons killed.

The second earthquake occurred during the morning of January 5 and was very severe. It was felt over an area of one hundred miles. The town of Goi was destroyed and a thousand houses were demolished. In addition great damage was done to many villages. The loss of life was very great.

There were eight hundred persons killed in Goi alone, and large numbers of cattle and sheep also perished.

Original Poetry.

A PSALM.

When through the dark valley I journeyed alone
 Thou heardest, O Father, the agonized groan
 That burst from the heart wrung and tortured with pain;
 Thou gavest my spirit sweet peace once again.
 When round me the storm in its fury raged wild,
 Thou heard'st the cry of thy perishing child,
 And stretched forth thy hand in thy mercy to save;
 Thou stilled'st th' fierce storm and calmed
 the wild wave.

All honor and glory to thee, the Most High,
 Who gav'st thy dear Son for man's sin to die.
 Thou lovest thy children and hear'st when they cry;
 When trials assail them thou ever art nigh.
 "OLIVIA."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"'Twould seem sometimes that God in heaven must smile
 At our vague theories and reasonings wild,
 Yet smile in gentleness as mothers will
 Who see the efforts of a little child
 To do some work fit for maturer years,
 And, all unable, yet will strive and strain,
 And, proud that he has striven, fail to see
 That all his puny efforts are in vain."

INFLUENCE.

AS WE grow in years of experience, it becomes more and more apparent to us that whatsoever we sow, that shall we also reap. Our minds, like mirrors, take impressions, and in many instances, reflect the likenesses of those things that are cast upon them through the special senses. We all readily concede that, when children, we learned by imitation, and even in maturer years, by our actions we show that our tendency to imitate the actions of others has not altogether left us. This tendency is influenced by our daily association with either good or evil. Our carnal natures being more thoroughly developed most generally have the predominating influence in our own selves; and for this reason the more we associate with evil, or are thrown in contact therewith, the easier it becomes for us to be charitable toward it.

Parents have a divinely imposed responsibility resting upon them, wherein they are required to train the child in the way he should go; but, does not a greater responsibility rest upon the person who, being relieved of a parent's influence, begins to mingle in the scenes of life? He is, first, responsible to God for every action, for the word plainly declares that all shall be required to give account for the deeds done in the body. He is also responsible to his fellow man, for I think I am safe in saying that no person lives who does not wield some influence over his associates. How blessed, then, if that influence be good. Can it be good if he engages in all kinds of idle talk and questionable deeds?

A short time ago I visited a court room where a highly respectable looking young man was being tried for murder. The evidence produced showed that he was regarded by his employers as a trustworthy young man, and that wherever he had been he was respected and loved. I was told that the first time he was ever known to be intoxicated he committed the crime for which he was being tried. He was really a victim of the evil influence of his associates.

As young people, we who are Latter Day Saints are watched very closely and our every action is taken notice of. O how painful it is to have a question like the following asked: "Has he not gone back on his religion?" Truly our actions many times speak louder than words. Then let each be careful to "shun every appearance of evil," for, he that "soweth with the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." May we each sow that we may reap life everlasting. Let us strive to do nothing that we could not conscientiously pray God's blessing to rest thereon.

R. H. HUSTON.

CLITHERALL, Minnesota.

Dear Sisters:—I have been trying to find time to write you for ever so long, but have given it up as next to impossible, and will just write anyhow. We attended the district conference held on October 5 and 6 at the town of Maine in the district tent. We had an enjoyable time, and the Spirit of peace and good will seemed to pervade the assembly, which was not large. We listened to the timely instructions as given in the sermons by Elders Roberts, Martin, and Stedman. Bro. Hackett also preached once but we were not there to hear him. And if everything is not just as it should be throughout the district, yet a spirit of charity and prayer for one another seems to prevail largely among the Saints. No doubt there is much need of improvement in all of us; but true charity will lead us to pray, not only for ourselves, but for those we think in error; and if we from the heart pray God to forgive us as we forgive all others, then a spirit of forgiveness comes to us, and we only feel sorrow and pity for the erring ones, and have a desire to do all in our power to help each other to overcome our sins. Then when we are really striving to overcome and to forgive, there is no room for evil speaking or hatred, and if it is necessary to speak of evils existing, or to deal with offenders, it is done in charity, that the law may be kept, and not because we do not forgive. Thus charity hideth or preventeth a multitude of sins. We ought not to forget that we are all mortal and liable to imperfections. It is sad indeed to see a neighborhood all at variance; no charity or sympathy for each other; a continual scene of petty jealousies and evil surmising, till one is led to wonder where we may look for that love for God and our neighbor that should exist. Truly Latter Day Saints will do well to guard against this spirit of hatred and discontent so prevalent in the world, for peace and contentment cannot dwell in the heart where hatred and jealousy exist. Let us pray that the gospel of Christ may do its work in our own hearts, that we may prove it the power of God leading each one to salvation.

One writer seems to think it best not to teach the little ones to pray until they are old enough to understand what they should pray for and how. Ought we to apply this rule to all other teachings as well? and how old must they be before we begin? It seems to me if they are old enough to be baptized at eight years of age that we ought to begin to teach them to pray quite young. And when we compare our own understanding of the things of God with what there is yet to be learned before we all come to the unity of the faith on all questions, it would seem that we need not wait for the little ones to acquire any great understanding before teaching them to pray. We have to try to teach them obedience before they are old enough to understand why they should be required to obey; we have to teach them it is wrong to lie, to steal, to swear, to fight, before they understand to any great degree what we mean. My experience has been that when the little ones begin to talk, there is no fear in their hearts to hinder them from praying where they might be heard by others. I think it tends to establish a habit of praying daily, which cannot be called a bad habit, even if they do not understand at first the reasons for praying. If we teach them some simple form of asking our heavenly Father to bless them, to bless their parents, brothers, sisters, and friends, and to help them to be good children and to pray for any one of the family who may be sick, I think they will soon understand the meaning of these things. However, this is only my opinion, yet with due respect for those who differ from me.

And now a word or two to the girls who are thinking of getting married. I believe that love and marriage are ordained of God; but don't be in haste about it. Remember that marriage without love is a total failure of carrying out God's plans. Be sure there is love for God on both sides, for love for each other will hardly be sufficient if love for God is lacking, for there is almost sure to come to you in married life such trials that you will need to cry in unison,

"O for a faith that will not shrink,
 Though pressed by every foe,
 That will not tremble on the brink,
 Of any earthly woe!"

For I wouldn't begin to tell you, girls, that marriage would not add to your trials and burdens. Paul was right when speaking to the girls in his day (who no doubt were believers as well as yourselves); he told them they would see trouble in the flesh. The girls who get married are the ones whom God has designed to become the mothers of the race. It is no light undertaking to furnish fleshly tabernacles for the spirits that come to earth to dwell, and no light undertaking to train the little ones in the way our Creator desires, or to care for their mortal bodies. It seems that no part of God's plans can be carried out without trial and sacrifice, and hereafter we may understand better why the peculiar trials attending maternity should have been placed upon the mothers.

Suffice it to say that love for and faith in God will be necessary. So do not look upon marriage as a light or frivolous matter, but as a sacred relation instituted of God, and then even in the midst of trials you will feel to thank God for your husband, your children, and your home. And if you are faithful, you shall be saved, even though you might have to lay down your life that another spirit might have a body, as many another poor mother has done.

Your love for each other must be strong enough to be forgiving, for we are not all angelic in our natures, nor are we permitted to wed with angels, hence the love that is too harsh or exacting to be forgiving, or too proud to confess a wrong, and ask for pardon will not be strong enough to carry you safely over the shoals and breakers of life.

Well, I have said more upon this subject than I intended when I began, but I hope it will do no harm if it does no good. Whatever our condition in life may be, whether married or single, let us study to show ourselves approved, workwomen that need not be ashamed, working out our own salvation while trusting in God.

Your sister,

EMMA L. ANDERSON.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR JANUARY.

Ask the Father in my name, in faith believing that you shall receive, and you shall have the Holy Ghost which manifesteth all things, which is expedient unto the children of men. And if you have not faith, hope and charity, you can do nothing.—Doc. and Cov. 16:4.

Thursday, Jan. 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—Hebrews 13: 20, 21.

Thursday, Jan. 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 61: 10, 11.

Thursday, Jan. 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 51: 3-8.

The Chaparro tree of the United States of Colombia is credited by Mr. Robert Thomson, in a report to the British Foreign Office, with a phenomenal endurance of fire. The tree—botanically known as Rhopsala obovata—grows to a height of 15 to 20 feet, and its distorted trunks measure from 9 to 12 inches in diameter. In Tolima, where other trees are nearly all destroyed by the persistent burning of the savannahs and hills for renewing pasturage, the Chaparro not only resists the fire but seems actually to seek it. In the lower hills, reduced to sterility by the incessant burnings, hundreds of square miles are covered by growths of these little trees, which are as regular in arrangement as in a carefully cultivated plantation. The resistance of the tree is due to the structure of the bark, of which the outer portion, to the depth of half an inch, is of a peculiar composition and serves no vital function.

A VISIT TO A MISSION SUNDAY SCHOOL.

IMAGINE yourself (with a guide wearing a blue coat with brass buttons and carrying in a most conspicuous manner a "billy") walking down one of the bright, broad, sunny streets of San Francisco. We are a party of six, from as many different States, invited to attend the lowest mission Sunday school in the city; lowest, because in the lowest part of the city and made up of the lowest element. We turned and turned, up one street and down another, the streets growing narrower and filthier all the way. "Here you are," called out our good-natured guide as he turned us over to two policemen who quietly but gravely said, "This way, please."

"This way" was down six steps from the street into a large, barn-like building, that impressed us as having once been used as a skating rink. It was an immense room, very plain in its furnishings—plain seats in straight rows for the pupils, and a raised platform running across one end of the room furnished a place for the officers of the school and any visitors. A beautiful regulation flag emblem of our country was draped over the superintendent's desk. On the wall were beautiful mottoes, and fancy designs all made to catch the eye and please. A grand piano, the gift of some philanthropic soul, was down on the main floor at the front.

We were early. A few ladies were present, going about arranging flowers, of which there was a profusion, distributing singing books, Bibles, and a great number of cards on which was printed the day's lesson. On a stool at each of the two doors sat a policeman hired by the association to come here and maintain order, in case of disturbance from the hoodlum element outside. Beside each door stood a couple of sweet-faced ladies who gave each child a smile of welcome and a hand clasp, and pinned onto each little breast a tiny blue ribbon stamped with cross and crown and bearing the words "Jesus saves."

Soon they came pouring in, and "pouring" is just the word; some ran, some jumped, some blundered;—all came staring and gaping, and were shown to their seats by bright-faced lads who wore ushers' badges. You cannot, without seeing, imagine how those children appear. No other city in the United States has such a mixture. There were children of nearly every nationality—Portuguese, Spanish, Italian, Indian, African, Mexican, Japanese, and many low white children;—dirty, unkempt, ragged—all classes and all conditions. Many came bareheaded and barefooted. If they were very dirty some of the older boys or girls took them to a lavatory and cleaned them up. Any could go and wash and comb, but their teachers told me that the "house-to-house" workers tried to have this work done at the home, the teachers even showing the mothers how it should be done, and how to clean their homes.

One little girl, I remember distinctly, had with her a little sister of perhaps five years, whose face was very dirty, and though the elder's was not much better, she had a bit of pride that sprang into life at sight of company. So, to improve the appearance of the little sister, she took up her own filthy dress, spat upon it, and wiped the little one's face, then looked at her with a smile of approval that showed she was proud of the results. At a signal from the superintendent something like order was secured, and then began the singing—everything set to the music of our national airs, the purpose of which we may readily see. The first was a sacred piece to the tune of Rally Round the Flag. How they sang! Of course there were many who could not read at all, nor even speak English but they were catching the spirit—the tune, and the teacher said it was surprising how quickly they learned to sing. Then came the opening prayer—"Our Father," and all who could joined in the petition.

They sang a great deal, and then they had a short talk about Jesus as a little boy and a little boy's friend. It was told in such a sweet story-like way that it caught the attention of many. You could see by the faces that it was a new story to them and they listened with such marked attention that it was a pleasure just to look at them.

All at once there was such a crash on the outside—some miscreants were throwing a volley of stones. Out rushed the police and all was soon quiet. The teachers were volunteers from some of the up-town schools. A number of cadets at roll call took the addresses of absent ones—each in her respective district—and went out to ascertain the cause of absence. We noticed one teacher who had a little dark-faced Spaniard at her side about six years of age and she was gently emptying his pockets of cigar stumps, tobacco quids, and burnt matches that he had picked up in the street. He, evidently, could not understand much English but he could see by the teacher's sad face and the shake of her head that he must not do so. While watching their pantomime we could not but recall the refrain of that old song, "What shall the harvest be?" After the lesson talk came more singing, a short prayer, and the signal for retiring came. Each teacher marshalling her own class into line attended them to the doors where to our surprise each child was given a great soft light bun and the avidity with which it was devoured showed the enjoyment it gave.

Every Sunday this is practiced—something given that may be eaten from the hand. About three times a year a full meal is given. When needed, clothes are furnished, the families are looked after, and employment furnished when possible. All of this work is done by big-hearted people, many of whom are giving their thousands to better the condition of the poor, and in the day of final rewards, their works and their motives will not pass unnoticed by him who rewards every man according to the deeds done in the body.

ADDRESSES.

Mark H. Forscutt, Lamoni, Iowa.

J. H. Wells, box 545, Bozeman, Montana.

Letter Department.

HILLSBURG, Ont., Dec. 30.

Editors Herald:—In your issue of Dec. 25, is an editorial entitled "Americanism in the White House," which I feel to take exception to on the ground that it is somewhat out of place and likely to prove offensive to some who owe their allegiance to Great Britain and perhaps have a weakness for "things English."

Now the writer of the said editorial may not have written in the interest of partizanship, but he certainly does not disguise his love for things American.

It is not the object of this letter to discuss the relative merits of the claims of the nations, concerned in a matter which has assumed such grave proportions, but simply that which concerns the church. Now I understand the Herald to be the official organ of the church and as such should not be used by anyone as a medium to air their political views or patriotic sentiments and as the church is not a national institution, partiality to any nation should not be shown by its mouthpiece. We are commanded to seek first to build up the kingdom of God; so if our patriotism interferes with our duty as citizens of that kingdom, we should cast it aside. Now, then, does the United States favor the cause of Zion more than does Great Britain? Does it afford greater privileges to the Saints of God? Let history answer! Why, was not the representative of Jesus Christ put to death in this boasted "land of the free and home of the brave?" And if Jesus Christ himself was to come as "King of kings" I venture to say he would not be crowned on this continent if the United States could hinder it, notwithstanding the fact that the kingdoms of this world (United States included) are to become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ.

Spread-eagle bombast is often indulged in by Americans, which is frequently mistaken for patriotism, which should not be sanctioned by Saints.

This is not written in the spirit of controversy, but with a desire to do good; and I hope it will be received in the same spirit. Praying for the advancement of Christ's kingdom, I am,

Your brother in Christ,
DAVID TARZWELL.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 2.

Editors Herald:—At the request of our field captain, W. H. Kelley, I reached Conneautvill, Pennsylvania, December 2, and was conveyed to Tracy by Brn. Judd and Corey, where I was domiciled with the very hospitable Ferguson family. I spoke eight times in the schoolhouse where Bro. L. W. Powell had opened the work. There, as elsewhere where I have crossed his path, he stands high as a man and preacher. How he can content himself (if he does) in his retired life, I cannot opine.

Bro. P. had the house overflowing, I not half an audience, but some there are very near the kingdom. The kindness of the Fergusons and Holdens was complete.

On the 8th Mr. J. P. Ferguson treated me to a sleigh ride to the spot one mile southwest of Keville where is the earthwork on "west bank of Conneaut Creek," where the world-renowned Solomon Spalding found in fancy the twenty-four rolls of parchment. It represents a breastwork of earth about three hundred feet long and about eight feet high. The creek bottom there is low and wide and often overflows. Spalding must have anticipated the future down to the days of celluloid and imagined such parchment, for his location would not have afforded dry shelter for the olden sort. While not expecting to find more parchment it was real satisfaction to be on the spot. Doubt as to the sacredness of the spot and an ample carpet of snow combined against the shedding of my shoes.

At Mr. Ferguson's store one evening, I was introduced to two Spaldings. One readily unbosomed himself as to how well he knew Solomon. After he had grown quite verbose, I asked, "How old are you, Mr. S?" whereupon he responded, "Sixty-three." I added, "Well, Solomon has been dead seventy-nine years!" It would almost have made a wooden man blush to see him try to maintain it. There are Spaldings there, however, who are honorable people.

By the kindness of W. L. Pendleton the Disciple church at Lockport was secured for me; where, while I delivered eleven discourses, that generous family furnished me a very comfortable home, the Shermans and Lawrences also entertaining me. Here, too, Bro. Powell stood high. Good things are said to be in small parcels, and diamonds shed a large lustre. Some there are deeply interested. Mrs. Pendleton and sister, Nora, had been baptized by Rev. Hibler, of the Disciples, having written twice to Bro. Powell and for some reason getting no response. Since my eleven discourses Miss Nora has united with the Disciples. Mrs. P. holds her position. Where will she light, please? Rev. Hibler, of Hiram College, thinks I was very naughty to skirmish around there as I did. He is in his first year of pulpiterring, and sends another man next. Won't I catch it!

I was next conveyed to the Shepard schoolhouse, where I delivered twelve sermons, and O, what weather—pouring rain, pelting snow, a sea of slush or mud, an occasional freeze! But through it all every night was occupied and sixteen the least number out. On the better nights the house was full. Had it been fine it certainly would not have been large enough. Powell had not been there. Some excellent people there are interested—Garwoods, Shepards, and Warings, who cared for me in a very kindly manner. All these places should receive attention by those in that part next as fielders. The nice chapel at Holman's Corners, I saw from the road one day as we drove past. Thirty-one efforts in the vicinity and none of them in the chapel broke the record there. Those who have known the condition of my vocal organs for a few winters will rejoice with me that thirty-three efforts in December did not incapacitate me. I am certainly thankful to God. I enjoyed Mickle's and Holman's entertainment, also Davis's. The generous offerings that covered the sum of expense came freely in view of a more extended effort than has been the rule. Along the line of the P. S. and L. E. R. R. Bro. W. H. Garrett's name shines, and courteous conductors and agents seem to abound.

On 31st I sped back to the city by the lake, for repairs, to renew permits, etc. Finding the occupants of No. 351 Bridge Street away from home, but the lamp and fire bright I hid myself to the nearest hardware store, procured six keys, the second of which tried proved to be the key to the situation. I decorated the table with my baggage, the lamp as center piece, wrote a note, went up stairs to find the late impression of Apostle Griffiths, risked fitting the pattern, and was soon in slumber's sweet embrace, letting the old year wag on, when lo! the whistles blew, the bells rang, and Cleveland's centennial was announced! The belated dwellers of No. 351 Bridge Street arrived, inspected the surroundings of the faithful lamp, and the jolly, generous, hospitable Mr. Woolston shouted up the stairway, "Happy New Year!" The burglar responded, and so closed with us 1895.

As when a small urchin we sang, we now meditated,

"Our Father through the coming year,
We know not what shall be;
But we would leave without a fear
Its ordering all to thee.

"All to thee, O Lord, all to thee,
Whatever, then, may be our lot, O Lord,
We leave it all to thee."

With compliments of the season and in bonds,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

Editors Herald:—I have not written to you for some time; not because I had been idle, nor that I had nothing to report; nor was it because I, like many of my brethren, did not naturally want a free advertisement for the many good things that my brethren and I had done in this part. Neither was it because I had become a regular cyclone debater and had met a regular thunderbolt debater, and, according to the estimation of myself and a few friends, made a great and sweeping tidal wave victory for the truth; but it was because I thought others could fill the Herald with this sort of windy, wordy free puffs about debates and other minute and everyday duties and incidents of ministerial life mixed with self and others' praise as long as the moral law, better than I could, at which the editors are complaining and which shuts out others who have equal rights to space in the Herald. These are some of the reasons that I have not written oftener. But I expect these plain matter-of-fact statements will sour some of my good and very sensitive brethren and they will want to publicly chastise me and enter into a long debate through your columns, in which personalities and sharp cuts are made and strife engendered. This course is not wise, neither is it in keeping with the gospel which says to suffer long and be kind; but it shows conclusively that the one so doing has been hit, not where the good common sense shot was intended to hit him; but the biggest part of the man is hit, which is the bump of self-esteem or pride; and this produces the unchristian effect of retaliation instead of repentance and thanks to the one pointing out the errors. Brethren and sisters, there are none of us free from these things when the carnal "big I" is in front. But this is not reporting.

I have labored since General Conference in Ohio, West Virginia, and Kentucky, and have performed all the known duties of one sent to represent the church as circumstances permitted, and while so doing I have been blessed with great liberty in preaching and debating, both in public and in private. With few exceptions the brethren and sisters have assisted as best they could. I have felt encouraged with my brethren, through God's Holy Spirit, many times, for which I am thankful. The debate, I believe resulted in good to the cause. My health is tolerable, but as winter comes on my old troubles are returning; but I want to be resigned and able to say like the Master, "Thy will be done."

I expect to continue in this part until I go to the General Conference. My address is Centerville, Wayne County, West Virginia, and I would like to hear from any of my brethren or sisters wherever I have traveled in the past.

In bonds,

WIRT, Ind., Dec. 29.

Editors Herald:—I have recently returned home from Ripley County. I preached at Melotte, Titusville, Whitehall, and at the courthouse at Versailles. Had large crowds and good interest. Several expressed a desire to unite with us, but I advised them to go slow; to investigate; to prove all things, hold fast that which is good. I have seen the folly of people uniting with us under excitement and persuasion, until I am disgusted. Some seem to think we will be rewarded for the number we baptize or the great amount of work done, and never pause to consider how they do what they do. The idea of our elders leaving good, interesting meetings and going outside of their appointed fields of labor just to baptize one or two seems to the writer to be wrong. However, I don't want to be considered a chronic grumbler; nevertheless I cannot help acting as an observer.

The people of Jefferson and Ripley Counties have been in quite a stir concerning the Scott-Sherman debate. The Versailles Republican had an article on the matter. As the editor had always treated us with Christian courtesy in publishing items in relation to our claims I replied to the article, which was quite lengthy, yet he agreed to publish my reply. It seems that the Reverend Sherman is afraid to affirm his church, and it may be well for him and his fraternity if he does not. His stock in trade is somewhat like Braden's—nothing elevating. His excuse for not coming to time was that he did not want to be whipped by a boy and would get but little honor in whipping one; so I promised that if he would sign fair propositions we would furnish him M. R. Scott, Sr., or S. W. L. Scott; and if honor is what he is after, "if" (a Campbellite word) he whips either of the brethren he is welcome to all the honor; but peradventure the Campbellite structure is knocked off the flimsy foundation "if," and the restored gospel is presented in its ancient purity and simplicity, look out, for the hireling will have to go elsewhere for prey.

I never felt better in defending the work. Truly have I realized the power of God. There are more calls for preaching than I can fill. Several ask that Bro. I. P. Baggerly call again. Hopefully,

CONCORDIA, Kan., Dec. 31.

Editors Herald:—When I read the letters from the Saints I feel a desire to write a few words; also I have thought that I would like to let the friends who knew our dear old grandfather, Uncle John Landers, know that I, his grandson, William Landers, have at last followed his teachings, inasmuch as to start at least in the glorious cause. I was baptized at Independence, Missouri, during the General Conference in April, and words cannot express how thankful I am that I obeyed the call.

I wish to let those who live near or any who have business on or near the line of railroad that I work on—which is the Missouri Pacific, and I run from Concordia, Kansas, to Prosser, Nebraska, know that it will always be a pleasure to get acquainted with you. We live in Concordia, No. 512 East Fifth Street, and the latchstring is always out to Saints or their friends.

My wife started in the work first, and I feel to thank God that she has been instrumental in myself and others as well in seeing. I would like to write about some work that has been done around here, but will wait and see if this much finds a place. We ask an interest in your prayers.

WILLIAM LANDERS.

BIG BEND, W. Va., Jan. 1.

Editors Herald:—I am in Calhoun County, where Bro. L. R. Devore made his advent with the "restored gospel." There had been living here since 1840, two brothers, John and George Rogers, the latter having died a short time before Bro. Devore came here, and who was a member of the old organization, and knew the prophet up to within two years of his death; who was in the troubles in Missouri, and was an eyewitness to the murder of the old Revolutionary soldier with the corn cutter by the mob, also of the killing of the little boy who had his brains knocked out by one of the mob with the butt of his musket, while pleading for his life; and who kept the faith till death and always talked it when opportunity presented. His neighbors tell me he was never too busy, even in harvest, when anything was said derogatory to the character of Joseph Smith, to stop and tell them that all those stories about him were lies, and that he was well acquainted with Joseph Smith and knew him to be one of the best men he ever saw. He could not be moved from his position by any influence that might be brought to bear upon him, as many times the whole community would make special prayer and effort to induce "Uncle George," as he was called, to join the Baptist Church. He was well known in the county and respected in the community wherever known.

His brother John still lives here and is a worthy member of the Reorganized Church. The following is a statement made by him to me:—

"I was born in 1818. I was baptized January 27, 1889, by Elder D. L. Shinn. I never belonged to any other church. I have been a believer in this doctrine for more fifty years, and there never has been any other faith for me; there is no other.

"I had a brother, who suffered the persecutions in Missouri, and who was well acquainted with the prophet. I saw Oliver Cowdery and a man by the name of Batson, in Harrison County, and heard them preach. I also heard Henry Bigler, and the two Lyons (I forget their names) preach. I was about twenty-four years old then; it was about two years before the death of the martyrs.

"I did not hear any more preaching till the advent of Bro. L. R. Devore, in this county, in 1887. Persecution soon began as usual by the 'pious' and others that could be mustered into service. Bro. T. J. Beatty, of Limerick, Ohio, soon joined him, and soon after a mob of forty-one men, including the Baptist pastor in this neighborhood, and his sons. Bro. Devore and Beatty were at my house on that night, and had gone to bed, when the mob came and wanted the preachers. I told them they could not have them. They said they would have them at whatever cost; that if we would give them up they would not hurt us, etc. There were ten of us who had heard that a mob of one hundred would be there, and we were guarding them. I told them they could not get them; that I could face my coffin as well as they could face theirs; that they were in bed and should not be disturbed. They said they would give us five minutes, then three, then two, then one, then they got panic-stricken and fled, some to the creek bank, some behind the corn crib, and some behind the chicken house. After a time they fired a few shots and left."

Bro. Rogers said much more, but I forbear as I want to give some space to Aunt Maria, his wife's statement. She said: "I always tried to live according to the rules while in the Methodist and Baptist Churches, but never received any particular light in either; but after I came with the Latter Day Saints I found the true light and great power. That I know, because I have had the blessings.

"When Bro. Devore came into this neighborhood to preach I did not go to his meetings till two of my sons were baptized. I then heard Bro. Devore preach on the "One Body," and when he read that God had set some in church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, etc., I felt sure he was making that scripture and that it was not in my Bible; so when I came home I had the boys see how it did read. When one of them read it that way I told the other one to read it; and when he read it the same way I gave it up. He [Devore] also showed how the members of the human body all rejoiced together when one rejoiced and how they all suffered together when one suffered; and that if all the different churches represented the different members of this one body, they would not be contending against one another, but when one was prospering all would rejoice, and when one was suffering all would suffer; and that those churches that are weakest would receive more 'abundant honor' and so on.

"I could not quit thinking about these members, and when cooking a meal I scalded my little finger, I immediately thought of what Bro. Devore said about the less honorable members. I thought, 'Sure enough, the least member suffers, and now the whole body suffers with it.' After giving it some attention I again turned my steps to preparing the meal, and had not done much till I scalded another finger, and now had two witnesses that this is the true church and that his sermon was right. I went to bed praying to know whether to join this church or not. I dreamed that I ought to be baptized and save my soul. I awoke clapping my hands, and could not sleep any more that night and told my son to go for the elders. They came and I was baptized by Bro. T. J. Beatty, September 12, 1889.

"I enjoyed myself in the other churches very much, though I did not receive much light; but this is the first one that satisfied my mind. I never expect to find anything better till I reach the better world. I could not walk to the creek to be baptized, but when I came out of the water I felt well, and wanted to walk back, and believe I could, yes, I do, but they would not let me. Dr. White said if I was put in the water it would kill me. My health was better, and after I got dressed I walked around and they told me I was quite spry again. I was certainly born anew, and felt well.

"I know this work is true, and that there is great power in this church. Last winter I called for the elders and they administered to me as James directed for my sinking, fainting spells; I would go away as if I was dead, every week or two, and one time they thought I was dead. Since I was anointed I have never had one, nor a symptom; and I thank my God for his great power."

Aunt Maria told me much more, but I have not time to write it. I am still trying to sound the everlasting gospel in these West Virginia hills and now have good hearings and respectful, courteous treatment, from all except the Baptist preacher here, who was an enemy to the truth in the beginning, also a few of his members who will not do their own thinking, but let him chew their food and they just open their mouths and swallow it down.

I came into this State on the 5th of December and have preached twenty-three times to date. Bro. D. L. Shinn and F. J. Ebeling were with me awhile. Bro. Ebeling returned home to Wheeling, and Bro. Shinn was called home on account of sickness in his family. By card from him since, he is now again in the field. Some have requested baptism; much prejudice is being removed around here; I believe we will have the good wishes and respect of the best citizens of this part of Calhoun County henceforth. I enjoy good liberty, and good health, and good treatment. Bro. Thomas K. Ferrell is with me now. I expect to return home about the middle of January. May the Lord continue to bless and uphold all the faithful ones.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Jan. 6.

Editors Herald:—The New Year opens with bright prospects so far as the Council Bluffs branch is concerned. A gradual growth in spirituality and earnestness is apparent. A number of the Saints who for a long time have been cold and indifferent are now taking an active interest in the work. We had an excellent sacrament meeting last Sunday, and if the first Sunday in the year is any indication of what the year will bring forth, the branch should outstrip every past experience. Much sickness in the city now. Two were baptized here on New Year's Day; one a former worker in Mr. Savidge's church. I go to Macedonia soon to hold a series of meetings.

Yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

BAINBRIDGE, Ohio, Jan. 6.

Editors Herald:—I have recently been engaged in instructing a class in vocal music at the Highland branch. Quite a degree of progress was made. This is something that has been neglected by the Saints in this part, and I am glad to see some begin to take more interest in singing. While with the Highland branch I preached nine discourses. Two of them were at a new place opened by James Moler and J. L. Goodrich last October.

I am now on my way home. In a few days I expect to go to Carbondale in Athens County, where I have secured the promise of the town hall for preaching.

Yours,
H. E. MOLER.

DEATH NOT TO BE DREADED.

IF a man die, shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come.—Job 14: 14.

The subject that Job is discussing in this verse is death, and it is one of the most important that human minds are called upon to investigate; not that the physical death is in, and of itself of greater or less importance than other conditions which humanity is heir to, but the human estimation of death comes from the important bearing which it is believed to have as to the consequences of the past and the prospects of the future, or the possibility of a life after this.

The consideration of death is of more importance from the misconception entertained by nearly all the different churches of our land with regard to this most solemn and interesting event of human experience. Therefore we have a class who claim the cheerless and terrible belief that death is the end of all conscious being; that is, when the body is consigned to its last resting place nothing remains thereafter but ashes or a formless essence that soars away and mingles with the elements; and that all the glowing hopes and all the lofty aspirations of humanity are to become as naught, and consciousness and capacity for knowledge and happiness which have just begun to expand in this earth's life are all cut off by death and buried in the grave.

But we have another class that tramples under foot all the love that our Savior manifested for humanity, by teaching that there are only two places for human souls to go to; that is, hell and heaven, that but a few of the human family will be saved, and that the majority are condemned and placed in hell among fiends and devils, that all hope will be destroyed, all sympathy gone, and aspirations dead; yet this is to be the fate of the majority of poor, trusting, human souls. What a horrible falsehood on the infinite love and wisdom of God! How thankful should the Saints be, that God has given us a more glorious hope and a more consolatory understanding as to the death and future of the human race!

Under the benign influence of the latter-day work, that is now dawning upon the darkening condition of humanity, many a poor heart has been made to glow and rejoice that Christ has overcome this death, so that now their lives bloom with a consciousness of hope beyond the grave; for this physical body is but the swaddling clothing for the spiritual body in its state of probation here on earth. The spirit and the body shall be reunited as Christ's spirit and body were reunited in perfect human form, and will be prepared to enter upon a new career of unending progress. Thus death is a part of the divine plan of salvation, through which humanity may attain to the highest possibilities of their natures, to fit them for the life to come.

The spiritual body has a habitation which it continues to inhabit through the intermediate state until the day spoken of in the twentieth chapter of Revelation. Therefore a Latter Day Saint, to whom it is given to understand the problem of an after life should have the strength to meet all worldly trouble with fortitude; and even death should be considered by them as their great deliverer. Though the departure of a dear friend to a Saint should be like that of the sun as it seemingly sets in darkness below the rose tinted horizon of the west; yet we know it has really gone to diffuse its light elsewhere, so that even while sinking in apparent darkness, it is still the same sun; just so it is with the departure of a friend. So, by and by, the angel of death shall remove our mask, and then we shall see, not as through a glass dimly, but we shall see as we are seen and shall know as we are known.

So then we will behold them face to face,
When no rude hand shall roughly tear
Us from each other's warm embrace,
Nor cause a sorrow there.

BY W. W. BLAIR.

FOR two comings of Christ having been revealed to us; a first, which has been fulfilled in the lowliness of a human lot; a second, which impends over the world, now near its close, in all the majesty of Deity unveiled.—Tertullian, Apol.

One of the most important facts touching the second advent of Christ, and one to be borne in mind constantly when considering that subject is, that preceding the advent and preparatory to it, the angels of heaven will minister to men on earth similarly as they did in the times of the first advent making plain "the times and the seasons," identifying the church and kingdom of God, and teaching the Saints the things essential for them to know for their safety, edification and comfort. The Bible promises all this.

The next important fact to be borne in mind is, that the Lord, through the Holy Spirit, will reveal his word and will in an orderly, regular way as anciently to his people, for their instruction, direction, and comfort so that the Lord's coming shall not "overtake" them "unawares," but that they may be found "the children of the light and of the day," for this the Bible teaches.

The next important fact to be faithfully observed in the premises is that the prophecies and the promises of the word of God contained in the Bible concerning "the day of the Lord" and "his glorious appearing," are to be taken literally, as meaning precisely what it says, uncorrupted by the "private interpretation" of anyone. When all this is observed, it will be seen that the second advent of Christ and the end of the world, with all the notable events preceding and attending them, will be revealed by the Bible, also by angel ministrations, and, further, by immediate, direct revelation by and through the Holy Spirit to the Lord's people then living on the earth.

Has the Lord revealed the fact of Christ's second coming to all, or any, of the so-called Christian churches after the foregoing scriptural manner? If not, what claim have they, singly or collectively, to be called the Church of Christ?

Has the Lord revealed the impending, glorious appearing of Christ in these latter days to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, after the foregoing scriptural manner? If he has, is not that conclusive evidence that that church is really and truly the Church of Christ? In proof that he has so revealed the second coming of Christ, made plain the way of his coming, and provided ample means to prepare a people to patiently, intelligently endure the trials and afflictions incident upon "the great and dreadful day of the Lord" and "be ready" to "meet him in peace," I will now proceed to show.

Joseph Smith, the Seer, in his History, gives us this reasonable account of an angel ministering to him, September 21, 1823; and it will be noted that his personal description of this angel harmonizes with those of Daniel and the other prophets, and with that of the apostles concerning angels, but is widely different from the conceits and ideals of Protestant, Romanist, and Pagan. Here it is:—

"While I was thus in the act of calling upon God, I discovered a light appearing in the room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked and his arms also a little above the wrists; so, also, were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so that I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid; but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Moroni; that God had a work for me to do; and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues, or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people. He said there was a book deposited, written upon gold plates, giving an account of the former inhabitants of this continent and the source from whence they sprang. He also said that the fulness of the everlasting gospel was contained in it, as delivered by the Savior to the ancient inhabitants; also, that there were two stones in silver bows—and these stones, fastened to a breastplate, constituted what is called the urim and thummim—deposited with the plates; and the possession and use of these stones were what constituted seers in ancient or former times; and that God had prepared them for the purpose of translating the book.

"After telling me these things he commenced quoting the prophecies of the Old Testament. He first quoted part of the third chapter of Malachi, and he quoted also the fourth or last chapter of the same prophecy, though with a little variation from the way it reads in our Bible. Instead of quoting the first verse as it reads in our books, he quoted it thus: 'For behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall burn as stubble; for they that come shall burn them, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch.' And again, he quoted the fifth verse thus: 'Behold, I will reveal unto you the priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the Prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.' He also quoted the next verse differently:—'And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers; if it were not so, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at its coming.' In addition to these, he quoted the eleventh chapter of Isaiah, saying that it was about to be fulfilled. He quoted also the third chapter of Acts, twenty-second and twenty-third verses, precisely as they stand in our New Testament. He said that that prophet was Christ; but the day had not yet come when they who would not hear his voice, should be cut off from among the people,' but soon would come.

"He also quoted the second chapter of Joel, from the twenty-eighth verse to the last. He also said that this was not yet fulfilled, but was soon to be. And he further stated the fulness of the Gentiles was soon to come in. He quoted many other passages of Scripture, and offered many other explanations which cannot be mentioned here. Again, he told me that when I got those plates of which he had spoken—for the time that they should be obtained was not then fulfilled—I should not show them to any person; neither the breastplate with the urim and thummim, only to those to whom I should be commanded to show them; if I did I should be destroyed. While he was conversing with me about the plates, the vision was opened to my mind that I could see the place where the plates were deposited, and that so clearly and distinctly that I knew the place again when I visited it.—Joseph the Seer, pages 203, 204.

The above was the second vision bestowed of the Lord upon the young seer, the first one having occurred in the spring of 1820, when he saw the Father and the Son and heard the voice of the Lord, saying, "This is my beloved Son, hear him." (Joseph the Seer, p. 202.)

In the foregoing texts is seen; first, direct revelation from God to man, and, second, angel ministration, all preceding and preparatory, to "the great day of the Lord" and the hour when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord," as see 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17.

These glorious visions and the instructions then given, were fitting and essential in revealing to man, authoritatively, "the times and the seasons" ordained of God for opening and ushering in "the dispensation of the fullness of times," the restoration of "the everlasting gospel," the founding and building up the church and kingdom of God on earth preparatory to the millennium; the near coming of Christ in power and glory to reign on earth as "King of kings and Lord of lords," making "the kingdoms of this world" "the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." I repeat it, these divine revelations were fitting and essential in thus preparing "the way of the Lord" for his second and final coming when he shall sit as king upon the "holy hill of Zion," receive the heathen for his inheritance also, "and the uttermost parts of the earth for" his "possession."

That the reader may comprehend the full scope and meaning of the texts cited to the young seer by the angel, I think well to quote them at length and ask that they be carefully and prayerfully read and pondered, for they announce "the great day of the Lord" at hand; they reveal the soon coming of our Lord to reign as King; they denounce destruction upon the wicked; they make known the approaching millennial glory.

Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts. But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap: And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years. . . . Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.—Malachi 3: 1-4; 16-18.

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Son of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.—Malachi 4: 1-6.

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots; and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth. The envy also of Ephraim shall depart, and the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off: Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim. But they shall fly upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west; they shall spoil them of the east together: they shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab; and the children of Ammon shall obey them. And the Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea; and with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river, and shall smite it in the seven streams, and make men go over dryshod. And there shall be a highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria; like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.—Isaiah 11.

Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.—Acts 3: 19-23.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit. And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the Lord come. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the Lord hath said, and in the remnant whom the Lord shall call.—Joel 2: 28-32.

Such a full and plain announcement of the purposes and designs of God relating to these latter days, such a specific identification of "the times and the seasons" appointed of God for this present age of the world, is worthy of God and most essential to his people.

THE NARROW NECK OF LAND AND THE RIVER SIDON.

WITH much pleasure I herewith answer Bro. C. R. Duncan's request, as published in the Herald of December 11, briefly, as I have written a work on the subject matter he wishes to know all about, and which will be published in book form by the Ensign Office, all being well, in the near future. I will state here, however, my reasons for locating the "neck of land" of the Book of Mormon account as that of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec; and will also give my "position" as to the location of the "River Sidon."

1. My position for locating the boundary line between the Desolation country and the land of Bountiful on the Tehuantepec Isthmus is, because the isthmus is northward of the country as shown on our maps of America of being nearly surrounded by seas and gulfs, answering to the country described by Alma of the Nephite account, of "the land of Nephi, and Zarahemla" being "nearly surrounded by water." Hence such a country is shown by the map of Central America proper, and by the Honduras Bay it is shown that at that point Central America is nearly divided in two parts by the bay, thus answering to Alma's account of the land of Nephi, and the land of Zarahemla, being each "nearly surrounded by water;" showing clearly that the land from the Bay of Panama to the Bay of Honduras answers to the land of Nephi; and northward of the Bay of Honduras to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec answers to the land of Zarahemla. Can such a country be found southward of the Panama Isthmus? If it can, the maps of America do not show it.

2. For locating the line at the Tehuantepec isthmus between the land Desolation and the land Bountiful, in effect is, because southward of the line in Chiapas, relics of cities and temples of antiquity have been discovered and published, answering to the locations of two of the principle cities of the Nephite account; viz., Palenque, ruins answering to the location of the city of Bountiful; and the ruins at Tulha, near Ocozingo, answers to the location of the city of Zarahemla. (The location of the latter is shown on the Gemelli chart, which of course ought to establish the fact.) Have any such remains been found in any of the states of Colombia, on the west side of the main stream of the Magdalena River as those found at Tulha on the west side of the Usumacinta River? If so, they are not on record. Nor has any account been published by antiquarians of remains in Colombian states that will answer to the remains of the city of Bountiful; nor of Manti near the head of the Magdalena River. I hold, therefore, that the Usumacinta River answers to the River Sidon, of the Nephite account, and that the remains at Utalan, Guatemala, answer to the location of the city of Manti, is evident, they being near to the head of the Usumacinta River. For the location of these remains see the map of H. H. Bancroft in his work, "Native Races of Pacific States," Vol. 4.

Of the two native charts I will also briefly state: The Botturini was collected by Botturini Benaduei, an Italian, in the City of Mexico, about the year 1735. The chart has been published in quite a number of works. The copy I have is from the Delafield work of 1839, which shows the history of the Lehi people from Jerusalem to South America.

The Gemelli chart was collected by Gemelli Carrari, in the City of Mexico, in 1700, and has also been extensively published in the works of antiquarians of American antiquity. It shows the travels of Nephi and his people from South America to Central America, the land of Nephi, and from that land, the southward part, to the northern part, the land of Zarahemla, and which covers a history of four hundred years, from the time Lehi and Nephi left Jerusalem until Mosiah located with his people, the Nephites, in the land of Zarahemla, and each chart is of great worth in defense of the truth of the Book of Mormon for that length of time in the history of the Nephite and Lamanite people. Their interpretation by the Nephite record will of course upset their former interpretation by some of the historians which have stated that they are the history of the Aztecs of about four hundred years, immediately preceding the conquest in the sixteenth century. Such an account is contrary to their showing in every particular, hence the work I have written for publication by the office of the Ensign. Yours truly, SIMON SMITH.

St. JOSEPH, Missouri, Dec. 15, 1895.

MY APOLOGY.

THE now so-called Return of September 15, 1895, contains the minutes of a so-called "General Council" of the Church of Christ, held at Davis City, Iowa, September 14-16, 1895. We quote from minutes as follows:—

The letter of Bro. Elias Land, of Rogers, Texas, to the Lamoni Herald of July 24, 1895, attacking the Return was read and it was Resolved: That we [Wickes, Page, and Clark, E. L.] cannot sustain Bro. Land as an elder in the church until he apologizes through the Herald for that action; and we also declare him to be out of harmony with the church in his views on the Twelve.

Brothers and friendly editors of the Herald; you can readily see from this quotation that I am required to do a something which lies alone in your power to permit, or prevent being done, and that is to "apologize" through the Herald. Will you therefore please permit me through your paper to offer what follows as an apology to that august (?) body?

In the first place I wish to say: It was not, as appears from the resolution, the act that offended, but it was the clean, clear truth at which they were and are offended.

If the act in attacking the so-called Return was a sin or an immoral act in me, then the so-called Return and its management have violated the law of Christ in giving further publicity to this sin or immoral act by publishing my letter in its columns from the Herald without first laboring with me as the law directs; and that so called "General Council," has, at the instigation of C. A. Wickes, violated the same God-given law, and their actions in said council are void before God. Who will say nay? That council was only a child of the council held on April 6, 1895, which council was held by myself, George W. Schweich, and many others, as letters before me attest, to be illegal and out of the order as taught in God's word.

When C. A. Wickes gives further publicity to my letter by publishing it in the so-called Return he tries to comment on the same, but he fails to disprove one statement made by me; in fact he is so conscious that I told the truth in my "letter" that he dared not even deny in plain terms one statement in said letter, but uses his slick tongue and pen to hide his own conscious guilt in the matter from others.

I will here prove that he was conscious of guilt in the matter. The reader by referring to the Return for April 1, 1895, page 7, will see notice from me of articles of protest against Articles of Incorporation, etc., and Wickes' statement.

He says:—

Certainly, Bro. Land; how can we arrive at a "unity of faith" except we have a means of freely discussing points of difference, always remembering to do it in kindly feeling and courteous terms. That is what this paper is for. Exchange ideas, get acquainted. We'll risk discussion if the golden rule is kept in sight. Our motto is, "No gag law."

Soon after the above came out, Wickes wrote me that "if" I wanted to write upon the subject of "The Twelve," to do so and he would publish my articles. I wrote two articles of a contemplated five upon that subject and sent them to Wickes for publication, in which I compared W. P. Brown's position upon the Twelve, and Wickes' position, with the word of God in the two books and the revelations through the Seer's stone in 1829. Wickes saw that if he published them he would find himself nailed to the wall, and sought some excuse not to publish them, and returned them with the request to "condense them," put all I wished to write in three articles of a very short length, requesting me to simply give my views. It seems he did not want me to give proofs and reasons for my views. No, that is just what he does not want. I detected his real reason, and so informed him that he was seeking to "gag" me and prevent me from "freely discussing the points of difference," in direct violation of his statements in the Return as quoted.

He wrote me in answer, and charged me with abuse and not using courteous terms in my articles, and says, "You had better start a paper of your own;" which is as good as to say, "Then you can publish what you wish." In answer to this I told him as follows:—

"God forbid that I should start a paper like you started"—the Return, etc. I then gave in substance about what was contained in my letter as published in the Herald. I sent this letter to C. A. Wickes through George W. Schweich, requesting him to read it and then send it to Wickes, which he did. Upon Wickes receiving this letter, or very soon after, he turns the paper back to the executors, as he claims he has done. This shows that he was conscious of guilt in the matter; yet he tries to hide his guilt in in his comment upon my letter; and it seems he run out of soap and used lye (lie); for he says:—

The trouble with Bro. Land is that the Return is quite too near what it was at first, for he had the "Twelve" fever then, as now, and sent articles to Bro. Robinson for publication on that subject, and Bro. Robinson informed him that he considered him clearly wrong on that head, and refused to publish them, etc.

To this I wish to say, that C. A. Wickes either willfully falsifies or makes this statement upon hearsay; for "Bro. Land" never sent Bro. Robinson articles on the subject of the "Twelve" and they were returned with the statement made by Wickes.

That so-called "General Council," that august (?) body, Wickes, Page, and Clark, further declares "Bro. Land out of harmony with the church in his views on the Twelve." How this body (?) can make such a declaration is strange indeed, as the church has never declared herself in plain terms upon this or any other subject. How can the church declare herself upon any subject in an unorganized condition as she is in fact? The church cannot declare herself without, first organizing. This has never been done since David Whitmer died. He gives us to understand in his "Address" page 51, that the church had to be laid waste, and was in scattered fragments at the time he wrote, and she has not been placed in any better condition since by organization; so the church has not declared herself yet; but she is still being "laid waste," and scattered in less fragments by such men as Wickes, Snyder, Clark, and Page. Their action at the last so-called "General Council" proves this statement. See what they did. Wickes, Page, and Clark resolutely Cox, Smith, Land, and four others to be in a bad fix, declared them out of harmony with the church, etc. Then right upon the heels of their actions we hear the voice of their commanding general, saying: "Close ranks! FORWARD!" (See Return, September 15, page 6.)

By this military command we know who it is that has assumed the headship and leader of (as I said in my offensive letter) a few of the so-called "Whitmerites," C. A. Wickes is their commander. Who will say No? Do you not see that vast army, at the command of General C. A. Wickes, throwing the weight of the body on the left foot, ready to step off on the right foot, at the command of their general, MARCH.

I wish to suggest to General Wickes, that before he gives the command to march that he had better close ranks again, as P. A. Page has broken ranks, and cannot march out to Utah to help release John J. Snyder, one of the three, from the bad fix he has got into.

By the way, General Wickes, I see from your paper that you intend to march out somewhere and start up what you call a "community." I suppose you intend to purchase lands for the community with the Adams fund. If so, I hope your career will not be as bad as S. Rigdon's when he went from Nauvoo.

As to my apology I wish to say: I always considered it unmanly for a large, stout, healthy man to jump on a poor, little, weakly, consumptive man, or a big dog to jump on a little one, for this reason I feel to apologize for attacking the so-called Return; for it is certainly very poor and weakly, and is in the last stage of consumption, and possibly, for this reason alone, I should not have attacked the poor little thing.

General Wickes may think me another "Peck's Bad Boy." If so I cannot help it. This is the only apology I feel to make at present.

Respectfully,

ELIAS LAND.

ROGERS, Texas, December 12, 1895.

Conference Minutes.

WESTERN MAINE.

Conference of the Western Maine district convened with the Bray's Mountain branch, December 28, 1895, at two p. m.; W. G. Pert, chosen to preside, E. H. Pert, Clerk. Elders reporting were, J. C. Foss, J. J. Billings, J. W. Blastow, O. C. Eaton, J. B. Eaton, W. G. Pert, U. W. Greene, S. S. Eaton, W. W. Blanchard; Priests S. G. Cunningham, L. C. Gray, J. E. Eaton; Teachers A. Hutchinson, E. H. Pert; Deacons H. E. Saunders, H. R. Eaton. Branches reporting: Bray's Mountain, Little Deer Isle, Green's Landing, and West Surry. Bishop's agent's report read and referred to an auditing committee and found correct. On hand last report $17.13; received $204.54; paid out $203.02; on hand $18.65. Moved to sustain W. G. Pert as district president, J. J. Billings, assistant. Moved that the next conference be at Little Deer Isle the last day of February, 1896. The committee on the tent business reported that they had been successful in settling the business; committee discharged. Moved that the money received for the tent be left in the hands of the Bishop's agent until it shall be called for for that purpose. Preaching by S. G. Cunningham, W. W. Blanchard, and U. W. Greene. Moved to extend a vote of thanks to the Saints and friends of Bray's Mountain for their hospitality during conference.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Sunday school convention of the Kewanee district will convene at Kewanee, Illinois, February 14. We trust that every school in the district will send delegates, so that all may be represented, and that we may learn of your needs and your progress. If no member of your school will attend, empower your branch delegate to act for you. Do not fail to send in a report of your school.

CLARA FRANCIS, Sec.

NOTICES.

To the Sunday schools of the General Association:—We wish to notify you that at our district association held December 30, 1895, at Angola, Kansas, a resolution was passed that we present the following at the next General Association: That under the present railroad pass system women can receive half-fare permits on the railroads if they wear a distinctive garb and have credentials; therefore we call the attention of the General Association to this and ask that they take some action upon it. We have a number of lady officers of the General and also of the district associations, and if they were granted credentials from the General Association, together with the "garb," they could have half-fare permits which would lessen the expense one half while visiting the several Sunday schools they have charge of.

Respectfully your coworkers,

MINA E. HART, Supt.

MYRTLE JONES, Sec.

SHERWIN, Kansas, January 10, 1896.

GIVE FULL NAME.

It is absolutely necessary to have the first or given names in full, of those who send in tithes and offerings in order to avoid mistakes in the records.

Simply giving the initials often requires the bookkeeper to run over various lists and letters to determine the residence of parties before being able to properly credit in posting to ledger account.

It will greatly aid our work if the Saints and friends writing will give the first name in full, and also the initial or middle letter if any.

Bishop's agents in making out their annual reports are particularly requested to observe this. Very respectfully,

LAMONT, Iowa, January 12, 1896.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

There will be a conference of the Ohio district held with the Hocking Valley branch at Sand Run, Ohio, Saturday Feb. 22, beginning at 10 a. m. All are cordially invited and all the ministry especially requested to be present. Delegates to the General Conference are to be selected, and it is hoped the committee on reunion will be prepared to report. All branch officers will please notice the General Church Recorder's notice and request in recent Herald. We trust each branch will report. All come on Friday the 21st. Let us come in the Spirit's power.

JAMES MOLER.

Submissionary in charge.

The Northern California district conference will convene at Oakland, Friday, February 28, 1896, at ten a. m. Branch secretaries will please remember to use the printed forms for reports. All reports of officers must be in writing. The Sunday school convention will hold a session probably on Saturday afternoon. We wish a full report from all schools in the district. We wish all to be represented. Come all and make the session the best ever held in the district.

C. A. PARKIN, Pres.

M. A. SAXE, Sec.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Oregon and Washington district of the Pacific Slope Mission; Greeting:—I take this plan of introducing myself to you, and as I wish to know how others feel about sending a delegate to conference at Kirtland next spring, I ask every Saint who is in favor of sending a competent man there to represent the Saints in this district to write their names and post office addresses on a postal card and send it to me, as I wish to correspond with you.

Your brother in the building up of Zion,

PRIEST WILLIAM TAYLOR,

President of Hope branch.

DRAIN, Douglas County, Oregon.

BORN.

BERGERSEN.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, December 23, 1895, to Bro. Bant and Sr. Emma Bergersen, a son, and named Norman Ephraim. Blessed at home, January 6, 1896, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and Louis Gaulter.

MARRIED.

ALLEN—EWING.—At the residence of Mr. Hiram and Sr. Mary L. Ewing, Davis City, Iowa, January 1, 1896, their daughter, Lucy A., was united in marriage to Mr. John R. Allen, Bro. H. A. Stebbins officiating.

ROBERTS—ROBERTS.—At the home of Sr. Ellen W. Roberts, near Thurman, Iowa, January 1, 1896, Mr. Edward Roberts, of Douglas, Nebraska, and Sr. May Roberts, Elder J. C. Moore, officiating. May peace and prosperity attend them through life.

DIED.

TAYLOR.—At her home in St. Louis, Missouri, December 26, 1895, Sr. Martha Taylor. She was born in Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 12, 1853. She was married to Thomas Taylor, son of Bro. Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, England, in 1878. Two daughters were born to them, hence two daughters, husband, father and mother, brothers and sisters, with a host of friends, mourn. She joined the church in childhood, did good as opportunity presented itself, and died in the hope of a glorious resurrection. She was highly respected, as evidenced by the large concourse of people that attended her funeral. The funeral was conducted by William Jacques and G. H. Hilliard.

"She sleeps! Her troubles here are o'er;
She sleeps where earthly ills no more
Will break the slumberer's rest;
Her dust will rest beneath the sod,
Her spirit has returned to God,
To mingle with the blest."

BERGERSON.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, January 11, 1896, Sister Emma E. Bergerson, aged 26 years, 2 months, and 3 days. She was the daughter of Bro. Norman W. and Sr. Ellen Smith, formerly of Hopkins, Michigan. Her mother died in November, 1893. Emma was baptized September 24, 1882, by Bro. Joseph Smith; was married to Bro. Bant Bergerson November 17, 1891. She was lovely in her character and pure in life from childhood up, being noted for her amiable disposition, her gentleness of spirit, and her faithfulness to duty. She leaves a babe of nineteen days. The funeral sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. President Joseph Smith assisted in the service. There was a very large attendance of the sympathetic community, Saints and others.

A MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

This is a work by Elder Charles Derry, in which is set forth the order and nature of the Priesthood. The writer also defines the duties and prerogatives of all Church Officials, from the First Presidency to the Deacons inclusive. It is compiled from the Standard books of the church and the History of Joseph Smith as published in the Millennial Star. Indexed for ready reference, 132 pages, cloth bound, 25 cents.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

A small book—pamphlet size—3 x 4 1/2 inches, 20 pages, with a statement of the faith of the church, as given in the Epitome, with slight alterations. The Scripture texts adduced to support the various items of faith are printed in full, with chapters and verses. Faith in God; in Christ; Repentance; Baptism by Immersion; Laying on of Hands; Resurrection of the Body; Eternal Judgment; Authority and Ordination; Church Organization; Spiritual Gifts; the Marriage Question as believed by the Church, etc.; are each presented and supported by Scripture passages.

The reader is referred to the Herald Office for Catalogue if other church literature is desired.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

SCIENTIFIC JUDGMENT AND BIBLE STATEMENTS.

Prof. J. B. THOMAS, D. D., in Homiletic Review, New York, January. Excerpt.

If it were ever desirable or possible to deny the use by Scripture writers of language which is embarrassingly difficult to accept if taken literally, it is certainly no longer so since the lavishly erudite massing of testimony to that effect by President A. D. White, in his articles on the "Warfare of Science." It is soberly true, as he affirms, that the heavens are spoken of by them as having "windows," both the earth and the heavens as having "pillars," the sun as "rising" and "going down," etc. He might have added that the sea is affirmed to have "doors," the waters to contain "chambers" laid upon "beams," the clouds to be made into "chariots," and the wind to have "wings." But if the abandonment of metaphor is the essential condition of "inerrancy" in referring to the facts of nature, it is doubtful if any modern writer can pretend to scientific veracity. Mr. Darwin certainly could not: for his world-famous phrases—"natural selection," "struggle for life," floral "contrivance," the "law of parsimony," and the like, forbid. Grant Allen, in his choice little "Story of the Plants," just issued, categorically declares that they "learn by the teaching of natural selection" what kind of leaves it is most desirable to produce; that they "take care to throw away no valuable material;" that the trees providently "arrange for the fall of their leaves," in the most wholesome way, etc. He would, no doubt, be surprised to hear that he had therefore been cited as engaged in "warfare" against science; his language plainly reiterating the old Dryadic superstition of the Greeks. Writing in the nineteenth century, when words have immensely multiplied and shaded themselves to exactitude of use, he finds himself compelled, in describing phenomena, to speak phenomenally.

This is, in fact, the universal and unchallenged fashion of science. Men talk glibly of straight lines, atoms, ether, as if these were producible to the eye, solid to the scalpel, and imperishably actual. But none know better than themselves that not one of them is demonstrable, even if it be intelligibly possible. Shall we be more exacting of language in its crude archaic poverty, than in its rich development and elaborate refinement of phrase? The word "day," for instance, still has a penumbra of meaning beyond its more specific reference to the time of the earth's revolution on its axis. Is it reasonable to suppose that, when "fingers were used for forks," it was less comprehensive in use?

But enough of haggling about words. The real matter in controversy is a much deeper one. It reaches to the more or less direct imputation of essential falsity in idea, as well as incorrectness in expression. Professor Jowett, in the famous "Essays and Reviews," more than thirty years ago, declared that "the explanations of the first chapter of Genesis have slowly changed, and as it were retreated before the advance of geology," and he thereupon proceeded to denounce "spurious reconcilements of science and revelation." President White renews the statement in substance, describing the "victory of astronomical science over theology," as compelling a "retreat of the sacro-scientific army of church apologists" "through two centuries"; effected, as to Protestants, by a "little skillful warping of Scripture, and a little skillful use of the time-honored phrase attributed to Cardinal Baronius, etc.

There is abundant reason for the distrust of "spurious reconcilements." If, as Professor Langley tells us, astronomy has been fundamentally revolutionized within a generation, and if Professor Huxley might lawfully ridicule the appeal of Mr. Gladstone to the biology of Curvier's time, that biology being long since effete (although Cuvier has been dead only a little over fifty years), the attempt to reconcile the fixed language of Scripture with the chameleonic phases of current opinion and speculation in scientific circles must seem as futile as to try to measure the horizon line against the flickering aurora borealis. It might have occurred to those who are so prompt to impute illicit "warping" of the text to theological exegetes, that the maintenance of precisely opposite scientific theories in succeeding generations, upon the basis of unchanging facts, seems to suggest the possibility of an equally unwarrantable warping of the facts of nature to suit a current theoretic emergency. Possibly, also, a little farther exploration of the history of exegesis might have disclosed the fact that, in some cases at least, the present need of "reconciliation" has grown out of a "warping" of the text in earlier days at the behest of current speculative opinion—then as now confounded with "science."—Public Opinion.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN UNION.

THE monthly bulletin of the Bureau of American Republics for September publishes the full text of the treaty of union between Honduras, Nicaragua, and Salvador, consummated in June last, which is the first authoritative statement that has been made upon this important question. The preliminary work of effecting this union has been going on for nearly a year, and has now progressed so far that three of the five Central American republics have come together in political unity, leaving Guatemala and Costa Rica to come in later should they be so disposed, in which case Guatemala unquestionably would be the strongest and most influential factor of the group.

Under the terms of the treaty of union the three republics first named will be officially known as the "Greater Republic of Central America," and this title will remain until Guatemala and Costa Rica voluntarily come into the union, when it will be changed to "Republic of Central America." None of the governments signing the agreement renounce their autonomy or their control of internal affairs. The three republics will be represented by a Diet or sort of General Assembly, elected by the various Legislatures. This Diet will have for its object the maintenance of friendly relations with outside nations, the formulating of treaties and agreements, which must be ratified by the various Legislatures, as well as all questions affecting the general interest, and the submission of disputes to arbitration, not only as between the republics and foreign powers, but as between the republics themselves, in case they ever disagree upon any question. The Diet will also nominate the diplomatic and consular representatives of the Greater Republic. Another article provides for permanent union, as follows:—

"Within three years, or before, if it should be possible, the Diet shall form the plan of definite union of the republics signing, under the form which should seem to it most practicable, and shall give an account of such plan of union to a general assembly composed of twenty members elected by each one of the Legislatures immediately after the Diet has advised the governments that they have elaborated the plan alluded to."

Of course it now remains to be seen whether this agreement can be carried out, for it must be remembered that the three contracting powers, if they can be called powers, are not only jealous of each other and inflammable in temper, but are so loosely governed that a given administration may be upset most any day by revolutions precipitated by military adventurers. But should the union become a permanent one and should Guatemala and Costa Rica eventually join it, it would be an important step towards a future combination of Mexico, the Central American, and South American republics, and possibly the United States—in other words, the formation of the Pan-American union.—Ex.

EDUCATION IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE extraordinary importance attached to education in the United States is evidenced by the report of W. T. Harris, Commissioner of Education, to the Secretary of the Interior, for the year ending June 30, 1893. It is a bulky book of 1,224 pages, and yet this is only Vol. 1. of the series. Notwithstanding that its colossal size will not commend it as a book for general reading and that its summaries hardly reach within three years of current doings in the world of education, there is much in it of general interest.

The first 112 pages are devoted to general summaries of pupils in all grades in public and private schools and institutions and to the State common school systems. Then follow illiteracy in the United States, 30 pages; foreign educational systems, 196 pages; education as represented at the World's Columbian Exposition, 471 pages; papers prepared for the World's Library Congress, 319 pages; and statistical tables 497 pages. The second volume will be devoted to documents illustrative of American educational history, the report of the Committee of Ten on Secondary School Studies, the National Educational Association, the education of the negro, pecuniary aid for students in universities and colleges, university extension, medical education, education in the various States, educational affairs in Alaska, necrology, and statistical tables, the two volumes including 2,083 pages and being one of the largest department reports, outside of the census, ever issued.

The statistics in this work, though only brought down to June, 1893, are none the less interesting. The whole number of pupils enrolled in schools and colleges in 1892-'93 was 15,083,630, being nearly one fourth of the population. Ninety-six per cent of these were in the elementary grades. The number pursuing higher instruction was 154,989. There were employed in the schools 383,010 teachers, of whom 122,056 were men and 260,954 women. As showing the important part played by women in the education of the young the report states that the increase in the number of male teachers was 483, while the increase in the number of female teachers was 8,301. There are fewer male teachers now than in 1880, while the female teachers have increased about 70 per cent since that date. The number of schoolhouses in 1893 was 235,426, valued at $398,435,039, being an increase in value of over $10,000,000. Of the $165,000,000 of school revenue in that year $34,000,000 came from State taxes, $108,000,000 from local taxes, $9,000,000 from the income of school funds, and $14,000,000 from miscellaneous sources. Since 1880 the common school expenditure of the United States has more than doubled, having increased from $78,000,000, to $163,000,000.

Other statistics show that there were 2,812 public high schools with 232,951 pupils, 1,434 academies with 96,147 pupils, 451 universities and colleges with 140,053 students, 143 colleges for women with 22,949 students, and 152 normal schools with 36,669 students. Besides these there were 19,752 medical students, 2,852 dental students, 3,394 pharmacists, 6,776 law students, and 7,836 theological students, these figures showing that medicine is still the favorite profession. It is gratifying to note in this connection that the colossal expenditures for education in the United States are making serious breaches in the wall of illiteracy. In 1870 the per cent of illiterates to the total population 10 years of age and over was 20; in 1880, 17; in 1890, 13.3. The per cent for the native white population in 1870 was 10.8; in 1890, 6.2. The illiteracy of the foreign born white population fluctuates. In 1870 it was 14.4; in 1880, 12; in 1890, 13.1. The statistics of illiteracy among the negroes show encouraging results. In 1870 it was 79.9; in 1880, 70; in 1890, 56.8. If this ratio shall continue, and there is no apparent reason why it should not, the negro race will soon occupy a creditable position as compared with the whites. Much, however, yet remains to be done when the statistics of Germany are studied. The total ratio of illiteracy in the United States is 13.3; in Germany it is 1 per cent!—Chicago Tribune.

ARE THEY UNTRUE?

THE Salt Lake City, Utah, Deseret News, for December 17 has the following leader, to which we believe a reply to be necessary:—

ITS CHARGES UNTRUE.

A late issue of the Saints' Herald published at Lamoni, Iowa, by the Reorganized church, contains an article headed "Work for the Dead," in which it quotes from the DESERET NEWS' report of the remarks of Elder Marriner W. Merrill at the late General Conference of the Church. Elder Merrill spoke upon the work being done in behalf of the dead in the temples of the Latter-day Saints, calling attention to the fact that the present authorities have had the same spirit which inspired the Prophet Joseph, in continuing that which was commenced by the Prophet in the erection of temples and in the work accomplished therein. The Saints' Herald comments upon this discourse, and after sneeringly referring to Elder Merrill as being "one of the latest Apostles chosen," it says:

"Those who have been desirous of passing through the endowment ceremonies, for themselves, and of attending to baptisms for their dead, have been charged a certain sum for the privilege."

The Herald goes on to state that "for something like forty-seven years prior to last April, sealing and baptisms for the dead relatives and friends were actively taught, and as actively practiced; the people being given to understand that the system was perfect as it came from the lips of the Prophet Joseph Smith." It then says the people here "visited the temples, received their endowments, and performed the rites of baptism for their dead, paid the fees charged for the service rendered, and went away believing the work to have been correctly done." Then it adds:

"Many of these must have been shocked, and possibly seriously distressed, to be told last spring at the Conference, by President Woodruff, as they were, that much of the work the people had been doing for themselves and their dead was unavailing, the methods having been misunderstood and the work wrongly done, making it necessary that the work should be done over in some other way; and advising the people to set about it and have their work done in as short a time as possible."

Proceeding upon these texts, the Herald argues to establish two points thereby: 1—That when "work done under a system said to have been so grand and of such stupendous importance to the people" is discovered to be "unavailing and of no effect," "what may not the people expect if, accepting the new teaching and again repaying the charges again to perform the work once done by the advice, and under the direction of those same leaders, they shall be told that again their work was unavailing and must be done over again;" and 2—That if "the work is to be done over again, it shows that the conception of its practice was wrong in its inception—started wrong on a wrong basis—misunderstood and misapplied by the living oracle with whom it originated, or through whom it was declared, no matter who that one was."

As is usual with the Saints' Herald when criticising anything pertaining to the Church of which the Herald editor's father, Joseph Smith, was the first Prophet and President in this dispensation, and in whose cause he became a martyr, it makes a false statement, and then, rolling that as a delicious morsel under its tongue, proceeds to argue in support of its peculiar views. It is this case the paper's opening statement that those who receive or engage in the ordinances named "have been charged a certain sum for the privilege," is utterly without foundation in truth. Hence the first point sought to be established by the Herald writer fails because of its falsity.

On the other proposition it is equally untrue that President Woodruff said that work done for the dead "under the direction of those same leaders" was "unavailing and must be done over again." No such sentiment was given utterance to. If the Herald writer had any desire to tell the truth he could have referred to the quotation he makes from Elder Merrill's remarks, wherein it is said that a great deal of work had been duplicated, "from the fact that the people did not keep a record." A record is an essential element of the work for the dead, hence its omission by the Prophet Joseph at one time necessitated repetition, in order to be correct. But the omission of a vital part of a ceremony does not prove the ordinance to which the real ceremony belongs to be wrong in principle, any more than the performing of baptisms without divine authority, as is done by the Reorganized church, establishes the doctrine of baptism to be an error. The omission of an essential element makes such unauthorized baptisms unavailing, and in order to receive the benefits of the true ordinance a person receiving the former would have to be baptized again by one divinely authorized to administer in the ordinance.

The statement of President Woodruff regarding work that should be done over again to be proper did not refer to anything performed "under the direction of those same leaders," but that which was done without their direction. The baptisms performed for the dead were not affected or referred to at all. To a limited extent in sealing people had proceeded in certain relationships, without fully understanding what was required. The matter coming to the attention of the President of the Church—the "living oracle" spoken of so derisively by the Herald—he quickly set affairs right by giving the people as emphatic and public instruction as possible, stating the word of the Lord on the subject; and when this came it was readily comprehended by the Saints. All the Herald's talk about "revising the economy and policy of the Church," "putting the probity of the living oracle into grave discredit," and "jeopardizing the faith and confidence of the people," is vicious and reprehensible, because it urges an accusation wholly untrue and therefore without justification.

In replying to the foregoing we shall try to keep the lines of correct dealing, but treat of things as we find them.

First. We are willing to state that in regard to the payment of a fee for services in the rites of sealing and baptizing for the dead performed in the endowment house or temples in Utah, by those availing themselves of that privilege we may have misstated; as we have only the statements of others whom we had reason to believe had been in a position to know for our information as we had no personal knowledge in the matter. If we have been misinformed, we are pleased to know it; as it removes that much from the awkwardness of the situation between the two churches. The News states that there is no foundation in fact for such statement. The writers for the News should know, and we accept the statement, without dispute.

Second. There was not the slightest intention of sneering in referring to Elder Merrill, as "one of the latest apostles chosen;" but to state a fact. Will the News kindly state, when it notices this writing, whether Apostles Merrill and Lund were not the last additions to the quorum of apostles in the Utah Church. Let this dispose of the first objection.

Third. If there is no foundation for our argument upon the suggested idea of there having been something lacking in the observance of the rites of baptizing for the dead and sealing, or adopting for eternity, what is the meaning of the following statements found in the discourses of Presidents Woodruff and G. Q. Cannon, delivered Sunday, April 8, 1894, and published in Deseret News for April 17 following:—

Before beginning his discourse Pres. Woodruff had Pres. Cannon read from Doctrine and Covenants, Joseph Smith's letter of September 6, 1842, section 106, of the old editions and 110 of the 1880, or Plano edition. The number of section given by President Cannon was 128 of the Utah edition of 1876. This was used as the text or basis of President Woodruff's remarks. He said:—

I will say this: When the Prophet Joseph had this revelation from heaven, what did he do? There are witnesses here of what he did. He never stopped till he got the fullness of the word of God to him concerning the baptism for the dead. But before doing so he went into the Mississippi River, and so did I, as well as others, and we each baptized a hundred for the dead, without a man to record a single act that we performed. Why did we do it? Because of the feeling of joy that we had, to think that we in the flesh could stand and redeem our dead. We did not wait to know what the result of this would be, or what the whole of it should be.

At the conference held in Nauvoo, October 1, 1841, Joseph Smith, at the "request of some of the Twelve, gave instructions on the doctrine of baptism for the dead." There is nothing in the minutes of that conference dictating the form and manner of the rite; nor are we aware of anything on this in print until the letter of September 1, 1842. In that letter is a provision distinctly made that there should be a record made by an eye and ear-witness to the ceremony.

We do not know just when baptizing for the dead was first practiced in the church, but conclude that as it is a permissive rule, a revelation authorizing it, or fixing a date for its commencement as well as giving the needed direction concerning it was necessary. No public notice of a revelation giving such permission is found prior to this letter of September 1, 1842, followed by one dated the 6th of the same month, in both of which the instruction is given that the accurate recording of the names, of the one officiating and the candidates, the name of the place and date when, as well as the names of three witnesses, was to be a vital part of the ceremony.

Further than this, the revelation of January 19, 1841, in which preparatory reference is made, as see paragraphs 10 and 11, shows clearly that a house and a font were to be prepared that the work contemplated in the doctrine of baptism for the dead might be done. As stated there it is as follows, beginning near the middle of paragraph 10:—

For there is not a place found on earth that he may come and restore again that which was lost unto you, or, which he hath taken away, even the fullness of the priesthood; for a baptismal font there is not upon the earth; that they, my saints, may be baptized for those who are dead; for this ordinance belongeth to my house, and can not be acceptable to me, only in the days of your poverty, wherein ye are not able to build an house unto me. But I command you, all ye my saints, to build an house unto me; and I grant unto you a sufficient time to build an house unto me, and during this time your baptisms shall be acceptable unto me.

11. But, behold, at the end of this appointment, your baptisms for your dead shall not be acceptable unto me; and if you do not these things at the end of the appointment, ye shall be rejected as a church with your dead, saith the Lord your God. For, verily I say unto you, that after you have had sufficient time to build an house to me, wherein the ordinance of baptizing for the dead belongeth, and for which the same was instituted from before the foundation of the world, your baptisms for your dead cannot be acceptable unto me; for therein are the keys of the holy priesthood ordained, that you may receive honor and glory. And after this time, your baptisms for the dead, by those who are scattered abroad, are not acceptable unto me, saith the Lord; for it is ordained that in Zion and in her stakes and in Jerusalem those places which I have appointed for refuge, shall be the places for your baptisms for your dead.

The teaching in paragraph 12 shows that whenever God will have a house built unto him for the purposes named in paragraphs 10 and 11, he will give command for such building. No people, however zealous, can properly build unless they have the warrant of such command.

From paragraph 13 we quote:—

... And if my people will hearken unto my voice, and unto the voice of my servants whom I have appointed to lead my people, behold, verily I say unto you, they shall not be moved out of their place. But if they will not hearken to my voice, nor unto the voice of these men whom I have appointed, they shall not be blest, because they pollute mine holy grounds, and mine holy ordinances and charters, and my holy words, which I give unto them.

This is followed by a promise and a threat in paragraph 14:—

And it shall come to pass that if you build an house unto my name, and do not the things that I say, I will not perform the oath which I make unto you, neither fulfill the promises which ye expect at my hands, saith the Lord; for instead of blessings, ye, by your own works, bring cursings, wrath, indignation and judgments, upon your own heads, by your follies, and by all your abominations, which you practice before me, saith the Lord.

There are two, or three, or more questions to answer in regard to what we have quoted above.

1. Where was the house therein commanded to be built?

2. How long a time was to be permitted to build it?

3. Was that house built?

4. Were the people, or the servants, removed from their place?

To the first of these questions there can be but one answer: Nauvoo was the place.

To the second, the reply must be that as the Lord had promised a sufficient time to build it, it must be concluded that such time would be given; provided the people went to with their might to build, and kept the commandments given them. If the people did not do this, then the Lord was not bound, and the appointment failed, or was to cease because the end provided for had come.

3. The house was not finished; therefore not builded. We were living in Nauvoo at the time; lived there until the work on the temple ceased, and until it was burned and utterly destroyed as a building.

No one need to say that the house was finished; we know that it was not; and so testify of our own personal knowledge secured by a direct acquaintance with the city of Nauvoo and by residence there, its rise and its decay, from 1839 to 1866; and frequent visits since that time.

It may not be pertinent to the present issue to discuss all the reasons, real or supposed, why the temple was not finished; suffice it to say that it was not. And it is equally certain that the people were "moved out of their place." The Lord said that they should not be so moved out if they did as he told them. They were moved out of their place, and the conclusion seems inevitable that somebody involving the people did not do as the Lord commanded; hence the removal.

A similar import to the paragraphs quoted from above will be found in revelation given in Zion, in 1831, paragraph 5:—

Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land: wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet. Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold here is wisdom.

It is plain from these quotations that a disregard for the commandments given at that time to the church by revelation, or through the Bible, and the Book of Mormon; or any teaching or practice that should conflict with either or all of the above given as law to the church, the right and authority to act in the ordinances appertaining to the doctrine of baptism for the dead would be forfeited, and those so teaching and practicing would be lawfully cut off and deprived of the promises, privileges, and blessing to accrue from the administration of those ordinances. This is our contention.

One would be justified in concluding that a man who had up to that time shown himself to have been careful to follow the word of revelation to him, not exceeding the bounds of permission or command, would hardly have gone so far as President Woodruff states Joseph Smith, himself, and others did. And if the "fulness of the word of God" was given to Joseph Smith, then he could hardly have been guilty of an omission in regard to so vital an element as a record is admitted to be. If Joseph Smith, as a "living oracle," with President Woodruff and others, did a work for the dead, baptizing and being baptized, which "necessitated a repetition," using the News' own words, it proves the argument made by us regarding the probability of work so done under one living oracle being found unavailing under the rule of another, to have been correct. If there was a need for the duplicating or repeating any baptisms for the dead, then the first done were unavailing, being fruitless of the desired effect. Now, whether the failing to keep a proper record by the people themselves, (of their genealogies and persons baptized for,) or by the officers under whose administrations the work was done, was the result of an omission on the part of Joseph Smith in his teaching and practice, or the discovery of a mistake by his successor, our argument is still good—"When are the people safe?"

We quote from the sermon first referred to. Calling the attention of Elders Snow, Merrill, McAllister, and Cannon, in charge of the temples at St. George, Manti, Logan, and Salt Lake, and their associates, he said:—

You have acted up to all the light and knowledge that you have had; but you now have something more to do than what you have done. . . . I have not felt satisfied, neither did President Taylor, neither has any man since the Prophet Joseph, who has attended to the ordinance of adoption in the temples of our God. We have felt that there was more to be revealed upon this subject than we had received. Revelations were given to us in the St. George Temple, which President Young presented to the Church of God. Changes were made there, and we still have more changes to make, in order to satisfy our Heavenly Father, satisfy our dead and ourselves. I will tell you what some of them are. I have prayed over this matter, and my brethren have. We have felt as President Taylor said, that we have got to have more revelation concerning sealing under the law of adoption. Well, what are these changes? One of them is the principle of adoption. In the commencement of adopting men and women in the Temple at Nauvoo, a great many persons were adopted to different men who were not of the lineage of their fathers, and there was a spirit manifested by some in that work there that was not of God. Men would go out and electioneer and labor with all their power to get men adopted to them. One instance I will name here: A man went around Nauvoo asking every man he could, saying, "You come and be adopted to me, and I shall stand at the head of the kingdom, and you will be there with me." Now, what is the truth about this? Those who were adopted to that man, if they go with him, will have to go where he is. He was a participator in that horrible scene—the Mountain Meadow Massacre. . . .

Men are in danger sometimes in being adopted to others, until they know who they are and what they will be. Now, what are the feelings of Israel? They have felt that they wanted to be adopted to somebody. President Young was not satisfied in his mind with regard to the extent of this matter. President Taylor was not. When I went before the Lord to know who I should be adopted to (we were then being adopted to prophets and apostles) the Spirit of God said to me, "Have you not a father, who begot you?" "Yes, I have." "Then why not

"Yes," says I, "that is right." I was adopted to my father, and should have had my father sealed to his father, and so on back; and the duty that I want every man who presides over a temple to see performed from this day henceforth and forever, unless the Lord Almighty commands otherwise, is, let every man be adopted to his father. When a man receives the endowments, adopt him to his father: not to Wilford Woodruff, nor to any other man outside the lineage of his fathers. That is the will of God to this people. I want all men who preside over these temples in these mountains of Israel to bear this in mind. What business have I to take away the rights of the lineage of any man? What right has any man to do this? . . . In my prayers the Lord revealed to me, that it was my duty to say to all Israel to carry this principle out, and in fulfillment of that revelation I lay it before this people. . . . Myself and counselors conversed upon this and were agreed upon it. . . . We want the Latter Day Saints from this time to trace their genealogies as far as they can, and to be sealed to their fathers and mothers. Have children sealed to their parents, and run this chain through as far as you can get it. When you get to the end, let the last man be sealed to Joseph Smith, who stands at the head of the dispensation. This is the will of the Lord to this people, and I think when you come to reflect upon it you will find it to be true.

Another principle connected with this subject I want to talk about. A man has married a woman, and they have a family of children. The man lies down in death without ever hearing the gospel. His wife afterwards hears the gospel and embraces it. She comes to the temple and wants to be sealed to her husband, who was a good man. The feeling has been to deny this and to say, "No, he was not in the church, and you cannot be sealed to your husband." Many a woman's heart has ached because of this, and as a servant of God I have broken that chain a good while ago. I have laid before every woman this principle and let her have her choice. Why deprive a woman of being sealed to her husband because he never heard the gospel? What do any of us know in regard to him. Will he not hear the gospel and embrace it in the spirit world? . . . I have had friends adopted to me. We all have, more or less. But I have had peculiar feelings about it, especially lately. There are men in this congregation who wish to be adopted to me. I say to them to-day, if they can hear me, Go and be adopted to your fathers, and save your fathers, and stand at the head of your father's house, as saviors upon Mount Zion, and God will bless you in this. . . . When you get to the last man in the lineage, as I said before, we will adopt that man to the Prophet Joseph, and then the Prophet Joseph will take care of himself with regard to where he goes.

President George Q. Cannon followed President Woodruff and in regard to marriages and sealings said:—
. . . Marriages of the children of men are only binding as between themselves while the covenant lasts. Our fathers made their covenants with our mothers for time, and when time ended of course the covenant and union ended also. . . . We have been taught also that through the revelation of the priesthood and its bestowal upon men, and the exercise of that priesthood in sealing wives to husbands, the children begotten in these marriages are born, as we phrase it, in the covenant, that is, they are recognized by the Lord as legitimate children of the covenant, he having recognized the marriage of their parents, having given the authority to man on earth to bind on earth, and that bond shall be sealed in heaven. . . . Thus you see there is a new order of things growing up among us. It is not necessary, where parents are thus sealed together by the authority of the Holy Priesthood for time and eternity, that their children should be adopted or be sealed to them.

President Cannon proceeded to say in substance that those born out of the covenant did not come under this rule; but that some ordinance was needful for them; and that was found by them in sealing, which they called adoption, that word being used to signify sealing. This he declared was to be done by this generation and their successors.

He further stated:—

The Prophet Joseph revealed this, but he died before it was fully explained.

When President Young died, the St. George temple was the only one finished. . . . There is not a doubt in my mind that, had he lived, his mind would have been directed to this great subject and he would have inquired of the Lord to know that which was right; for in the minds of many there has been a feeling of doubt in regard to this principle of adoption as it was being practiced among us.

Referring to what President Woodruff said about the adoption practiced at Nauvoo, and "the spirit manifested by many at the dedication of the temple when the ordinances were administered there," President Cannon further said:—

From that day until the present, I have never thought of this subject of adoption without having a certain amount of fear about it.

Another thing that what we have heard to-day will affect. There has been a disposition manifested among our people to some extent, for some men and women to gather up all the names of families they could find, whether they were related to them or not, and perform ordinances for them. I am a believer in this when it does not interfere with the rights of heirship. . . . But you can see the advantage of pursuing now the course that is pointed out by the word of God to us. . . . It will draw the line fairly. It will define the lineage clearly.

We have made these copious extracts from the sermons preached by these two men because the News attacked so sharply the criticism we passed upon Elder Merrill's remarks in regard to work that was being done, and should be done in the temples in Utah.

The work referred to by Elder Merrill as having been duplicated for want of records was work that was done in the endowment house, in Salt Lake City, long after Joseph Smith's death, and after the specific directions in the letters of September 1 and 6, 1842, requiring the keeping of strict records, were given. This then was not an omission by the Prophet Joseph. But, aside from the source of error in the practice of an ordinance, is it not correct reasoning that if an ordinance be improperly performed because of an improper teaching in regard to it and a repetition of it is necessary, then both teaching and practice are unavailing, therefore both conception and institution of the practice wrong? We think so.

To what other conclusion than that the adoption by sealing, in connection with the baptism for the dead as practiced in the temples in Utah prior to the spring of 1894 (instead of 1895, which we erroneously fixed as the date) was wrongly done, can anyone, not a believer or apologist for what was done, draw from the discourse of President Woodruff, indorsed by Pres. Cannon, when the former distinctly states that neither President Taylor, himself, nor any other since the Prophet Joseph had been satisfied with the practice had among them in regard to that same adoption?

It was perhaps unfortunate that we considered baptism for the dead, sealing, and adoption all in one reference, but the end designed was to present the possibility of loss that might accrue to an unstable, undefined, indecisive policy. The completion of the temple at Nauvoo, so far as that it was occupied and used for the administration of ordinances, as Pres. Woodruff's statement shows, must have been after Joseph Smith's death, hence he is not responsible for any mistakes that may have occurred at that time. If many did seek to secure the adoption by sealing of many others, as stated by President Woodruff, and a spirit was then manifested that was not of God, was that spirit manifested by those so seeking to increase their own kingdom and glory in the future world by having many sealed or adopted to them? Who taught them what led to such mistaking conduct? Who were the leaders? At whose door should such division, separating teaching properly lie? We have used the words "living oracles," with all deference to the persons who may have been thought to be entitled to such appellation; and have tried to deal with principles, not men, neither holding the persons of men in admiration, nor their office in undue fear; and the News quite mistakes, when it assumes that we were sneering.

The revelation to the church given March, 1833, concerning Joseph Smith and the "kingdom which was coming forth for the last time," contains the statement that "the keys" of that kingdom should not be taken from Joseph Smith while he was "in this world, neither in the world to come."

Verily, I say unto you, the keys of this kingdom shall never be taken from you, while thou art in this world, neither in the world to come; nevertheless, through you shall the oracles be given to another; yea, even unto the church, and all they who receive the oracles of God, let them beware how they hold them, lest they are accounted as a light thing, and are brought under condemnation thereby.

If the keys ("powers and authorities," as some interpret the word keys to mean) were not to be taken from Joseph Smith, neither in this world, nor the world to come, he must hold them yet. The fact that they were conferred upon Joseph Smith by the Lord, as no other could bestow them, is certainly evidence against the idea that he, Joseph Smith, could confer them upon any others — whatever those keys could have been.

Similar keys were conferred upon Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams, who by the terms of the third paragraph of the same section were "accounted equal with him in the holding of the keys of this last kingdom."

There is nothing in this revelation that conveys any authority upon the men named to institute baptism for the dead, or sealing for eternity, only as such sealing was found in the gospel message, the result of obedience to its requirements.

The oracles referred to are not the prophets, nor the apostles, nor the elders, but are the commandments, the revelations from God to the church; and no sort of proper interpretation can make the language refer or apply to the successors or successor of Joseph Smith in the President's office, nor to the Twelve who were left at his death. Besides this, the revelation does not name oracles to be given to the church through any other:—

Nevertheless through you shall the oracles be given to another; yea, even unto the church.

It is sure that by this clear language what rules, commands, or revelations had already been given to the church through Joseph Smith were to be accounted as the oracles of God, his will, his word, his command. If the church receiving these oracles paid heed to them, it would be well with them; if the church held them lightly, they should "be brought under condemnation," and should "stumble and fall."

If Brigham Young, John Taylor, or Wilford Woodruff, though they should be accounted as "living oracles," essayed to change these oracles confirmed unto the church, they were the instrumentalities of bringing condemnation on themselves and the church.

One of the things thus confided to the church was the Book of Mormon, and condemnation once rested on many because they in vanity and unbelief had treated lightly the things they had received. So states a revelation given September 22, 23, 1832.

Again, The laws which the church had received from the hand of God were to be "the laws of the church," to govern, guide, and control.

Again, an oracle was given February, 1831, to this effect:—

Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned if he continues.

We have, then, the Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and the revelations given through Joseph Smith to the church identified as the oracles. These no living oracle coming after him can either repeal or make void. Whatever contravenes these is not of the faith. Whoever continues in them is of the church.

The News states that the work referred to by Pres. Woodruff that needed to be done over again was not done "under the direction of those same leaders, but that which was done without their direction."

We wonder whose direction the work of baptizing for the dead, adoption by sealing and other temple work was done under, after Joseph Smith's death, if it was not under those same leaders, Presidents B. Young, John Taylor, and now Wilford Woodruff? If there were others, and the work done under them needed to be done over, it still leaves our contention unbroken, as the work first done would be unavailing, whether President Woodruff so said, or not.

To a limited extent in sealing people had proceeded in certain relationships, without fully understanding what was required.

This the News states. Presidents Woodruff and Cannon trace this manner of proceeding to the administration of those rites performed in the temple at Nauvoo, of which both of these men state that neither President Young, President Taylor, nor themselves had been satisfied with. If they were correct in administration, during the time referred to, what gave rise to the dissatisfaction? And if President Young made changes in St. George, and President Woodruff now makes other changes, some of which are sweepingly different to those things first taught and practiced, were not those first things incorrect and faulty in effect?

If it was incorrect practice for men to have others not of their kin sealed to them to increase their kingdom, and it is correct practice now for a man to be sealed to his father, rather than his father to him, a widow to her departed husband, though such husband was not in the church, daughter to mother, as far back as possible to trace the connection, then from the time of this adoption by sealing until this "new order of things" has grown up, as stated by Pres. G. Q. Cannon, the teaching and practice have been faulty and incorrect. Instituted by one man looked upon as a "living oracle," it was changed by another to a degree, and later still modified and changed radically by still another, as President Woodruff states that changes were made by President Young; and he himself corrects grave misunderstandings as to practice in the sermon quoted from. Such things being true, our "talk about revising the economy and policy of the church," "putting the probity of the living oracle into grave discredit," and "jeopardizing the faith and confidence of the people," is neither "vicious" nor "reprehensible," but wholly justifiable.

Joseph Smith did not become a martyr in the cause of the Utah Church. The church for which Joseph Smith's life was taken was in many respects quite a different one to the present church in Utah as it is now and was from 1847 to 1890.

The HERALD has not purposely made false statements regarding the church in Utah, nor rolled them as "delicious morsels under its tongue." Whatever statements the HERALD has made about the church in Utah under the leadership of Presidents Brigham Young, John Taylor, and Wilford Woodruff, have been correct as we understood them at the time. And instead of those things which we have opposed being pleasant to us, they have been bitter and distasteful, as we had a right to expect better things. If we have been misinformed, or have misread what has appeared as spoken from the stand, printed in church organs, or occurring as events of the times, at any time our mistake shall be made to appear to us we will correct and make amends for. We have no interest or desire to see injury come to the legitimate work done by Joseph and Hyrum Smith during their lifetime, or provided for in the revelations of God to properly follow after their death; but we now have and have long had a fixed determination not to be silent about nor compromised with any work done by those men clearly not provided for in the word of God, or that is contradictory to or in opposition to that word; and stand in the same attitude toward any work done or sought to be done by those claiming to be following in their footsteps and acting in his name or for him, no matter who these men may be. We are dealing with principles, not men, in the contest we are making. The principles of Gospel Truth delivered in the angel's message to Joseph Smith are as dear to the HERALD and its patrons as they possibly can be to the News and its readers; and those principles having been published to the world, have been accessible to us and others for examination, to be used as criterions by which to try our own and others' professions of faith in God and Christ and their work. We can do this without sneering at our neighbors, much of whose faith is like our own; and this the News should have long since learned.

The work of Joseph Smith and that of those coming after him is being tried as in a crucible; the refining processes will continue until the dross is eliminated. The work properly done will stand, that which has been done ill will fall. Every man must abide the trial of his own work. And we with the News shall need to bow to the decision to be finally made, whether we love the truth or make and love a lie.

IT IS ENOUGH.

WE have been scored by one brother in Canada and one in Nova Scotia, both British dependencies, for our article, "Americanism in the White House," and now have a motion on the tapis restricting the editor's patriotism, all of which we have published in the HERALD as the organ of all. In addition we have an article from Bro. A. E. Mortimer, London, Ontario, also scoring the editor for the same article on Americanism; which he wishes published "soon as we can."

Each of the writers overlooks our statement that "we deprecate war and desire peace," and deals with our effort for its expression of patriotism. If those hurt, or offended will reread what we wrote in HERALD for December 25, they will discover that we wrote of what appeared to be pending looking toward a disruption by war; the merits of the controversy between the two great nations being in abeyance waiting inquiry by the Congress of the United States. We have now been twice rated direct for what we wrote, and once censured by implication in the motion offered from Copleston; and as we do not propose to answer either writer, we shall let the matter rest where it is; stating however that the senior editor alone is responsible for the article objected to.

A MINISTERIAL QUANTITY(?).

WE have heard the remark made of public lecturers or speakers that "he is a man of fine physical presence," etc. We once heard a lady, a member of a rich and popular congregation of an "orthodox" church, make reference to a committee of the church sent out to select a pastor, that they had found a man, Dr. So-and-so, a man of "fine physical presence." In due time the Doctor came and began his pastoral duties. He was a good fellow, socially, well liked in many respects; but he could not interest and hold his congregations. He would soar to the clouds in his ideas and was very emotional, but—his sermons lacked food for thought. It was too bad; the committee had traveled over a good portion of the Middle and Eastern States to find a man to "suit their fancy;" had paid a good price, but after all, the man of "fine physical presence" could not do the work of his predecessor—a puny little man, by the way, short and scrawny, with a perceptible tinge of Scotch brogue, but a man of intelligence, force, and wholesome common sense.

The lesson was plain; the committee had failed to heed the injunction to look not on the "appearance," but upon "the heart" and into the mind; had forgotten that God judges not after "the sight of the eye," but "discerns" the "thoughts and intents of the heart."

Not long ago we heard a plea made for a public speaker that "he is a man of fine physical presence." We disliked it then and have a wholesome disgust for the sentiment now. It places appearance instead of true worth at a premium; it savors of "holding men's persons in admiration."

A fine physical presence is to be properly appreciated, but should not descend to "man worship" in the least degree. The man or woman who is "carried away" by such considerations or is unduly "impressed" by them is weak indeed; the man vain and a self-worshiper who relies upon them to make "an impression." "True worth in man or woman is the immediate jewel of the soul." Some "big" things are "hollow" or puffy, though some are "solid" and "good."

We have a wholesome disgust for such vanities and worldly follies, and feel like helping them into obscurity. We do not believe that the Lord selects his ministry because of their fine physical presence, but because of their endowments of heart and mind. Let the world have such standards of measurement; we have another and a better rule. The Spirit of the Lord is opposed to pomposity, to "self-importance," and everything akin to such. They who see the Master see strength, trueness, meekness, humility, and all the virtues blended, revealed in him. He has said that his people in method and in character were to be "not of the world;" that his ministry and his people were to be seen and known to his glory by their "good works." The hidden manna of the heart will grace any pulpit or any place. It is a requirement of the word and is placed among the list of "qualifications" in the minister.

OUR AMERICANISM.

WE give elsewhere a communication from Bro. H. J. Davison, of Nova Scotia.

To relieve anyone from ignorance as to who wrote "Americanism in the White House," we hereby state that it was written by the senior editor, Joseph Smith, who will answer at any time and place before any proper tribunal for the article itself; not for anyone's misunderstanding, or misconstruction of it.

Canada has been heard from in a late HERALD and now Nova Scotia, and so we let the matter rest there until President Cleveland's commission and the results are heard from.

BUSINESS REQUEST.

THE Business Manager requests that we mention a matter that has caused considerable loss to the Herald Office; viz., the practice of some of leaving localities to which church publications have been sent without notifying the office to discontinue or stop their publications. Neglect to order the papers changed or stopped has resulted in their being sent for years and lying in post offices or destroyed, subscriptions often running from one to seven years over time because of such carelessness and indifference. All Saints should contribute to the success of the office, not to its detriment. If we do not help, we should not hinder.

The office receives hundreds of government postal notices of HERALDS, Hopes, or Autumn Leaves that remain uncalled for. We request that those who because of inability to pay or for any other reasons do not care to lift their papers will order them stopped and thus save unnecessary loss to the publishing department.

Where it is known that subscribers have deceased we should also be so notified. Please oblige us in these things, when possible. The amounts lost by the practice referred to run all the way from 50 cents to $15 and the list amounts to a large sum in the aggregate.

THE Woodbine, Iowa, Sentinel for January 9, has the following in its Woodbine items:—

Last week Elder Wight, of the L. D. S. Church spoke several nights at the Grove schoolhouse to a fair-sized audience. Mr. Wight surely understands the Scriptures and is a remarkably good reasoner.

The meetings at the L. D. S. church are drawing a houseful every night.

The Gospel Meeting at the L. D. S. church will continue over Sunday and all next week and perhaps longer. The meetings are largely attended and many seeking after truth and salvation. Let the good work go on till every man, woman, and child, need not say to his neighbor, "Know ye the Lord." Elder Wight is an able speaker, clear and distinct in his explanations, fair and liberal; an opportunity given each night to ask questions, make remarks for or against subject discussed. All invited and made welcome. Come!

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. RODERICK MAY, Independence, Missouri, January 13:—

I am glad to inform you that we have organized another branch of the church at Kansas City, Missouri, with twenty members, including a full corps of officers, known as the Second Kansas City, Missouri, branch. The location of this branch is on the west side, their meeting place is near the corner of West Seventeenth and Summit Streets. Quite a few have been baptized in that locality of late and considerable preaching has been done in that vicinity by different elders. We have used the district tent there during the warm weather, and when the tent was moved the brethren rented a hall. Quite a number have been baptized in the different branches in this district of late. The Lord is working with us.

Sr. M. J. Phipps, of Missouri, now visiting at Walla Walla, Washington, writes, relating what she has been trying to do while absent from church privileges to acquaint others with the work. She has talked of the faith to others and done sewing to contribute to the missionary fund and feels a strong desire to do more. She says:—

What we want is a great love for the truth: a love so great that it is in our heart continually to make money, to save money, and to use money for the spread of the gospel. God pity a stingy Saint, for he does not know what real love for or happiness in the work is.

She exhorts to plainness of dress, according to the commandment, and that pride and worldliness be guarded against by Saints.

Bro. J. W. Wight writes, Woodbine, Iowa, January 13:—

You will be glad to learn that the labor here bore fruit yesterday in the "birth" of three, with apparently "more to follow." Several turned away last night for want of room. Some of the prominent business men of the place present. This morning we have the offer of Opera House free, for two nights, and after for the mere cost of fuel and lighting. Expect to stay here two weeks yet; thence to Six-mile Grove where I have aroused a good interest.

Bro. Henry Kemp, Riverton, Iowa, the 13th:—

I am holding meetings three miles from this place; commenced last Monday night, the 5th, and shall continue this week and longer if the interest continues. The way opens up on every hand for gospel work. Many are the calls, but few are able to go. May the Master speed the work in its time.

Bro. D. L. Shinn, reports from Ad-amston, West Virginia, January 10:—

I have just closed a good meeting near Smithville, in Ritchie County, West Virginia. I baptized five of the very best of people and Bro. Goodrich baptized one. Many more are looking this way and some have said, "Come again and we will join you." The blessed truth shines brighter and brighter as the light shines from the Sun of righteousness like the sun and ariseth in the east and "shineth even unto the west." Bro. Huffman of the Harmony branch was with me and is a great helper in the work. Bro. J. L. Goodrich came to me from Calhoun County where he had aroused quite an interest, so much so that he thought best to return thither. The Harmony branch was organized last fall with seven members, and we felt at that time to predict for it a glorious future. Its present number is thirteen with prospects good for many more additions.

Elder John Jones, of Wales, December 25, past, expresses an opinion concerning the work in Wales to the following effect:—

There are now in Wales thousands of people that have not heard the gospel sounded properly in their ears; therefore they are perishing in unbelief. Some means to reach the people with the word should be devised, as Bro. Griffiths knows the Saints here have not money enough to procure a hall for the delivering of a series of sermons, by the traveling ministry, as we could get no sort of a place under two pounds a night, but somehow there seems to be an excuse about preaching in or out in Wales. The harp is and has been that the Saints do not live their religion. If dishonesty is found among some of the Saints, all Saints throughout Wales should not be classed as of that character; but where it is found, reprove those guilty, and not publish the Saints through the Herald. Whosoever the brother or brethren that may be sent here to labor, great persecution is awaiting them. The stigma of Brighamism has to be cleared away boldly before the world; and it must be done, I admit, by qualified men.

Bro. C. E. Butterworth, Auburn, Iowa, January 4, says:—

The district missionaries and a number of local ministers are battling for the right so far as they are able to do so and everything is moving off fairly well in spiritual matters. We feel courageous, hopeful, and trustful, and thank God for the favors already received.

Bro. George Hampshire, of Copleston, Ontario, wishes leave to move, That all questions of national, political, labor, and other burning questions of the day be kept from the pages of the Herald, and it be devoted to its intended purpose of lifting high the royal standard of the Prince of Peace.

Bro. H. E. Moler, Arbaugh, Ohio, January 17:—

On Wednesday night, January 15, the Saints' churchhouse at Vale's Mills, Ohio, was burned by the hand of an incendiary. No clue. We are making an effort to rebuild. No insurance on the burned property. Anyone sympathizing and desiring to aid, it will be gratefully received.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly, Oakland City, Indiana, January 18:—

Elder Jenkins and I just closed an interesting series of meetings here. Audiences not large but very attentive. Some investigating, among them an elder of the Disciple Church. We look for good results. Had use of Regular Baptist church, for which we are very thankful. The members of that church have been very kind to us. Will continue here for another week. The work is moving slowly. The article, "Where is the proof?" in a late Herald was timely as well as corrective in its nature; the beginning of a reformation I hope. All well.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRETHREN who wish to advertise in the HERALD columns will take notice that articles advertised must be presented on their merits, not on the plea that the one advertising is in a condition of want, etc. This is stated for the reason that all appeals for aid should be made to the Bishop direct or to some of his authorized agents, upon whom rests the responsibility of receiving and disbursing such aid. This also applies to appeals for aid in building houses of worship, etc. Brethren will find it to their advantage to honor and obtain the benefits of counsel with the Bishopric in such undertakings and thereby save themselves possible trouble that might otherwise be avoided. We sympathize with all in need, but believe the surest way to see aid rendered is to point out the lawful way provided in the statutes of the Lord.

Reports from Bro. Joseph R. Lambert, of the Iowa field, and from Bro. George Montague, of the Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Indian Territory mission, contain good news, and are encouraging. Local, as well as traveling ministry doing well, as a rule.

Splendid letter from Bro. James Caffall, read it.

Letters are received from Srs. E. J. Scott, Burr Oak, Indiana; Belle Crippen, Cherokee, Iowa; Mary M. Green, Appledore, Ontario; and from Bro. J. W. Whithley, Bridgeport, Washington. All have good words of encouragement and exhortations to diligence. Letter space quite crowded this week.

Bro. Joseph Chester, Los Angeles, California, writes of the death at that place of a young brother named Curtis Barney, whose parents reside somewhere in Oklahoma. He wishes to assure them that their son died in peace and in faith, being comforted by ministrations that made his departure a peaceful, happy one.

Items of baptisms, confirmations, ordinations, deaths, etc., should be sent direct to those whose work it is to make record of them. Brethren should not depend upon secretaries recording such items from their letters to the HERALD. They may never see them.

Bro. and Sr. W. R. Holden, Moscow, Idaho, alone in the faith in that city, express the belief that much good could be done there by some of the ministry. Who is near by to render the aid desired?

Daniel Walker, the son of Sr. Thorp, who is living at Lamoni, an elder of the Utah Church, addressed the people of Lamoni, on the evenings of the 6th and 9th of January, in the Saints' Church. He spoke on the claims of the church in Utah, and was reviewed by Bro. J. R. Lambert, on Sunday night, January 12. Elder Walker was present at such review. He publicly and privately refused to discuss with representatives of the Reorganized Church in public.

Bro. G. W. Blair, son of Bro. W. W. Blair, has been appointed postmaster at Lamoni by President Cleveland. The Senate has confirmed his appointment.

Bishop Kelley left Lamoni on the 17th inst. for Washington, D. C., where he is to be joined by Pres. W. W. Blair. The Temple Lot suit in the Supreme Court of the United States and other church business are the objects of their mission.

Bro. James McKiernan was holding meetings at Eliza, Illinois, in the Union church, January 17. Had good interest, but was distressed with sore throat and hoarseness.

Bro. Edward Ingham, nephew of Bro. G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, Hawaii, called at Lamoni while enroute from Honolulu to his home in England. He heard and obeyed the word in Hawaii.

"Yet I argue not Against heaven's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope; but still bear up and steer Right onward.—Milton.

RIGHT ONWARD.

WORDS of hope and encouragement may at times fall upon the ear as unmeaning sounds. They do not touch the heart because we instinctively feel that they come only from the lips. We do not mean by this that the speaker is not sincere, but only that the heart depths have never been troubled and they cannot (because they are simply unable to) put themselves in our place.

But when such words fall from lips which we have seen turn pale with suffering, yet never opened to let a murmur pass; when words of cheer and encouragement come from those whom we know have stood singly and alone with heads bared to the storms of adversity, then they carry with them force and weight. They sustain and invigorate, and we turn anew to the battle of life feeling that we are only enduring what others have endured before us, what they are bearing every day and yet smiling as they toil on ever ready to lend a helping hand to others and speak the word which, coming from the heart bathed in life's deepest experiences, has power to reach the heart and act upon its waves of pain as oil upon waters which are troubled.

It may be for this very reason that God is baptizing you in the bitter waters of affliction. Be strong of heart and brave of spirit for he will never suffer the waters to overwhelm. Think of all which Milton endured,—his poverty, sorrow, and blindness,—and let his words which stand at the head of this, not be as empty sound to you, but realizing from whence they come, let them have weight. Johnson said of him, "His great works were performed under discountenance and blindness; but he never yielded to difficulties."

Let us, too, strive "to bate not a jot of heart or hope" but do faithfully the duty which comes to our hand to do, leaving God to order and overrule.

WHEREFORE DO WE DOUBT?

WHY should we doubt God and his goodness? Yes, why have we so often doubted? Should we ever have doubted if we had fully realized the import of the precious declaration from the lips of our Mediator, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life"? Was there ever a father's love so great? And we have soul-cheering words from the lips of the inspired Paul: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him freely give us all things?"

If we would keep these precious truths fresh on the tablets of our hearts, and uppermost in our minds, as the ancients wore scripture on their foreheads and wrists, there would be less chance for the enemy of all good to tempt us with doubting.

We must pass through trials and temptations; our Master did before us, and "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." It is just as necessary for us to experience sufferings, temptations, and persecutions, as it is for gold and silver to pass through various refining processes, and in like manner all of worth will come forth purified.

When every earthly ambition seems blighted, and we have nothing of the world left but sickness and poverty, then is the time for us to rise above doubts, and take hold of the precious promises of the word. Then it is that they are sweeter than honey to the taste. That sweetness is not of ourselves, it is sent down from above; it is the Spirit bearing witness with our spirit that our desires are heard and accepted.

Almost invariably when our troubles come upon us like a flood, the tempter comes also to fill us with doubts. If we accept his promptings we lose much, if we do not fail; but if we say, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and feel that "In the Lord is my trust," we shall be led to exclaim, "Praise the Lord, O my soul," etc.; we shall be held securely by the unseen hand of our Father. While being thus led we cannot doubt.

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? . . . Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us."

If we do right we shall find a way of escape out of our afflictions, for "many are the afflictions, of the righteous: but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

PRACTICAL HINTS.

NEVER—BUT ALWAYS.

NEVER buy an article you do not need because it is cheap, but buy what you do need, and always before your wife's patience is exhausted.

Never laugh at others' efforts; if you know better than they do you know too much to laugh; and if you do not where is your chance for laughter?

Never judge from appearances only, but always investigate thoroughly before deciding.

Never die before being called to die, but live as long as possible, and always live for a noble purpose.

Never offend others without a cause, but always try to do as you would be done by under similar circumstances.

WHAT THE SUNDAY SCHOOL NEEDS AND HOW TO GET IT.

MAKING the above outline my introduction, the first thing I shall consider as one of the needs of the Sunday school is better organization.

By this I do not mean that we need more officers, but we need more systematic work. Our officers need to have a thorough understanding of their own and one another's duties, so that each may work in his place for the advancement of the work and not to the detriment of another. To get better organization it is necessary that the officers and teachers should meet together to study their work and discuss all matters of general interest to the school. This will develop new methods for carrying on the work and will give new life and energy to those attending, and when they take their places in the school the children will imbibe that spirit of energy and they too will take a greater interest in the work.

Our town schools usually hold these meetings, but in the country the scattered condition of the members often causes some inconvenience; but we, as Saints, should strive to overcome this. If we wait to work without sacrifice our reward will be small. One meeting a month or one in two months would cause a revolution in some of our schools for the better.

Another great need is, better preparation on the part of the teachers. In their care is placed the child. The child-mind craves for knowledge. Are the teachers supplying that desire in the best manner? An eminent man once said, "If we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we work upon marble, it may be broken; if we rear temples, they will crumble to dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, those principles will shine for all eternity." Thus we see the responsibility resting upon us.

To attain the highest success in teaching the teacher should study the nature of the being he is trying to teach; read books on teaching; learn the nature of the mind and use this knowledge in every lesson. Much may be gained by visiting other schools occasionally and watching the methods used.

The helps that are needed in more of our schools are maps, charts, and blackboards. Maps can usually be made by any member of ordinary ability acquainted with school work, and they will usually answer the purpose as well or better than the high-priced printed ones, and will cost but a trifle. Charts can be made in a similar manner.

A blackboard is a necessity in any school, especially in Sunday school, for review purposes. A good reversible board covered with slated cloth built in a frame can be got for about $4.50. If the work of making be done gratis by a member the cost will be much less. Cheaper boards can be made according to the needs of the school.

Each school should have in its library also a number of reference books, such as a Bible dictionary, general history, a book on teaching, a life of Christ, Josephus, etc. These may be secured through presentation or purchase.

One more need and that is this: a Teachers' Journal devoted exclusively to the work of the officers and teachers. Those in charge need help—all they can get. They need to catch every new impulse; they need the inspiration of every noble thought. As a means of aiding in this we should have a Sunday School Journal.

In the last report of the General Association we learn there are one hundred and eighty-eight schools. Estimating that there are fifty more not yet in the association, there would be a total of two hundred and thirty-eight schools. Allowing an average of five teachers and the same number of officers for each school we have a total of nearly two thousand four hundred teachers and officers. Would it not pay to have a journal for such an army? This may be arranged for by the General Association when that body sees fit.

We need many other things, but it remains with each school to search out these needs and secure them if possible.

Our schools are progressive, our organization the best, but that is not enough. Let us make it still better; let us work with greater zeal and more sacrifice and make the work indeed the light of the world.

CHARLES FRY.

Letter Department.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—The work is still onward. For the last ten days W. J. Smith has been with us and has proven a successful helper. Two discussions have taken place in our hall during the last week. Bro. Smith plead Zion's cause in the first one with overwhelming success for the truth. "Upon this rock I will build my church," was the foundation of the theological dispute. At the close of this juncture, Bro. Smith's disputant challenged the writer to debate the following: "Resolved that baptism in water for the remission of sins is a principle of the doctrine of Christ, and is essential to salvation." I told the gospel story as best I could; hundreds were present to hear, and at the close ninety per cent of all present took sides with the truth.

I could write you two or three columns of the arguments that were made on both sides, but "no new thing under the sun" happened, so what is the use of freighting the Herald with what has been told over and over and over again. In fact discussion has become a burden to the Herald of late. Indeed it looks as though some have concluded it was necessary to publish a verbatim report when arranging discussions. Why not epitomize and give a condensed account of the results, rather than a long detailed account of every argument used? If we get the victory, say so. If we have received a sound thrashing, keep quiet about it, as it will not be much to our credit to say anything along that line.

Several have been baptized here of late and several more expect to be in the near future. On the night of the 8th inst. we discontinued our meetings (Bro. Smith and I) and went to hear the king of infidelity, Robert Ingersoll, lecture. I have his lecture, and have just announced through the daily papers that I will review him on the night of the 15th inst. I will endeavor to vindicate the Bible, and show to the people that his gross misrepresentations of the Bible, are simply attacks upon sectarianism, and not upon the word of God. We expect an immense crowd out to hear.

In bonds,

R. E. GRANT.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 2.

Editors Herald:—I wish you and all the church as scattered in the various parts of the earth a peaceful and prosperous new year; and when I saw that Bro. Joseph had been celebrating his sixty-third birthday, I wished him many happy returns of the day. And glad to learn from his letter to me of November 14 that he was enjoying fair health.

Bro. Howell has been thought negligent, but he says he forwarded the minutes of the Sheffield mission conference held in August, 1895; so I suppose they were either mis-carried or overlooked. Be this as it may, Bro. H. is not chargeable for their non-appearance.

I reached the above place in time to assist in religious services in the new chapel the Saints have builded in the world's metropolis, on the 22d of December. It is situated in Bow Common Lane E., in a densely populated neighborhood, and on the opposite side of street is a very large Catholic church, with a statue of the Virgin Mary and child, as if gazing on our little structure with a full glare. 'Tis strange, that our Catholic friends need so frequently to gaze on these pictures and statues to remind them of Christ of whom they claim to think so much, but so it is. I respect them as part of God's creation, but have no use for their dogmas.

With others they seem anxious for Christian union, but of course offer no compromise, no indeed. If I thought there was anything as ridiculous in Latter Day Saintism as the constant prating of the so-called Christians about Christian unity, I should be ashamed of it and agitate a revision. Thank the good Lord our position as a religious body on the one faith, etc., is so evincive of unity as to cause many to wonder.

I don't think the cherishing of adverse opinions on some points is evidence of disunion on the vital question, by any means. And I think a free expression of thought, through our church organ, a very effective method for promoting knowledge, brightening our ideas, etc. I am loth to believe that our intellectual Herald correspondents, bring into requisition their ability for gaining or striving for the mastery. Bro. Joseph once said: "We are not all equally intelligent, but we may be equally zealous and diligent."

I have gained much good from the Herald in the past year, but am still needy. But if we cannot communicate without striving for the mastery, 'twere better we wipe our pen and be silent.

The great fuss and excitement over Chris-mas and New Year holidays have militated somewhat against missionary work, up to date, including a watch meeting. We have held eleven meetings in our new chapel, and the brethren inform me, that a greater number of strangers have attended than they saw at the former place of meeting in two years. In view of the barriers that have attended the work of building the Saints have reflected great credit on themselves, in erecting a house of worship in the world's metropolis. Two are to be baptized in our new font on the 5th. Bro. Howell will forward to the Bishop a detailed report of the work from the inception to the finish.

Save the time consumed in visiting Manchester, Birmingham, Stafford, and Farnsworth, I was at Wigan from September 8 to December 19. Up to the above date the few Saints in Wigan worshiped in cottages, but emerging therefrom into a public place, I went to help them, preaching about sixty sermons. Seven were added, a few others believing. Five or six have been added in Sheffield since August; and in Manchester and Salford about twenty-five have been added since April; others believing, as I learn from Bro. Joseph Dewsnup.

The Manchester branch proper has been divided and at present there are three branches in Manchester with a prospect of a fourth. The ostensible purpose of this change is the more effective building up of the kingdom among the seven hundred thousand of the denizens of Manchester, for we must lengthen our cords and strengthen our stakes as fast as possible, and with four houses of worship in Manchester at various points, there certainly will be more done towards scattering the kingdom, which is likened unto a grain of mustard seed, than remaining in one place. But this dividing and scattering consumes time, makes work, and costs money; but it seems some willing hands and hearts are found in Manchester to do all this; for, tarrying there two nights on my way hither, I found brethren with saw, brush, etc., after toiling all day, working until eleven p. m. to make ready the new rooms. That is right, this is no time for sloth or inactivity; every one is expected to do his or her duty to-day, to-morrow, and all the time. There may be a little croaking sometimes to make things a bit lively; but so far as I have seen there are few if any drones in Manchester; or there ought not to be.

Salford is not of, but adjacent to Manchester, teeming with thousands of human beings within a small radius. Missionary work has been prosecuted there for over a year. The present mission room is too small. Prospects good, so we hope for a Salford branch. The special conference at Birmingham, November 16-18 was peaceful and I think profitable. Brn. H. and Joseph Greenwood did some excellent preaching on Sunday morning. The social meeting in the afternoon was very good. I never saw time better utilized. The evening meeting was well attended; the writer was blessed with good liberty. The brethren have commenced ministerial labor in West Bromwich. We hope for good results.

The above may seem small results in this great nation, but when the hindrances are considered, we are glad for so much. I hope we will all evince an increase of wisdom and diligence in the year '96. No trouble is so distressing as that created by our own folly. We ought to strive more earnestly for wisdom which maketh wise unto salvation.

I'm glad to know that we have discussionists ready for the front when a necessity exists for defense. I don't think Bro. C. R. Duncan was far wrong in saying a "cyclone debater." Long may they survive. Tell Bro. Terry of St. Joseph that his good wishes are duly appreciated. I hope to prove worthy of them. Health good.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:—The work is progressing here. Bro. G. D. Washburn came here last August and preached eight sermons and baptized seven. One of the seven was my sister. She was suffering everything with a cancer. It was eating her life away, and the doctor gave us no hope. He said all he could do was to give her a little relief till she died, as she could live but a short time. But, thanks be to God, she was told that inasmuch as she obeyed the gospel she should be made whole. She did obey, and to-day she is well, and last Wednesday walked about seven miles.

The old Methodist church was for sale and Bro. Washburn encouraged us to buy it. We did so and now have it moved on a lot of our own. We sent for him again three weeks ago and he has preached for three weeks and baptized two and many more are believing. There is good interest here.

My little son, eight years old, was taken last fall with contraction of the cords of his limbs. One limb had gotten so bad that the toes were drawn in. We felt very anxious about him, as he is the only boy we have. We thought he must be a cripple. He suffered a great deal; would cry night and day with it; and last Tuesday he was taken very suddenly with the worst form of diphtheria. He could not have lived till morning without help. After the preaching on Tuesday evening I called for prayer and my child was suffering so much that my heart almost failed me, for by experience I knew what that dread disease was when it came in that form. His little face was purple with fever and his breath so hot that I could scarcely stand to feel it on my face. Bro. Washburn called us to pray first. There were four of us that prayed, then he prayed and rebuked the disease, and instantly my child was made whole and rose up and said, "Mamma, I am well;" and the Spirit rested on him in power so that we could hear him sob. He will bear his testimony to all, and has borne it to many outsiders.

Bro. Washburn has been greatly blessed by the Holy Spirit, so much that the people of the world have been made to see that the work is of God and that Bro. George is indeed his servant. One of the outsiders saw a dove flying around his head one night and at the same time an angel standing at his side. He saw and marveled at it, and said, "Surely he is of God." The same night as I was looking at him I can bear my testimony that his face shone as the sun. All I could see of him was his face, and it was as if it was so full of the glory of God that I could scarcely look at it, neither could I withdraw my eyes; and I do thank my God that he has made things so plain to us, so we all can say of a surety, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." At another time my sister saw a glorified being attending Bro. George. It was the night that one of the worst young men we have in Ludington was at church. We saw him when he came in and we expected him to do something awful, but he could not, and the next morning there was found where he sat something he intended to throw at our minister. We know that if we live humble God will care for his children. Pray for us.

Your sister,

LIBBIE VANBRUNT.

ANDOVER, N. Y., Jan. 9.

Editors Herald:—The old year, with her trials and victories, joys and sorrows, successes and failures, is now a thing of the past, and the new year with all her possibilities, is fairly begun. As is usual, I make some good resolutions at the beginning of the year, asking the Lord to forgive my past errors, and go steadily forward in the work of the Master, trusting for strength and wisdom to be given of him sufficient, at least, to keep me from falling.

The past year, to me, has been one of severe trials, in some respects. But I do not murmur, nor do I ask that my trials and sorrows be either fewer or less, but only that strength may be given to enable me to hold out faithful to the end. We are assured in the Scriptures that "all things work together for good to them that love God;" and, knowing that I do love him, I feel confident that all the trials, the darkness, and the suffering that fall to my lot here are, in some way, working for my good. Sometimes I can't see how; sometimes all is dark; but, when the clouds have blown away and the sunlight of God's love and goodness shines in upon my soul, dispelling the darkness so that I can see things in their true light, I can then discern the hand of God, for good, even in the sufferings through which I have had to pass.

I am not an advocate of the doctrine that we should "do evil that good may come," nor that our sins and wrongdoing are, in any sense, for our betterment; but I do believe that when we are trying with all our might to do our duty, laboring with an eye single to God's glory, whatever he permits to come upon us, or sends upon us, is for our good. It may be poverty, hunger, thirst, or cold; it may be separation from friends and loved ones, sickness, or death; it may be persecution from without, or "perils among false brethren;" but why hesitate or falter in the discharge of our duty, because of these things, so long as we feel sure that we "love God?"

My times are in thy hand;
Why should I doubt or fear?
My Father's hand will never cause
His child a needless tear.

Then we murmur and complain because we can't have our own way in everything; because the Lord insists upon doing things in his own way instead of ours. What strange creatures we are, anyway!

Since leaving Kirtland, August 9, I have baptized but one. It seems like poor work, but as the time has not come to go out and "compel them to come in," we have to take them as they come. I am heartily glad to learn from Herald and Ensign that others are having better success than I, for, if they were not, the work would move slowly, indeed—if it moved at all.

It is not at all gratifying to learn, as we do from Bro. A. H. Smith's letter in the Herald, that there is a strong probability of some of the missionary force being called in next spring. But that seems to be the only thing possible under the circumstances, for it is certainly not right to put elders into the field, with the promise that their families shall be supported, and then to leave them to get along as best they can; and it is also self-evident that the Bishop can't provide for the families of the elders when he has no money. We need dozens of elders in the field to where we have one now; hence it seems hard to drop any from the present number. But the family of the elder is just as dear to him as the families of other men are to them, and it is certainly an injustice to ask the elders to go out and devote their entire time to the ministry unless the church can and will provide for their families.

And, now, I should like also to say a word in regard to the support of the elders themselves. They are allowed no salary, but are to go without purse or scrip, taking no thought what they shall eat, drink, or put on; yet the statement is made, "Your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." How are they to get them? The law to this church says: "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money; . . . and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple."—D. C. 83:16.

So far, all seems clear enough. But now comes what I don't nor can't understand: General Conference assigns an elder to a certain field, the Bishop gives him money to pay his fare to his appointed field, and to buy such clothing as he then stands in need of, telling him that his wants are expected to be supplied by the people where he labors, after he gets there. The elder goes to his field and finds that the Bishop's agent has been teaching the Saints not to give anything to the traveling elder, but to put all their free-will offerings, along with their tithing, into the hands of the Bishop and his agents, and, if the elder needs money, let him go to them for it. This places the elder in an embarrassing position—not only embarrassing but humiliating also, because it seems like some one is trying to place him in such position that he will have to ask for everything he gets. I believe that such teaching is contrary to the law of God, and also contrary to the teaching of the Bishop and both his counselors, and that it should be stopped. I believe, too, that when the elders learn to take God at his word, and go out just as the law directs, taking no thought for the things of this life but trusting the Lord to take care of them, the cause will move faster, and the elders have more power than they do at present. Finally, I believe that we all need more of the Divine nature, and less of the human, in order to carry on this work just as the Lord designs it should be done.

At present I am laboring among the hills of Western New York. There are some good Saints here, and good people not of the Saints, too, but the work has been sadly neglected in the past because of the lack of laborers. Bro. Lanphear, Scott, Peak, Powell, Parrish, and Robinson are kindly remembered by the Saints and friends all through this country; also Bro. Bond. The winter is upon us now, and missionary work cannot be successfully prosecuted in this cold country at this season of the year.

On my way here I stopped at Crenshaw, Pennsylvania, for nearly a month. There is a noble little band of Saints there who are thoroughly alive in this latter-day work. But it is a hard place, in some respects. Some good people there, and some are convinced of the truth of the gospel, but there are forces at work to keep them out of the kingdom. May the Lord bless the honest in heart!

There are a number of things I should like to speak of, but I see this is getting about long enough, unless it was more edifying, so I will make my bow right here.

Yours in gospel bonds,
ISAAC M. SMITH.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Jan. 9.

Editors Herald:—I am busily engaged in the work here. With returning health comes a greater vigor and zeal for the work. I never can tell how it happens, but somehow I get my hands so full of business that I get worried. I wish somebody would tell me a way to preach this gospel and do the work of an evangelist in a moderate way, and be successful. I have often heard some of the elders remark, "I wish I knew what to preach about in some of the branches where the gospel has been preached so long." Try this, brethren. In Matthew are twenty-three parables spoken by the Savior, in Mark six, in St. Luke seventeen, and in John three; all different. Commence in Matthew 7:24, the first one given, and continue. Study hard to make the proper application, and pray for understanding, and see what a nice lot of sermons you will preach, and what an interested congregation you will have.

I will hold hold meetings here in San Antonio all next week every night. We have regular meetings here every Sunday. We have a nice interest south of town, at Earl. Look for much good to be accomplished there. I will attend our Southwestern Texas conference to be held at Medina City church, January 31. Will go in time to preach at Pipe Creek on Saturday and Sunday, January 25 and 26.

Elder Currie, Sen., and Bro. Kuykendall were run over by a street railway car; had their cart broken in pieces and sustained severe injuries. Bro. Kuykendall is yet confined to his bed but slowly improving.

I have quite a number of calls to preach, which I will try to fill. I hope to obtain some valuable help from some of our local force. Will say that I try to confine my work to small territory where there is an interest, and either gain a victory at a place or lose a battle. Your fellow laborer,

H. P. CURTIS.

BEAVERTON, Mich., Jan. 4.

Editors Herald:—The work here is moving along nicely. There is as good interest as ever. We have a nice branch of about forty Saints. When I came here two years ago there were but three Saints and the people were then very much prejudiced against us; but that now seems about gone. We have held two debates here; one with Elder Rogers, of seventeen nights; one with Musser, which did a great deal to put down prejudice, and the Saints here as a rule live their religion, which helps the cause more than everything else.

I have another nice work commenced at a place called Butman, some twenty miles north of here, where Bro. Goheen has lived for eight or nine years. It is where Musser delivered his first lecture, after he left the church. I followed and answered his lecture and preached three or four discourses, and on November 8 last went there again and remained about two weeks, preaching thirteen sermons and baptized 6, one a Baptist deacon, a very fine man. He was one of the men who was the instigator of Musser's coming to lecture against us. I was shown by the Spirit that I was to go to Butman, on the 8th of November, and when I got there I found the Baptists had commenced a quarterly conference on the same day; and as there was only the one place to hold meeting in—the schoolhouse—and they had that, I wondered why I should be sent at that time; so I made up my mind to attend their meeting, which lasted for three days. The minister who conducted the meeting had preached against us before that. Their first meeting was on the night of the 8th and there were several preachers present—two women preachers and two men; and when the time came to commence, I was there and four or five of the brethren with me.

Quite a large gathering of people was present and I noticed that they did not commence their meeting for a long time after the hour, and I saw that they were considering something; but by and by they commenced, and one of their women preachers preached. The next day I learned that they had consulted whether to let us remain with them or not. Their meeting went on and we took part whenever we could by bearing testimony.

As I said, there was quite a large attendance, insomuch that they hardly had places to stay, so I told the brethren to ask some of them home with them. They did so, and eight or ten went down with Bro. Goheen, the Baptist preacher with the rest, and I went along, too; and we had not been there five minutes before we got into a conversation on the gospel, and I told him our claims and what we believed, and all about it. He did not contend a word against it, but said he was glad he had met us; "for," he said, "I thought before I met with you people here that you were a very bad people, but now I know better, and I am glad," and he invited me to take part in his meeting, and I did so; and he would say amen; and he told the people he was glad he had met the Latter Day Saints; that he had found that they were a good people. So when his meeting ended I told him I was going to preach and would like him present, and he said he would come out, and he did. I took up the subject of authority and organization of the church, and after I was through he came to me and bade me Godspeed. Since then I have baptized a few of his members, and I understand he has turned his coat and preached against us. A brother from there tells me there are several more who want to be baptized there. I expect to go there on the 12th inst.

A few days ago I was called by telephone to Coleman, by E. J. Martindale, to go to a place called Calkinsville, in Isabella County, to answer Musser's lectures. He had been there and delivered several lectures. I went and made a reply, and we met the man, Musser, and we drew up propositions for debate, which was to take place on January 6; but I had to postpone on account of some business. I wrote Musser and the people at Calkinsville to that effect. I will not know when the debate will come off until I hear from him and we agree on the time.

J. A. CARPENTER.

FAIR HAVEN, Wash., Dec. 20.

Editors Herald:—There is a good deal of silent hard labor going on in the wilds of this far west. Thousands of miles of territory are traversed on foot, and (when finances permit by steam on sea and land, by the few messengers in this vast field; and at times the lonely toiler in the Lord's vineyard is on the brink of the abyss of despair; but again after the gloomy hour is past he lifts his head on high, with gratitude to Him who notes the distress of his weary servant and in his own due time by the Comforter sends a gleam of heavenly light into his soul; and with his eyes on the end of the race he presses on with renewed strength.

I am at present as a forerunner, holding forth at this place, until the arrival of Bro. John Davis and by the active coöperation of the noble sisters and those of their children who are members, and also of friends, non-members, we have secured a house where we can invite the public.

I have preached three times here to small audiences, but hope for good results. I have sold the Voice of Warning to one person. We meet here every day such as have been misinformed concerning us, and as they are willing, we try to explain. We believe that if more missionaries could devote their whole time to the work here it would give good returns. Elders J. C. Clapp and John Davis, our beloved missionaries, have paid us a visit in company at Tacoma, Brookdale, and Lake Park, where they, on the 6th of October, organized the Lake Park branch. The meeting was held at Lake Park in the house of Bro. J. M. Puckett who was chosen priest of the branch. Sixteen Saints were present, which filled the writer with joy, while in addition we noticed the much longed-for gift of prophecy when Bro. Clapp ordained Bro. Davis to the office of Seventy. The good Spirit was also felt by the writer and many others when Bro. G. Puckett was confirmed. O that the writer as well as all the members of our young branch would always draw sap from the true vine and water from the living fountain, that they might grow erect and bear fruit in due time! Dear Saints of long experience, when you think of your past difficulties remember us out here when you bow before the throne of grace.

Yours in the faith,

N. C. ENGE.

EXETER, Mo., Jan. 11.

Editors Herald:—Just closed a week's meetings here. We commenced in the Methodist church. After preaching three sermons, we were visited by the "pastor" and informed that we would have to move out. We then went to the city hall and continued three more evenings. Most of our congregation followed us from the church to the hall. Some are interested and one young lady is talking of being baptized, after she has made a more thorough investigation.

We commence a series of meetings to-night at the Horner schoolhouse. Expect we will stir up a "hornet's nest" as there is a Baptist preacher in the neighborhood about six feet and a half high. Pray for us. This is a new field and it is ready for the harvesters.

In bonds,

CABOOL, Mo., Jan. 12.

Editors Herald:—I came here on the 6th, at the request of Sr. Johnson, who was at the point of death. She passed away the 9th. I stayed in the neighborhood, preaching until the 12th to a very good attendance. I preached the sister's funeral sermon on the 10th to a very large crowd, and the singing was furnished us by Mr. Dedrick and his family from the "Saints' Hymnal." The sister was fifty-three years old and was baptized by Elder Joseph Ward, March 28, 1893, and she lived a consistent life ever since.

I have received propositions from the Campbellites at this point; and Bro. Cather and the writer, while holding meetings at Sargent, stirred up the Baptist preacher, who came to our meetings and asked a few questions; but after we had left there, he held what he called a debate, and raked us over from away back, challenging us to meet him, after we were gone. But I was expecting something of the kind, so I wrote out propositions and left them with Sr. Tucker, who quietly handed them to the reverend, after one of his greatest blows. He did not like to take it, but could not help himself very well, so gave out that he would speak on my third chart—the signs of the times—Sunday night; so I expect to drop in just after he gets in full blast. If he is ready for the debate, we will commence; if not, I shall stay and answer his abuse. So the Saints who are expecting me to visit them will know that I am standing by our standard; and when I get through with these preachers who are trying to make people believe they know it all, I shall be around. The Saints in Oregon County who were expecting me after Bro. Ward's debate will see the reason why I am not there.

The clerk of the Willow Springs branch will please take notice of the death of this sister.

The work is moving along finely all along the line.

In bonds,

PORCUPINE, Wis., Jan. 14.

Editors Herald:—The Saints of this branch have cause to mourn because of the death of an estimable brother, Joseph Heath, Jr., who died very suddenly. He was convalescing from the measles but thoughtlessly exposed himself to a cooler atmosphere, which did the fatal work. He was teacher of this branch and was widely known and highly respected. His loss will be keenly felt by the branch and many friends. It can truly be said of him that he was faithful to his covenant and died in the Lord.

Since returning from Twin Lakes Elder A. V. Closson and I have been preaching at Porcupine and Big Cooley, and during this present week we will occupy at the West Frankfort schoolhouse. I am expecting Bro. L. E. Hills, of Afton, Rock County, to join me this week. Next week we intend to visit Ono, Pierce County. The work is onward here.

TENANT'S HARBOR, Maine, Jan. 9.

Editors Herald:—Brother D. S. Seavey and I have been holding forth at this place. We preached six times. We have had the powers that be against us. So we have but few that come to hear—from twelve to thirty-three. The Odd Fellows held their annual installation one evening, the Daughters of Rebecca another; diphtheria is in town, and the Baptists went in for a week of prayer. Some have married a wife, another bought a yoke of oxen, another a farm, and all wish to be excused.

People seem to be walking after the name of their god. Bro. Seavey says: "Sometimes I get discouraged and think our preaching in this place is in vain." The noble brother was born in this town and always lived here; has held town office for twenty-six years and is well liked by the people. His father and mother belonged to the old organization, and died in the faith. Bro. Seavey and his wife were baptized by the writer at Rockland, Maine, May 3, 1875. They, according to appearance and report, lived true to their covenant. His wife departed this life twelve years ago, since which time he has lived alone. We shall hold meetings each evening this week, and over Sunday, and then try some other place as we have several in view.

I see you touch a little on tea, coffee, and tobacco. I have drunk no tea for twenty-six years and over. I drink no coffee. I did use tobacco for seventeen years, but as I was walking along the road one day some twenty-eight years ago, I heard a voice over me say, "Throw out that tobacco!" I let it go out of my mouth then, and have used none since; neither have I ever wanted it, as the hankering taste for it went with the cud I threw out of my mouth, although I had tried several times before to leave it off, and seemingly I could not. Thank God for his power to cast away sin.

Yours ever,

J. C. FOSS.

RIDGE PRAIRIE, Ill., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—At the St. Louis district conference, September 28 and 29, 1895, I was authorized to look after a request or petition to the conference by some members of the old Alma branch, which had been disorganized several years ago, looking toward a revival of our church interests in this place. In pursuance of this commission I have been endeavoring to awaken the interest in our work by a regular Sunday service and meetings during the week when practicable. As an up to date result we are having good audiences and most excellent attention, yesterday's attendance being the largest as yet, interest in our services plainly growing, and we hope under wise treatment for permanent good as a result. We have made many new friends, and are reviving the old ones.

There has been talk of branch organization, but we do not think matters are anywhere near in readiness for such a move. Shoulder straps don't make a general, nor does the imposition of hands alone qualify a man with that wisdom which only previous gifts, callings, with experience perhaps, can furnish. Unlawful and unwise haste to baptize, confirm, ordain, and organize, forgetting or ignoring the necessary conditions and prerequisites provided in the law, have wrought mischief incalculable, the effects from which, in some quarters, we shall hardly recover. To stand for this rule and order in the church is not always a pleasant service, and to so live before God as to be preserved from extremes, and the errors of a hasty judgment in any or all matters pertaining to church building, is indeed a service calling for watchfulness, patience, and courage, that is not a pleasant fleshly service at least.

In our work here we have had valuable and cheerful assistance from the ministry of St. Louis at different times, Brn. Archibald and Hitchcock aiding in Sunday appointments, also that of the district president, Bro. Jaques. The kindly care and love bestowed toward the brethren and the missionary by the few of the faithful who reside here is cheerfully acknowledged. There is a lot of warm-hearted, generous people in the St. Louis district. May heaven grant power of discernment and appreciation of their true interests and ability to comprehend the truth which will render them free from a repetition of past mistakes and disaster, is the best or worst wish we have for them.

On December 3 we went to Seaburger in St. Charles County, Missouri, a place where our gospel had never been heard until about six or eight months ago, when through the agency of Bro. and Sr. Moorman, Brn. Noah Cooke, Ivor Davies, also Bro. Jones, held forth in the district schoolhouse, resulting in the baptism of about twelve persons. Good people were added to the church through the labors of these brethren. A Sunday school had been previously established at this place by a Presbyterian minister by the name of Hughey, who also had semi-regular preaching appointment with revival services, etc. With the advent and success of gospel preaching a change came over the spirit of the Rev. Hughey's dream, regarding religion and Bible doctrine, and as he couldn't reconcile or accept straightforward interpretations of the Bible with his creed, there was nothing left but to collect the orthodox weapons of warfare and begin the stereotyped methods of opposition to the truth.

The detailed story of his ungentlemanly, unchristianlike, and cowardly treatment of Elder Ivor Davies, who has been the chief agent in introducing the gospel at this place, the readers of the Herald need not be burdened with. I was present at the time of Reverend Hughey's last effort against "Mormonism" in this place and upon the date above indicated, the occasion being a one night's discussion, perhaps not altogether wisely agreed to, by Bro. Davies upon a resolution of Reverend Hughey's framing; viz., "Resolved that the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints does not now, nor never has preached or practiced polygamy;" Bro. Davies to open with a one hour's speech; Rev. H. to follow with speech of one and one half hours, Bro. Davies closing with a thirty minutes' answer, the half hour speech being practically all the time Bro. Davies had in which to answer his opponent's argument!

A more contemptible and cowardly opposition of the Clark Braden order to the truth I never witnessed. Reverend Hughey had previously had enough of our doctrine to know that anything like equality or fair play would prove disastrous, and so gave special notice before commencing debate that he would positively answer no challenges or discuss with us further than that evening, and of course did not even do that. Mr. Hughey was made to understand previously that it might prove uncomfortable or even dangerous to affirm an application of the resolutions to our church—he in fact plainly disclaimed that, but held the title as belonging to the Utah Church and that the Reorganization represented a faction—or indeed an apostasy—making ingenious use of the late reversal of the Temple Lot decision, etc. The revelation on polygamy was read, reread, and descanted upon as a sweet morsel or mouthful for Hughey, and his crowd of friends who had been invited, and the time filled in with abuse and falsehoods concerning Joseph Smith, the testimony and life of the three witnesses, misrepresentation and abuse of Bro. Davies, misuse, misrepresentation, and ridicule of matter in Herald and Ensign, with letters read from these offices to him, etc.

I never had as hard a time of it to keep still as I did at the close of the debate, as I had noted the statement in full; but of course it was not my say, but I obtained a full vote to make a ten minutes' statement, Bro. Davies not occupying all his time, and I think the audience would have been glad to have had a continued discussion, but the reverend gentleman had emptied his slop bucket and had said about all that he could have said for his side, and certainly demonstrated to every unprejudiced person present his consciousness of this fact, and flatly refused to defend his own beliefs or faiths or discuss "Mormonism" any further. I understand that he is now claiming a great victory, through the St. Charles and St. Louis newspapers; but he certainly did not deceive the unprejudiced that evening.

Bro. Davies' conduct was that of a Christian and a gentleman, and in this line it was plain to be seen that he had no competition at all. Hughey may blow his horn in St. Charles or elsewhere where he has not been under fire, but his reputation is made and career ended at Seaburger. It will be seen that Bro. Davies was made to affirm a negative proposition. In justice, however, to him it should be stated that Reverend Hughey would consent to no other terms of any kind upon which he could be gotten before the public with any kind of a show of answer to his previous conduct and misrepresentation concerning Bro. Davies and the work of the brethren. I believe that Mr. Hughey's Presbyterian Sunday school was changed into a union school and since, to all effect, a Latter Day Saints' school, our Hope being freely used, and school officered I think by our people. This in fact was the chief beginning of our offense, Hughey charging Bro. Davies more than once during his "discussion" with "stealing" his "Sunday school." Too bad, certainly! Bro. Davies has made friends of the majority of the people, while the reverse is certainly true as regards Reverend Hughey, and when weather and roads make meetings practicable again in that country we trust and look for further labor and harvest ingathering.

We were very glad to have present with us at our district conference, which convened December 28, Brn. M. T. Short, and G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric. Business meetings, in attendance, were very far in excess of anything seen in the district since I came to it, or indeed for years, as reported by the brethren. Some changes, innovations perhaps, but agreeable to the law, were introduced and affirmed harmoniously, Brn. Short and Hilliard rendering the preaching acceptably; Bro. Short, however, having to "shorten" his evening discourse by early departure from us Sunday evening. Two funerals on Sunday hindered the success of Sunday's meetings somewhat; one that of Sr. Martha Taylor, a long sufferer, being preached in the afternoon by Bro. Hilliard, the other by the writer.

On Tuesday following a "watch night" meeting was inaugurated by an excellent discourse from Bro. Hilliard, who also gave us "necessary food" on the following evening in lieu of the regular prayer meeting. Bro. Hilliard's visit seemed providential; his counsel was vigorous, sound, and practical, and we feel decidedly pleased with his visit. We accompanied him to Belleville, Illinois, Friday, returning to appointments in city on Sunday.

Attendance and liberty in preaching the word while in the city, good, our talks in morning services more particularly to Saints. These as well as our evening services are increasing in attendance and seeming interest.

Six regular services weekly, with priesthood meetings the first and third Tuesdays of the month, regular business meetings, calls from the sick, and many matters pertaining to church work and discipline, with work outside the city, etc., leave but little time for idleness. We are spiritually blessed and hope to be able at last to answer without fear concerning our stewardship.

Original Articles.

"AMERICANISM IN THE WHITE HOUSE."

TO SAY that I was astonished and pained to read the two-and-a-half column article under the above caption in Herald of December 25, is to put it mildly indeed. Why should one expect the organ of the Church of Jesus Christ,—the harbinger of peace, to join the minority of church papers and in such strong terms encourage and foster the spirit of war when there is no just cause for war.

I do not know who the author of the article is, nor does it matter. As it is written from the standpoint of an American citizen, as such I accept it; and as a British American citizen I reply to it, claiming the same right that my brother has taken as to space in the Herald, as I understand the Herald to be the property of the church to which I belong. He says:—

We do not know the merits of the contest between Great Britain and the Republic of Venezuela, etc.

Nevertheless he says he hails with pleasure the position the President has taken in the matter, which is in the judgment of thousands of good United States citizens both meddling and warlike. And further:—

We are pleased to know that Congress has responded cheerfully and patriotically to the request of President Cleveland in the existing emergency, whereas no emergency which should concern the United States government existed until Mr. Cleveland unfortunately created one. However, the article is quite in keeping with the circumstances existing in this regard.

The very fact of a commission being appointed is evidence that Congress does not yet know but what England is all right as to her boundary lines. Then why such haste to stir up bad blood between two friendly nations, unless upon the basis of divine experimenting, which by the way meets but a ghostly indorsement by the divinity as represented even in the pulpits of the United States, and in my judgment smacks very strongly of misguided humanity.

As a provincialist I am ready to learn and indorse improvements in government, and in fact my sympathies have been strongly Republican; but what becomes of our confidence in the "divine experiment" when one man plunges two civilized nations whose ends and aims are one, in blood and carnage without cause? Alas! we find ourselves Britishers still, and in case the "possible war" becomes an actual fact what blood is to flow from my veins will flow on British soil; and such articles as referred to inspire one with the desire of running the chances of the loss of a few gallons.

He says his article is not written in the interests of partisanship. I can comprehend that when the inclosed clipping from the New York World (another American citizen) is published in connection with this, also a short editorial from a Nova Scotia paper, in the Herald.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have no doubt that the large majority of the members of the church will strongly object to the publishing of those articles but surely none can question the justice of publishing this one since the other has gone to the public.

I am yours to command in ecclesiastical matters, but in matters of "possible war" I belong to my country.

HOLMES J. DAVISON.

Are our "peace and safety as a nation," the "integrity of our free institutions" and "the tranquil maintenance of our distinctive form of government" threatened by an extension, however unwarranted and arbitrary, of the English possessions in Venezuela? The preposterous nature of this jingo bugaboo is sufficiently indicated by pointing to Canada and to British Columbia, on our very border. England is not a "foreign nation" in this hemisphere. Great Britain owns more territory on this continent than we do. She was here before we were a nation. If she had the hostile intentions which the President's words impute did she need to wait for a boundary dispute in distant Venezuela, with a hybrid race, to assail us or to be a menace to our republican institutions? The assumption is absurd. And with it falls the structure of ponderously patriotic rhetoric reared upon it by the President. It is a grave blunder to put this government in the attitude of threatening war unless we mean it and are prepared for it and can hopefully appeal to the sympathies of the civilized world in making it. Do these conditions exist? Will any of the senators who applauded the President's message yesterday seriously affirm that they do? If these conditions do not exist, what remains for us except a few weeks or months of bluster and a more or less graceful backdown?—New York World.

There is little change in the status of the dispute between Great Britain and the United States since our last issue. The United States Congress passed the bill through both houses authorizing and providing for the expenses of a commission to determine for themselves who is right or who is wrong in the matter. This action on the part of the United States will of course be entirely ignored by the government of Great Britain. The commission may sit at Washington or elsewhere on foreign territory and report when it gets ready; and after true American fashion proceed to have a good time out of the hundred thousand dollar appropriation at its disposal, and John Bull will keep right along the even tenor of his ways. Should the commission set foot upon disputed territory—well, it will take care to do nothing of the kind, so what's the use of reciting the consequences. Meanwhile President Cleveland is catching "Hail Columbia" at the hands of his own countrymen. The false attitude in which the United States have been placed by Mr. Cleveland's message has been more severely criticised, and more wholesale denunciation has been heaped upon his head, by Americans than by any other people. There will be no danger of war until the commission reports, and the commission will not report as long as the hundred thousand dollars hold out; by that time the grass will be green again at least. Some of the Yankee papers profess to believe that in the event of war the United States will find sympathy among Canadians. The quicker they can be disabused of that notion the better. Should a regiment of the mongrel nationalities from which the American army would be recruited ever attempt to set foot on Canadian soil they would enjoy a surprise party as compared with which the historic Boston tea party would not be a circumstance. — Kingsboro, Nova Scotia, Gazette.

The number of Baptists in Wales has increased during the past ten years 63,972. The total membership in the principality is now 100,534, with over 200,000 adherents and attendants at public service. These figures are based upon the report of the Secretary of the Baptist Union.

In the Argentine Republic, instead of fining a drunkard, they sentence him to sweep the streets for eight days, and a similar punishment exists in St. Petersburg. But the drunkard maker goes scott free.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Decatur district association will meet in convention at Lamoni, Iowa, Thursday, February 20, 1896, at ten a. m., continuing two days. Superintendents, your schools are entitled to one delegate for every ten or fraction thereof of your enrollment. Officers for the ensuing year are to be elected and delegates chosen to the General Convention. The date makes it convenient to attend convention and conference at one trip. Delegates and friends will be met at station and provided entertainment. Secretaries, please mail full reports of your schools for past year to the secretary, Elbert A. Smith, Lamoni, Iowa, at least two days before convention convenes. Program as prepared by the committee is as follows:—

Thursday morning and afternoon, business in charge of superintendent. Evening, song by congregation. Prayer. Music, solo. Address, Kate Weed. Quartet.

Friday morning, song. Prayer meeting led by superintendent; from ten to 10:30. Experiences in Sunday school work; from 10:30 to twelve. Afternoon, Song. Prayer. Ten-minute papers: How pride may hinder Sunday school work, Sr. Walker. Free discussion of paper. How we may promote spiritual growth in Sunday school work, Sr. Stebbins. Free discussion of paper. Evening, Song. Prayer. Orchestra; sacred music. Primary work. Orchestra; sacred music.

ELBERT A. SMITH, Sec.

Convention of the Northern Nebraska district Sunday school association will convene January 31, at 2:30 p. m. near Valley, Nebraska, with the Platte Valley branch. This is the first assembling since organization, and it is hoped that a full representation of all schools of the district by delegates may be present, as business of importance must be attended to.

J. F. MINTUN, Supt.

The Kewanee district Sunday school convention will convene at Kewanee, Illinois, on February 7 instead of the 14th, as I stated last week.

CLARA FRANCIS, Sec.

Resolved that the delegates of the Massachusetts district Sunday school association, be authorized to bring before the General Assembly the matter of amending the constitution in order to provide for ex officio members of association. Boston convention, January 11, 1896.

ORA V. HOLMES, Sec.

The date of the Exodus has been generally set down at 1320 B. C. Dr. B. Neteler, the Egyptologist, now declares that the date must be put back 130 years. He is largely influenced by some facts disclosed in the Telei-Amarna tablets, and he maintains that the reign of Menephtah, the supposed Pharaoh of the Exodus, ended about 1449, B. C. The real Biblical date places the Exodus 135 years before 1449, that is, 1584 B. C.

PETITION.

To the General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to be held at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6, 1896; Greeting:—Whereas the year 1896 is the semi-centennial of the expulsion of the Latter Day Saints from the State of Illinois; and the lapse of time, the Spirit of the Lord, and the right living of the remnant—who did not follow the pernicious ways and heresies of those who went to the "Salt Land,"—has so ameliorated the spirit of prejudice and softened the asperities of persecution that the Reorganized Church is invited to hold a reunion at Nauvoo, and also at Montrose, Iowa,—the business men and citizens contributing liberally to secure the grounds for that purpose; thus showing the partial fulfillment of the prophetic statement, "the glory which shall follow after much tribulation, for after much tribulation cometh the blessing" (D. C. p. 176); and after the fulfillment of that prediction, "Ye shall be scourged from city to city, and from synagogue to synagogue, and few shall stand to receive an inheritance" (D. C. p. 189), also "I will get them honor where they have been put to shame;"—

And, whereas, the Nauvoo, Decatur, Eastern Iowa, Des Moines, Kewanee, and North-eastern Illinois districts have held a successful reunion at Bluff Park, Iowa (opposite Nauvoo), from September 6-16, 1895, and received sufficient encouragement to cause them to favor holding a reunion at or near one of these places in 1896;—

To this end your petitioners were appointed a committee and instructed to petition your honorable body to make or appoint a General Reunion of the church to be held with the above-named districts in the year 1896; at the time and place to be designated by the undersigned committee; or that you appoint a committee to act in conjunction with said committee to appoint time and select location.

Therefore we as a committee chosen at the business meeting of the Park Bluff reunion, September 13, 1895, J. R. Lambert and A. H. Smith presiding, respectfully ask that you take such action in the matter as in your judgment will best subserve the intent and purpose of this petition.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Galland's Grove district conference will convene at the Saints' chapel, Dow City, Iowa, Friday, February 28, 1896, at 10:30 a. m., continuing over Sunday. The district Sunday school association will hold their sessions in connection with the conference Saturday afternoon and evening as usual. Each branch is hereby requested to appoint delegates and send all credentials and reports to our district secretary, Sr. Nellie Rudd, Dow City, Iowa, in due time. A cordial invitation is extended to all and everybody will be made welcome.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH, Pres.

AUBURN, Iowa, January 14, 1896.

Decatur district conference will convene at Lamoni, Iowa, on Saturday, February 22, at ten a. m. A good representation of the district should be there, as considerable business of importance has to be transacted, among which will be the electing of district officers for the ensuing year, and delegates for the General Conference, and other work. Don't stay at home and leave others to do your part of the work and then wonder why the church does not accomplish more or move faster.

On the evening preceding the conference—February 21, at seven p. m., there will be a meeting of all the ministry, both local and missionaries, that can and will come for general and special instructions in regard to their duties as ministers and to consider the needs and demands of the work in this district. We expect that the First Presidency will be with us, as the work in this mission is under their charge.

WILLIAM ANDERSON, Pres.

LUCAS, Iowa, January 16.

BORN.

McHARNES.—At Leon, Iowa, October 9, 1895, to Bro. Edward and Sr. Ella McHarnes, a daughter; named Edith Agnes, and blessed January 6, 1896, by Elders H. A. Stebbins and J. M. Brown.

SEAWORTH.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 23, 1895, to Mr. William C. and Sr. Emma C. Seaworth, a son, and named William Edgar. Blessed January 5, 1896, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and Joseph Smith.

DIED.

BROLLIAR.—At Lamoni, Iowa, January 11, 1896, Sarah Broliar, who was born in Virginia some eighty years ago. Four sons, one daughter, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren survive her. The funeral sermon was by Elder Robert M. Elvin from 1 Corinthians 15: 21, 22. Brn. A. S. Cochran and Robert White assisted in the pulpit service. Interment in Rose Hill cemetery.

CASTER.—At his home in Bartlett, Iowa, January 7, 1896, Bro. Robert H. Caster, aged 57 years, 11 months, and 2 days. Bro. Caster was born in Sacket's Harbor, New York, February 5, 1838; emigrated to Utah in 1852; returned to Iowa in 1856; united in marriage to Miss O. E. Harrington, December 10, 1857; became identified with the Reorganized church in 1860; was ordained an elder by James Caffall February 14, 1876; has held various positions as branch officer, but for the last few years has not been actively engaged in church work on account of unfavorable circumstances and ill health. Through his union with Miss Harrington he was the father of nine children, eight of whom survive him, one having passed on before, those remaining being all identified with the church, and who mourn their loss in unison with a large circle of friends and relatives. Funeral at the house, January 8, 1896, in charge of C. L. Epperson; sermon by Priest H. F. Durfey, Job 14: 14.

BERGERSON.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, January 18, 1896, Norman E., child of Bro. Bant and Sr. Emma Bergerson, aged 26 days. The mother died on the 11th, and the child did not thrive without mother love and mother care, and so departed to be with her in the society of the blessed ones beyond. Sermon by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, on Sunday the 19th, assisted by Bro. J. A. Gunsolley.

HASKINS.—Elder Myron J. Haskins was born near Brockville, Kitley, Leeds County, Ontario, September 13, 1844; was baptized into the Reorganized Church, November 26, 1870, by Elder John Shippey; died at his home in Harrison County, Missouri, January 17, 1896; aged 51 years, 4 months, and 4 days. He leaves a wife, four sons, one daughter, and other relatives to mourn their loss. Funeral services conducted in the Saints' church, Lamoni, by Elders H. N. Snively and A. S. Cochran.

HEATH.—At his home at Porcupine, Wisconsin, Joseph Heath, Jr. He was born April 23, 1863, in the town of Fox, Clearfield County, Pennsylvania. He was baptized February 11, 1894, by Elder Charles H. Burr, and confirmed by Elder W. A. McDowell. He was afterwards ordained the teacher of the branch and held that position when he died; and though he was a single man, yet he was the friend of the fatherless, kindly and faithfully caring for the children of a widowed sister. Let us believe he has gone to his reward, and our loss is his gain.

ROBSON.—At Blake's Mills, Ohio, January 2, 1896, Bessie Robson, grandchild of Bro. Robert and our late sister Margaret Robson. Little Bessie was born at Washingtonville, Ohio, being 5 years, 11 months, and 3 days old at the time of her death. Funeral sermon by Elder L. W. Powell, from John 5: 17-31.

OTTO.—At Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, December 26, 1895, Jasper Otto. He was born in Franklin County, Ohio, March 8, 1845; came to Iowa when a child with his parents, and had lived nearly all his life where he died. Although a believer in the doctrine he had never united with the church. He leaves a wife and numerous other relatives to mourn his loss. Funeral services at his home conducted by Elder D. Hougas. In spite of the severe cold the attendance at the funeral was very large.

WHITLOCK.—In San Bernardino, California, December 25, 1895, Dr. Alma Whitlock. He was born in Independence, Missouri, December 24, 1831. Funeral services at his home by Elder D. L. Harris.

H. P. Curtis, School 7, South Flores Street, San Antonio, Texas.

A MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

This is a work by Elder Charles Derry, in which is set forth the order and nature of the Priesthood. The writer also defines the duties and prerogatives of all Church Officials, from the First Presidency to the Deacons inclusive. It is compiled from the Standard books of the church and the History of Joseph Smith as published in the Millennial Star. Indexed for ready reference, 132 pages, cloth bound, 25 cents.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

A small book—pamphlet size—3 x 4 1/2 inches, 20 pages, with a statement of the faith of the church, as given in the Epitome, with slight alterations. The Scripture texts adduced to support the various items of faith are printed in full, with chapters and verses. Faith in God; in Christ; Repentance; Baptism by Immersion; Laying on of Hands; Resurrection of the Body; Eternal Judgment; Authority and Ordination; Church Organization; Spiritual Gifts; the Marriage Question as believed by the Church, etc.; are each presented and supported by Scripture passages.

The reader is referred to the Herald Office for Catalogue if other church literature is desired.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon, the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

DECADENCE OF DOGMA.

AN eminent English divine recently declared that much of the weakness of modern Christianity comes from the general indifference to the intellectual aspects of Christian doctrine; that theology is dethroned from her position as queen of the sciences; that ministers are even applauded for attacking in the pulpit what they were ordained to preach; and that multitudes of church-going people are densely ignorant of the very rudiments of theology. "This utterance," says the New York Observer, "may sound like a jeremiad and be counted a pessimistic wail by many readers, but beyond any doubt there is a strong element of truth in it. The decadence of dogma in our generation is too significant to be overlooked by the careful student of the tendencies of the times." The writer continues:—

"How to account for this decadence is not so simple a matter as it appears at first to be. Part of the cause is to be found in the intensely practical spirit of our generation, which is apt to lessen the emphasis on dogma and strengthen the emphasis on conduct. Superficial thinkers are early led astray by the popular fallacy that it does not matter what a man believes if he only does right. Conduct is exalted to the supreme place, and creed is relegated to a very secondary position. The folly of such a course of procedure is apparent on reflection. How can a man know what is right and what he ought to do unless he has a well-defined belief concerning duty here and destiny hereafter?

"Another factor in the decadence of dogma is the place given to so-called practical preaching in the pulpits of the time. There seems to be an avoidance of great truths and a seeking after the little truths bound up in the lessons of current events, and philosophizing about the gospel instead of proclaiming the gospel in all its simplicity and fulness. The unpardonable sin in a sermon in our day is dullness, and a desire to be interesting is a will-of-the-wisp which leads many a minister into the marshes of theological decadence. Under the influence of a morbid dread of being commonplace and of a juvenile passion for originality, men avoid the great highways of Christian thought and wander off into by-paths which, however pleasant, do not lead into the secret place of the Most High. Fuller experience of life and keener realization of the sacred urgency of the message intrusted to their care must teach such ministers that they are deliberately excluding themselves from the subjects which in all ages have exerted the profoundest influence on the moral and spiritual life of mankind. If any permanent effect is to be produced by preaching, there must be the vigorous and frequent attempt to put before the people the great truths of the Christian faith in their native dignity and power.

"'Like pastor, like people,' says the old adage. It holds true in the matter under discussion. There was a time when two or three men could not meet by the fireside or on the wayside without reasoning high

'Of Providence, foreknowledge, will, and fate, Fixed fate, free-will, foreknowledge absolute. That time has passed away, and discussions range on the lower levels of gossip, politics; and the questions of the hour. With its passing there has gone out of the Christian life of our generation a solidity of thought and strength of conduct for which our fathers were famous. A revival of dogma would, we believe, do much to bring both back, and restore to many a pulpit a large measure of its waning power."—Literary Digest.

SIGNS OF A RETURN TO FAITH.

THERE runs through the religious literature of the present day a bright thread of hope in opposition to the negative tendencies which have been characterized by the term "agnostic." Prof. A. C. Armstrong, writing for the Methodist Review (January), points out that on the continent and in Britain a striking series of deliverances by various leaders of opinion has within a year past given rise to the belief that the era of doubt is drawing toward its close. He notes that in France M. Brunetière has used his visit to the Vatican as a text from which to preach the bankruptcy of science as a guide for life; that in England Mr. Huxley's lecture of 1893, on "Evolution and Ethics," which culminated in the thesis that the cosmical process and the ethical process stand in direct antagonism, had not ceased to be a center of debate when three notable books appeared, each of which in turn brought evidence of a new movement in the direction of philosophical or religious faith. He cites Mr. Kidd's "Social Evolution," Mr. Balfour's "Foundations of Belief," and the posthumous "Thoughts on Religion" of Professor Romanes, the latter being held to "show that before his death that he had returned to the enjoyment of theistic and Christian belief." Professor Armstrong then says:—

"Not less remarkable than the appearance of these works has been the reception which they have met. The eagerness of the public to hail them as signs of a return to faith has proved how deep the faith still strikes its roots in the heart of the Western world, and has revealed the tension under which many earnest minds have suffered; but it has also shown how greatly the age has misconceived the nature of the forces at work in its midst. For, like the man who counts his own burden heavier than that of any other of his kind, we have been so blinded by our doubts and difficulties that it has been easy to fear our age was to be marked by the final dissolution of fixed beliefs. Friends and foes of systematic thinking have combined, the ones to dread, the others to hope, that the perplexities of thought which the last half century has brought were so grave that no way of escape could possibly be discovered. Thus we have overlooked the fact that our troublous time is not unique in the history of the world. Proud of our enlightenment, we have committed the unenlightened blunder of taking our own experiences too seriously, in forgetfulness of the truth that the world has seen several such skeptical periods in the past—the age of the Sophists in Greece, the transition from medieval to modern times, and the eighteenth century in Europe, to name no others; that these various eras exhibit a family likeness; and that one characteristic point of resemblance among them is the law of action and reaction, under which the skeptical movement works out its own dissolution until the period of doubt gives place at length to one of more positive belief.”

Professor Armstrong says that the tokens of change in the temper of the age have not been confined to the year just ended, or to any country, or to any single department of thought. He asserts that “philosophy has revived as men have felt anew the perennial impulse to seek answers for the great questions of existence,” and that there is a marked recovery from the decline of a generation ago. We quote again:—

“In the matter of religion it may be noted that, like philosophy and morals, theology is not without its tendencies of reaction toward more conservative theories, as well as those ‘advanced’ or ‘liberal’ movements which have formed so prominent a feature in recent theological opinion. For, if questions of criticism now stand in the forefront of theological discussions, and if the Old Testament records seem in danger from a disintegrating attack, which must radically alter the view hitherto taken of them by the Christian world, it must be remembered that the New Testament writings, passing through the same fire of criticism, have been found to stand the test much more successfully than appeared possible in the early days of the controversy, and that, in regard to the older book as well, there are evident the beginnings of a movement to reconstruct, on the basis of critical results, more positive theories of the history and religion of Israel. Apart, too, from special questions of theology, there is observable in many quarters a new disposition to estimate religion at some real value. It may be too much to say, as it has recently been said, that there is to-day no scientist who reckons religion a delusion; but it is plain that both science and philosophy have retreated to a not inconsiderable degree from the negative, or even contemptuous, attitude assumed by some of their adherents in times little removed from the present.”

Professor Armstrong then goes into an examination of religious auxiliary questions, and closes by saying:—

“The troubles of the body social are forcing men to renewed consideration of ethical principles; but it is quite as evident that social questions have their important religious bearings as that they involve moral issues. Shall it be said, then, that the social problem is likely to generate a reaction toward faith? Probably anyone who should to-day maintain the affirmative of this question would encounter much ironical criticism; yet, if all the elements in the situation be taken into account, the suggestion is far from being unfounded. For, while religion in its general aspects is involved in the issue, Christianity stands in a special relation to it. The cures for social ills which have been so loudly heralded by certain parties in the church may indeed be of doubtful efficacy when tested by sober reason; but there is a striking kinship between the Christianity, doctrinal and applied, which is needed by the closing nineteenth century and that which proved so potent a force when the Christian religion was first fighting its way to recognition. There are few evidences of religion so convincing as religion in action, and so fast as Christianity proves itself able to grapple with the evils which beset society its renewed acceptance will be a direct corollary from the laws under which opinion normally develops.”—Literary Digest.

SIZE OF THE UNIVERSE.

“It has been estimated,” says W. H. Lamaster (Popular Astronomy, January), “that a cannon ball moving with a velocity of 500 miles an hour, and leaving our earth at a certain time and traveling in the direction of the nearest fixed star, would not reach it in less than 4,500,000 years; and yet there are stars in the heavens and visible through telescopes that would require a cannon ball moving with the same velocity at least 500,000,000 years to reach them. It was said by the elder Herschell that it would require light traveling at the rate of 185,000 miles a second two millions of years to come to the earth from the remotest luminous vapors within reach of his forty-foot telescope, and yet, whatever may have been the efforts of astronomers to bring the starry heavens as a whole into view, even with the most powerful reflectors, they have so far proved to be futile. Hence, to the minds of men, the universe must seem forever to be and to remain immeasurable, incalculable, and incomprehensible. And while we may be able to weigh and measure suns and systems within range of our telescopes, there are others so far away and so far beyond our powers of vision, and our powers of calculation, that even our present supposed great knowledge of the sidereal heavens would dwindle into the thinnest of mental vapories.”—Ex.

Electric-lighting has made numerous contributions to sanitation. Dr. Saunders, medical officer of the London Board of Health, says that it has done much toward making the employees of commercial and manufacturing establishments healthier. “Faces that were pale and wan from work in gas-lighted basements, stores, and shops are much improved since the introduction of electricity. The heat from the gas-jets and poor ventilation are responsible for much sickness. It is also shown that in the same city the electric light has lessened crime. Darkness breeds wickedness and light dispels it.”

The Journal of Inebriety estimates the total number of drunkards in America at 1,600,000. There being about twenty-five millions of adults in this country, this means that one person out of every fifteen drinks to excess, and is consequently more or less of a drunkard. The journal thinks that this estimate is a very modest one and rather under the mark than above it.

BIERBOWER OR SNOW, WHICH?

THE following is from the Deseret Evening News of January 13, 1895, and speaks for itself:—

BIERBOWER NOT A PROPHET.

The Lamoni Saints' Herald seeks to promote Vic Bierbower, formerly assistant United States Attorney here and now a prominent Idaho official, to the rank of a prophet. It says that on January 16, 1886, when Mr. Bierbower had asked a jury to convict Elder Lorenzo Snow of unlawful cohabitation upon the ground that if this was done a new revelation would soon follow "changing the divine law of celestial marriage," Elder Snow remarked that "whatever fame Mr. Bierbower may have secured as a lawyer he certainly will fail as a prophet." The Herald then indicates the alleged superiority of Mr. Bierbower's inspiration. Since the conviction was had, however, and the predicted change in the divine law of celestial marriage did not follow it, and has not taken place, Mr. Bierbower's prognostication is yet short of realization; hence his pretensions as prophet have proven baseless thus far. On the other hand, the prediction of his failure to foretell events with even a reasonable degree of accuracy is so notable in its fulfillment that there is no question as to whose was the superior inspiration. It was emphatically not Mr. Bierbower's.

It will be seen that the News herein denies that there has been any change in what it is pleased to call the "divine law of celestial marriage." Well, perhaps not; but if not, then the late declarations of the church in Utah regarding polygamy and celestial marriage are insincere. The government and the public generally have been led to believe by President Woodruff's manifesto, and the action of the church thereon, that there had been at least a practical change; and, pray tell us, what is a theory worth without practice? However, the HERALD did not "seek to promote Vic Bierbower," "to the rank of a prophet," only as compared to Lorenzo Snow, upon the given occasion. The News is content to simply deny that the predicted change followed. The result of the conviction of Lorenzo Snow and others on this so-called celestial law is too well known to the public to require any special discussion.

But what of the prediction of Lorenzo Snow? He not only predicted that Bierbower would fail, but he went further and predicted what would result to the opposers of this divine law so called. Will the News please tell us if the prediction of Mr. Snow was fulfilled wherein he says, "But the man, the people, the nation, that oppose and fight against this doctrine and the Church of God will be overthrown"? If not yet fulfilled, will the News please tell us if it expects it will be fulfilled, and this nation be overthrown because of its opposition to the doctrine of polygamy? If the News accepts the inspiration of Apostle Snow on this occasion, what means its recent boast of loyalty to the government of the United States?

THAT PROPHECY OF THE SEER CONCERNING THE SETTLEMENT OF THE SAINTS IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

EVER since the Reorganized Church has been before the public our elders have been met with the statement that Joseph the Martyr prophesied that the "Saints would go to the Rocky Mountains, and there become a great and mighty people."

We could not say that he did not so prophesy, so our only course was neither to admit nor deny; but we could and did insist that wherever they were they should honor and obey the law of God.

The prophecy now comes out in the language of Anson Call, an honored official of the Utah Church, who claims to have a vivid recollection of it, and like every other fact that has come to light it sustains the position assumed by the Reorganization. In the history of "Northern Utah and Southern Idaho" by Tullidge is a sketch of the life of Anson Call. The historian relates that in July, 1843, he (Anson Call) was present at the installment of the Masonic Lodge of Rising Sun, in Montrose, Iowa, and that at that time Joseph delivered this wonderful prophecy. The historian then says:—

We will let Mr. Call describe this prophetic scene.

He then quotes from Mr. Call as follows:—

I had before seen him in a vision and now saw while he was talking his countenance change to white; not the deadly white of a bloodless face, but a living, brilliant white. He seemed absorbed in gazing at something at a great distance, and said, "I am gazing upon the valleys of those mountains." This was followed by a vivid description of the scenery of these mountains as I have since become acquainted with it. Pointing to Shadrach Roundy and others, he said: "There are some men here who shall do a great work in that land." Pointing to me he said: "There is Anson, he shall go and shall assist in building cities from one end of the country to the other, and you," rather extending the idea to all those he had spoken of, "shall perform as great a work as has been done by man, so that the nations of the earth shall be astonished and many of them will be gathered in that land and assist in building cities and temples, and Israel shall be made to rejoice."

It is impossible to represent in words this scene which is still vivid in my mind, of the grandeur of Joseph's appearance, his beautiful description of this land, and his wonderful prophetic utterances as they emanated from the glorious inspiration that overshadowed him. There was a force and power in his exclamations of which the following is but a faint echo: "O, the beauty of those snow-capped mountains; the cool, refreshing streams that are running down those mountain gorges!" Then gazing in another direction as if there was a change of locality: "O the scenes that this people will pass through; the dead that will lie between here and there!" Then, turning in another direction, as if the scene had again changed; "O, the apostasy that will take place before my brethren reach that land!" But he continued: "The priesthood shall prevail over all its enemies, triumph over the Devil, and be established upon the earth no more to be thrown down." He then charged us with great force and power to be faithful in those things that had been and should be committed to our charge, with the promise of all the blessings that the priesthood could bestow. "Remember these things and treasure them up. Amen."

There is not a material fact in all this prophecy as related by Elder Call that the Reorganization has ever disputed. We believe they went to those valleys; that they performed a great work; that they astonished the nations of the earth (for evil as well as good); that many were gathered out of the nations to this land and assisted in building cities and temples. We even believe that they did and do rejoice. But there is not one word in the prediction to show that God would approve of them. God is not even mentioned in the connection. Ah yes! and we believe that sad story of the dead that lie between the here and there.

Nor have we ever lost confidence in the final triumph of the priesthood. We believe further, and have insisted, that a great apostasy took place before they reached that land, hence the necessity of a Reorganization. Our thanks are due Elder Call for allowing us to see the text of this oft-referred-to prophecy.

TIMELY VIRTUE IN JUDICIAL CIRCLES.

THE following taken from the Washington Star of December 27, 1895, sent us by Bro. W. W. Blair is suggestive. It is to be hoped that it is not a spasm of judicial virtue, but the inseting of a wave of needed reform in this good country of ours:—

"The time has arrived," remarked Judge Cole, in Criminal Court No. 1 this afternoon, "when the law against adultery and similar offenses must be enforced. It should have been enforced years ago, and I can no longer feel justified in imposing the minimum penalty."

Phillip Mills, an exhorter, and Elizabeth Davis, both colored people, had just been convicted before Judge Cole of adultery. Joseph Davis, the woman's husband, testifying that he caught them in bed together on three different occasions early last month. Policemen Williams and Creagh testified to finding them in bed together the 9th of last month. The defendants, of course, denied the charge, although they admitted being found in the room by the policemen. Mr. Samuel D. Truitt, counsel for the prisoners, asked the court to impose a light sentence, stating that Mills was a comparative stranger here. Mr. Truitt also thought that the living together of the man and woman for a few days had not injured the morals of the community to any great extent.

"I cannot agree with you, Mr. Truitt," interrupted Judge Cole. "These people had friends and acquaintances who were aware of what they were doing, and, besides, both of them, they say, were members of the church. Therefore, their acts could not but necessarily have an injurious effect. Then, again, a man who has no more manhood and conscience than to go with another man's wife is not deserving of any leniency."

"But, your honor," remarked Mr. Truitt, "there are six or seven thousand people in this district who are now openly doing what these people have been convicted of, and people higher in life than they are."

"No, I doubt that," Mr. Truitt," continued Judge Cole, "and if what you say is true, then it is time that the guilty ones, when convicted, should be severely punished. The present case is not one in which I can be lenient. The sentence of the court is that Mills shall be confined in the Albany penitentiary for the period of three years (the maximum penalty), and the woman for two years."

THE Columbus, Nebraska, Telegram of January 9 has a notice of Judge H. J. Hudson's retirement from the magisterial bench, in the terms given below:—

After sitting as a justice of the peace in the city of Columbus for four years, Judge Hudson to-day turned over his office to his successor, Lawyer O'Brien. In his time Judge Hudson has held many offices of trust in Platte County, he having been County Clerk, County Judge, and member of the legislature. In all of these places he served the people well. But in no office did he give more satisfaction than in that of a magistrate. Possessed of the rare faculty of discerning at a glance the law and the right in disputes between litigants, and being alike impregnable to the sophistry or bulldozing of lawyers, he rarely erred in the decision of cases brought before him, and his retirement from office will be generally regretted. The judge will continue to sit as police justice until May 1, 1896, when his term of that office expires.

THE REORGANIZED CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

THE special feature which this church makes in its successful work among Hawaiians is its particular attention to morality, and to abstinence from the use of tobacco and alcohol.

In carrying on the work here and elsewhere, valuable aid is being rendered by the women who have two organized societies in the church, the Sisters' Prayer Union which meets each Thursday afternoon, and the Daughters of Zion, who have taken as their motto, "Our aim, mankind to bless," and who are now organizing here.

These people have no connection with the Utah Church and have always been utterly opposed to polygamy, which practice is contrary to the teachings of the Bible and of their books.

Bro. G. J. Waller sends us a copy of The Time, of December 25, a thirty-two page magazine published by prominent women of Honolulu, Hawaii, from which we insert the foregoing. It speaks in behalf of the work in general and also tells what impression our people are making upon the residents of the Hawaiian capital. May the moral standing of the Saints in every place in which the work has been planted be an illustration of its possibilities for good; an illustration of divine citizenship. Every man and every woman however isolated may find comfort in being called to so live that others seeing his good works may learn that God reigns and rules in the lives of his children to enlighten and redeem the world.

When men are called unto mine everlasting gospel, and covenant with an everlasting covenant, they are accounted as the salt of the earth, and the savor of men.—D. C. 98: 5.

A BROTHER in Pennsylvania sends us a fragment of a copy of the Gospel Trumpet, Grand Junction, Michigan, for January 9, 1896.

The way to get an experience of salvation is to forsake all your sins. (Isaiah 55: 7.) Confess them to the Lord. (1 John 1: 9.) Repent and be baptized. (Acts 2: 38.) Repentance includes believing on the Lord Jesus Christ: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."—Acts 16: 31. A person cannot believe on the Lord for the salvation of the soul until there has been a repentance of all sins of the past. A person can get fully saved without being baptized but will then have to obey the command and be baptized. The way to keep saved, is to obey the word of God in all things.

Of this the brother asks, What about the doctrine taught? To this we reply:—

If a man can be fully saved without being baptized, then the Savior made a mistake when he said,

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.—Mark 16: 16.

The opposite of this is equally true: "He that believeth not shall be damned." In this elliptical sentence the words "and is not baptized," are understood as belonging between the words "not," and "shall," so that it would read, "He that believeth not (and is not baptized) shall be damned."

If baptism was not and is not an essential to be fully saved, then the Savior made another mistake in sending the disciples to baptize, thus imposing on them a wholly useless ordinance. (See Matthew 28: 19, 20; Mark 16: 15, 16.)

Paul also make a mistake when he was baptized. For, according to this peculiar doctrine he was fully saved when he reached Ananias; but was told to "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins." (Acts 22: 16.)

Peter, also, made a mistake when he said, "the like figure whereunto even baptism doth now save us." (1 Peter 3: 21.)

These are enough to show which is right—this preacher, or the word.

JOHN WESLEY, while at Oxford, received the following instructions from his mother. We republish them as worthy not only the consideration of young students in the present, but of all, old and young students in the school of life, presuming that all Latter Day Saints accept as true the statement that one is never too old to learn:—

Would you judge of the lawfulness or unlawfulness of pleasure, take this rule: Whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, or takes off your relish for spiritual things,—in short, which increases the strength and authority of your body over your mind,—that thing is sin to you, however innocent in itself.

"Self-preservation" is said to be the first law of nature. Self-control might well dispute the claim, or be granted equal right to it, for the lack of it has drowned more men and women and youth in destruction and perdition than has war or pestilence. Modern times have not outgrown the need for the advice given by good Mrs. Wesley. Her counsel is worth fixing in the mind.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. COLUMBUS SCOTT, Sandyville, Iowa, January 21:—

I came here last Saturday from near Winterset. I began a series of meetings the 5th inst. at a union church six miles east of Winterset. The result is a great awakening among the people of the community. Preached thirteen times to full houses. Never was treated more courteously by all, young and old, at any place. All seemed intensely hungering for the bread of life. I was endowed with great liberty and freedom of speech and mind from beginning to end. The people were nothing daunted by the gospel, the doctrine of Christ in its plainness. Am demonstrating the divinity of the promise, "They shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past."—D. C. 122:7. Bro. G. W. Johnson, of Des Moines, was instrumental in getting the opening there; also assisted in a number of the services. George is a good boy and stands by the work against all opposers he meets. Bro. Joseph Knox has procured the M. E. church here. We began here on Sunday evening, the 19th, to continue over Sunday, the 26th. Bro. Knox has held the banner at royal height here, and has won honor for the faith. Disciples and Methodists are strong here, but he has made no retreat. Bro. O. B. Thomas is remembered honorably with many; and for all this we are glad.

Mr. J. J. Johnson, of Hartington, Cedar County, Nebraska, his parents members of the church, writes:—

We have lived here over three years and have not heard or seen any Latter Day Saints. Would like some elders to come up here.

Children of Saints have become accustomed to having the faith mixed with all the phases of their lives—with work, conversation, and habit—and become hungry for it when denied the privilege of mingling with those who "know the truth." The religion of a true Saint permeates the man or woman and becomes a part of his life—his meat and drink. We can understand what scattered Saints and friends mean when they write of their hunger for church privileges and the society of brethren and sisters. What the faith does for the honest in heart proves that it is both divine in character and a perfectly natural response to the normal aspirations of mind and heart. It is but natural for true men and women to "hunger and thirst after righteousness." Thank God for the means provided whereby "they shall be filled."

Bro. I. A. Morris, Zenith, Illinois, January 18:—

I have been looking after the interests of the work in the Brush Creek branch, for the past few weeks. This is a very large branch in extent of territory. There had been a few Saints here from 1842, but on August 21, 1867, Bro. M. H. Forscutt more fully organized this branch. My father, N. A. Morris, was presiding elder at that time. In May, 1868, he resigned and the writer was elected to that position which I have filled to the best of my ability. It is only in fair condition, in some places good. Bishop G. H. Hilliard made us a visit in December and did good work, especially in Xenia, where a few Saints have fitted up a nice little hall and have Sunday school every Sunday with an invitation to all the traveling ministry to stop and preach for them. Bro. Hilliard came back again on the 10th and preached a few times, and left on the 14th for Kibbie, in company with Elder J. F. Henson, district president, to look after the interests of the work in that branch; and on the 17th was called back here. Bro. Hilliard remained and preached a few times, going then to Xenia over Sunday, thence home for a few days' rest, which he greatly needed. I have just closed a very successful meeting here; preached seven times and baptized one.

Bro. John H. Lake, writing from Waterford, Ontario, January 21:—

I came here yesterday from Clifton. Have held a number of meetings there with some interest. I commenced a series of meetings here last night; not many out. We hope for more. Meetings to continue over Sunday, the 26th. I then expect to go to St. Thomas for a short time; then on into the Chatham district to labor until time to go home to prepare for the General Conference. Reports from different parts of the mission tell of good being done and the onward move of the work. May God hasten his work and the Saints be ready to do their part and be worthy to enjoy the rest prepared for the pure and good.

Bro. W. R. Smith Carmi, Illinois, the 16th:—

In my letter to you I said there was a minister of the United Brethren out to hear me. He was of the "Social Brethren." I have tried to open other places but failed. The Campbellite friends said they were not afraid of me drawing the old ones away, but thought I might lead off some of the young ones; so they refused me their house. There are two more places where I can get openings here when their protracted meetings stop.

Bro. John Smith, New Bedford, Massachusetts, January 20:—

The Lord is still working with the people at Fall River. One young man was baptized January 5. Weather zero; the brethren cut a hole in the ice. There are still prospects of further success to the work there.

Bro. M. T. Short, Webb City, Missouri, January 20:—

I arrived here this forenoon from Standley, Indian Territory. Was there twenty days; preached twenty times; saw twenty baptized and assisted my brother Ellis in confirming them. I attended Sunday school, sacrament, and social meeting; confirmation, and prayer services; and heard my younger brother preach. We administered to the sick and blessed a few babies. To give you a bird's-eye view of the experience, anxiety, and labor of a missionary; I spoke nearly three hundred miles distant yesterday morning, baptized nine, laid hands on fifteen in the afternoon, preached in the evening, boarded a night train and rode twelve hours to be on hand for this evening's appointment. This is my old stamping ground and the scene of former toil. I am to return north in time for the Kewanee conference, but in the meantime will work all I can.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. IDA L. JONES, Canton, Illinois, writes, pleading that a word in season be given the tried and weary ones; that worldly pleasures that lead from God and his work be abstained from; and that opportunities for good be improved. It is significant that those who enter upon the work with a pure motive are moved upon by a desire to do good, and that that desire continues and increases, impelling to nobler purposes, higher ideals, and practical doing for good. The inspiration of the work is pure, exalting, true. No infidel philosopher; no unphilosophic opponent of the truth can explain away the self-evident truth of it. The faith is strictly rational and meets the practical wants of the race. It makes men and women good and true—self-helpers and helpful to others. It is a recreating, remaking, renewing power for good in the world. It is guaranteed to remove human miseries and exalt the race. The gospel "is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." It has never failed to do its work when its principles have been put into practice. All evils are traceable to violations of its provisions; all benefits to obedience unto them, all human experiences, past and present verify its claim to be a savor of life unto life when obeyed; that violations of it have sown the seeds of moral, physical, spiritual, national, and intellectual death. It originated in the mind of God; for that reason it is comprehensive, far-reaching, complete, and affects the universe entire.

Successful efforts bring a certain amount of commendation; sometimes of praise. Commendation of an effort may be proper, when necessary or wise to offer it, but personal praise may be very unsafe. It is true that good men and true will not be spoiled by flattery, but danger may result from its use. Strong men do not court flattery nor desire undue commendation. It is an evidence of weakness when men become susceptible to praise or flattery. The ablest worker has become such by the grace of God; and is able only by that grace. His ability in one direction—in preaching for instance—should be equalled by ability to be humble; and to keep the spirit of meekness; otherwise he is spiritually, mentally "unbalanced," and may become "top-heavy." True and strong men guard against and rise above suggestions of flattery and tendencies toward it. They labor for the good of the people and the glory of God, hence avoid unnecessarily attracting attention to themselves.

We have received a communication acknowledging receipt of contributions to the Burlington, Iowa, chapel through a system of chain letters. We omit publishing list of names in full.

The address of Sr. Royce, editor of the Sunday school department, is Mrs. J. H. Royce, Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan. Matter for publication in that department should be sent to her. Minutes and notices of district associations should be sent to the HERALD editors.

The death notice of last week of a brother at Bartlett, Iowa, should read Coster—not Caster.

We publish elsewhere in our columns a letter from a young man, a brother, who warns parents against evils to which young people of both sexes, especially young men, are subject, in these degenerate days. Some may be disposed to criticise the insertion of matter so plainly stated; but such should remember that while they may have no need of such warning, others have; and that it is a false modesty, equivalent to a grave neglect, in those who not only fail to warn their children, but also fail to keep such vigilant watchcare of them as to see that they are protected from the temptations of corrupted associates, or from possible personal inclinations. The subject need neither be made odious nor evaded. Evils do and will exist, and the wise father or mother is he who is watchful of the welfare of his children. The evils of licentiousness, intemperance, and kindred vices are strongly entrenched and need vigorous, heroic treatment to uproot and suppress them. They flourish under the gingerly policy of false modesty. A word to the wise is said to be sufficient. Men and women are commanded to "watch" as well as pray.

Card from Bro. M. T. Short, dated Standley, Indian Territory, the 15th inst., reports eight more baptized—twelve in all since his arrival there.

Bro. E. A. Erwin reports considerable sickness having prevailed in the vicinity and among the Saints of the Manchester, Texas, branch, which caused some to leave the country. He thinks that Saints who are doing well should stay where they are; that those who aid and stand by the work will be cared for, if faithful and energetic. Bro. A. B. Moore was in that region of country, laboring to build up the work.

Bro. A. Tabbut, of Pelican Lake, Minnesota, a brother who has long been afflicted and confined to his bed, writes of a vision in which he was shown that those who work diligently will have reward and a portion at the marriage supper, while some who make profession of faith will be disappointed because of failure to do duty. He exhorts all, officers and members, to do their full duty; especially that priests and teachers be diligent in looking after the people by encouraging them and by laboring to prevent causes of division; that all be careful that the inspiration by which they speak be of God.

The best field for the operations of spirituality is among the activities of life; in trade, in the professions, in all departments of business. By applying the principles of his faith in his dealings with fellow man the disciple does his part in leavening society, and thus bears witness to the truth. The lawfulness or unlawfulness of a thing may safely be judged and accepted or rejected by the spirit of the gospel. It is designed, not to separate man from normal human activities, but to govern him in the right conduct of the affairs of business and of work.

Bro. C. M. Fulks reports himself as doing what he can for the work at and around his home, Lehigh, Indian Territory.

Brn. William Anderson and J. S. Snively have been doing missionary work of late at Hiteman and other points in the Decatur district. Brn. F. M. Weld and A. D. Greer, laboring in the Nauvoo district, will be joined by Bro. Snively, who is to labor in that field for a time.

No definite news has yet reached us concerning the Temple Lot suit appeal case. Telegraphic items report entry on the Supreme Court list.

Bishop E. L. Kelley returned from Washington on Saturday the 25th inst.

Our brother, Bishop E. L. Kelley, was lately admitted as a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, and is entitled to practice in this high court of the realm. It is a proper recognition of his worth as a man and a lawyer. We are pleased to note the fact of such admission.

A bill has been introduced in the House of Representatives providing for the restoration of property to the Utah Church—that portion of its property that Congress had formerly placed in the hands of a receiver.

Bro. W. W. Blair was at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, January 24 to 26, (over Sunday) and would go thence to Wheeling for a few days.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

THE United States Supreme Court has denied the petition of the Reorganized Church for a rehearing of the Temple Lot suit on appeal, as indicated by the following telegram to Bishop E. L. Kelley from the clerk of the Supreme Court:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 27, 1896.

E. L. Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa:—Petition for certiorari in the church case denied.

JAMES H. MCKENNEY.

A curious harvest-festival was held at the fishermen's chapel, Folkstone, England, recently. In addition to the usual decorations there was a supply of fresh fish. The preacher pointed out that the "harvest of the sea" was as deserving of notice as that of the land.

READING FOR THE FEBRUARY MEETING OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION LOCALS.

"THE childhood of to-day is the nation and the church" of to-morrow. Can there be more important work than its care and culture, physical, intellectual, and spiritual?

Let this thought be discussed.

THE CHILD'S BODY.

It is not our purpose here and at this time to enter upon the discussion of this subject. Not because of its want of importance, but just the opposite. It is too important, too weighty to be discussed and dismissed in a single reading. Hence it seems best to simply mention a few points upon which each one shall obtain all the information possible before the next meeting, when the leader of the meeting shall bring them up one by one for discussion.

Remember that our bodies are not only "fearfully and wonderfully made," but they are given to the soul as its only means of communication with the outer world. No human mechanism was ever half so wonderful, half so beautiful. This body with all its delicate and complicated mechanism is God's first, best gift to the child, and with all its possibilities is intrusted to the care of father and mother, and evil must result both to them and the child if they are not true to the trust. Nature's laws once broken she will exact the penalty and no one can escape her demands.

Sensation first reaches the soul through the medium of the skin.

How many coats or layers compose the skin?

What is the office of these?

How must the skin be protected in order to insure the health of the child?

At what season of the year is this even covering most neglected?

How may the young child be injured in other ways than by improper clothing?

After weaning, what is the proper food of a healthy child?

To these very brief questions it is hoped many others will be added and be fully discussed at the various meetings in March. Let each sister having charge of a meeting post herself fully upon this subject. Now that physiology is so generally taught in our schools it will not be a difficult matter to obtain this information, and doubtless many are already in possession of it "In the throbbing young heart of your child is folded up tendencies, appetites, passions which are to mark all the future life for good or ill. Repressing the evil, developing the good,—repressing the good, developing the evil,—the one or the other you are doing continually, thoughtlessly it may be, perhaps unconsciously—yet which you do may decide the weal or woe of an immortal soul throughout eternity."

SELFISHNESS.

"Encouraging love for others, bringing it into exercise by training him from babyhood to share his good things with those around him is the best way to lead a child out of selfishness. It is mistaken kindness to refuse the gift of a child as he offers to share with you his candy, his food, his toys. Take what he offers you and show him that you appreciate his gift and the spirit which prompts it. Your approbation gives him pleasure, and thus linking with it self-denial, you foster the growth of a generous spirit."

SELF-WILL.

"Self-will is another perverted expression of the feeling of personality. It is aroused when something crosses the child's will and by unthinking parents is condemned in toto. They seem to think that 'breaking a child's will' is the beginning, and end of all government. A man with a broken will is about as profitless as a man with a broken back; what he needs is a strong will rightly directed. The great lack of the world to-day is moral backbone: who shall say that this lack has 'no connection with the mistaken theory of will-breaking? The training which is to produce men and women of moral backbone, or of moral weakness, commences in the cradle, when self-will is first aroused in the infant. He wants something—wills to have it and intends to get it if screaming, his only means of making his wants known, will procure it."

Let this point be fully discussed and let each one leave the meeting with a firm conviction in regard to this matter; namely, when should the child have his wishes granted—when should they be gently but firmly refused.

"Froebel lays down the following general rules: 'Satisfy the child's demands as much as possible. Be wisely indulgent; allow a child (so far as it can be done without injury) to teach itself by its own experience.' It is not difficult to make children obedient if parents begin aright, and begin early enough, before selfish impulses and passions are aroused. Indeed it is only in very early childhood that a firm foundation for true obedience can be laid. The little one believes in his parents fully,—as we have seen, and we speak it reverently,—they are to him God manifest in the flesh. If this trust is never betrayed, if they continue to be inspired with a sense that they desire nothing but his welfare and happiness, he will obey them not only instinctively but lovingly. It is only by patience and love that animals can be trained; much more is this true of children and there is no deceiving them in regard to that love."

LOVE OF APPROBATION.

"This is a sentiment early developed and upon the right or wrong guidance of this instinct depends its development into proper love and reverence on the one hand, or into vanity and ambition on the other. If we show approbation of all those things which are good in the child, and disapprobation for all that tends to evil (even those things which sometimes look 'so cunning' in a baby), we are day by day marking in the child's mind a sharp distinction between right and wrong and are teaching him insensibly to seek the one and to shun the other.

"Social impulses show themselves very early." The child loves company and the companionship especially of those near his own age. This instinct is implanted by our heavenly Father and for the wisest of purposes. But herein lies danger to the child as well as pleasure.

After this phase of child-life is discussed if time permits, let the influence of playthings upon him receive attention, also the influence of a mother's songs or lullabies.

NEW WASHINGTON, Ohio, Jan. 22.

Editors Herald:—Since my return from Europe I have endeavored to labor as my circumstances would permit. During the month of December I occupied the rostrum in Wilber's Hall, Cleveland. I was greeted with fair-sized audiences; and what was still more gratifying, was the fact the Lord recognized our weak efforts by the presence of his Holy Spirit. The present outlook seems to indicate that much good will accrue to the church there, providing the proper effort is put forth. There is much credit due to Brn. E. Miller, Burgett, Gillespie, and Smith, for the faithful manner in which they have striven to keep the truth before the people. They have rented a large hall on Pearl Street at a great sacrifice. There are about twenty-five Saints there now; and a number who have been baptized there have moved away; hence it is that the labors and sacrifices of the brethren have not been in vain.

By urgent request I visited Blakes Mills branch, in company with Bro. Garrett. We found things rather complicated. It was the old-time and frequent story—somebody had said something about someone else, hence somebody was offended. This condition of things makes it very trying for branch, district, and missionary officials. How much better it would be for all concerned if the word of the Lord was observed as given to the church in 1873, which reads: "Let contentions and quarrellings among you cease. Sustain each other in peace, and ye shall be blessed with my Spirit, in comforting and strengthening you for my work."—D.C.117:13.

We have some noble Saints there, and I believe I am warranted in making the statement that there is not a place in the district where the prospect for an ingathering is brighter than there; and as a general rule the ministry experience excellent liberty in dispensing the word. Bro. Cramer is president of the branch, and the Saints will do well to heed his counsels. Bro. Robson, the priest, has been passing through some very trying scenes of late, having lost his companion and a granddaughter. May the Lord bless and comfort him and all those who are called to mourn.

I preached one night at Goshen to a full house. Brn. Carlisle, Hinkle, and another brother (whose name I cannot remember just now) have fitted up a pleasant and commodious place of worship. The interest is very good. There are a sufficient number of members there to form a branch, but it did not seem expedient to effect an organization at that time. However, they enjoy some of the privileges of a branch. Be of good cheer, brethren, and keep the gospel chariot moving.

Arrived here on the 15th inst. and began operations the same night at the residence of Sr. J. A. Hamilton, formerly of Omaha, Nebraska, one mile out of town. Bro. W. H. Kelley opened up in the town last Sunday and had the use of the Church of God building. Since that time the members of the various denominations have concluded they have got enough of "Mormonism" and have closed their public buildings against us. But there is an effort being put forth by some of the "Church of God" people, who seem interested in our preaching, to have their house opened again to us. Still I fear we may be disappointed in this as in many other things. In view of unfavorable conditions of the roads, inclemencies of weather, and other things, we have been blessed with fair-sized audiences. Have felt while sowing the seed, that in the Lord's own time, the seed thus sown would bring forth precious fruit. Sr. Hamilton seems very patient, hopeful and encouraged. Her hospitality is well known to many of the ministry and others of God's people. We pray our heavenly Father to cheer and comfort her heart in her loneliness, and to make her a power for good.

I am announced for Ashmont the fore part of next month, where I shall hold a series of meetings. Yours hopefully,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

STANDLEY, I. T., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—I came into this, the Choctaw Nation, the 31st ultimo. I have spoken here as many times already as there are days in this present current year. The attendance, in proportion to the population, is simply immense, and the attention and deportment are first class.

I attended sacrament meeting the 5th instant, heard Ellis Short preach yesterday; baptized four after the forenoon services; conducted confirmation and social meeting in the afternoon, and talked in the evening to a large house. Several more are talking of uniting with the church; many are friendly to the cause, the Saints are rejoicing to see others added to their numbers, and unity and love prevail.

The Sunday school is getting on fairly well, and peace and prosperity; yea, growth and development, confirmation and blessings characterize this lumber camp.

The people here are in these parts mainly on account of my brother's mills; hence the major portion of them are in his employment. To hire the people, shelter and supply them, and then look after their spiritual needs, is a complicated task, indeed; but the Lord seems to fit my brother's back for that peculiar burden, as he is both principal and pastor. His men are mainly of southern birth, but some hail from the country north of Mason and Dixon's line. Their wants are few and simple in this mild, sunny climate. Amid these wild mountain sceneries that harbor the bear, deer, wild turkey, and other game, they do not have to pay a heavy tribute to fashion.

Their habitations are not elaborate; their fare is plain, but substantial in the main; their furniture is simple, but withal, they are remarkably friendly, sociable, and kind to all they come in contact with. These folks are more ready to believe and receive the gospel than many more wealthy and refined communities. The poisonous upas of orthodoxy has not the ruinous foothold among these rocky crags and pine-clad heights it has where caste and creed and style and pride abound. Considering their bringing up and environments, I do think many here far exceed in righteousness and truth the teeming millions with glorious birthrights, educational opportunities, moral and religious instruction, and advantageous surroundings.

My parents traveled life's highway together a full half century, and Mother dear still sojourns here. Father was praising and blessing God and admonishing and exhorting all to faithfulness and diligence, thirteen years ago last December, while the reaper—death—brandished his sickle and the pale ferryman was beckoning and bearing him across the turbid tide. May the Jordan of death be pleasing to behold, and the plash of the oar be music in our ears when the time comes to embark in the old ship for the wonderful voyage.

The sands of life are running through the hourglass of time, and unless translation and immortality claim us soon, all living will have to succumb to the inevitable and others will stand where we stood. The thing needful is to act well our part and acquit ourselves like men and then all will be well. Light and liberty are the rich heritages of all the divinely called ministry that magnify their office. The field of action and conquest is at hand, and heroes are wanted to beat down the foes, strike off the shackles, and set the captive free. The sound of celestial warriors may still be heard among the mulberry trees, while the armies of the Philistines defy the hosts of Israel's God. The lion has raised up from his lair, the leopard has left the thicket, the bruin has gone forth from his den, the behemoth or river horse is troubling the waters; the horns of the unicorn are pushing and the trumpet is sounding the tattoo of time and the reveille of eternity; therefore let the King's vanguard double quick and drive like Jehu.

M. T. SHORT.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 17.

Editors Herald:—I have recently closed a discussion with a Christian minister at Doren chapel, in Greene County, Missouri. The debate lasted seven days. We debated the church propositions four days and then for three days I affirmed that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and entitled to the belief and respect of all people who believe the Bible.

I visited my opponent on two different days before we began the discussion and had a friendly talk with him in regard to the debate. I tried to use no slang phrases in debate, believing such to be out of place on such occasions. I treated my opponent and his congregation with such kindness that we gained friends, and at the close of the discussion one young man was baptized. The Lord blessed me in this my great time of need so that I was enabled to answer the objections to our church and those urged against the Book of Mormon in such a way that the world were amazed and the few Saints edified.

Bro. Grey acted as my moderator, and I will say that his kindness to me as exhibited both by himself and family will long be remembered. Bro. Grey showed by his works that he was not only interested in my spiritual welfare, but also in my temporal necessities. Saints, let us all be kind to one another and to the world and show by our works that we are what we profess to be.

Your colaborer,

C. J. SPURLOCK.

GUSTON CENTER, Mich., Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—Two weeks ago I came to this place and began preaching in the Wilson schoolhouse. The director of the school gave the people to understand that he would neither come to hear nor allow us to preach there, so the schoolhouse is closed for the time being. I then received an invitation to come to the village; that they would open the town hall. Let me say that I am preaching every night in the hall to a crowded house. People are coming for miles to hear the new doctrine.

I often wish I could have some help up in this part, as there are so many calls for preaching. I go to-morrow to Greenbush to preach the funeral sermon of our beloved sister, Sarah Grantham, who has been a cripple for years, but has at last passed away. She was a noble Saint and a good mother. May God bless those called to mourn.

I never felt better in the work.

Yours in the faith,

DAVID SMITH.

STANDLEY, I. T., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—Elder M. T. Short closed a series of meetings Sunday, the 19th, that began New Year's night. He preached twenty-two sermons and Bro. Ellis Short preached one. The house was crowded to overflowing at every meeting and the meetings were in every respect a decided success. Outsiders as well as Saints were held enraptured for an hour each night, and many expressed themselves as follows: "I could have listened for hours to a sermon like that." Twenty were baptized during the meetings, all adults but four. There are now eighty-one names on the branch record.

Four years ago when Bro. James Gillen came here, the only Saints in Standley were Bro. and Sr. W. R. Pickering, now of Springfield, Missouri, Bro. and Sr. Ellis Short, Grandma Short, and myself. Bro. Gillen told us that a great work would be accomplished here and while with us he baptized three.

Our next elder was my father, S. V. Bailey, of Lamoni, Iowa. He baptized two, and his work was followed by that of J. D. Erwin, who baptized quite a number. Since then Brn. Heman Smith, John Moore, George Montague, A. C. Hart, and H. H. Robinson have been with us, and each did good work.

The growth and development of the branch since its first inception has been almost phenomenal. The Pauls have planted, the Apolloses have watered, but God has given "the increase." We have a Book of Mormon meeting every Wednesday evening, Sunday school and prayer meeting Sundays, and Sunday nights my brother-in-law, Ellis Short, and brother, E. D. Bailey, preach for us.

It was with regrets that Saints and friends bade good-bye to Bro. M. T. on Sunday night, but we were glad to see such a large number gathered into the kingdom. May they never look back. May we individually "come up higher" and be clothed upon with the divine nature and possess every excellence necessary to the child of God, that we may become more like him and be permitted to dwell with Christ when he "shall come in the glory of his Father, with his holy angels."

Your sister,

EVA M. BAILEY.

LEBECK, Mo., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—During our meetings recently held at Exeter, Barry County, Missouri, I met the man that I have been looking for a very long time. Since my early childhood I have heard the flimsy old yarn about Joseph Smith trying to walk the water. I have never been privileged to meet anyone who saw it himself, but usually heard that "my father" or "my uncle" saw these things.

Upon learning that the man who saw this lived in Exeter, we promptly called on him. He gave his name as Smith Clark. He is seventy-two years old, about six feet tall, and claims to have been a "powerful man" in his young days.

We requested him to give us the details of the affair. He said:—

"Yes, sir, gentlemen; I seed it," (laughing a dry, forced laugh,) "an' I aint a gon' a tell you no lie either; its a God's truth. Joe had benches, you know, fixed with legs in 'em—iron legs—an' had 'em just under the water fur enough so you couldent see 'em. He had on a pair of injun rubber boots that come up about here [indicating by gesture above the knee]. He walked along very nice til' he come to where one of the benches had been knocked down by a boat the night before, and right there his faith failed him and in he went."

"Could he swim?" we inquired.

"O they had yawls right there and took him out; but, then, he could a swum out anyhow; he was a good swimmer."

"How were the legs fastened in the benches," we asked.

"They were screwed on with a tap. The planks were two inches and a half thick."

"Were the benches all the way across the river?"

"Yes, clean across the Mississippi, right thar at Nauvoo."

As he seemed to be so well posted on the water-walking we questioned him on Joseph's assassination.

"Yes, I seed him killed."

His account of the killing did not agree with any published statement of it we had ever read. I will not attempt to give it, as I do not now remember his version of it well enough to write it. I was more taken with the part relating to the causes that led to the assassination. It was as follows:—

"Joe and Rigdon was out riding along in a spring wagon about ten miles from Nauvoo. They met some movers going from Indiana to Iowa. Driving along they came in contact with two young ladies, members of the company, who had fallen behind the wagons about a mile. They coaxed 'em to git in and ride so as to ketch up with the wagons. When they got 'em in the wagon they put whip for Nauvoo. Search was made for them, and Rigdon and Smith were found out and took to jail."

"Was Hyrum with them?" we asked.

"No, he was killed after that."

The above is a sample of what the old man knew of Joseph Smith, his life and death.

He continued to tell us of some of his individual experiences in life. Said he had been a great fist fighter in his day. Had had as many as six men coming at him at one time. Was so very active he could turn summersaults either backward or forward and kick a man in the face every time.

By this time we had about all the information we wanted, and insisted on taking our leave; but the old man was "wound up" and must run. We could hear him going yet when we got to the gate; don't know how long he continued.

He is a member in good standing in one of the churches at Exeter, and his knowledge of Mormonism will no doubt be transmitted to posterity with great care.

Braden ought to have this man's statement.

In bonds,

C. R. DUNCAN.

HORNERSTOWN, N. J., Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—I commenced a series of meetings here on the 8th. This place once was adorned with a Latter Day Saint church, but it was long since sold to the Catholics and the fair name of Zion became a thing of the past. Here Bro. Joseph the Seer and many others held aloft the banner of King Immanuel. The people here are an open-hearted class, generally speaking. By their assistance a room has been cleaned, seated, and stairway run, in which to hold meetings, as I was refused the use of the Baptist church by the pastor and trustees, who live in another town. The people here felt indignant over it, hence we are now independent.

A. H. PARSONS.

MALVERN, Iowa, Jan. 16.

Editors Herald:—Pardon me, for I have been a young man who has by no means lived a chaste, virtuous life, but the very opposite, in the early part of my youth and young manhood, but since I have accepted the gospel I feel a touch of something that moves me to a wish to warn others not to fall into the same snare in which I have fallen.

This may be for the fathers and mothers that may read it, and for the young who may be able to understand. I have been a young man that has gone in the way of the unchaste. My desire is to warn others not to become victims to pollution and vice and unchaste company. The Bible speaks of all of these evils to which the human race is subject, and as I have not seen very much warning in the Herald since last winter, I feel like writing this. I am getting along the best I can, afflicted as I am for these sins, and I intend to try to go on and to keep the word of God as best I can so long as I have control of myself.

I write this for the benefit of others and trust that Jesus' grace is sufficient for me, though doing this, as I before said, that others may be warned.

Print this if you choose. I wish you would write something for the Herald to guard the Saints. This may be insufficient.

GEORGE ELSON.

THURMAN, Iowa, Jan. 9.

Editors Herald:—There are many calls for the preaching of the word but few that seem willing to respond, though many like myself may be willing but are hindered.

I pray the time may soon come that those thus detained may be liberated and made to spend their time in the field. We need a young and willing elder to labor in this district. Our ministers spend so much time in the branches; they do not seem to get off the railroad in the rural districts. We need a man able and willing to take his book and satchel and strike out. He would not lack for places to preach in or stay. He might not be able to keep his shoes, collar, shirt bosom, and cuffs quite so shiny; but in the great settlement of accounts the stars in his crown might shine with equal brilliancy as if there had been no dust on his shoes.

Sometimes when I look at our elders I think that if they should come to a place where it would be necessary to shake the dust off their feet as a testimony against the people, they would have to kick pretty hard to make much of a showing. I commend the letter of Bro. Snow in Herald of January 1 to some of them for a careful reading.

A more careful study of the revelation of April, 1894, also an observance of the same, would be a great benefit to the work.

SOUTHWEST CITY, Mo., Jan. 18.

Editors Herald:—To-day finds me at the comfortable little home of Bro. and Sr. O. B. Miles, who show by their actions that they are glad to do anything in their power to make the life of the traveling elder pleasant. This old brother and sister seem to be enjoying good health.

I began a week's meeting at the Mann schoolhouse, four miles distant, in Arkansas, on the night of the 15th, and will continue over Sunday. The people filled the house every night and listen with marked attention. I feel very thankful that I was able by the help of the Master to remove prejudice and make some friends to the cause as I go along. It is true that the Heathen will rage once in awhile and imagine vain things, but it is my determination to fill these valleys and hills of Arkansas so full of the gospel sound that none shall have an excuse in the day of judgment and say, "We have not heard."

Although this section of Arkansas and Missouri is a new field, the outlook for the work is promising indeed. I baptized two noble people from Pryor Creek, Indian Territory, last Monday, Bro. and Sr. Neil. They came sixty miles to render obedience to the law of the Lord, and returned homeward rejoicing.

My home address is Maysville, Arkansas. I would be glad to hear from any of the Saints who live anywhere in Northwestern Arkansas or near the Arkansas line in Missouri, that I may visit their localities and open up the work as much as possible this winter. Yours till the battle is over,

T. J. SHEPPARD.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Dec. 18.

Editors Herald:—Five more have been baptized here of late since Wife and I returned over two months ago and the branch seems to be getting along fairly well. Bro. Wells is at New Castle helping the brethren to get the churchhouse finished for the coming conference, and preaching at every opportunity.

In about one week we go up there and at close of conference I will have a four nights' debate with Elder John Bell, of the Christadelphian Church; two nights on the kingdom of God, and two on the conscious state of the dead.

We are hopeful of having a good conference and of the future advance of the latter-day work in this far-off continent island of the sea. The work is of God and his divine power will move it onward and upward, and if the Saints humbly and faithfully "continue in his word" he will make them a power for good in accomplishing his "marvelous work and a wonder" of gathering his sheep, those who are willing to obey his voice, into the "one fold."

I rejoice in the thought of being one of God's "latter-day Israel," and trust I shall always be ready to make any sacrifice, within my power, to build up this great work. Dear brethren and sisters, live faithfully and do all in your power to advance the cause of truth, for Jesus will bring a rich reward with him for all the faithful Saints when he comes.

CARMI, Ill., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—Having received permission from Bro. T. C. Kelley, missionary in charge of Kentucky and Tennessee to labor in Southern Illinois, the rest of the conference year, I came into White County and began preaching at the Young schoolhouse, January 4, and preached three times there; thence about four miles north and preached three times in a private house; thence again to the schoolhouse and gave them four more sermons. They seem to be highly pleased with what we believe and I had many invitations to come again. It is the first of this kind they ever heard and it takes among the people. They have heard so much about the little blue-eyed boy and the little curly-haired girl dying and going to heaven and that big wicked Jim boy dying and going to the other place that they have become tired of such stuff and want to hear the gospel preached in its purity.

One old lady said I preached just what she had always believed and what she had long been wanting to hear. One minister of the United Brethren was out three times to hear me. He opened meetings by prayer and seemed pleased with the sermons. He said it was the truth and that it was according to the Bible. Fair crowds greeted us with moderately good order.

The last night after meeting was dismissed one young man bloodied another one with knuckles, or something of that kind. I aim to try to get more openings near here this week. If I fail, I will then go to Springerton, Illinois.

In bonds,

CHELSEA, I. T., Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—Prospects encourage us in almost every place we go. The interest around here, where I baptized two last fall, has in nowise slackened. Before leaving Ruby my impression that there is a gradual change in our favor in the minds of most of the people was still more confirmed. A young lady of more than ordinary intelligence, who has read one volume of Autumn Leaves and various books and papers, speaks very highly of them in answer to a reverend who said people should not permit our literature to come into their houses, that it was unworthy of notice, etc., she said: "It is the most respectable, high-toned, and elevating I have ever seen." We were told by others and not of our faith that she made a noble and lengthy defense of our books, papers, etc. She has taught in the city and several times there; and is a leader in church, school, and literary work, having superintended various departments. At her pleasant home they have had as many as fifteen papers, journals, etc., at a time. She writes for some works they already take and talks of writing for Autumn Leaves, which she now subscribes for, considering it the best magazine in existence. She seldom fails to preside at the organ and lead or assist in the services.

The post master and family of Lucas have gone several miles to different places to hear us. He is reading our works and has always cordially invited me to visit them. I stopped and spent an evening with them in fulfillment of promise and had a good preach. As I was purchasing stamps to send tracts to different parties he ordered his son to give me stamps free.

I visited various ones who several times had urged me to visit, but there were others I had to neglect. The teacher of the High Prairie school has some of our works and says we are the nearest right of any he has ever met, according to his understanding of the Bible. A professor near Welch has a Book of Mormon and may send for "What is Man?" He was highly pleased with the Inspired Translation and met or helped me to meet opposition to it.

If the work is followed up closely I am confident of an ingathering here as in other parts. I hope Bro. Hinkle or others will look after those interested near Paradise, Oklahoma. B. Tankerly will purchase an Inspired Translation. He is a senator, school-teacher, and man of intelligence, who seemed deeply interested, as did some others there. Our prayer is that God will remember them giving them light and courage. Noblets, friends of ours from Kansas, did all they could to add to our support and comfort and for the success of the meetings while we were there. They are strong believers in the work; and, by the way, I do not see what is to hinder them from visiting home folds May 22 next and attending the Spring River district conference at Angola, Kansas. I am sure all will be welcome there.

Yours for the great gospel work,
A. C. HART.

BE NOT ANGRY.

Angry words are lightly spoken,
In a rash and thoughtless hour;
Brightest links of life are broken
By their sad insidious power.

Hearts inspired by warmest feeling,
Ne'er before by anger stirred,
Oft are rent past human healing
By a single angry word.

Poison-drops of hurt and sorrow—
Bitter poison-drops are they;
Weaving for the coming morrow
Saddest mem'ries of to-day.

Angry words, O, let them never
From your tongue unbridled slip!
May the heart's best impulse ever
Check them, ere they soil your lip.

Then, when Zion's King shall rule us,
And on earth God's will be done,
Strife and discord will be vanished
And the sons of God be one.

THE SENDING OF THE ONLY BEGOTTEN SON TO THE WORLD.

GOD so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

Our powers of conception are too diminutive to grasp the depth of the meaning of those beautiful words. It is evident that the love that prompted the making of that stupendous sacrifice cannot be measured by human wisdom. That comparative adjective "so" contemplates everything outside of that love.

When we consider the condition in which Jesus must have existed before being clothed with mortality, it must occur to the mind as being a beautiful place; for Paul, in speaking of a similar condition, says:—

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.—1 Cor. 2:9.

Imagine, if possible, a place where circumstances are such as to render it impossible for sorrow to exist, where no tear shall ever bedim our eyes, and where such ecstatic joy exists in those bright fields of elysium that Paul pronounces it inexpressible. And then higher, grander, and brighter than this glory, Jesus, the brightest jewel of heaven, forsakes the glittering palaces of eternal felicity and comes down to our benighted condition and is made a partaker in the ills that mortality is heir to; and yet the magnitude of the love that prompted this action is so little realized by the world, and the stupendous gift is really appreciated by so few.

Then we consider his life; how he touched with a healing hand the fevered brow, opened the blind eyes, unstopped the deaf ears, cast out the evil spirit, loosed those that were bound with the chains of Satan, and proclaimed to the poor of earth the most glorious system of ethics the world has ever known; and in return for what he did for the good of humanity received only scoffs and abuses, and finally as the crowning scene of his mortal existence offered up his life as an atonement for the sin of the world. Surely:—

Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.—John 15:13.

Why did God suffer his Son to come to the world and endure all this? Because he so loved the world.

In consequence of the giving of Christ to the world there are certain duties incumbent on us. When the Father promised life everlasting to those who should believe in him, he evidently intended they should comprehend the object of his mission and comply with the conditions that attach to the promises. The Lord speaking to Moses says:—

I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.—Deut. 18:18, 19.

And again to Isaiah he says:—

Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people.—Isa. 55:4.

As a witness Jesus said:—

My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.—John 7:16.

And John, while on the Isle of Patmos calls him the "faithful witness." When Jesus said, "take up thy cross and follow me," it implied leadership. Jesus leads the way and bids the human family follow. Now if he was given as a "commander," what will he do? Why, he will command, and if he was given for a commander does it not necessarily follow that he was given to be obeyed? If this line of reasoning be followed to its legitimate conclusion, what of those who say we need not comply with certain principles that Jesus clearly taught? To say that Jesus taught a single principle not necessary for us to obey would, to my mind, be receiving him at a heavy discount. I believe Jesus is being wounded in the house of those who profess to be his friends, for there are many who are singing these beautiful lines:—

We have seen the light of Judah
Shine across the desert far;

We have come to worship Jesus

As the bright and morning star, who at the same time tell us that some of the principles that Latter Day Saints teach were all right in the days of the apostles; but they have become nonessential now. Was it not Jesus that said:—

Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3:5.

And was it not the Lord who said:—

Whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him?

Then if we shall say that principle has passed into a nonessential will not such words wound him as deeply as the nails that pierced his hands and feet? He must mean the same to me as he meant to the apostles of old; and if he has changed his philosophy for the salvation of men, how do I know that he will not change it again and then when I come to be judged by his words I will find I have obeyed the wrong plan? But no, very much unlike the creeds of men that are continually changing to suit the opinions of the pew-renters, his gospel is the "everlasting gospel." Who then will object if I couple the two scriptures together and have it read like this: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have ever lasting life"?

Clearly then we must believe him as the witness, follow him as the leader, and obey him as the commander.

JOHN B. ROUSH.

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.—NO. 3.

BY W. W. BLAIR.

In further proof that the Lord has in fulfillment of Bible promises, manifested by angel ministration, and also by direct and immediate revelation through the Holy Spirit to his people in this nineteenth century the fact, the imminence, and the character of Christ's second coming; also many remarkable events of world-wide notoriety and important principles leading up to that wonderful, glorious appearing; I submit the following texts which serve to identify and make sure "the times and the seasons" in which it will occur:—

Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful. For behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of your enemies; wherefore you shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built up on the earth.

Behold, this is wisdom in me; wherefore marvel not for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth, and with Moroni, whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fullness of my everlasting gospel; to whom I have committed the keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim; and also with Elias, to whom I have committed the keys of bringing to pass the restoration of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, concerning the last days; and also John the son of Zacharias, which Zacharias he (Elias) visited and gave promise that he should have a son, and his name should be John, and he should be filled with the spirit of Elias; which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jr., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron; and also Elijah, unto whom I have committed the keys of the power of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers, that the whole earth may not be smitten with a curse; and also, with Joseph, and Jacob, and Isaac, and Abraham, your fathers; by whom the promises remain; and also with Michael, or Adam, the father of all, the prince of all, the ancient of days.

And also with Peter, and James, and John, whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry; and of the same things which I revealed unto them; unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fullness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven and which are on earth; and also with all those whom my Father hath given me out of the world; wherefore lift up your hearts and rejoice, and gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all ye may be able to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, which I have sent mine angels to commit unto you, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of my Spirit, which I will pour out upon you, and my word which I reveal unto you, and be agreed as touching all things whatsoever ye ask of me, and be faithful until I come, and ye shall be caught up, that where I am ye shall be also. Amen.—D. C. 26: 1-3.

In the above text is seen who, as angels, had ministered in the things pertaining to the latter-day dispensation, the kingdom of God, and the second coming of Christ, up to September, 1830, defining and announcing the present century, the present time, as the one set forth in the Bible as the day of the coming of the Son of Man, the great and dreadful day of the Lord. In this text it is seen that Peter, James, and John, also John the Baptist, have ministered officially as angels of God. And why should this be thought incredible when we read in Revelation 22:9 that an angel said to John,

I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book?

Why should it be thought incredible when we read, as heretofore quoted, that God in the last days will send to his people "Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord"? Why should it be thought incredible when we read that Moses and Elias (or John the Baptist) were sent of God to minister to Christ in the sight of his disciples, as mentioned in Matthew 17:1-13, and elsewhere? Is it not reasonable, and scriptural, that in opening, organizing, and carrying on to its final, glorious consummation the latter-day dispensation, God will send as angels those leading ministers like Adam, Moses, Elijah, John the Baptist, Peter, James, and John, and many others, who held the keys of priesthood when on earth, and that they will officiate as "ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation," as taught by Paul in Hebrews 1:14? Yes, the Bible promises as much, and Joseph the Seer and the Latter Day Saints claim that these promises have been and are being literally fulfilled; and they are the only ones who have intelligently made this claim.

In relation to this matter of angel ministrations in these last days preceding Christ's second coming, Joseph the Seer said September 6, 1842:—

For it is necessary in the ushering in of the dispensation of the fullness of time; which dispensation is now beginning to usher in, that a whole, and complete, and perfect union, and welding together of dispensations, and keys, and powers, and glories should take place, and be revealed, from the days of Adam even to the present time; and not only this, but those things which never have been revealed from the foundation of the world, but have been kept hid from the wise and prudent, shall be revealed unto babes and sucklings in this the dispensation of the fullness of times.

Now, what do we hear in the gospel which we have received? "A voice of gladness! A voice of mercy from heaven; and a voice of truth out of the earth, glad tidings for the dead: a voice of gladness for the living and the dead; glad tidings of great joy; how beautiful on the mountains are the feet of those that bring glad tidings of good things; and that say unto Zion, behold, thy God reigneth. As the dews of Carmel, so shall the knowledge of God descend upon them."

And again, what do we hear? Glad tidings of Cumorah! Moroni, an angel from heaven, declaring the fulfillment of the prophets—the book to be revealed. A voice of the Lord in the wilderness of Fayette, Seneca county, declaring the three witnesses to bear record of the book. The voice of Michael on the banks of the Susquehanna, detecting the devil when he appeared as an angel of light. The voice of Peter, James and John, in the wilderness between Harmony, Susquehanna county, and Colesville, Broome county, on the Susquehanna river, declaring themselves as possessing the keys of the kingdom, and of the dispensation of the fullness of times.

And again, the voice of God in the chamber of old father Whitmer, in Fayette, Seneca county, and at sundry times, and in divers places, through all the travels and tribulations of this Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. And the voice of Michael, the archangel; the voice of Gabriel, and of Raphael, and of divers angels, from Michael or Adam, down to the present time, all declaring each one their dispensation, their rights, their keys, their honors, their majesty and glory, and the power of their priesthood; giving line upon line, precept upon precept; here a little and there a little—giving us consolation by holding forth that which is to come, confirming our hope.

Brethren, shall we not go on in so great a cause? Go forward and not backward. Courage, brethren; and on, on to the victory! Let your hearts rejoice, and be exceeding glad. Let the earth break forth into singing. Let the dead speak forth anthems of eternal praise to the King Immanuel, who hath ordained before the world was, that which would enable us to redeem them out of their prisons; for the prisoners shall go free.

Let the mountains shout for joy, and all ye valleys cry aloud; and all ye seas and dry lands tell the wonders of your eternal King. And ye rivers, and brooks, and rills, flow down with gladness. Let the woods, and all the trees of the field praise the Lord; and ye solid rocks weep for joy. And let the sun, moon, and the morning stars sing together, and let all the sons of God shout for joy. And let the eternal creations declare his name forever and ever. And again I say, how glorious is the voice we hear from heaven, proclaiming in our ears, glory, and salvation, and honor, and immortality, and eternal life; kingdoms, principalities, and powers.

Behold the great day of the Lord is at hand; and who can abide the day of his coming, and who can stand when he appeareth, for he is like a refiner's fire and like fuller's soap, and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver, and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Let us, therefore, as a church and a people, and as Latter-Day Saints, offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness, and let us present in his holy temple when it is finished, a book containing the records of our dead, which shall be worthy of all acceptation.—D. C. 110:18-24.

The foregoing items of fact, principle, and doctrine, are just such as we might expect from the numerous promises made in the Bible, heretofore quoted, concerning angel ministrations in "the days of the coming of the Son of man;" and yet the only people who claim these things as transpiring in this age and time are the Latter Day Saints, though the Bible is being scattered abroad among all nations with a liberal hand.

The Bible promises, in many places, that the Lord, in the last days, prior to the second coming of Christ and the end of the world, will reveal his word directly and immediately to his people then dwelling on the earth, giving needed warning, instruction, and essential information, as see the following:—

And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues. For her sins have reached unto heaven, and God hath remembered her iniquities. Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: in the cup which she hath filled, fill to her double. How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow. Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and she shall be utterly burned with fire: for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. . . . Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for God hath avenged you on her. And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all. And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee; and the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth; for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived. And in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth.—Rev. 18: 4-8, 20-24.

Here is another promise of a similar kind:—

And I will give power unto my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth. These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth. And if any man will hurt them, fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed. These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will. And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast that ascendeth out of the bottomless pit shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them. And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also our Lord was crucified. And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and a half, and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves. And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, and shall send gifts one to another; because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth. And after three days and a half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them. And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them. And the same hour was there a great earthquake, and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, and gave glory to the God of heaven. The second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly. And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever.—Rev. 11: 3-15.

And now I present proof incontestible that God has revealed his word directly in these latter days, warning, instructing, and confirming the Saints in respect to many important matters, identifying these as the days preceding and preparatory to the second coming of Christ our Lord, that they may be "the children of the light, and of the day," and be fully prepared for what was and is coming to pass before the end of the world—the wicked. Here is an important revelation, given December 25, 1832. It explains itself:—

Verily, thus saith the Lord, concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls. The days will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at that place: for behold, the Southern States shall be divided against the Northern States, and the Southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and thus war shall be poured out upon all nations.

And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their masters, who shall be marshalled and disciplined for war.

And it shall come to pass also, that the remnants who are left of the land will march themselves, and shall become exceeding angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation; and thus, with the sword, and by bloodshed, the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquakes, and the thunder of Heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations; that the cry of the Saints, and of the blood of the Saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth, to be avenged of their enemies.

Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen.—Copied from the "Pearl of Great Price," published at Liverpool, England, in 1851.

To the foregoing may be added the following revelation, pointing out events that will be to the people of God signs of the second advent:—

Behold, I sent you out to testify and warn the people, and it becometh every man who hath been warned, to warn his neighbor; therefore, they are left without excuse, and their sins are upon their own heads. He that seeketh me early shall find me, and shall not be forsaken.

Therefore, tarry ye, and labor diligently, that you may be perfected in your ministry, to go forth among the Gentiles for the last time, as many as the mouth of the Lord shall name, to bind up the law, and seal up the testimony, and to prepare the saints for the hour of judgment, which is to come; that their souls may escape the wrath of God, the desolation of abomination, which await the wicked, both in this world, and in the world to come. Verily, I say unto you, let those who are not the first elders, continue in the vineyard until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation.

Abide ye in the liberty wherewith ye are made free; entangle not yourselves in sin, but let your hands be clean, until the Lord come, for not many days hence and the earth shall tremble, and reel to and fro as a drunken man, and the sun shall hide his face, and shall refuse to give light, and the moon shall be bathed in blood, and the stars shall become exceeding angry, and shall cast themselves down as a fig that falleth from off a fig-tree.

And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion: and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people; and angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying, Prepare ye, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth, for the judgment of our God is come: behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.

And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together. And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, that great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood: she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the tares of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore, she is ready to be burned. And he shall sound his trump both long and loud, and all nations shall hear it.

And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled; and the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened, and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven: they are Christ's, the first fruits: they who shall descend with him first, and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him; and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God.—D. C. 85: 22-27.

FORGIVENESS AND REMISSION OF SINS.

WITHOUT gospel obedience there is no remission of sins, is a truth that demands acceptance without argument. Adam received forgiveness of his transgression in the garden of Eden, and knew that to keep the commandments he must be baptized for the remission of sins, having received this knowledge of God.

It is not recorded that the man whom Jesus forgave sin was commanded to be baptized, but it is true, he could never see the kingdom of heaven unless by water he obeyed the commandments. This man might have been baptized of John; if so, Jesus was his advocate and could, by virtue of his authority, pray the Father in heaven that his sins be remembered no more.

To the wicked servant whose actions are recorded in Matthew 28, the former sin returned, because of transgression, and his lord compelled him to pay the debt in full. If his lord had given a receipt when the debt was forgiven, payment could not have been justly demanded. Because the debt was forgiven on conditions, the lord did not give a receipt.

When the sins of men are forgiven because of their obedience to the commandments, the Lord gives unto them a receipt in full, and he will no more demand payment of them. No man ever received the promise of eternal life until his sins had been remitted by baptism and had hands laid upon his head for the gift of the Holy Ghost. This must be performed by those whom God has sent and ordained unto this power.

If any man says the Lord has given him the Holy Ghost after refusing to obey the commandments, he deceives himself. If he thinks his sins remain forgiven after refusing to be baptized in water for the remission of them, he deceives himself again and has no promise of life. If any doubt the truth of this, search the Scriptures, for they with the Spirit of God for a lamp, will reveal the truth and break error's chain.

JONAS H. DRURY.

LENGTH AND DEGREE OF PUNISHMENT.

TRUE, no one can fathom the depths of punishment that the wicked shall undergo after the judgment; but one thing we do know, that God created man for endless happiness, and that all the powers of darkness shall not frustrate the attributes of God and his redemption through the plan of salvation before the world was created. And that is the reason they are punished, because they rebel against that plan of salvation.

I believe that punishment is a good medicine. Then is the time when every knee shall bow and confess that Jesus is the Christ to the glory of the Father that the plan of salvation is accomplished to the human race, and all the creation of this universe. You ask if a man die without embracing the gospel, and suffers out his measure of punishment will he ever enjoy celestial happiness? Yes, he will; for God created him and redeemed him for happiness. But it must be through trials here or hereafter.

Now I make an end for this time on this subject, and wind up by saying, The end will be when the last farthing is paid. I would advise the writer when he quotes scripture to take scripture that has something to do with the subject. For there is not a passage that is taken, neither in the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Covenants that proves that man will be kept in endless punishment, although the evil power always was and will always be; for God always was and will always be.

THE DEACON'S WORK.

THE office of deacon is the lowest in the priesthood although by no means the least important. Paul informs Timothy thus:—

They that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.—1 Tim. 3:13.

It is a duty of this office to "feed the flock of God;" to feed them not with bread that perisheth, but "by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God, with heavenly bread that if we eat we shall never hunger, and like the prodigal in the father's house we shall find bread enough and to spare."

The deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church.—D. C. 83:22.

The deacons and teachers not needed as "standing ministers" should be sent by the higher authorities of the church, "to make appointments, and to prepare the way, and to fill appointments" that the elders make and "are not able to fill." (D. C. 83:20.)

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

NOT IN CONTRAST.

KINDLY permit space that I may place myself in a proper light before your readers, in reference to an article written by me in Herald No. 52, December 25, 1895, entitled "True and false manifestations."

In an article in Herald No. 2, January 8, 1896, the writer says that "comparisons are odious," and proceeds to compare notes; and finally concluding that there is a contrast between George Derry and Moroni, he places them side by side. He kindly informs me that I should not judge lest I be judged; that the measure I mete shall be measured to me again.

Higher authority than the brother has given me the right to exercise "righteous judgment" pertaining to every act and every principle that I come in contact with. And if the brother had studied Moroni more closely in that chapter 7, verses 11, 12, and 13, he would have found that I was in harmony with Moroni. I am highly pleased to be placed side by side with so illustrious and reliable a personage as Moroni; and am pleased with the assurance that there is no contrast or conflict in regard to what is good as stated in my article and what is taught by Moroni as the word of God.

To illustrate more fully my idea of good, and what may safely be accepted as good, I refer the reader to Book of Moroni 7:9; also chapter 10, verse 5, large edition.

And whatsoever thing is good, is just and true.—Chap. 10:5.

The reverse of that is, what is not just and true is not good;—is not good for the life that now is, nor for that which is to come. The elders have been preaching the apostasy from the primitive order of the church for the last sixty years, and I suppose the brother has been as loud as anyone. Moroni says:—

And now I speak unto all the ends of the earth, that if the day cometh that the power and gifts of God shall be done away among you, it shall be because of unbelief. And woe be unto the children of men, if this be the case; for there shall be none that doeth good among you; no, not one. For if there be one among you that doeth good, he shall work by the power and gifts of God.—Ibid. 10:16-18.

The reverse of that is, Whosoever of whatever name or calling, that does not work by the power and gift of God, professing to teach the plan of salvation, is a fraud and a deceiver. Where does the contrast exist? No-where, except in unrighteous judgment.

The gospel as revealed by Jesus Christ and taught in his day, and as renewed and taught in our day, is said to be "good news;" good because it comes from God; good because of its effects and consequences to man. Man's highest aim and ambition should be to become just and true that he may become good. We know of nothing this side of the pearly gates that will qualify man to enter and become a citizen unless he has this inherent goodness produced in his life and character by obedience to the gospel.

One reason I wrote as I did was because I believed as Moroni did. I have become fully satisfied that man's motives must be just and true that they may produce good. I am also aware that a man may preach and pray and exercise whatever gift he may, unless it is done with real intent from good and true natures, it is not acceptable to God. And, dear reader, if you will study well the writings of Moroni, you will find no conflict or hurtful contrast with my article.

THE PARABLE OF THE SHEEPFOLD.

VERILY, verily I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.—John 10:1.

This verse is used sometimes by members of the ministry and laity of the church to convince individuals not of our faith that there is but one plan of salvation, one way, one church. The propriety of using the text in this connection is, to my mind, questionable for several reasons. First, the chances of anyone getting into the kingdom by stealthy methods are very, very few:—

And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?—1 Peter 4:18.

Secondly, the Savior is here speaking in parable, and the following verse contains the leading fact to be drawn from the parable:—

But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.—John 10:2.

Thirdly, if the text is to be used at all in a literal sense, it should be so used only with reference to false teachers, prophets, etc., as verses seven and eight show:—

Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep did not hear him.—John 10:7, 8.

In order that the beauty of this parable may be more clearly seen, let us quote from the Sunday school Quarterly:—

After a day spent in the pastures, tended by the shepherd, crook in hand, the flock was guided at evening to the door of a fold, or walled enclosure under the open air, and shut in for safety during the night. A watchman as porter spent the night at the gate for their protection. Lions, panthers, wolves, thieves, robbers, not only by day, but even by scaling the low walls by night, were ravenous for the destruction of the feeble victims. Defenseless by nature, the sheep, of all animals, is the most utterly dependent upon human protection. Hence it is provided with those in-instincts of docility, of learning the voice, and implicitly following the lead of its human guide. In the morning the shepherd returns, is admitted by the watchman [porter] through the door, calls the bellwether and leads forth the sheep to pasture.—Whedon's Commentary.

To see the sheep following the shepherd brought back to one's mind the words of our Lord, especially when I found that the he-goat which led the flock, and some others that followed the shepherd closely, had a name to which they answered when he called them. With the dawn of day the shepherds wake, and each of them "putteth forth" his own sheep, counting them as he lets them pass slowly out under his rod, through the one doorway. To help him in so doing "he calleth his own sheep by name and leadeth them out," for flocks of different shepherds may have rested during the night in the same fold. Unlike the thief or robber, who stealthily climbs the wall, he goes through the door to bring out his flock; the shepherd who for the time is gate keeper gladly opening to him as he approaches. Once outside he begins his daily march at the head of his goats and sheep, the older ones, which, often decked with bells, lead the rest, keeping close behind him like so many dogs. It is one of the amusements of his monotonous day to play with them at times, for they are his only companions.—Lesson 2, Sept. 10, 1893.

Now read the whole of the tenth chapter of John.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.

Conference convened with the Reeds branch, December 7 and 8, 1895; A. L. Whiteaker in the chair, C. W. Dillon secretary pro tem. Branch reports: Frankfort 52; 14 baptized. Reeds 26; 11 baptized. Evergreen, no report. Ministry reporting: Elders C. H. Burr, A. L. Whiteaker baptized 10, A. V. Closson baptized 11; priests G. Hewitt, C. W. Dillon baptized 2; Deacon W. Mair. No report from Bishop's agent. Voted that as the members of the district are scattered we hold only two conferences a year, and that the setting of the date for holding be left discretionary with the district president. A. L. Whiteaker was sustained district president, A. V. Closson elected clerk, and G. D. Hayes was sustained Bishop's agent. A. L. Whiteaker was appointed delegate to General Conference. The district clerk was instructed to notify the president of each branch to appoint a committee in his branch to collect means to defray the expenses of our delegate to the conference. A good time was had throughout. Preaching by Brn. C. H. Burr, A. L. Whiteaker, and A. V. Closson. Adjourned to meet with the Frankfort branch, Porcupine, Wisconsin, at call of president.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Sunday school convention of the Northeastern Kansas district will convene February 21, at 10:30 a. m. to transact business for the Northeastern Kansas district at Netawaka meeting house, when it is also hoped that all who can will come to assist us in our efforts that the lambs may be fed with that spiritual food and that the Sunday school may progress in its undertakings.

RATES AT GENERAL CONFERENCE.

To all whom it may concern:—The committee on arrangements to provide entertainment for holding the next session of General Conference beg leave to announce that the price of board has been fixed at $4 per week. The committee was desirous to have the price at $3.50 per week. It is not intended to make money off of any, but simply to meet expenses; but at present writing they do not feel justified in making the reduction. Later on should circumstances favor the reduction, it will be made and announced; otherwise the present statement will stand.

Some think $4 per week too low a price to undertake to entertain for, while others think it too high. This difference is owing to the locality from which they hail; thus it may turn out that the price concluded upon is the happy medium.

Amply accommodations can be had for all who desire to attend, but just how many will attend is the thing revolving in the minds of the committee just now. How elaborate shall the arrangements be? How many will be present on the day fixed for the beginning of conference?

Anyone can see that there must be something of an anxiety here. The committee does not wish to go to any unnecessary outlay, neither do they wish to be surprised and found unprepared when the time for meeting arrives. To obviate this difficulty as nearly as possible, will all those expecting to be present at the conference write the committee of their intentions, that due preparations may be made so that there will be nothing lacking when you arrive? Your names should be in the hands of the committee by the 10th of March at the latest, and as much earlier as practicable. Send all communications to William H. Kelley, Temple, Lake County, Ohio.

Transit from Willoughby to Kirtland will not exceed 25 cents for one person.

Caution. Do not be in too much of a hurry to get over to Kirtland after you arrive at the depot, and rush into any vehicle that may be in waiting, for you may get into the wrong conveyance. See those having in charge the transferring of passengers from the railway to Kirtland, and thus avoid confusion and unnecessary expense. If in doubt, look for the proper badge and follow the advice of the one wearing it. The color of badge will be announced later on.

One of the committee will be present at the depot if possible.

Come to conference all ye who will.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM H. KELLEY, }

KIRTLAND GENERAL CONFERENCE.

I desire to again call the attention of the Saints to the proposition of the Plain Dealer, regarding the reports of the proceedings of General Conference and their intention to publish a "special" for April 6, 1896, containing cuts of leading men of the church; also an article containing historical matter, setting forth the doctrine, and organization, and the difference between us and the Utah Mormons.

Now the Saints throughout the world ought to take advantage of this rare opportunity of placing this paper in the hands of editors of the newspapers in their respective localities, and in the hands of their friends.

This special for April 6 can be furnished for the small sum of two cents per copy. And the daily (including the special) throughout the entire conference for the sum of thirty cents. Every family in the church ought to take this daily and thus encourage the enterprise.

One hundred specials have been ordered sent to one hundred editors of the city of London, England; and hundreds have been ordered sent to other editors of Europe.

I suggest that the districts in Canada and the United States take up collections to supply the newspaper men in their vicinity with copies of the special.

The Plain Dealer has requested me, as their agent, to attend to this matter, and we would like all orders in by March 15, so that the lists, etc., may be properly made out.

Address all orders to

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TEMPLE P. O., Lake County, Ohio.

LOOK OUT FOR HIM.

He is about fifty to fifty-five years of age, about five feet ten inches in height; gives his name as Henry Pierce; claims that he is a member of the church and baptized near Lamoni, Iowa, sixteen years ago, by Z. H. Gurley; moved to Western Nebraska six years ago; was farming; lost his crops the last three years; claims that he is married and that his wife had gone on to Lamoni to his mother, who lives eight miles west of town. She is a widow lady, his father having died some years ago. He seems to be troubled with asthma and has a very queer shaped head. He gives the names of many of the Saints and friends in and near Lamoni.

He called on us in the evening the last of November and said that he was penniless and was walking his way back to his mother's. We kept him all night and after getting all the information I could out of him I said to my wife that if he was a member of the church he seemed to know but little about the work; but we concluded that as he was so poorly clad and had no means to travel with thought we would buy a ticket for him; so I took him down to the depot, my wife put up a lunch for him, and I bought a ticket. He was to return the money to me as soon as he got home to his mother's, who, he said, was in good circumstances. The ticket was bought and he asked if I would give him twenty-five cents to get some medicine for the asthma, which I did.

In about three days he turned up at the Pleasant Grove branch twenty miles north-east of this city. Here he was helped, the Saints taking up a collection. He informed them that he had just come from Oklahoma; and his appearance said that he was in need, judging from his clothing. Later he was seen in a saloon in this city. I tried to find him but could not; had I, he would have been turned over to the police.

I gave the above facts to a brother here and asked him to send them to the church papers. As I have not seen anything of them, I send them to you and ask that you please publish, as I notice that a letter from Bro. Lee Quick, from Uniontown, Kansas, in the Ensign of this week—January 18, page 4, calls the attention of the Saints to his wanderings among the Saints.

Now he is a tramp of the worst kind, and I ask the Saints to look out for him and if he comes among any of you please read this to him and say for me that he is wanted in St. Joseph, Missouri, and for him to go soon as he can and call on the undersigned. Mr. Editor, will you please head this with large letters so that all will see it and let the Ensign please copy. We want to run down such frauds. I am sorry he was not published long ago.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM LEWIS.

St. JOSEPH, Missouri, January 18, 1896.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The quarterly conference of the Northwestern Kansas district will convene at Blue Rapids, Saturday, March 7, at ten a. m. This will close the conference year. A full and complete report is desired from the branches and ministry; also the condition of the work in each locality. Presidents of branches should see to it and forward their reports in time. The district Sabbath school association will hold a session on Friday evening, the 6th. Brethren, don't fail to send your delegates to represent your interests in the conference as branches and Sabbath schools. A full representation is expected and desired. Come, brethren; bring the Spirit of the Master with you that we may rejoice together.

A. KENT, Pres.

Conference of the Nodaway district will convene at Guilford, Missouri, February 22 and 23, 1896. Branches, have your reports ready for same. Everybody invited to attend.

M. P. MADISON, Pres.

Conference of the Northeastern Kansas district will convene at Netawaka, Jackson County, on the 22d and 23d of February, beginning at 10:30 a. m. We hope and pray that we may have one of the best spiritual conferences that we have ever experienced.

We are to have Bishop E. L. Kelley with us, all being well. And we say to all different branches to try to send one at least of your officers with the branch reports, that we may have a full conference. What can we have without a little sacrifice? Then, dear Saints, let us come, all that can, and bring the Spirit with you, that we may all be filled with the blessings from God our Father, and have a time of rejoicing in the knowledge of him who ruleth all things. Please send all reports on printed form, and oblige.

Your humble servants,

J. ARTHUR DAVIS, Pres.

JAMES BAILLIE, Sec.

The conference of the Massachusetts district will convene at Providence, Rhode Island, February 8, 1896, at Good Templar Hall, High Street near Dean Street, at 2:30 p. m.

F. M. SHEEHY, Pres.

Conference of the Central Nebraska district will convene with the Clearwater branch on Saturday, February 22, at two p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Branch clerks are requested to send statistical reports.

LEVI GAMET, Sec.

Conference of the Fremont district will convene at Shenandoah, Iowa, Saturday, March 7, at ten a. m. The district Sunday school association will hold a convention beginning Thursday evening next preceding conference and three sessions Friday. The brethren will please remember their written reports, also reports from the missions assigned you, if any. We would like a full attendance, as there are matters of special interest to come up.

D. HOUGAS, Pres.

The Idaho district conference will be held at Malad City, beginning February 29, 1896, at ten a. m. Brn. H. C. Smith and R. J. Anthony are expected. Let us all who can, come together in the Spirit of the Master that the work done may receive divine approval and the membership blessed and better prepared for the work to come.

S. D. CONDIT, Pres.

The conference of the Southern Wisconsin district will be held at East Delavan, Wisconsin, February 29 and March 1. Come one and all. Branches be sure to send in their reports in time.

W. A. MCDOWELL, Dist. Pres.

BORN.

GRAY.—At Lamoni, Iowa, August 19, 1895, to Mr. John J. and Sr. Martha F. Gray, a daughter, named Jennie Frances, and blessed January 15, 1896, by Brn. H. A. Stebbins and A. S. Cochran.

SULLIVAN.—Martin Herman, son of Warren and Gustie Sullivan, born July 31, 1894. Blessed at Muscatine, Illinois, December 13, 1895, by M. T. Short and James McKiernan. Earl William Sullivan, born November 6, 1895. Blessed December 13, 1895, by James McKiernan and M. T. Short.

PLATO.—At Clifton, Ontario, January 1, 1896, to Bro. and Sr. Jason Plato, a daughter, and named Edith Ann. Blessed on the 19th inst. by Elder J. H. Lake.

WALTERS.—To Bro. T. M. and Sr. Lizzie Walters, August 7, 1895, at Woolstock, Iowa, a son, and named J. Maclin. Blessed January 9, by Elder Eli Hayer.

DUKES.—To Richard and Jessie Dukes: At Ridge Prairie, Illinois, October 13, 1889, twin daughters, and named Maggie and Esther. At Alma, Illinois, December 10, 1893, a son, and named James. At Cheltenham, Missouri, June 23, 1895, a son, named Richard. All blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

WELCH.—At Alma, Illinois, November, 25, 1895, to Clinton and Bessie Welch, a daughter, and named Mary Henrietta. Blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

WHITE.—At Alma, Illinois, September 1, 1895, to Peter and Esther White, a son, and named Robert Paul. Blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

MILLER.—At Sandoval, Illinois, December 2, 1889, to Alexander and Minnie Miller, a daughter, and named Blanche. Blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

The five first named children were blessed by Elders Mark H. Forscutt, R. Archibald, Sen., and R. A. Marchant, on November 17, 1895: Russell William, son of Coventry and Charlotte Archibald, born at St. Joseph, Missouri, August 9, 1895. Minnie Lena, daughter of Joseph and Anna Bikman, born at St. Joseph, Missouri, October 22, 1895. Ellen Effie, daughter of John and Mary Burlington, born at St. Joseph, Missouri, October 22, 1895. Mabel Clare, daughter of Julius and Mary Sampson, born at St. Joseph, Missouri, March 14, 1894. Arthur Franklin, son of Franklin and Lucy Pierce, born at St. Joseph, Missouri. Mary Annie, daughter of Robt. and Dora Garlich. She was born at St. Joseph, Missouri, and blessed by Elder M. H. Forscutt on November 18, 1895.

DIED.

MUNNS.—At her home, Netawaka, Kansas, January 18, 1896, Sr. Sarah Munns. She was born in England, August 25, 1825. She, with her husband, Daniel Munns, emigrated to Utah in 1856, but not finding what they expected, returned to Eastern Kansas and settled near Atchison, where she became a member of the Reorganized Church in 1869, of which she was a faithful member until death. So patiently did she bear her last sickness that none supposed she was so near death's door till they realized she was dying. She will long be remembered by the Saints and elders who visited her hospitable home. By a faithful application of the principles of the gospel she became a Saint indeed, and will be missed by the Saints, and especially by her aged husband and four daughters, who remain to mourn her departure. While we miss her cheerful smiles and encouraging words, we realize that our loss is her gain. Funeral services were conducted in the Saints' chapel, in charge of Elder J. T. Davis; sermon by Elder W. E. Peak.

SHAW.—At Lamoni, Iowa, January 14, 1896, Joseph Blaine, son of Bro. and Sr. A. E. Shaw, aged 1 year, 3 months, and 9 days. He was blessed at Allendale, Missouri, December 31, by Elder Joseph Snively. Services at the house, January 16, sermon by President Joseph Smith; body laid to rest in Rose Hill cemetery.

WRIGHT.—Julius C. Wright was born January 25, 1876, at Moline, Illinois. Moved with his parents to Plano when a child. Was baptized November 18, 1885, by Bro. J. C. Foss. Died December 27, 1895, at Plano. Funeral services were held at the chapel; the house was full to overflowing. For a short time after uniting with the church he tried to live his religion, letting his voice be heard in the testimony meetings; but meeting with discouragement where he should have received encouragement, he forsook in part the house of the Lord, but in the last few days his mind returned to his Savior. He was of a quiet disposition, not indulging in many things to which those of his age are sometimes led. We believe his return to his Master drew to him the mercy and love of that Savior, in whom his final trust was placed, and the testimony to the writer was, It is well with him. Sermon was by W. Vickery, assisted by Elder E. M. Wildermuth.

MCKEE.—Jonathan McKee was born in Butler County, Pennsylvania; died December 29, 1895, near Golden Springs, Nebraska, aged 73 years and 7 days. He united with the church in its early rise, when a youth; was with the church through its persecutions at Nauvoo and other places; went to Utah in 1846; united with the Reorganized Church in Utah, April 5, 1866; returned to Iowa in July, 1866, and was one of the charter members of Spring Creek branch, near Persia, Iowa, in which he held membership at his decease. His wish was to be buried in the private burying ground of D. Chambers, his son-in-law, near Persia, and it was respected. Funeral services were held the Saints' chapel at Persia, January 29; discourse by Elder Joseph Seddon. Wife, three sons, and four daughters mourn.

GRANTHAM.—Sr. Sarah S. Grantham was born in Guisbory, Nova Scotia; died January 14, 1896, at her home in Greenbush, Michigan, aged 65 years, 3 months, and 10 days. She was an invalid for a number of years. She was baptized March 13, 1886, by Elder John J. Cornish, since which time she has been a faithful member of the church. Her husband and a number of children mourn. She was a faithful wife and patient mother. Many friends followed her to the grave. Funeral sermon by Elder David Smith from Psalms 37: 34.

WILLARD.—Rebecca J. Willard, daughter of Judah and Deborah L. Chapman, was born in Harrison County, Iowa; died December 14, 1895, aged 27 years, 4 months, and 22 days. She was married to Logan J. Willard, April 3, 1888. May 23, 1893, she became a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church, lived a consistent Christian life, and died with full confidence of a final redemption. She had struggled for over two years with consumption, her life slowly ebbing away. Husband, father, mother, two sisters, and one brother, with a host of friends, mourn. Funeral discourse by Elder Joseph Seddon to a large audience.

NAVERT.—At Gentry, Arkansas, November 7, 1895, Fanny Navert, daughter of William and Sophia Schick. Born July 27, 1863, in Lee County, Illinois; baptized October 2, 1881, by Brother Griffiths. She died strong in the faith, praising the Lord.

BUTTERFIELD.—In Laguna Canyon, Orange County, California, November 29, 1895, Sr. Matilda Jane, daughter of Bro. Chauncy C. Butterfield, aged 20 years and 4 months. Her mother (the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Gaud Roger) died October 15, 1895, leaving eight children. Two brothers and five sisters, all under sixteen years of age, with their father, mourn their great loss. She was baptized December 15, 1886, at Laguna, California, by Elder Heman C. Smith. She lived the life of a true Saint, and was loved by all who knew her. She sleeps by the side of her beloved mother in the cemetery at Santa Ana, California.

Gone to the home where the loved ones are dwelling,

Gone from temptation, from worry and strife;

Side by side sleeping, the mother and daughter,

United in death as they were in their life.

We pity her dear little brothers and sisters,

So lately bereft of a fond mother's care;

O God, send thine angels to guard and protect them,

And guide their young feet away from each snare.

Remember in mercy the husband and father,

In this the dark hour of trial and gloom;

The light of his home has departed forever,

The best of his joys are now laid in the tomb.

M. R.

GRIMES.—In San Bernardino, California, January 4, 1896, Mr. Isaac C. Grimes, born March 14, 1829, a native of Ohio; came to California in 1853. Mr. Grimes was not a member of any church but was a believer in the Reorganization, his wife being a member. Funeral sermon at his home by Elder D. L. Harris.

NELSON.—At Nottingham, Pennsylvania, January 2, 1895, Sr. Susanna J., wife of Bro. Joseph R. Nelson, came to death as calmly and considerately as one going on a visit. Her suffering was intense at times. Her faith was firm in the gospel, by which she seemingly lived for almost two years after having the fatal attack. Funeral the 7th from the M. E. church, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Cann, assisting. A devoted husband, daughter, niece, aged mother, two brothers, one sister, and many friends and Saints mourn. Baptized October 31, 1886, she lived as she died, firm in the faith. Her last words were, "It's sweet to live, but sweeter in death."

MCINTOSH.—At his home, near Riverton, Iowa, January 8, 1896, Bro. James McIntosh. Deceased was born July 8, 1816, at St. Andrews, Scotland. He came to America in early manhood. Was married in New York City, April 26, 1843, to Fanny Findly. Five children blessed their home, three of whom were with him in his last hours. He was one of the early settlers of this country, highly respected by all who knew him. A devoted Christian of the old school Presbyterian faith, the true light of God as revealed in the gospel was manifested to him, and on June 19, 1894, he obeyed, received the promise of the Savior, and obtained testimony that it was of God. Patient in suffering, when the summons came he passed quietly and peacefully to that bright and happy home to await the resurrection of the just. He was laid by the side of his beloved wife, who departed this life just thirty-three years to a day before him, in the Utterback graveyard. Funeral sermon in the Presbyterian chapel by Elder Henry Kemp; text, 1 Corinthians 15: 26. Song service by the Methodist choir.

BROWN.—Sr. Elizabeth Brown was born March 1, 1869, in Wayne County, Illinois; baptized by Elder I. M. Smith; died January 15, 1896. Funeral sermon by Elder G. H. Hilliard from 1 Thessalonians 4: 13-18 and John 11: 25, 26.

ELDER.—At Weir City, Kansas, December 23, 1895, Electa Ann Elder, aged 2 years, 11 months, and 20 days. She was blessed November 11, 1894, at Weir City, by W. S. Taylor and O. P. Sutherland. Funeral services in charge of Elder J. C. Severine. Interment in Weir City cemetery.

ANDERSON.—Mary C. Anderson died October 14, 1895, aged 29 years, 7 months, and 28 days. Husband and six children mourn. Funeral services conducted by M. P. Madison.

KJERSNER.—Rosine Kjersner died January 2, 1896, aged 60 years, 11 months, and 19 days. Husband and one daughter mourn. Funeral services in Danish by A. Jensen and in English by M. P. Madison.

ARNOLD.—At the home of her son, Rev. John F. Arnold, at or near Bridgeport, Michigan, December 23, 1895, Sr. Mary Arnold, aged 83 years, 1 month, and 28 days. Fifty of these years she was engaged in serving her Master, uniting first with the Methodist Church. Hearing the story of the latter-day gospel in December, 1865, she was baptized by Bro. George W. Shaw. She moved to Plano, Illinois in the fall of 1869 with her husband and family. Here she buried her husband, two sons, one daughter-in-law, and one granddaughter. Out of twelve children three remain. Sr. Arnold was ever firm and faithful in the latter-day faith. She returned to Michigan to live with her son about three years ago. Last winter she received a fall, breaking one limb, and from that on she suffered much, death coming to her as a release. She will be remembered by many of the Saints who attended the General and other conferences at Plano.

COSTER.—At his home in Bartlett, Iowa, January 7, 1896, Bro. Robert H. Coster, aged 57 years, 11 months, and 2 days. Bro. Coster was born in Sackett's Harbor, New York, February 5, 1838; emigrated to Utah in 1852; returned to Iowa in 1856; united in marriage to Miss O. E. Harrington, December 10, 1857; became identified with the Reorganized Church in 1860; was ordained an elder by James Caffall February 14, 1876; has held various positions as branch officer, but for the last few years has not been actively engaged in church work on account of unfavorable circumstances and ill health. Through his union with Miss Harrington he was the father of nine children, eight of whom survive him, one having passed on before, those remaining being all identified with the church, and who mourn their loss in unison with a large circle of friends and relatives. Funeral at the house, January 8, 1896, in charge of C. L. Epperson; sermon by Priest H. F. Durfey, Job 14: 14.

A MANUAL OF THE PRIESTHOOD.

This is a work by Elder Charles Derry, in which is set forth the order and nature of the Priesthood. The writer also defines the duties and prerogatives of all Church Officials, from the First Presidency to the Deacons inclusive. It is compiled from the Standard books of the church and the History of Joseph Smith as published in the Millennial Star. Indexed for ready reference, 132 pages, cloth bound, 25 cents.

WHAT WE BELIEVE.

A small book—pamphlet size—3 x 4 1/2 inches, 20 pages, with a statement of the faith of the church, as given in the Epitome, with slight alterations. The Scripture texts adduced to support the various items of faith are printed in full, with characters and verses. Faith in God; in Christ; Repentance; Baptism by Immersion; Laying on of Hands; Resurrection of the Body; Eternal Judgment; Authority and Ordination; Church Organization; Spiritual Gifts; the Marriage Question as believed by the Church etc.; are each presented and supported by Scripture passages.

The reader is referred to the Herald Office for Catalogue if other church literature is desired.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHECIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

BUSINESS AND MORALS.

I HAVE always believed that it is possible to unite success in business with strict moral integrity. I am aware that many people think that . . . a man may do things in his public employment which he will not think it right to do in his domestic or private life. I do not agree with this view; and if the record of my life has any value, it is in showing that at least it is not necessary to success in business that a man should indulge in "sharp" practices. But even if it were necessary, still it would not follow that it was worth while. We cannot afford to do or say a mean thing. There are higher satisfactions than the mere getting of money, and riches cannot compensate a man for the consciousness of having lived a dishonorable and selfish life.— George W. Childs.

CONAN DOYLE ON AMERICA.

To the Editor of the London Times,
Sir:—An Englishman who travels in the United States comes back, according to my experience, with two impressions, which are so strong that they overshadow all others. One is of the excessive kindness which is shown to individual Englishmen. The other is of the bitter feeling which appears to exist both in the press and among the public against his own country. The present ebullition is only one of those recurrent crises which have marked the whole history of the two nations. The feeling is always smoldering, and the least breath of discussion sets it in a blaze. I believe, and have long believed, that the greatest danger which can threaten our empire is the existence of this spirit of hostility in a nation which is already great and powerful, but which is destined to be far more so in the future. Our statesmen have stood too long with their faces toward the East. To discern our best hopes as well as our gravest dangers they must turn the other way.

As to the cause of this feeling, it is not so unreasonable as Englishmen usually contend. It is the fashion among us to apportion the blame between the Irish-American and the politician who is in search of his vote. But no such superficial explanation as this can cover the fact that the Government of thirty American States should unhesitatingly indorse a Presidential message which obviously leads straight to war. A dislike so widely spread and so fierce in its expression cannot be explained by the imported animosity of the Celtic Irishman.

Few Englishmen could be found now to contend that we were justified in those views of taxation which brought on the first American war, or in the question of searching neutral vessels which was the main cause of the second. This war of 1812 would possibly only occupy two pages out of five hundred in English history, but it bulks very large in an American one, and has left many bitter memories behind it. Then there was the surly attitude which England adopted toward the States after they had won their independence, the repeated frictions during the Napoleonic epoch, and the attack upon an American frigate by a British fifty-gun ship in time of peace. After the war there was the Florida dispute in the time of Andrew Jackson, the question of the Oregon line, the settlement of the Maine and New Brunswick line, and, finally, the hostile attitude of most of our press at the time of the civil war.

Since then we have had two burning questions, that of the Alabama claims and that of the Bering Sea fisheries, culminating in this of Venezuela. The history of this country, then, as it presents itself to an American, is simply a long succession of quarrels with ourselves, and how can it be wondered at if he has now reached that chronic state of sensitiveness and suspicion which we have not outgrown ourselves in the case of the French?

If we are to blame as a community for some, at least, of these unfortunate historical incidents, we are even more to blame as individuals for the widespread bitterness which is felt against us. We have never had a warm, ungrudging word of heartfelt praise for the great things which our kinsmen have done, for their unwearying industry, their virtues in peace, their doggedness in war, their unparalleled clemency when war was over. We have always fastened upon the small rude details and overlooked the great facts behind. In our shocked contemplation of an expectoration upon the floor we have lost sight of universal suffrage and equal education. Our travelers from Mrs. Trollope and Dickens onward, have been surprised that the versatile, hardworking men, who often combined ten trades in one to adapt themselves to the varying needs of a raw-growing community, had not the manners of Oxford or the repose of Sussex. They could not understand that this rough vitality and overbearing energy which carried them through their task implied those complementary defects which must go with unusual virtues. Of all English travelers to the States there was hardly one who did not make mischief with his reminiscences until, in our own days, Mr. Bryce did something to rectify the balance. And our want of charity and true insight is the more inexcusable since no one has written more charmingly of England than Washington Irving, Emerson, and Holmes. Our journals and public men are in the habit now, as a rule, of alluding to America and Americans in the most friendly way, and that must in time have its effect, if recent unhappy events do not change it. We should, in my opinion, lose no opportunity of doing those little graceful acts of kindness which are the practical signs of a brotherly sentiment. Above all, I should like to see an Anglo-American Society started in London, with branches all over the empire, for the purpose of promoting good feeling, smoothing over friction, laying literature before the public which will show them how strong are the arguments in favor of an Anglo-American alliance, and supplying the English press with the American side of the question and vice versa. Such an organization would, I am sure, be easily founded, and would do useful work toward that greatest of all ends, the consolidation of the English-speaking races.

Yours faithfully,

A. CONAN DOYLE.

Mena House, Pyramids, CAIRO, JANUARY 1, 1896.

AN EASY BERTH.

I RECEIVED a letter from a lad, asking me to find him an easy berth. To this I replied: "You cannot be an editor; do not try the law; do not think of the ministry; let alone all ships, shops, and merchandise; abhor politics, don't practice medicine; be not a farmer nor a mechanic; neither be a soldier nor a sailor. Don't work. Don't study. Don't think. None of these are easy. O my son! You have come into a hard world. I know of only one easy place in it, and that is the grave."—Henry Ward Beecher.

GOVERNMENTAL SCIENCE.

FEW people have the leisure to undertake a systematic and thorough study of history, but every one ought to find time to learn the principal features of the governments under which we live, and to get some inkling of the way in which these governments have come into existence, and of the causes which have made them what they are.—John Fisk.

GUARD HEALTH.

TO GUARD against degeneracy—be it physical, mental, or moral—one must be continually on the watch. Health is everything, and wealth gathered at the expense of health is of no earthly benefit when the latter is gone, as no expenditure of wealth can bring it back. Health is something that should never be risked or trifled with, any more than one's moral status or welfare. As a noted criminologist observes, there is no worse calamity that can befall a man than the successful issue of his first piece of villainy. So it is with the man who successfully gets through his first debauch, or who does not suffer at once from the evil effects of an unhealthy habitation, or while following some health-undermining occupation.—Redmondino.

WHAT I MUST DO.

WHAT I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think. This rule, equally arduous in actual and in intellectual life, may serve for the whole distinction between greatness and meanness. It is the harder, because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

SELF-DEVELOPMENT.

IN education the process of self-development should be encouraged to the fullest extent. Children should be led to make their own investigations, and to draw their own inferences. They should be told as little as possible, and induced to discover as much as possible. Humanity has progressed solely by self-instruction; and that to achieve the best results each mind must progress somewhat after the same fashion, is continually proved by the marked success of self-made men.—Hebert Spencer.

PROGRESS OF TRUTH.

IN directing the forces of your mind to the discovery of new truths, you fear to go astray. You prefer to remain quietly in the opinions most generally received, whatever they may be. That is as much as to say that you should not walk beyond doors, for fear that you might stumble and break your legs. But in that case you are in the position of him whose legs are already lamed, for yours are useless to you. And for what has God given limbs to man, if not to walk with them; or given him reason, if not to make use of it? It is not error that opposes so much the progress of truth; it is indolence, obstinacy, the spirit of routine, everything that favors inaction.—Turgot.

WELCOMING EXAMINATION.

WHILE we recognize that there may be honest differences of opinion on all subjects of inquiry, and that we should be tolerant of those who differ from us, it does not follow that all opinions are entitled to equal respect. Each is to be judged by itself and on its own merits. We may, and indeed should, dispute the opinion that we believe to be erroneous, that out of the debate we may reach the truth, whatever it may be. But this does not imply intolerance exhibited toward those who hold the wrong opinion, especially when we know they are conscientious and have done some honest thinking on the subject. We should rather welcome those who dispute with us because they honestly disagree with us, than the so-called friends who play upon our vanity by pretending to agree with all we say.—Minneapolis Times.

New occasions teach new duties; Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth;
Lo, before us gleam her campfires! We ourselves must pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflower and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea, Nor attempt the Future's portal, with the Past's blood-rusted key. —Lowell.

The February Arena is probably the most attractive issue of this great reformatory and progressive review that has yet appeared. In its 176 pages are found notable papers by Forbes Winslow, D.C.L., of the Royal College of Physicians of London, on "Madness as Portrayed by Shakespeare." "The Land of the Noonday Sun," by Justice Walter Clark, LL.D., of the Supreme Bench of North Carolina (profusely illustrated). Justice Clark has visited Mexico under the auspices of The Arena to study our sister republic, and this issue contains the opening paper of a series which will be magnificently illustrated, and which we predict will prove exceedingly interesting to all persons interested in travels and history, as well as social and economic problems.

BRIGHAM YOUNG AS A PROPHET.

THE Deseret Evening News of January 7 makes a rather strained effort to show that a prediction of President Brigham Young's was fulfilled in the granting of statehood to Utah. Comment is useless, the weakness of the effort is best seen by reading the words of the News. Here they are:—

ANOTHER PROPHECY FULFILLED.

Among those acquainted with the life and labors of the late President Brigham Young there is no need of any effort to prove that he enjoyed the prophetic gift in his calling as an apostle of the Lord, chosen to preside over the Latter Day Saints. The fact of his being a prophet is fully established by innumerable evidences. As time rolls on, however, it is quite interesting to note the fulfillment of his prophetic declarations, often made, as on the occasion to which we now refer, when the way seemed to be effectually barred. The event which the people of Utah have been celebrating the past few days is a direct fulfillment of a prediction made by President Young forty years ago. In the summer of 1856, Hons. J. M. Bernhisel, George A. Smith, and John Taylor were in Washington, D. C., working in behalf of Utah in the effort then being made for statehood. In a letter written in July, 1856, to Hon. George A. Smith, by President Young, the following occurs:—

"Brothers Bernhisel and Taylor rather expressed an opinion that Congress will act adversely to our wishes. Well, perhaps they may; but one thing is certain, if the Lord wills it so, it will be for the best. But if he wills different, they cannot hinder our obtaining admission, how much soever they may feel unwilling to accord unto us our just rights. THESE WE SHALL OBTAIN, AND IN THE LORD'S OWN WAY, AND IN HIS OWN DUE TIME. He works not as men work, and peradventure will so direct matters as will surprise not a little those who seek to hold dominion over us."

The condition of statehood was necessary to the enjoyment, by the people of Utah, of their just rights. These were denied upon each successive attempt of the people to secure them. But concerning them the Prophet Brigham declared with emphasis: "These we shall obtain, and in the Lord's own way and in his own due time." Certainly those rights have been obtained in the ceedings consummated on January 6, at the inauguration of State officials elected by the people of Utah. They were not brought about as it was thought at the earlier day should be the procedure in the way of men, or on occasions in the past when all seemed fair with promise. But they surely came, in the Lord's way and time; and all previous efforts to secure them were appropriate means in effecting the great results as the Lord willed. He worked in his own fashion, and his operations have occasioned no little surprise in some quarters, and may continue to do so.

There have been some people, we are told, who have labored under the impression that President Young's views were not that statehood would come to Utah. But the persistent efforts he put forth to secure it, and numerous public and private expressions he made like that we have quoted, furnish conclusive proof of his real attitude on the subject. By the voice of inspiration he declared that the just rights of statehood would come to the people of Utah, and the latter have entered now upon the enjoyment thereof. May they use them wisely and well.

The prediction according to the News is couched in the capitalized words in the quotation, viz., "THESE WE SHALL OBTAIN; AND IN THE LORD'S OWN WAY, AND IN HIS OWN DUE TIME."

If this prediction was indicted by the Spirit of God, as the News would have us believe, it is very significant.

The way in which statehood was brought about was by Utah providing in her constitution that plural or polygamous marriages should be forever prohibited. If then the prediction is to be relied upon, the Lord's way of bringing about statehood was by forever prohibiting polygamy. The News to be consistent should acknowledge that Brigham Young, his associates, and his successors were wrong when they knocked at the doors of the Union for admission with polygamy attached or not prohibited. When they complied with the demand of the government on this question they were simply complying with God's way; hence, through all the struggle the government was right and they were wrong.

Again. If it was brought about in the Lord's "own due time," the government was right in keeping them out as long as it did, and it was wrong for them to ask for statehood at the times they did, and under the conditions attending.

The Reorganization has been severely censured by the church in Utah for sustaining the government in its attitude towards Utah; but in this article the News virtually concedes that we were right, and that until now the time for statehood had not come, and that the proper way to obtain statehood had not been proceeded in by them. In opposing polygamy we were only helping to remove an obstacle which stood in the way of their receiving their political rights.

O, you are welcome; we have only done what it was our duty to do!

PUBLIC OPINION ADVANCING.

IN that excellent journal of public sentiment, Public Opinion, for January, 1896, there occurs the following peculiar reference to the first president of the church organized April 6, 1830:—

It will be a long time before the world agrees upon the value of the character of Joseph Smith, the founder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. But beyond all question the number of those who revere his name and memory, as a prophet and a witness for God, is constantly increasing. The institution, too, that grew out of the revelations he claimed to have received has passed the experimental stages and must be accounted hereafter as one of the permanent acquisitions to the religious world. It has demonstrated its right to existence by surmounting all the difficulties naturally thrust in the way of such a movement as it purported to be. It has survived all attempts to destroy it, and henceforth the world will watch with increasing interest the unfolding of which it gives prominence. Meantime this much can be conceded by all to the Mormon prophet—his character surely possessed elements of greatness—for the man who can in a preëminently scientific age, which is equivalent to saying an age of systematic investigation, and an age of free inquiry, found a new religion, or revive an old one (whichever you will), and found it, too, by establishing a permanent institution, must have in him the elements of true greatness. Ninety years ago the 23d of December, 1895, Joseph Smith was born in the village of Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont.—Sal Lake Herald.

UTAH AS A STATE.

THE sentiment outside of the new State of Utah, in regard to the present intentions and designs of the dominant element to keep, or not to keep the letter and spirit of the apparent pledge to abandon the practice of celestial, plural, or polygamous marriages, made in the constitution under which the Territory of Utah was admitted to the Union and became a State, is variable, as a matter of course. One phase of that sentiment takes the form given in the following from the American Sentinel, New York, January 9, 1896:—

In view of the admission of Utah into the union of States, the following from a Newton, Kansas, correspondent of the New York Sun, printed in its issue of December 29, is worth the attention of the American people:—

Bishop Richard W. Hart, of the Mormon Church, who has relatives in this city, has been visiting among them for a few days. He was a member of the last Territorial Legislature. He belongs to the "Order of Melchisedec," from which all bishops of the Church of the Latter Day Saints must graduate, and therefore knows something of the plans of his church for the future.

Bishop Hart is on his way to the missionary field of Georgia, where his church has been at work for some time, and where the efforts at recruiting for the Mormon faith have met with better success than in any other field in this country. To the correspondent of the Sun Bishop Hart talked very freely about the situation in Utah. The population of Utah contains five Mormons to one Gentile, while in thirteen of the twenty-one counties there is not an official not of the Mormon faith. He declared that the belief that the church had abandoned all efforts to control the politics of the new State was a great mistake.

"Whether Democrat or Republican," said the bishop, "there will not be a State officer of other than our faith, either elective or appointive, unless the church so will it. There is not a district judge who can escape his responsibility to the Latter Day Saints, and with two exceptions there will not be a sheriff in Utah who is not of our selection."

After reference to the manner in which the church will secure control of all the industries, such as water supplies and irrigation systems, which would be given back to "the people for whom God intended them," he touched on the subject of plural marriages. He said that through divine command President Woodruff had suspended the ordinance, but it had not been repealed. He said:—

"This subject of plural marriages is very much misunderstood. Not more than fifteen per cent of our people have more than one wife. As a man prospers the church admonishes him to take additional wives according to his prosperity, and he obeys as a religious duty, always with the advice and full consent of his first wife. In Statehood, when we are free from Federal interferences, the Temple will witness the solemnization of the marriage rites that have been suspended, as the penitentiary will no longer be filled with men for obeying God's law."

At the close of the interview the bishop said:—

"Yes, this ceremonial will be resumed; in fact, it has never been entirely suspended. I have three wives, all of whom love me. And they have persuaded me to seal another on my return next August, which I shall do."

Now that Utah has become a State, the only way Congress can deal with polygamy within its borders is by an amendment to the national Constitution. Thus the possibility of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, touching a question claimed to be one of religious belief and practice, is by no means remote. While polygamy should be dealt with solely as a practice subversive of human rights, it has in the past been treated as a thing to be suppressed on account of its immorality; and if again made a subject of legislation, in the form of a constitutional amendment, will doubtless be considered on moral grounds. Hence should such an amendment come, it is likely to involve other issues besides the suppression of polygamy.

The reputed interview with Bishop Hart was sent us by two or three, clipped from Kansas City, Missouri, papers of December 26 and 27, '95, and is reported to have occurred before the admission to statehood took place.

We did not deem the clippings worth notice; for the reason that we did not think it probable that a bishop of any note or influence in the Utah Church would so flagrantly violate the confidence of his people, as to so publicly display an intention to disregard the expectation of Congress and the people of the States, after statehood had been acquired; even if such intention existed and was known to him. Nor did we think it proper to believe that such intentions as those expressed by this Bishop Hart were cherished by the leading minds of the church in Utah.

It appears, however, that the Sentinel has taken this reported interview as a genuine expression of the deliberate intention of the Mormon people to directly make void the national laws against plural marriage and reinstitute under State enactments the practices which they have solemnly, publicly pledged themselves to have abandoned. This is simply not credible, and either the Sentinel has been imposed upon, with others of the journals of the day, by a manufactured report of an interview never had; Bishop Hart does not exist, or has never said what is reported of him; or the Sentinel prefers to believe evil of the Utah people rather than good, guided thereto by prejudice.

It is now strikingly opposite to put on record in these pages what the Deseret News, the organ of the church in Utah, states in regard to this supposed intention to reinstate the practice of plural marriages. In the issue from that paper for January 17, 1896, the following will be found:—

Some of the journals of the country, commenting on the admission of Utah to statehood, take occasion to express a doubt as to the sincerity of the Mormon people. They imagine that there is no longer anything to prevent the re-establishment of the peculiar social conditions that in years past caused so much controversy. They consider that polygamy was given up only under the pressure of unendurable opposition, and that its resumption is probable as soon as the opposition has ceased, or has been rendered powerless. Others take a more rational view and predict that it will be Utah's ambition to shine as one of the most brilliant stars in the glorious galaxy of states.

The fears and prognostications of the former depend entirely on a misunderstanding of the very principles of Mormonism. One of these is submission to the laws of the land. As early as in 1831 the Saints received as the word of the Lord a revelation in which it is plainly taught:

To this principle the Latter-day Saints have always been true both in this country and in foreign lands, and they will remain so, as long as they believe in the Gospel of Christ, of which it is an indispensable precept.

During the long controversy concerning plural marriage, the duty of all good citizens to conform to the constitutional laws of the country was never questioned. That was always admitted, as it always will be, by the Saints. But the point at issue was whether the prohibition of what the Saints considered a purely religious ordinance was constitutional. To ascertain this the matter was carried into the courts and finally to the highest judicial tribunal. That authority having decided the question, the famous manifesto of the President of the Church was the logical outcome of the teachings of the Gospel regarding the duty of the Saints to obey the laws of the land.

When these facts are considered it will become plain that the fears of some of our contemporaries are without foundation. The members of the Mormon Church, while they remain true to the Gospel, can no more violate the laws against contracting plural marriages than any other law. They would be liable not only to the punishment prescribed by the law, but also to the censure of the people to which they belong. The whole history of the Church proves this statement to be true. Mormonism has been preached extensively in various countries, but never have the missionaries urged or taught converts to break the laws of the countries to whose rulers they owed allegiance. On the contrary, they have preached loyalty, whatever was the form of government established. The Mormons can follow no other course in this country, blessed above all others in so many respects. The position of the Mormon Church is not that of defeat and humiliation; it is that of a people enthusiastic in its mission to set to the world a glorious example of loyalty, of patriotism, of justice. Have, therefore, no fear for the Mormons!

In the same issue of the News occurs a statement from one of its own former issues quoted from an exchange, as follows:—

The attitude of the Church is thus stated by the DESERET NEWS, the recognized organ of the Church party.

"The Mormon people accepted the doctrine of plural marriage as from God; they accepted the decision to cease its practice as from the same source. The divine law that they should be subject to presidents, magistrates, rulers, etc., they consider as binding upon them. There was an issue upon the subject of marriage, which was fully tested, with the result that magistrates and rulers refused to allow its practice. This point reached, God commanded the Saints to obey the ruling powers; he thus took the discussion of plural marriage as a practice entirely out of their jurisdiction. Whatever controversy there is, rests with him in behalf of that principle. The Mormons are not now a party thereof under the circumstances; nor could they institute a renewal of the practice without violating a direct command of the Almighty."

We are always pleased when we can get people on record in regard to vital issues; and it so happens that this question of obedience to the laws of the land is one of more than ordinary importance in the controversy so long waged between the Reorganized Church and the church in Utah. It is in fact so vital that it cannot be safely ignored and the real truths of the great work of the last dispensation be properly conserved.

We are not impressed with the correctness of this supposed statement attributed to Bishop Hart, copied by the Sentinel, but quite to the contrary; we believe it to have been a sort of campaign lie told a little too late to be of any avail; and too transparent to do any great mischief when told.

We call attention to one thing stated in the first quotation. The News quotes and calls attention to a revelation given in 1831, section 58; paragraphs 21, 22. (Utah Edition.) Same section, paragraph 5, Lamoni Edition.

This was given in August, 1831, twenty-one years before the so-called revelation on plural marriage was presented to the church. Mark, the period of time during which the church was to be subject to that command was to cover the years between August, 1831, to the day when Christ was to reign. Until he did so come to reign, the church was to be subject to the powers that be, that is, the laws of the land.

The News states that in this country and in foreign lands "the Latter Day Saints have always been true to this observance. The News means, of course, the people, or church it now represents in Utah, and the people, or church, the News believes to be in succession have always thus been true.

It now remains to inquire why the News and its constituency of the church in Utah, so persistently insists that Joseph and Hyrum Smith were living, teaching, and practicing what was directly and positively a crime punishable by the laws of the State of Illinois, where they lived. Does not the News know this? Or by what strange fatuity does it hold Joseph and Hyrum Smith up to its readers as violators of this command of God given in 1831, and as transgressors alike of the law of the State which was a part of the laws of the land; as much so as any other law by which theft, lying, robbery, arson, or murder were made crimes before the law. What consistency is there in claiming now that the Latter Day Saints were always true to the principle of obedience to the laws of the land, by virtue of the command of God given directly to them, and in the same breath, almost, and in the same journal brazen it out that Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the leaders of the church, one of whom was the man through which this command to be subject to the laws of the land came to the church, did that which the law forbade and provided a punishment for. The laws of every State in the Union in which the church existed and flourished from the institution of the church in 1830, to the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith in 1844, made a man a transgressor of law who married or lived with as a wife more than one woman at the same time. The News must know this; and why should it flaunt the statement of the continued loyalty of the church to the laws of the land so boastfully now, and at the same time contend so strongly that Joseph and Hyrum Smith were guilty of conduct which made them violators of both the command of 1831, quoted so carefully, and the laws of the land referred to in such command.

The son of the prophet who challenges such charge and demands an examination of the evidences by proper legal methods by which its correctness may be determined is far more consistent; for he does not admit that his father could have been so carelessly ignorant of the law of God found in the command, the force of which was to continue until Christ came, nor ignorant of the law of the State, which was a part of the laws of the land where he lived, and binding on him and all others; neither is he willing to accept incompetent testimony to support so inconsistent a charge.

President Brigham Young stated while living that Joseph Smith, the prophet, did not break a law of the land; and now the News comes to the front and corroborates that statement by claiming boldly that the church has "always been true" to the principle of keeping the "laws of the land." We are thankful for so much, and hope, sincerely, that in this regard "Utah is all right," as the News so earnestly states. We are also pleased with the conclusion offered by the News that "no fear for the Mormons;" that is, that there is no just ground to fear that they will prove recreant to the promises they have made.

ALL OF A PIECE.

THE following from the Globe-Democrat, of St. Louis, tells its own story; and is but one more evidence of the bigotry and ecclesiastical ostracism of the day:—

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., January 24.—The Ministerial Association of St. Joseph to-day passed upon the application of Rev. J. M. Terry, pastor of the Latter Day Saints' Church, for membership in that organization adversely, and Rev. Terry will not be admitted. Several weeks ago Rev. Terry, who is a very modest and unassuming expounder of the doctrine of Joseph Smith, and who is at the head of the church organized by the believers in that faith in this city some years since, made formal application for membership in the local organization of pastors and ministers known as the Ministerial Association. Rev. Terry desired to cooperate with the association, it is said, and to assist it in its work of reform in St. Joseph, and he felt that to be of greatest service he should be a member of the association. Mr. Terry was told his assistance was not desired.

Bro. Terry is a high-minded, noble man, whose association should please and benefit those whom he might come into relation with; and whose wisdom of speech and conduct would have offended none, but benefited all.

We regret, sincerely that the ministers' association did not "need" Bro. Terry's "help." What will help them to see?

GIVE ADDRESS IN FULL.

WE have a remittance of sixty cents from Sheridan, Missouri, without name or date. The sender is requested to give his name that the order may be filled.

Persons sending orders to the Herald Office should be particular to give their names, also their full address. Some give no address at all, while others give town but no State address. Complete addresses are necessary in all cases.

When remittances are made to continue subscriptions the same address should be given if for the same party, or the former address be changed as needed.

A WORD.

NEW subscribers for the HERALD can be furnished back numbers of the present volume—beginning January 1, 1896.

Those whose names have been dropped from the list because long delinquent, and those who contemplate taking the HERALD, will find it an opportune time to begin. Herald Office agents will please take notice that the present volume can be had complete.

Branches are requested to make the best selections possible when nominating parties to act as agents for the Herald Office. Men or women who have ability to transact business correctly, and who can keep accounts straight and push the interests of the publishing department, are desired, for the benefit of the office and of the Saints themselves. This by request of the Business Manager.

Good work is being done in this line, but much yet remains to be done in this respect as in other lines of work, for the good of the church and its membership.

THE following queer bit of news is going the rounds of the press. Fort Madison was a town before the Mormons settled at Nauvoo, being founded some years before 1839. There were not a dozen houses moved from the city after the exodus of the Saints, to any point near or remote without being torn down. There were not "seven hundred well built frame houses, clustered round the temple." And there was probably not a house of any size moved on the ice of the river, and drawn by oxen, either to Montrose (old Fort Brown), just opposite Nauvoo, or to Fort Madison, twelve miles above. We were living in the city from 1839 to 1866, with the exception of the time between September 12, 1846, to February 19, 1847; and the only house of any size or value torn down and moved from the city was a two story brick house owned by one D. B. Smith, who becoming incensed at some action of the city authorities to which he was opposed, tore the dwelling in which he lived to pieces, loaded it on flat boats, and took it to Keokuk, Iowa, where he rebuilt it and occupied it.

Such tales of moving houses bodily on the ice of the Mississippi River from Nauvoo to Madison, are of a piece with the story that Joseph Smith stole a raft of walnut logs from a mill seven miles below Nauvoo, and rafted up the stream to Nauvoo, where he so effectually hid the logs that the owner never found them.

These stories made those who dwell in Nauvoo during the time in which the acts stated are said to have been done to smile broadly at the lies fools tell and fools believe.

Russia may succeed in moving Kola over the frozen surface of the river Kola on ice formed by a Russian winter; but if she does, it will not be because such an experiment was tried at Nauvoo, Illinois, and was a success.

Will the people never be done lying about Nauvoo?

European engineers are much interested in the proposed removal of an entire town in Northern Russia to a point forty-three miles distant, the houses to be transported over the frozen surface of the river on sledges. The city of Kola, on the peninsula of the same name, is now situated at the confluence of two rivers, the Luttojoki and the Notosero, forming the Kola River, about fifty miles from the Arctic Ocean.

While the rivers and the bay below are navigable for even large vessels, Kola is situated so far inland that it is shut off from the sea by ice much longer than other seaports situated even farther north, like Vardoe, in Norwegian Lapland. The governor of the province of Archangelsk Baron Engelhardt, to whose jurisdiction the district of Kola belongs, has proposed to transfer the city to a better port nearer the mouth of the Kola River.

Imperial and ministerial consent having been given, active preparations are now being made to transfer Kola to the new location, which affords great advantages to navigation; and since it is surrounded by hills, which it will take but little expense to strongly fortify, it will certainly become a point of great strategic importance.

The project is not, however, a new one. The thing has been done on an extensive scale right here in the United States. When the Mormons left Nauvoo, Illinois, after the killing of Joseph Smith, they left behind them nearly seven hundred well built frame houses, clustered around their unfinished temple, the ruins of which, standing boldly out on a promontory, is one of the most picturesque features of Upper Mississippi River scenery. German grape growers came in and settled up the place. They wanted the hillsides for their vines.

The houses were sold to speculators, who moved them all in the course of three winters over the frozen basin of the river to a point twelve miles above on the Iowa shore, and founded what is now one of the most prosperous of western towns—Fort Madison. The houses were set on rude sledges and drawn by oxen.—New York World.

APROPOS OF CHURCH UNITY.

WE give an extract from an editorial of the Denver News of November 18, 1895, which in view of the wonderful things predicted of the World's Parliament of Religions, at the Fair of 1893, is rather suggestive reading.

Writing of Foreign Missions, the editor writes:—

The justification for all this sacrifice of brave and good men and women lies in the text, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." But it should be remembered that Christ went first to his own and it was only when they received him not that he went to the Gentiles. It was Christ who said: "It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it unto dogs," and it was he who commanded his disciples to leave those cities that would not receive them. That the Chinese have refused to receive our missionaries is sufficiently evident from the testimony of many ministers. Rev. William Ashmore said in an article appearing in the New York Recorder:—

"The revulsion from the old kindly feeling toward America has begun. Now they are learning to hate us. We can contemplate an epidemic of ill-will against us, extending over a fourth of the human race."

Another missionary speaking on missionary organization in China said:—

"The startling aspect of the question is that not only is heathenism extending, but immorality is increasing in all directions. Those of us who have lived long in China see the evil spreading before our eyes, especially around our great emporiums, with an ever-widening area every year. The Chinese are learning evil faster than they are learning good. They are adding foreign vices to their own; and in and around our centers of commerce they are less honest, less moral, and less susceptible to the preaching of divine truth than formerly, by a long way. We are not rising in the respect or esteem of the Chinese, as we expected. Officials, wealthy civilians, and literary men respect us less than they used to do and receive our visits less readily."

If this be true, and there is no reason to doubt it, common sense would counsel the recall of the missionaries now at work in China. It would be far better to set them to work converting the quarter of a million Chinamen in this country, who could return to convert their brothers. There must be more unity of purpose between Christians before they can hope to accomplish great things in foreign fields. In Shanghai there are seven different missions, each with a different theology and a different interpretation of the Bible. Admirable as Christian unity would be in Christian countries, in foreign fields it is absolutely essential to the welfare of the work and the workers.

THE SAINTS' HYMNAL.

THE first edition of twenty-five hundred copies of the Hymnal has been sold.

A new edition now in the hands of the bookbinders, will be ready for mailing about February 7. All orders will then be filled.

Additional orders solicited. Everybody should have a copy of this new hymn and tune book.

WE have a very interesting account of the introduction of the work of the church in Indiana, written by Kalgos, and published in the Indianapolis News for January 25. A picture of the first Christian church at Mount Eden, is given. It is a log structure, big stone chimney outside at one end, two windows on a side, and a door in the center of one side. The account was written from Atlanta, Indiana, and is quite good for the time. It makes the mistake of stating that Bro. Blair was from Utah; but otherwise notes his effort fairly correctly. It gives due mention of the Scott family, getting Harbitt for Harbert; and places Columbus and Leonard both in Michigan. It says at the close:—

While a few of the Scott brothers held to the doctrines of the Christian Church, others went with the Mormons, or Latter Day Saints, as they called themselves, and one brother, Robert Scott, became an Adventist, and built a church of his own a mile south of Scottsville.

Of these ten brothers, James M., Varde-man, Robert, Richard, David, Harber, and John were preachers. The other three brothers were Reasor, Wesley, and Moses.

The Scott family was also remarkable for musical talent. John Scott was a teacher of vocal music of more than local reputation, and his family of two boys and five girls were remarkably gifted in music. The singing in the Mt. Eden church of Latter Day Saints is something I shall never forget.

John Scott's two sons, Columbus and Leonard, are both noted preachers in the church of Latter Day Saints, and are now located in Michigan. Leonard Scott was a wild and unruly boy, and brooked all parental restraint, often running away from home to beg something to eat or tobacco to chew. I remember his coming to my father's house, from his home a mile away, one morning in midwinter, when the ground was covered with snow, in his bare feet. But these hardships seemingly brought out his better qualities, and he became an eloquent preacher and a learned and talented man. KALGOS.

THE following is the official record, in Temple Lot case as published from press dispatches in Chicago Tribune, for January 28, 1896:—

849—The Church of Christ at Independence, Missouri, et al, appellants, vs. The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; petition for a writ of certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit denied.

If there shall be an opinion handed down by the court we shall give it to the HERALD readers as soon as received.

This fails to do the church justice, as we understand the matter; but having appealed to Cæsar, we must take Cæsar's judgment.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. COLUMBUS SCOTT, Sandyville, Iowa, 29th ult.:—

Large audiences attending our meetings here. I fear we are too popular here; no one going for us. Splendid liberty; wondrous interest. Bro. Kephart is fifteen miles southwest and has the country stirred for miles around south of Indianola—so many friends he seldom stays over two nights with one. Truth is working; people wondering and reading. Pray for us.

BRO. J. W. WIGHT, in Little Sioux district, Iowa, writes, January 27:—

Two more "buried with Christ" yesterday, and we are in hopes of "troubling the waters" again next Sunday. Closed a three weeks' series last night with a packed house. Go to Six Mile to-day for one week at least.

BRO. C. H. BURR, Ono, Wisconsin, 27th ult.:—

Bro. L. E. Hills and the writer came here on the 22d, intending to remain and preach a week or two, but as there is at present no available place to hold our services we will remain over Sunday only, holding a few services in the homes of the Saints and then move on to other places where we have been invited.

BRO. S. N. GRAY, Turner, Missouri, January 22:—

Bro. Spurlock closed his debate with Reverend Mills, of the Christian order, on Saturday, the 11th. He is feeling well over the result; and so are the Saints. He had no elder to help him, but surely the Lord was with him. At close of debate he was requested to preach that evening, also on Sunday morning and evening, which he did to a crowded house. He baptized my oldest boy, Charles E, aged twenty-two. All my children are now members of the church—five boys and two girls.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH states in a letter dated Salt Lake City, January 25, that his associates are all diligent, and occupying faithfully and wisely as opportunities offer. H. O. Smith is in Utah; R. J. Anthony and S. D. Condit in Idaho; J. H. Wells and Gomer Reese in Montana. Reports indicating interest and prospects good in Montana and Idaho. In Utah we are holding our own, which is as much as can be expected under present conditions.

Bro. Luke Storey, of Latah, Washington, writing for information of a brother in Australia, states that thirty years ago he was president of the South Australian mission of the Utah Church; that there was no branch of that church at Adelaide, but there were branches at "Noawood," Woodside, and Morfotvale; that the first two were broken up in 1855, the latter in 1861.

Bro. Henry Grim, writing from Nacogdoches, Texas, states that because of poor health he is unable to do ministerial labor, but hopes at no distant day to resume the work of preaching. He relates a marked case of healing, resulting from baptism and administration. He asks prayer in behalf of a Sr. Hutchinson who has been greatly afflicted; also for himself that his strength and health be increased.

We acknowledge receipt of letters from various brethren—J. C. Epperly, Millersburg, Illinois; A. B. McCulloch, Coleman, Michigan; Samuel White, Diamonddale, Michigan; Thos. Street, Midway, Utah; each containing some good word of testimony or instruction. It would require a vast amount of literature to relate all the good things received by the people of God. Such as are of import to the whole body we try to publish, as space permits. Many things of a personal character we are obliged to omit.

Mr. J. G. Ettinger, of Taylorville, Illinois, writes the Herald Office requesting that some minister be sent to baptize him and his family. They were led to investigate by reading a tract handed them by a passing brother. Who can minister for good to these people hungering for spiritual food and comfort?

Bro. Alma Kent reports the Saints of Blue Rapids, Kansas, making an earnest effort to occupy higher ground, by a movement to build a chapel. Ground has been secured and the work of building commenced. Like others all over the land they were feeling the stringency caused by hard times.

Bro. W. W. Blair arrived home from Pittsburg, Washington, and other eastern points, on the 28th ult.

The world moves—the world we mean; the State Evangelist for South Dakota of the Campbellite Church is receiving members who have been sprinkled without requiring them to be immersed by him or his coministers. See Bro. C. J. Hunt's letter in this issue. It is well; sprinkling is not baptism, nor does immersion by an unauthorized minister constitute an induction into the body of Christ.

Owing to the energetic representations of United States Minister Terrill, Miss Clara Barton and her party will be permitted by the Turkish Government to distribute relief to the distressed Armenians, although the Red Cross Society will not be permitted to figure in the work. Senators Frye, Mills, Cullom, and others have made vigorous references to and severe denunciations of the barbarity of the Turkish Government toward the Armenians. The former favors a Russian protectorate over Armenia; others the sending of war vessels to Constantinople, by the great powers, to compel a change of attitude toward the oppressed people.

[THE following letter addressed to Sr. Emma Burton will, we believe, prove interesting to the sisters on this side of the ocean, because of its quaint and interesting style and the childlike, gospel faith which breathes in every sentence.]

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Dec. 7, 1895.

To Emma, my Beloved Sister in the Lord Jesus Christ, our Life. Amen:—I write to inform you that the letter you wrote to me and all the sisters did not reach me. We know, however, that you wrote a letter to me and to all the sisters through the second letter you wrote to us. At four p. m. in the evening of December 4, Tuane and Metuaore told me about that letter, and when I heard of it from them at that hour I had great joy with them, and I asked them to come close to us where we were eating and we ate our evening meal together, and it was then that they told me about that letter. That very hour I asked Tuane to come quickly with me to the post office, and when we arrived there I asked the men in the post office about it and they said it had not come. I think they threw it away, and therefore I would like you to write another in its place, because we know nothing whatever about what was in that letter: your thoughts, your reasonings, your exhortations, warnings, and great love. And therefore, my beloved and admired sister, my joy and my crown, may your exhortations to me be many in the Lord Jesus Christ, our Life. I desire that we should all meet again in Tahiti. It would be very good. Emma and Joseph, I desire that we should all meet again in Tahiti with joy in the Lord Jesus Christ, our Life. Amen. Make known my love to the church, viz.: to the Prophet Joseph, the apostles, seventies, high priests, bishops, elders, priests, teachers, deacons, brethren, sisters, boys and girls. May they all live in God. Do not forget me. I will not forget you. May we all dwell in God, and in the word of his love. Amen.

From Haua, your loving little sister in the Lord. Amen.

THE WEB OF LIFE.

AT some period in our existence we reach that eminence in our thoughts where we can look back over our past life and view our checkered career and thank God for each experience, whether of joy or sorrow, which has helped to mold and form our character. When such a point has been reached and we can feel as truly grateful for the sorrowful episodes as well as the happy hours with which our memory of past life is replete, we believe that from that moment we will be able to make greater strides along the path mapped out for us to follow, than ever before; as we will then hail each new experience, as a milestone revealing unto us the progress which we have made on the toilsome journey of life. Even should some of these be none of the brightest, yet when viewed in the new light which has illumined our mind and shone round about us, showing us the whys and wherefores before concealed, we feel we could not afford to miss one of them, much less deplore their existence for we have now discovered that,

"Like warp and woof our destinies
Are woven fast,
Linked in sympathy like the keys
Of an organ vast.

"Pluck one thread, and the web ye mar;
Break but one
Of a thousand keys, and the paining jar
Through all will run."

Thus each new joy or sorrow, each act which enables us to advance a step farther, is like a thread in the hands of the weaver; we take the thread of each new experience and weave it into the web of life; each new thread whether colored with joy or sorrow adds luster to the fabric which, under our skillful or bungling hands grows day by day and year by year. Can we afford, then, to lose one iota of the experience to be ours, by timidly shrinking from the paths of duty and right, for fear that there may be added a pang to the already burdened heart? Nay, we cannot afford to shrink from the portion allotted to us lest we break a thread and mar the web of the beautiful fabric in the loom of life, thereby causing a deep and lasting regret when the great Overseer shall call for our handiwork and it is taken from the loom and presented before the Master to be placed side by side with the labors of others, its merits judged, and we rewarded accordingly.

We are unable to observe our progress during the weaving process, for the reason that the right side is ever toward the Master; but if we endeavor to faithfully follow the perfect pattern placed before us, Christ, although we do not see the fabric grow beneath our hands, yet every kind word, every thoughtful act, every pure thought and motive, as well as each unselfish act of self-denial, each holy ambition, each unspoken prayer for strength and guidance, has enabled us to follow more closely the divine pattern; and when at last our work is finished, the threads are cut, and it is taken from the loom, we shall stand with our colaborers and gaze upon the wonderful result of life's labor. How eagerly we gaze, hoping to find it perfect, yet fearing the delicate workmanship may have been irrevocably injured by some thoughtless act of ours. Anxiously we scan each portion of the shining mass. Tremblingly we turn it over, expecting to find it stained by our tears or blotted and discolored by our doubts and fears, when we agonizingly worked on through dark days of trial, almost fainting beneath the strain placed upon us. With what joy we discover that here the warp and woof have been imbued with the beautiful colors of the rainbow with which Hope encircled us during those hours of dark foreboding. Here and there we find the smiles we have diffused over another's pathway, running in wavy lines through the woof and sparkling like crinkled sunshine. The assistance given to some other brother or sister in an hour of trial has made our web but the firmer and stronger.

But ah! the bitter words sometimes spoken have left blots in different places upon the fair fabric. The work of moments and hours, days and weeks, months and years, pass in silent review. Thus we carefully examine our handiwork and joyful indeed may we be if we have wrought diligently and faithfully and the pattern is pleasing and acceptable unto the Master, that he may say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

MINA A. PERKINS.

January 1, 1896.

CLARKSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 12.

Dear Sisters:—More than two years have passed since my last writing. During that time I have received great comfort and consolation from your letters in the hours of my affliction. I feel my indebtedness to God for his goodness to me. His promise was this: "I the Lord will be with thee. Be thou patient and I will watch over thee." O how faithfully that promise has been fulfilled! In my admiration for the gospel of Jesus Christ I am often carried away to the bright future when I with others shall have learned my duty by the things we have suffered. Then shall we come up higher and higher. Then will it be seen in our countenances that the word of God is established in our hearts.

To the mothers I would say, Be of good cheer; pray for the welfare of Zion and the young people of God; and not them only, but pray for the world, and we may live to see the desire of our hearts fulfilled in families least expected. I ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of Mrs. Talo, who has not walked a step in sixteen years. She never has heard the gospel preached in its purity. I believe she will obey when she has the chance. I also ask the prayers of all the Saints in behalf of my afflicted sister that she may get well of her affliction.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR FEBRUARY.

Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and if he had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires toward God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul.—Mosiah 9: 9.

Thursday, Feb. 6.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church. Memory Verses.—Romans 12: 9-21.

Thursday, Feb. 13.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—Ecclesiastes 11: 7-10.

Thursday, Feb. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—3 John 2-8.

Thursday, Feb. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 59: 19-21.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. CINA BUTTS, of Decatur, Nebraska, earnestly requests the faith and prayers of the Union in behalf of her brother, who is sorely afflicted, that he may be healed and that the affliction may be the means of bringing him back to God, that he may yet be an instrument in his hands of doing much good.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR.

"Little children are loving, simple, true,
Our Father made them so;
And would you teach them? be so, too,
And stoop to what they know.
"Teach them with pictures, objects, things
On which they love to look—
Flowers, pebbles, insects, birds on wings—
These are God's spelling book."

WE would all like separate rooms for the little folks, where the infant class might have the little red chairs, the kindergarten table on which the many little articles for making the lesson impressive might be constructed; where the primary class might march and sing unobserved by the big folks; we would like maps and wall decorations, blackboards and colored crayons; but in absence of many or all of these we must learn to make use of the material we have. A curtain or a screen may serve the purpose of a partition, slates or tablets may take the place of a blackboard, though the energetic teacher is apt to find some way of getting the almost indispensable blackboard. If she is an artist her talent will not come amiss, but it is not at all necessary that she be one.

A dot or a dash may represent a person or place as well as a real picture of the same, provided the class understand your representation. If you use colored crayons, blue may represent water, red the enemy—the Egyptians, etc. The — may be used to advantage with pupils that read script readily. In reviewing a portion of the life of Moses we may write, Moses was born in — and was the son of —, and —. He was hidden — — on account of the command of — —. He was one day found in — — of — by the — — who adopted him.

Scripture texts may be written in the same way. Take the lesson for the next Sunday, ask each member of the class to write a verse at home, omitting the important words, then the next Sunday exchange slips, having the omissions supplied. The golden texts of the quarter may be reviewed from Sabbath to Sabbath by the use of key words. For lesson No. 1 of present quarter we may use — "our help;" No. 2, "our refuge;" No. 3, "trust in the"—; No. 4, "I AM."

A golden text ladder may be constructed, one step for each Sunday, the steps made of cardboard, each bearing a key word."

The teacher may lay out an outline map of the country under consideration, having the class locate divisions, rivers, cities, etc., trace journeyings, and add such other items as are brought out in the lessons from week to week. Diagrams should be so plain and pointed that their meaning cannot be misunderstood.

For the little folks, we think the unique outlines in the Primary Quarterly just the needed thing for blackboard work. Honor to whom honor is due. It is our privilege to examine the best quarterlies published, and we feel that we have every reason to be proud of our own publications—Senior, Intermediate, and Primary.

THE PRESENT NEEDS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

IN approaching this subject I do so with a consciousness that from my point of view I shall not be able to give it anything like a comprehensive discussion, neither may I hope to introduce any truths before unknown; for, as the proverb declares, "There is no new thing under the sun." But if I am able to present any truth in a different aspect, so that new light may be thrown upon it, I shall be glad.

As it would be impossible to prescribe any one course of treatment that would be in all points applicable to every patient in a hospital, so it would be equally impractical to apply the same measures of reform to each Sunday school in this Association. As there is one important factor in the treatment of every disease, as well as in the healthy growth and development of the body, that is the increase of vital force, without which there is nothing to build upon, so in the Sunday school. Its healthy growth and development is not possible unless there be found an active spiritual life among its members; and especially is this true in regard to the superintendent and teachers whose personal influence is most directly reflected upon the school. If I were asked what is the greatest present need in the Sunday school work, I could give but this answer,—a greater endowment to the officers and teachers by the operation of the Spirit, of love toward God and of desire for saving of souls. With this conclusion I believe all will agree, but this does not necessarily imply that these qualities are not now possessed by our Sunday school workers; for it is a fact that the most earnest and devoted one feels most deeply the constant need of such endowment.

If the work done in the Sunday school be not spiritual it amounts to but little so far as its filling its true mission is concerned. When I speak of spiritual work, I do not refer simply to the emotional effect which is so often mistaken for the spiritual, but to that higher, more enduring work,—the communication of divine intelligence to the human mind, the taking of the things of the Father and showing them unto us, the testimony of the mission of Jesus and the great work of redemption wrought out in him. This is a part of the work of the Spirit and it is this work for which a special endowment is needed by the Sunday school workers, that through them may be communicated the divine message of truth which carries conviction to the heart of the obedient and finds its response.

It is worse than useless for us then to go forth to this labor in our own strength and wisdom or in any spirit of self-seeking or self-glorification. We might indeed gather around us many kindred spirits, have the form of organization and create a society for mutual admiration as is done in the world, but none would be gathered to the true fold of Christ. The "sheep" would not hear our voice, "for a stranger they will not follow."

The command given to the ministry, "Except you have the Spirit you shall not teach," is equally applicable to the Sunday school worker. We might have the written word committed to memory, but as Trumbull truly says, "Telling is not teaching," and "reciting is not learning," so without the Spirit to unfold its truths to the mind, its reception is not complete. "No man knoweth the things of God but by the Spirit of God" is the declaration of the great teacher, and I believe that no one has understood better than he the mysteries of the communication of divine truth. What a sacred task it is then to which we are called as Sunday school workers! We must needs give it our most earnest consecration. The endowment for this work does not come to us without our seeking. It will be fruitless for us if we take up our work in a careless manner. We should realize the measure of its importance and enter into the preparation for it with prayerful hearts. The exhortation to "seek knowledge by study and by prayer" must surely be heeded by the successful Sunday school worker. If we postpone our study and supplication until the last hour we cannot expect that then will be given us the unction we need, for which we were commanded to seek.

I believe if we can have for a superintendent a man or woman of spiritual intelligence, whose heart is in the work, together with a force of prayerful and devoted teachers, we may feel assured that in due time we shall have a school which will not only be a model in its appointments, but will manifest the vigor of growth and will display the blessed fruitage of souls brought to the knowledge of God through obedience to his laws. This is demonstrated in all our observations and experiences.

But granted the spiritual endowment and the necessary consecration, how are these results to be obtained? What are the means for their accomplishment? These are the questions which the spiritually intelligent superintendent will seek to solve, and if his heart is in the work he will not rest until he has found his answer. The solution will not be the same for all schools, as all schools have not the same needs; consequently it requires a great amount of study to adapt the methods to the conditions. One of our present needs is this constant study on the part of superintendents to meet the demands of their schools. Conditions change, classes develop and must be rearranged, and teachers adapted to each must be provided.

A school should not be allowed to run in a rut until it becomes like an automatic machine which performs the same revolutions whatever the material fed in. The Sunday school superintendent, then, needs to be ever alert and progressive, quick to examine into and apply every method which promises to increase the interest and promote the welfare of his school. Everything like fogyism should be laid aside; the disposition to hold to a thing just because we are used to it, or to reject a method simply because it is new, is fatal to progress. Of course the opposite extreme should be avoided, as it would be folly to adopt something that had only the merit of being new, though often the introduction of a new exercise of equal merit will stimulate interest because it gives variety and breaks monotony.

It is true that some of our schools labor under many disadvantages, having but few members and consequently lacking talent and material for carrying out the most approved methods. Hence the methods must be modified to meet the needs of each case. These schools need the fostering care of the Association through the counsel and encouragement of its officers.

Such schools should not think that they can make no progress, however, for talent will be developed by bringing into use that already possessed, and often when there is a seeming lack of talent it proves to be only a need of more courage and determination. While their members may be few they should be stimulated by the thought that one of the first steps toward increasing the attendance of a school is to make its sessions as interesting as possible; nor does this depend on the superintendent alone, but quite as much on the teachers.

As superintendents and teachers we should awaken more to the vital importance of learning the art of teaching. I would call attention to becoming acquainted with the real life and interests of our pupils by visiting them in their homes, thereby creating the bond of sympathy so helpful to the mutual work of teacher and pupil.

I would like to see a more devoted missionary spirit diffused in our schools; for in the work of gathering in as well as in holding our scholars, we are far behind our opportunities and do not display even the zeal of other religious bodies. When we appoint visiting committees to solicit attendance, too often it seems to be regarded as merely an honorary office and little effort is made to enter into the spirit of it. Now this should be remedied; indeed, every teacher and every member who is interested at all in the school should appoint himself a committee of one to invite new members at every opportunity.

It has not been my purpose in this paper to review in detail the many helpful methods and impressive exercises which should be introduced in our schools whereby our work may be made more effectual. These are from time to time demonstrated by example in our conventions. Let each of us then make sure that we take these with us, not as mere impressions, but that our minds digest them so thoroughly that the parts which would be helpful in our work may be properly assimilated.

Thus with increased enthusiasm in our scholars coupled with deeper earnestness and devotion in our teachers, both working together under the direction of superintendents fully alive and all seeking the inspiration and strength of the Holy Spirit, we shall find our labors crowned with an abundant harvest. Our Sunday schools will occupy higher and still higher ground until that day when it shall be said "He cometh."

CAIN HILL, Mo., Jan. 20.

Editors Herald:—Since I wrote I have been very busy, having preached at Shady Grove in White County; and at Ingleside and Oakland in Falkner County, Arkansas; and Cain Hill, Missouri. I came to the last-named place on December 5, and raised quite an interest, but had to leave when I had preached only four times; but by request of Bro. and Sr. Frisbie, and of some who do not belong to the church, I promised to return; so I came back on the 18th and commenced meeting with fair-sized audiences that increased in number at each meeting.

I went to Falkner County, Arkansas, December 10, and preached thirteen sermons at Ingleside, and had a very good hearing considering the bad weather. Bro. J. S. Moore is president of that branch and deserves much credit for his zeal and untiring efforts to feed the flock. He rendered valuable assistance in the meeting. The Saints were strengthened. One was baptized at the close.

The time came for the debate between J. H. Lawson and the writer, but the Campbellites wanted to defer it until the fourth Monday in July; and as it was Mr. Lawson's challenge, I gave them liberty. On Christmas Day I had the pleasure of meeting about one hundred people at Bro. J. S. Moore's house; not to preach, but to solemnize the marriage of Bro. John Brown and Sr. Addie Moore, and Bro. Baxter Hooks and Sr. Maggie Moore, both daughters of Bro. J. S. Moore.

On the 26th I commenced a meeting at Oakland, and the Christian order wrote for Lawson to come immediately; but it was all secret to me, and I closed my meeting and left the neighborhood thinking I would have a few days' rest. But the same day Mr. Lawson came, wrote out a challenge, and sent for me to come and defend my teaching if I thought I could do it successfully, as he intended to stay all the week and would expose it whether I was present or not. So I made myself ready and started from Bro. Pinson's at eight o'clock p. m. to go a distance of six or seven miles, and next morning called on Mr. Lawson, and by the middle of the afternoon we were engaged in a public debate on church propositions, which lasted three days and a half, closing on Saturday, January 4, at noon. I did not have time to stay to see what the result was, but believe from the tokens that it was a grand victory for our cause. One of the Christians (so-called) gave me a quarter and said, "Take this; it will help you a little; you have been a great help to me." And many of his brethren came and shook hands, and some wished me Godspeed and a speedy return; and one man said he would be ready to go with me when I came back.

At half past eight p. m. I was at Bald Knob; and on January 5 I baptized one. At half past eight that evening I took train for Hardy, and on the 6th took wagon for a distance of about eighteen miles across the mountain to Center, in Sharp County, and at ten a. m. the 7th I was in another debate—with H. T. King, another Christian or Campbellite—to last five days.

King lives at Mount Vernon, Missouri, and is the roughest man I ever saw in debate. He told the president moderator that he intended to have his way rule or no rule, and he very nearly made his word good along that line. He left my affirmative argument almost entirely alone and resorted to coarse stories from Beadle, Smucker, and many other things that have been many times refuted; and in his closing speech exhorted the people to read the history of Mormonism, and said if they would read it no lady would ever welcome Elder Ward to her home again. I was blessed with good liberty in every speech except one, and that was my first affirmative speech. We had a large crowd in attendance. I am satisfied this second debate with King, as also the first, will terminate in the salvation of many souls—if they can be followed up with protracted efforts in due time.

The work is opening up in Northern Arkansas. Calls are coming from several places that we cannot attend to. I will go from here to Coats, Arkansas.

Your brother,

JOSEPH WARD.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Jan. 15.

Editors Herald:—As soon as I had obeyed the gospel I felt a burning desire that others should know about it too, so I took every opportunity of telling all that I knew to all that came within the sound of my voice. We opened our house for the elders and had preaching every Sunday evening, going to Dickenson Street in the morning. Others were baptized, and ultimately we were organized into a branch, now known as the Northeast Manchester. We have had some glorious meetings and have felt that it was a foretaste of our heavenly home. There are many things we cannot as yet understand, but the passage in James which says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not," has given me comfort; also another, which says: "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

I long many times to see and know the brethren and sisters whose letters we read week after week, but am content to wait God's time for everything. I pray that the people of God may arise in strength and work while it is called to-day.

Your sister,

E. A. RHODES.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—The good work still goes on in this place. I had the pleasure of baptizing six here on the 24th inst. I am still holding meetings in a private house. The Baptists turned us out. We have a membership of twenty-two in town and adjacent country, and quite a number are interested, and no doubt others will unite with us ere long. We are looking forward to an organization of a branch at this place, but it may not be affected this conference year.

I. P. BAGGERLY.

POCAHONTAS, Iowa, Jan. 31.

Editors Herald:—At this place Bro. J. F. McDowell met and defeated Clark Braden in debate last October. I hear many kind words expressed for Bro. McDowell.

G. W. Elliot, of Disciplesism, has been holding meetings here for three weeks and is making some converts. He accepts members into his church that have been sprinkled without baptizing them. How is that for that "Bible and Bible alone" church? Mr. Elliot is State Evangelist for South Dakota.

I begin meetings in the courthouse to-morrow night.

C. J. HUNT.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—I have been a reader of your pages from my boyhood days, now thirty-one years; and you have become as one of the family, in the sense that I do not see how we could get along without you. Thirty-one years is a good long time, and to-day you are as much thought of as at any time in the past. When I read the statement of the Business Manager, of the vast amount of money due the church for the Herald, Hope, and books, I asked the question, How comes this? and why have the Saints not paid? Is it because they could not, or is it a matter of carelessness? I think the latter is the reason. I presume that there are some that cannot pay; but they are very few. The probable reason as stated is that we get careless. I judge this from my own experience and my observation.

I notice that as I went through our district I would hear the remarks, "Well, I must pay for my Herald," or "Hope, or "Ensign." And indeed I have reason to believe that they intended to do so. In picking up the Herald I would notice that on the wrapper would be "June, 92," or "93." This, of course, showed that these were two and three years unpaid for. Some of those persons did not lack for means, for they have good homes, stock, and are well-to-do; and there is no good reason given why they should let the church carry them for two or three years. When I say church I understand it so; for the publishing department is the property of the church; and what is to the interest of that department is to the interest of the church; and what is the church's is mine and yours, and I believe that as members we should work to that understanding.

I wish to offer a suggestion; if it is worthy of consideration, all well and good; if not, no harm is done.

1. In place of having on the wrapper how the account stands, have it on the first page of the Herald, so that every time we take up the paper the label will remind us of our obligation.

2. Let the Business Manager notify the church that he will insist that all who are in debt must pay, or give good reason why they cannot.

3. In connection with this, let it be understood that the accounts will be sent to the book agent in the branch, or to the district president, or Bishop's agent. Let them call on all that are in debt and make arrangements to collect.

I believe that if there is one or more agents in every district, or one in each branch, that has the account, that nearly all of the outstanding accounts can be collected. It will also be a means of convenience to all that wish to pay for the church papers. I know that I have kept the money for months, that I would have paid in if the agent had called my attention to it, and would have sent it for me.

I mention the above as I think that the church can get in much of the outstanding accounts by having the matter placed in the hands of some collectors. I have learned in the few years I have been in business that if I wait for all to call or send me what they owe, ninety per cent will put me off for months; and some will never pay; but when we send our collector out he gives them to understand that he will call again if not paid at first, that they will then make arrangements to pay. Now, in the church we believe that there are none but what are honest, and will pay when they can; but as there are so many places to pay out money, the first call generally gets the pay.

I am anxious to see the outstanding accounts reduced to at least one half this year—1896.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM LEWIS.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 27.

Editors Herald:—Two years ago I was converted to Christ. I never heard a sermon until Bro. George Shute came and preached and his first effort convinced me that I was wrong. I had been a member of the Christian Church over thirty years and a deacon for twelve years, and thought it the only true church; but learned that they failed to preach the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Spirit, etc. They believe that all ceased when the last apostle died, though they cannot prove that John the Revelator is dead.

Bro. J. A. Davis is preaching near here with a good interest on the part of the people. I am to preach to-morrow evening—my third attempt since ordination. Brn. J. T. and J. A. Davis organized our branch October 12, 1895.

Your brother,

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—For a long time I could not see what my life was spared for, but I can see that the good Master had something for me to do; and I am trying to do my duty as far as my circumstances permit. I feel well and find the good Spirit of the Master with me in every time of need.

In the past year and nine months I have gotten the work started at Chelsea Park, Kansas City, Kansas. We now have a branch there in good shape, and the people are hearing the gospel preached by the elders and priests, and are coming by the ones and twos; and so the good work goes on, and we are thankful.

I went to Olathe, Kansas, last August, by request, and preached a number of times, and as result of labor done at that time and place with two dear souls, they came to Armstrong church on the 12th of January and were baptized, and at the afternoon meeting were confirmed, and went home with glad hearts. And I will here say that they had been members of the Hedrickites. They told me they had no peace of mind for months, but felt a spirit of discontent that had almost destroyed all hope they ever had.

I shall go to Olathe again soon; perhaps in two or three days, if the Lord will. I want to do all I can for the good of the work, as I am not able to work now as formerly, I must work in the vineyard of the Lord. I can do that, and the Lord is blessing me in so doing, and I am told by the Spirit that my work is to preach the gospel the remainder of my days and that the Lord will bless me in doing so; and I have made up my mind to go and do whatever the Lord wants me to do, by the help of his Holy Spirit. I ask the dear Saints to pray for me that I may do his will, and my own only as my will shall be in keeping with God's will.

I will here say that I am ready and willing to go at any time I am needed and where I have the means to go.

Your brother,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

SHERIDAN, Nev., Jan. 21.

Editors Herald:—The Herald is much appreciated by us. At present we have no one preaching for us as a missionary in the district, but we local men do what we can, and have our meetings as often as weather and circumstances will allow. The Saints of Nevada are scattered and it is not convenient for regular meetings, and in the absence of a missionary are rather careless in attending until some stranger or able minister comes; then everybody rushes pell mell to meeting. People of the world think us very strange and call us men worshipers; but a few are not so and can stand alone. The Lord has blessed us many times with his Spirit and given many testimonies of his divine will when faithful in serving him.

Bro. W. W. Blair preached here last October with good effect. Many expressed their approval of his counsel. The effect will be lasting on the membership and the people in general. Some were almost ready to obey. It depends a great deal upon our conduct as members. We can preach by our walk and conversation and win our neighbors and friends.

I would like to relate an instance of healing. Ellen, the eldest daughter of Bro. Val-lam, had been afflicted since her mother's death with a weakness of her mind, and a great deal of money and care had been expended upon her, but without avail. Previous to the assembling of General Conference at Lamoni her sister wrote requesting prayer in her behalf. She was prayed for at a morning prayer meeting and it was declared by prophecy and tongues that she would be healed. A sister present wrote an account of it, requesting that the branch where she resided should convene and fast and pray for her, and that she would be remembered. After the adjournment of conference the Diamond Valley branch met in May, in a little schoolhouse on the hillside, and that day will never be forgotten by the writer. She was administered to and the promise was verified, and many blessings were pronounced on condition of faithfulness. At the conclusion we all wept for joy; it was five minutes before anyone could speak; the Spirit of God filled the house in a marvelous way, and since that day Sr. Ellen has been well. She has continued well ever since; to God be the glory.

This blessing confirms the divinity of the latter-day work. We should be careful and not make light of such things, for God will not trifle with us if we will not live in accord with his commands. The blessings will be withdrawn and we be left in greater darkness than before, and we lost to God and the life beyond. O, how great is the goodness of God to his children! Dear Saints, let us renew our covenant in the gospel and be diligent and faithful.

We can see the order of God;—it was not necessary to send a thousand miles for an officer of high standing or calling; the command was to the branch officers and members to fast and put our trust in God. O, what privileges the Saints of God have! How thankful and humble we should be every day of our lives. We shudder sometimes, when we think how weak we are. But, God has all power; he can support us and carry us safely through all the experiences of life. Like Jacob of old, I can say that God has supported me all through. This article may do good to some who have doubted the authority of the Reorganized Church.

Your brother,

D. R. JONES.

CAMERON, Neb., Jan. 24.

Editors Herald:—Will some of the readers of the Herald please send books, papers, or tracts to distribute among the people? I am preaching in Hall County and have the G. A. R. hall. We have a large crowd and an excellent interest. I am very thankful to all the Saints that have sent me tracts and papers before. We have had the privilege of warning a great many people. There are two revivals going on in this section; one just a mile away; but we feel thankful to know we have the attention of the people. Our music is quite a help to the cause. Many are confessing that they believe and understand the Bible better than they ever did. Only one has been baptized here, but there are several families that seem very near the kingdom and the way appears to be preparing to warn other congregations around us. With best wishes for Zion's prosperity,

Yours in bonds,

CALKINSVILLE, Mich., Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—I have not been idle; have been preaching very hard and trying to get the people to see the light of the gospel; also trying to get settled down to keep house. My home is now at Coleman, Michigan, where I expect to stay until the Lord wishes me to go elsewhere.

I am right in the midst of a large field of work and hope to be able to do much good.

When I came here prejudice was very strong against us, but now people who were strongly opposed to the work are coming to hear and are very much interested. Brn. Cornish and Martindale have done quite a lot of preaching here, also Bro. Baily. Musser came and stirred up the people against us and some were very bitter, but now I am having large crowds and prospects are good for some to come into the fold. Everything is so plain; it seems strange that people cannot see the glorious light of the gospel. The people seem to be anxious for a debate here, and I think that if they had one it would do good.

In bonds,

F. C. SMITH.

FREMONT, Neb., Jan. 29.

Editors Herald:—After my call at Smithland I attended to home duties, preaching twice in the branch and assisting at Sunday school. Here is found a greater interest than usual, and an intelligent manifestation of the interest had.

On the 4th inst. I again resumed missionary labor in field appointed. My first preaching was done on the 5th at the Omaha Agency at the Presbyterian church. Through the kindness of the pastor, W. A. Galt, I occupied the church both afternoon and evening, having in attendance at both services about forty Indians, principally young men and women, whose example in deportment would have put to shame some of the young people of the church who whisper and pass notes to one another during services. The minister and his companion entertained us as hospitably as it was possible, for which we were very grateful.

On the 7th Bro. William Owens and I journeyed to a place near Craig, where an opening had been obtained. When we arrived at the schoolhouse we found a wooden plug driven in the keyhole, which was removed, and we spoke with fair liberty to an audience of about twenty-five. The next night a nail had been driven in the keyhole, which necessitated our getting in the window and in that way opening the door. The audience was small, and now and then a pebble or grain of corn would strike the wall near us, and at the close a handful of what sounded like small stones were thrown through the window at me; but all missed aim.

There being no interest and much opposition we went the next day to Tekamah, where Bro. Whitman had created some interest, and by his request continued there till the 14th, preaching each night with increasing interest, at the residence of Bro. Teeter. Here the churches had been refused the Saints, and hall rent was so high that with so little money in the country we could not obtain any of them. The people have, on account of drought, lost all or nearly all their crops here for two years.

On the 14th I began a series of meetings at Decatur, in the Presbyterian church, there being good crowds and excellent interest shown, the interest increasing until the last, when four expressed themselves as expecting to be baptized in the near future. I preached at Blair on the evening of the 20th to a small audience. A great need for labor exists here. Began services at Fremont on the evening of the 21st and with the exception of Saturday and Sunday nights have preached here each night. Some interest shown and much need of missionary work exists.

After services Friday night, a telegram summoned me to Decatur to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. James W. Williams who had died that afternoon from the result of a wound caused by a shot from a revolver accidentally discharged while he and a young lady were playing with it. The lesson to be learned from this is not to play with a gun of any description, even though it may be thought not to be loaded.

People seem to be very much surprised that they have been so misinformed in regard to the belief of the Saints, and many where I have labored are favorably impressed and are investigating to learn God's will. From every place I have been comes the cry, "Come again soon," except near Craig and at the Omaha Agency, and from our efforts at the latter place I have heard nothing unfavorable.

What this mission needs is good crops and zealous laborers. In the missionary work I find that the Sunday school must not be neglected, for great is the need of help in this department of church work; and, thank God, there are a few who are trying to prepare themselves for God's service in the Sunday school work, and the prospect for the future is slightly brighter. In general I must say I could not have been treated with greater kindness, considering the circumstances, by Saints and nonmembers.

God has blessed me abundantly in all my efforts, with patience to endure adversity, physical strength to perform labor and endure privation, and with spiritual light to comfort the mourner, cheer the faint-hearted, and give the hungering and thirsting soul that which satisfieth. To him be the praise.

When all else seems encouraging it seems hard to hear that home ones are in that condition that it seems that missionary work must be restricted. May God provide and send more laborers instead of permitting the number to be reduced.

Still hopeful,

J. F. MINTUN.

FREEDOM OF WORSHIP IN HUNGARY.—The lower house of the Hungarian Diet on September 30 adopted bills providing for the recognition of the Jewish religion and establishing freedom of worship.

The following figures given by the Rev. John McEwan, of Scotland, show the recent great increase in Imperial grants to Roman Catholics and Episcopal schools in that country. In 1872 the Roman Catholic schools numbered 22, with grants of over $20,000. Now they number 177 with grants of $347,940. The Episcopalians had 46 schools in 1872 with grants of about $20,000. Now they have 74 with grants of $86,000.

The Cardinal Archbishop of Paris has sent to the President of France a protest against the exceptional taxes imposed on their religious orders in that country.

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.—NO. 4.

BY W. W. BLAIR.

THEN shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. —Matt. 25: 1, 2.

By carefully reading what immediately precedes and what immediately follows the above text, it will be seen plainly "the times and the seasons" when the kingdom of heaven, in its militant state, will be found in the conditions set forth in the "parable of the ten virgins." Mark it well, "the kingdom of heaven" will be existing on the earth in the last days, prior to, and preparatory to the glorious coming of our Lord in person and in power.

That "the kingdom of heaven" may and does exist in heaven and on earth at one and the same time is just as reasonable, and as scriptural, as that God's "whole family"—yes, God's "whole family in heaven and earth," exists there respectively at one and the same time, as taught by Saint Paul, in Ephesians 3: 15. This fact of "the kingdom" is the one, and only one, upon which numerous texts of scripture can be successfully harmonized. And it should end all controversy when Jesus declares that, prior to the coming of Christ "in the clouds of heaven," the "kingdom of heaven" will be on the earth in the conditions shown forth in the parable—part of the ten virgins "wise" and part of them "foolish," yet all of them expecting "the bridegroom"—Christ—and all having gone forth "to meet" him. Due emphasis should be given these points, for the reason that many who profess to believe in Christ's second coming, and that it is imminent, deny that Christ's kingdom—"the kingdom of heaven"—will exist on earth until after his coming. Christ says it will; uninspired men say it will not. Let us be found in this matter "on the Lord's side," for that is scriptural, reasonable, and brings salvation.

Our text declares that, "the kingdom of heaven" which will be on the earth prior to and at the time of the second advent, shall "be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom." This manifests intelligent intention on the part of those then composing "the kingdom of heaven," to prepare and be in readiness to meet "the bridegroom"—Christ—at his coming, their "lamps" being an essential means to help them in getting ready and being prepared for his coming. These "ten virgins" had learned of the coming bridegroom. They had been previously notified of his coming. They had been already invited to go "forth to meet him." This "kingdom of heaven" then on the earth, will be looking for and expecting the coming "bridegroom," and desiring to meet him. How will those then composing "the kingdom of heaven" on the earth learn of the coming bridegroom? Why do they go forth to meet him? What creates in them the desire to "meet" him? The obvious answer is, as before stated, those composing "the kingdom of heaven" on the earth at that time will have been notified, invited, and instructed in these matters by gospel ministers, and they, for that reason, take their lamps, and go "forth to meet the bridegroom."

And now to prove that "the kingdom of heaven" then on the earth is to be instructed in respect to the coming "bridegroom"—Christ—we have the words of Jesus in the preceding chapter and fourteenth verse:—

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

The gospel of Christ is "the gospel of the kingdom," for it relates to "the kingdom of heaven" and the things pertaining thereto, both in heaven and on earth, and wherever that gospel is taught by authority, intelligently and faithfully, Christ's second coming and matters pertaining thereto are taught; and that, too, without mistakes as to dates, signs, preceding and attendant events, and all essential facts.

We have now found that (1) Christ's kingdom will be on the earth, in its militant state, prior to Christ's second coming; that (2) those composing it, both the "wise" and the "foolish," will be instructed correctly, and authoritatively to prepare to meet him, and this by the means of "the gospel of the kingdom," this being the first call, the first notification, the first invitation, the first instruction concerning the imminent, personal coming of Christ—"the bridegroom."

Having thus prepared the way, particularly, in order to start correctly, we may now consider the parable in its entirety, and then I will introduce the teachings given through Joseph the Seer on the points involved, for the conditions set forth in this parable are among the "signs of the times" to all who will profit thereby.

Here is the parable entire:—

Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them: but the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you; but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.—Matt. 25: 1-13.

This parable reveals the following:—

1. That "the kingdom of heaven" on the earth prior to and at the second advent, is composed of two kinds of saints, "the wise" and "the foolish," the prepared, and the unprepared.

2. That both classes "took their lamps."

3. That the foolish "took no oil with them."

4. That "the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps."

5. That after the ten virgins—"the kingdom of heaven"—first "went forth to meet the bridegroom," then, "while the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept."

6. That after "the bridegroom tarried," and when both "the wise" and "the foolish" (who then constitute "the kingdom of heaven" on the earth), "slumbered and slept," then,—

7. "At midnight there was a cry made, Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him," which is the second, the last call, after which there is no tarrying of the bridegroom, and no slumbering and sleeping of the ten virgins—"the kingdom of heaven"—but:—

8. The Lord comes.

9. "The wise" enter in.

10. The "foolish" have neither time nor opportunity to get the needed preparation to enter in, and are therefore rejected from the "marriage"—"the door was shut."

I have been thus specific in analyzing the parable quoted, first, for the purpose of presenting the facts involved in such a plain way that the young and inexperienced might be enabled thereby to grasp and comprehend the meaning of the parable and its contexts; and, second, to refute the usual teachings of Second Adventists who assert that their teachers have made, are making, or will soon make, the "midnight cry" and that Christ will tarry even after that cry is made; who also teach that "the kingdom of heaven" will not be set up on earth until Christ comes in person; who also ignore, or deny, any other call to go forth to meet the bridegroom except the "midnight cry."

In further explanation of the parable quoted I respectfully suggest that, the "lamps" stand for the word of God (as see Psalms 119: 105; Proverbs 6: 23; 2 Peter 1: 19, etc.); the "vessels" stand for the living persons (as see Jeremiah 18: 4; 22: 28; Hosea 8: 8; Acts 9: 15; Romans 9: 22, 23; 1 Thessalonians 4: 4; 2 Timothy 2: 21; 1 Peter 3: 7, etc.); and the "oil" stands for the Holy Spirit (as see Psalms 45: 7; Isaiah 61: 1; Zechariah 4: 11-14; 1 John 2: 27; Acts 10: 38, etc.)

I have in former numbers of the Herald shown that the angels of God were predicted in the Bible to minister in the last days prior, and preparatory, to Christ's second coming, also that God would, by his Spirit, reveal his word to his people on the earth prior, and preparatory, to that wonderful event; and I have also shown that Joseph Smith the Seer and the Latter Day Saints have claimed from 1827 till now, that such ministrations and manifestations have occurred and are occurring with them as promised in the Bible; and I now undertake to show, by the revelations given Joseph the Seer, that there was and is promised a first call to go forth to meet the bridegroom, commencing and continuing with the preaching of the gospel, and that the last call to go forth to meet the bridegroom—the “midnight” cry—after which there is to be no tarrying, will be made by the angels of God just at the time of Christ's appearing in the clouds of heaven; in all of which we will see the perfect harmony in the teachings of the seer with those of the Savior and be thereby better prepared to appreciate the ministrations of that man of God in these momentous matters, and also to see, and fear, and shun the contradictory and unscriptural teachings of many self-sent ministers in regard to “the great and dreadful day of the Lord” and “the glorious appearing of the great God and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.”

As claimed throughout this entire article, the people of God, in the last days, from first to last, need, and will have, divine and direct instructions from God to identify “the times and the seasons” of Christ's second coming, also all the essential facts relating thereto, as much and even more than did the people of God need the direct revelations of heaven at the first advent to identify those appointed times, and likewise identify Christ and his forerunner, their calling and their work. And in the quotations I now present it will be seen how gracious is the Lord, how faithful to his promises, and how very important the instructions given through the Seer in respect to the coming of the bridegroom, explaining and harmonizing the parable of Matthew 25: 1-13, and other relevant scriptures.

In October, 1830, the Lord revealed to Joseph the Seer the following relative to the first call to go forth to meet the bridegroom:—

And the Book of Mormon, and the holy Scriptures, are given of me for your instruction; and the power of my Spirit quickeneth all things; wherefore, be faithful, praying always, having your lamps trimmed and burning, and oil with you, that you may be ready at the coming of the bridegroom; for behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that I come quickly; even so. Amen.—D. C. 32: 3.

The above text clearly proclaims and identifies the present age as the time of the coming of the bridegroom, calling upon all people to prepare for that most important event, as does also the following:—

And at that day when I [the Lord] shall come in my glory, shall the parable be fulfilled which I spake concerning the ten virgins; for they that are wise and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived, verily I say unto you, they shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day, and the earth shall be given unto them for an inheritance; and they shall multiply and wax strong, and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation, for the Lord shall be in their midst, and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their King and their lawgiver.—D. C. 45: 10.

The following revelation, given in October, 1831, is very plain in announcing these latter days as the time of Christ's second coming, giving his people needed instruction as to “the keys of the kingdom” and the manner in which they must prepare themselves to meet “the bridegroom.”

Hearken, and lo, a voice as of one from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the ends of the earth; yea, whose voice is unto men—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth; yea, a voice crying—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the bridegroom; pray unto the Lord; call upon his holy name; make known his wonderful works among the people, call upon the Lord, that his kingdom may go forth upon the earth; that the inhabitants thereof may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is set up on the earth; wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, that thou, O God may be glorified in heaven, so on earth, that thy enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power, and glory, forever and ever. Amen.—D. C. 65: 1.

Here is another revelation on the same subject, containing much valuable and needed information:—

He that is faithful and endureth shall overcome the world. He that sendeth up treasures unto the land of Zion, shall receive an inheritance in this world, and his works shall follow him; and also a reward in the world to come: yea, and blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, when the Lord shall come, and old things shall pass away, and all things become new, they shall rise from the dead and shall not die after, and shall receive an inheritance before the Lord, in the holy city, and he that liveth when the Lord shall come, and has kept the faith, blessed is he; nevertheless it is appointed to him to die at the age of man; wherefore children shall grow up until they become old, old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye; wherefore, for this cause preached the apostles unto the world the resurrection of the dead: these things are the things that ye must look for, and speaking after the manner of the Lord, they are now nigh at hand; and in a time to come, even in the day of the coming of the Son of Man, and until that hour there will be foolish virgins among the wise, and at that hour cometh an entire separation of the righteous and the wicked; and in that day will I send mine angels, to pluck out the wicked, and cast them into unquenchable fire.—D. C. 63: 13.

To the foregoing texts I now add this commandment given November 3, 1831, concerning the ministry sent forth to preach the gospel to the nations. It explains itself and identifies the present age and time as the days of the coming of the Bridegroom. Read it with care:—

Send forth the elders of my church unto the nations which are afar off; unto the islands of the sea; send forth unto foreign lands; call upon all nations; firstly, upon the Gentiles, and then upon the Jews. And behold and lo, this shall be their cry, and the voice of the Lord unto all people: Go ye forth unto the land of Zion, that the borders of my people may be enlarged, and that her stakes may be strengthened, and that Zion may go forth unto the regions round about; yea, let the cry go forth among all people: awake and arise and go forth to meet the Bridegroom. Behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord.

Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour. Let them, therefore, who are among the Gentiles, flee unto Zion. And let them who be of Judah, flee unto Jerusalem, unto the mountains of the Lord's house. Go ye out from among the nations, even from Babylon, from the midst of wickedness, which is spiritual Babylon. But verily thus saith the Lord, let not your flight be in haste, but let all things be prepared before you; and he that goeth, let him not look back, lest sudden destruction shall come upon him.

Hearken and hear O ye inhabitants of the earth. Listen ye elders of my church together, and hear the voice of the Lord, for he calleth upon all men and he commandeth all men everywhere to repent; for behold the Lord God hath sent forth the angel, crying through the midst of heaven, saying: prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight, for the hour of his coming is nigh, when the Lamb shall stand upon Mount Zion, and with him a hundred and forty-four thousand having his Father's name written in their foreheads; wherefore, prepare ye for the coming of the Bridegroom; go ye, go ye out to meet him, for behold he shall stand upon the Mount of Olivet, and upon the mighty ocean, even the great deep, and upon the islands of the sea, and upon the Land of Zion; and he shall utter his voice out of Zion, and he shall speak from Jerusalem, and his voice shall be heard among all people, and it shall be a voice as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder, which shall break down the mountains, and the valleys shall not be found; he shall command the great deep and it shall be driven back into the north countries, and the islands shall become one land, and the land of Jerusalem and the land of Zion, shall be turned back into their own place, and the earth shall be like as it was in the days before it was divided. And the Lord even the Savior shall stand in the midst of his people, and shall reign over all flesh.—D. C. 108: 3-5.

As before stated, these revelations make known not only the fact of Christ's second coming, but they identify "the times and the seasons" of its occurrence, and authoritatively instruct the ministry when and how to proceed, and what to proclaim, so there may be consistency and unity in their official work, and certainty in the message they bear to the nations up to the very hour of the advent, thus preparing the way for the final and last call, the "midnight" cry which the angels of God will make, and which comes to all, at the very time when the gospel "door is shut," when "the face" of the coming Lord "shall be unveiled," which final, last call, is set forth with great clearness in the following revelation, given December 27, 1832:—

Therefore, tarry ye, and labor diligently, that you may be perfected in your ministry, to go forth among the Gentiles for the last time, as many as the mouth of the Lord shall name, to bind up the law, and seal up the testimony, and to prepare the saints for the hour of judgment, which is to come; that their souls may escape the wrath of God, the desolation of abomination, which await the wicked, both in this world, and in the world to come. Verily, I say unto you, let those who are not the first elders, continue in the vineyard until the mouth of the Lord shall call them, for their time is not yet come; their garments are not clean from the blood of this generation.

Abide ye in the liberty wherewith ye are made free; entangle not yourselves in sin, but let your hands be clean, until the Lord come, for not many days hence and the earth shall tremble, and reel to and fro as a drunken man, and the sun shall hide his face, and shall refuse to give light, and the moon shall be bathed in blood, and the stars shall become exceeding angry, and shall cast themselves down as a fig that falleth from off a fig-tree.

And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunders, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people; and angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying, Prepare ye, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth, for the judgment of our God is come: behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.

And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together. And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, that great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood: she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the tares of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore, she is ready to be burned. And he shall sound his trump both long and loud, and all nations shall hear it.

And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled; and the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves, shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened, and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven: they are Christ's, the first fruits: they who shall descend with him first, and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him; and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trump of the angel of God.—D. C. 85: 23-27.

As saith the prophet:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

And surely the Lord God has revealed, and will continue to reveal matters of great importance to "his servants the prophets" in these days concerning the second coming of Christ the Lord, an event which crowns and glorifies the dispensations of the past and ushers in "the last great monarchy divine," the inheritance of the faithful Saints, over which the Lord will reign and rule in power and in glory forever.

Wouldst thou that thy flesh obey thy spirit, then let thy spirit obey thy God. Thou must be governed that thou mayest govern.

Yazoo means "River of Death," an allusion to the malarial diseases generally prevalent along its banks.

JUSTICE.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

Ah! fate is never half so stern
To him who meets it true and brave;
But those who cringe and cower must learn
The sharpest lash is for the slave.

I think God loves a manly man,
Who still will labor and will trust;
To him who shortens the perfect span
Of truth, he is not harsh, but just.

And luck and favor still shall fall,
Or chance or fortune be gainsaid;
But in the eternal test of all
The honest man is undismayed.

Sunday School Associations.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Convention convened in Roxbury Hall, 67 Warren Street, Boston, Massachusetts, January 11, 1896, at eight p. m.; Superintendent E. H. Fisher in the chair, Ora V. Holmes secretary. Voted Sr. Gertrude and Bro. Richard Cliff be received delegates of this convention. Reports from the following schools: Boston, Haverhill, Fall River, Plainville, North Plymouth, Brockton, and New Bedford, Massachusetts; Providence, Woodville, and Little Compton, Rhode Island, read and referred to a committee of three, M. C. Fisher, John Heap, and F. Orin Coombs. Treasurer's and superintendent's report read and referred to the above committee. Delegates elected to General Association are as follows: F. Orin Coombs, F. M. Sheehy, Sarah Mortimer, E. H. Fisher, Arthur Phillips, Richard Bullard, George Robley, and George H. Gates. Voted that these delegates be empowered to make such additions as they deem necessary. Voted that the delegates present be authorized to cast the entire vote of the district, in case of division the proportionate part. Committee on reports reported two incorrect, which were referred back to schools for correction. Treasurer's and superintendent's report correct. These accepted and committee discharged. Resolved that the delegates of this district be authorized to bring before the General Assembly the matter of amending the constitution in order to provide for ex officio members in district associations. Carried. Voted that the secretary send this to the Herald Office for publication at once. Voted next convention meet in Brockton, May 9, 1896, at 7:30 p. m. The sessions on January 12 were as follows: Eleven a. m., Class drill and discussion, "Trumbull's Teachers and Teaching," by E. H. Fisher. At 2:50 p. m., Paper, Primary teaching, followed by class exercise, Josie Phillips. Quarterly review and chalk talk, conducted by Arthur Phillips. Seven p. m., Essay, Needs of the Sunday school, Elder G. H. Gates. Chalk, illustrated, Its use in the hands of every teacher, by F. Orin Coombs. The above was interspersed with vocal and instrumental music and recitations. Thus closed a very instructive session.

NOTICES.

To the Sunday Schools of Central California District:—By order of superintendent all schools are requested to send in their special collection to be taken once in six months for support of association.

Your colaborer in Christ,
JOHN SWENSEN, Treas.
Box 945, SAN JOSE, California.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

Convention of the Philadelphia district will convene at No. 199 Saratoga Avenue, near Fulton Street, Brooklyn, New York, March 7, at 1:30 p. m., the entertainment at eight p. m. We trust each school will send delegates, so that all may be represented, and that we may learn your needs and progress. Do not fail to send a report of your school.

E. B. HULL, Sec.

Convention of the Southern Nebraska district will meet with the Wilber Sunday school, February 22, 1896. We would like a report from each school in the district, so as to have a good report to send to the General Association. Instruct your delegates who you would like to represent you at the General Association.

The Galland's Grove district will meet in Sunday school convention at Dow City, Iowa, February 29, 1896, at two p. m. Business session to be followed by "Question box." The evening session will consist of special music and a Sunday school sermon. Let every church member who can possibly attend do so; and let us air our methods of how and what to teach. Come prepared to put some question in the box. Do you wish to talk about "How to teach children to pray," "The necessity for separate rooms for primary classes," "Blackboard work in primary classes," "Methods of introducing the study of the Book of Mormon to the entire school by means of the blackboard?" etc. If so, please come to this conference, write out your question, drop it in the box, and it will be duly considered by the convention. More efficient work is required in our Sunday school department. We extend to all a cordial welcome to assist us in making it more efficient. Will you respond?

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Fremont and Nodaway Districts in Reference to Tithing:—Bro. William Leeka, of the Fremont district, Iowa, has been quite poorly this winter—unable to get around to talk to the people on this all-important subject; and as times are close financially, money comes in very slowly this winter. Now, brethren and sisters, this ought not to be the case. We should not forget the admonition of Paul to lay by in store as God hath prospered us, whether it be little or much; ever bearing in mind that the gospel cannot be preached or the poor cared for without means; and that if the Saints neglect not to do this important part of the work they certainly will be blessed of the Master and thereby "lay up" "treasures in heaven."

Now let us look at this from a correct standpoint, and upon the principle of justness and equality, as we often say. Those who do their duty in this respect and comply with the law as given in the gospel, which we all believe to be the celestial law of the kingdom, will obtain the celestial glory, other things being equal. Thus the minister that travels to preach the word and the man or woman that attends to the business of life and complies with the law of tithing with an eye single to the glory of God, are all equal in his sight. But remember that both minister or laity must have no other object in view than to do the will of the Master perfectly.

Now, brethren and sisters, this is a just law. If I have but one dollar, God has so ordained that I can pay the tenth of that dollar and thereby I am entitled to the same reward as the man who is worth ten thousand dollars and pays accordingly. Then let us not slacken our hands during hard times, but be the more faithful and trust in the promise of the Master when he told his Disciples to "have faith in God," and ever bear in mind that if we obtain the same reward and glory we must of necessity make an equal sacrifice. One man is no better than another, but he that will work the works of righteousness is accepted of God.

Then let me say to you, dear Saints of these two districts, Move forward to duty. Let us show that we have an interest in the work; that it is ours indeed—"our gospel," as Paul said. Who dare stand before the Master and claim of him the highest glory that will not do the works of the law, whether he be rich or poor, and make the sacrifice required?

May the Holy Spirit of promise work with each one of us until we fully realize our duties and wholly obey the law as given, and thus show to God, angels, and men that we mean what we say. Believe me to be,

Your brother and colaborer in the one faith,
HENRY KEMP.
Tabor, Iowa, January 29.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Philadelphia district will convene at No. 199 Saratoga Avenue, near Fulton Street, Brooklyn, New York, March 7, at four p. m. Every official in the district is requested to make his report in writing, in accordance with resolution passed at last district conference, and forward it to the secretary as soon as possible.

E. B. HULL, Sec.
2716 Darien Street, PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania.

The semiannual conference of this district will convene in the hall at No. 67 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, at 10:30 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, Saturday morning, February 29, 1896. It is very much desired that as full a representation as possible of the different branches may be present. From all holding priesthood, except those employed as branch officers, a report of labor is required. Delegates should be elected on the basis of one delegate to every six members, and should be given a certificate, signed by the president and secretary of the branch, stating that they are authorized to act as such delegates. All who can make it possible to attend this conference are requested to write a postal card to Bro. Ralph G. Smith, 6105, Howe Street, East End, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, giving timely notice of the number that will attend, so that provision may be made for their entertainment. The election of some one to fill the offices of presiding elder and secretary of the district will be held, and branches are requested to instruct delegates as to their preferences in this regard. Reports of branches not represented by delegates and ministry reports, should be forwarded to the district secretary, Bro. E. S. Fairley, No. 78 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania.

W. H. GARRETT, Presiding Elder.
Kirtland, Ohio, January 28, 1896.

Quarterly Conference of the Little Sioux district will convene at Magnolia, Iowa, March 7, at 10:30 a. m., to continue over Sunday the 8th. Reports of branches, desired early. Clerks will please see that they are complete and correct, so they can be forwarded at once to Church Recorder.

J. C. CRABB, Pres.
A. M. FYRANDO, Clerk.

Southern Nebraska district conference will be held with the Wilber branch, February 23 and 24, 1896. We would like a full report from each branch, also from all of the priesthood who have labored in the district, as this is the last district conference before General Conference. All are invited to attend. Send all reports to

J. L. DIFENDORF, Sec.
Lincoln, Nebraska.

A WARNING.

A man, claiming to be a member of the church, and claiming the name of Riorty, is imposing on the Saints at various places in Central Iowa. Says he was baptized by J. S. Roth, and gives evidence of having been at Grinnell. He appears to be about forty years of age, well built, about five feet and nine inches in height. He has rather dark hair, and moustache of rather light color. Speaks up short and strong with rather clear, heavy voice.

Was at Sandyville, Warren County, Iowa, January 25, and has been doing the Saints at Runnells since.

Saints, watch out for him. C. SCOTT.

THE CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer will publish full and accurate reports of the General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, beginning April 6, 1896.

Besides giving details of the meetings, the Plain Dealer will contain fine portraits of the leading men in the church, together with prominent church buildings.

On April 6 the Plain Dealer will be issued in enlarged form, and will contain historical matter in which the doctrines of the Reorganized Church will be correctly set forth. This issue will also contain a large number of illustrations.

Copies of the Plain Dealer containing reports of each day's proceedings, together with the special issue of April 6, will be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada for 30 cents; the special edition of April 6, 2 cents.

Copies containing the entire reports will be mailed to European countries and Australia for 50 cents.

LOST.

I left my Book of Mormon at some place in the West last fall, probably in San Francisco. I greatly desire to recover it, and will pay all expense to any who will send it to me.

W. W. BLAIR.

LAMONI, IOWA.

BORN.

WHARTON.—At Montrose, Iowa, January 2, 1896, to Mr. William and Sr. Mary Wharton, a son, and named Leroy Elbert. Blessed at Montrose, January 29, 1896, by Elder A. D. Greer.

MARRIED.

WILLIAMSON — ELEFSON. — At Ottawa, Illinois, January 29, 1896, Mr. Milton C. Williamson and Sr. Ellen Elefson, Elder John B. Roush officiating.

DIED.

FOUTS.—At her home, Galland's Grove, Iowa, Vera, little daughter of Mr. James and Sr. Rena Fouts, January 19, 1896; aged 1 year, 9 months, and 9 days. Service in charge of R. Wight, assisted by Elder John Young. Interment in Manteno cemetery.

REEDER.—At her home, Galland's Grove, Iowa, January 19, 1896, Stella, little daughter of Bro. David and Sr. E. M. Reeder; aged 4 years, 2 months, and 17 days. Funeral sermon by R. Wight, assisted by Elder John Young. Interment in the Manteno cemetery.

FOUTS.—At her home, Galland's Grove, Iowa, January 4, 1896, Eava, little daughter of Mr. James and Sr. Rena Fouts, aged 3 years, 10 months, and 18 days. She was blessed by Elders J. S. Roth and D. M. Rudd. Funeral sermon by R. Wight, at the Manteno church. Buried in Manteno cemetery.

SKINNER.—Sr. Mary, wife of Thomas Skinner, was born near Bowling Green, Indiana, March 6, 1847; died January 19, 1896, near Vinita, Indian Territory. Seven children mourn. Strong in the faith, she was willing to depart. Interment in Wills cemetery.

MIDDLETON.—Near Frazer, Missouri, January 11, 1896, Mary Charlotte, daughter of Bro. Jerome and Sr. Julia Middleton, aged 1 year, 9 months, and 11 days. Funeral in charge of W. Lewis.

MATTHEWS.—At his post, John, son of Thomas and Mary Matthews, of Syracuse, Ohio. He was a railway engineer and had been running on the Southern Railway for the last five years. Was killed December 12, 1895, by head-end collision with another train, five miles north of Macon, Georgia. Cause of collision, neglect of operator. They were unable to extract his body out of the wreck for forty-eight hours. The remains were sent home to his parents, and were buried December 17. He was not a member of the church, but his faith was that of his father and mother. He was a noble son to us, and his untimely death has left a great void in our hearts. Aged 29 years, 2 months, and 9 days.

THOMAS and MARY MATTHEWS.

GILKEY.—At Liberal, Missouri, January 19, 1896, Sr. Mary Gilkey. She was born in Hancock County, Illinois, November 28, 1848; was baptized by President Joseph Smith, when she was about fifteen years of age. She married Mr. Edwin Gilkey, December 20, 1867. In 1871 she and her husband moved to Kansas, and later to Liberal, Missouri. Her life, though she stood almost alone, was one of steadfastness in the faith, and she died in the full hope of triumph with Christ in the resurrection morn. Funeral sermon January 26, by Elder W. T. Bozarth, to a large assemblage of sympathizing friends. A husband, one son, and four daughters are left to mourn.

GOUGH.—Mrs. Ellen Gough was born November 17, 1845; died at Three Rivers, Mississippi, January 21, 1896. Baptized by Heman C. Smith about sixteen years ago, she lived and died a firm member of the church. She was loved by neighbors and Saints. The Saints of the branch regret their loss. Her house was a home for the elders. Funeral sermon by J. D. Erwin to a large gathering of people.

RUSHTON.—At Leeds, England, January 4, 1896, Mary Elizabeth Rushton, aged 18 years, 9 months, and 10 days. She lived a Christian life and was loved by all who knew her. She was patient under all her sufferings and full of faith to the last. Her end was peace. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. She was interred at Lanswood cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, of Manchester. She was followed by a number of relatives, Saints, and friends, showing much sympathy for the bereaved family, especially for her father, who only a few weeks ago had gone to America.

MYERS.—At his home in Montrose, Iowa, January 18, 1896, Bro. George W. Myers. He was born in Pennsylvania, May 3, 1816. His wife preceded him in death some years. Three grandsons, with a host of friends, mourn. He was kind in his character, being noted for his amiable disposition, his gentleness of spirit, and faithfulness to duty. He was well respected, as evidenced by the large concourse of people that attended his funeral. The funeral sermon was preached at the Saints' church in Montrose by priest D. Tripp.

SUTHERLAND.—Bro. Joseph L. Sutherland departed this life December 21, 1895, and was laid away the following day, in the presence of family and many friends, to await the Master's call in the morn of the first resurrection. Funeral sermon at the Union Church, in Maysville, Arkansas, January 5, by Elders T. J. Sheppard and S. W. Simmons, to a fair-sized and very attentive congregation. Wife, four sons, and four daughters mourn.

WILLIAMS.—James Walter Williams died near Decatur, Nebraska, January 24, 1896, from the effect of a wound received Wednesday, the 22d, by a shot from a revolver, with which he and a young lady were playing, it being accidentally discharged. He was at death 21 years, 11 months, and 19 days old. He was baptized June 18, 1883, and had retained his faith in the gospel through adverse influences. He leaves an aged mother whose chief support he was, one brother, one sister, and many relatives to mourn his untimely decease. It was said of him, "We do not know that he has an enemy in the world." Funeral sermon at M. E. church, Decatur, Nebraska, by Elder J. F. Mintun, from Romans 8: 24.

WOOD.—At his home near Martin Creek, Arkansas, January 14, 1896, Bro. Robert Hews Wood. Born at Nashville, Tennessee, October 1, 1845; baptized at Martin Creek, Arkansas, April 28, 1894, by Elder C. J. Spurlock. Funeral sermon preached by Bro. D. R. Baldwin. Bro. Wood was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, having sustained a paralytic stroke some years ago, rendering him a cripple. But neath all his trials and afflictions he was patient and kind. His daughter testified that she could not remember of ever receiving a cross word from Father. A consistent and devoted husband and father, and a true son, has been called home to rest, leaving a wife and eight children, who mourn their loss.

KENT.—Near Wirt, Ringgold County, Iowa, January 26, 1896, Bro. Oscar O., son of Bro. Newton J. Kent, aged 25 years, 10 months, and 3 days. From childhood he was afflicted with the asthma, and for seven years had attacks of the dropsy. Also, during his last illness, he was a victim of consumption of the lungs, therefore his sufferings were great. During life his conduct was worthy and honorable. He became a member of the church May 4, 1890, being baptized by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, who, by Oscar's request, was called to preach his funeral sermon. A large gathering of the neighbors and friends of the family, the majority of them not being members of the church, attested the esteem and respect felt by them towards Bro. Kent and the young brother.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatharians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

SHUN BOLTED FLOUR.

SIR:—What Dr. V. C. Bell is reported to have said in The Recorder of November 29 every careful observer can see to be correct; and, further, it is not simply the teeth of the rising generation which suffer, but also the bones, muscles, digestive organs, and brain. Why is all this physical degeneration of our young people? We have not to look far for one of the chief causes. Many of our children are half starved, and some of them starved to death.

“Starved! Why, she eats enough!” exclaimed an astonished mother, when I told her that her young daughter was starving to death. There she lay helpless upon the bed, not able to turn herself, and with some symptoms of scurvy, but in good flesh. I quietly asked the mother what she ate. She replied: “She eats toast made from the very best superfine white flour. If she eats anything else she throws it up.” I directed her mother to mix mashed potatoes with the flour from which she made her bread. She did so, and the child recovered rapidly.

Careful experiments made by Magendie and others have demonstrated that animals can only live for a few weeks if fed only on superfine white flour; whereas, they can live and thrive on unbolted flour or meal without any trouble. The Lord intended the grain as a whole for human food, and He manifestly knew what he was doing when he created our cereals. The food required to nourish the teeth, bones, muscles, stomach, to enable it to properly digest our food, and the brain, is found in excess in the dark portion of the kernel which lies immediately beneath the hull, and the miller, in bolting, separates this portion as far as he can, and most of it is fed to cattle, horses, hogs, etc., and they have good teeth, muscle, stomachs, and bones when thus fed.

The white portion of the kernel from which white flour is made contains an excess of starch, principally a heat and fat producing material when taken as food, so that the whiter the flour the poorer it is. One simple fact ought to satisfy every intelligent man and woman that superfine white flour is not fit for human use, and that starvation must inevitably follow to a greater or less extent its use as food, viz., there is very little difficulty in keeping superfine white flour free from insects, must or mold, whereas it requires care and watchfulness to preserve unbolted flour and meal free from insects, must, etc. Do we want to feed our children upon a flour which will not sustain for any considerable length of time animal, insect, or even vegetable life?

Dyspepsia is more prevalent in our country than, I think I can say, in any other. Superfine flour does not contain the nourishment required by the stomach to enable it to digest food. The prevalence of dyspepsia in our country and England has led a number of medical writers in England and in this country of late to condemn the use of all cereals—wheat, rye, oats, etc.—as food, claiming that the starch overtaxes the stomach, and that we should use as food nothing but nuts and fruits, and if we find them not sufficient we should use a little meal or animal food, they think. But if we use the dark or coarse portion of the grain as well as the white, the stomach will be nourished, and the whole grain will be digested, and it will not cause dyspepsia.

In cases of irritable or weak stomachs from the use of superfine flour, it will be well to sift out the coarsest of the bran for a time, until the stomach gains strength. Cases of dyspepsia have been cured by simply boiling the wheat for a few hours and then eating it, chewing it carefully. Banish superfine flour, and bread and cakes made from it from our land, or from use in our households, and there would be a wonderful change for the better in the development of the young, not only as to their teeth, but also as to all the structures of the body. No parent who cares for the development, health, and comfort of his or her children should, in my estimation, ever allow a single pound of superfine flour, or bread or cakes made from such flour, to enter his or her house.

Having constantly in view the development and health of our race, I have traveled over our own country from the East to Alaska and California in the West, and Florida in the South, over most of the countries of Europe, Egypt, and Western Asia, and I can say, as a result of my observation, that wherever the people eat, instead of superfine flour, the meal or flour of the whole grain, be it wheat, rye, oats, or barley, they have good teeth, and are well developed, and are rarely troubled with dyspepsia. For more than forty years I have carefully avoided the use of superfine flour, stimulants, narcotics, and condiments, excepting sugar and salt, and although my eightieth birthday passed two days ago, I rarely, if ever, fail to have a good appetite, and my food tastes as well as it did when I was a boy, and I have more than half of my teeth left.
—Dr. John Ellis in New York Recorder.

FEARLESS FOR TRUTH.

HE who opposes his own judgment against the consent of the times ought to be backed with unanswerable truths; he that has truth on his side is a fool, as well as a coward, if he is afraid to own it because of the currency or multitude of other men's opinions. — De Foe.

Meteorologists say that the heat of the air is due to six causes: (1) That from the interior of the earth; (2) that from the stars; (3) that from the moon; (4) that from the friction of the winds and tides; (5) that from the meteors; (6) that from the sun.

BODILY IDENTITY IN THE RESURRECTION.

A ROMAN Catholic theologian, the Abbé Noguier, argues that there must be more than mere personal identity in the Resurrection; there must be coporeal or bodily sameness as well. How he reconciles such extreme ground with the facts of science may be seen from the following paragraphs, which we translate from his article (Cosmos, Paris, December 21). The Abbé first briefly reviews the history of theological opinion on the subject. Origen and his followers believed that the same soul, dwelling in any kind of body, sufficed for the necessary identity, since it is the form and not the actual substance that constitutes the individual. Our substance alters day by day, yet we remain the same; it is sufficient, therefore, that in the resurrection form and soul should persist. The substance of the resurrection body is of no consequence. Others believe that the soul bears with it in death a kind of germ, and that the resurrection is nothing but an evolution of this germ into a spiritual body. Others still invoke the aid of what they call "the principle of bodily identity" or "the formative power" which, they say, maintains the individuality of the body during life, despite its changes in substance, and, persisting after death, bestows on the resurrection body that same individuality. The Abbé then passes to the doctrine that he is to champion, first laying down certain distinctions:—

"It is not sufficient to establish the identity of the risen man with the mortal man (the identity of the soul would suffice for that); it is the identity of the risen body with the mortal body that we must inquire about. For Holy Scripture and tradition say not only that the man shall rise again, but that he shall rise with the same body that he had previously. . . .

"For the perfect identity of the human body it does not suffice that the same soul shall dwell in a body composed of any elements, no matter what; but the same elements that composed it in life must, at least in part, compose the risen body. . . .

"We shall now examine some of the objections that may be made by modern physiologists against the doctrine of bodily identity that we have just stated. . . .

"That the identity of the risen body may be perfect, we have seen that it is necessary that it should be reconstituted by the matter possessed by it during life. But then it is natural to ask: Is it not equally necessary, in order that the unity of the individual should not be altered, that risen man should possess all the elements that he possessed from his birth to his death? Evidently not; it is, in fact, quite difficult to conceive how an individual, dead after the complete development of his organs, could return on the day of resurrection to what he was, neither more nor less, by acquiring all the material elements that had been renewed in his body by assimilation and disassimilation, during the whole course of his existence. . . . The reason of persistence of identity in a body that is constantly renewed rests on the fact that the specific form of the human body, and consequently the quality of each of its parts, remains the same during life, despite changes of matter. . . . If, then, on the one hand we must admit the necessity that the risen body should possess the same elements as during life, we see, on the other hand, that all this matter is not necessary, but only the quantity sufficient to reestablish its integrity.

"It will be understood, after what has been said, that a risen body will not lose its identity even when it can resume but a small part of the matter that formerly composed it, for the reason that this matter will unify itself with the newly acquired matter, just as happens during life. . . .

"One day I was among some young students, and, the conversation turning on the incessant movements of matter in the universe, on its multiple transformations, on the indestructibility of atoms, etc. . . . 'Who knows,' said one of them, 'whether I have not myself, in my own tissues, some of the atoms once possessed by some illustrious person of antiquity, Aristotle, for example, Alexander, Demosthenes, or even some great man of more recent times?' This question, strange as it appears, contains, nevertheless, the elements of possibility, in spite of the immense quantity of elements in motion all over our globe. There are, besides, cases where the acquisition by part of a human organism of elements that belonged to another man living or dead, is not only possible, but certain. We shall find in this a final objection, whose removal will complete the solution of the question that occupies us.

"Since it is necessary for the identity of a risen man, that his body should contain at least a part of the elements that once made it up, how can it be that a certain quantity of matter that was possessed successively by two individuals can become anew at the resurrection part of the bodies of both?"

In considering this question, the Abbé puts the case of a cannibal who has for many years lived on human flesh. Whose shall the elements of this flesh be in the resurrection? The answer is that it is impossible that the cannibal's body should be exclusively composed of other's bodies. Says the Abbé:—

"We must note that, rigorously speaking, this man-eater would certainly have elements that belong to him alone, elements that he will have acquired from the air by respiration, from the water that he drinks, and from the mineral salts that it holds in solution. And, according to the principles just laid down, this substance added to that which he acquires for the first time should suffice to reestablish his identity. . . .

"Thus, at the great day of resurrection, each one, having a complete body, identical with that which he possessed during his mortal life, should and can, in all cases, reassume, to reestablish the tissues of his organism, at least a part of the very same elements that formerly made them up. As to the rest, which in some cases may be wanting, He who knew how to create Nature from chaos will know how to provide it in the measure of our need."— Translated for the Literary Digest.

It is said that 300,000 cubic feet of water plunge 150 feet downward over the Niagara escarpment every second, thus wasting 10,000,000 horse power of energy to the second. If Niagara were really "harnessed" so as to utilize this energy, it would be sufficient to run more machinery than there is in the world.

The walls of Paris are doomed. No other large city in Europe is surrounded by a wall, and as the one round Paris occupies a space comprising no fewer than 12,000,000 square yards, or one-eighth of the total area of the capital, the state will derive an immense profit from its removal.

LAMONI, IOWA, FEB. 12, 1896.

SOME BASIC PRINCIPLES PERTAINING TO LIFE HERE AND HEREAFTER.

WE published on the HERALD cover of this issue an article from a physician, entitled "Shun bottled flour;" that is, white flour, the ordinary fine white flour of commerce. This article was sent us by the National Temperance Society and Publication House of New York, with other printed matter designed to improve public morals and to promote health. We commend it to the HERALD readers everywhere and as worthy of careful consideration and observance. This physician calls attention to a well-known, scientific fact; a fact demonstrated by physicians and hygienists who know by actual examination and experience whereof they affirm. They say that the white flour of commerce, that used by almost every family as the chief article of diet, is not what it has been supposed to be—the staff of life, for the reason that the best elements of it have been removed and are extracted by the modern milling process; that the gluten—that that furnishes strength; that that supplies nourishment to brain, nerves, and muscles; that that enriches the blood and gives physical vigor and vitality; is removed; while only the white portion of the wheat—the starch—is left, and finds a ready market, because it makes a nicer appearance in "white bread," pie crust, cakes, biscuit, etc.; the life-giving portion of the wheat being fed to "hogs," "horses," and "cattle." This probably accounts, in some degree at least, for the physical degeneracy of modern man, especially of those who live according to some modern methods of living, and explains why the present generation has recourse to so many artificialities, in teeth, use of spectacles at an early age, etc. Be that as it may, it seems plain that while man advances in the discovery of many utilities and in various branches of knowledge, he fails to store up the vital energy possessed and enjoyed by the generations that have preceded us, and the result is seen in the loss of the natural teeth at an earlier age, the prevalence and growth of nervous disorders, by which the work of the "dentist" and the "specialist" in medicine is more and more in demand to do the work of "tinkering" weak bodies and stimulating sensitive nervous organizations.

The animal kingdoms—those comprising the "lower forms of life"—obey the laws of nature, the laws of their being—those ordained by the Creator, and are thus "preserved by law." Man, the highest type of intelligence, created in the image of God, disregards the appointments and ordained means provided for his welfare, and hence suffers the penalty of "disobedience," disregard of the law of being, suffers the consequences, and entails additional suffering upon his posterity that follows and is to follow him.

This we believe is directly opposite to what ought to be. We believe that "man," especially those "called to be Saints," should heed the counsel of God and live "by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The Lord has said that while man should not live "by bread alone," the bread he does eat to sustain his bodily powers should be made from "wheat"—not merely a part of the wheat, and that part the starch, the poorest part; but "wheat"—wheat as God made it—all of it; the complete product prepared for him and of which he says "wheat for man"—his principal, leading, specific diet; the staff, the strength, and stay of his physical life; that adapted to the constitution, nature, and use of man.

Chemists affirm that the bone, muscle, nerve, and brain-producing, or nurturing elements, the gluten of the wheat, lie near the surface of the kernel, next to the hull or coarse bran, or outer covering; while the white portion, the starch element lying in its interior, will not of itself sustain life, but merely supply heat without imparting strength; that dogs and other animals fed upon white flour have physically declined to that degree that has demonstrated that white or bolted flour will not sustain life. The whole wheat contains every essential property necessary to sustain and nourish the man, and is designed to be his chief article of diet, the staff of life. Under it he thrives and maintains strength; under the white flour diet he declines, and though apparently flourishing, his nervous and muscular system and brain, together with his bony structure, including teeth, show signs of lack of nourishment, and the man becomes more and more liable to nervous disorders, mental irritability, and other forms of general break-down. In addition to this his children are bequeathed a lessened store of or basis for physical strength and grow up with impaired or weakened constitutions.

It is stated and demonstrated that children and men and women show signs of improved health as soon as placed upon a whole-wheat flour diet; that while users of white flour lose their teeth at an early age, those using the unbolted article, the food of man that nature has provided, retain to a good old age the necessary tools by which they masticate their food and also enjoy greater physical vigor—a sound body, the basis of a sound mind, to an advanced age.

White flour, because of its astringent properties and mechanical inaction, is a fruitful cause of constipation—the basis of a long train of physical ills to which human flesh is heir. It is also justly chargeable with being a promoter of dyspepsia. Those who object to the use of the coarse "graham" flour will find their objections removed by having their miller remove the rough exterior of the hull, leaving the middlings or health-sustaining properties that lie next to the coarse bran.

It can then be ground coarse or fine.

God, our God, is the Creator of the physical universe as he is also the "Father of our spirits." He is "God over all," "in all," and "through all." He is far-seeing, infinite, perfect. His wisdom is coequal to his love; for that reason he has revealed laws to govern his children morally, spiritually, and physically; in other words "all things that pertain to life and godliness." Salvation is of a threefold character: moral salvation, by which we are redeemed from the fall; temporal or physical salvation, by which our bodies are preserved—governed by law—and his people promised deliverance from "the destroying angel" of pestilence, also from war and other destructive forces; and spiritual salvation by which redemption is perfected; hence no part of our nature or being is denied that attention or benefit necessary to bring us into harmony with God, and to extend our usefulness and perfect happiness. We are called to "enter into life" in the fullest possible sense in this world, and in a perfect sense in future perfect conditions. We are to advance here, by use of every means provided to exalt us, and thus be in the line of future advancement and have guaranteed to us a future progress by availing ourselves of the fundamental principles that pertain to life here. Man guarantees his advancement or secures it by obedience to law. God is expressed in law. We see his works made manifest in the expression or results of law wrought out. "Eternal fitness," the adaptation of proper means to proper ends, are essential to the working of a perfect Being. Principle, truth, law, order, the use of proper means to proper ends, are essential to Godship. God's works are perfect because he is exact. He is exact because he is intelligent. We may safely say that God himself is limited by law or limits himself to work by law. He could not make a triangle with but two sides, a line with but one end, etc. Because of the principle of proper restraint a good man is the superior of an evil man; because of ruling by law, God is superior to finite man, and presides and controls in the midst of all things, for the perfection and salvation of all the works of his hands.

In "these last days" God has again spoken, and "unto us, by his Son," "by whom also he made the worlds." He has seen fit to warn and to forewarn his people of various impending evils; including those of designing men, of devils, and the calamities and bodily afflictions, including various plagues that are being and to be "poured out" upon the people. The "Word of Wisdom" is a part of the law revealed "showing forth the order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all Saints in the last days. Given for a principle with promise; adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all Saints," etc. The Lord says in another revelation that not at any time had he given unto his people a law that was temporal; for his commandments are spiritual; meaning evidently that while his law necessarily included provisions for the bodily, or temporal salvation and welfare of his people, it was in obedience to a law of life, a spiritual, eternal principle; that entering into, affecting, and preserving the race of man, in a general sense—the man, the man complete, body, soul, and spirit.

The Lord in the Word of Wisdom has "warned" and forewarned against strong drink and tobacco. However, the word is not limited to the negative virtues of abstinence from those evils; it has a positive side that refers to diet and is linked with the keeping of "the commandments." We quote a concluding portion of it:—

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them.—D. C. 86:3.

This is God's counsel to his people, his advice; an expression of his love and wisdom in their behalf. Shall it be evaded because it comes not in the form of a mandatory command? The highest character of service is that that is voluntary. It is our conception of consistency and devotion upon the part of the child of God that he wait not "to be commanded in all things," but being enlightened to "know the truth," and having received "the love of the truth" in his heart, he voluntarily moves forward and does what an exalted conception of right and truth enables him to see should be done, and thus becomes an intelligent, exalted coworker with God, instead of a mere automaton, a machine, that waits to be "driven in the strife." The Lord says:—

He that keepeth his commandments, receiveth truth and light, until he is glorified in truth, and knoweth all things. Man was also in the beginning with God. Intelligence, or the light of truth, was not created or made, neither indeed can be. All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself, as all intelligence also, otherwise there is no existence. Behold, here is the agency of man, and here is the condemnation of man, because that which was from the beginning is plainly manifest unto them, and they receive not the light. And every man whose spirit receiveth not the light, is under condemnation, for man is spirit.—D. C. 90:4, 5.

He also says:—

All beings who abide not in those conditions, are not justified; for intelligence cleaveth unto intelligence; wisdom receiveth wisdom; truth embraceth truth; virtue loveth virtue; light cleaveth unto light, etc.—D. C. 85:10.

God is to write his law in the hearts and engrave it in the minds of his people. They are commanded to see to it that they love him "with all their might," with all their "mind," and with all their "strength." Only service of that kind is worthy of the Lord and his work. The Lord has in these last days—commanded his people to "forsake all evil and cling unto all good;" that they "shall not live after the manner of the world." We therefore repeat the thought that the true service of the true God is heart service; that it is designed that the spiritual disciple shall be able to perceive and "know the truth" in all phases of life; in the principles of morals, social, domestic, and all phases of life; and that he support the truth wherever it is, and be moving forward, seeking for good and appropriating it into his life and being until he is redeemed, preserved, and sanctified by law, and is "of the truth."

He who is unable to discern the truth in principle in all things presented in church life, in citizenship, in morals, in business, and in all phases of life, is unable to "know the truth;" unable to contribute as he should to the support of principle, upon which rests the wellbeing of society. He is not "free indeed," but is in some degree in bondage, liable to be misled himself, and not strong in the support of right as he should be. Discipleship not only means good intention, goodness of heart; it also includes that critical discernment of the truth that shall enable one to get at the right, the merit of a question, however carefully concealed an evil may be in the garb of good; to fully comprehend a matter however deceptive and apparently harmless a garb it may be clothed in by the deceptive influences of Satan or of ambitious or evil men or women. It is not consistent with the character of discipleship that one fail to make progress in all that is like unto God; in mercifulness of spirit, in forgiveness of heart, in trueness, in intelligence, in motive, purpose, and power to see the truth in principle—and, last but not least, in firmness, in fearlessness, in advocacy and defense of right. All this can be reached and the power to reach it and stand by it be attended by moderation and true humility of heart. Satan or man may not succeed in leading a good man or woman to commit an open wrong; he may, however, blind or mislead an incautious, unguarded, or unintelligent one; may lead such a one astray through a mistaken use of the good and necessary quality of "sympathy," or by working upon his "feelings" to that extent that he will set aside or fail to exercise judgment or discrimination. All good qualities are essential to safety, to service of a high character, such as God's people, especially his servants, are called upon to render to God, to his church, to his people, and to the world.

A well-balanced man or woman is he who is coequally developed; who is neither all sympathy, all discretion, all feeling or emotion, or all any one, two, or three things. In the character of Jesus Christ, the God-man, we see a harmonious blending of the qualities or attributes of God and man. He was compassionate, forgiving, humble, just, pure, strong, intelligent, self-composed, etc. He was not deceived by hypocrisy, though he had compassion on the ignorant and "those out of the way." He was not "weak" in any respect. Had he been unwary, unguarded, careless, or unable to discern "what was in man" or the plans, purposes, and devices of the wicked one, he would have failed. He was watchful and prayerful and thus received grace for grace and became symmetrically developed, evenly, harmoniously, safely; and was true in heart, free from vanity and wrong ambition, and suffered no unhallowed thought or untrue purpose to find lodgment within his heart, and thus received power and "overcame."

He has urged upon his people the necessity of being watchful, pure, discreet, chaste, benevolent, etc., and has especially instructed them to beware that they be not deceived by any influence, spiritual or general, or by any man or woman. He has provided too that they shall be led and guided into all truth, perfection of life and character.

The gospel is a gospel of principle. God is revealed and manifested in principle. To know the truth is to know principle—to accept a measure or man on his merits and his merits alone. If individuals act from personal motives, from partiality to any measure or man, they are apt to do wrong, to sustain untrue, incorrect measures or principles, and to bring darkness upon themselves and others and harm to the work of God. He who is able to discern the truth, who loves, and has the modesty and courage to stand by it, prudently and fearlessly, under all circumstances;—whose faith is in God to that degree that he is steadfast and immovable in the firm consciousness that right is bound to triumph over wrong; who refuses, without stubbornness, to be moved from his adherence to and support of what is true in principle, is a strong man, or woman, and his service is of value to the work of God. He who acts hastily, through mere feeling, or because of the influence of another; or who has not power to discern the correct ground to take; or who allows himself for supposed or apparent gain or welfare to act contrary to truth in principle, is unsafe, as a disciple or representative of Jesus Christ, and will misrepresent the truth by his action.

The work of God necessarily comes in contact, in collision, with error.

It has done so in all the ages of the past and in all the vicissitudes of the present dispensation. From its beginning to its end it is a conflict between light and truth on one hand and darkness and evil on the other. Men and women in various degrees of moral and spiritual development and possessing different degrees of intelligence and integrity, the most of them "the honest in heart," while some prove to be otherwise, compose the body of the church. The net gathers "of all kinds" and will continue to do so until the end. In conflict with the world, the flesh, and the Devil, the kingdom of God, like the mustard seed, grows and develops gradually. Ambition, pride, lust, and kindred worldly evils have to be contended against. Hence the need of men and women being able to know the truth, willing to support its principles under all circumstances, and being undismayed, unmoved by fear in so doing.

The truest service one can render to fellow-man or men is to differ from a friend if that friend be wrong. To support a friend in a wrong or mistaken course is not to be true to that friend. Nor is it true to a friend to dally or trifle with his weakness. He who refuses to resent an injury, who continues to do good unto all men, however they may err against him in a personal sense; who has the strength and nobility of nature to do good, to do right, to act from principle under all circumstances; to be calm, self-possessed, clear-headed in his action, in love and for principle's sake; is a true man, or woman, and will be honored and respected and used by the Lord, and in the end have and retain the good will and confidence of the true in heart. Such action upon the part of all secures and maintains the truth in individual, local, and general affairs.

Extremes are to be avoided. Reaction against an error to another extreme is injudicious, harmful, dangerous. Jesus the Christ, the example to all, never lost his self-control, never went to extremes. He permitted no bitterness, no hatred, no malice to enter into or actuate him. He was "just and true."

A man or woman can overcome anything of an evil character; this notwithstanding the greatness of human weaknesses. The Lord has said this to his people:—

The kingdom is yours and power is given you to overcome all things. — Doctrine and Covenants.

To affirm that one cannot overcome is to deny the possibility of God's grace. The promise is to "him that overcometh." We believe that weakness should be outgrown, difficulties surmounted, evils and imperfections overcome, and mistakes avoided. This, as we comprehend it, is redemption, complete salvation; the passing "from death unto life."

The time of trial, of test, of proving, comes to all. He is wise who meets the demand and "rises to the occasion." It may be a test in morals, in integrity, the matter of paying tithing, or the standing by some other principle. He or she who fails to ruggedly and fully stand by the truth and do what he ought to do, to say "I am wrong" if he be wrong, and to make correction—who refuses so to do—will fail to move forward and upward, and God himself cannot carry him further until he repents and consents to heed the constraints of enlightened conscience and the Spirit and letter of the counsel of God. He who will not do so, "cannot be sanctified by law," etc. (D. C. 85:6-8.)

It may be asked, "What has all this to do with white or bolted flour, the Word of Wisdom," etc.? We reply, that the principle underlying all progress in any line of development for good is the same; and the mind enlightened to see one step forward is quickened to discern other and successive steps of action and is naturally looking forward, seeking to know the way, the truth, and the life. All truth is one and comes from God. Each feature of the truth is necessary to the perfect system. Our faith knows no exceptions of, no omissions to, no slighting of the divine law, no nonessentials in its principles. We believe and affirm that man shall live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God.

We understand that we are under obligation to God, to man, to the church, and to our posterity to live in such way as to bequeath true examples to all, and strong bodies and true principles to posterity, so far as in our power to do. The world is advancing and better, in some respects to-day, because good men and good women have preceded us and because they live now and have been and are being acted upon by the Spirit of truth. It becomes us that we build upon the foundation laid under their ministrations by the Almighty that the good work of making manifest the truth be continued in the world, for its good here and hereafter. The church is called to be the light of the world, God's people, the salt of the earth and the savor of men.

With a willingness to review our own standing, a sincere desire to do right, a reëxamination of the principles we stand by, when such are called in question, together with a determination to be loyal to truth whether it confirm or reverse positions thought to be right, the success and progress of truth is assured, provided all are humble and obedient before God. No man, no woman, however many the years of his experience, however extended his attainments, sees so far but what he may and must see farther. To recognize the constant need of prayer that the Holy Spirit and the word be our guide, and to heed its teachings, is to recognize and to honor the means ordained of God for our safety and salvation.

To repeat, Let us seek earnestly to "know the truth" in principle, to stand by it truly, firmly, and modestly, and without fear, that we may please God, and sustain his work in the true sense; that we may benefit fellow man, leave a proper and honorable heritage to posterity, and gain eternal life. This, we believe, is salvation in its broad, complete, intelligent, and God-given sense.

It is the opinion of the writer that the spirit or purpose of the law designs the prevention of evils; that he who by obedience to law avoids bodily and spiritual ills and contributes to physical and spiritual health, so far as in his power, is more acceptable to God than the careless, indifferent one, or the transgressor, even though the latter be healed by the mercy and power of God through the administration of the elders. Of this, however, we shall say more hereafter. "Prevention is better than cure;" "preservation by law" is our safeguard.

The Jews by centuries of obedience to the hygienic principles of the law of Moses have developed a physical ruggedness that has comparatively insured them against prevailing epidemics that have practically decimated or very greatly scourged other nations. As the people of God, warned and forewarned by him, we should, by obedience to the Word of Wisdom and "the commandments," develop that physical and moral and spiritual strength that shall preserve us against the plagues, famines, and moral and spiritual deceptions abroad and that yet remain to be manifested in the world in these last days. "The Saints shall hardly escape," we are told; but the promise of "health," of "wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures," is to "the called," the "chosen," and "the faithful."

The present age is an age characterized by adulterations, by bad and injurious habits and practices; by evils, shams, vanities, and hypocrisies. There is a strong and growing demand for a marked difference between the children of God and the children of Babylon. The example of the former is designed to be seen in all the phases of life and character—in all things that pertain to life and godliness, socially, domestically, morally, spiritually, and generally. This example will be seen by our obedience to what has been given us, of which we believe the Word of Wisdom is an important part. We have published heretofore statements that prove the scientific correctness, the normal accuracy of its provisions. Strong drink, such as intoxicants, are not the only beverages it prohibits; for its spirit evidently prohibits the use of tea and coffee, which are also harmful. Many commodities contain harmful, dangerous adulterations. Most of baking powders contain alum or ammonia or both, either of which is very destructive to bodily health. Some white flours are also said to contain alum to insure "light" bread. Coffee and tea, harmful in themselves, are dangerously adulterated. Barytes, a mineral, is used to adulterate lard, because of its weight and color. Manufactured vinegars and pickles almost without exception contain strong, hurtful acids, which homemade cider vinegars do not. Most spices and many manufactured preserves also contain deleterious substances. The family that lives on a properly selected diet will largely avoid manufactured mixtures that are adulterated. "Homemade" bread, and other homemade preparations are by far the best, and conduce to good health—that basis of a sound mind, a serene temper, a happy disposition; all of which are essential to clearness of mind, usefulness, placidity, and an education in the gospel sense—the comprehensive or truly scientific sense.

We believe our people should be well informed in the principles of life and hygiene; the principles that prevent disease and promote bodily and mental health. The benefits of obedience to law are in proportion to the degree of that obedience. For instance, if a man diets himself, he receives a proportionate benefit; if he retires and arises early, he is further benefited; but if he would receive all the benefits of the gospel economy he must honor all the hygienic, moral, and spiritual principles of the divine law; he will then be perfected and preserved by law. Families composed of Saints can cooperate to their own and to others' good in all these things, contribute to their own and the general good, and find extended usefulness and clearer minds in the reception of greater blessings and "hidden treasures" of wisdom, and power for good.

Responsibility attaches to knowledge, added responsibility to added knowledge, etc. To them unto whom "much is given" of them will "much be required." This is a just principle. However, responsibility is opportunity, a means to greater growth and happiness. The allwise God, the beneficent Father of all, bears the greatest responsibility—a responsibility of almost inconceivable magnitude. He asks that we share with him in the great and masterly and beneficent work of progress and perfection, and graciously grants that the divine inheritance of redemption and eternal life, shall be granted to those who overcome and move forward.

We believe that the people of God should so seek for and so make use of "all truth" that they shall maintain a progressive supremacy as examples of the power of the gospel for good; that by so doing they will bring the honest in heart to God, and be able to strengthen and educate those who, coming from the world, begin at the beginning of the divine educational system; thus insuring the safety, the progress, and the ultimate triumph of the work of God.

IOWA CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY.

THERE is an organization of the above name existing in Iowa the object of which is stated in what we give below, taken from a circular left on the editor's desk by U. B. Smith, district superintendent for the counties of Appanoose, Clark, Davis, Decatur, Keokuk, Lucas, Mahaska, Monroe, Ringgold, Union, Wapello, and Wayne, whose headquarters is at No. 435 Market Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

This society is incorporated according to the laws of the State. It is auxiliary to the National Organization that has headquarters at Chicago with branches already in eighteen States.

OBJECT.

To care for homeless, dependent children in a natural and sensible way and according to divine law by placing them in family homes.

To protect society by guaranteeing proper home training and education to the unfortunate little ones against its two greatest enemies, ignorance and vice, and thus to improve American citizenship.

METHOD.

By the employment of interested workers; a State Superintendent, eight district superintendents, and local advisory boards in every town and village—thereby a thorough supervision is kept over all our children.

Our Temporary Home serves only as a place of waiting until suitable homes can be found for the children. During the past year we have received and cared for 201 children, yet averaged only 25 in the Home.

The cost of training children in the old institutional methods runs from one to two hundred dollars per annum for each child. The average cost of caring for a child by the methods of this society is about $50, including subsequent supervision until of legal age.

This society is free from all sectarian, political, or race bias. It is a charity not supported by State funds, but by legacies and contributions from benevolent and philanthropic people.

To this circular Superintendent Smith adds at the close of his card:—

If you will aid this cause send me word where homes, children, or money may be obtained to help the helpless.

We presume that there are similar societies in other States; New York probably having set the example, the overflowing of the population of the city having called philanthropic attention to the necessity for such a work; a work worthy of encouragement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Explain the Scriptural use of the term hell.

Ans.—It is used variously, sometimes relating to a place, sometimes to a condition, sometimes to both. If the King James translation be examined in accordance with the foregoing idea, it will not be difficult to learn the significance of the term as variously used. Jonah used it as denoting a place of punishment, that place being the belly of the fish, as, "out of the belly of hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice."—Jonah 2:2. The Psalmist says, "The pains of hell got hold upon me; I found trouble and sorrow."—Ps. 116:3. This text relates clearly to a condition,—not to a place.

Q.—Does hell always mean the place of punishment?

A.—It seems always to denote either a place or a condition of punishment.

Q.—What does "the mountain of the Lord's house" signify as mentioned in Isaiah 2:2, and Micah 4:1?

A.—It is a figurative expression and relates to the people, congregation, church, or kingdom, as see Jeremiah 17:3; 51:25; Daniel 2:35; Zechariah 4:7; Ezekiel 17:22; Psalms 48:1; Isaiah 25:6, 7, 10. See also D. C. 108:4.

THE SEARCHLIGHT.

THE Searchlight, a four page monthly paper published at Independence, Missouri, by "The Church of Christ in Zion," as the imprint has it, is laid on our table. No. 1, vol. 1, is for February, 1896; and, without stating who the editor is, has for a motto,— "Devoted to the interests of the Church of Christ in Zion." It is twenty-five cents per year.

In an article headed "An Explanation" occurs the following:—

We intend to take every principle, as taught by every faction of the Mormon Church, and in their turn point out their good points if they have any, or their fallacies if they are false. We shall endeavor to do this in the spirit of meekness and love toward all, with only a desire to see this latter-day work shine forth in all the glory that God gave it on its estabishment, and not obscured by any of the contrivances or inventions of man seeking to embellish the handiwork of God.

This is very laudable, and worthy as a promise; and we shall take interest in seeing how well the founders of this new paper will keep to the letter and spirit of the promise. In view of the statement made on page three of the Searchlight itself that the court had declared "the Church of Christ at Independence, known sometimes as Hedrickites," to be a "part of the great Mormon Church as organized A. D. 1830," we hope the Searchlight will turn its own light upon itself and give an exposition of its own doctrines that are considered "good points," and its "fallacies if they are false," quoting the words as they are found in the explanation.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. D. C. WHITE, Blairstown, Missouri, 2d inst.:—

Bro. A. White and I held meeting near Bro. Alma Hout's for a week, with good interest. Two were baptized. I send you names for sample copies of the Herald. I go to-morrow to Quincy, in Hickory County, to act as moderator for Bro. F. L. Sawley in a nine days' discussion. Please send us some tracts for distribution there; will see that they are used to advantage. I understand there is a great interest in that part of the country, but most of the people are poor and unable to get much reading matter. The questions to be discussed are the Book of Mormon and the respective churches.

S. B. Kibler, Woodbine, Iowa, the 30th ult.:—

Bro. J. W. Wight held a series of meetings here lasting three weeks, closing last Sunday night. As a result five were baptized (all heads of families but one); many more are to follow, and a great deal of prejudice is allayed. On last Monday night we went nine miles south to a country schoolhouse where I used to live twenty-three years ago, and began meetings. House packed full and last two nights many looking in at windows. I never saw such an awakening in that neighborhood. Will continue there next week. We feel that sheaves will be gathered as a result of the labor bestowed. May God give the increase. Bro. Wight is a noble worker for the Master, and just got acquainted last year, and had not sickness prevented this year much fruit would have been gathered. I came home to-day to attend to home affairs and be at our Sunday services, and hope to return to Bro. Wight for part of week.

Bro. M. T. Short, Webb City, Missouri, February 1:—

I preached nine times in seven days at Webb city, and last evening I closed a week's meetings at Blendsville. We baptized three adults yesterday, and others are halting

Will speak to-night in Webb and to-morrow eve I am to solemnize the ordinance of marriage. I am to call an evening or so on my way northeast while enroute for Kewanee conference. I am busy, happy, and well.

Bro. W. H. Garret, Blake's Mills, Ohio, February 5:—

Things moving fairly well here. Leave to-morrow for Akron, Warren, Washingtonville, Youngstown, Sharon, and Pittsburg. Regards to all.

Bro. D. W. Shirk, Belmont, Nebraska, 3d inst.:—

We are trying to faithfully discharge our duty. Our Evergreen branch numbers twenty-nine, twelve of them scattered, but not forgotten. Hope they will be remembered by officials of other branches and the traveling ministry. Would be pleased to have scattered Saints in this region of country unite with us. Our people at Crawford, Nebraska, desire tent work this coming season. Bro. S. A. Rogers, of Simeon, Cherry County, earnestly asks for preaching. The Saints of Hay Springs should be remembered by the ministry.

Sr. L. M. Selbe, Seafield, Indiana, February 3:—

Bro. E. C. Briggs preached here and at another place near by during the month of December. Many of the people were independent enough to go and hear him. Campbellites refused the use of their church. He baptized one; others are asking for his return.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, writing from Ludington, Michigan, February 4:—

God is working with and for his people in this place; also at Amber, six miles from here. Many are coming to hear, and several are obeying the truth. Bro. George Washburn has baptized between thirty and forty in this place and at Amber; and there are several more who seemingly are believing and whom we think may obey. Last Sunday while standing before the public trying to tell them the old, old story, God wonderfully blessed with his Holy Spirit. We have been persecuted and terribly misrepresented in these as well as other parts; but while the enemy comes in, sometimes like a flood, God does "raise up a standard against him." God is with us and we are rejoicing.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THERE have been so many discussions between our elders in the field and the elders of various faiths of late, that the synopses of them sent to us for Herald have become so voluminous that we are obliged to stop putting them in; for want of room, and also because that much of each attack upon and defense of the cause is like every other, varying a little in form of statement only. We trust no one will feel offended at this, as it is intended for the best for all. The HERALD is small at the best and could easily be filled with good matter were it much larger, and still be too small, and much worthy material be left out.

Brn. E. L. Kelley and G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, arrived at Lamoni from Independence on Tuesday, the 4th inst. They report well of the Saints of Independence, who during the attendance of those brethren subscribed about $7,000 to pay off the entire remaining indebtedness on the stone church. This is good work and we congratulate those brethren and sisters on having thus freed their church building from debt. They have made much sacrifice to do it and deserve credit for it.

Brn. A. H. Smith and I. P. Baggerly arrived from their fields of labor during the week of the 2d.

Bro. G. H. Shearer, Little Sioux, Iowa, writes commending the labors of Elder Jenson, of Moorhead. He also writes against the practice of dancing, indulged in by some, he thinks, to the great injury of the work. He believes that the Spirit of the Master cannot be taken to the dance.

Bro. F. P. Scarcliff, of Scranton, Mississippi, makes a good defense of the faith in a half-column article which appeared in his county paper. It was written in reply to criticisms made upon the preaching of Bro. J. D. Erwin, by an opponent to the faith. Bro. Scarcliff's letter in this issue reports conditions and progress in that part of the field.

The verse "Be not angry," published in HERALD of January 29 and credited to Thomas Street, of Midway, Utah, as original, is said by some of the brethren to have been published years ago in England. We published as sent to us by Bro. Street. Though not inclosed in quotation marks, we do not know that the brother intended it to appear as his composition. Some writers know little of or pay little attention to marks of punctuation. Writers should, of course, indicate or quote matter that is not original.

A shock of earthquake severe enough to awaken people from slumber, passed over portions of Iowa, Nebraska, and South Dakota on the 4th inst.

The anti-prize-fight bill has passed the Senate and has been sent to the President, from whom assurances of his signature have been received. The war department has been notified of its passage and has arranged to provide troops if necessary to stop an anticipated battle of scientific brutality. This is another sign of progress. The government has done well to follow the example of the legislature and Governor of Texas.

Bishop E. L. Kelley will be present at the conference of the Northeastern Kansas district to be held at Neta-waka, Kansas, February 22-23.

Mr. M. Willett, the inventor of a new system of cold storage, advertises his refrigerator, the Eureka, in this issue. We believe he has an improved system, and that it is of considerable practical value. He is recommended to us as reliable. See his card elsewhere.

Roentgen's discovery of an improved system of photography by which the interior of wood, iron, flesh, and other dense bodies can be photographed, and flaws, and foreign bodies, and other objects revealed, is followed by the announcement that Dr. Selle, of Brandenburg, Germany, has discovered a process of instantaneous color photography by which images of objects are reproduced in their original tints. What next?

Toronto advices state that Archbishop Walsh will address a letter to the press asserting that Catholics are free to vote on the Manitoba school question as their consciences dictate. He will also advise both Catholics and Protestants to avoid sectarian feeling and to ignore the efforts of politicians to excite racial conflict. He believes other Canadian political questions to be more important than the separate school question, and hopes all Catholics will so realize. The action of the Archbishop is opposed to the views of the hierarchy of Quebec and Ontario and is expected to cause a sensation.

The upper Atlantic coast has been visited of late by a storm that assumed the proportions of a hurricane. Much damage was done along the New York and New Jersey coast.

Prof. T. H. MacBride, Professor of Botany at the State University of Iowa, lectured at Lamoni in the interest of Graceland College library fund, on Friday, the 7th inst. "The life and growth" of a tree was the subject. It was well presented and received the close attention of a large audience.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Let high birth triumph! What can be more great?
Nothing—but merit in a low estate.
To virtue's humblest son let none prefer
Vice, though descended from the conqueror."

Dear Sister Frances:—This beautiful Sabbath evening my heart is filled with gratitude and thanksgiving to God for his goodness and mercy to me, and I just felt impressed to write to the Column. I have long thought it selfish of me to enjoy the products of other pens and not add my mite.

I love this latter-day work, and I praise God for the noble efforts of the mothers and daughters to benefit themselves and the world. The dear Father has given me a beautiful baby girl to train and nourish for his kingdom, and I feel the weight of the responsibility so sacred and so momentous. I never realized the blessedness of life and the meaning of the gospel until since my marriage, and now that the sweet babe has come to our home I can fervently say, "My God, I thank thee that I live;" that unto me is given the sacred trust of helping to "rear a righteous generation," that shall be prepared to meet the "King in his glory." God help all young mothers to realize their responsibility in this respect and enable them to give to the world the best possible offspring, and

"Arise our fervent prayer
Both night and morn.
God make 't good,
For children to be born."

My husband and I have enjoyed very much the letters in the Column, also the Leaflets and the Daughters of Zion Department in Autumn Leaves. It is a noble cause, and God will bless the efforts of those engaged therein. I would that I might be privileged to meet with the sisters and enjoy the readings and be profited by the rehearsal of the experience of others. But as that cannot be, I shall endeavor to serve God to the best of my ability and bring my little one up to the Father a bright and beautiful soul, which by example and precept I have led into the kingdom. May God help us so to live that our children shall rise up and call us blessed; that our home life may be such that the blessed state of motherhood shall indeed be a holy one, and that father and children shall claim us the queens of the home, while they may say indeed,

"Legions of angels looking down,
Rejoice, while God bestows a crown
Dearest on thee.
Their song the Judean shepherds heard,
And sacred is the hallowed word,
Maternity."

Thus we see that the angels rejoice in the contemplation of the state of motherhood, and even as Mary was inspired to burst forth into a song of joy when thinking of her blessed condition, so others may and will be blessed as they fulfill this condition.

The other morning when rocking my "wee one" to sleep my heart and soul were drawn out along these lines, and the thoughts of how sincere and beautiful must the character of the mother be that she may indeed be an example for the child and how much we need the Father's help to make us worthy mothers, the following lines shaped themselves in my mind and burst from my lips as my very heart's cry, and I write them as given me:—

MY PRAYER.

Dear Father, help thy erring child,
Shield her from paths of sin so wild,
And ever help her in the fight,
Bravely to stand for truth and right.

Father, forgive me, thus I pray,
O keep my feet in the narrow way,
And ever lead me thus to share
Thy favor and thy loving care.

Kind Father, let thy Spirit sweet
Guide and direct my faltering feet,
And let me feel the holy power
Of constant care from hour to hour.

O thou who art in heaven above,
And carest for me in thy love
Hear now my prayer, thou blessed One,
For the sake of Christ, thy holy Son.

May God let his blessings rest upon the mothers. Ever praying for Zion's weal,

Your sister in Christ,

CEMITA.

DES MOINES, IOWA, Dec. 15, 1895.

KILMANAGH, Michigan, Jan. 15.

Dear Sister Walker:—It has often come to me to write to you; and this morning finding myself alone thought it a good opportunity to pen a few lines. My heart has often been made to rejoice when reading the letters, especially those on the training of children. I sincerely hope that the ones who write those letters do not let the words fall as idle tales, but put them in practice in their own homes by trying to teach the little buds of promise God has given them to love and honor his holy name. There is a great duty enjoined upon parents to teach their little ones the way of the gospel, for when the love of God is planted in their minds from their youth up what noble Saints they will make; and when they have grown up they will be men and women who are capable of filling the place of their careworn parents who have passed away.

If I should ask you where a mother's duty begins you would undoubtedly all say at home. Then, mothers, awake to the sense of your duty and make the teaching of your children a thing of prayer; yes, even prayer and fasting, that the great God of his Saints will give you wisdom whereby you may raise your family pleasing in his sight.

What is more pleasing to the eye than a large family striving to serve their Master and walk in the narrow way, with a noble mother at the head? Although her steps may be getting feeble and her head decked with gray and she is almost ready to be laid away in the grave, yet the work of her younger days shows forth by the training of her children. Would not the angels in heaven rejoice over such a scene? And who would fail to reward such a mother? Would God? No, with a willing hand he would give her the reward that she had gained. I have always had an interest in children, and being a worker in Sunday school from my youth it has seemingly grown stronger as I advanced in years. As I walk along the streets I seem to notice the little ones more than the grown people. Many times I have looked into their bright baby faces and thought, What will you become in this world? Will your parents teach you to be a good child, or will they pay but little attention to you and let you go heedless until you have found your ruin?

There is nothing I love any better than to step into a Sunday school and see a large class of little ones about six or eight years old with a teacher who is interested in her class, and then look across the room and see that the parents of those little ones are present and they too have an interest in the Sunday school work; for I believe that every Saint who is striving to be a true saint should have an interest in this branch of the church work, for it is one that is going to do much good if carried on aright. I believe that the workers are growing stronger and more are taking an interest. I would ask the Saints if they cannot do any more to aid us in their prayers. Fearing that my letter will be too lengthy and will weary you I will close. Your sister in Christ,
MRS. F. C. SMITH.

CLEARWATER, Neb., Jan. 12.

Dear Sisters:—It has been a long time since I have written to the Column, but I have read with pleasure and perhaps profit that written by abler pens than mine. There are scores of intelligent writers in the church, and it seems a waste of space for such as me to occupy.

I am still interested in the mother's work, and in fact all advance movements that will better the condition of the family. Women are already placing themselves on record as mentally man's equal, and morally far his superior. The temperance movement was agitated by them and will never die as long as there are mothers and boys. I believe the time is coming when her voice will be a power that will make the rotten old parties shake. We have scores of men that claim to be against the saloon and its long list of associated evils when you talk with them, but when they vote they stand solid with the whisky side. When asked about it they reply, "O, we didn't like to lose our vote;" so they trade their convictions of right for the blood of their fellow men, it may be their boy, or it may be their neighbor's boy, or perhaps girl, that they send down to the depths of degradation; but they seem to care not, they have voted with the winning side. There are a few such professed Saints in the church and I can heartily echo Bro. Luff's sentiment when he said that if the Lord wanted any such members he could have them, but he had no use for them.

I do not believe a true Christian man will either sell or aid in the selling of either intoxicating beverages or tobacco. Some may think I am radical and call me a crank, but this crank can never be turned backwards. Some say, "Prohibition will never win, so what use to always be harping about it?" We might reply, the gospel will never convert the world, so what is the use of the elders spending their time and lives in preaching it, the wives sacrifice all that they do for it, or the church spending its hundreds of thousands of dollars to send it to the nations of the world?

Temperance is one of the Christian graces, and as a nation we cannot have temperance without prohibition. It has been tried and found wanting. Then as a church let each one take a firm stand on the right side. Mothers, do not be afraid to advocate your principles. Stand firm against the dread monster, Alcohol, and its younger sister, Tobacco. Young sisters, see to it that the young man who seeks your hand in marriage is as pure as you in every respect. Do not compromise your honor by wedding a man whose brain and breath are poisoned by the use of whisky and tobacco.

Hoping that we all may continue to "Come up higher," I remain,

Your co-laborer for the right,
EMMA X. GAMET.

HATFIELD, Mo., Jan. 20.

Dear Sisters:—I appreciate your letters very much in my hours of affliction. I have been afflicted three years next June. I feel my weakness, but desire to bear my testimony concerning the work, for I have received great cheer and consolation from my heavenly Father. My desire is to continue faithful. I have a great anxiety for the gospel. I hope that the time may soon come that the honest at heart will be gathered into the one fold. Dear brothers and sisters, remember me in your prayers that I may have sufficient strength to hold out faithful. We have reorganized Sabbath school at Lone Rock. I love it with full purpose of my heart, and am glad to see it roll on again. They all seem to take such a great interest, although there are but a few that attend.

Your sister in Christ,
MATILDA HARTSCHEN.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR FEBRUARY.

Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and if he had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires toward God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul.—Mosiah 9: 9.

Thursday, Feb. 13.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general. Memory Verses.—Ecclesiastes 11: 7-10.

Thursday, Feb. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—3 John 2-8.

Thursday, Feb. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 59: 19-21.

LAMONI, Iowa, Feb. 4.

Editors Herald:—By recent letter from Bro. R. J. Anthony to me I learn he felt "hurt" on reading my letter of December 19, 1895, in Herald for 25th of same month, for the reason that he thought said letter reflected on the ministry connected with the Utah mission since 1884. I am glad Bro. Anthony wrote me directly concerning what was an "offense" to him. This is fair to him and to me. It presents an opportunity for explanation. It fulfills the command of the great Teacher. It evinces that charity—that love—which ought always to actuate the servant of Christ our Lord.

I now assure him, and all others interested, that it was far from my heart to cast the least reflection on anyone at any time connected with the Utah mission. I sought solely to present facts in respect to that field as I saw them and had learned them, and to suggest the importance of church history in prosecuting missionary work there. I had no thought of saying church history had not been used freely there hitherto, for I knew it had been used with telling effect from 1863 up to 1895, and perhaps by very few to a greater extent and better effect than by Bro. Anthony.

It is an admitted fact that, since 1883-84, there has been a "shrinkage" in attendance at our chapel in Salt Lake City, and also in the general missionary work in Utah. But this is not chargeable to those placed in charge of that field. The cause of this lies rather in the fact that the mission has not been supported by the church since 1882, as fully as it should have been, and out of this has grown discouragement to the missionaries, and to the Saints in the Rocky Mountain mission, and to friendly Gentiles and disaffected Utah Mormons.

COLDWATER, Mich., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—I am just now recuperating a few evenings in the midst of a very interesting series of meetings at California, Michigan. The town hall has been tested to its utmost capacity; great interest prevails. Rev. Aylesworth, M. E., formerly from Canada, gave his "reasons for not being a Latter Day Saint" in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening, January 26. I withdrew my appointment for the time in his favor, and our congregation gave him a splendid hearing. His effort was a tame one, and it was very evident to the people that if the gentleman gave his strongest reasons for a nonacceptance of the faith of the Saints, he was too easily satisfied to be anything religious. By ridicule and ignorance he incurred the disgust of the entire people monopolized on his devoted head.

He was about to dismiss the audience without a song or doxology, when I interrupted with, "Can I make a statement, please?" "No, sir," came the answer, with an index gesture. You see he proved himself to be a "Canada thistle"! He finally consented for me to make an announcement, which I did, to reply at the hall to his misrepresentations on Tuesday evening of the same week. Many came who could not get in.

Mrs. Dr. Skinner remarked to me the next day, "Elder Scott, that man scored every point for you last night and one for himself, and that one was that he is a fool." Bro. Briggs was present and has been for two weeks in his inimitable manner, urging the gospel claims.

The work is commending itself to hundreds; the country is aflame. We think to open the cause in Montgomery and Reading next week. Brn. Daniel and Barmore have given Fremont, Indiana, a little "edging up." They aroused the Adventists on the Sabbath question and debate is talked of. The brethren were busy at Straw schoolhouse the last news. Twenty ministers could not respond to the "calls." What shall be done?

By the way, is not four dollars per week for board during General Conference a little steep, considering the money scarcity and low down prices of wheat, potatoes, etc.? Numbers of Latter Day Saints would gladly attend who cannot pay so much for board. Pitch the next General Conference at Coldwater and potatoes, beef, bread, etc., won't come so high.

Love to everybody,

MOUNTAIN GROVE, Mo., Feb. 6.

Editors Herald:—I have not been able to be in the field this present year on account of serious affliction in my family. My dear companion has been in Mountain Grove since Thanksgiving Day, being treated for a large cancer. She had been investigating this latter day work last summer, but had not yet accepted it. I tried to get her to exercise faith and I would call for the elders, but somehow her faith was not sufficient to admit of my calling for them, although she had seen our youngest daughter, Lillie, eight years old, healed instantly by the administration of Bro. Joseph Ward. My wife has also been suffering with la grippe and is therefore very weak, so that I cannot take her home.

I desire the faith and prayers of all the Saints in behalf of our sore trials, which just now are very great, with persecutions also. These trials and persecutions I expected when I entered this work to my greatest delight and comfort. I therefore earnestly request your faith and prayers for my wife that her afflictions may be a means of bringing her into the fold and that she may be healed; also for my six children, and for me, that I may be faithful to the end and soon be able to take the field again; for I delight in this work, and in presenting this system to the people in the power of the Spirit.

I am fasting and praying often on account of these our afflictions, for we have the promises that the blessed Master will not leave nor forsake us if we put our trust in him and keep ourselves humble and walk in all his statutes blameless. May we all so live that we may by the help of the Master be able to come up through all our fiery trials and tribulations, so that we may obtain eternal life and enjoy the celestial glory.

In bonds,
JAMES P. BENSON.

GRIMES, Iowa, Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:—I am still in the conflict. My stay among the Saints at Oskaloosa and vicinity—December 17-31—resulted in one addition: Bro. F. E. Chambers, of Muchakinock, was baptized on the 29th and the Saints rejoiced. On the 26th Bro. Ed. Rowley took me to Oskaloosa from Pekay, eight miles distant, and got me a nice suit of clothes, others of the Saints being in league with him. This favor was highly appreciated by the writer.

From there I went to Angus and held a few meetings in the Salvation Army Hall. Cold weather evidently prevented many from attending; however, a few were present. The few Saints there are doing what they can to roll the work along.

I went to Frazer, intending to do some labor, but though I secured the schoolhouse and went from house to house through a good portion of the place, inviting the people out, but few appeared. There had been one of our brethren there a few weeks before, preaching, and practicing something else; and brought the church into disrepute. I then visited Perry, preaching four times in private houses to the few Saints and two or three outsiders. On January 14 I commenced a series of meetings at the Dillen schoolhouse, two miles south of Ortonville, in Dallas County. On the 15th Bro. D. M. Rudd joined me. We had not corresponded so were mutually surprised. We labored together, speaking alternately to large and attentive congregations. We had the largest crowd and the best interest I have seen for a long time. On Saturday the 25th Srs. Harding and Carle put in an appearance which gave much encouragement to us by their sweet singing and in their visits among the people, I believe, left an impression for good.

On the 30th ult. I left Bro. Rudd to continue the meetings while I came to this place with Sr. Harding. A meeting being in progress at McDeffits Grove church by the M. E's., I did not commence till the 2d inst. I had been informed that the Methodists intended to close at the close of the week. I attended two of their meetings and asked them to give out my appointment for the Center schoolhouse, which they failed to do, so I gave them notice myself, at which the ministers apologized for their forgetfulness. They however announced that they would continue their meetings a week or more longer. Considering the roads, dark nights, and other meetings so near, our attendance is very good and the best of attention is paid to the preaching. A good many of our brethren have labored here, both locals from Des Moines, of whom I might make favorable mention—C. F. Merrill and M. H. Cook, together with others of the traveling ministry. What will be the outcome of all the labor done time will tell. We need not fear that our labors are in vain in the Lord.

There are a few scattered Saints here who are endeavoring to keep the camp fires blazing and who seem to be held in high esteem by their neighbors, which is pleasant for the missionary to see. They are not coming into the church as fast in this district as in others we read of in the Herald, but I think we are gaining ground in some localities, slowly but sure.

I am not discouraged by the Temple Lot suit; all will come out right in the end. If we are to be tried as Abraham was when commanded to offer his only son, Isaac, the Lord will as surely show us a way out of the difficulty as he did Abraham. Let us wait with patience the Lord's time, doing what we know to be right in the meanwhile. (See D. C. Sec. 98.)

The past year's experience has not been the most pleasant in many respects and were it not that I had the assurance that the chastening would bring good results in the end I would ere this have given up the strife. The trials are sometimes severe, but with the victory there steals over one a sweet peace which more than compensates us for the struggle we have made to overcome. May we all realize our true condition and proper position in the work of God. No one can afford to be idle; let us help the work along with faith, prayers, and means, as all are necessary. May the peace of God be with all who love him in sincerity and truth.

Your fellow servant,
WILLIAM THOMPSON.

BORDEN, Ind., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—We hope that the Saints of Southern Indiana will remember that the conference year is almost closed, when I will make out my annual report to the Bishop—February 28, 1896. All Saints wishing to pay their tithes or freewill offerings will please send to my address.

We say we love this latter-day work. How much do we love it? Judging by the past year the amount paid in would show very little. The agent cannot travel to the branches without means, nor can the elders' wants be supplied without complying with the law.

The law is, "Gather my Saints together unto me; those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."—Psalms 50:5. If the Saints want to be gathered they must abide the law given for their establishment.

We hope the Saints will renew their energies in complying with the law of tithing as required by the law. We believe that every true Latter Day Saint must keep the whole law as given by Jesus Christ for their perfection and establishment in the land of Zion.

The work in my part of the field, Washington and Orange Counties, is progressing.

On January 1, I joined together as husband and wife Samuel M. Scott and Electa Ann

May, of Rego, Orange County, Indiana. Yesterday I had the pleasure of baptizing three precious souls; Philip Barksdale, Electa A. Scott, and Edmund C. Scott, my son, near Borden, Indiana. I leave home tomorrow enroute for Madison, and will visit the Manville and New Marion branches. Thence to my field of labor, Orange County. We realize that the harvest truly is great and the laborers few. Pray ye to the Lord of the harvest that he may send more laborers into the field.

In hope of eternal life,

JAMES M. SCOTT.

MARLIN, Texas, Jan. 30.

Editors Herald:—I have read a few numbers of the Herald and have talked with J. A. Robinson from Clarksdale, Missouri, who is a Latter Day Saint, and I would be glad if an elder could come and preach for us. Myself and family would like to be baptized, and I think several others would also be baptized. I think I can see the truth clearly.

We ask the prayers of the Saints. I believe the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true church of God. I first joined the M. E. Church, but could get no light. Afterwards I joined the Baptists, and still got no light. If God be my helper I will strive to meet the blessed Savior in the air.

If any of the Saints will come down we will take care of them and find a place to preach.

Yours very respectfully,

D. A. MCALISTER.

SEDALIA, Ky., Feb. 1.

Editors Herald:—It will soon be three years since I obeyed the Lord in baptism. I have been trying ever since to obey him in all things as fast as I learn what he will have me to do. Last August a year ago, our conference recommended me for Bishop's agent for the Tennessee and Kentucky district and in due time I received my appointment from the Bishop. I felt then and still feel my weakness and inability to serve the church in that capacity; however, I determined to do the very best I could. I realized that if I would be successful in this office I must give it some time and attention, and study the needs of the church as well as how to successfully teach the Saints to pay their tithes and offerings and thus supply their part of the means to meet the obligations of the church, as God ordained such to be done.

When the former agent, P. B. Seaton, turned over the books to me, upon examination I found that there was not one among every three of the Saints who had his name recorded upon the agent's book as having paid anything either as tithing or freewill offerings, for the support of the cause we all profess to love so well: therefore I began to investigate to see if I could ascertain why the Saints were not paying their tithes. They claimed to love God and a desire to keep his commandments. On reading the law on tithing as contained in the three books, it seemed so plain that no one need make a mistake, but that all must see, if they read the law and believed it, that all Saints should pay their tithes; so I began to interrogate the Saints, one by one, as I would meet them, to find the reason why they had not been and were not paying tithes.

Most of them said that they expected to pay some in the future, but when I reminded them that the poor and the elders' families could not live on expectations, nor on promises; that it took the same food and apparel for them as it did for other folks; that it took money or its equivalent to secure these necessities; many of them would then say that they sometimes handed the elders money. Thus by talking with them I found some had given an elder or elders one or two dollars, some few possibly five dollars. This small offering, with a promise from time to time to pay some tithes, seemed to solace them. Many of them appear to think that perhaps that is all that is required of them; Saints who ought to be paying from ten to fifty dollars annually only paying from one to five dollars a year to the elder as freewill offering, and not one cent in tithes; still I must say that most of them appear to want to do right.

Permit me to say right here that I notice a letter in Saints' Herald for January 22, 1896, from Bro. I. M. Smith; and as one paragraph of which, commenting on Bishop's agents' teaching partially strikes at the manner in which I have been teaching the Saints, I will explain how I have tried to teach them; and if Bro. Smith or any one else will convince me it is wrong, I will stop it immediately. I have taught them publicly and privately that I thought they should pay some tithes each year—as much as they could reasonably spare, or as much as the law required, if they could spare it. I also taught that as a rule their freewill offerings should be paid to the Bishop or his agents, unless they should find an elder in present need, then they should supply him; and if they are Saints they will furnish him if they have the means. "But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"—1 John 3: 17. When asked how the elders could be supplied if all should pay their tithes and offerings to the Bishop or his agents, I said that they should call on the Bishop where they could be furnished, if all would thus pay. But Bro. Smith thinks that if the elder has to ask for all he gets, it would be embarrassing; not only so, but humiliating. I must confess that I am unable to see how it would be either embarrassing or humiliating, unless it would be from the fact that the Bishop would know how much means he used; and that could not be, because I have been taught to believe that it is the elder's duty to report all the means that comes into his hands. This the elders doubtless do; besides, I presume that no elder would have any desire to use more than would be necessary; hence I can see no just cause for embarrassment or humiliation in asking for such things as they need.

If I should work for you with the promise that you furnish me with food and raiment and all other necessities of life, and I lack any of these things, it would not be either embarrassing or humiliating for me to ask you to furnish them; neither would I be begging if I should do so. The elders, as I understand, are working for the Lord, under the promise that he will furnish them food and raiment, with all other necessities of life. The Bishop is keeping the Lord's storehouse; then if the elder should lack any of the things promised, why should it be either embarrassing or humiliating to call on the Bishop and be furnished?

Now, in conclusion, permit me to say that all my teachings, both as Bishop's agent and otherwise, has been in good faith and with a clear conscience before God and man. Nevertheless some of my teaching may be wrong. If it is, when I am made sensible of it I will desist at once. Whether right or wrong I have been partially successful, at least.

I wish to use this method of returning my thanks to all who have been paying their tithes and offerings and thus honoring the law of God. Many of them have done well, some paying small amounts. For aught I know it may be the widow's mite. May the Lord bless them all, both small and great, in the efforts they have made and are making for the cause of Christ. May the Lord bless me with wisdom and understanding that I may be able to teach their duty so clearly to those who have not paid that they may commence to pay at once as the Lord prospers them.

SCRANTON, Miss., Jan. 28.

Editors Herald:—I inclose you clipping from our county paper. The houses of worship of other denominations having been closed against us, Bro. J. D. Erwin has been doing some preaching in private houses. He is now about two miles from here at the seashore in the village of Pascagoula. On Sunday he preached in a private house down there, then having been offered the free use of Mr. Dodson's hall, he has preached there the last two nights.

Will the brethren please remember the Southern Saints in their prayers.

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

GALENA, Ind., Jan. 30.

Editors Herald:—The Southern Indiana district conference at Byrneville the 25th inst. was one of peace and harmony; and especially was the power of the Spirit's presence witnessed both by members and non-members, with its melting influence. Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., was ordained to the office of elder. The elders who spoke evinced a marked improvement. It was one of the best ever held in Southern Indiana. The members and officers are more eager to understand the law of the church and to be subordinate.

I am aware that a misunderstanding and misapplication of "law" touching the duties of both district and branch officers have caused much confusion and shame; and some of the wrecks such policy has resulted in are to be seen, as monuments, not of infinite production, but of "human wisdom;" therefore we submit the law as found in Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 120, paragraph 7, for our consideration and obedience:—

"In matters of personal importance and conduct arising in branches or districts, the authorities of those branches and districts should be authorized and permitted to settle them; the traveling councils taking cognizance of those only in which the law and usages of the church are involved, and the general interests of the church are concerned. Where cases of difficulty are of long standing, the council may require local authorities to adjust them; and in case of failure to do so, may regulate them as required by their office and duty; and this that the work and church may not be put to shame and the preaching of the word be hindered."

The present indications are that Southern Indiana will be the battle field in the near future; and the prospects never were so cheering. Then let us stand or fall under the ensign of our King.

In the faith,

M. R. SCOTT, SR.

TENANT'S HARBOR, Maine, Jan. 31.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote I have been wonderfully blessed in preaching the word at Martinsville. The Adventists broke and ran away from us; the Baptists wouldn't come out anyhow; their bottles were so filled with the old wine they had no place for the new. I suppose they are afraid of losing their Baptist bottles. At this place the old hardshells won't come to hear. A very few of nonchurch members come, or now and then one that followed the Baptists for several years. They say, "I can't go with them any longer," although some are deeply interested, and we hope in time will obey.

On the south side, I had about eighty out to hear, but a few of the Baptist people found their craft was in danger, so they got up some teams and rode off a few evenings to Port Clyde, where their minister was holding forth; so it made our congregation somewhat smaller. I learn that for several nights after I got through preaching a part of the congregation would stay in the schoolhouse for nearly two hours, discussing the doctrine.

I believe I have not been more blessed in preaching for years than I have been this winter. I have averaged a sermon a day for the past month. Although no one has been baptized, yet we are paving the way and getting ready for an ingathering if possible. At Martinsville I stopped with Capt. Stephen Gardner. He is a very intelligent man. He stands by us in the fight and attends all the meetings. His noble wife belongs to the church and of course, like most of women, she makes use of the little member in defending the cause of Christ, and it is very hard to beat her in an argument. The reason is because she has the truth on her side. The noble boys and girls are taking some interest in the work, and it is hoped in time may be made useful to the church.

Bro. Seavey has loaned out several copies of the Book of Mormon and has given away several copies of the Voice of Warning, and tracts. He opens my meetings with prayer, and says, "I guess I'll have to commence and talk a little to them." He is a noble man and is very anxious for Nephi to call on him. He is not alone on this point, of course.

I married a couple on the 24th that is now in Detroit City, Michigan. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark, residing here. The young man is Mr. Albert Clarke, manager in a bicycle office in Detroit, Michigan. Will an elder call on them.

I am invited to call and preach in several new places near here. I will do so when I can get the time. I don't like too many irons in the fire at once.

I think the little Hymnal is splendid. May it be found in every Saint's home.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

ST. CHARLES, Mich., Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:—Leaving home the early part of last week, going by way of Bay City, I was prevailed upon by the Saints to remain a few days. I did so and preached in their nice little church. I believe the Saints in Bay City are active and are coming up higher; or as the apostle said, going on to "perfection." Sunday there is their busiest day as the Sabbath school is in a very prosperous condition, also the Prayer Union.

Leaving there early Monday morning I came to this place to meet with parties who have been taking the Ensign. This is a new place, but we announced meetings in the Sunlight schoolhouse, and have continued each evening since. Last evening I spoke on the judgment of God. I cited many passages of scripture showing that endless or absolute punishment was not the Bible term, but that equity and justice would be meted to every man. It is rather against the rules of the school board to hold week-day meetings, but the director and school-teacher being present consented for us to continue. Thus far our interest is good. One very pious man thought I ought to preach hell fire and brimstone forever and endless. I told him I did not like that doctrine and was not going to attach that to the mercy of God, and that to reform and pay the penalty was more reasonable and scriptural.

Yours in bonds,

E. DELONG.

BOONE, Iowa, Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—I have been preaching in the Saints' church at Boonesboro. I spoke five times; had good attention and was blessed in the effort. May God bless the seed sown that it may not return void.

Some have been sick with the grip. Have administered to several since here; all are well at present. The work here is somewhat at a standstill at present, but all are firm in the faith so far as I know. I have received the very best of treatment from all the Saints, for which I am thankful. May the Lord reward them.

Shall return to Des Moines and Runnells and preach by the way as opportunity offers. Pray for me. I remain,

A wanderer,

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

WHEN AND WHERE HELD; SPECIAL WORK THEREOF.

INASMUCH as there has been some agitation in previous conference sessions as to the advisability of the continuance of annual General Conferences, and fearing there is some misapprehension in the minds of many concerning the same, we offer the following.

Among all the Saints there is a special sacredness attaching to the sixth day of April, from the fact that on this day sixty-six years ago, Joseph Smith, under divine direction, organized the Church of Christ anew on the earth with the same plan, gifts, and blessings provided for by Christ when he first established it. Others hold it in double reverence, concluding that on this identical day eighteen hundred and thirty years before the Son of God was born, reasoning so from the seventeenth section of Doctrine and Covenants, it being a revelation from God.

It is well that this day be held in sacred veneration so long as the church remains, but to go to the extreme and urge that because the church was organized on this day at each annual recurrence of it a General Conference should be held, is not war-rantable in any. We should have more respect for what was done on this day than for the day itself, hence it is to the interests of all to make a success of the work commenced at that time; and if found expedient to dispense with an annual conference, we should gladly do so.

Had there been an uninterrupted succession of annual conferences on this day, we might argue precedent; but even this fails. The church from its inception in 1830 to 1844 did not hold General Conferences annually. The last General Conference held was in 1841, for at a special conference held in October, 1841, Joseph Smith said:—

There shall be no more baptisms for the dead until the ordinance can be attended to in the font of the Lord's House; and the church shall not hold another General Conference until they can meet in said house. For thus saith the Lord.—Times and Seasons, vol. 2, No. 24; October 15, 1841.

The Reorganized Church has maintained the annual General Conference for thirty-five years; and while in its early history it could be conducted under favorable conditions and at a nominal cost, such is not now the case.

The Rules of Order says:—

The General Conference is a convocation of the general authorities of the church, empowered to take cognizance of and act for the entire church. All officers of the church may attend, and delegates may be appointed for districts, and for such branches as are not included in district organizations. These delegates may present such questions as they may have been specially instructed to offer, and may ask consideration and decision thereon.

From this I conclude, there cannot be held a General Conference of the church unless the general authorities of the church are present, or at least a majority of them.

In case of an official decision being demanded, there should at least be two of the Presidency, seven of the Quorum of Twelve, and thirty-six of the Seventy; and as in matters of decision these quorums hold check and counterbalance to each other; and as it is very probable that their service in this direction will be called into requisition more in the future than in the past; there will be greater need that they be present at our conferences.

As our missionary quorums move out into greater and untried fields they will, as a result, be farther removed from the church center and consequently be more unable to attend conferences of annual occurrence. It has been argued that there is no need for the missionary quorums attending General Conferences; but as they are general officers, under the law, it is as much their privilege and duty to attend as any other, and the conferences should be held at the time and place of most convenience to them. Is it better to have a conference every year and it poorly attended, or one every two or more years and have all, or the majority, of the general authorities present?

In the strictest sense of the term the General Conference is not a legislative body, but an organization met for the transaction of routine work or that of a provisional nature which can be largely provided for and facilitated in another way. The General Conference cannot enact laws or devise ordinances on manner of worship, for God alone can do this; but they can pass resolutions and devise means for the promulgation and effectual application of the same.

While the people have and always will have, voice and vote, either direct or by representation, in the general deliberations of the church, there are rights and prerogatives attaching to the quorums of the church which are greater than those of lay delegates; and the time must soon come, if it is not already here, when the quorums shall meet in "solemn conclave," and exercising the franchise given them of God proceed to settle questions of doctrine, rule, and order of the church. And while admitting that these quorums cannot enact over the heads of the people without submitting for their consideration and ratification, God has provided that they meet singly as well as conjointly, and that decisions be rendered, and that said decisions stand.

The Reorganization from its inception has been in the formative state, the leading quorums having never been completely filled; and while concurring in the wisdom of God in not filling, it is nevertheless true that the quorums were not in as good a position to act as though they were full. It is a question in my mind whether it is better to have an annual General Conference, or one in two, three, or even four years, when we consider that at every annual session, so far, much time and patience are expended in meeting issues the solution of which can be secured in an easier and better way. When grave questions confront the church is it not better that the "competent quorums" of the church meet in "solemn conclave" to consider and decide thereon? This would avoid the usual friction and the publicity attaching to open discussion in promiscuous assemblies.

While radical differences may exist, and while it is possible that they cannot all be adjusted in said "solemn conclave," I am of the opinion that there are not so many differences between the leading quorums as many suppose; and I believe that a public airing of those differences in a promiscuous assembly of delegates and spectators large intensifies those differences; while a meeting of the quorums by themselves modifies differences and tends to an adjustment of ideas, as witnessed in the conference of 1894, at Lamoni, Iowa, and the "joint council" which followed. Here the Lord said,

The Twelve should remain at Lamoni, and continue in council with the Presidency and the Bishop, and his counselors if practicable, a sufficient time after the adjournment of conference to counsel together, and agree on the things of the law and the general affairs of the church, so that when the traveling council shall separate for their several fields, there may be no longer reason for distrust, suspicion, or dissension; and if these officers will so counsel together in the spirit of moderation and mutual forbearance and concession, my law will be more perfectly understood by them and a unity of sentiment and purpose will be reached by them. It is the will of your Lord and your God that this should be done. It should have been done before, but the adversary hath hindered, desiring to prevent the success of my work in the earth.—D. C. 122: 13.

The result shows the wisdom of this. I feel assured that more was accomplished in this "council" so far as these quorums and the general welfare of the church is concerned, than could have been in discussing these matters in a public conference. This being true, then will it not apply to matters that may come up? And can it not apply to all quorums affected by any question under consideration? We think so. When action is sought upon a certain matter and one quorum takes the initiative, then let them communicate with the other quorums and urge consideration. If after this considering, there is a unity in sentiment, the same can be brought before the General Conference for ratification; if there is not a unanimity, the quorums can be called in general council (not necessarily a General Assembly) and the matter be discussed from every standpoint with a view to union. If after every effort possible still a difference exists, and it is believed by the quorums in the majority that a decision should be rendered, let them so decide and bring the matter before the body for action. But this should not be done until every effort fails in bringing about an agreement on the part of the quorums.

Most of the discussions on leading questions which engender feelings and a sense of alarm and unrest among the Saints, are done by the representatives of the church included in the administrative and judiciary quorums of the church. This discussion could as well be made in "solemn conclave" as in public sessions and would save us from unenviable ridicule by worldly scoffers, and at the same time not shake the faith of those who may be tender or young in the faith. Some measure should also obtain making it a breach of trust for any officer of the church to go among the Saints, and in private or public to dwell on the differences between the quorums, thus feeding the spirit of division which the Devil is seeking to bring into the church.

If, on matters pertaining to the specific workings of any quorum a decision obtains, it stands until repealed by God or the quorums. This being the case, is there not a necessity for General Conferences every year? Some urge, "The missions must be appointed." Is there a need for a General Conference to do this? Who appoints the missions? Not the body, but the quorums that God has stated should; viz., The First Presidency and Twelve. In mission work the Twelve are to labor under the direction of the Presidency; the High Priests under the Presidency and Twelve; the Seventy under the Twelve. Could the Presidency and the Twelve not appoint missions just the same? And then when our General Conference meets in two, three, or even four years, if there has been an unwise (which I do not think probable) use or abuse of this power, they would be amenable to the body. While in the proper performance of their duty and until it is proven otherwise, I see no provision in the law that General Conference can set aside appointments made by the appointing quorums.

To illustrate: Suppose the Quorum of Twelve should appoint a Seventy to labor in New Zealand and the conference would change it and send him to Africa, under whose direction would he be laboring? Not the Twelve, for they directed him to go to New Zealand. The law says the Seventy shall labor under the direction of the Twelve—not the Saints in conference. It is scarcely ever that a change is made in the list of appointments, and when so it is usually done because one of the ministry affected by the appointment objects. And, could he not state his objections to the quorum appointing? And would he not be as fairly dealt with?

In case any emergency arises or circumstances necessitate the calling of a conference, the Presidency have that right. Now, if we have a conference every two or more years providing that if necessity requires it any time in the interim, a special session may be called, where is the evil to accrue from the change?

The benefits are:—

1. A saving of thousands of dollars to the church and the people.
2. A saving of from three to six weeks' time for the missionary in the field.
3. An ushering in of an era of more contentment among the Saints, as they are getting to feel about General Conferences like the people in the United States do about the convening of congress; they are anxious all the time the conference is in session, not knowing what is going to happen.
4. It would give more time for deliberation and thought, and would in a measure preclude spontaneous presentation and hasty action.

It would thus afford every general church official, and especially the missionary force, an opportunity of attending all the General Conferences of the church (which they should), a thing that they cannot now do.

Mission conferences could be instituted that could adjust matters and settle many things of a local character that are now submitted to the General Conference when they could with as much ease and accuracy be settled by the mission concerned.

PLACE OF HOLDING.

As to the place of holding the General Conferences of the church.

While I voted for Kirtland last spring out of respect for the many noble Saints in the East, I am now convinced that it is not wise to change the conferences about. The seat of the First Presidency, or some point in close juxtaposition thereto, is the place where General Conferences should be held; for it always will be the center of church circumference, or nearly so. Brethren in California, Salt Lake City, or Denver, can with as equal grace demand that the conference be held in the extreme West as that our eastern Saints can contend for the conference being held in the East.

It is urged that it gives us prestige with the world. We must consider that this is not the object of General Conferences. They are instituted to benefit the church internally.

Again Saints urge: "We have a right to the conference once in a while." The main work of the conference should be business, not social meetings or preaching; hence it is not instituted to secure a good time to the laity, but that the ministry may come together in the consideration of spiritual questions. We should not reason as to our rights as individuals, but should feel to support whatever facilitates the interests of the church as a whole.

There is a disposition on the part of some Saints if a missionary goes to General Conference to criticise him; and there is a feeling on the part of some of the ministry that they cannot afford to go to General Conference. So long as we have General Conferences it is as much the duty of one as of another to attend; and every member of the leading quorums of the church should feel it a duty, and do his best to be present.

Those under General Conference appointment, not having private resources to draw upon, should be privileged to draw upon the Bishop for expenses. It is inconsistent, when the church laws make it a duty for the ministry to attend to expect them to pay their own expenses when they have no resources to draw from save to ask the wife and family to yield up some of the pittance they now receive. The church should defray the expenses of her active representatives to conference, unless they are sent as delegates or are personally able to do so themselves.

Another thing that seems peculiar: Our elders are sent out to prove the world, the Lord stating they would find people kindly disposed, who would "feed them, clothe them, and give them money." The universal testimony of the ministry is that God had fulfilled his promise. Now, suppose a minister under General Conference appointment has been doing this for a year, it comes General Conference time, he has now an opportunity of going "home;" that is, to spend a few weeks among the family of God. He goes intent on church work, but when he arrives he is informed that "although we are Saints, we can't even feed you unless you give us money;" and so the poor elder who has trusted God and the world all the year must now pay board, notwithstanding the fact that God has said, "By this shall ye know my disciples," because they "feed you, clothe you, and give you money." Thus the wearied minister after spending one year or more, roaming over hill and dale in search of sheep, comes home to the sheepfold and is told, "You can't come in here unless you pay us three or four dollars per week for board." In my experience I know of one worthy exception: We think it nothing amiss for Saints intent on pleasure and enjoyment, who attend General Conference, to pay a reasonable board; but to charge the "missionary," who has no way to pay unless he virtually robs his family of that which they need to supply actual wants is wrong. If there are not enough Saints who would be able and willing to board one or two elders, then the church should make arrangement and pay for their board at moderate rates. I do not write this reflecting on the motive of any, or because the conference this year is at Kirtland; for I know that the majority of the Saints who are there are poor and there are not many of them; and if there is any place (?) at all where it would be justifiable it would be there.

Let the conferences be held at longer intervals; let them be more permanently located and provisions made whereby the "missionary" shall not be under the necessity of remaining at home or drawing upon the already over-strained purse strings of his loved ones in order to pay his expenses.

Yours very truly,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA.

WHOLESOME.

THERE is a wholesome growth in the gladsome things of the gospel when we improve each opportunity of increasing our store of knowledge and living by the commandments of the just One. The prophet asked:—

For who hath despised the day of small things?—Zech. 4: 10.

Perhaps the answer might not be amiss, Those who neglected to "follow after charity;" and that would be equally true now, for those in possession of true charity—the love of God, will be found doing God's will. There is small chance of being mistaken as to who fills the divine measure, for the Master said:—

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matt 22: 37-40.

Those who eschew evil and seek to have their lives comport with the above will "desire spiritual gifts" that they may evince to one and all their confidence and trust in God:—

For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believeth.—1 Cor. 1: 21.

And those saved through the means of the gospel and are in the spirit of it, will be of that class that will comply with the injunction,

But rather that ye may prophesy, and in so doing fulfill the word, he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.—1 Cor. 14: 3.

Another injunction reads:—

Forbid not to speak with tongues.

It is quite evident that the reason why none should forbid to speak in tongues is because God "set" that gift "in the church." (1 Cor. 12: 28.)

I will herewith recapitulate the points that I wish to emphasize as follows:—

1. Follow after charity.
2. Desire spiritual gifts.
3. Rather that ye may prophesy.
4. Forbid not to speak with tongues.

These commands can be found in 1 Corinthians 14: 1, 39, and are wholesome advice to all followers of Christ.

R. M. ELVIN.

WHAT IT WOULD AMOUNT TO.

WHILE a great deal has been said about the "Word of Wisdom," and especially about tobacco, we wish to look at this question in another of its phases. We are all anxious to see the church or kingdom of God built up faster than it has been in the past. We know it cannot be done without being preached, and we all feel willing to do our part in keeping the elders in the mission field.

Some may say, "We have paid our tithing, and when we have anything we can well spare, we give to the poor or to the missionary to aid in paying his expenses." That is good, yet I think I see where more might be done as well as not. The following might be the benefit derived by the church if the users would give to the church the money they spend for what God has said it is not "wisdom to use."

The church now numbers about twenty-five thousand. If but one member of every forty uses tobacco, we have six hundred and twenty-five users of the weed; and if the average amount used only amounts to ten cents per week (many use it to the extent of fifty cents to a dollar, and even more), we have a total of $62.50 per week or $3,250.00 per year, and I believe these estimates are made very reasonable.

Now let us see how much this is worth in souls. Suppose it requires $250.00 per year to keep the family of an elder that he may spend all his time in the ministry. This "tobacco fund" would sustain the families of thirteen missionaries. Thirteen elders would, in the year preach, not less than one hundred and twenty-five times each, or 1,625 times. Now, taking the report of the Second Quorum of Elders at the conference of 1889 as a standard (their number of baptisms averaged one for every fifteen sermons) and we have one hundred and seven baptisms, all caused by the use of the "tobacco fund;" one hundred and seven souls saved in one year for the use of the money that is spent for that that God has said is not "good for man."

TEA AND COFFEE.

There are others still that might assist to a greater extent than the tobacco users if they would apply their "tea and coffee fund" for the same purpose we have that of tobacco. Let us examine and find the real worth, or rather cost of this habit, for it is a habit as well as the use of tobacco. Twenty-five thousand church members, and to be on safe grounds we will only make our figures for one user of tea or coffee for each fifteen members, or a total of 1,666 tea and coffee users in the church. Now if one pound of fifty-cent tea or two pounds of twenty-five cent coffee would last a user five weeks, we have an expense of ten cents a week for each user. 1,666 users at ten cents each gives us a total of $166.60 per week, or $8,663.20 for the year. This amount would keep thirty-five elders in the field by supporting their families. This would give a total of 4,375 sermons and 291 baptisms.

Think of it, you tea and coffee drinking Saints, are you keeping two hundred and ninety-one souls out of the church and kingdom of God every year by the use of that that God has said is not wise for man to use? You who abhor the use of tobacco and sometimes almost abuse a brother because he uses it, while you are using tea or coffee just stop now and think. Be consistent. Don't condemn some one else for disobeying while you are doing the same thing.

"But," some say, "I don't think 'hot drinks' means tea and coffee." Well, you know that people who don't practice the "laying on of hands" "don't think" it is necessary.

To my mind "hot drinks" includes tea and coffee if it does not have direct reference to them. On account of "evils and designs" of "conspiring men." The adulteration of tea and coffee in later years proves the application of the Word of Wisdom to them to be good. Think again, tobacco and tea and coffee users, three hundred and ninety-eight souls might be saved each year if what you pay for what you would be better off without was only turned over to the Bishop of the church.

D. M. RUDD.

There are in Ohio about 17,500 oil wells, of which more than 3,000 were bored in 1894. The Kirkridge yields 310 barrels per hour, or 7,740 per day. Another yields over 1,200 barrels per day.

The Roman catacombs are 580 miles in extent, and it is estimated that from 6,000,000 to 15,000,000 dead are there interred.

Sunday School Associations.

SPRING RIVER.

Convention was held at Angola, Kansas, December 30, 1895; Mina Hart, assistant superintendent, in chair; Mirtie Jones secretary. Schools reporting: Angola, Kansas: Total enrollment 45; average attendance 30. Webb City, Missouri, 106; average attendance 62. Blendsville, Missouri, 124; average attendance 59½. A motion prevailed that each Sunday school in this district send its report to the superintendent of the school where the convention is to be held one week before the convention meets. Schools please take notice. The following motions prevailed: Each Sunday school do as it pleases in choosing its committee to prepare the program for next convention; also that superintendent of each Sunday school report to Sr. Mina Hart one month before convention is held what his Sunday school intends to have for entertainment. Moved that we request the General Sunday School Association to consider the wearing of some garb or badge for officers and delegates of the Sunday school to the convention, (along with credentials,) in order to obtain cheaper rates on railroads. Secretary's expenses, $3.85, car fare and writing material. Report accepted and secretary allowed to draw on treasury for said amount; if there is not the said amount on hand, to collect from different Sunday schools in district. Each Sunday school is expected to help bear the expense of district. Officers chosen, Mina Hart, superintendent; Ida Davis, assistant superintendent; Mirtie Jones, secretary; Alfred Davis treasurer. On account of bad weather only a few were in attendance. Adjourned to meet at Angola, Kansas, May 25, 1896, at 9:30 a. m.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Independence district Sunday school association will convene on Friday, March 6, at two p. m., at Holden, Missouri. Afternoon session will be devoted to business, including the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the evening to instruction in Sunday school work.

We hope all the schools in the district will be represented. Music in charge of the Holden Sunday school.

A. L. NEWTON, Pres.
ABBIE A. HORTON, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The missionaries in Iowa and Northern Illinois will please take notice that the last ministerial reports for the conference year come due in March. Those who are not in charge should report on or about March 1, while those who are in charge of "fields of labor" should report on or about March 10. Please be as prompt as possible.

"In the March report, all the items required by the quorum as a prerequisite to missionary appointment, must be furnished." (See Herald for June 4, 1892.) "It should be the duty of the missionary in charge of a 'field of labor' to secure proper reports from all General Conference appointees in his field, summaries of which, together with his own report, must be sent to the missionary in charge." (Conference Minutes for 1893, page 68.)

In the minutes it reads "must be published" instead of "must be furnished," as above. The word "published" is an error, either of the quorum secretary or the proof reader, and like other mistakes it has had a tendency to mislead or confuse.

Please do not overlook the notice of Bro. A. H. Smith, President of the Quorum of Twelve, to the effect that it is probable that the quorum will appoint this spring in harmony with their resolution of 1894; that is, that only those of the Seventy will be appointed as general missionaries. (See Conference Minutes of 1894, page 8.) Farther than what is contained in the notice of the President of the quorum, and the quorum resolution, cited above, I am not authorized to speak. And those who feel like propounding questions to the missionary in charge will please bear in mind that I cannot presume what the quorum will do when it meets, further than what is indicated in the notice given to the readers of the Herald.

J. R. LAMBERT.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 10, 1896.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Bro. J. C. Foss, laboring in the State of Maine, is hereby authorized to make collections of Herald Office accounts and make sales of church publications in his mission field.

This applies to all the ministry laboring under General Conference appointment, also to Bishop's agents and district presidents, who are requested to aid the publishing department, especially in those portions of the fields where there are no Herald Office agents.

The Saints will please take notice.

FRANK CRILEY,
Business Manager, Herald Office.

LAMONI, Iowa, February 6, 1896.

DELEGATE CREDENTIALS.

Will district officers kindly see to it that delegate credentials are sent in as early in March as can be done, so that a roll of the delegates may be prepared in season.

In some districts no conferences will be held before April, and such can make out the credentials authorized by their October or later sessions, and send in at any time. Those who hold sessions in February and March will please attend to it as soon as possible after the delegates have been appointed.

Remember the rule, that for every twenty-five members one vote is allowed, but not for the fractions thereof. Members standing on the records of disorganized branches in the districts may be counted, also scattering members who live within the districts who are not enrolled in some other district.

One paper certifying that so-and-so have been appointed by such a district, giving date when done, and signed by the president or clerk of the district, is sufficient. Individual credentials are not necessary. Send all credentials to the Church Secretary.

Branches not in organized districts are entitled to one vote and one delegate each, and districts may appoint as many delegates as they have votes, if they see proper to do so.

No delegate can cast over twenty votes.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINISTRY REPORTS.

The blank forms provided for have been sent to the ministry who are under General Conference appointment. If anyone in the United States or Canada fails to receive a blank, please write and another will be sent. In a few cases the addresses were not known, but to such they were sent in care of some one whom it was expected would deliver to the one intended for.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, February 6, 1896. 2t

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The missionary in charge, Bro. Alex. H. Smith, expects to be present at the conference of the Southern Nebraska district which will convene at Wilber, Saline County, Nebraska, February 23 and 24. The district Sunday school association will meet at the same place on the 22d. A cordial invitation extended.

J. W. WALDSMITH, Pres.

The conference of the Northern district of California will meet on February 28 and the two following days in Montana Hall, Seventh Street, Oakland. Take cars to Adeline Station. Don't forget the Sunday school convention. Be prepared with lesson for March 1.

M. A. SAXE, Sec.

Conference of the Independence district will convene at Holden, Missouri, March 7, at ten a. m. We hope that the branches will be represented, and that as many as can will be in attendance as there is some important business to be done. We desire reports from all branches, and elders, and priests of the district.

R. MAY, Pres.

ARTHUR ALLEN, Sec.

2210 Wabash Avenue, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI.

Conference of the Far West district will convene with the St. Joseph branch on March 14, ten a. m., in the Saints' chapel on Seventeenth Street near Faraon. Please let all the branches send in a full report. Bring the Spirit of the Master with you so that we may have an enjoyable time.

T. T. HINDERKS, Pres.

C. P. FAUL, Sec.

The Southern Missouri district conference will convene with the Burnham branch, on Friday, February 28, at ten a. m. All branch clerks in the district are requested to have reports made out as nearly correct as possible that we may avoid delay in forwarding our reports to the General Church Recorder, as this will be our last conference before General Conference. My permanent address now is changed to West Plains, Missouri, but any wishing to send reports by mail can direct to me at Pomona, Missouri, in care of Henry Brooner.

W. A. BROONER, Clerk.

BORN.

BROLLIAR.—At Lamoni, Iowa, July 18, 1895, to Bro. Daniel and Sr. Sarah C. Brolliar, a daughter, named Elva Irene. Blessed January 31, 1896, by Elder R. M. Elvin.

GAYLORD.—To Bro. William and Sr. Laura Gaylord, Tabor, Iowa, September 8, 1895, a daughter, and named Ruth Mirth. Blessed January 26, 1896, by Henry Kemp and Mose Gaylord.

DIED.

VAN DRAN.—Ora May Van Dran was born at Plano, Illinois, July 17, 1877, and died at Sandwich, Illinois, January 29, 1896, aged 18 years, 6 months, and 12 days. She united with the Latter Day Saints Church at the age of eleven, thus remembering her Creator in the days of her youth. A short time before her death she told her mother she had no fears for the future; she only dreaded the pain of death. On Saturday, February 1, her school class met at the house and a short funeral service was held in their interest, and she was taken to the chapel at Plano, where further services were held. We then laid her to rest beside her father in Plano cemetery. She was a good girl, one whom to know was to love. A kind Savior has taken her to the rest in the paradise of God to await the first resurrection. Services were by Elder W. Vickery.

NELSON.—At his home in Carlsbad, California, January 21, 1896, Bro. P. C. Nelson. He was born in Utah, September 20, 1864; married to Sr. Mary C. Jacobson, November 16, 1885. One daughter and two sons were born to them. Wife, three children, father, two sisters, three brothers, and a host of friends mourn. Bro. Nelson was baptized in early childhood, and his neighbors in his late home speak in the highest terms of him as a citizen, a neighbor, and a Christian. When coming down with his last sickness he seemed to know that the end was near, as he arranged all his business so as to make no trouble or expense for his wife, and asked her if she was prepared for the worst. During the early part of his last illness he was blessed with the Spirit of prophecy, also open vision, part of which he related to his attendants, saying he had been shown the great plan of creation, but he was not able to relate all that he evidently saw. He was a kind and loving husband and indulgent parent. The funeral was conducted by Elder N. VanFleet, assisted by Elder W. P. Pickering.

TEAL.—Bro. Edward Teal died at his home at Mission, Illinois, January 22, 1896, aged 75 years, 4 months, and 12 days. Deceased was born in Columbia County, New York; emigrated to La Salle County, Illinois, in 1849; was married to Miss Susan Piester, January 1, 1839; was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Thomas Hougas, November 6, 1890. He was well and favorably known by nearly every one for miles around, having held various offices in the township in which he lived, among them being the office of justice of the peace, which he filled for over thirty-five years. Funeral services conducted by Elder John B. Roush, at the Mission Latter Day Saints' church. An aged wife and five children mourn the loss of a kind husband and a loving father.

FLECK.—Gertie M. Fleck, November 13, 1895. She was born August 22, 1890, at Unionburg, Iowa. William Wallace Fleck died November 4, 1895; was born in 1892, at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Where, then, art thou?
With the Savior.
Blest forever, blest to be,
Mid the sinless little children
Who have heard his "Come to me."

CHAPMAN.—Judah Chapman, born in Wiltshire, England, October 8, 1843; died January 31, 1896, at his residence, Cass Township, Harrison County, Iowa. By a consistent life he had demonstrated his faith in Christ and his gospel, being a member of the Latter Day Saints Church for the past twenty-six years, until he was held in such esteem that it was said of him, "He had no enemies; all were his friends who knew him." He was buried from his home, and the vast concourse of people attending manifested the esteem in which he was held. He leaves a wife, three children, and a number of other relatives to mourn his departure. The sermon was by J. W. Wight from Revelation 14:13, assisted by W. Bullard and W. Smith.

BALLINGER.—William H. Ballinger was born October 9, 1834; died January 29, 1896. Deceased joined the Methodist Church October, 1878, but during the last year had expressed belief in the Latter Day Saints Church, and in his last sickness declared his intention to embrace the gospel, if spared. He leaves a wife (a member of the church), six children, two brothers, and two sisters to mourn their loss. Was a resident of Harrison County, Iowa, since 1864, and the large concourse at his funeral bore evidence of the esteem in which he was held. Sermon by J. W. Wight, assisted by S. B. Kibler.

WALLING.—At Glenwood, Iowa, January 17, 1896, Sr. Josephine Walling, wife of Bro. W. H. Walling. She was born November 24, 1867, at Gosport, Iowa; was baptized in 1892 at Thurman, Iowa, by Bro. J. B. Heide. She endeavored to live a consistent Christian life and was beloved by all who knew her, as was attested by the many who attended the funeral. She was preceded to that better land by three of her little ones. A husband and little child mourn the loss of this loved one. Funeral services conducted in the Christian church by Elder J. B. Heide.

MYERS.—At her home in Wilson, Michigan, Sr. Thesdocia Ann Myers. Born in Oxford, Ontario, November 28, 1848; baptized by Elder John McKenzie, at Wilksport, Ontario; died January 4, 1896. Husband, five sons, and four daughters mourn. She was fully resigned to the will of God. Funeral sermon preached in the schoolhouse by Elder Thomas Badder, assisted by E. C. Blackmore.

LIGHTOWLER.—At Stockton, California, October 1, 1895, Bro. Joseph Lightowler, aged 76 years, after an illness of three years and six months.

EUREKA REFRIGERATOR.

BEST IN USE.

Cold Storage of Meats and Fruits Secured by an Improved, Simple, and Scientific Arrangement.

The Eureka Refrigerator is the result of over seven years experimenting. The inventor, a practical butcher and handler of meats in stock, has succeeded in so combining economy and utility that ice is very slowly consumed and moisture prevented from collecting on the walls of the Refrigerator—Low temperature, and Dry atmosphere combined at a moderate cost.

Compared with other Cooling boxes the Eureka requires but little ice. The walls of the box are always dry, so thoroughly dry that a match can be lighted on them at any time. Meats and fruits can be kept sweet and sound for a long time.

This is secured by a new and scientific system of ventilation, by which moisture is carried off and food products kept cold and dry.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

BAPTISM OF POLYGAMOUS CONVERTS.

ONE of the delicate and troublesome question which arose before the last General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, North, related to a request received from the Synod of India asking the Assembly to leave the decision as to the admission or exclusion of any polygamist convert to the ultimate authority of the church courts in India, where alone, it was claimed, all the facts in each particular case could be known. The chief point was the contention of the members of the Synod of India that in some few and special cases polygamous converts ought to be received into the church without being required to abandon at once all but one of their wives and families. The enforcement of such a general rule, it was said, would sometimes result in bringing much necessary hardship and misery upon worthy people. The Synod did not ask, of course, for the liberty to sanction a polygamous marriage contracted after entrance into the church, nor to sanction such marriages contracted at any time except in a few special cases where the conditions seemed to justify such action. It was also agreed by the Synod of India that if polygamous converts were thus permitted to be received, they would be debarred from holding any office in the church. The request was strongly opposed in the General Assembly, and the result was that the request from India was refused. This refusal was based partly on the ground of the difficulty and danger of making such an amendment to the constitution and book of Discipline of the Presbyterian Church as would allow the General Assembly to grant the request of the Synod of India in legal form. Interest in this subject is revived by a long letter which Rev. S. H. Kellogg, D. D., author of "The Light of the World," writes to the Herald and Presbyterian from Landour, India, explaining and defending the action of the Synod of which he is a member. Among other things Dr. Kellogg says:—

"I should add that in asking the liberty of ultimate jurisdiction and decision in all such cases, the Synod of India would on no account be understood as expressing a judgment as to what the principles of New Testament law may require in other mission-fields. For the assumption that polygamy is one and the same thing everywhere is a grave mistake. From the testimony of former Allegheny students of mine, and many other friends, in various missionfields, I am convinced that polygamy, though always and everywhere an evil, and on no account to be perpetuated in the Christian Church, is morally considered a very different thing in different countries. In Africa, for instance I think that I for one should look on that horrible concubinage which is there miscalled marriage, as absolutely compelling the refusal of church membership till all but one was put away."

Referring to a previous article in the Herald and Presbyterian, criticizing the proposal of the Synod, Dr. Kellogg writes:—

"Even were it not improbable that thirty-six out of forty-three of your ministers and elders in India should have gone so grievously astray, and be entertaining so lax views concerning polygamy and the sanctity of monogamic marriage, as your article suggests, how about the women of the church? Surely, they, at least, are likely to be sound on the question of monogamy, and to have no fondness for polygamy, whether in Utah or in India. How, then, shall the fact be explained that when the thirty-six married and unmarried missionary ladies present in that meeting of Synod took a vote among themselves, to ascertain their position, as a body, in this matter, all but three—and of these, one only about two weeks in India—voted their agreement with the position of Synod as set forth in that memorial; namely, that in some cases it would be unjust and cruel, and therefore contrary to the Spirit of Christ, to insist that, as a condition of baptism, a polygamist applicant should banish all wives but one from his roof."

In an editorial reply following Dr. Kellogg's letter, the Herald and Presbyterian argues that under no circumstances or conditions would the admission of a polygamist into the Presbyterian Church be allowable or defensible. It says:—

"That only a few polygamists are seeking admission to the churches makes no difference in the principle. The church which receives even one, and allows him to live in polygamy, abandons its testimony against the sin of polygamy. If a thing is sinful, the difference between tolerating it 'as a universal rule' and tolerating it in special cases is simply one of extent. If polygamy is 'always and everywhere an evil, and on no account to be perpetuated in the Christian Church,' the difference between perpetuating it in India and in Africa or Utah is not great."

"In depicting the fate of women whose husbands abandon polygamy, Dr. Kellogg assumes that they will be left to suffer. We should say that any man refusing under such circumstances to provide for his wives lacks the evidence of conversion. The women must be cared for, and the convert who, cleaving to one wife, ceases his relations to others, is the person to care for them. If he has the spirit of the Gospel, he will do this. It is easy to describe the hardships which would follow the abandonment of polygamy by converts and their wives, but an equally strong appeal can be made in the case of other sins. Gamblers and saloon-keepers sometimes maintain their families in luxury. To give up their business may mean sacrifice and real suffering to their families, but this is no reason for receiving men into the church with the understanding that they are to continue their sin.

"There may be questions as to which is the true wife, and other questions which require wise handling, but no difficulty can justify the church in formally sanctioning polygamy by receiving and retaining polygamists as members. Yielding here, it must yield at every point where heathen customs and laws antagonize Christianity."—Literary Digest.

VALUE OF TRUE CULTURE.

DR. EDWARD CAIRD, the master of Baliol, in addressing a Glasgow audience recently on "The relation of culture to knowledge," said that the word culture had a certain air of arrogance and pretension, so that one could hardly make use of it without seeming to be a superior person; yet on the other hand, it expressed an idea for which no other word was quite so appropriate. People meant by it more than knowledge—more even than science and literature. They meant by it science and literature taken up into the mind and made one with it, so that they formed part of its very substance in addition to its natural forces.

No sooner did we provide the opportunities and means of education than we had to encounter the difficulty of so using them as not to overburden the mind. Every one who had had much experience as a teacher must often have met with cases in which the definition "overeducated for your intellect" would apply. The root of the evil, however, was seldom overeducation; indeed, it might be doubted whether there was such a thing. Overeducation meant education on the wrong things and on the wrong methods.

In considering what it was that constituted true culture it was necessary to avoid two opposite errors—the error of those who would separate culture from knowledge, and the more common error of those who would simply identify it with knowledge.

Speaking more particularly of culture and knowledge as the instrument to culture he said we could not now take the world at first hand. We inevitably saw it as interpreted by great bodies of literature and science, which had been the result of the thought of those who had gone before them. Therein lay our privilege and our danger—our privilege, because we had not now to cope with all the heavy task of making the universe intelligible, but took it up at an advanced stage; our danger, because that made it so easy to live a borrowed intellectual life. Unless knowledge had a life of original activity in us it did not deserve the name of culture.

Dr. Caird declared in conclusion that the ways were opened for a higher and more humane kind of culture in the twentieth century than the world had ever before seen.—Ex.

ABOUT TOBACCO.

THE school board of Santa Ana found that for some reason the boys in the public schools were nowhere nearly as proficient in their studies as the girls, and an investigation was instituted to discover the cause, whether the boys were being neglected by their teachers, or whether a lack of discipline was chargeable with the fact that the boys were not doing well. The investigation was had, and it was found that 90 per cent of the boys between the ages of twelve and fifteen years, who attended the public schools, smoke cigarettes. The investigation did not require to be pushed any further. It is sufficiently well known that cigarette-smoking blunts the intellect as well as undermines the constitution, and if 90 per cent of the Santa Ana boys stay with the habit 90 per cent of Santa Ana boys will be failures in life, and no help for it.—Palo, (Cal.) Mail.

From the records of the senior class of Yale College during the past eight years, the nonsmokers have proved to have decidedly gained over the smokers in height, weight, and lung capacity. All candidates for the crews and other atheletic sports were nonsmokers. The nonsmokers have gained 20 per cent in height more than the smokers, 25 per cent in weight, and 62 per cent more in lung capacity. In the graduating class of Amherst College of the present year, those not using tobacco have in weight gained 24 per cent over those using tobacco, in height 37 per cent, in chest girth 42 per cent, while they have a greater average lung capacity by 8.36 cubic inches.—Medical News.

EUGENE FIELD'S LAST STORY.

In 1884 Eugene Field wrote a story which he called "The Werewolf." When it was finished he laid it aside and a year afterward entirely rewrote it. In 1886 he again took it up and revised it, and during the nine years between that time and his death in November last, he rewrote it eight times. His last revision pleased him and he decided to print it. But death came too suddenly, and the story was found, unpublished, among his effects. Mrs. Field, concluding to have the story appear, gave it to the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, in which magazine all of Mr. Field's work, outside of his newspaper articles, was presented to the public. The story will be printed in the next issue of the Journal, strikingly illustrated by Mr. Howard Pyle.

LITERARY NOTES.

There is a small room in an upper floor of a busy mercantile house in St. Paul's Churchyard, London, that is closely connected with the history of the Young Men's Christian Association. More than fifty years ago the Association started with a band of twelve young men who had gathered for a meeting in this room. Two years ago, at the time of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Association, its founder, Sir George Williams, was knighted by Queen Victoria. Sir George has now written for the Sunday School Times a very interesting sketch of the origin and marvelous growth of the Young Men's Christian Association, which, beginning with twelve members, now numbers more than half a million. The article appears in the issue for February 8.

The Review of Reviews for February contains an article which, in the compass of two pages, makes perhaps the most telling and effective exposure of the recent Turkish massacres that has yet been attempted in the English language. The article is based upon full accounts of the massacres, written on the ground by trustworthy and intelligent persons—French, English, American, Turk, Kurd, and Armenian—who were eye-witnesses of the terrible scenes. The article estimates the number of killed in the massacres thus far at 50,000, the property destroyed at $40,000,000, and the number of starving survivors at 350,000.

It is computed that every year the earth receives about one hundred and forty six billions of shooting stars, which fall on its surface, slowly adding to its mass.

An error of a thousandth part of a second in an astronomical calculation would mean an error of 200,000,000,000 miles in the distance of a star.

Narragansett is a corruption of the Indian name Naigansett, "at the point."

PROGRESSING ORTHODOXY.

THE following report of a sermon delivered in Unity church, Los Angeles, California, was sent us by Bro. R. R. Dana, as clipped from the Los Angeles Times of January 27.

Progressing orthodoxy moves slowly, very slowly in some directions; so very slowly indeed that the end will undoubtedly come before the change is sufficient to place it in position to come to a unity of the faith in the bonds and terms of the gospel covenant. However, while we remember the statement that the new wine cannot be contained in the old bottles of popular theology, we accept with pleasure the indications of increasing light and freedom of thought wherever seen. We also remember that the spirit and preaching of the restored gospel is to be credited with the diffusion of the "greater light":—

UNITY.

A sermon on "Christ preaching the gospel in hell" was delivered by the pastor, J. S. Thomson, from the text, "The gospel [was] preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."—1 Peter 4: 6.

In the third and fourth chapters of First Peter, Christ is represented as preaching the gospel to the inhabitants of hades; and we learn from these two chapters, from Second Peter, and from other scripture, that Noah was a preacher of righteousness; that he preached morality and repentance to the people living before the flood, that they still sinned and refused to repent; that they were drowned in the flood; that they lived in hades nearly two thousand and four hundred years; that Christ, after his death, went in his spirit without his body to preach the gospel to the spirits therein; that he remained three days in hades, doing good. Christ came to our world to save the lost; and there is surely nothing in his life and gospel inconsistent with a mission into the infernal regions to teach and save souls. The reason that the antediluvians are mentioned especially as needing and receiving Christ's gospel in hell is that they were so wicked that heaven destroyed them utterly from the face of the earth. A race that deserved such destruction must have been exceedingly sinful. When Christ visited them in hades they had suffered for more than two thousand years. This shows that sin brings punishment, or suffering, with it here and hereafter.

Protestantism teaches that, when a man dies, his spirit jumps all intermediate stages and rises directly to heaven or sinks immediately into hell. Catholicism teaches that venial sins and the stains of forgiven mortal sins require to be washed out of the soul in purgatory before it is fit to enter heaven, and that a man dying without his deadly sins being forgiven goes straight to hell. Catholic and Protestant churches deny that a sinner will have a chance in the other world to reform his character and to rise to heaven, after working out his salvation in hell or purgatory; but Peter has taught that Christ gave another opportunity to the very wicked antediluvians, who had died without forgiveness.

If God will ever refuse to forgive and help a sinner at any time or in any place, here or hereafter, then he is infinitely inferior to the tender, and loving, and self-sacrificing Christ whose great love for mankind would not allow him to rest after his cruel death, but sent him into the infernal regions to save his human brothers and sisters. The Catholic and Protestant churches teach that the worst sinner may receive forgiveness for all his sins, and escape the consequences of his crimes; but the gospel teaches no such irrational and immoral doctrine. The trinitarian who believes that his crimes are forgiven and that he will not have to suffer for them, and the liberal who fancies there is no hell for crime, will in the next world have the experience of Dives, "who lifted up his eyes in hell."

A SEASONABLE WORD.

THE following sermon was preached by Rev. C. A. L. Richards, Rector of St. John's Chapel, Providence, Rhode Island, December 25, 1895, just past, clipped from the Providence Evening Bulletin for December 26, sent us by Bro. T. C. Whipple, of Providence. We give it place because it expresses vividly the contrast between the message of peace and the prospect and object of war; and condemns the national political folly that leads to war:—

Christmas Day was observed at St. John's church yesterday by a service of morning prayer at eleven o'clock, followed by a high celebration. The music was exceptionally good. The rector, the Rev. C. A. L. Richards, preached a vigorous and timely sermon on the familiar words, "On earth peace, good will toward men." He spoke as follows:—

That is the Christmas message. When was it ever so stinging a satire, such a reproach and rebuke as to-day? Rarely have Christian people entered upon this time of joy and gladness with a less festive and jubilant heart. Not in the darkest days of the Rebellion, and some of them were dark indeed, did your speaker find himself so near despairing of the republic as at the present hour. Not that he has for a moment anticipated war; that were too horrible a portent to conjecture—not that he is overmuch alarmed as to commercial disaster, for stocks may fall, and wages may fall and factories be closed, and the rich go bankrupt and the poor go hungry, and yet the conscience and the manhood and the character of the nation will rise to the emergency and stand upright through the storm. It is not the part of the Christian minister greatly to dread, timidly to forecast any evils that may happen to the body. But there are worse shames and evils that lovers of Christ and of their country, believers in the Gospel of the Incarnation and believers in free institutions, are compelled to recognize and dread. There are moments when Christians and patriots are pained and ashamed to the core. As I look to the appointed rulers of the nation I read, writ large, the old-time Hebrew warning, "Put not your trust in princes," and as I look about the land and hear the amazing plaudits of press and people, I complete the lesson, "Nor in any child of man," for there is no help in them.

This is the close of the nineteenth Christian century. For all those ages, year after year the clear note of the angels' song has been ringing, "Peace on earth, good will toward men." And upon this continent to-day stand two prominently Christian nations. In profession, and, I believe, in sober reality, England and America stand, as no other nations stand for Christ. We may misjudge them, we may partially regard the nation of which we are a part and the land from which our fathers came. But, from our point of view, at least, there are no two lands so leavened and permeated with Christian convictions and principles as these. If we can think that our Lord lives upon earth to-day, we have been wont to think that in these two peoples especially his presence may be discerned. We have borne to the heathen the gospel message, and now from the heathen might come back to us the rebuke, "Physician, heal thyself," "Followers of the Prince of Peace, follow the things that make for peace." To think that at this Christmas time we and our kinsmen across the seas have been standing on the alert for instant quarrel; ready to fly at one another's throats and set the world on fire!

Let England's responsibility for the shameful situation alone. This is not the place to weigh her fault or measure out her claim. Grant that she may have been arrogant; that her rulers have been curt of speech, lacking in diplomatic suavity, that she has been unduly peremptory to a sister republic, and having a giant's strength she has used it tyrannously. All that were a grave fault and will entail a grave penalty. They tell us, she has more to lose than we in case of war. Well, be it so. She will lose it then or incur the blame of the wise for risking it. But that is not our concern. Let her own teachers tell her that. History will take care to tell her that. We need not enforce the lesson. We have work enough at home, we have ourselves to look to.

And for ourselves, for the nation at large, it seems to me we might well chant misereres and intone litanies to-day, rather than utter glorias and jubilates. We might well strip these walls of emblems of festivity and hang them with sackcloth, and relieve the gray monotony with blotches or bloodred, and lurid flame and color. I know these seem extravagant words. I know that they express a transient mood, and that far down in all our hearts the deep causes for Christian joy and gladness lie undisturbed, fast anchored to a rock which cannot be removed. I remember that amid all the horrors of civil war, we still managed, as a Christmas time came round, to believe somehow in the angel's message; to be sure that sorrow endureth but for a night and that joy cometh in the morning; to be proud of the manhood that could die for a cause and look hopefully on to the liberty that war might win, the good will and peace that should have its foundations firm in righteousness. And so to-day I know that the angels' song rings out above all earthly clamor and wail; that its promise is but delayed; that through all temporary retrogressions, all relapses toward the barbarian and the wild beast, man still moves forward and the world makes progress. I thank God for the slowly returning sanity, the uplifting of the faces and the voices of lovers of peace and disciples of good will. I rejoice in the confidence that on both sides of the great sea the influence of the peacemakers will presently prevail. But none the less all good men must be pained and shamed for our land and its rulers to-day must ask what has the pulpit been about? what has the Church of Christ been about that it has little Christianized mankind, so little leavened the whole lump with the spirit of our Master.

Is it not a wholesome, a timely reminder, that what we have called our civilization is but skin deep; that religion has not yet rooted itself deep down in the soil of society; that the primeval instincts of the wild beast and the savage to raven for their prey still survive, and must be reckoned with and dealt with? Is it not a reminder that the Christian Church must not suspend her energies even for an hour, must not hold her hand as if the season of rest was come and the field was won and there remained no longer very much land to be possessed? Is it not a wholesome and needed reminder that we may tell of a God of love, and men may lightly hear and seem to welcome the lesson, and call one another friend, brother, kinsman, fellow-disciple—and then—do but touch their pride and rouse their temper and the boasted fraternity is forgotten? With hot haste they stir the old embers, they turn their ploughs into armor and their scythes into weapons and begin to learn war, like very heathen, once more.

Do not mistake the occasion of these words. I would not lay undue stress upon the message of our Chief Magistrate, though with it a national treasure, a great reputation has crumbled into the dust. I have not now for the first time to learn the fallibility of the wisdom of the wise, or how well-earned fames may be ruined in an hour. That a good man may go astray and a strong man suddenly falter is no new experience. The deplorable, the horrible thing, is the response all the land over, the levity with which graybeards confronted the thought of causeless quarrel and snatched at torch and brand, the fact that among men in office there was no brave voice to rebuke the sudden madness, the fact that even the barriers of party spirit broke down before the rush of the jingo spirit, and a whole people, through its press and its representatives, were ready to cry havoc and set loose the dogs of war. I think of the way in which men of law and peace have dared to talk of war as healthy discipline; as a needed tonic in these days of pacific prosperity; of the way in which the common conscience has been debauched—that there should have been no instant recoil from those braggart and unseemly words—but that from all round the horizon should have flashed messages of approval from those whose sensitive fingers feel the popular pulse, and that with a few most honorable exceptions the press, which they tell us is to supplant the pulpit in these enlightened days—the press clapped its hands and threw up its hat, and shrieked for carnage.

It is an unexpected and awful disclosure of national character, which may well turn our feast into mourning, and bring us to our knees with shame, and teach us to repeat the "Angels' Song," not with lightness of heart and exaltation, but as a stern lesson, quite above our present attainment; a lesson to be painfully learned and faithfully transmitted to our children, Peace! Good will!

Barbaric passion has been roused. Financial credit has been shaken. Recklessness of character has been revealed and developed in our public men. The illusion of a great name, that rose above party and dared confront the mob, has vanished, and very patriotism has become a mockery by the substitution of a cheap and blatant jingoism in its stead. Our flag hangs heavy in its folds and hides its stars. There is a blot on our scutcheon that long years will not efface.

Once more, I say, I would not exaggerate. There are hopeful signs of reaction, tokens of saving common sense, if of no nobler feeling, coming slowly to the front; reason to hope that some of the positive consequences of our folly may be averted; reason to feel sure that, whatever bad blood has been brewed, England and America have so far learned the gospel lesson that no actual conflict will come; that sober second thought will prevail; that the crash in Wall Street will suffice as a propitiatory sacrifice and act as a warning bell to ward off a bloody crash in battle. But while all that is true, it is also true that we have already come to grief, and have been greatly shamed. It is plain that our gospel lesson has not, so far, been learned as to become part of our being—an instinct for our conduct. It has not become a law in our members—a second nature in our lives. We have learned it, as a half-breed man learns courtesy, which controls his behavior when he has time to think, but loses its hold upon him in moments of excitement. We keep back the blow, but not the word of provocation. We refrain from the actual onslaught, but stand all aquiver with the thrill of rage, our muscles strained, our brows furrowed, our cheeks flushed, our eyes aflame. We are still half heathen. We can understand by personal experience something of the darkness before the day star began its shining. We look once more on the rock from which we were hewn, into the hole of the pit from which we were digged. We realize afresh how great was the mission of Jesus; how unnatural, unfamiliar to man was His message; how vast the work that His church has yet to do.

So, as humble disciples of the Prince of Peace, let us lift up our voices, hoarse though they be with tears, and echo what comes to us from the heaven to-day, as a stern and rebuking utterance. Let your troubled waves be still, "On earth peace; good will towards men." That is our lesson unlearned, and to be learned by heart.

If you and I have ever loved party above principle, cheap success above conscientious duty; if we have ever valued national wealth above national righteousness; if we have helped put unworthy men in places of responsibility; if we have cherished in ourselves a bastard honor, quick to resent injury; if we have carelessly wounded our neighbor's pride and provoked his enmity; if the gaudy trappings of war have allured us; if we have been dazzled with the crimson stain of blood; if we have loved the glory that wastes the poor man's savings, and thrives upon the widow's and the orphan's tears; if we have idolized the scourges of mankind as heroes; if we have forgotten the beatitudes and taken on our lips the anathemas; if we have asserted self instead of denying self, and found our pride in Lordship rather than service; if we have not been peacemakers and lovers of peace; if in our daily living we have not cultivated the love of our neighbors, the meekness, the courtesy, the graciousness of spirit which are its natural fruit, O, disciples of the lowly, loving Jesus, let us take shame to ourselves and begin now to take to heart the Gospel lesson. For out of the soil of private virtue public virtue springs. Our rulers come from the people, and the nation is such as the people choose to have it. The stream will not rise above its source, nor the politicians be more Christian than their constituents. We must begin at home if we would not be shamed abroad. We must wear the mantle of charity every day in private life, if we would have peace and good will shine as stars upon our national banner. We must teach our children, not only with our lips but in our lives, that there is always something nobler than the resenting of insult or the suspecting of insult; that there is a finer courage in patience than in explosion, in calm endurance of evil than in wrath and strife. We must hush their murmurings and soothe their injured pride by pointing to Bethlehem and Calvary. There was no room for Jesus, yet still he came, and was born to love us and give himself for us. And men nailed him to a cross, and yet he cried, "Father, forgive them!"

So that one joy remains to us, that the angels did sing, and that the star did shine and the dawn did break, and the Hope of the World did come. Over this chaos of human passion the spirit of love broods. With pity our Father beholds the petty strifes and quarrels of his children, and soothes and chides their childishness. Above the voice of the tempest rings Christ's voice, "Be still!" Above blare of trumpet and beat of drum and tramp of gathering armies is heard the King's command, "On earth, peace towards men; good will!" Let us love the brothers we have seen, and so learn to bear more patiently with the brothers whom we have not seen, though they be as peevish, as reckless and as childish as we ourselves.

TEMPLE LOT SUIT.

THE next issue of the HERALD will contain an important article from Bishop Kelley reviewing the late decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on the Temple Lot suit. Look out for it.

AN AEROLITE.

MADRID, February 10.—An immense aerolite exploded above this city at 9:30 a. m. to-day.

There was a vivid glare of light and a loud report, followed by a general panic. All the buildings were shaken and many windows were shattered.

According to the officials of the Madrid Observatory the explosion occurred twenty-six miles above the earth.

The force of the explosion was felt for several kilometres around this city and the concussion was so severe the partition wall of the United States Legation collapsed and nearly all the windows of that building were broken.

The sun was shining clearly at the time and the only thing visible in the sky was a white cloud bordered with red, which was traveling rapidly across the heavens, leaving behind it a train of fine, white dust.

When the explosion occurred the populace believed it was an earthquake or a sign of divine wrath.

Many injuries resulted from the panic which broke out amongst the people and from the frantic attempts made to escape from the factories and schools. Seventeen persons were injured in one tobacco factory by the collapse of a staircase when the inmates rushed upon it to escape from the building.

At the Palace it was at first feared a bomb had been exploded.

Much damage was done by the force of the concussion to walls and windows throughout the city.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. M. H. BOND, of St. Louis, reports the organization of a local branch Sons of Zion in the Missouri metropolis. He writes:—

Organized Sons of Zion on Monday evening. A marked success; the Spirit of God was present and we are likely to reach some young men through this "organization for good" whom the church hitherto has failed to reach.

Bro. F. G. Pitt by letter from Kewanee, Illinois:—

Our conference at Kewanee was well attended; a good interest manifested, and all passed pleasantly. Bro. G. Hilliard, M. T. Short, and James McKiernan were with us. Bro. John Chisnall was chosen president of district. I baptized three yesterday, including the young minister of whom you wrote me. I go from here to Peoria; to Plano next week. The work in the city is doing fairly well; some very nice people investigating. Our branch now numbers one hundred and nineteen. My son Fred has been called and ordained a priest. He is very earnest in the work. I thank God for this blessing.

Bro. J. C. Crabb wrote from Little Sioux, Iowa, February 7:—

Meetings at Moorehead, Ticonic, and two schoolhouses in that region were well attended. I started from Moorehead in company with Bro. Levi Wilson, and find him especially adapted to the work of opening up new places, and letting me follow up; after his preaching from one to two discourses. I begin at Smithland on Monday evening next, thence to near Kingsley, the 14th.

Bro. J. R. Sutton, Powersville, Iowa, February 10:—

Was called upon to administer to Sr. Miller, the ninth, after the doctor said she could not recover. She was almost instantaneously healed; to God be the praise. I leave for Grove Hill. Good interest here.

Bro. J. W. Wight is doing encouraging work in and about Woodbine, Iowa, he writes, February 12:—

We have just returned from the water, where H. O. Smith has acted as the Apollos for four; and from indications there are others yet. So mote it be. Nine since arrival here.

Bro. I. N. White, Independence, Missouri, February 13:—

Please find inclosed articles for Herald from Elder Sewell and self upon the finding of the twenty-four plates. I trust the subject is of sufficient importance to ask a place in the Herald for them. They also will go into the Firm Foundation—Christian paper—of Texas. Last week I held a debate with Elder J. H. Carter, eight miles east of Kingston. Meet him again on March 2, at Kingston, upon the two churches. The debate that I was to have commenced at Richmond, Missouri, on 11th inst., with Elder J. H. D. Tomson, is postponed to sometime in May, by request of Mr. Tomson. The work is moving finely. The more it is opposed the faster it goes. We have only to live the doctrine which we preach, and success crowns our every effort. Snow, mud, and bad roads are to be met with now throughout these parts.

Bro. White's and Elder Sewell's article will appear next week, space permitting.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Dispatch celebrated its half century jubilee, in its issue of Saturday, February 8; and in that issue the leading enterprises of the city and its leading men of secular and religious affairs are presented. Among them is Bro. Josiah Ells, of the Reorganized Church, whose picture (a very good one) is given, with a pointed and clear statement of the organization of the church in Pittsburg and the faith is presented from the pen of Bro. G. H. Hulmes. The world moves.

Bro. G. H. Hilliard, of the Bishopric, will be at Mission, Illinois, on Friday, the 21st inst.; at Plano and Sandwich over Sunday, the 23d. He will then attend district conference at East Delavan, Wisconsin, February 29 and March 1.

Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, Secretary of the General Sunday School Association, was at Lamoni over Sunday, the 9th, visiting friends and looking up matters of interest pertaining to his line of work.

Bro. E. B. Morgan, laboring in the Nodaway district, tarried a few days at Lamoni during the week of the 9th. He reports a growing friendliness among the people toward the work. "Godspeed" is often wished him by hearers of the word.

Brethren would find it to their advantage, also to the convenience of others, if in fixing times for conferences they would specify exact days and dates. The often chosen "first Saturday and Sunday before the full moon," a convenient season and chosen because a good time to travel the roads, is often lost sight of. When dates can be hunted up and given it is a decided and additional help to many who desire to attend.

Bro. O. B. Thomas reached Lamoni on Wednesday, the 12th, for a brief visit among relatives and friends.

One dollar is our price for each marriage notice. We more often receive the notice than the dollar, however.

President Blair hopes to attend the conferences at Guilford, Missouri, the 22d inst., Council Bluffs, or Dow City, the 28th inst., Shenandoah, March 7, St. Joseph, March 14, and St. Louis, March 21.

WANTED.—Copies of HERALD No. 7, volume 1—July, 1860. Address Editorial Department, Herald Office, Lamoni, Iowa, giving price.

Persons having copies of the Times and Seasons, Millennial Star, Messenger and Advocate, or other early church publications that they will donate to the church or sell will please address the Editorial Department, Herald Office, stating terms.

The St. Louis weekly Globe-Democrat of the 21st ult. has a lengthy article entitled, "The trial of Jesus." It purports to be a document giving an official account of said trial and to have been discovered in Sardis by two Italian explorers; also to have been engraved originally on plates of brass. We mention the article. Like many other reports it lacks confirmation.

The managers of the Cleveland, Ohio, Plain Dealer propose to make their paper the agent through which the news loving world shall learn of the doings of the coming April session of conference. Preparations are being made to make the story of interest. Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths has been the one with whom the Plain Dealer people have been consulting, and he is anxious that those of the Saints abroad who cannot attend conference will avail themselves of this opportunity to get early news from the session. Send in your orders to G. T. Griffiths, Temple, Lake County, Ohio; as see notice in HERALD.

Numerous letters left over. As many as we have space for will appear next week. The remainder will be summarized.

FROM THE MISSION FIELD.—NO. 5.

WHILE at Lake Port we were very kindly treated by Bro. and Sr. Fisher and family, and when Mr. Burton deemed it best to leave there, Bro. Fisher hired a nice outfit from the livery stable and took us to Potter's Valley, twenty-five miles. Sr. Fisher went, too, to make the drive as pleasant as possible, and all enjoyed the day. O, but there were some portions of the road we enjoyed leaving behind us better than being with them. Such narrow grades along the sides of such steep, bluff mountains, with miles and miles of lake lying at the base,—Little Lake, Clear Lake, and Blue Lake. A look off the grade would make the shivers creep up my back. Seven teams met on the summit of one of these mountain grades, four going up—ourselves the last—and three coming down. It took an hour to work past each other. The whole distance was through canyons and over grades. The latter part of the way was quite gloomy looking. The fog hung low and heavy, amounting almost to rain. Mountains high and dark, canyons narrow with rough, rocky roads, until Potter's Valley opened out to view. What a feeling of relief it brought! I had begun to think that whole upper country was mountains and canyons.

The next morning when we viewed the valley as it lay bathed in sunshine, canopied with the deep blue, cloudless sky, and teeming everywhere with the clear, crisp, autumn air, we both thought it a very beautiful valley. We remained in the valley at Sr. McGee's one week, Joseph holding meetings during that time in the town of Centerville, the First-Day Advent friends kindly allowing us the use of their neat little hall. None were baptized there, but one was converted, the Scriptures were expounded, and gospel truths clearly and forcibly set forth. Surely there will be a reaping time there, for the Lord has said his word should not return to him void.

Mr. Burton had given his word of promise to Sr. Brown, of Glen Blair, Mendocino

County, that he would visit that place during the fall months, or as soon as he could make his way up there. And now October was waning and we had to hasten on or we would be overtaken in those mountains by the winter rainstorms. Thus far the trip had been novel and fraught with interest, and I had a great desire to go over the whole route to the coast, but stage traveling was too expensive for me to undertake. If Mr. Burton had to go that way I concluded to remain in Potter's Valley till he returned, so was much pleased when Sr. McGee offered her horse and buggy. It did seem as if the Lord was with us on all that trip preparing the way before us. We felt very happy and grateful that white, frosty morning when, warmly tucked in a covered buggy, we started off on our trip over the Coast Range of mountains. Got to Ukiah at about eleven o'clock and remained there at Bro. Heger's till next morning. We were very kindly received by Bro. and Sr. Heger and family, formerly of San Francisco. It was one of those visits that make one feel comfortable for days afterwards.

Tuesday morning we were off bright and early, for there were plenty of long hills between us and the halfway house, and our steed was not swift, but trusty; nor was there any habitation between Ukiah and the halfway house. We had learned during the evening at Bro. Heger's that we had nothing but grade to expect all the day long, and we entered at once upon it. All the forenoon we toiled up big, bald hills; thought at the time they were mountains, till those in the afternoon "laid them in the shade" in reality. About noon we "beat" up to the top of a very high one. The road lay against its shrubless side like a great serpent in the form of a double S, so we had to tack ship six times. The view from the top of this great hill was simply grand! One looked down upon hill after hill, like so many flights of stairs, then came the great stretch-away-view of the valley in the distance. This was the backward view, and the last glimpse of the country we got. From the top of this bold peak commenced the chain of Redwood Mountains, and we were soon in the shady forest, which at first was very welcome, for the sun beat down hot against those bald hillsides. But as we went on and up, the forest became more dense and a feeling of weird solitude crept over us in spite of our outspoken admiration of the stately redwoods that towered so far above our heads in such majestic straightness. While eating our lunch in this deep forest—we were then on a mountain ridge where there was room enough to turn aside from the road—we heard a crackling in the underbrush, and two deer went bounding past at a little distance from us. During the day we got down on the ground three times; that is, passed through as many mountain gaps where there was enough smooth ground on either side of the road to turn around if one wished to. How safe a person feels when there is level ground each side of him. But we got used to scarry grades before our trip was ended. The road, though, was very good and free from ruts.

There were lots of places where there was plenty of room for teams to pass, and lots where there were not; but so much of the way was so winding that the road could not be seen more than a rod ahead, and I was in constant fear of a collision. We met and passed several teams and nearly always we were on the outside of the grade and there was no room to spare. Sometimes we wound around on mountain ridges looking down on the tops of the trees that were on mountains beneath us and up to the base of those that still towered above us. How thick they grew! And where they had been fallen, what a tangled mass of logs and stumps. We thought we had reached the summit about noon, but kept being disappointed all the afternoon by long stretches of uphill after a little of down. We also felt the effect of the atmosphere at such an altitude. Our lungs seemed to eject the air they had, and was loath about taking new supplies. At sundown we reached the halfway house, and was informed that it was the summit house as well, so the next day we had more of down grade, but not all.

We got to Mendocino at noon. Mendocino is a seaport town. From it we had an expansive view of the restless old ocean, and also felt the discomfort of its cold breath. Fort Bragg was eleven miles farther up the coast. We had thought that Glen Blair was only two miles beyond Fort Bragg, but when we reached the latter place learned that it was seven or eight, and over a very bad mountain road. It was then four o'clock and a gloomy fog hovering over the land, so we decided not to try to go farther. There was only one family of Latter Day Saints in the town, but we found them, and staid with them all night. It was well we did not undertake to go in that night, for those seven miles extended over the roughest part of the country on the route; some of the hills so steep I was afraid of pitching over the horse, and just quietly betook myself to my own understanding. The horse set back in the breeching and slid down, stepping his forefeet only. In another place we had to go along on the railtrack with one wheel outside the track, bump, bumping along on the sleepers, at the risk of meeting or being overtaken by the lumber car. A little farther along the brush and logs on each side of the grade were all on fire almost to the wheel track. But our trusty steed went quietly past it, and we ourselves were glad to get a cool breath again.

Glen Blair is in one respect like North Forster used to be; that is, there is one large mill, and the town is composed of those who, with their families, work in and about the mill. Our stay at Glen Blair—or rather, Little Valley, where Bro. and Sr. Brown live—was very pleasant in some respects, but there was not the interest manifested in the meetings that we expected, and we half wondered why we had gone so far, and for what purpose the way had been so manifestly opened for us to get there. The good seed that was sown may have found lodgment somewhere, and time may reveal the fruits. I have spoken elsewhere of the baptism of Donald Brown and the beautiful little nook to which we repaired for the ordinance. We could fancy what the beauty of the whole valley might be when the hills are green, and the days bright and sunny. There were very few of the latter while we were there. The heavy mantle of fog, which indicates the near approach of the rainy season, hung low upon the treetops nearly all the days, apparently warning us to retrace our steps while we could. Some rain had already fallen, but the day we left was clear and fine, all too fine to last.

We concluded to return by way of Sherwood Valley: were told that there was only one hill to go over, then it was all down grade to Ukiah. It was a hill indeed, much of it so steep that it seemed as much as the horse could do to pull the empty buggy up. We both walked and walked. I think I got out and in the buggy more than twenty times during the day. We did not get to the top of that "one hill" till near sundown, then about a half hour of down hill brought us to Mr. Sherwood's, the "putting up place" for night. Not a living being nor a habitation did we see all day. Both ourselves and our trusty horse were glad enough to get to a resting place. O my! how tired I was! Too thoroughly exhausted to speak. The kind lady of the house saw how fatigued we were, and purposely made a good soft bed for us, and by morning much of the weariness had vanished away.

And our bright day had vanished also, and was succeeded by a rainy one. But we had to move on, so we drove all the forenoon in the rain, and that beating in our face. At noon we began to feel very wet and cold, and to look at the houses as we passed to see one that we thought we would venture to go in and ask to be allowed to dry and warm ourselves while we ate our lunch. Presently we saw one that did not look especially inviting other than it had a very large chimney, which bespoke a broad fireplace.

"That's the one," I said; "we will be welcome there." But the house was quite a distance from the road up on a hill. Just then the old gentleman came out of the barn and crossed the road in front of us to water his horse, which gave an opportunity to ask permission to stop, which permission was readily granted. While we dried our wraps and robe the rain ceased and the sun shone out again for the rest of the afternoon. All that day we had a splendid road through a beautiful valley and a gradual descent. It would have been a most beautiful drive had the day been pleasant. Late in the afternoon we reached Calpella and halted in front of Bro. E. H. Gurley's store. He recognized us at sight, and with a cordial welcome took us at once to his house where we were treated most kindly by both himself and wife. The evening was spent in earnest but kindly conversation by the two elders.

We reached Potter Valley on the day following, feeling glad indeed to know that those lonely roads and steep mountain grades were all behind us; and since the rest of our homeward bound journey would be made in the cars, it mattered not to us whether it rained or whether it did not.

So here I will close the account of our autumn trip. All are familiar with the train, and nothing came to our notice beyond the usual life of an itinerant. We spent Christmas in Sacramento—after being at El Dorado—and New Years at Oakland, and arrived at our home in Mount Olivet on the 17th of January. O the rest, the quiet, the comfort of home! But in two short weeks more we must leave it again and take up our line of march where duty calls.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR FEBRUARY.

Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and if he had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires toward God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul.—Moses 18: 9.

Thursday, Feb. 20.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—3 John 2-8.

Thursday, Feb. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 59: 19-21.

DEAR SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS:—We are so thankful for the contributions already received and are trusting for more. When we think of the many who are way up in the work we feel like asking you to give to us who have had so little experience and yet are willing and anxious to learn all we can.

Won't you tell us how your schools are doing? Have you a blackboard? What are some of the things you do with it? How do you learn memory texts? Do you all have blank books? What do you do with them? How do you conduct reviews?

Do you keep class records? What means do you employ to increase attendance? There are so many things we want to know; and who will answer first? Can't we write a few lines upon one topic, so that we can hear from many in the same issue?

"I find the great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are tending."—O. W. Holmes.

"I don't believe that all the statesmen you have in existence, I don't believe that all the efforts [they?] have ever made, have tended so much to the greatness and the true happiness, and to the security and true glory of this country (Scotland) as have the efforts of your Sunday school teachers."—John Bright.

"Precept freezes, while example warms. Precept addresses us, example lays hold on us. Precept is a marble statue, example glows with life—a thing of flesh and blood."—W. E. Gladstone.

We publish, without permission, the following extracts from a letter recently received from Sr. Ann Corless, of Coldwater. They show the spirit of the work and the worker in places where a winter Sunday school cannot be maintained:—

"I thought, when we parted, that I would fulfill my promise but we have had only one Sunday school since conference, I think, so I had nothing as I thought of interest to write. I have been teaching a few scholars at our house, with Sr. Willard's help. There are from four to ten who attend. We commenced at the first of Genesis and learned about the creation and our first parents; how man was banished from the presence of God through disobedience, the earth cursed for his sake, and death passed upon all; why we had to die and return to dust again. What has that to do with us in our day? Why this, 'As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.'—1 Cor. 15: 22 God's dealings with men in the days of Noah, his family being saved through obedience. Has that anything to do with us in our day? Then we read Matthew 24 of the signs preceding Christ's coming and that it shall be as it was in the days of Noah. Seeing those signs we must be living in that day; hence the necessity of learning how it was in Noah's day. It is something new to the children to learn how these things come to be and why they are so. We all enjoy it very much."

A SIMPLE DEVICE FOR PUNCTUALITY.

IN the Protestant Episcopal "chapel by the Sea," at Virginia Beach, Virginia, the rector and superintendent, the Rev. W. R. Savage, has recently used a familiar device with renewed effectiveness. Some of the scholars falling into irregular habits as to punctuality in attending Sunday school, the superintendent prepared a large card, ten or twelve inches square, printed on front and back as follows:—

I AM EARLY

I AM LATE.

This card was hung in front of the lectern, "I am early" being toward the school. After the opening time had passed, the card was reversed, and "I am late" stared the tardy teacher or scholar in the face. There was a marked improvement in punctuality very soon after this scheme was adopted.—Sunday School Times.

CONTINUOUS STUDY.

DO YOU know the Scripture better than you did a year ago? You ought to. Have you more places in the Bible to which you go as the bird goes to her retreat? You ought to. Are there more precious spots in the Bible than there were once? There ought to be. Suppose some one had intrusted me with a great matter, and had given me written instructions as to how to conduct it; and suppose that when I felt like it I went and read a sentence, and then, after a week, half a dozen sentences; I should have only the most fragmentary knowledge of the instructions. But how many Christians treat the Bible thus!—Wayland Hoyt, D. D.

THE OLD HYMN.

A BOY in Scotland learned to sing the old psalms that were as household words in the kirk and by the fireside. When he grew up he wandered away from his native country, and was taken captive by the Turks and made a slave in one of the Barbary States. Eighteen long years were passed in slavery in a strange land and among heathen people. But the captive never forgot the hymns he had sung in his old home, and often he would sit and sing over the words he had learned from his pious mother.

One evening some sailors on board an English man-of-war were surprised to hear the familiar tune of "Old Hundred" come floating to them over the moonlit waves. At once they suspected that one of their countrymen was pining away in bondage. Quickly arming themselves they manned a boat, and pushed off to the shore. They found the captive and succeeded in getting back with him to their vessel without creating an alarm. The old hymn was the means of his restoration to home and friends.—Ex.

WATERLOO, Neb., Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—I closed services at Fremont with increasing interest and came to the Platte Valley branch near Waterloo, on Friday, the 31st ult. to attend the district Sunday school convention and the quarterly conference of the Northern Nebraska district.

On Friday the convention assembled and reelected your writer as superintendent, elected Bro. H. W. Bellville, assistant, reelected Sr. Della M. Owens, secretary, and elected Bro. A. L. Lightfoot, treasurer; and selected Brn. F. A. Smith, G. M. L. Whitman, and the writer delegates to the General Convention. The association is composed of five schools, and a brighter prospect than ever exists. The sessions of conference passed off without a jar, and a very profitable session was held. Bro. A. H. Smith added to the pleasure and profitableness of the sessions.

At the close of the evening session on Saturday, the 1st, a request was presented for some of the elders to come and pray for a young man named Hugh M. Gillaspey, who was possessed by some power that rendered it necessary for him to be bound hand and foot, and then to be held by six strong men. The family are not believers in the gospel, excepting one sister, Sr. Arch Brown; but on the contrary have been much prejudiced against the church. Bro. A. H. Smith decided that the writer with others should go and comply with the request. In accordance therewith Brn. G. M. L. Whitman, Nelson Brown, and James Huff went with me. While on our way we could hear the man screaming for many rods before we reached the house, some saying they could hear him nearly a quarter of a mile. When we entered he was bound hand and foot and six men around him to hold him to the floor that he might not hurt himself or others, and perfect confusion reigned. Shortly after we had entered the house and secret prayer had been offered he became slightly quieter, his bands were removed and I administered to him some oil; but the power that possessed him seemed averse to this and he did considerable spitting. After a few moments he became so we could lay our hands upon his head and as we began to pray he became relieved of the evil spirit that had possessed him, and within ten minutes he went to bed and slept, and on the following day attended services at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m., and came several times during the week, and on yesterday gave himself to the Lord by baptism. This makes three that have been baptized here within a week; two on last Monday and this one yesterday—all adults.

I continued preaching at the schoolhouse each night last week except Saturday night, when I occupied a hall in Waterloo and preached to an audience of about forty. After the Saturday evening service a gentleman who believes in keeping Saturday as a rest day came forward and commended the sermon, but began to make inquiry about our views of the Sabbath, which resulted in about a half hour's talk and in the hall being offered free if I will speak upon the Sabbath question, which I will do to-night.

The Sunday school has been reorganized here and on yesterday a very interesting session was held, the secretary of the district association rendering assistance in the primary work, and with patience and diligence a good work will be done; and I look to see several of the little hopes of Zion enter into the fold and become instructed in righteousness and fitted for a higher sphere of usefulness through this Sunday school. I go to Fremont to-morrow to continue the work begun there week before last, expecting to continue nearly two weeks, as has been thought to be advisable under the present circumstances. Much interest is being shown wherever I have labored in this district of late, and hope it is of a lasting character.

Some experiences through which I have passed of late have increased my faith in God, and my love for him, and taught me that God will care for his missionaries and the work they are seeking to do for the cause, no matter what influence may be used against them, whether in the church or without; and I am led to praise him day and night for his kindnesses in hearing and answering prayer. I know that prayers in secret are answered openly as promised by the Lord to his disciples.

I pray that God may redeem Zion speedily, and control the powers that be favorably to the recovery of the place appointed for the location of the central stake of Zion, and give patience to his people to do their duty unwaveringly, and they will see the salvation of God.

J. F. MINTUN.

NORCATUR, Kan., Feb. 13.

Editors Herald:—I came here January 20 and held meetings at Oronoque with full houses and good interest, delivering eleven discourses. From here I went over to Kanona, twenty miles west, and found the Methodists engaged in a protracted effort. I got an opening three miles east, at Bro. Oscar Hudson's schoolhouse, February 1; holding over two Sabbaths with a good congregation and interest increasing. I closed on Sabbath evening, the 9th.

While here I organized a branch to be known as Norcatur, ordaining Bro. S. D. Young priest, and F. F. Long to the office of teacher. I look for an ingathering in the near future.

I came on Monday the 10th to this place five miles east of the village of Norcatur. Some are very near the kingdom; whether they obey now, they will soon. Such an awakening of religious enthusiasm never has been known in this country as is experienced this winter. Everybody is combined in one grand crusade against the Mormon, and they say that God is coming down to dwell with his people and that they must be united so as to be ready to meet him; and that they are resurrecting the dry bones of Ezekiel 37. One reverend became so enthusiastic about the matter that he told the sinners that they were the bones and that he had come there and had resurrected them, and breathed upon them the breath of life, and they were living souls. And how it made them rejoice! They made such a noise over it that it put the coyotes to shame, and it is said they have all disappeared. But, thank God, there are a few persons left who can rejoice in a living God, a living Christ, with living apostles, prophets, pastors, helps, and governments, and a living church with Christ its author and founder. By virtue of that all power given unto him in heaven and in earth; hence the church is a divine institution with all its powers and blessings, Christ standing at the head of the church as its Chief Shepherd, Bishop, Apostle, and High Priest over all that bears his name in heaven and in earth. May God bless his church and his Saints that they may rejoice in his kingdom and coming.

ALMA KENT.

WARREN, Ohio, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—Time is moving swiftly; four years will usher in the new century, A. D. 1900, and but a few more years will pass, according to the signs of the times and the Savior's promises, until the era of sin will close and the grand consummation so earnestly sought for ages past become a reality, when the archenemy shall be bound, and the grandest government this earth ever witnessed shall commence its rule, and peace and joy shall cover it "from the rivers to the ends of the earth." The conflict grows sharper, but the Lord has said, "My grace is sufficient."

After returning from General Conference and placing my affairs in as favorable condition as I could, I started May 17 for Crenshaw, Jefferson County, Pennsylvania, at the request of Bro. W. H. Kelley. Arriving, I was soon comfortably cared for under Bro. and Sr. Henry Winship's roof and was made to feel at home in a very earnest and hearty manner. Commenced services the same night in what was originally dedicated a "union" (?) church, being erected by a benevolent individual at his own expense; but, as is usual in such cases, the good brethren—Presbyterians, Methodists, Lutherans, and Swedes—captured it, got a charter in the names of these respective congregations, and lo! the union consisted in "us four and no more." Well, we started with fair audience and good attention; likewise the following morning—Sunday. In the afternoon the Methodist pastor preached and invited me to open his meeting. At the conclusion of his service there were two candidates to be received into full fellowship by baptism; but only one, a fine appearing young man, presented himself. The pastor read the discipline, secured his assent to its requirements, and then instructing him to kneel, sprinkled some water on his head with the words, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." Some ladies seemed to be much affected by the solemnity of the ceremony, which led the minister to say that he always tried to make it as impressive as he could. At the close he prayed that good might be accomplished in the services to be held there during the week.

At 7:30 I had a full house, probably nearly four hundred, and with excellent liberty and unction the mode of baptism was presented. Monday night was occupied by the Presbyterians, and on Tuesday night by the writer, and an announcement made for "the laying on of hands" for Thursday. Wednesday night was occupied in the regular prayer service, and at that meeting it was decided they did not want any more of "that kind" of doctrine, and that the subject announced should not be preached in that church.

The brethren secured a hall which was kindly allowed us free of charge, except one small collection handed the owner. Seventeen sermons were delivered, two excellent young men baptized (fruits of Bro. and Sr. Winship's labors), three administrations performed, and one child blessed.

Bro. and Sr. Winship are noble-hearted Saints, and their family of boys, all in the fold except one, evidenced quite a good interest in the meetings. Books were purchased and a class formed for the study of the things of the kingdom. Bro. H. H. Robinson is greatly esteemed for his work in times past at St. Marys, near Crenshaw.

June 9 was spent in Cleveland, Ohio. Preached there twice; Akron, June 16; Blakes Mills, 23d; and Wheeling the 30th; preaching at each place. At the latter place remained over July 7, and baptized Sr. Tamar Bickerton. The 14th was occupied at Glen Easton, West Virginia, in company with Brn. A. H. Mills and F. J. Ebeling, whom I had joined at Wheeling on the 7th. Services were held each evening of our stay; good audiences, excellent attention, and good liberty characterized the meetings, especially in one service at district school No. 10; house crowded and about as many outside. An hour and a half's effort left them something to think over. Brn. Mills and Ebeling had good liberty in their efforts and were well received; but if preaching could save a people that whole country should have been saved long ago. Brn. Ells, Brown, Wagner, Craig, Deuel, Robinson, Duncan, Bond, Powell, and I don't know how many other great preachers, have from time to time stormed the ramparts, until it seems all that will come have obeyed, though there may yet be others. We were kindly cared for by Bro. and Sr. Joseph Wayt, loyal, staunch defenders of the faith. A pleasant abiding place truly.

Returning to Wheeling, Bro. Mills was called to Pittsburg on the Hymnal committee work, while the writer occupied in Wheeling and at Georgetown, Ohio, July 21, baptizing three adults at the latter point. The following week an opening was effected in a church belonging to the "Church of God" people, at Sherrard, West Virginia, and on July 28 Bro. Ebeling and self firmly grasped our satchels and cheerfully took up our journey of five miles for that point. We opened the church and the congregation came, but at the close they all as promptly left, and it began to look as if it might be well to fast that day; but when we reached the door two gentlemen, members of the Disciple faith, invited us to dinner. We again occupied at the evening hour, and as no one offered us a lodging we took up our satchels and walked back where we could find a home. We had announced meetings to continue during the week, so we walked it back and forth each evening, Bro. Ullom, president of the Wheeling branch bravely accompanying us; occasionally Brn. Serig and Joseph Ebeling, and others kept us company, which was much appreciated. Apparently there was little faith among that people, a repelling influence being felt in presenting the word. We thought best therefore to discontinue the effort at the close of the week.

Was at Wheeling, August 4; and at Pittsburg on the 11th, where, at the request of the president, Bro. G. H. Hulmes, I baptized Bro. Joseph Maxon, who in his time had baptized some two hundred into the Bickertonite faith, but accidentally he secured a copy of the Book of Covenants and Commandments and became acquainted with the rule of succession in Christ's Church, resulting in his accepting the true faith and enlisting his efforts to spread it among his former converts.

Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania, was the next point, where on the 14th I had the pleasure of uniting in marriage, Beulah, eldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. Murray, to Mr. James Simpson. I preached once to a room full of apparently interested listeners. Bro. and Sr. Murray, Bro. Frank May, and an aged sister whose name I cannot now recall, are all that are left at that place, of what was once the Beaver Falls branch; some moved away, others dead.

At Pittsburg again over the following Sunday, 18th, and at Kirtland the 25th, September 1, and 8, occupying twice each Sunday in the temple. On the 14th at Blake's Mills, preached the funeral sermon of Sr. Robert Robson, a good Saint truly. Her end was peace.

October was passed at Pittsburg and Wheeling; good spiritual branches at both points. Was privileged to baptize three adults at the former place during conference October 6.

At Fairpoint, Ohio, a new place, the first part of November. Preached eight sermons, but was handicapped by political meetings. Think good was done. Bro. and Sr. J. W. Martin entertained me comfortably, and also a Mr. and Mrs. Bosworth. This lady's brother and wife are members of this church, residing at Lamoni. She is very near the kingdom. Herself and husband are members of the "Church of God." Also met Bro. Alanson Martin, a former Disciple minister and long-time school-teacher. My sojourn was pleasant.

Wheeling, Hunter, and Moundsville, all contiguous to Wheeling, occupied the balance of November and December until the holidays, which were spent with my family. January until the 21st was at Blake's Mills in company with Brn. Griffiths, Etzenhouser, Edwards, and Ullom. Bro. Griffiths left for Wheeling about the 8th, and the three latter were called the week of the 12th to sit as a court. Wise and effective service was rendered by these brethren, and in the Saints' meeting of the 19th have seldom witnessed such an outpouring of the Spirit as was felt at that time. All were greatly renewed and encouraged. Leaving Brn. Etzenhouser and Ullom there the writer returned home to attend to some business, and preached in Cleveland, assisted by Bro. Edwards, the 26th. Much credit is due Brn. Gillespie, Miller, Burget, Smith, and the sisters there for continuing efforts under discouraging circumstances. Brn. Bond, Kelley, Griffiths, Parrish, Etzenhouser, and others have aided effectively until there seems quite an encouraging interest aroused.

Am working towards Pittsburg for conference February 29. Expect to reach Washingtonville, Youngstown, and Sharon, on the way. There are but few left here. Bro. Wilson J. Shafer, Sr. Welsh, Sr. Ward, Sr. Winegle, and Sr. Jones are maintaining their integrity, and keep the banner floating. They are so scattered that few meetings are held.

I did not intend to "write a book" when I started, but not having written since General Conference, had more than I anticipated. The new Hymnal is received with general favor. Many commendatory expressions are heard. Am pleased to see the first edition is exhausted and hope the second will soon share the same fate.

Am encouraged in the work and thankful for continued favors. May the Lord of the harvest give his laborers success.

Faithfully,

W. H. GARRETT.

JASPER, Minn., Feb. 9.

Editors Herald.—I have noticed from time to time in the church papers and heard it preached by the elders of the church that the ministry were always ready for friendly discussion; but in hearing some of them speak and in reading accounts of debates it has occurred to me that sometimes the bond of friendship has been in question.

The Saints everywhere resent the name of "Mormons," and tell those who call them such that it is a vulgar word used willfully or otherwise by those no better informed. Still we read in nearly every church paper at the present day, the "Christian Church" referred to as the "Cambellites;" or as "Campbell and Co.;" the "Advent Church" as "Adventists," or "seventh-day people," and the other churches in like manner. We ask the world to desist calling us "Mormons," while we turn round, or some of us do, and are guilty of the same thing we are asking others to cease doing. Is it right? This gospel is a gospel of love, and we can, by friendly ways, do more to bring about an investigation of our claims than by antagonizing those who may seem willfully blind or are ready to slander us. I know this may seem hard at times, but Latter Day Saints are supposed to suffer hardships in this line the same as former-day saints.

While debating the elders score their opponents for not speaking respectfully of the Prophet Joseph, and at the same time refer to their opponents in ungentlemanly ways by calling them Taylor, Jones, or whatever the name may be; not giving them the title of Mr. or brother, and referring them to the fact that they will be seeking a warmer climate, etc., a polite (?) way of telling them they will go to hell. Is it right?

Were I an elder and had to withstand the vile, villainous vituperation that is heaped upon them in many places, I might think that just indignation was right at times; but let us all remember what Christ said in his sermon on the mount, soon after choosing his twelve apostles (Matt. 5: 10, 12), and let us "love our enemies," be respectful to every one and that which is dear to them; and if examining the creeds of other churches, do it in a spirit and way not to offend.

Yours in love,

ARTHUR ADAMS.

THURMAN, Iowa, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald.—The work is still onward in this district. I have just closed a week's meetings near Farragut. Bro. M. W. Gaylord was with me and rendered valuable service in opening and closing and fireside preaching. Much prejudice was removed and good interest manifest, with many requests to stay longer, and come again soon. Could not stay longer on account of other engagements. Have to return in the near future.

Was at Hamburg the week previous. Interest good and many requests to stay longer. O, if I could only spend all my time in the work how glad I would be! But circumstances will not permit; those dependent upon me must be cared for.

I spoke at the home church (Plum Creek) yesterday and enjoyed a good degree of the Spirit. The evening found Bro. Moore and the writer at McPaul. A crowded house awaited us. The United Brethren and Holiness people both tried to claim the appointment, but we held the fort and spoke for about one hour and gave a general outline of our position. The ministers all stayed to hear us. We rather expected to meet some opposition, so remained in the stand until all the congregation had gone. One or two of the preachers came and shook hands with us, but offered no objections. Will be at home this week; then expect to go out again for a week or ten days.

Hoping the day may soon come that those who desire to labor for the Master may be at liberty, I am,

In gospel bonds,

H. F. DURFEY.

WOODBINE, Iowa, Jan. 12.

Editors Herald.—Bro. J. W. Wight has been telling the merits of the gospel of Jesus Christ in this neighborhood (Six Mile Grove) these last two weeks in the Needmore school-house. Crowds attended the meetings and it was quite a sight to see the buggies, carts, wagons, and saddle horses hitched closely together the whole front of the school yard and the opposite side of the road, sometimes an hour before service commenced. The sermons have been good all the time, sometimes grand, on account of the presence of the Holy Spirit. One remarkable feature of some of the sermons was that the words though spoken rapidly, were distinct and forcible—like they had been cut out of solid matter—"wonderful words of life."

The first week questions were asked and arguments made which were considered by those who made them posers; but the answers given showed them to be weakness, causing joy and satisfaction to the Saints and honest ones. The opposition to the preaching has, as usual, been from the Campbellites who persistently deny present revelation and miraculous power.

Here is a remarkable instance of the power of God and the authority of his servants: One evening during the preaching, Bro. C. Downes, a man seventy-three years of age, who has been troubled the last three years with diabetes, rose to leave the house. Bro. Wight thinking he was leaving on account of the heat put his hand on him and told him to sit down. He sat down, and now he testifies that when Bro. Wight put his hand on him, he felt a warmth go through him and since then he has not been troubled with the disease. Two persons are to be baptized to-day as a part of the result of the meetings.

One more notable instance of the presence of the Spirit was whilst Bro. Wight was proving by the Scriptures and latter-day revelations that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, rapt looks, tearful eyes, both of enemies, friends, and Saints made the occasion remarkable.

The preacher has married three couple in this neighborhood. I believe he likes to do that business, for a considerable smile o'er-spreads his face when he is going to do it; whether it is the magic word "yes" or the after "turkey," he is the best judge.

Nothing I have written is to be understood as praising Bro. Wight. He does his duty, I believe, and he knows how to do it; but as a testimony to the truth and progress of the "latter-day glory."

SARGENT, Missouri, Feb. 4.

Editors Herald:—The Saints are not all sleeping in Southern Missouri; neither is Satan. Bro. W. C. Cather came here in November and preached awhile, and several seemed interested; then he went down to Burnham and West Plains and was gone some three or four weeks, when he and Bro. Sparling returned and commenced a series of meetings, Bro. Sparling preaching from his charts. Three Baptist preachers were in attendance part of the time, and the reverend gentlemen simply could not stand the chart business. They could plainly see that their little cob house was about to topple over and that if they didn't do something they might lose a few of their flock; so as soon as Bro. Sparling closed his meetings one of the reverends commenced lecturing against us and lectured four times.

I attended the last two nights and took notes. His lectures, it was plain to see, were for the purpose of prejudicing the minds of the people against the truth. He gathered up all the old trashy books he could get, which are familiar to the Saints. Such threadbare tales I suppose will always be used by the ignorant. The gentleman closed on Sunday night and Bro. Sparling commenced to answer on Monday night. The Baptist preachers attended, but did not bring the good Spirit; but they surely had a spirit that was not easy to be entreated, for they kept interrupting every little while. Bro. Sparling continued his answer all week and would have continued longer, but was called home on account of sickness in his family.

There was a good interest; the union church was full every night. As soon as our meeting closed they began a revival meeting and called on all that thought there was danger in Sargent to raise their hands. Of course all Baptist hands went up, for one of their members and her husband had asked me to write for Bro. Sparling to come and baptize them, and we received an answer that he would be here, and announced meeting for Saturday night and Sunday; and just before he closed the meeting Saturday night the old fellow boiled over and sent his agents to throw stones; but no one was hurt, only the window casing was marred enough for a testimony against the baser sort. We had preaching on Sunday, and baptizing, and a good confirmation meeting in the afternoon. Propositions are signed for debate, but no time set to commence. We think we can get them to agree to begin the 1st of March, but don't know yet.

CONIFER, Colo., Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—I left home in December to answer some special calls from the eastern part of Colorado. I visited one place called Fox, where I found some that were interested in the gospel. I went there in company with Bro. E. D. Bullard, of Wray, Colorado. I can truthfully say I was never treated better in my life, by outsiders, mostly belonging to the Christians or Disciples, they taking us in and caring well for us. Having appointments put out ahead, circumstances were such that we could not stay very long. We had a full house and the best of attention, with the good word, "Come back again, for we like to hear your preaching." So we left another appointment, which Bro. Bullard will fill shortly.

I also went to Wray, or near that place, where I found a brother Advent, G. O. Stales by name, who had been holding meetings for about three weeks. I had the opportunity of listening to one discourse, in which he stated that "the Sunday keepers were afraid to meet them on the seventh-day Sabbath." This being on the Adventist's Sabbath, and Bro. Bullard having an appointment for the following morning (Sunday), I essayed to fill said appointment, in the course of which I stated that we were not afraid to meet the Advent brother on the above question; and he being there remarked that he was willing to meet in a friendly discussion, which resulted in a four nights' debate on the question. The truth lost nothing, as the majority of the people said we "came out ahead," and remarked that "the Advent wasn't in it at all." We had a full house every night; standing room was at a discount and no slacking up. After that I held a series of meetings, commencing on Friday, keeping up over Sunday week, the people turning out well and seeming interested and pleased. I never saw a greater interest taken in meetings in all my travels, and I believe some will shortly unite with the church.

I left Bro. James W. Gillen there to carry on the meetings, and I believe much good will result from the efforts put forth there and thereabouts. I had hard work to break away from the people, but Bro. Gillen having arrived, and having a call at Buena Vista, I left him in charge of them and the work.

LUCAS, Iowa, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—On February 2 I closed a series of meetings near Milo, Warren County, which proved a grand success for the truth. None of this people ever heard the gospel before. At the close of the meeting I gave an opportunity for any who desired to follow Christ in the waters of baptism to make it known and they would be waited upon. Two gave in their names, and since that time two more added their names to the list. I think there will be a general ingathering, although I have had to meet opposition.

The Christian-Union preacher met me at the home of an unbeliever in the presence of quite a number, to whip me on baptism; but after an hour's discussion, this unbeliever (who was chosen as judge) said to the Rev. Charles Holensworth: "It's no use; I don't believe the Bible, but all the evidence in the Bible is against you, and you have got something now that you will never get rid of." And the preacher and his wife left laden with their books, and did not stop to even say good-bye. Thank the Lord for victory for the truth. May the good work roll on.

I am now holding meetings two miles west of Milo, with good congregations. Many of the interested ones are following me. Pray for me.

Yours in bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

BEVIER, Missouri, Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:—The Northeastern Missouri district conference passed off very nicely. Quite an amount of business was transacted which we think will result in good for the cause here. Bro. J. A. Tanner, president of district, is a young, vigorous, and rising man whose moral worth will be felt in the no distant future. The footprints of our loved brother, Bro. J. C. Foss, are ever visible. In every house we enter we greet Bro. Joseph hanging by the wall side, looking as pleasant as a summer's morn.

Our short visit in this district made so by overwork and circumstances over which we have had no control—have impressed us very favorably indeed. There are many noble-hearted, self-sacrificing Saints who would like to do more for the cause than they are now doing because of the fierce fight with poverty and hard times.

Of one thing I am impressed fully: that in this district there is a great need of labor; and there are plenty of opportunities and openings for a great revival of the work. The calls are from every side, but the laborers are few.

Last night by request of the young men's society of this city we spoke from Mark 16: 16—a question which had been discussed by them and not satisfactorily settled. After dismissal we were invited to meet them at their hall on Sunday afternoon and speak upon the same subject, with privilege of questions being asked by the society. We have willingly agreed to so meet; and so the evidences are upon every side that the world is ripe for the message we bear and the pews are forcing the pulpits, and ministers of the various faiths are compelled to answer and explain to their flocks that which smacks of this latter-day work—the light that was set upon a hill. May God speed the day when it shall cover the earth as the waters do the deep.

We feel that this district has been sadly neglected and that it should not be neglected any longer. It is a grand district to work in and no end of new fields to plow.

Yours in the faith,

T. W. CHATBURN.

GOLDEN, Mo., Feb. 11.

Editors Herald:—I wish to hear from the nearest branch to us, with a view of attaching our membership. Perhaps the branch at Seligman is the nearest. We are deeply interested in the work.

I was called upon the other day to conduct a funeral and do the talking. I went, trusting in the Lord. Was it right, I being only a teacher in the church? I considered it so. I desire the power of the gospel to increase upon me for the spread of truth. O, how I do pray God to let his Spirit rest upon those that stand at the head of his church, and his servants, for Christ's sake. Amen.

I. W. WOLSEY.

BARTLESVILLE, I. T., Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—Just arrived here through cold, mud, and snow to answer urgent call. (Permanent address, Vinita, Indian Territory.) I want Heralds, Hopes, helps, Quarterlies, Autumn Leaves, tracts, Ensigns, etc. How many of the many who testify how they love the work and wish they could do something for it remember my calls or the suggestion to the Saints of the Spring River district how they might supply this Cherokee Nation and save postage? The last Hope subscription was to a nonmember, a pretty Indian girl, and was obtained by some furnished me by an outsider who says, "It is the best Sunday school paper I ever saw; we all like it, the children often commit from it for day school." She will not let them be destroyed. I ordered my last week's Herald, given to one who gave her name for baptism just as I was leaving Big Cabin.

Please send to Bartlesville, Indian Territory, the three last Heralds including this week and any other church papers that could be sent here by return mail. God is raising kind friends to the cause, while the Devil is raising some bitter enemies.

The Saints of Angola may be gratified with a turnout May 22-26. Many including some who have given their names for baptism, talk of going to the conference and convention. They may look for some of the red men or young people. And I hope their modesty will not be shocked if the "colored preacher" who gave us a chance last fourth of August in common with other white ministers, in their "congress of religions," is on hand.

We do not know what the outcome will be here. Bro. D. is quite elated, however. I expect to go from here to Skitook where a call was made last summer.

Yours in haste,

A. C. HART.

ARBAUGH, Ohio, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—Mention was made some time ago through the Herald concerning the loss of church edifice at Vales' Mills, Ohio, by fire. I write to inform the Saints that quite a stride has been made towards erecting another house of worship. Something over three hundred dollars has been subscribed, and the material for the new church is all on the ground, with the exception of the seats or chairs. The foundation is laid, and the frame is almost ready to be raised. We have the sympathy of many of the outsiders, and many are helping what they can in the way of teaming and work. The Saints here are making a noble effort to replace their house of worship, and we hope that when completed it will not meet the same fate as the other.

We hope that our brethren throughout the Ohio district will feel moved to assist the Saints here in their present distress. It may be as bread cast upon the waters. Times are hard, money scarce, and the work of rebuilding is quite a burden.

By the consent of the missionary in charge I have been assisting the Saints in this movement until now. I expect now to take up my missionary labor, working toward Sand Run, Ohio, where our district conference convenes on the 22d of this month. We are not discouraged in the work notwithstanding all the reverses and misfortunes the Saints meet with. The cause is good, the work is of God, and will ultimately triumph over all.

Yours in the gospel,

H. E. MOLER.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 8.

Editors Herald:—The Los Angeles branch, so far as I am informed, is in the unity of the faith and enjoying in a fair degree the bond of the Spirit; but our light is largely obscured by not having a house of our own to worship in. It would require a sacrifice of no little magnitude by the members to purchase a suitable place and build a house of worship; but then, is this not a day of sacrifice? and will not the Master hold us responsible for the loss which may accrue to many of the people of this city in the judgment day if we fail to let our light shine, instead of placing it in a condition to give light "to those who sit in darkness" and in "the valley and shadow of death"? Very few strangers ever find their way up into the third story hall for which the branch is paying ten dollars per month, and have the use of it only Sunday morning and evening. The gospel message of the latter-day dispensation is intrusted to the Saints of this branch to be heralded forth to the people of this city and surrounding country; and no doubt the God of heaven will charge up to us every failure upon our part to let our lights shine, at least so far as it has been within our power and reach to do so.

This is now a city of nearly or quite one hundred thousand population, and a very small proportion of that number are aware of the existence of such a people as the Latter Day Saints in the city, and very largely so because we have no church edifice that people may see or hear about, and thereby advertise ourselves and the doctrines which we believe.

Our meetings are fairly well attended by our own members, but they are more or less stereotyped and void of most of the gifts of the Spirit, which the Lord has said should follow the believer. Sometimes the sick are healed or helped, and occasionally the gift of prophecy is manifest; but always as an admonition to be more faithful and energetic or we shall suffer loss. However, one came in at the door last Sunday and three others have given their names for baptism in the near future.

I acknowledge to having been more inactive in spiritual matters than I ought to have been, but by the grace of God I intend to be more active in the future. I pray for and rejoice in the advancement of gospel truth. I am one of the weak ones in active labors, but strong in the faith.

R. R. DANA.

BLLENHEIM, Ont., Feb. 7.

Editors Herald:—The Saints of our branch are all well as usual. Bro. Buck is so ill that he seldom gets out.

Bro. J. H. Lake, the president of the mission, is now in Chatham holding a series of meetings. We hope success may attend his labors. The work seems to be prospering fairly in some parts of our district, but there is not much stir here. The people seem very indifferent.

Bro. Samuel Brown has been laboring for some time at a place called Jericho. Bro. A. Leverton was there last Sunday and the fore part of last week. He reports having a fair congregation and good attention. He also found the Rev. Keffer there to poison the minds of the people against the Saints.

Your brother,

RICHARD COBURN.

A PLEA FOR UNITY.

TRIALS we will have in proportion to our faith, and the bitterest ones of all will be those from false brethren.—Saints' Herald, page 366, issue June 6, 1894.

No truer sentiments were ever uttered than what is embodied in the above. It is the bitterest water to drink, the disappointment the greatest. The pain from the wound is the most intense when it comes and is received in the house of one's friends. The Apostle Paul speaks of it as one of the greatest trials in his experience as "in perils among false brethren" (2 Cor. 11: 26); and if we carefully read the remainder of this epistle we shall find him treating in an impressive manner upon the weaknesses of himself and associates, entreating and exhorting them to come to a unity and to seek to bear with each others' infirmities; to "be of one mind," "to live in peace."

As long as we are human we must not look for unity of thought upon all questions at once, because it is not in the nature of things to be so. We cannot expect to see eye to eye, at least not until the time comes as has been predicted:—

Thy watchman shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion.—Isa. 52: 8.

We see then, that it is a condition to be attained; and we look forward to its realization, like every other promise, to be obtained by faithful effort and perseverance.

It is by expecting too much of others and too little of ourselves that much mischief has been wrought and injury done, which ought and could have been avoided providing the Spirit of the Master and a proper understanding of duties and obligations to each other had prevailed. This applies to the church as a body as well as to individuals; as, for instance, to illustrate:—

A measure may be presented either in council, branch business meeting, or conference—either district or general, the movers of which may honestly believe that if adopted it would work great good to the cause. Some one or more of the body before whom such measure is presented may peradventure not see it in the same light as the movers, and so may speak and vote against it, and it may be rejected. Now it is not the part of wisdom for the movers of the measure to take offense at those who may thus differ from them and who may have the courage to speak against that which they cannot conscientiously accept, especially when the argument is made against the measure itself (which invariably should be the rule) and not against the ones presenting it. And yet such is too often the case, and much hardness is engendered in consequence, and distrust is cast upon the ones who perchance may differ from us as to the means and methods to be employed to build up the work of God. As a result loss to the cause ensues, and division and strife obtain where love and fellowship should dwell. How much better it would be if we could "have [more] faith in God," and believing this to be God's work; that he, and he alone, is the director of his own work; and that if we are persevering in the right ourselves he will in time so work upon the hearts and minds of others who are equally interested in having the right prevail that the work will not be allowed to suffer by our patiently waiting. It is not wise to be too arbitrary in our views in these matters no more than it is wise to be too arbitrary in the preaching of the things connected with the gospel, even when we are satisfied that we are right.

Bro. Burton puts it in the right way when speaking of his conviction of the truth of the gospel—one principle at a time. We are willing to be convinced; so you may "produce your cause and bring forth your strong reasons;" but we "cannot bear all things [at once] now." Man is only permitted to testify of the truth, "God giveth the increase." Therefore to impugn the motives of others; to dissemble, to refuse to fellowship; to withdraw from the communion of the church; to cast suspicion upon anyone or in any way to neglect our privileges and duties, whether official or otherwise, because we cannot have our way of thinking to prevail, is wrong. It works injury to the cause and does "despite unto the Spirit of grace;" and if persisted in will bring confusion and loss to those who allow themselves to be so influenced.

Another great hindrance to our spiritual progress is found in neglecting to follow the instructions of Christ as found in Matthew 18: 15:—

Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

How simple a thing to do when we are willing to do it, but how hard to do when unwilling. And yet if we wish to become the disciples of Christ we must learn to do his will:—

Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15: 14.

Think what a world of contention and strife might be ended, what needless heartaches might be avoided, if this part of the law of God as revealed in Christ was more honored and carried out.

It should be the aim of all to try to avoid giving offense, either in word or deed; and, on the other hand, all should try and not take offense; but when we do feel wounded and sore, and believe that we have been trespassed against by one of the brethren, the Master does not tell us to brood and sulk over it; he does not tell us to fall out with the church and everyone connected with it; neither are we instructed to cultivate a spirit of retaliation; but to try in the Spirit of Christ to go to that one and tell him (or her) his fault "between him and thee alone," and thus haply seek a reconciliation.

Many seem to think it strange that offenses are found in the Church of Christ. Many soon after they come into the church become offended because of some things that may have been said or done by some one from whom they may have expected better things. Jesus told his followers,

It must needs be that offenses come; but woe unto that man by whom the offense cometh.—Matt. 18: 7.

And in the parable of the sower as found in Mark 4, we have an illustration of the seed which fell on stony ground "and immediately it sprang up because it had no depth of earth;" but when the sun shone upon it, "it was scorched" and "withered away." It is explained that these characters who when they hear the word immediately receive it with gladness and so "endure but for a time, but afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended." It is those who not only receive it, but have an under- standing of the word (the gospel) that will be able to endure in the trying day.

Yes, offenses we must expect during the time of our probation, like the soldier whose experiences are made up of both smooth and rough, bitter and sweet; yet so long as he remains in the service he may expect to be called upon, if necessary, to endure hardships and privations; not always, however, for pleasant times are his, especially in times of peace. But when the enemy comes against him and he meets him in the shock of battle, if a true and loyal soldier, he will not desert the standard. So the sailor who may set sail under a clear sky with a fair wind must not desert his post when the storm clouds begin to gather and the waves become tempestuous and danger threatens him. So with the soldier of Christ who has enlisted in Christ's cause. During our Christian warfare we are admonished to have our "loins girt about with truth," to take "the shield of faith" and "the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God," "wherewith" "to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one;" not to waver in our loyalty because the adversary of our souls uses these forces against us, thus seeking to thwart us in our purpose, to hinder our progress in the divine life; but being thus panoplied with the Spirit, and the truth, and understanding the source from whence come fightings, dissensions, dissimulations, strife, and all evils, we will be able to endure and obtain the victory.

JOHN GILBERT.

FALL RIVER, Massachusetts.

INDOCTRINATED CHRISTIANS.

It is a recognized fact that we are living in a time of religious transition, a modifying period, the result of which seems to be productive of inconstancy in religious thought or purpose. Our nation is titularly Christian; but the great mass of our population cares but little for the claims of "orthodoxy." True, it makes a great flourish of a wouldbe something; but worldly pride, opulence, art, fashion, culture-literati, cannot and do not furnish a foundation good and solid upon which to rest the hope for the future of an immortal soul's spiritual hungering. People who think desire food for thought. If there is anything in Christianity at all,—the Pauline Christianity, or any other type thereof,—men and women of thought very largely desire to know it,

Christ said to his immediate ministry:—
Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

That phrase—"the gospel"—indicated a certain message of which they had learned from the Master. He did not send them out to preach something concerning which they had no definite understanding. When he said "the gospel," they knew what were the special principles involved in that term, else salvation and condemnation in the mystical beyond could hardly have been made dependent upon an acceptance or rejection of what these men were to faithfully teach the people to observe. Hence it was not a going out, upon the part of these men, with an opinionated philosophy of contradictory ideas; but rather the announcement of a clear-cut word and way of life.

But people, many of them, are very shy of doctrinal preaching. Catholicity stands firm upon her doctrinal tenets. Protestantism has learned to feign an external unity by keeping her antagonizing pulpits quiet on points of credo-dogmatism, else there might be a theological fisticuff on hand. That soothing-syrup, paregorical saying is sown broadcast: "It makes no difference what church you join, just so you are sincere."

Can Armenianism and Calvinism mix? Yes, just as water and oil mix—two opposite poles with no attractive element in either so as to bring them together; and we are told that sincerity in the one is just as acceptable with God as your sincerity in the other one would be. God ordained both if these respective systems originated with him.

But who knows, aside from theological students, what enters into a composition of these isms? Preachers do not preach them; "evangelists" dare not; so at the conclusion of a "revival" what do the "converted" ones believe? If these isms are included in the phrase "the gospel," why do not preachers everywhere "preach the gospel"? "No man lighteth a candle and putteth it under a bushel," said Jesus. If, then, the various denominations, all tintured with these isms, have a lighted candle, why not out with it, and put it in a candlestick so we may have the benefit of its radiation? If it makes no difference what church you join, why not tell the people what each respective religious body holds to as fundamentals? Could members of half a dozen conflicting churches get together and talk of their gospel themes and agree? A writer in the Church Union once said, while contemplating this incongruous medley:—

We are not divided,
All one body we;

and asked if professed Christians could look Jesus in the face and sing the above lines of a hymn without being conscious that they were telling him a—? What think you, Herald readers?

When Jesus sent his ministry to preach the gospel did he anticipate that by so doing he would "send a sword" of the make we have on hand to-day? Did he not promise unto all truly baptized believers the baptism of the Holy Spirit which would "guide" them "into all truth," making, under its direction, religious distraction an impossible and improbable work? The old saying, "Many men, many minds," was not to have place beneath the unifying power of the Holy Spirit. Respecting matters of obedience wherein faith, doctrine, organization, promise, power, and blessing were to be taught and understood, a people of this character would stand upon a foundation distinctly outlined, and no compromise with anything antagonizing its God prescribed form could ever be effected.

Elders often hear the statement made, "You never go to hear those Latter Day Saints but what they are talking about doctrine, doctrine, all the time."

We are glad of it. God foresaw a time when his doctrine would not be preached and when people somewhere would begin to murmur; and God would renew his gospel, and he said, as found in Isaiah 29:24:—

They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine.

And the Latter Day Saints preach "the doctrine of Christ," hence where would people expect to hear the doctrine, seeing the popularized religionists desire to keep theirs hushed?

Paul wrote:—

Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them. For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.—Rom. 16:17, 18.

Paul taught the same doctrine everywhere he served as a minister for Christ. Let us see what he taught, as well as others of the ministry: Acts 2:38, 39; 19:1-6; 8:5-17; Romans 6:3-6; 1 Corinthians 12:14; Hebrews 6:1-3; Galatians 1:6-12; Ephesians 4:1-16; Colossians 2:12; James 5:13-16; 1 John 2:27; 2 John 9, 10.

Paul wrote:—

Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith.—2 Cor. 13:5.

Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.—2 Tim. 1:13.

And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship.—Acts 2:42.

Paul said the Scriptures were profitable, among other things, "for doctrine."

(2 Tim. 3: 16.) He positively charged, "that they teach no other doctrine." (1 Tim. 1: 3, 4.) There was danger of people departing "from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." (1 Tim. 4: 1.)

From these several quotations we learn that the gospel was the doctrine of Christ; we discover what the early Christians believed, the obeying and believing of which constituted them genuine followers of Jesus Christ.

This kind of teaching was Christianity proper; and if we are to be real Christians to-day, it will be by the indorsement of Christ's way as primarily enunciated. No change in the plan could be made and yet have it remain intact—"the gospel." If any man preaches the gospel he will preach what Paul preached in his day. The durative validity of the scheme as a whole was not dependent upon how long a time any given number of officers in the church might happen to live, but the rather how long the time should be when the necessity for such a God-revealing system might stand as a universal human demand or requirement; then, when that quality of a time should cease, the other could reasonably be dropped out. No book can reveal God. He has revealed himself independent of all books, or ever before a book was written. A book may contain an intimation, or clearly state the course of procedure a man is to pursue in order that God may be found.

Jesus said of the Holy Spirit:—

He will guide you into all truth . . . and he will show you things to come. . . . All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall show it unto you.—John 16: 13-15.

To teach mankind contrary to Christ is to victimize the race with intoxicating prescriptions of speculative theologians, and people are caused to "stagger, but not with strong drink." (Isa. 29: 9.) Fables are too often accepted for facts, and a spiritual mania siezes the mind, and the power to poise the reason becomes temporarily lost, the decision of the judgment is perverted, and people are led astray.

The readiness on the part of many to accept the thirty or more pieces of treasonable silver—who are malpractitioners, adulterating the only remedial agent God ever gave for human ills in moral and spiritual concerns, has created in many places an opposition to others who would gladly point humanity "to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world." By what authority do we say "malpractitioners"? Because that to which we have already cited the reader was "God's remedy for sin;" it is the divine prescription, and Paul in referring to it said:—

But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.—Gal. 1: 8.

Should not that settle the matter, when he told the Galatians that what he preached he had received "by the revelation of Jesus Christ"?

Are we to believe that Jesus is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever;" or do we rather believe him to oppose himself—believe that what he was yesterday upon doctrinal matters he is not so to-day? Could we safely rely upon such a professed Savior as that?

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them [the believers] to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo [upon these terms], I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

Within and back of this commission stands the authority of God; and all who were taught by these men "learned doctrine," and became, upon obedience, indoctrinated Christians. They were "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets;" they were upon gospel themes intelligent Christians, knowing what they believed, and why they believed it. Assenting to a statement in history of Jesus being the Christ, and "joining church," does not constitute a person an indoctrinated Christian. Peter said of the early Christians:—

Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.—1 Peter 2: 5.

This could not be well effected independent of a careful training in doctrinal matters. Again he said:—

Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through [not the word alone] the Spirit.—1 Peter 1: 22.

The truth, the gospel, the doctrine of Christ was first taught them. They understood its import and complied with its requisitions:—

Feed the flock of God.—1 Peter 5: 2.

Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—Matt. 4: 4.

We are to understand from these quotations that the food is to consist in the giving of God's word—the doctrine of Christ. Paul wrote to the Colossians:—

Rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.—Col. 2: 7.

And he warned them:—

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.—Col. 2: 8.

When men preach Christ they preach the doctrine of Christ; for therein only is he fully and truly represented as the Savior of the world. He does not propose to save people outside the means God has ordained. It becomes necessary therefore that the people be duly and correctly instructed in "the way, the truth, and the life."

Rev. R. C. Shimeall, of the Presbytery of New York, in writing of church matters dating from A. D. 533 to 1517, says:—

What, we ask, are the heart-sickening annals of this prolonged period, but details of the rapid progression of primitive Christianity perverted, in doctrine, ceremonials, church order, and moral degeneracy, to the extent that, at its close, it may be truly said, that "the earth was corrupt before God, and that it was filled with violence."

He also believes that one of the signs of the times preceding Christ's second advent would be "A prevalent ignorance of divine things among all classes."

If all the preachers in Christendom plead guilty to the preaching of "the gospel," how could this ignorance of divine things abound among all classes? Can the reverend himself answer?

Indoctrinated Christians upon the apostolic plan could hardly be included in the number. BACK TO CHRIST should be the watchword of the hour.

The speakers were Elders H. P. Curtis and L. L. Wight. Adjourned to convene in San Antonio, Texas, Thursday, June 11 next, at night.

Sunday School Associations.

CONVENTION NOTICES.

The Sunday schools of the Ohio district association will meet in convention during the district conference, which convenes February 22. Superintendents, your schools are entitled to one delegate for every ten members or fraction thereof of your enrollment. We trust that every school in the district will send delegates so that all may be represented and that we may learn of your needs and progress. Secretaries, please mail full reports of your schools to secretary, Minnie Rhoades, Sinking Spring, Ohio, if possible, by the 18th inst. It is hoped that all who can will come, bringing the Spirit of the Master with you. The Sabbath school work must stand upon a higher plane than it is now occupying if it would be felt as a power and influence for good in the district.

MINNIE RHOADES, Sec.

The Des Moines district Sunday school convention will convene at Des Moines, Iowa, Friday, February 28, 1896, at ten a. m. We would like each school in the district to report. Secretaries, please be very careful in making out the report of your respective school, that we may send a full and correct report of the district.

ETTA SPRINGER, Supt.
ANNA AMOS, Sec.

Convention of the Nauvoo district Sunday school association will convene at Burlington, Iowa, March 6, 1896, at 10:30 a. m. Morning session for business. Afternoon and evening sessions will be interesting and instructive to both old and young. Let us have a good attendance and every school of the district well represented, as this is the meeting for the electing of district officers for the coming year, also to select delegates to the General Convention at Kirtland, Ohio. Come, all ye Sunday school workers, and let us make the Sunday school work in Nauvoo district second to none.

D. TRIPP, Pres.

Preparations are being made to welcome and entertain all who come. Can we count on you?

ELBERT A. SMITH, Sec.

The Far West district Sunday school association will convene at St. Joseph, Missouri, Friday, March 13, at 10:30 a. m. The forenoon session will be given to the hearing of reports. In the afternoon convention will meet for instruction. Methods of teaching primary, intermediate, and senior classes will be illustrated and discussed. District officers are to be elected for the ensuing year, annual report made to General Convention, and delegates selected to represent the district at that convention. The exercises in the evening will consist of a program composed of selections from various schools of the district, in accordance with motion adopted at last meeting.

DAVID J. KRAHL, Supt.
LAMBERTUS NIEDORP, Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

TO THE FIRST SEVENTY.

Those of the First Seventy who are not under General Conference appointment will please send their reports to the secretary, R. S. Salyards, Lamoni, Iowa, not later than March 20. Those under General Conference appointment are not required to report to the quorum separately; the report to General Conference will be received and serve as report to the quorum.

It is not deemed necessary for the quorum to meet any earlier than the assembling of General Conference, (April 6,) when time and place of meeting will be duly announced. Bro. Lorenzo W. Powell is requested kindly to undertake the securing of a suitable room for quorum meetings.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL, Pres.

SECOND QUORUM OF ELDERS.

On February 12 I mailed blank report to each member. If any have not received same and will send me their address to my home, 2210 Wabash Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, they will be supplied at once. Please send all reports to Arthur Allen, care of William H. Kelley, Temple, Lake County, Ohio. Would like to get all reports in by April 1.

ARTHUR ALLEN, Sec.

SECOND QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Bro. George Harrington, of Independence, Missouri, has been ordained to the office of elder and is no longer secretary, therefore will all the brethren of said quorum send their reports to me at Box 222, Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa, by March 20, so I will have time to make out a report of the quorum to send to General Conference. Those who have not received blank reports please drop me a card and I will send at once.

S. D. SHIPPY, Pres.

FOURTH QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Brethren:—Please send me reports of your labors for year ending March 1, 1896, also your quorum dues, twenty-five cents, as we are still a little in debt, which must be paid before conference. Be prompt, brethren, as I will only have about two weeks to make a general report of our quorum. Please address me at 803 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Missouri.

In bonds,
GEORGE EDWARDS, Recording Sec.

GENERAL CONFERENCE MINISTRY REPORTS.

The blank forms provided for have been sent to the ministry who are under General Conference appointment. If anyone in the United States or Canada fails to receive a blank, please write and another will be sent. In a few cases the addresses were not known, but to such they were sent in care of some one whom it was expected would deliver to the one intended for.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Secretary.

LAMONI, IOWA, February 6, 1896. 2t

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Bro. J. C. Foss, laboring in the State of Maine, is hereby authorized to make collections of Herald Office accounts and make sales of church publications in his mission field.

This applies to all the ministry laboring under General Conference appointment, also to Bishop's agents and district presidents, who are requested to aid the publishing department, especially in those portions of the fields where there are no Herald Office agents.

The Saints will please take notice.

FRANK CRILEY,
Business Manager, Herald Office.

LAMONI, IOWA, February 6, 1896.

James Caffall, is hereby cordially invited to attend. All presidents of branches and district officials are hereby requested to send their reports to the district secretary, Bro. George Cope, Aylburton Common, near Lydney, Gloucestershire, the same to reach him not later than March 31.

A. N. BISHOP, Pres.

BORN.

MILLER.—At Charles City, Iowa, February 4, 1896, to Mr. Lew and Sr. Cora Miller a daughter; named Margaret Ellen. Blessed February 9, 1896, by Elder J. R. Sutton.

ARCHIBALD.—At St. Louis, Missouri, November 11, 1895, to Bro. Russell and Sr. Jennie Pearl Archibald, a son; named David Myron. Blessed by Elders M. H. Bond and Charles Peet.

Welcome, dear gift, from Heaven sent,
Love's double pledge affirmed in earth and heaven.
May we interpret all that thou hast meant
Of duty Lord, in this sweet babe which thou hast given.

BULLOCK.—At St. Louis, July 21, 1895, to John W. and Sr. Martha A. Bullock, a son; named William. Blessed by Elder M. H. Bond.

MARRIED.

APPLEWHITE—WALLIS.—At the home of Bro. G. W. and Sr. Wallis, at Earl, Texas, February 4, 1896, their daughter and only child, Sr. Minnie, to Mr. Lee Applewhite, Elder H. P. Curtis officiating.

May the waves that form life's ocean,
Sometimes tossing high at will,
Be controlled by love's devotion,
Like the Master's "Peace be still."

H. P. C.

YOUNG—MORGAN.—At the residence of the groom's parents, January 26, 1896, in Peoria, Illinois, Alexander G. Young to Mary Morgan, of Farmington, Illinois, Elder J. D. Stead officiating. The groom is a member of and deacon in the Peoria branch; the bride is a member of the Bevier branch, Missouri.

MARRIOTT—NIELSON.—In Salt Lake City, Utah, February 9, 1896, Mr. Joseph Marriott, of Murray, to Miss Mary Nielson, of Salt Lake City, by Elder Ethan Barrows.

SHEPHERD—PAGE.—At the residence of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Bro. Roy and Sr. Emily Davis, at Hollister, California, January 2, 1896, Mr. Eugene Shepherd and Sr. Zena C. Page, Elder J. M. Range officiating.

DIED.

THORPE.—At Malad City, Idaho, December 29, 1895, Sr. Margaret Jane, wife of John Thorpe, and daughter of E. J. and Ann Evans, of Malad. Deceased was born July 18, 1874, at Malad City; married December 25, 1894, and died as above stated, having been confined about two weeks prior to her death, leaving her infant child of two weeks old, who is now being taken care of by Grandpa and Grandma Evans. Funeral services January 2, when deceased was followed to her grave by a numerous concourse of friends, who extend their sympathy to her parents and husband.

DAVIS.—At her son's home, near Fanning, Kansas, January 26, 1896, Sr. Jane Davis. She was born in Muncie, Indiana, January 25, 1817; was married to Mr. Thomas Davis in 1852 and moved to Kansas, and located near Fanning, in 1854, where she and her husband embraced the gospel August 11, 1868. Funeral services were conducted by Elder William Gurwell; sermon by Elder W. E. Peak.

HANSON.—Grandmother Lena Hanson was born March 4, 1809, in Strarup, Denmark, and died January 25, 1896, being almost eighty-seven years old. She was the mother of eight children, sixty-two grandchildren, and thirty-three great-grandchildren. Seven of her children are living, all honorable men and women. She with her husband emigrated to America in 1859 and located in Utah, but soon left the Utah people and united with Joseph Morris, and after his death they moved to Soda Springs, Idaho, and from there to Montana, and for several years she has been a resident of Deer Lodge. She passed away at the home of Bro. Andrew Christofferson, who is also her son-in-law. All that tender, loving hearts and generous hands could do for her was done to make her declining days pleasant and happy. She was one of God's noble women, kind-hearted and generous, and always doing good. She was loved by all who knew her and highly respected. Her funeral was the largest ever known in Deer Lodge, so stated by several. She was baptized by the writer October 13, 1895, after receiving almost a miraculous blessing through obedience to the ordinance of administration for health. While she was greatly blessed it was also made manifest that she would not remain long; and while she bore testimony to the power of the gospel and the great blessing she received, she did not believe she would survive long, and made preparation for the end. The funeral services were conducted at Bro. Christofferson's by Elder R. J. Anthony and Elder John E. Reese. It was by her request I was called to preach her funeral. A good soul has gone to rest. May God comfort and deal lovingly with the loved ones who are left to mourn.

CROLY.—At St. Louis, Missouri, December 27, 1895, Edward, infant son of Edward and Sr. Martha Croly, aged 1 year, 4 months, and 3 days. Funeral services conducted by Elder M. H. Bond.

BRITAIN.—William Britain born October 30, 1818, in Deeping Fen, Lincolnshire, England; died near Garden City, Kansas, July 12, 1895. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church, May 2, 1864, at Glenwood, Iowa, by Bro. C. McIntosh. He was always ready to bear his testimony to the truth of the latter-day work. He leaves an aged wife and six children to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father.

ASHTON.—Sister Abigail, wife of Bro. Isaac Ashton, of River Sioux, Iowa, was buried on February 7, 1896. She lived seventy-five years and one day. Was baptized in Nauvoo, in 1840, and identified herself with the Reorganized Church the latter part of her life. Her funeral was attended by many Saints and other friends, attesting by their presence their good feeling toward her. She leaves a husband and five children, having buried three children. Sermon preached by Elder J. C. Crabb, from Revelation 14: 13.

BULLARD.—Bro. A. M. Bullard was born in Ontario, Canada, August 14, 1836, and died near Laird, Colorado, January 25, 1896. He joined the church over twenty-five years ago in Iowa and came to Colorado in 1886 from Creston, Iowa, during which time he has lived an honorable, upright life and a true Christian, and died firm in the faith of the gospel, with a hope of a glorious resurrection. The brother leaves a faithful, loving wife and a family of five grown children, four daughters and one son, to mourn the death of a loving father and husband. In their bereavement they have the sympathy of a large circle of relatives, friends, and acquaintances. Funeral services conducted by Elder James Kemp at the residence of the deceased, January 26, at 11 a. m.; text, Job 14: 14; Revelation 14: 13. A large number of neighbors and friends met to pay their last respects to the worthy brother, after which the remains were taken to Creston, Iowa, for interment, accompanied by his wife and one daughter.

TYSON.—Bro. Abiathas Tyson was born in Ontario, Canada, April 27, 1821. His parents came to St. Lawrence County, New York, when he was quite young, where they resided until he was about twenty-one years old, when they came to Illinois. June 22, 1857, he was married to Miss Ellen Boughen by whom he became the father of thirteen children. He came to Nemaha County, Nebraska, in 1865, where he resided until his death, January 10, 1896. Funeral at the Christian church, Elmwood, January 12, Elder Pallister opening the service, and Elder Alton following; the sermon by Elder T. W. Williams. He leaves a wife, eight children, and a host of friends to mourn their loss.

BARTON.—Mr. Thomas Barton departed this life January 22, 1896. There was a short service held at the time of interment, conducted by Priest Daniel T. Williams. Funeral sermon preached at Keb, Iowa, February 2, 1896, by Elder E. B. Morgan, of Lucas, Iowa, from 1 Samuel 20: 3. Mr. Barton was born November 10, 1851, in Lancashire, England. He left a wife, two stepchildren, and grandchildren to mourn their loss. He was not a member of any church, but had faith in God and the Bible as God's word. He was a kind husband and a peaceable neighbor.

RUBY.—At Rock Island, Illinois, February 8, 1896, Jerome Ruby, who was born November 8, 1833, at Mills' Mills, Alleghany County, New York. He came to Iowa with his parents, who located in Davenport in 1839. In 1858 he was married to Miss Sarah Pauline Page. To them were born two sons, who both died in childhood. He was by occupation a steamboat pilot on the upper Mississippi, over whose torturous course he has guided all manner of craft, from the towboat to the finest packet. He was a member of the Davenport branch of the Reorganized Church; was baptized October 14, 1861, at Buffalo, Iowa, by his father, Elder W. J. Ruby. He was ordained an elder June 8, 1862, at the same place, and has done much preaching, in which he bore a strong testimony to the truth of the gospel whenever and wherever the duties of his vocation and opportunities would permit. His last testimony was that he was completely reconciled to die and knew that it was well with his soul. The only dread he had was to be compelled to leave his wife in her sore affliction. His home was at Buffalo, Iowa, but he died at the home of his brother, H. S. Ruby, No. 1006 First Avenue, Rock Island, Illinois, where he had gone on a visit while feeling well. The day after his arrival he suffered a relapse that resulted fatally. He leaves to mourn his death his wife, a foster daughter, an aged mother, two brothers, a sister, besides a host of other relatives and friends who deeply feel this bereavement. The funeral services were held in the M. E. church at Buffalo, Iowa, at two p. m., February 11. Elder James McKiernan, of Farmington, Iowa, delivered the sermon. The throng of people present evinced the esteem with which the deceased was regarded at home. Interment in Buffalo cemetery.

SMITH.—Sr. Laura, wife of Bro. Frank Smith, was born April 10, 1861, at Madison Furnace, Ohio; baptized March, 1882, by Elder L. R. Devore; died January 4, 1896, at her home in Centerville, West Virginia. A husband and seven children mourn their loss. Funeral in charge of Elder A. Haws, who also delivered the sermon to a large assemblage of friends. She died firm in the faith with a full hope of triumph with Christ in the resurrection morn. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her, especially the Saints of the branch where she was a member. But what is our loss will be others' gain.

TAYLOR.—Bro. John Taylor, or, as he was familiarly known, "Uncle John Taylor," passed peacefully away from earth's scenes, after a few weeks' illness, at his home near Plain City, Utah, February 7, 1896. His was an eventful life. Resolute and brave even in the face of appalling danger, and yet devoted to truth and virtue, he maintained his integrity and honor to the end, and went down like a shock of grain fully ripe. He was born December 7, 1812, at Bowling Green, Kentucky. He united with the church in Missouri, in 1832; so with the exception of the first two years, he has been identified with the church through its entire history. On April 3, 1834, he has married in Liberty, Missouri, to Miss Helenor Burket, who still survives him. Through nearly sixty-two years this couple have walked hand in hand life's uneven journey. Though for many years of his life surrounded by those who were running after strange women, and often urged in the name of God and religion to enter into what was called the celestial order, he loathed this carnal, debasing practice, and always proved true to the cherished vows of his youth. Come what would he was always her Isaac and she his Rebecca. Of this union there were born seven sons and five daughters, all of whom still live to honor his memory, also many grandchildren and great-grandchildren, so that his posterity is said to number about three hundred. They passed through the persecutions, privations, and trials of the church in Missouri, and were among the exiles to Illinois. He spent two seasons with Lyman Wight and George Miller in obtaining lumber from Wisconsin pineries, for the Nauvoo Temple and Nauvoo House. In 1845 he accompanied the Lyman Wight colony to Texas and remained with them until the fall of 1850, when he withdrew, and after some meanderings found his way in 1854 to Utah. He here united with the Brighamite Church, but constantly protested against some of their practices. When the first missionaries of the Reorganization came to Utah he hailed their message with gladness, and was baptized in 1863 by Alexander McCord. He has ever since been unwavering and devoted in his testimony. He held the office of teacher and afterwards that of elder in the Martyr's day, and was reordained to the latter office in the Reorganization. On February 10, the Mormon meetinghouse at Harrisville being opened for the purpose, the funeral discourse was delivered by Elder Heman C. Smith to a large concourse of people, and a long procession of relatives and friends followed him to his last resting place in Ogden cemetery. A good and true man has gone to his rest.

SKINNER.—At Auburn, Iowa, February 2, 1896, Katie Skinner, daughter of T. J. and Ollie E. Skinner, aged 4 years, 10 months, and 29 days. Funeral services at Latter Day Saints' church, Auburn, Iowa, February 4, in charge of William Carroll; sermon by Elder H. O. Smith.

HANSEN.—At Manti, Utah, January 30, 1896, Sr. Josephine E., daughter of Bro. L. P. and Sr. Karen J. Hansen. Sr. Josephine was born at Moen, Denmark, June 8, 1878; baptized September 10, 1894, by Elder H. N. Hansen. Funeral sermon was preached at the family residence in Manti, Utah, February 1, 1896, by Elder Heman C. Smith. A large concourse of friends was in attendance, thus attesting the esteem in which she was held by associates.

In Syria, near Damascus, there is said to grow a humming bird plant, the flower of which bears a close resemblance to a humming bird. The breast is red, the wings are a dark green, the back yellow, the head and tail a bluish black.

HOUSEKEEPER WANTED!

EUREKA REFRIGERATOR.

BEST IN USE.

Cold Storage of Meats and Fruits Secured by an Improved, Simple, and Scientific Arrangement.

The Eureka Refrigerator is the result of over seven years experimenting. The inventor, a practical butcher and handler of meats in stock, has succeeded in so combining economy and utility that ice is very slowly consumed and moisture prevented from collecting on the walls of the Refrigerator—Low temperature, and Dry atmosphere combined at a moderate cost.

Compared with other Cooling boxes the Eureka requires but little ice. The walls of the box are always dry, so thoroughly dry that a match can be lighted on them at any time. Meats and fruits can be kept sweet and sound for a long time.

This is secured by a new and scientific system of ventilation, by which moisture is carried off and food products kept cold and dry.

JOSEPH THE SEER.

HIS PROPHETIC MISSION VINDICATED AND THE DIVINE ORIGIN OF THE BOOK OF MORMON DEFENDED AND MAINTAINED.

New and Revised Edition. This is a reply of Elder W. W. Blair to Elder William Sheldon of the Second Advent Society, and is an important work to be in the hands of the ministry of the Church, and a most excellent one to be circulated both in the Church and among those without, abounding in proofs never before presented in defense of Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon. The author has gathered excellent matter from many sources and compiled in compact form much that is of interest and value to students interested in the Book of Mormon the prophetic calling of Joseph Smith, and the Bible. 200 pages.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly rebuts the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

SAD EVILS OF DIVORCE.

AN UNDERMINING FORCE IN OUR SOCIAL FABRIC.

CUSTOM HAS NOT BECOME LESS HARMFUL BY AGE AND IS ONE OF THE GREATEST DANGERS SOCIETY HAS TO CONFRONT—FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT, BUT DOES NOT LESSEN THE WRONG—LAW, THOUGH LEGALIZED IN THE STATES, MAY NOT BE RIGHT.

TO-DAY the divorcée, if not in your personal acquaintance and friendship, yet in your knowledge and within your radius, is by no means a rare individual, and that not only divorced but married again; and the subject of her unmarriage and her remarriage, from having been forbidden through all sorts of delicacy, has become as simple and natural a topic, if allusion is necessary or convenient, as any other subject.

Part of this has followed upon the frequency of the situation, and its consequently nearer approach to ourselves, and the impossibility of avoiding so many that we know or that our friends know, and from the facts also that law is on the side of the people who have taken advantage of its permission.

But a great deal is due to the way in which divorce has become a standard joke, so that every newspaper has its little merriment to make about it, a thing which has habituated us to the idea if not to the fact. It is one of the evils of the age that serious things are so frequently made the subject of jest. Certainly the incessant jests about divorce have taken it out of the remoteness where it belonged and made it seem possible and easy.

It is time, then, that we bethought ourselves and paused to see whither we are drifting. If divorce was wrong fifty years ago it is wrong to-day. That in its frequency among the fabulously rich it seems to have become the last luxury in which they indulge themselves, that they may have at the same time both sin and respectability, does not take away from its demerit. And that it has in a way been legalized does not change its intrinsic character.

The usual divorce, obtained on pretenses of desertion or incompatibility, if followed by marriage with other parties, according to the precepts of our accepted religion, is a sin. That it is countenanced by forms of law in various of our States makes it possible without penalty, but does not make it right.

And so it is time that women, in the interest of society, of the family, of their own salvation, and even of virtue in general, looked at the matter from a more serious and uncompromising point of view.—Harper's Bazar.

THERAPEUTICS OF COLOR.

A CONTRIBUTOR to Popular Science News, Mr. A. S. Kelly, gives some points on the effects of color that are at least interesting, and, if true, of importance. Rooms in which the prevailing wall color, and other colors are gray, or as he puts it, French gray, are far from being cheerful, but tend to make its occupants sad, gloomy, and depressed.

Blue is the coldest of the colors, and rooms where it prevails are cool, quiet, and sedative, and consequently not cheerful.

Orange is the warmest color; it is ardent, cheering, and enlivening and "a room done in a yellow key will impart these lively sensations to the mind. No person ever committed suicide amid such coloring. My old pastor was pessimist and his sermons were bordered in black, and I only discovered why when I saw his study, a room whose walls were done in cold-blooded Prussian blue, and whose woodwork, including the floor, was stained to imitate black walnut."

Blue is a distant or retiring color.

Yellow is a near, or advancing color and the most luminous of all the colors.

Red is a hot color.

Green is a restful color to the eyes.

It is said that a melancholic patient who persisted in abstaining from food, and who was slowly wasting away, was taken into a room where the prevailing color was a vivid crimson. The room was brilliantly lit at night and sunshiny by day. In a short time the patient grew cheerful and ate with a relish. On the other hand a raving lunatic was taken into a blue room which soon cooled him down.

So it would seem that if you want to have a cheerful room you must have it in the yellow key, with other colors subordinate.—Homeopathic Envoy.

PRESIDENT HARPER ON THE BIBLE.

THE Journal and Messenger (Baptist, Cincinnati) takes President Harper, of the University of Chicago, severely to task for certain of his views which he expressed in a recent interview with the editor of the Texas Baptist Standard. In some prefatory observations concerning President Harper, The Journal and Messenger expresses its grievous disappointment over the position taken by him toward the interpretation of Old-Testament history in general. It had expected different things. It says that it seems to be Dr. Harper's aim now "to see how little he can leave for the student to place his foot upon with his assurance of its immovability." In the interview reported in The Baptist Standard, Dr. Harper, in reply to some direct questions submitted to him, made statements like the following:—

"The story of Adam and Eve is certainly not fiction, and it is certainly not history, in the sense in which we use the word history to-day. . . . As these [Genesis] stories appear among the Hebrews, they have been purified and purged, and at the same time filled with a distinct spirit which, from my point of view, can be only explained by assuming a supernatural, divine influence. . . . I believe that these early stories of Genesis contain the world's earliest ideas, purged and purified by the divine Spirit, concerning the origin of man. . . . The early ideas of these people may or may not be correct. That does not affect the great truth. The essential idea contained in the first chapter of Genesis is shown by all history to have been true."

As to the inspiration of the Old-Testament Scriptures, President Harper is reported as saying:—

"The thing which seems to me to deserve emphasis is the inspiration of the history of the chosen nation. God worked in all history, but he worked in Hebrew history and New-Testament history in a sense in which he did not appear in other history. This was a specially ordered, specially guided history, the events of which were directed, and the great lives of which were so influenced as to produce a history out of which should come these biblical records. Now, inasmuch as the history itself was divinely guided and inspired, the records which grew out of the history, which were occasioned by the history, were thus, in the same sense, divinely inspired and divinely ordered. Whatever supernatural element we find in the history itself, whatever is in the events, that same thing we shall find in the record; whatever one was the other was. The history, however, is the fundamental thing, that is the rock upon which we may stand; and if we can prove, upon scientific grounds, that that history was unique, distinct from all other history, we have a basis upon which our divine inspiration from our Bible can rest."

Commenting on these utterances, the Journal and Messenger says:—

"It seems, then, that in order to a divine record, we must have a divine history; or, rather, we must have a course of conduct ordered and directed by God. In order to have an inspired record of the doings of Satan, we must have Satan divinely directed and controlled. It can not be true that Satan wrought his devilish work upon Job, unless it is true that God directed him in his devices and energized him in the execution of his plans. We must have a divinely directed order of events, before God can put it into the heart and the pen of a scribe to tell the truth about it; and then it must not be expected that his record will be true to the facts. . . .

"When asked what are the essential elements in which he differs from the 'orthodox' view of the Scriptures, Dr. Harper said: 'In giving more prominence to the history which forms the basis on which the divine revelation rests.' Herein is a marvel. A man tells us that what in the common view is history is not history at all, but simply a conglomeration of traditions, 'purged and purified by the divine Spirit;' and then, in a breath, he tells us that he differs from the orthodox in that he emphasizes more fully the historical basis upon which the divine revelation rests. We confess to utter inability to harmonize these two statements. First, we have no reliable history. It is only a tradition, 'purged and purified by the divine Spirit;' then, after destroying, so far as he is able, the historical character of the writings, he tells us that he differs from those who believe in their historical character, in that he gives 'more prominence to the history which forms the basis on which the divine revelation rests' (!). Divine revelation resting upon history which is not history at all; a record which is not history, but which bears the evidence of purging and purifying by the divine Spirit! We have to confess to amazement and confusion; and we ask, How can these things be joined together so as to reflect credit upon the president of a great university?"—Literary Digest.

PROFESSOR BONNEY ON IMMORTALITY.

A SPECIAL feature of the Christian Commonwealth, of London, is its interviews with noted men of the day on subjects of interest to the religious public. One of its latest was with Professor C. C. Bonney, the noted geologist and scientific writer. Among other things Professor Bonney was asked this question:—

"Then your scientific studies have not shaken your belief in personal immortality?" To which he answered:—

"Not in the least; rather have they strengthened it by suggesting analogies and showing relations between the condition of matter and its environment. But I ought to say that I am not one of those who look upon immortality as a necessary condition of every human being. In reading the New Testament I think we often impart a meaning into the word 'eternal death' which I may term nonnatural. It is generally interpreted to mean a painful form of life; but I think both the words life and death ought to be understood in their natural senses, as antithetical the one to the other. I hold what is commonly called Conditional Immortality, which seems to me to agree best with the Savior's teaching, 'This is life eternal, to know Thee, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent.' Very good; but not to know is not to have life eternal, and the antithesis of life is death. I do not, however, hold that the existence of any man who has not eternal life is necessarily concluded at the moment which we call death, because I believe in justice, and I cannot think that a man can escape the consequences of wrong-doing by just putting a pistol to his head. But sooner or later the man who does not lay hold of eternal life will die."

In spite of the climate the people of Iceland are certainly not cold in matters of religious belief. There are 287 churches on the island, of which 12 are of stone, 246 of wood, and 29 of turf. In the inside these edifices are extremely plain with bare walls. Musical instruments are scarce. Only 51 churches possess even a harmonium. Even the cathedral at Reikjavik has no organ, but only a large harmonium. Church services are well attended, and the position of the clergy is one of high respect. Of the 72,445 inhabitants of the island 72,000 are Lutherans.

REUNION MINUTES, ETC.

WHILE it occurs to us, we desire to suggest that those in charge or connected with reunions arrange for a change in the literary program, in this; that instead of the tiresome, stereotyped routine reports of who had charge of the morning prayer meeting, the number of prayers offered, the hymns sung, the number of testimonies borne, etc., etc., that a breezy interesting report of the general features of such reunions be given. We want "correspondence" that shall include new departures from beaten tracks. There is abundant opportunity for, "interesting originality"—we shall term it. The oft-repeated "at 10:30 Bro. So-and-so occupied the stand, assisted by Bro. So-and-so, who offered prayer, followed by the singing of hymn No.," has become wearisome and a "vain repetition" in many respects.

If we are thus early on the scene in so suggesting we remind the brethren that some signs of spring have already begun to appear; that time flies; and that we wish that those who may be selected to report said gatherings may be "storing up" some of the literary energy that shall prepare them to enliven and interest our readers all the way through. The stores of good things to be said in representation of the truth are practically inexhaustible, the sources of supply never-failing. Variety is necessary to retain interest, also to the more important work of presenting the many-sided character of truth, and the evidences in its favor. Many men and many women of many minds may view the facts and principles of the great work of God through lines of energetic application in its interests and not exhaust the theme. Truth is an eternal theme, an eternal study.

No one "knows it all," not even the angels; and we may well apply ourselves humbly, diligently, reverently, in the spirit in which others into whose labors we have entered have applied themselves, that as we have been aided by their efforts, so we may be able to aid those who in turn shall take up the work or follow us. The past, the present, and the future is ours—especially the present and the future.

We appreciate what has been done in reporting for us. We know that many who have written up minutes of various gatherings have done well, and mostly during very busy seasons. We often realize that our own work, often done very hurriedly and amidst frequent interruptions, could be much better done could we have time for more thought, for uninterrupted seasons of meditation, and study, and systematic arrangement of it; and, last but not least in importance, more prayer for light and power to do it. For we remember the command to do "all things" "by much prayer and faith" "in the church"; and that it applies to all phases of the work.

We shall be pleased and our readers will be pleased to have interesting and instructive correspondence from writers in the field at the various reunions.

We may offer some other and more specific suggestions later on.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

PAUL wrote to Timothy saying:—

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.—1 Tim 4: 1-3.

Ques.—Does the foregoing text relate to the former or the latter-day apostasy?

Ans.—Paul says it relates to "the latter times."

Q.—Who, in the latter-day apostasy, are "forbidding to marry?"

A.—The Utah Mormon leaders have done so, for they ignore and repudiate marriage as taught and practiced in the church under the presidency of Joseph the Seer from 1830 to 1844, and have required that the parties to be married should be sealed by the priesthood, and that not in public. The order of marriage provided for and indorsed by the church is as follows:—

According to the custom of all civilized nations, marriage is regulated by laws and ceremonies; therefore, we believe, that all marriages in this Church of Christ of Latter-Day Saints, should be solemnized in a public meeting, or feast, prepared for that purpose; and that the solemnization should be performed by a presiding high priest, high priest, bishop, elder, or priest, not even prohibiting those persons who are desirous to get married, of being married by other authority. We believe that it is not right to prohibit members of this church from marrying out of the church if it be their determination so to do, but such persons will be considered weak in the faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Marriage should be celebrated with prayer and thanksgiving; and at the solemnization, the persons to be married, standing together, the man on the right, and the woman on the left, shall be addressed, by the person officiating, as he shall be directed by the Holy Spirit; and if there be no legal objections, he shall say, calling each by their names: "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others, during your lives." And when they have answered "Yes," he shall pronounce them "husband and wife" in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country and authority vested in him: "may God add his blessings and keep you to fulfill your covenants from henceforth and forever. Amen."—D. C. 111: 1, 2.

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made. And whoso forbiddeth to abstain from meats, that man should not eat the same, is not ordained of God; for behold the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man, for food, and for raiment, and that he might have in abundance, but it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another: wherefore the world lieth in sin; and wo be unto man that sheddeth blood or that wasteth flesh and hath no need.—D. C. 49: 3.

At the time the revelation, section 49, was given, the Shakers, a sort of Quaker community, were in existence and in their teaching and practice taught against marriage, as a sort of state provision; ostensibly with the view to eliminate from the nature of the individual whatever attached to the carnal, or fleshly nature.

Then, as now, the Catholic Church held that their ministry should remain unmarried. This ostensibly is for the purpose of attaining to greater sanctity of person and not to burden the bishops, priests, and popes with the cares of the domestic state. The same church teaches also the single, or celibate condition for various orders of both men and women, monks of various orders, and nuns, Sisters of Mercy, etc.

They also teach abstaining from meats, on stated days and times, for supposed hygienic purposes and the mortifying of the fleshly appetites; and to keep in the memory of the devotee the existence and supremacy of the church.

The Church of England follows in restricting the use of meats during the Lenten season; a season of fasting, prayer, the abstaining from worldly pleasures, the occupations of the fashionable world and the giving of one's self to religious contemplation and the observance of the rites and ceremonies of the church.

Some of the Advent societies also teach and practice the abstaining from meats, to a greater or lesser degree, as a matter of hygienic principle advantageous to health.

Whether any or all of these come within the provisions named by the apostle, as those who have "departed from the faith," is probably a matter for every man to settle for himself.

To the above it may be added, that the Utah Mormon leaders long ago struck out of their Doctrine and Covenants the above-mentioned form and covenant of marriage, which they had ignored, repudiated, and in fact forbidden.

Q.—Who, in the latter-day apostasy, have been "commanding to abstain from meats"?

A.—That other faction of the church known as "Banneemyites"—the followers of Charles B. Thompson—who were first known in St. Louis, Missouri, and afterward located and collapsed at Preparation, Monona County, Iowa.

Flesh "meats" are those alluded to in verse 3, and they are those the Banneemyite leaders commanded their followers to abstain from, not on special days, but at all times.

FRIENDSHIPS, ETC.

WE give below an extract from the pen of a writer not too often heard in the Herald:—

Speaking of friendship, of the kind that is pure and noble, or that is a worshipful sense of worth in another, or of what kind you will, we do oftentimes observe in our fellows those excellent qualities of mind and heart which cause us all unconsciously to greet them with a thrill of joy and sympathy, because we ourselves aspire to the same loftiness of character as theirs.

We have read, sometimes of the gentle manner with which our elders in the field meet the scoffs and jeers and abusive taunts; we also have read occasionally in the columns of the Herald the soft answer, that turneth away wrath, to the misrepresentation and misleading statement of those who should have been more enlightened on the matter at issue; many an observant eye has been moistened with joy, as the thought came and was uttered "How courageous, how magnanimous the man or woman who can stand alone and defend an unpopular cause like ours, and do it with a grace born of a sense of justice and right!"

So we will continue to love this work more and more as we become more intelligently comprehensive of what it is doing not only for us but all mankind; and while some are preaching religion and others what they claim it to be, we must make sure to occupy where we can receive the full benefits of that which is the "pure and only" kind.

Rev. Roberts lately stated that "the church is not appointed to think or reason or examine, but simply to speak the message that has been given to it;" also that "as it is organized today, the modern church is the most senseless and unjustifiable waste of money and energy to be found within the limits of civilization."

While taking a glimpse of the popular religions of the day, we hardly know in what kind of manner to quote such sayings as these, being religionists ourselves; but when we contemplate national relationships, we think we understand our moorings; for when touched with a feeling of appreciation as we see the desire expressed by our kinsmen for a more amicable relation between us as a nation and those of other lands, the happy thought strikes us that the great-hearted if not the broad-minded men of the world are those who sue for peace, whose cry is like that which ages ago broke the dark world's midnight stillness, and, joyful, made the welkin ring—"peace on earth, good will to men."

Seeing we have at last struck so sweet a theme we will leave it.

Listen to what "Universal Knowledge" says of the Platonic theory:—

"The Platonic morality like the Christian is of that high order which admits of no compromise with ephemeral prejudice or local usage. The contrast between the low moral standard of local respectability and that which is congruous with the universal laws of pure reason stands out as strikingly in Plato as the morality of the Sermon on the Mount in the Gospels does against the morality of the Scribes and Pharisees." Now see what love is; "Love is a transcendental admiration of excellence, an admiration of which the soul is capable by its own high origination and the germs of Godlike excellence which are implanted into it from above."

RELIGIOUS WAR.

IT would seem that the spirit by which religion in the far past would stand by its own convictions at the determination to crush out what opposed it, is not yet entirely excluded from all religious circles.

Witness the following:—

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Sixty-two bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country, who a week ago petitioned President Cleveland to take some forceful action that would lead to a cessation of the massacre of Christians in Armenia, have sent petitions to the Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Anglican Church, and through the various ministers of foreign affairs to the Czar, the President of France, and the emperors of Germany and Austria.

In their letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops declare that a crusade supported by Christians the world over would be warranted, and plead that the great Church of England, through its Episcopate, shall take decisive action.

To the great powers they pray that in the name of Christ they come to the aid of the persecuted brethren who are suffering from persecution worse than the Roman emperors ever inflicted, worse than the martyrs of the early church ever endured.

"Our differences of doctrine," they say, "are as nothing in the presence of a crisis like this. All we who profess and call ourselves Christians must place the rescue of hundreds of thousands of our fellow Christians from death, or what is worse than death, above all questions of mere material and personal advantage. It is not a question of policy, but of Christianity, and even of common humanity. For Christ's sake, save our brothers from death and rescue a Christian community from extinction."

It may be conceded that there is an inexcusable and outrageous persecution urged by the Turk against the Armenian Christians; and it may be that there should be a governmental interference by those nations that have undertaken to keep the equilibrium of a portion of Europe, and a stop be put to the wicked slaughter of inoffensive citizens of the country where Armenian Christianity prevails to an extent.

All religious wars are in degrees vicious and cruel, their tendencies dangerous; and for that reason the powers that are asked to interfere should move cautiously and carefully, notwithstanding the apparently grave necessity for such intervention.

THE THREE BOOKS AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

BECAUSE of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher-priced editions.

They are good and durable and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.00.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE Christian Worker, of Des Moines, Iowa, February issue, has the following "student's letter." The clipping is republished as showing the on-sweeping reaction against creedism:—

Sister and I have just come from Central Church: Dr. Breeden preached on "hell." He repudiates very strongly the idea of what he called the "dogma of literal fire." Said a man could have hell on this earth as well as any time. Your conscience may be goading you for some evil done, or you may be reaping now from your evil doings; if so, you are in hell. He says he doesn't like to look at hell as a place, but rather as a condition, or an effect, or result of evil. Says that there will be different stages of this in life to come; according as the man's deeds are so will his hell be. Referred to "It shall be more tolerable," etc., he said he didn't think much of a man's repentance and baptism just before death. Said he would rather take his chances on living a good life toward those around him and die without being baptized, than to live a drunkard's, or an immoral life and repent and be baptized just a short time before death. He ended up by saying that he believed that hell would be great misery and appealed for them to flee to Christ. . . .

SENSIBLE CONCLUSION; GOOD RESOLUTION.

A BROTHER, now several years in the active ministry after due observation and much thought upon the effect resulting from the use of ridicule and sarcasm against other men's faiths, has come to the following conclusion and resolution, which have incidentally fallen into ye editor's hands, and thence into the HERALD:—

I have resolved that I shall never ridicule or unduly criticise others' religions. It does not pay.

No. In the light of the Golden Rule, "Do ye unto others as ye would that others should do unto you," it does not pay. When will we learn the lesson, so earnestly taught us?

ELDER SAMUEL W. RICHARDS, in charge of the work for the Utah Mormon Church in the Eastern district of the United States is reported to have stated to a New York City World reporter; to the following effect:—

Of course it is the general desire of those who enlist beneath our standard to remove as soon as is convenient to Utah. We do not teach polygamy, of course, or practice it any longer. As a matter of fact, polygamy never was practiced by more than perhaps one tenth of our people, those in whom was vested the patriarchial right. Many misapprehensions have arisen on that point.

Thus it goes, one estimates ten per cent, another fifteen, and yet another two per cent of the membership of that church as practicing plural marriage.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

THE following from Bro. John Kaler, is news from the work in Australia and will be read with pleasure by the HERALD patrons. It was written in January:—

The hot weather is the worst here now ever known, so they say; and many people drop dead from sunstrokes. It has been as high as 108° Fahrenheit in the shade here on the coast, and 118 inland. It is common to hear of people dropping dead traveling; and to make it worse fires are raging in some places in the country, doing damage to property and livestock. Our late district conference was well attended and all the Saints felt joyous in the good work. The honest truth-seekers are coming in by twos and threes. So the latter-day work moves slowly but surely onward in this far-away mission.

Bro. R. M. Elvin, who was to have a discussion with a Christian minister at or near Lineville, Iowa, wrote under date of February 20:—

I think the debate will prove a flash in the pan. Elder Kincaid has not yet appeared.

Bro. John Kaler, writing from Tun-curry, New South Wales, January 4:—

Our district conference just closed. It was splendid. I also held a four nights' debate, and the good Spirit was with us. The conference was held in Hamilton where the Saints had just completed a chapel. Some good workers have been brought into the church the past year, for which we praise the Lord.

Bro. S. O. Foss, Westcogus, Maine, February 14:—

Am laboring with tolerable good success. Have baptized nine in the past few weeks. Interest good; expect to baptize others soon. The Holiness people are working with some degree of excitement and have been making converts not a few. Think they are to their full height and that ere long some of their converts will be coming with us. Indications point that way now.

Letter and handbill from Bro. H. P. Curtis, San Antonio, Texas, the 18th. He has a good subject for a review:—

We are working away as best we can. Expect to have a full house next Sunday to hear my review of Mr. Ingersoll's famous lecture, "The liberty of man, woman, and child." I shall not pelt Mr. Ingersoll with harsh and ungentlemanly remarks, but show up his mistakes and give him all credit where credit is due. My review will be taken by our own reporter in shorthand. Can furnish the matter in full if you desire to use it. I am doing my level best for the work of the great kingdom of God. I desire to be remembered by you, Bro. Editor, and the Herald workers who are interested in the work in the Lone Star State.

"Ingersoll's lecture on the liberty of man, woman, and child and the People's Church, of Kalamazoo, Michigan, will be examined by Elder H. P. Curtis, at 117 Camp Street—Use South Flores street cars to Camp Street—Sunday, February 23, eight o'clock p. m. Free pulpit will be given to any responsible party desiring to respond. Free pulpit, free speech, free seats. Everybody welcome."

Bro. W. H. Kelley, Boston, Massachusetts, February 18:—

I had the pleasure of attending the last of the sessions of the Massachusetts district conference held at Providence. An excellent spirit was manifest and it is reported to have been a most excellent meeting and effective for good. Last Sabbath I was at Plainville. The Saints are gaining there. An inspiring interest was manifest in the meetings. I am booked for Providence next Sunday. Busy about many things just now.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELSEWHERE in our columns will be found a letter describing the efforts and final success of the brethren of London, England, from the pen of Bro. J. D. Howell, president of the London branch. Its spirit is good and will awaken interest in all who love the work. We congratulate the brethren in having surmounted difficulties thus far, and wish them a hearty godspeed in their labors for the cause. The church also is to be congratulated in having a home location in the great English capital. We hope it is but one of the many steps that shall be taken to establish and extend the cause in Great Britain that the work of the Reorganization may spread throughout the dominions of good Queen Victoria and her subjects.

The Traveller, published at Tenant's Harbor, Maine, for February 7, has a three-quarter column notice of the effort of Bro. J. C. Foss in that place, including a very fair statement of the faith of the church.

A brother who is in distress desires to ask the elders and Saints if they know of any plant by the name of fenn-finger. Perhaps finger grass is the same. Write the Herald Office.

The Business Manager has brought to our notice a half dozen damaged Hymnals, returned for repairs by a branch in Michigan, which he asks us to describe. The books show the worst kind of usage. In the first place they are so strongly scented by tobacco that a week's fumigation might not deodorize them; besides, the forms are broken apart, the books having been bent clear back and broken, the strain being sufficient to break the paper, tearing the forms clear from the binding thread. In some the strong backs are bent and broken; the cloth—the best in the market and strong—worn off at the corners. Altogether the books look as if made to do duty at some country singing school frolic where they have been literally battered out of shape and rubbed bare. They have been used not as books but as clubs or worse. They were sent from the Herald Office about Christmas time. They will be repaired and returned, but not because of any fault in the books. In this connection the Business Manager wishes us to suggest that a newly bound book should be opened gradually, not bent back double as many of the Hymnals have been. No book will stand the usage received at some hands. A rubber should be used to hold the book open on the organ. Out of a total of twenty-five hundred Hymnals bound at the Herald Office but twelve have been returned because of defective binding. This is a good showing for our bindery. We admit the proportion of mistakes here, but also point out some others.

Bro. G. R. Wheeler, Streator, Illinois, asks why some of the brethren who write ably on gospel topics do not write on the subject of infidelity. We cannot say unless it be because the literature on the subject is already quite voluminous. Bro. Heman C. Smith has written on "The Bible and the Christian religion," in Autumn Leaves, in a way that is helpful against infidelity. We believe that others of our writers could make new and strong points against infidelity were they disposed to write.

Bro. P. Fisher writes from East Aurora, New York, the 15th inst. That city has a population of two thousand, with nine churches and nine "saloons." Brn. W. H. Kelley and I. M. Smith had done good work there, the people giving them a good hearing. They would be received gladly again by their hearers. The Empire State contributed strongly to the church in the Martyr's time. We believe it will do so again when we have the missionary force to do the work.

Departures during the week of the 16th: Bro. A. H. Smith for Wilber, Nebraska; Bro. E. L. Kelley for Norder, Kansas; both to attend conferences on the 22d and 23d, etc.

Good letter from Bro. H. N. Davis, of Independence. He thinks the position and work of the Reorganization are such as to strongly distinguish it from every remaining faction of the church.

Numbers of good letters are crowded out by extra demands on communication column this week.

Bro. W. C. Cather was at Ozark, Missouri, the 17th laboring in company with Bro. Henry Sparling. Saints there were making an effort to build a church.

Bro. S. W. Simmons is hard at work in the Indian Territory. He wishes to remind the Saints in that field that contributions are necessary to aid the ministry in meeting ordinary expenses of ferriage, horse shoeing, etc., that such aid must be rendered if the ministry are to get around among the people.

Sr. Cynthia Cato, of Reece, Greenwood County, Kansas, asks earnest prayer in behalf of her family that they may obey the truth. She is isolated from the church and unable to take the publications. We sympathize with any so situated.

Bro. D. M. Rudd was at Winterset, Iowa, the 27th inst., near which place he was having splendid interest and attention. He refers to the reported sermon of Dr. Breeden, a Christian or Disciple minister, mentioned in this issue of HERALD, and asks what will be done with leading pulpiteers who discard belief in hell and the doctrine of baptism.

Bro. Daniel Tripp, Montrose, Iowa, writes, much pleased with the labors of Bro. J. S. Snively in the Nauvoo district, the former home of Bro. S. He also commends the labors of Bro. F. M. Weld. He hopes for the appointment of both to that district.

Bro. C. J. Craven reports a distinct victory for the right in the late White-Carter discussion held near Kingston, Missouri. Some of the Christian people themselves rejoiced in the evidences presented and points maintained by Bro. White. He is also to meet Elder Carter of the Christian Church at Kingston, soon.

Bro. R. J. Anthony wrote from Deer Lodge, Montana, the 12th inst. He had made an extensive tour in various portions of his field; preaching, baptizing, ministering to the afflicted in body and in heart, and for the dead in Christ, whom he mentions with touching tributes to their faith and worth. Sickness had occurred in his own family, but recovery was granted and it was not found necessary to call him home. Prospects "a little better" in some parts of his field.

We do not altogether agree with Prof. Bonney's views on conditional immortality, (see cover article this issue,) but insert it as showing the faith of a scientist. We believe in a "conditional immortality" so far as it pertains to degrees of happiness or its opposite; and also believe in the perpetual conscious immortality of all men, as against the annihilation theory.

Conference of Pittsburg and Kirtland district will convene on Saturday, March 7—one week later than formerly announced. See corrected notice of W. H. Garrett, the district president, in this issue.

Bro. R. E. Grant has a double-column article in the Grand Rapids Herald of February 4, in reply to a recent lecture delivered in that city by Colonel Ingersoll. Bro. Grant made some good points and some new ones.

Bro. W. W. Scott advertises for a brother without family to make his home with him. See advertisement. Write him for particulars.

Bro. G. S. Montague wishes the ministry and Saints of the Southwestern mission to take notice that his address to the end of the conference year is care S. J. Hinkle, Stillwater, Oklahoma. He and Bro. R. M. Maloney have labored together during the winter. Seven have obeyed. Many places need work. He thinks six active missionaries should be sent into that field.

Original Poetry.

A PRAYER.

BY E. A. RHODES.

Great Giver of all good look down
From thy celestial throne,
And let thy blessing on me rest
And seal me for thy own.

Thy word is powerful when 'tis read
By Holy Spirit's power;
Be to my soul the living bread
To strengthen hour by hour.

Give courage, Lord, that I may be
A faithful servant unto thee;
Give patience, Father, that I may
Walk closely by thee day by day.

Increase my faith that I may be Pleasing, acceptable to thee;
That by obedience I may come
And dwell within my Father's home.

BRAL FORD, Manchester, England, 1896.

An effort in a new direction is now being made in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, by an organization denominated "The Christian Labor Union." Its purpose is to bring into social relation with the church and with each other the working-people whose means, or rather whose lack of means, forbid their establishing a church,

"Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion, and disdain;
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts beside;
Beguiling them of commendation."

SELECT READING FOR MARCH MEETING OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

AFTER this meeting is duly opened let the first points of discussion be those mentioned in the February reading, in relation to the care of the child's body; namely, How many coats or layers compose the skin? What is the office of each? How must the skin be protected in order to insure the health of the child? At what season of the year is this even covering most likely to be neglected? How may the young child be injured in other ways than by improper clothing? After weaning what is the proper food of a healthy child?

As we take up the volume this morning from which we are making extracts, the earnest wish comes to us that it was possible for every mother to own one. Our meetings are so brief and so far apart and there is so much to be said upon subjects which we have only time to glance at, that we cannot help wishing you all might have one at home from which to study. Because of this we here repeat the title so that those of you who desire to have a copy will know where to get it: "Childhood, Its Care and Culture." By Mary Allen West, The Temple, Chicago.

First, then, in the subject for this reading is considered the vital importance to the child of EXERCISE, FRESH AIR, AND SUNSHINE, and she cautions the tidy mothers lest they unconsciously prefer clean clothes to the healthy development of their child's body. "In the case of clean clothes versus mud pies" she says, "I take the side of the mud pies every time. Not that we would decry that instinct of mother-love which makes her delight to adorn her little ones; we would only direct this instinct into a better channel. Your children can be neatly but so plainly and simply dressed that the washing of their clothes will not be a great burden, and outdoor play will not injure their clothes. Could I convince every mother in the land that the body is really more than raiment, I should feel amply repaid for writing this book."

Here discuss the principle that a child must grow and learn by doing. Older children find it impossible to escape this law of their being. God is a creative being—man made in the image of God is a creative being—and the first principle of education is to make the child practically creative. Instinct leads every child to desire to make something with his own hands. "All the heavy-hearted years that have passed since my own childhood," says Miss West, "have not been sufficient to deaden the remembrance of the delight afforded by a lump of dough, out of which I could model crude images to my heart's content. But even a keener delight was experienced when permitted to make mud pies because these must be made out doors.

"If every father knew how much pleasure a load of dry sand would afford his children and how much it would relieve his wife by keeping the little ones safely, healthfully, and happily employed, he would have one at whatever cost. Give your child a little wooden spade and a little piece of ground for his own."

THE TRAINING OF THE HAND.

"Keep a child's hands busy and you are sure to hold his attention. Neglect of this principle is to blame for the habit of inattention acquired by children and no mental habit is more hurtful for attention lies at the base of all learning—whether it be from books, from nature, or from men. . . . Teachers find a wonderful difference in the faculty with which children of the same age coming to school for the first time, use their hands. Some are so clumsy and awkward that they cannot grasp the pencil, much less use it; other fingers no larger than theirs are dextrous and quick." This she thinks is not due to natural difference, but one has been taught and encouraged to use his hands, while the other has not. When we consider the many demands made upon the hand for skilled work which no machine however perfect is competent to do, this no longer appears a small matter. Nature designed the hands to be used, and the child who is not encouraged to use them either in work or play is as much to be pitied as the child whose hands are so stiffened with rough work and toil that he is forever barred from work where delicate manipulations are required. What is said of the hand with reference to the need of its cultivation, will apply to all the senses.

"Mother-wit will devise many pleasant ways of training the senses if only the need of this training is felt. A little reflection will convince every thoughtful parent that the senses—the avenue to the soul—should be kept in the very best possible condition and that to accomplish this, systematic training is necessary."

TABLE MANNERS.

"Because of a failure on the part of parents in giving attention to the child's table manners many tables are anything but a pleasant place for guests or friends. One untrained child can annoy a tableful. His victuals do not suit him, and he whines or storms; he musses with his food, spills his milk, or if good-natured he talks constantly and usurps the entire time, preventing any connected conversation. These offenses usually arise from the fact that too much prominence has been given to eating and to the character of the food. The child has been pampered until his taste has been vitiated, and he has never been trained to eat what was set before him asking no questions. . . . He has been allowed to think himself the most important personage in the family, to feel that his whims must be attended to, no matter how much they may interfere with the comfort of others; in short, he has not been taught the golden rule. . . . The principles of good behavior, here as elsewhere, are few and simple. Impress them upon the child's mind, not simply by telling, but by doing until right doing becomes habitual. Train children to behave at every meal just as you wish them to behave when you have company or take them visiting. Do not neglect their training when you are alone and expect them to behave when you have company. Nothing betrays good training, or the neglect of it, more certainly than a child's table manners."

NOTE.—We trust that in the light of the importance of the questions with which this reading opens, none may look upon this—prepared for the March meetings—as unimportant. We would suggest it as a good plan, that the one in charge of these meetings should assign to one member the answering of one of these questions and to another the answering of another. In this way they will come prepared and the questions may be intelligently discussed. It is now too late to notify them at the meeting, but you can do it by making a point of seeing them, or if you can't see them, send them a note and ask them not to fail in coming and in coming prepared to answer. Remember, you who are chosen to take charge of these meetings, that upon you depends in a great measure the success or failure of them. A leader must go before, and call upon others to follow. The interest which will exist in your meetings will never rise higher than the interest you feel and manifest in them. Don't forget this.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

THE prayers of the Prayer Union are asked for Sister Penrod, wife of Bro. E. Penrod, of Gans Creek, Nevada. She is troubled with muscular rheumatism, or neuralgia.

Bro. George S. Niles, Gainesville, Texas, wishes your prayers in behalf of his wife, who is suffering with some severe trouble in the head, that if it be God's will it may be removed. This trouble has been working upon her for years with more or less severity, but at present she is very sick and there are no elders near.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR FEBRUARY.

Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he have more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and if he had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires toward God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul.—Mosiah 9: 9.

Thursday, Feb. 27.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established. Memory Verses.—Isaiah 59: 19-21.

A CHILD SUPERINTENDENT.

RARELY indeed does it happen that the person chosen as superintendent of a Sunday school is other than a man or woman of considerable experience, but Mr. W. W. Wheeler, a missionary of the American Sunday School Union in Wisconsin, writes to the Christian Herald concerning a very exceptional case in that State.

Miss Libbie Hettman, is perhaps the youngest Sunday school superintendent in Wisconsin, if not in America. In 1893, Mr. W. W. Wheeler organized a school at Woodman, Wisconsin, which flourished for nearly a year, and then was abandoned for lack of workers. After a few weeks, two little girls, aged between eleven and twelve, being anxious to do something for the Master, decided to try to reorganize and maintain this Sunday school. They secured funds for supplies and began their work, which has been sustained successfully until the present time. At length one of them removed to another place, since which the other, Miss Libbie Hettman, has carried on the school alone.

The school numbers from twelve to twenty. It provides the only regular gathering for public worship in the village, and is doing great good. The missionary visited the school last winter, and conducted the quarterly review, and was very much gratified with the familiarity of the children with the golden texts, and the general teachings of the quarter's lessons. Recently, he revisited the place and Miss Hettman sadly told him the school would have to be abandoned for lack of supplies. He told her he would furnish supplies from funds placed in his hands for such purposes. The little superintendent cried, "O, Mr. Wheeler, you have made me so happy, for I don't want to close the school."

How many places there are in our country where Sunday schools might be maintained, if older Christians but had the spirit of consecration which these little girls have manifested. A little over one dollar was all that was needed to insure the continuance of this girl's good work. There are thousands of godly men and women who, rather than see the little Sunday school at Woodman stopped, would have been given ten times the amount needed for its support.—Christian Herald.

THE above shows what a child may do, and may serve to encourage the children of the true gospel. When we read of Saints who are not near a branch—two or three families in the same neighborhood, we have wondered why they might not have a Sunday school. Send for a few Quarterlies and keep in touch with the work elsewhere. They might claim the promises as well as though they were many; and who knows but through their influence some zealous Libbie Hettman might obey the gospel that comes "not in word only."

We know of a Latter Day Saint girl fifteen years of age who organized and superintended a Sunday school for a number of months—in fact, until her people moved to another locality. She did this without the help of another Saint, and all who attended said she did well.

PREFACE.

NOW WE are, or should be, at work on our lessons. I am deeply interested in our Sunday school column in Herald, and it is that for which I always look first, as each new Herald comes. I do sincerely wish I could be of some assistance to you, for I love this work above all others; and to know one was working with it would be thoughts for comfort. If now and then I can send you a little something which you may feel like using, do so, or not, as in your judgment you deem best. Rest assured it will not offend me if you do not use it, but will feel that it is only after repeated efforts and failures that at last success may come. I want to write something real helpful soon.

"The wounds I might have healed,
The human sorrow and smart!
And yet it never was in my soul
To play so ill a part;
But evil is wrought by want of thought
As well as want of heart."

Do we realize that there is no duty apart from the duty of to-day? Is to-day only a time in which to plan for our future? And shall we give the time up to doubts and fears, or grieving over the past? To-day is our opportunity. We must do our best to-day, be our station in life high or low, our opportunities great or small. Then when time shall have passed into eternity and we view our life's record we need not look back over the years gone by with hearts full of sorrow and remorse over the slighted opportunities. The neglected to-day.

To me there is no department of the Master's work so soul-inspiring, or so refining in its character as the Sunday school work; especially is this true of the earnest faithful worker.

While the benefits may be shared by teacher and pupil, yet to me it seems the thoughtful, conscientious teacher must advance the more rapidly.

Our daily lives should manifest those virtues we are so earnestly striving to impart to our pupils. We know this work belongs to the Master, and it must prevail.

May the Lord bless us all with his Holy Spirit, that we may teach and be taught the ways of eternal life.

NAOMI.

THE prefatory remarks to the article signed "Naomi" were not written for publication, but as they portray the character of the author, we take this means of letting the sweet spirit of her every-day life breathe its own introduction.—ED.

QUESTION DRAWER.

CONDUCTED BY E. K. MOHR.

WHAT is the true aim of the Sunday school? To bring the scholar to Christ, to bring him up in Christ, and to send him out for Christ.

Why should Sunday school teachers be Christians?

Because we cannot teach what we do not know and cannot lead where we do not go. See God's answer in 1 Corinthians 2: 14.

Why do so few schools have teachers' meetings?

The Sunday school does not have the "right-of-way" that its importance demands.

Can a country school have a teachers' meeting?

Many do have. What has been done can be done. Remember what B. F. Jacobs said: "Difficulties are but the silver steps to a golden throne."

If teachers can only attend one evening a week, should the teachers' meeting be omitted?

The teachers' meeting—to the teacher—is far more important than any other meeting can be. Omit the least important.

Give some hints to primary teachers. 1. The attention of the primary class in involuntary. Have variety in your teaching—make much of the "eye-gate." 2. Emphasize only one point in a lesson. 3. Begin with what the children know. 4. Give no thought beyond the child experience. 5. Plan to give each something to do. 6. Expect the conversion of the little ones; pray for it; work for it.

How can we teach Christian giving?

1. Practice the Bible rule, that at least one tenth of our income belongs to Christ and his work; then out of your experience with Scripture and tracts teach it; also teach children how to earn money. 2. Teach that right giving is founded on Love, and remember that the large giver is not always the liberal giver. 3. Show that right giving is always an act of worship. 4. Recognize well-doing. 5. Remember some don'ts,—don't say collection—don't use competitive methods—don't omit the offering any more than prayer or song.

How can the Sunday school teach temperance? 1. By teaching each lesson faithfully. 2. By teaching the school to avoid, to hate, and to fight intoxicating drink. 3. By making something of the quarterly lesson. 4. By holding an occasional temperance service. 5. By presenting the pledge once or twice a year. 6. By placing temperance books in the library. 7. By setting a good example.—Sunday School Advance.

But a greater to die,

Is the path to the sky."

LONDON, ENGLAND, CHAPEL.

AN OPEN LETTER.

26 Vincent Road, Noel Park,
LONDON N., England,
January, 1896.

Bishop Kelley; Dear Brother:—At last, I am pleased to say, our church with the exception of a very few details has been completed. There have been innumerable difficulties in the way of completion, and I am afraid that some of us here were quite under the impression that the building would never be finished, or if finished it would be for the use of others than the original promoters.

The need of a building for church purposes was a want long felt in this city of cities—this mighty metropolis of the world. Confined as we were to out-of-the-way places of worship, it seemed impossible to spread a knowledge of this great latter-day work among the masses, and consequently our efforts to reach them had to be made under the broad canopy of heaven. We were, however, painfully conscious that people, although interested enough to make inquiries, did not care to come to our meetinghouses, and after smarting for many years under the conditions which so handicapped us in our work, we decided that if it were possible for men to accomplish it, we would raise a house for the purposes of worship and for the honor and glory of God.

We were all poor financially, some of us with heavy families to support; but conscious that every little helps, the brethren and sisters contributed nobly, and agreed to fast the first Sunday in each month and devote the self-denial proceeds to the building fund. Although perhaps the contributors numbered less than ten, and although we had on an average about eight shillings per week ($2.00) to pay for the hire of a meeting room, etc., we ultimately succeeded in saving about £50 ($250.00). When we had reached this point Elder Gomer T. Griffiths visited us, and knowing our great need from personal experience, kindly supported a petition made by us to General Conference, which resulted through the kindness of the church authorities and Bro. Stephen Woods, of Lamon, Iowa, interested in our welfare, in a sum being advanced to us which, with the amount we had in hand we thought would be sufficient to enable us to accomplish our object.

The amount altogether was so small that we were quite at a loss to know what sort of a building to erect, and after several meetings of the building committee it was decided to write to builders for tenders for a brick building. The result frightened us, for with one exception all were nearly £100 higher than we were in a position to pay.

The contractors whose tender we accepted, undertook to complete the work for £233, and to finish the work within three months from the commencement of operations. Having felt our way about so far as the actual cost of building was concerned, we formed a sort of "search committee," whose duty it was to look around for a plot of ground that might prove suitable. To people who have never been to this city of 6,000,000 souls, this may appear to be foolish; but I would not be very far out if I made the statement that money is almost easier to find than land in this world-city. I may mention that some time since freehold land was sold in the neighborhood of the Bank of England at the price of £1,000 ($5,000) per square foot, so that it can be very well understood that we were in quite a strait to find a plot of ground whereon to erect a £230 building. However, to continue, we negotiated for the lease of a plot of land in Bow Common Lane, East London, at a rental, on a ninety-nine years' lease, of £10 per year.

The ground landlord's solicitors who had to draw up the agreement for lease, manifested considerable prejudice to our cause, and one of the stipulations was that the building was to be completed before the 25th December, 1895, otherwise we would forfeit all right to the lease. The agreement was executed on the 30th April, and the contract with the builders was at once drawn up and signed by both parties, and operations commenced early in June, with a promise that the church would be ready for occupation the first week in August.

In order that you may fully appreciate our subsequent difficulties I may explain here that the London County Council has the right to inspect all buildings and insist upon such alterations or additions from or to the original plan and specifications as its architects may think fit. It is not in my province to discuss the advantage or otherwise likely to result from this power, but I know that in our case the requisitions of the London County Council were exceedingly inconvenient to comply with. The alteration at first pointed out necessitated an extra expenditure of £25, and there were several minor alterations insisted on subsequently and whether or not the statement was correct, the builders made this an excuse for delaying the work. Day after day and week after week there was little or no work done. We did all we could, short of litigation, to hurry on the completion, and it was only after a threat to place the matter in the hands of a solicitor that anything like an effort was made to finish the work—seven months from the date of commencement.

In the early stage of the negotiations for securing a lease of the land, the lessor's solicitors did all they could to persuade their client to withdraw from the contract to lease, as they argued that a building costing at least £700 should be erected on the land, and that their client would be acting directly contrary to their advice if the lease was granted. It was quite evident that they were very much prejudiced against us, and would only have been too pleased to refuse us the lease if the building had not been completed by the date specified, so that the dilatoriness of the builders caused us very much anxiety.

We have fought with many difficulties. The brethren here are of course all working men, and as we could not afford to pay a solicitor to do the work for us, we had to do the best we could ourselves in our leisure.

The law that obtains as to leaseholds in the counties of Middlesex and Yorkshire is very unfair to the lessee, as the lessee has to pay all the costs in relation to the transaction. We stipulated in the agreement for lease that the lessor's solicitors' costs should not exceed £5; but they have charged us every item under clause 2 of the solicitors' remuneration act, with the result that the bill amounts to £13. 2. 8. If there was any probability of a sixth being struck off we would certainly submit the bill for taxation, but to do so now would be to add to our expenses with but a very slight chance of the costs being reduced. However, thanks be to the Lord, we have secured the lease, and the first quarter's ground rent to the 25th December, 1895, has been paid.

Our architect's bill was £16. 16s. There were of course several details to be paid for that it was impossible to avoid. One of our brethren here is a lawyer's clerk, and he arranged all the legal work on our side without any cost other than out of pocket expenses.

I am delighted to tell you, Bro. Kelley, that we have secured a snug little place wherein to worship "our Father;" and we feel that we are now more advantageously placed for the prosecution of the great latter-day work than we have ever been before; and we pray that the seed which has been so patiently sown for many years in London may now be watered for the honor and glory of God. Four blessed souls already have passed through the waters since the opening service. The hall seats about one hundred and twenty people.

The church was opened on Sunday, the 22d December, Elder James Caffall being in charge. It was a soul-satisfying pleasure to see the local people crowding in; and whatever prejudice may have been felt against us in the neighborhood, we feel sure that the wonderful efforts of our wonderful aged brother have and will dispel it. His sermons are full of logic and convincing argument. I do not say this to flatter, but because it is the truth, and is an evidence that the great God honors his servant.

It is a source of much satisfaction to us that the Lord has so far blessed our weak, faltering efforts as to give us a house wherein to worship him; and through you, Bro. Kelley, I desire on behalf of the London Saints to express their heartfelt gratitude to the brethren and sisters who have assisted us, and to ask an interest in the prayers of the whole church that the little hall we feel so proud of may be the birthplace of many happy souls.

It is, of course, the desire of the Saints here in London that the building should become church property, and as foreigners can, since the passing of the "Alien Property Act" in 1870, hold property in this country, there will be no difficulty in the matter. Will you therefore kindly let me know at your early convenience what is necessary for us to do to effect an assignment of the lease from the trustees to the church committee. If it is necessary to send you the original lease, this, of course, can be done; or if not, a copy can be sent to you with a tracing of the ground plan showing the position of the property. If the original is sent to you we can of course always have access to the counterpart in the hands of the lessor's solicitors.

The building will be photographed later on, and when the picture is ready an announcement will be made in the Herald so that the brethren and sisters who desire to secure a copy, and so materially help us, will kindly note and watch for notice.

Sincerely thanking you personally for the trouble you have taken in connection with our building, I am yours on behalf of the London Saints and for the progress of the kingdom,

J. D. HOWELL.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Feb. 3.

Editors Herald:—Present appearances are very encouraging in this part of the vineyard. Baptisms are of frequent occurrence, and outside interest seems to be on the increase, in the city of Manchester and the neighboring borough of Salford. The church controls four good-sized meeting rooms, all of which are well attended on Sunday evenings, by both Saints and strangers interested in the gospel claims as propounded by our Father's messengers. Never at any previous time since my connection with the work in this neighborhood (which extends over a period of fifty years,) has the latter-day work had such a firm hold on the people as it has here today.

As a church we are not only tolerated, but I feel justified in saying that we are respected by many if not all of the religious denominations around us, both Church of England, Roman Catholics, and dissenters. We have four flourishing Sunday schools, besides other organizations that are auxiliary to the work in the before-mentioned district; while Leeds and Wigan are likewise doing well. Farnsworth branch moderate. President Caffall is, I learn, in London.

Yours in bonds,

JOSEPH DEWSNUP, SEN.

SWANSEA, South Wales, Feb. 5.

Editors Herald:—One noteworthy feature of the Church of Christ is the prevalence of a universal spirit of sympathy which knits together in one firm unison thousands of souls separated by the physical and material intervention of space. But in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Greeks, whether bond or free; and were all made to drink of one Spirit; therefore, we ourselves do not marvel that this oneness exists, but rather look upon it as the logical and necessary sequence of our discipleship in Christ Jesus.

The work in this portion of the Lord's vineyard has long been under a dark cloud, which seemed absolutely to prevent any progress whatever; but I am glad to say that this cloud appears to be dispersing and that a gleam of light is reaching us here and there from between its rifts, which promises to ultimately develop into the full sunshine of prosperity. Though the battle before us will be for some time very stubborn and hard to endure, yet I believe that victory is assured us, and that many will cast aside the armor of the vanities of this world and don that of Christ Jesus. Thus our little army here will increase in the due time of the Lord, till we shall have to cry out, "Give us room that we may dwell;" this all provided the brethren and sisters of this district do their duty faithfully before God.

We are awaiting the first signs of spring for the commencement of an active evangelical work, which will no doubt arouse against us the ire of the pastors and teachers of the day, but which will, through the very fact of the opposition, do some good.

From latest reports of the Llanelly and Morriston branches it seems as though the Saints in these places are likely to increase both spiritually and numerically, and I trust that the same may occur in the Pontyates branch. I would like all the Saints to carefully consider the appeal from the Morriston branch, and see whether they can help us; the smallest contribution will be very thankfully received; and remember, dear readers, the old Scotch aphorism: "Many a mickle makes a muckle."

The chapel is offered to us at a very low price, the original cost being £275 ($1,342), and if we are able to purchase it, we shall have a place of refuge and shelter for I trust, many years. It is well seated with comfortable forms (movable backs), has a pulpit, flanked with seats for officers, while underneath the pulpit is a place for a baptismal font. There is a little porch to the chapel with double doors and also a separate entrance by a small vestry, the latter room being seated and containing a cupboard. The whole is lighted by gas. The acquisition of the chapel will minister greatly to the advancement of the work and will bring about, I feel sure, an increase in the number of Saints. We ask all to help us according as God has blessed them, and by so doing they will be laying up treasure in heaven where "neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal."

Yours in bonds,

President of the Western District of Wales.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—Had a good interest at Macedonia; Bro. J. M. Kelley secured the opera house which was well filled each evening. The Methodist tried to hold a previously announced temperance meeting, but failed, no one being out. The M. E. Minister and the temperance lecturer came to me the next day and solicited the privilege of using part of my time the following evening. I graciously consented, congratulating myself that conditions were changing so that instead of not being able to get a hearing we were so far enlisting the attention of the people that "Orthodoxy" must request to use a part of the time in our "heretical" meetings in order to reach the people. Am having crowded houses at Crescent and will continue there another week. Have been requested to address the "working-men's club" here on Sunday evenings, but was forced to decline.

Bro. Spurlock has my congratulations when he says, "I tried to use no slang phrases in debate, believing such to be out of place on such occasions. I treated my opponent and his congregation with such kindness that we gained friends." This is always the result! If we do not respect others we cannot expect respect from them. This wholesale denunciation of the ministry of other churches and impugning by act and word that they are dishonest is beneath the dignity of the ministers of the meek and lowly Jesus. I find many, many honest men among them and while they are in the dark, and possibly prejudiced, their condition should elicit our sympathy rather than innuendoes and wholesale assault. It is offensive to hear my brother refer to the ministers of other churches as "hirelings," "emissaries of the Devil," etc. It is not argument and never has done any good. Calling names never made a convert. Deal with principle, not personal reflections. As to salary, Webster defines it as meaning "an allowance given." Our ministry get an "allowance" and in that sense receive salaries and some of our brethren having large families receive more than some of those denominated "hirelings." Hundreds of them are making sacrifices in foreign lands which are commendable even in their darkness.

By treating the temperance lecturer with courtesy at Macedonia, I have made him my friend, as he told me afterwards, "Mr. Williams, I have learned more about your church than I ever knew before. Why, you are as much orthodox as any! When I hear those lies about you hereafter I shall deny them!" Had I not treated him as was my duty he would have still been an enemy. Several of the ministers in Council Bluffs are friends because of a civil treatment. It pays to be courteous, kind, and respectful. If we would give every minister, yea every man, the credit of being honest until proven otherwise, it would be much better. I know when others publicly speak about our church and doctrine as some of our elders do about theirs we are offended in a moment and feel that we have been terribly abused. "As ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them." If we do not like to have our religion made sport of we should be consistent and not make sport of others. It does not look well, when we go into a community, to assume an arrogant air and commence to challenge everybody, calling on all the ministers in the town to come out and meet us, and if they do not to denounce them as cowards. I know, if I was not a member, and I saw an elder do this, I would never become a Latter Day Saint under his ministrations! It would beget disgust rather than respect. Christ said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." He was to draw in the spirit of love, not with a challenging, charging spirit. I do not know that we have any moral right to demand that other ministers come to our meetings and if they do not to brand them as cowards. They may not desire to attend our meetings and not be cowards either! We do not attend the meetings of others much more than they do ours. Permit me here to state that if every effort of my life shows as complete results as that of my article on "Ministerial Slang" I shall be content. The Herald and Ensign have had less slang and erroneous expressions during the present year than in the preceding one. My object in writing was for good; good has resulted, and while it was unfortunate that some took personal offense and answered in a spirit that did not merit personal recognition by me, it is nevertheless encouraging that even they have markedly improved. Success to you, brethren! Because Solomon and others used language that to-day seems obscene and vulgar, and the Bible contains the same, does not warrant us in following their example, or even that we talk "slang." There is language in the Bible that I would not like to read before a mixed assembly and which I believe every other elder would refrain from reading. Exaggeration is as reprehensible as "slang," and it was these two things that I objected to. Bro. Carpenter's reference to the publication of debates I think commendable. These various synopses, meagre as they are, do not do justice to the speakers and are largely a repetition one of the other, while a well-written article by some of these able brethren, presenting the salient points which are controverted would be far better, and would, I believe, be more appreciated by the editor. Again it is not always necessary to give all the minutiae of ministerial life or reunion meetings and I for one think that the request of the Herald editor of recent date as to long communications be not overlooked.

As to the dream of Sr. S—, of Lamoni, relating to Christ's coming—Saints ask me, "Bro. Williams, will Christ come next April?" and invariably I have answered, "No! not in a Bible sense, at least!" Christ may appear to some (and he may not) as he did at the endowment in the early church, but as to his personal coming it cannot consistently occur so soon. As to the coming of Nephi to our Oregon brother, it may be true; but if Nephi has such communications to make I would think he should recognize the head of the church, and farther, I do not think he could properly designate another as a "seer and translator" so long as the present President of the Church lives who is a "seer, a revelator, a translator, and a prophet; having all the gifts of God which he bestows upon the head of the church." (D. C. 104:42.) Such communications stir up the Saints, leaving many with no opportunity for decision. While having respect for others' opinions I do not propose to accept anything unless it appeals to my reason and is in line with God and truth.

I note that a recent writer criticises our ministry because they have clean, white shirts, collars, etc., and try to keep the dust off their shoes. Which is best, to be cleanly and maintain a respectable appearance, or to go around with a dirty shirt, the results of several dinners over front of coat and vest, with dirty shoes, etc., when it does not cost any more to be clean? May God help us to be consistent; to do only that which is commendable and good and while not hastily rejecting anything, yet carefully investigating everything and accepting nothing unless it appeals to our "spiritual understanding."

The church was crowded to overflowing last Sunday evening. Am giving a series of "historical church lectures" which I trust will prove beneficial. It is to be hoped that the brethren in Kirtland can lower their price for board during General Conference or many will stay away.

Yours very truly,
T. W. WILLIAMS.

POLLOCK, Mo., Feb. 13.

Editors Herald:—I left home on January 16 for present field of labor. Stopped over night with Bro. A. M. Crofford, of Lineville, Iowa; then went to Centerville; stayed there four days and preached four times to the Saints in a private house.

Leaving there I came here, and after finding Bro. J. F. Petre and others of the Saints near by we commenced preaching in Holiday church, which is controlled by the Christians. We got along very well, but the Christians took occasion to get an elder to come in unawares and after service told the people he had come there to help us, stating he would follow me and straighten out some of the kinks; so on Sunday following he followed and gave out that on Monday at 10:30 we would continue. On Monday we met and agreed to debate the church propositions, so after we had spent four days of four hours each he found that there were more kinks on his side than he bargained for, and instead of answering my Bible evidences in favor of our position, he resorted to the very worst statements he could find in Buel's history of the Mormons. I showed that it was not a reliable history and false in many instances; but what seemed to do the people the most good to offset his old stories was the testimony of William Yardly, a citizen of this place, who was at Kansas City as a petit jurymen when Judge Philips rendered his decision. This man testified that the Judge said that the church did not teach or practice polygamy, but that the apostate church under Brigham Young was responsible for it.

In the elder's zeal to overthrow the work he said we held to the Book of Mormon instead of the Bible and said, "We have got a Bible and don't need any more," etc. I turned and read from the Book of Mormon where it says the Gentiles will say, We have "a Bible" and don't need any more; thus proving by his own words that one prophecy of the book was true. In his reply to this he said of course Joseph Smith knew they would say that. But when I proved that the book further taught that after the Gentiles would scourge the Indians, yet they would be a father to them, and showed by the facts how true this is now, how we feed, clothe, and educate them, etc, he made no reply.

This debate has done an immense amount of good in allaying prejudice, making friends, and scattering the good seed. Many are inquiring after the truth and we expect to see an ingathering of souls into the church here at no distant day. We are holding meetings every night at a church three miles from where the debate was held, and we intend to make another effort there ere long, unless they close the house against us. I hear that the elder told them to do so and to buy out the Saints here and get rid of them.

Brn. Petre and Burch are assisting me in the work and if they continue faithful will be a great help in publishing the gospel in this country. They are alive to the work and though young in the cause they have regular appointments to preach. The Lord did not fail me when standing in defense of his truth, for which I feel thankful.

In bonds,

COURT OF APPEALS' DECISION.

THE denial by the United States Supreme Court of the writ asking that the Temple Lot case be certified to that tribunal to be heard upon its merits, leaves the status of the parties to the action as fixed by the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the opinion filed September 30, 1895, and upon application for rehearing, a per curiam opinion by said court filed December 9 following.

The objections interposed by the court to sustaining the judgment and decree of the United States Circuit Court in awarding the property in controversy to the Reorganized Church are:—

1. That the legal title to the land in controversy had not been transferred to the Complainant Corporation at the time of the commencement of the action.

2. That the questions involved should have been determined by a court of law and not by a suit in chancery.

3. That the Reorganized Church was guilty of laches in asserting its claims to the lot in controversy and therefore not entitled to the equitable relief sought.

In order to reach the final conclusions of the court, however, it will not be necessary to examine minutely the first and second objections presented, for the court in the opinion rendered on the petition for rehearing, submitted by counsel, say:—

With reference to the suggestion contained in the petition for a rehearing that the decree of the Circuit Court should have been reversed with leave to amend the bill, it is only necessary to say, that such action would probably have been taken but for the fact that it seemed evident, after a full consideration of the testimony, that the bill of complaint could not be so amended as to avoid the defense of laches. For that reason it was deemed best to avoid further litigation and expense by directing the Circuit Court to dismiss the bill.

Accepting the Court's own showing then, the only material question in the case standing in the way of recovery of the Temple Lot property by the Reorganized Church, is the doctrine of laches;—that the church slept upon its rights. Which simply means that the Complainant was too late in asserting its claims and pressing its suit.

The questions of succession of the Reorganized Church to the original Church of the Latter Day Saints, and its soundness in faith, doctrine, and organization according to the constitution and laws governing in said original church, are left just as they were stated under the findings of the trial Judge in the United States Circuit Court.

That opinion of the Circuit Court sets forth that the Reorganized Church is the true and lawful successor to the original church of the Latter Day Saints and entitled to succeed to all its rights and properties. That the lot in controversy was trust property held for the use and benefit of said original church and is not now held by an innocent purchaser for value. That no other church was found to be in agreement with the said original church or entitled to hold the property in question.

A decree therefore was entered in favor of the said Reorganized Church giving it the possession of the property that the original trust might be carried out.

By the Court of Appeals' decision the Reorganized Church is in harmony with the original, and in lawful succession and entitled to its rights and properties; but touching the particular property in question the Reorganized Church was slow in asserting its claims and therefore must be denied. You may be right in your claims but the court cannot help you.

This finding is in such strict harmony with the memorable answer of President Martin Van Buren to the petitioners asking redress of the wrongs of the Saints when they were first driven from their lands in Missouri, as to suggest a repetition of history: "Your cause is just, but I can do nothing for you." The doctrine of State Sovereignty was at that time so imperial in America that, although twelve thousand citizens were cruelly driven from their homes by the fanaticism of pro-slavery adherents and misguided religious zealots headed by the Governor of the State, and under a spirit of mob rule as unreasonable and intolerant as is the hardened Turk in his dealings with the Armenian; yet, no power was found in the Federal Constitution that would permit the chief executive of the nation to respond to the call for help.

It is well that this narrow and un-American view of the powers couched in that document has received its death-blow; and that now justice and order are possible in the nation, although the presence of the Federal soldiery in a State, may be necessary to this end, before formal request by its Governor.

No thought is entertained in this review of impugning the motives, or in the least discrediting the ability of the honorable and distinguished members of this High Court of Appeals. It is too often the case in the work of the Judicial department of the Government that the defeated party to a contest charges undue influence or corruption as an excuse for his defeat. Such a course can hardly be too severely deprecated, striking as it does at the very citadel of our rights and liberties.

The evidence in this Temple Lot contest was voluminous, and with the exhibits introduced, very unwieldy; many of the questions were unique and difficult of solution, even by a court of justice, and the court without very great research of the testimony would have to take on the character of infallibility not to be possibly mistaken. In such a case it becomes much more clearly the duty of counsel in their briefs to present evidences correctly and aid the court in its work.

It the consideration of the case the view taken by the honorable trial Judge of the unity of the trust and clear knowledge of the same as between the parties to the action and the public, seemed so fully supported by the testimony of both Complainant and Respondents' witnesses as to make the thought of a contrary view out of the question.

Upon this, however, the honorable Court of Appeals says:—

The case, therefore, is not one where the title to church property is undisputed and the trust upon which it was originally conveyed is admitted and a controversy has arisen between rival church factions as to which is the proper beneficiary of the trust, a controversy growing out of the fact that one or the other faction has abandoned the original faith or has altered the form of church government. In such cases, no doubt, a court of equity has jurisdiction to inquire into matters of faith and discipline, and to determine, in view of such inquiry, who is the proper beneficiary, and, as such, entitled to the use, custody, and control of the church property. But in the suit at bar the respective parties assert different legal titles held by different persons, upon different trusts or for the use of different religious sects or congregations.

Defendants' Counsel claimed in their brief separate and distinct trusts even denying the original trust and argued that their clients were entirely independent. And the Court in the Statement of the case among other denials of the Defendants, says:—

They denied that Edward Partridge acquired the title to said lands in trust for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Upon the conclusion of the trial, however, the Defendants themselves repudiate the claims made for them and in the first issue of a paper published by them called the Search Light, boldly send out this statement:—

Now that the Temple Lot suit is settled the humble saints with a good store of faith should importune the Almighty to start the work towards building a temple on the lot to his honor. While the "Hedrickites" feel to rejoice that the Almighty has seen fit to allow them to remain in possession, still they regard the property as belonging to the Lord and will only be too glad to either lead or assist whenever the Lord shall further reveal his will concerning this consecrated spot of ground—but they insist on knowing that the Lord is behind any movement in that direction.

The claim for a purely local church; the denial of the consecration and setting apart of this particular ground for certain purposes; the denial of the trust and just claims of the original church are all abandoned within one week's time after the dismissal of the case.

Not only this, but in the same issue they say:—

The Reorganized Church filed a motion for a new trial but it was by the Court overruled and the Church of Christ at Independence, known sometimes as Hedrickites, was declared a part of the great Mormon Church as organized A. D., 1830, despite the contention of the Reorganized Church that they were heretical. The Reorganized Church should now be satisfied with the result, as they forced the question into the Courts of the land for a decision and the courts of the land have said that we have proven ourselves a portion of the church as organized A. D., 1830, and that the claim of the Reorganized Church that we were heretical was not founded on fact, and also that we had bought and paid for the Temple Lot in good faith and that we should not be disturbed by the Reorganized Church.

If this is not going back upon the decision and their own claims before the Court of Appeals and admitting by deduction and inference the correctness of the findings of the United States Circuit Court in awarding the property because originally impressed with a specific trust, to the Reorganized Church, then they have failed to express themselves.

From the first in this case we claimed for the Reorganized Church, that it could better afford to lose the case and be right, than to win and be wrong. Time will vindicate the truth of the proposition.

We might stop and ask, Where in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is to be found the statement declaring "the Hedrickites a part of the great Mormon Church as organized A. D., 1830;" but the claim made by them of the Courts' decision to this effect is so far out of the way that it calls for no reply either by interrogation or argument.

What the Court in the opinion passes upon, and the only thing, is the question as to whether the Complainant had used diligence in bringing its suit to recover the property; and in canvassing this question in its results in placing a cloud upon the title to the remainder of the sixty-three acres of the Partridge tract if the deed of March 28, 1839, to the minor children of Oliver Cowdery was sustained, together with the circumstance of the erection of the local church building at Independence by the Independence members of the complainant society, entirely outside of the sixty-three acre tract, the court says:—

In view of the foregoing facts, we think that the plaintiff church and those whom it claims to represent have been guilty of such laches as should bar them from all relief in the forum of equity, even though it appeared that the premises in controversy were originally held in trust by Edward Partridge for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and even though it appeared that the Reorganized Church is at this day the legitimate successor of the original beneficiary.

The expressed fear of the Court upon the matter of casting a cloud upon the title to the remainder of the tract of 63 acres is mainly answered in the opinion itself, for it says:—

It is doubtless true that many of the occupants of the property in question, whose titles are clouded by the present litigation, could, if put to the test, show a good title to the respective lots of land by them occupied by adverse possession for more than ten years.

Of this there is little or no question; besides, in the case at bar it is shown outside of the paper title, by public and common repute, that the Complainant's rights were fully known, so that none need mistake them. The special and pious use to which this particular piece had been set apart and dedicated was notorious. Known and well understood by all, and fully admitted in the testimony of the defendants themselves. No other part or parcel of the said tract had been so impressed.

The objection that a cloud would be placed upon titles to the other part of this tract in the face of the fact, that Complainant was only seeking to recover that which it is admitted the church was by mob violence deprived of, and when not one foot of land was claimed except that which was formerly held for church and not individual uses, seems too technical to stand for a moment between a single individual and the restoration of his rights. Giving fair and full consideration to all sides of this question it does not yet appear, wherein the findings of the United States Circuit Court were inequitable.

Aside from these matters already noticed the principal reasons offered by the Court for applying the doctrine of laches in this case are quoted verbatim from the "Opinion" as follows:—

In the case at bar it is conceded that besides paying taxes the defendants built a church on the lots in suit in the year 1882, and that they have occupied it continuously since that day as a house of worship. No notice of an existing adverse claim to the property was given to the defendants while the structure in question was being erected, nor for more than five years thereafter, although, as it seems, a congregation of the Reorganized Church occupied another edifice in close proximity to the premises and were doubtless well aware of the improvements that were being made on the property in controversy.

The most surprising thing about this is, that the Court was so far misled as to the testimony; nor can we offer any solution unless it was by accepting the misleading assertions of counsel for Appellants as true, without examination and comparison of the evidence in the case. No such concession was, or could truthfully have been made in the case. The church building referred to was not begun until, 1887, instead of, 1882. Immediately upon the beginning of the work on this building the notice mentioned in the Opinion of the Court of date of June 11, 1887, was served upon the Defendants, and due notice given before a great part of the taxes referred to were paid. This is clearly set forth in the testimony in the case. Record 490, 279. Instead of waiting five years after the building was begun before giving notice of an adverse claim, not one year, nor one month elapsed. In fact, the notice was given the very day the Bishop of the Reorganized Church learned that lumber had been taken to the ground by the Defendants avowedly for the purpose of erecting a building.

Did these questions arise, or rest upon contradictory evidence, no criticism of the conclusions of the honorable Court would be offered; but it seems not only unfair to Complainant, but also to the honorable Circuit Court who passed upon the facts in the trial below, to let this misconception and mis-statement of the testimony pass unnoticed. How the honorable Court of Appeals came to be misled as to the facts touching upon this point it is not the purpose of this article to inquire; but it is apparent that if it was by the misstatement of the evidence by the Defendants' Counsel, and the matters became material, as suggested in the Opinion of the Court, that then the result was a fraud; and the decision another great injustice wrought against the Complainant Church.

Under the subsequent statements of the Defendants, made at once upon announcement of the final order of dismissal, no other alternative presents itself, unless we accept that of the prejudices of the Court against what has been termed the "Mormon religion;" and the crimes of the world against equity and justice by reason of intolerance and prejudice are so black and horrifying in the nineteenth as well as former centuries, that we prefer to believe that no high court in the Republic could be moved or misguided by any such intolerant or anti-Christian sentiment.

The assumption has passed that the fact that the Defendants came to Independence at the time that they did and began to buy out claimants to this land, shows that the Complainant Church would not have been molested in an earlier attempt to recover the premises. But how does this become true? Is it justice to say that the Complainant must be restored to its rights by rebuying the land? A citizen of Europe or Africa who never had in any way one penny's interest in the original claim could as well have been restored. But in this case the question is, When shall American citizens who have for opinion's sake been by mob violence driven from their lands in one of the United States, and interdicted by official order of the Governor of such State from ever returning under penalty of death, be restored, without being asked to repurchase their properties?

The Opinion, per curiam, of the honorable Circuit Court of Appeals in a very able and masterly argument lays down the doctrine of laches in this country; but in the application of the same, according to the strict rule there laid down, to trust property held for pious and charitable uses in a suit where laches was never plead as a defense, this case so far as our research has been possible, may claim the distinction of standing alone.

Lapse of time and the absence of evidence showing diligence of a party in asserting his claim are not alone sufficient to determine the question of laches. The exceptions to the enforcement of the doctrine are equal to the rule. Delay by act of the adverse party; negotiations for compromise; confidence fairly reposed in adverse party, are all circumstances which may be shown in defense of the plea. In this suit, the fact that the Defendants were making efforts to place a mortgage upon the property to be held by the Utah Church, as set out in the evidence in the letters of Mr. Charles A. Hall, who was at that time the presiding officer of the Defendant Church, hastened the action taken by the Complainant. This of itself was sufficient to suggest the fact of former negotiations and acts held out by adverse party, hopeful of compromise. To refuse an inquiry into this is certainly inequitable.

The Hedrickite Church from the beginning of the suit, and in their paper since the close, complain because the Reorganized Church, "appealed to the courts of the land for redress." They forget that no suit was entered until steps were taken by them with a view to placing the lot under mortgage and thereby defeat the claims of the Reorganization. Is it equity that after the Reorganized Church has looked to a settlement of its claims, trusting the statements made by the Defendants, that: "They were holding the property for the church in succession of the original church, and if the Reorganized Church was such they would turn over the property when needed," until positive evidence is learned of an attempt by Defendants to change the status of the property by mortgage, and the Reorganized Church at once brings its suit to recover, to then enforce the doctrine of laches? If so, the more forbearing and patient a party is in order to effect a settlement through peaceable efforts, before asking the aid of a court of Chancery, the less favor he must find in the court. Does this kind of success satisfy the Defendants?

Since the dismissal of the case the Hedrickites admit the original trust in this property; admit the consecration for the purpose of a temple by the original church; admit that there has been no abandonment of that claim either by the church or the divine mind that first directed the consecration; all these were the positions of the Reorganized Church in the suit and not the positions of the Hedrickites; this being true it is not difficult to see that equity and justice in the case were dispensed by Judge John F. Philips of the United States Circuit Court; for, it will not do to say that the Reorganized Church is the proper succession to the original church, and then say it cannot have the property consecrated by the said original church for church purposes, as stated by the Court of Appeals. That would make Deity favor the doctrine of unjustly taking property consecrated by commandment for the use of a particular people and giving it to others who are not entitled. This will never do; churches must be consistent in their claims at least; if this property rightfully belongs to the Reorganized Church by reason of its being in succession as stated in the proposition of the Court of Appeals, then the Hedrickites cannot in conscience hold it on the plea of laches, and at the same time affirm the divine appointment of the original church.

But whatever may be said of the results of the trial so far as the decision of the Court of Appeals is concerned, the Reorganized Church in the prosecution of the case has performed a duty and fulfilled a trust enjoined under the revelations of the original church which no other body has even attempted. In fact it may be truly said that the work of the church has been one of fulfilling the predictions of that early time. The beginning of the Reorganization and the untiring work of its President proves this. In the revelation defining the work of the rightful successor in the office of President given in February, 1831, the statement is made:—

For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

Brigham Young in his assumption of the Presidential office instead of teaching the revelations which were received claimed that they were superceded by a living priesthood, and "were not worth the ashes of a rye straw or a last year's almanac."

The Hedrickites on the other hand show the falsity of their claim by denying outright many of the revelations that were received "through" the President of the original church referred to. In contrast with the work of the foregoing the President of the Reorganized Church has devotedly taught the revelations that were given through that lawfully "appointed" one, both before and after 1831.

At the beginning of the work of the original church the following commandment was given:—

Thou shalt ask, and my scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety; and it is expedient that thou shouldst hold thy peace concerning them, and not teach them until ye have received them in full. And I give unto you a commandment that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people.

The emphatic declaration made here that the translation of the Scriptures "shall be preserved in safety," has been literally fulfilled, and thirty-six years after the publishing of it the manuscript was delivered by the custodian to the Reorganized Church and this church was the instrument again in fulfilling the prediction and commandment of giving and teaching them to the world, and no attempt even, has ever been made by any other society to either circulate or teach these Scriptures as stated.

The Defendants in the suit for the Temple Lot objected to the Reorganized Church because it accepted and published the translation of the Scriptures referred to in this revelation of 1831; at the same time they admitted that the revelations up to about 1834 were divine and given of the Lord. O, consistency!

After the expulsion of the Saints from this Temple Lot and other lands in Missouri in the year, 1833, the commandment to ask redress through the processes possible under the law is given as follows:—

Let them importune at the feet of the judge; and if he heed them not, let them importune at the feet of the governor; and if the governor heed them not, let them importune at the feet of the president.

The further statement is also made:—

What I have said unto you, must needs be, that all men may be left without excuse; that wise men and rulers may hear and know that which they have never considered.

No one of the many claimants to succession in the Original Church of the Latter Day Saints has at any time even attempted to carry out the instruction and enlighten the Judges and wise men of the nation upon the fact of the horrors and wrongs perpetrated against the society at that time except the Reorganized Church.

It cannot be said that the adverse decision of the Court of Appeals in anywise shows that the Church was not in the line of duty because of the adverse decision to the Reorganization. The further statement in the revelation intimates that the success would be as it is. It is clear and as follows:—

"Therefore, it is my will that my people should claim, and hold claim, upon that which I have appointed unto them, though they should not be permitted to dwell thereon; nevertheless, I do not say they shall not dwell thereon; for inasmuch as they bring forth fruit and works meet for my kingdom, they shall dwell thereon; they shall build, and another shall not inherit it; they shall plant vineyards, and they shall eat the fruit thereof.

What the Reorganized Church has done then has been in the line of duty under the law of the same, and the interests of right and justice between man and man, and to the children of faith. The work will have its reward if it has been done faithfully and well; and although the gross wrongs have not received the redress deserved, it will continue to press its claims for restoration and redress until the outrages perpetrated against these Christian people and American citizens in their own country shall have been redressed.

LAMONT, IOWA, February 21, 1896.

FINDING THE TWENTY-FOUR GOLDEN PLATES OF ETHER.—No. 2.

(No. 1 was published in HERALD of October 30, 1895.)

ELDER I. N. WHITE;

Dear Sir:—The papers containing our first articles on the above subject came to hand and found me sick, which will explain this delay. Three times in your reply you accuse me of doing and saying things cunningly; that is to say I made what I knew to be a dishonest argument.

Now I want you to understand that I never have and never will attempt to defend my positions by what I know to be a cunningly devised argument. If my positions cannot be sustained by honest arguments, let them fall to the ground. It is within the scope of legitimate discussion for me to discuss the Book of Mormon and show its absurdities when discussing your church proposition, because it is held by you as an article of faith. But, to the question at issue.

I quoted the passage about Moroni hiding his plates at Cumorah only to show that the last battle of the Jaredites was fought there, as anyone can see by reading my article. Who acted "cunningly" in this, you or I? You accuse me of "cunningly" leaving out a portion of the quotation from page 532. I only left it out to save space, not knowing that it would have any bearing on the question. But as you have introduced it we will examine it. You say:—

I give the quotation as it is in the book, with the part which you left out italicised.

And the Lord spoke unto Ether, and said unto him, Go forth. And he went forth, and beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled; and he finished his record; (and the hundredth part I have not written); and he hid them in a manner that the people of Limhi did find them.

The reader will notice that the difference between us is that I say Ether had beheld the destruction which came upon the people and finished his record "as he dwelt in the cavity of a rock," and hid it right there, at Cumorah; while you say,—

Could Ether sit down up there at Cumorah and witness that all the nations had been destroyed when the capital city and central government had been down in Central America? No, sir, he must go over the ground. . . . No, sir, Ether must have gone back to the capital, or the regions thereof, which was in Central America, and there finished his record right in the vicinity of where the people of Zarahemla landed.

This is what inspired Elder White says about it. Now let us see what inspired Moroni says about it.

And he [Ether] hid himself in the cavity of a rock by day, and by night he went forth viewing the things which should come upon the people. And as he dwelt in the cavity of a rock, he made the remainder of this record, viewing the destructions which come upon the people by night.—Page 527: 2.

And it came to pass that Ether did behold all the doings of the people.—P. 531: 7.

Inspired White says "he must go over the ground and see empty cities," etc., while inspired Moroni represents him as viewing all as it occurred. Inspired White says "Ether must have gone back to the capital, or the regions thereof, which was in Central America, and there finished his record;" while inspired Moroni says, "And as he dwelt in the cavity of a rock he made the remainder of this record, viewing the destructions which come upon the people by night" (italics mine). Now if that is not a positive contradiction, I do not know how to frame one. Are both of these men inspired? If not, there is no truth in your claims.

You say:—

The book itself spoils your theory that Ether could not have gone back to South America by telling us that Coriantumr did go back there, etc.

That is one of the book's absurdities that does not have to be proved. If all the people on this continent were destroyed but you, who believes you could live to make the trip from New York to South America, where you locate Zarahemla? Suppose you try it overland with the people all living and see how easy the journey. The only reasonable way to account for these absurdities being in the book is that the man who wrote the book never intended to locate Cumorah in New York; but Smith could not go to Central America, so he located it where he lived so he could find the plates.

You undertake to set me "straight" on the geography of the Book of Mormon and proceed to locate Zarahemla in South America. In this you are probably in harmony with the book, but in direct conflict with the other inspired men of your church. Mr. Kelley places it in Yucatan. If you say I mistake Mr. Kelley, there is no mistaking Simon Smith. In the Herald of November 13, 1895, he places it (Zarahemla) between Honduras and Tehautepec, which embraces Yucatan and little else. Now as inspired Smith contradicts inspired White, what are we to do?

You claim the plates were found in "Desolation," which country had its southern boundary on the Isthmus." In this you again contradict Elder Simon Smith, who says it was "in Mexico proper where the twenty-four plates, the history of the Jaredite people, was found by the people of Limhi, and not in Central America."

You put a wrong construction on the language of the book when you say Desolation "is referred to as 'the land which had been peopled, and been destroyed, of whose bones we have spoken, which was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; it being the place of their first landing.'"

The following is the true construction of the passage. I put the antecedent of the pronoun "it" in brackets thus:—

And it [the land Bountiful] bordered on the land which they called Desolation; it [Desolation] being so far northward, that it [Desolation] came into the land which had been peopled, and been destroyed, of whose bones we have spoken, which was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; it [the land into which Desolation "came" or opened where the plates were found] being the place of their first landing.—Page 267.

Where was the place of their first landing? The quotation above shows it to be North America; you say it was "Desolation [Central America];" Simon Smith says it was "in Mexico;" while the "Visions of Joseph Smith the Seer," page 21, 23, says they "landed in North America." Which of these inspired men must we believe?

A land having the "Caribbean Sea on one side and the great Pacific Ocean on the other" is not a "land of many waters," if you did say so. Again I repeat there is no other land described in the book that fills the measure but that around Cumorah.

Thus we see that you, in trying to defend your book against the absurd story that Limhi's forty and three people traveled ten thousand miles through an unbroken wilderness, involve yourself in five or six plain contradictions against the inspired writers of your own church. Does inspiration contradict itself thus?

Those who heard the debate will remember that this story of Limhi's people traveling ten thousand miles through the wilderness was only one out of nine similar extravagant stories of the book which I exposed, yet it was the only one you in any way denied. What of the other eight? This has been written little at a time as I have been able to write.

Conference Minutes.

EASTERN MAINE.

Conference held at Mason's Bay, December 14 and 15, 1895; S. O. Foss president, J. D. Wilson clerk. All of the branches reported and reports accepted. Ministry reporting: Elders J. S. Walker, S. O. Foss, E. C. Foss, U. W. Greene, and J. C. Foss; Priest J. N. Ames; Teacher B. F. Foss; Deacons U. W. Kelley and J. J. McKown. U. W. Greene, J. C. Foss, and J. N. Ames were chosen delegates to General Conference. Bishop's agent's report read, audited, reported correct, and accepted. Resolved that the money received from Massachusetts district be left in the hands of the Bishop's agent to be used in tent work in the district. President S. O.

Foss was appointed to establish the boundary line between Eastern and Western Maine. Preaching by U. W. Greene, J. C. Foss, J. S. Walker, E. C. Foss, and J. N. Ames. Adjourned to meet at Indian River, Maine, at the call of the president.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

Conference convened at Springerton, Illinois, February 15, 1896, at ten a. m.; J. F. Henson president, F. M. Slover secretary. Branch reports: Brush Creek 268, Kibbie 62, Dryfork 45, Springerton 117, Tunnel Hill 106, Parrish and Alma not reported. Elders reporting: J. F. Henson baptized 9, J. W. Stone, M. R. Brown, J. F. Thomas, I. A. Morris baptized 1, F. M. Slover, H. Walker, W. R. Smith baptized 1, W. H. Brewer, S. D. Goosetree baptized 1, and W. A. Kelley; Priests M. G. Powell, J. F. Simms, H. Rankin, and B. Taylor. Bishop's agent reported: Collected $276.65, paid out $265.48, balance on hand $11.17. M. H. Bond was chosen delegate to the General Conference. Preaching by I. A. Morris, F. M. Slover, W. R. Smith, and J. F. Henson. All of the authorities of the church were sustained in righteousness and were requested to labor all they possibly can in the future to advance the cause of Christ. One was baptized at the close. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president, the time and place to be agreed upon by the reunion committee and the president of the district. A quiet and peaceable time was had throughout the conference.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Conference was held with the Mount Zion branch, Goose Creek, February 8, 1896. Conference met to elect delegates to General Conference and make arrangements for a reunion to be held in August next. The following brethren were elected delegates to General Conference: G. H. Godbey, D. L. Shinn, J. W. Trout, A. Haws, and B. Beall. The district was not as well represented as it should have been, but the conference passed off without a jar, and we had some good preaching by Elders G. H. Godbey and D. L. Shinn.

J. B. RUSSELL, Sec.

VICTORIA.

Conference was held at Queensferry, January 4 and 5, 1896; C. A. Butterworth president, D. M. McIntosh vice president, J. A. Read secretary. Statistical reports: Hastings 69; 18 baptized, 2 died. Leopold 29; 1 died. Queensferry 41; no change. Bishop's agent's report: On hand September 4, 1895, £1. 19s.; receipts to December 31, 1895, £9. 5s.; paid out £10. 4s.; due church December 31, 1895, £1. Priesthood reports from Brn. McIntosh, Craig, Woolly, and Butterworth. New business: Moved that each branch pays 5s. to defray traveling expenses of district president. Moved that letters of condolence be sent to Brn. McGurk and Trembath. Moved that Bro. John Jones be ordained to the office of elder and Bro. Carmichael to office of deacon, both in the Hastings branch. Moved that Bro. McIntosh be recommended to General Conference to continue his mission work as circumstances permit. Brn. McIntosh and Read sustained as district president and secretary for ensuing term. Next conference to meet at Leopold first Saturday in May, 1896, or at call of district president. Brn. J. Jones and M. Carmichael were ordained as ordered. Elders J. W. Gillen, J. F. Burton, and J. W. Wight appointed delegates to represent Victoria district at next General Conference.

Sunday School Associations.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Convention convened at Higbee, Friday, January 31, at ten a. m.; J. A. Tanner superintendent, Allie Thorburn secretary. Reports from Higbee and Bevier schools were read, also treasurer's report, which was referred to an auditing committee. A paper was read; subject, What part should Sunday schools and delegates take in a Sunday school convention to make it interesting? This paper was deferred until the afternoon session. Two p. m. having arrived found a primary class in charge of Sr. Louise Palfrey—an example of model infant teaching; subject, Consider the lilies. The manner in which Sister Palfrey treated this subject, together with her cheerful countenance and winning ways, is an example well worthy of imitation. A paper was read by William Chapman; subject, Bible class reading, which was interesting. Quite a free and interesting discussion on the deferred paper in regard to delegates was had—pro and con, and a peaceful spirit prevailed. Bro. T. W. Chatburn was present, giving us some good instruction, which made us rejoice that we had ever enlisted in this great Sunday school work. This convention was one of success. To God we return our heartfelt thanks for kindly assisting us with his Holy Spirit, and hope when the next convention meets at Huntsville it may be one that will bring greater success than it has heretofore done. T. W. Chatburn and Louise Palfrey were chosen delegates to the General Convention, and were authorized to cast the entire vote of the district. Sunday school workers, do not forget to pray from this time on for this feature of God's work. This work is one of progression and we need to ask often for the enlightening rays of God's Holy Spirit to penetrate our hearts and minds. So closed the convention of the Northeastern Missouri district. We hope it will prove beneficial to all.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SECRETARIES, ATTENTION.

If you are secretary of a district association or if your school is a member of the General Association and you are not one of a district, please send your annual reports to me as early in March as practicable. I will need these to make up the general report of the association properly. I have sent sample blanks to all whose addresses I have. If you have not received any, they can be obtained at the Herald Office. Fill in all spaces as completely as possible and be sure to have the names of the officers for the ensuing year and their addresses filled in. With these reports send the list of names of delegates to the convention at Kirtland, in April, having them properly certified to by the superintendent. This is all that is required. If you furnish each delegate with a separate credential, then the delegate will know he is to serve as such. Address Box 773, Independence, Missouri.

W. N. ROBINSON, Gen. Sec.

Miscellaneous Department.

FOURTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

All not under General Conference appointment, please report to me, in care of W. H. Kelley, Temple, Lake County, Ohio.

Those under General Conference appointment are not required to report to the quorum separately. The report to General Conference will be received and serve as report to the quorum.

ANDREW BARR, Pres.

FIRST QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

Each member will be mailed a blank report. A report of labor done the past year is earnestly desired. Remember the resolutions made at the last General Conference, viz., members using tobacco will not be recommended for General Conference appointment; also members failing to report to quorum for two successive years will be dropped from the quorum. Send reports to L. F. Johnson, Independence, Missouri, post office box 663, not later than March 20, 1896.

KIRTLAND CONFERENCE BOARD.

Editors Herald:—In the Herald of the 12th inst. also in the Ensign of the 15th, the question is asked, "Is not the price of board a little high during the General Conference, considering the close times?" The brother writing to the Ensign seems to think the same thing, and says that many of the Saints won't be able to attend for that reason, and that many of them argue that if proprietors of boarding houses can afford to board people at $3.00 to $3.50 a week, surely the Saints ought to charge less; and thus it would appear that somebody is fearful that the Saints of Kirtland are going to make money out of the visiting Saints.

Now perhaps a few words of explanation from one who is familiar with the circumstances of the Saints and the condition of things at Kirtland will not be amiss. I know that the Saints of said place feel very anxious and would be very pleased to see all who desire to attend the conference present. However, we should not lose sight of the fact that we are all creatures of circumstance, and hence we cannot always do as we wish. Now it is a fact that the charge for board during General Conference both at Lamoni and Independence has been $3.50 a week, and those two respective branches number in the neighborhood of one thousand members each, while the Kirtland branch only numbers about eighty members, and a great number of those are families of the traveling ministry; and by reason of this there are only a few Saints to care for and entertain the visiting Saints, and they are under the necessity of making great and expensive preparations.

For instance, they have to hire beds, at the sum of about $1.50 each. Again, there is the hired help, also many other things, all of which must be paid for out of the money received for board. Now there is Bro. W. H. Kelley who keeps the Kirtland hotel. He will have to provide for half of those who come to the conference, which means that he will have to hire from twenty-five to fifty beds; also a great many people to help, such as cooks, waiters, etc., and by the time he deducts the bill of expense from the money received he will be fortunate if he comes out clear of debt, to say nothing of the hard work and worry before and during the conference.

The price for board will only be fifty cents a week more than that paid in the west, and surely that small sum should not keep those away from the conference who seemingly have such a desire to attend.

Trusting that all who feel anxious to attend the conference will be able to come, and that we will have a glorious time, I remain,

Yours in gospel bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

ASHMONT, Ohio, February 16, 1896.

(The rate of board at Lamoni during the General Conferences of '93 and '94 was $3.00 per week.—EDS.)

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Far West District:—On or before March 10 I will send my annual report to the Bishop, and all that have not as yet sent me their tithes and offerings will please do so at once so that I can give them credit in this report. As several have informed me that they would pay, and are possibly intending to do so when they come to our quarterly conference, which convenes in this city March 14, I thought it advisable to thus inform you that in order to have credit on this year's report you had better send it to me before the 10th of March, 1896. If you cannot do so, then bring it with you; it is always thankfully received. Address me at No. 612 South Eighth Street, St. Joseph, Missouri.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY AND RESPECT.

At a regular meeting of the Saints in Saints' hall, Rock Island, Illinois, Sunday, February 16, 1896, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy and respect, on the death of Bro. Jerome Ruby; and forward a copy of the same to the Herald and Ensign for publication, also a copy to his wife and mother.

Whereas, it has been the will of our heavenly Father to remove from our midst, by death, our beloved brother, Elder Jerome Ruby, Therefore, be it resolved, that the Church of Jesus Christ of which he was a member, and this part of the field in particular, in which he so zealously labored when able, has lost through his death one of the noblest and most conscientious defenders of its faith, and one whose testimony to a perfect knowledge of the truth of this restored gospel was borne in a firm, fearless manner in the face of death, even to the last hours of his consciousness, and that his wife, mother, family, and friends sustain, by reason of his death, the irreparable loss of a most loving husband, dutiful son, affectionate brother, sympathetic and true friend, and wise counselor. Resolved further, that we extend to his bereaved wife and aged mother, brothers and sisters, our heart-felt sympathy, and commend them to the sympathy and prayers of the Saints, and the love and protection of an allwise and merciful God, and that while bowing in humble submission to the divine will of our heavenly Father, we deeply mourn our loss as a friend and brother, but not as those without hope, but confident that our loss is his eternal gain.

Y GWIR YN ERBYN Y BYD.

AN APPEAL TO THE WELSH SAINTS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

An earnest appeal is made to all Welsh Saints to aid the Morryston branch of South Wales. The few Saints of this branch are threatened with the loss of their chapel together with the annihilation of most of their prospects of the speedy promulgation of the restored gospel, unless they can pay £155 ($756) for the purchase of the same, including all furniture and fittings together with an organ.

The dimensions of the chapel (which stands on its own ground) are 22 x 40 feet, and it will comfortably seat 250 persons; there is also a small vestry attached. Our brethren and sisters of the Cymry blood are especially urged to make an effort on our behalf for the sake of the gospel and for love of the dear old fatherland.

All subscriptions are to be forwarded to the president of the branch, Elder J. R. Gibbs, 23 Wychtree Street, Morryston, Swansea, South Wales.

We furthermore request that Apostle G. T. Griffiths, of Temple, Lake County, Ohio, receive subscriptions on behalf of the Morryston Saints. A full account of receipts and expenditures will be afterwards inserted in the Herald. This appeal has received the sanction of Apostle James Caffall, missionary in charge, and of the Bishop.

N. B.—Subscriptions from American and English brethren and sisters will also be most thankfully received.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The annual conference of the Manchester, England, district will be convened in the Saints' meeting room, South Manchester branch, 6 Cornbrook Place, Cornbrook Road, Chester Road, South Manchester, on Saturday, April 4, 1896, at three p. m. The presidents of the branches will please forward statistical, financial, and spiritual reports of their respective branches, and the several officers of the church, (including the presidents and officers of branches,) will also send in their personal reports, accompanied by their licenses, (for indorsement,) to the district secretary, Elder James Baty, 14 Gordon Street, Rusholme, Manchester, not later than Tuesday, the 31st March, 1896.

JOSEPH DEWSNUP, SEN., Pres.

The semi-annual conference of the Pittsburgh and Kirtland district will convene at the Hall, 67 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Saturday, March 7, 1896, at 10:30 a. m., eastern standard time. Each branch in the district should be represented by delegates, each branch being entitled to one delegate for every six members. Delegates should have certificates signed by the president and clerk of the branch stating that they were duly elected at a regular or called meeting of the branch. The election of a presiding elder and a secretary will be necessary, and branches are requested to instruct their representatives as to their preference. All ministry reports, and reports of branches not represented by delegates, should be forwarded to the district secretary, Bro. E. S. Fairley, care of Henry Sproull & Company, 78 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. A report is required from all those holding the priesthood, except those officiating as branch officers. Please notify Bro. R. G. Smith, 6113 Howe St., East End, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, how many will attend, so that provision for entertainment may be made.

MARRIED.

MILLER—MCKIERNAN.—At Farmington, Iowa, at the bride's parents' home, February 10, 1896, Mr. Orville H. Miller, of Centerville, Iowa, and Sr. Maud N. McKiernan; Elder R. Warnock officiating.

ATWELL—LOWRY.—At Rich Hill, Missouri, February 21, 1896, Bro. Willard A. Atwell and Sr. Mattie M. Lowry; Priest Harry M. Atwell officiating.

DIED.

WELLINGTON.—Sr. Effie Wellington was born December 16, 1876; died February 4, 1896. She left a baby boy two weeks old as a pledge of her love to her sorrowing companion. She was baptized by Elder J. E. Reese and was a devoted and true follower of the Nazarene. She was a sweet and even tempered child-wife and mother. She had passed through a trying ordeal and to all appearance she was improving nicely. Between two and three o'clock a. m. of the 4th inst. she was suddenly seized with a pain in the breast and expired in about forty minutes. Funeral services were held in the Christian church. Elder R. J. Anthony preached the sermon. Weep not for Effie, she sleeps with the just.

WILLIAMS.—At Lexington, Michigan, January 13, 1896, Sr. Patty Williams; services at the house by P. W. Surbrook. She was baptized and confirmed April 26, 1878, by Elder Robert Davis, at Lexington, Michigan. Her husband died September 14, 1894.

EUREKA REFRIGERATOR.
BEST IN USE.

Cold Storage of Meats and Fruits Secured by an Improved, Simple, and Scientific Arrangement.

The Eureka Refrigerator is the result of over seven years experimenting. The inventor, a practical butcher and handler of meats in stock, has succeeded in so combining economy and utility that ice is very slowly consumed and moisture prevented from collecting on the walls of the Refrigerator—Low temperature, and Dry atmosphere combined at a moderate cost.

Compared with other Cooling boxes the Eureka requires but little ice. The walls of the box are always dry, so thoroughly dry that a match can be lighted on them at any time. Meats and fruits can be kept sweet and sound for a long time.

This is secured by a new and scientific system of ventilation, by which moisture is carried off and food products kept cold and dry.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE CANON OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

Rev. Dr. DUNLOP MOORE, in the Presbyterian and Reformed Review, Philadelphia, January.

ANYONE who has studied the church history of Eusebius, or who has read even a popular treatise on the canon of Scripture, is well aware that it is not to be maintained that there is equal evidence that every book in our present New Testament was recognized everywhere in the church catholic during the first half of the second century as an authoritative rule. The New Testament was not published at once as a complete whole. Its books were separately written, in sundry places and at sundry times, till the last writing of the Apostle John appeared near the close of the first century. From the nature of the case, time and careful and extensive inquiry and intercommunication between churches remote from each other were needed in order to ascertain precisely the full number of the writings which the Lord had provided for the church of the New Covenant. But the belief in a new, inspired rule of faith and duty additional to that furnished by the Old Testament, and equally deserving with it of credence and obedience, was in the church from the time that the name of a church was first applied to the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. It can be shown that Christ placed his disciples under a new rule of faith and practice, and that this new rule of faith was not only a spoken, but also a written word, revered as Scripture and actually designated as Scripture, even in the days of the apostles. If this can be established, then it is a very grave error to teach that "the idea of the inspiration of the New Testament, in the sense in which it is maintained now, was the growth of time"—time that may have extended beyond the first century of the Christian church.

Perhaps it may be allowable to make an allusion here to the personal experience of the writer of this paper. Before entering on the Christian ministry he had committed all the Epistles of Paul to memory. It so happened that curiosity, and possibly a more laudable motive, led him to engage in a too exclusive study of unbelieving authors, especially of German rationalists. Difficulties to faith arose which he could not then solve. He was in danger of falling into utter unbelief of the supernatural. Every support of faith seemed to sink under him. He first gained firm footing by carefully pondering the character of Paul's Epistles. They exhibit such hidden, undesigned, yet most striking coincidences with one another and with the Acts of the Apostles; they so dovetail into each other, as Paley has illustrated, in many particulars that could not have been artificially contrived, as to guarantee their credibility. They are so written that we could not bring ourselves to believe that they are not the genuine expression of a good man's heart, of a man dealing with facts and speaking in sincerity.

For ourselves, we can testify that it was the irresistible impression made on us by the letters of Paul, the impossibility of conceiving them to be fictitious or dishonest compositions, that overcame our unbelief at an important crisis in our life. When we were once firmly convinced that the writings ascribed to Paul are certainly genuine, and that we could rely on their historical character, it was not difficult to be persuaded that their author was right in thinking that he had the Spirit of God, and in being "as sure, as any of the Old Testament prophets was ever sure, that anything which he had to say came from God." —Public Opinion.

GOD IN THE CONSTITUTION.

American Sentinel, New York.

To THE demand that is now being made upon Congress for such a change in the National Constitution as will transform it from a "Godless" document to one that will acknowledge God's supremacy, it may be truthfully replied, God is already in the Constitution. He is in it just as he was in the Declaration of Independence. As a Methodist minister of Baltimore, Rev. W. F. Hamner, has well said, "That grand parchment is the product of God's Spirit. If you want to see God in it, read that clause which says that all men are born with equal rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

It is now proposed to change this grand document so as to put within it an "acknowledgment" of God, by changing its preamble to this form:—

"We, the people of the United States, acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all authority in civil government, our Lord Jesus Christ as the ruler of nations, and his revealed will as of supreme authority in civil affairs, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution of the United States of America."

Does this breathe forth the divine spirit of fairness and equality to all? Let us see. Who is it that makes this acknowledgment of the existence and authority of the Deity? Answer: "We, the people of the United States." But hundreds of thousands, if not millions of citizens here do not believe in God, and very many who do believe in him, and rejoice in the gospel of his Son, would not have his will made the supreme law in civil affairs. What about such people? Why, simply this, that they are not the people of the United States, according to this preamble. By its terms they will be disfranchised. And we can say this on the authority of the Christian Statesman itself,—the organ of the party which is most active in demanding the proposed constitutional amendment; for that journal, in its issue of November 1, 1883, published the following upon this point:—

“What effect would the adoption of the Christian amendment, together with the proposed changes in the Constitution, have upon those who deny that God is the Sovereign, Christ the Ruler, and the Bible the law? This brings up the conscience question at once. The classes who object are, as ‘Truth Seeker’ has said, Jews, infidels, atheists, and others. These classes are perfectly satisfied with the Constitution as it is. How would they stand toward it if it recognized the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ? To be perfectly plain, I believe that the existence of a Christian constitution would disfranchise every logically consistent infidel.”

Rev. E. B. Graham at a National Reform convention held at York, Nebraska, and reported in the Christian Statesman of May 21, 1885, said:—

“We might add, in all justice, if the opponents of the Bible do not like our government and its Christian features, let them go to some wild, desolate land, and in the name of the Devil and for the sake of the Devil subdue it, and set up a government of their own on infidel and atheistic ideas, and then, if they can stand it, stay there till they die!”

Rev. Dr. Jonathan Edwards, a leading exponent of this “National Reform,” in a speech made at a National Reform convention held in New York in 1873, thus classified the enemies of the “reform” cause:—

“The atheist is a man who denies the being of God and future life. To him mind and matter are the same; and time is the be-all and end-all of consciousness and of character.

“The deist admits God, but denies that he has any such control over human affairs as we call providence, or that he ever manifests himself and his will in a revelation.

“The Jew admits God, providence, and revelation, but rejects the entire scheme of gospel redemption by Jesus Christ as sheer imagination, or—worse—sheer imposture.

“The Seventh-day Baptists believe in God and Christianity, and are conjoined with the other members of this class by the accident of differing with the mass of Christians upon the question of what precise day of the week shall be observed as holy.

“These all are, for the occasion, and as far as the amendment is concerned, one class. They use the same arguments and the same tactics against us. They must be counted together.”

PALESTINE AND THE JEWS.

BY THE BISHOP OF JERUSALEM.

How startling are the facts of the day! The newspapers bristle with the movements of the Jewish people. What they now are, commercially to the world's industries, financially to the world's progress, towards social questions and to those of peace and war, everyone knows and feels. How long will their rights in Christ be ignored? If the order to “begin” missionary work at Jerusalem was suspended only by the fact that the Jews were no longer there to begin amongst, how about the state of the Holy Land to-day? When the century opened we might scarcely count their hundreds. In 1841 they were 8,000. In 1887—I am connecting their rise in numbers with the eras of this bishopric, as their future must greatly concern it—they were 60,000. Now they are about 125,000, or three times as many as returned from the captivity in Babylon. The land is also ceasing to sit desolate, it can support a larger population than it now holds. The restoration with efficient regularity of the “latter rains” for so many centuries withheld, gives back its historic fertility wherever the hand of the cultivator is upon his plough, and his sickle upon his vineyard and his fig trees. God's providence must be concerned in bringing back the exiled race, and we note that his eye is again upon the land for good in its necessary preparation for its inhabitants.

And then, whilst everywhere there is on the surface the old prejudice against the Gentiles and the old avowal of refusal of Christ, there is a real and significant change from the bitterness of Jewish infidelity. Jesus Christ or Atheism is the only alternative before the Jew. The revival of a religion of types and sacrifices is impossible—I do not say against the spirit of this century, but against a simpler and purer dispensation from God, which has fulfilled them all.

A great change of front towards Christianity is taking place among Jews all over the world, which in itself is a vast encouragement to missionary effort. There is an avowal of disapproval of the Crucifixion of Christ. There is an admission of his claim to be a prophet, to be the Messiah, at least, of the Gentiles, to be the holiest of the sons of men. The assertion of the Yemenite Jew, “Our fathers never returned from the captivity until now; we are not chargeable with the black deed of the rulers against Jesus,” is but the expression of a widespread desire to reverse the imprecation of eighteen centuries past; it seems like a prayer, “May his blood be forgiven to us and to our children!”—Christian Age.

A remarkable article on “The Organic Conception of the Church,” by James Golf, also an important paper on present issues, entitled “Legislation as a Cure-all,” by Robert J. Mahon, appear in The Catholic World Magazine for March.

R. H. Woodward Company, Baltimore, Maryland, announce a new book, “Story of Turkey and Armenia.” This book will contain a full and graphic account of the recent Armenian massacres, which have aroused the civilized world. SCHLATTER, ET AL.

WE notice that since the departure of Schlatter, Burk in Michigan, Hammond in Illinois, and others in various places are springing up as healers of human ills, and, from newspaper reports, attracting some local attention; not as much however as Schlatter, the first in the field. Sensationalism is of short duration—without permanency. It would be difficult to find any permanent moral good remaining as a result of the labors of the parties referred to. Like "Christian Science" and "Theosophy" they spring up suddenly and assume colossal proportions, but are of too rapid growth and too uncertain in texture and substance to long remain. The things that "endure" and abide the tests of life are things that require earnest, honest work and continuous labor to attain. It is not strange that those of "flighty," unsubstantial cast of character seek the sensational. The "honest in heart" and the sound in mind hunger and thirst after righteousness, the principles of truth. They are they who build substantially and "climb up" steadily and surely. Trueness of heart, honest industry with a willingness to labor and to wait, and good common sense, form the groundwork of spiritual, moral, and mental salvation. Truth is the surest and strongest thing in the world. Its adherents ought to be the most substantial representatives of all that is true in the principles of morals and religion.

We repeat the thought that if any people ought to be free from sensationalism, superstition, and unmoved by the passing lo heres and lo theres of the day—who should be known for soundness of mind and strength of character, the people of God should so be. They should consciously realize and know the strength and force and solidity that truth imparts to those who are in heart its disciples; and, having that knowledge, be known in the midst of the world and for its good as those enlightened to resist the lightmindedness of "Satanic sensationalism" we shall term it, now so prevalent in the world and assuming so many forms, and causing men and women to be tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine;—by winds of religious, moral, and political doctrine that now are sweeping over the world. How grand is the work of God! How true, how substantial, how free from the spirit of popular vanities that daily sweep thousands along the stream of sensational uncertainties! Well may God's people "love the truth" and "hold fast the form of sound words"—the rod of iron, and avoid all that conduces to vanity and worldly folly. An endowment of rugged good judgment, with other moral and spiritual qualifications, is essential to the world's emancipation. Every man, every woman, too, must have such "witness in himself" if he would succeed in bearing lifelong witness to the truth, if "the life of Jesus" is to be "made manifest" in our "mortal flesh."

IS THE MARRIAGE SYSTEM WRONG?

THE Chicago Record for Monday, February 17, 1896, has the following notice of a lecture delivered in Chicago, Sunday morning, February 16:—

MARRIAGE SYSTEM IS WRONG.

Prof. Felix Adler lectured at the Grand Opera House yesterday morning before the Society for Ethical Culture and a large outside audience on "The safeguards and perils of marriage." In substance, he said that there were three parties to the question, one believing that the institution should be let alone, a second believing in still further accentuating the monogamic principle of marriage, and a third believing that the institution should be done away with. The latter, he said, was advanced by radicals, who no longer feared openly to expound the doctrine of their heresy. Personally, he believed that a change must come, and that it must be an advancement along the present lines, and said that before the monogamic principle could be overthrown it must be established. "Society," he said, "is not monogamous, but, under a thin veneering of virtue, it is polygamous. Absence of control over the institution is not wise, and the control must be exercised by the church. The danger of the recently established equality of women with men, which is the cause of the immense headway of divorce. The divorce must be denied for the sake of the children, because it is not wise to generalize the orphan asylum and make it a substitute for home. The other dangers are lack of preuptial acquaintance and the ease with which the marriage state is reached. The only theory of marriage is the Christian theory, and that must be abandoned, because it is founded on the inferiority of woman. The whole marriage system is founded on an epistle of St. Paul, and hundreds of thousands of Christians to-day would not accept the view of St. Paul. The best consciences have outgrown the Christian theory of marriage.

The foregoing would indicate that Felix Adler, whatever else he may be, is a mischief-making image smasher, having a pique at society and pandering to a morbid sentimentalism which he is pleased to name "the best consciences."

It would be a trifle difficult from so brief a statement to discover whether this would-be reconstructor of "society" has any decided view as to what should be the nature of the relation between the sexes now called marriage, other than that a "change must come," and that "along the present lines."

On this question, the issues of which are so grave, and upon a proper decision of which so much that is portentous to society for good or for evil depends, there should be no sort of dubiety as to what positions the church assumes.

The question of the marriage relation was early made a subject of discussion among the elders. The angel's message was to be widespread in its offering of mercy and salvation to the race. The United States was chosen as the locality on which the great contest of religious truth against error was to be made in the dispensation of the fullness of times. The personal relationship of the devotees to the faith and the believers to the Christ was to be made dependent upon righteous conduct as well as spiritual doctrine and precept. Provision was made against the liability of the church to drift into indifference to correct deportment and the actual transgressions by which Israel of old fell away from the ways of the Lord. The "sons of God" were warned concerning the manner in which their predecessors in the days written of by Moses, "corrupted his way upon the earth."

God had in view the establishing the rules of right living that he might raise up and gather to himself "a righteous people," a "glorious church." To do this he commanded his people, the children of the "new and everlasting covenant," "even that which was from the beginning." The conditions of society on both the old and the new continent were hastening to the loosening and disregard of the marriage bond. There was a fast increasing tendency to look upon virtue as a conventional quality only, and disregard for it to be winked at. A right conception of the origin and an understanding of the nature of the institution of marriage were essential to the permanent founding and perpetuity in righteousness of the church. These the Lord gave to the church by revelation. In March, 1831, the following clear, explicit, and far-reaching statement was made by Him who founded the earth and gave laws to those whom he created to dwell upon it:—

Whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.—D. C. 49: 3; Lamoni edition.

Professor Felix Adler states that the only theory of marriage is the "Christian theory;" and that "the whole marriage system is founded on an epistle of Paul."

This statement shows that either Professor Adler makes a grave mistake or that the system which he calls the "Christian system," is a misconception of the institution as it was given of God and Christ.

The statement quoted above from the revelation from the Lord to the church in 1831 is in harmony with the "word" in Genesis:—

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh.—Gen 2: 24.

The Inspired Version, by Joseph the Seer, has the same rendering.—(See Gen. 2: 30.)

The creation itself conformed to this statement. The New Testament, both King James' and the Inspired Versions, the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, give Christ as the creator of the earth. If he is, then marriage as stated in Genesis, quoted above, is the system of Christ, hence the Christian system. This view is sustained to all Latter Day Saints, by the revelation of 1831, also quoted. It is further corroborated by the direct statement of the Savior as found in Matthew 19: 4-6:—

Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

Prof. Adler may be an authority in some things. Learning and research and thought may have given to him the right to be heard on some themes as speaking from a knowledge; but the "theory of marriage" as advanced by Christ in Matthew is not Pauline, neither by origination, nor by substitution. It is Christ's and therefore Christian. Mark and Luke agree, substantially, with the relation of Matthew, hence the three understood Jesus alike.

There is to Latter Day Saints strong reasons for believing that the Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures is an improvement on the King James' in many important particulars. In the case in consideration the King James' has the saying,

That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose.—Gen. 6: 2.

This was apparently displeasing to God; for in the next verse the saying is found,

And the Lord said, My Spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: . . . for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth.

The conclusion is that "the sons of God," which all Latter Day Saints construe to mean the priesthood, had corrupted God's way; and the manner in which this had been done is found in verse two, already quoted.

The Inspired Version is much more explicit and conclusive. The quotation reads:—

And Noah and his sons hearkened unto the Lord, and gave heed; and they were called the sons of God. And when these men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, the sons of men saw that their daughters were fair, and they took them wives even as they chose. And the Lord said unto Noah, The daughters of thy sons have sold themselves, for behold, mine anger is kindled against the sons of men, for they will not hearken to my voice. And it came to pass, that Noah prophesied, and taught the things of God, even as it was in the beginning.—Gen. 8: 1-4.

This, taken with the statement of Jesus in Matthew, Mark, and Luke, and the revelation to the church of 1831 already quoted, shows conclusively what the rule at the beginning the institution of marriage was; and the reason for it, that the earth might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.

This was not only the law as instituted, but was the foundation and ethical teaching of the Christian system; and Paul's theory taught in one epistle, if construed to be different from this, is neither the Christian theory nor the Christian system.

Under the inspiration of the statement made concerning John the Baptist, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight," of which the Prophet Esais had before-time spoken, it is neither hard nor difficult to conclude that the word of this John the Baptist, when he rebuked Herod for his act of perfidy and lawlessness in taking the wife of his brother Philip, and the word of the Lord Jesus Christ in reply to the Pharisees concerning divorce, are of the same spirit and dictated in each by an understanding of the law. John had said to Herod,

It is not lawful for thee to have her.—Matt. 14: 4.

This John said in reference to Herodias, the wife of Herod's brother Philip. And for the rebuke thus given John lost his life through the guilty intrigue of the woman thus unlawfully taken by Herod. It was not unlawful in Roman law, and according to Jewish traditions was not punishable; but under the new law, the covenant in Christ, the straight paths of the Lord, the gospel of salvation, it was not lawful.

The language of Jesus to the Pharisees was,

Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.—Matt. 19: 8.

If any of the world's teachers and lawgivers knew what the conditions of the law which was to govern the institution of marriage, which was "ordained of God unto man" were, Jesus is preëminently the one above all others who should know. He specifically stated that the divorce regulations of the Mosaic code, from which the present divorce laws of society are framed rather than from the epistle of Paul, was not appointed from nor at the beginning.

This is not an inferential deduction, but a positive declaration. One and only one cause for the lawful separation of persons married under the institution of marriage as God gave it, was given by Christ. The laws enacted by the lawmakers of society, for which the Christ system is in no wise responsible, have, under a mistake as to conditions which in considerations of high honor and virtue should obtain in the family relations, are so loosely constructed as to give undue license to the willful and the vicious; and to bring virtue and honor into shame, and to make the marriage bond, which should be soft as silk yet as strong as steel, as easily broken as a rope of sand. The words of Jesus do not warrant such legislation. Nor can anything sanctioning Prof. Adler's inferred idea that the loose and discouraging divorce system of the land is the legitimate result or necessary adjunct to the Christ system of marriage, be properly gathered from the scriptural passages creating or regulating the domestic relation.

"Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight," was the ministerial rallying cry of John the Baptist. It was, by revelation, made a part of the rallying cry of the high emprise of the latter-day ministerial force. One part of the philosophy taught by them was the sacred character of the marriage bond. "During your lives;" or, "so long as you both shall live;" was the condition of time in the contract. The legal obligations of the contract were recognized in the declaration of the church on the subject. The regulation of the relation by the custom of civilized nations, by law, was taken cognizance of; together with the statement of fact that it did not originate with man, nor was the institution of human law; but having been given of God, adapted to the human occupation of the earth in time, was to be subject to legal regulation for the wellbeing of society, the direct protection of the parties to the covenant and their children, safeguards to the state for the proper discharge of the duties and obligations of citizenship.

Further than this, the church, instituted of God, was warned as has been already shown, that fealty to God demanded loyalty to the covenant of marriage. "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else," was the inspirational echo of that divine fiat uttered in the morn of creation,

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.

It was a divine declaration, reuttered in the meridian of time:—

For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh.

Man was forbidden by divine declaration to interfere with and separate what God had joined. "Let not man put asunder," was absolute notification to the believers, and to the world—to the ever-changing, never-resting tide of humanity—that he who changeth not had decreed the sublime nature of the institution. This bond was not to be lightly disregarded. Whosoever did so lightly regard the bond must take the consequences of divine disapproval, no matter whether it would be a Herod on a throne or a peasant in his cottage;—the institution was for all men, for all time—established for a purpose. This purpose the Lord himself disclosed at the beginning of the work of the ministry under the restored gospel, the "everlasting gospel" brought to the earth by the angel that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.

It was evidently the intention of the Lord to enstamp the dignity and power of human love rightly directed in marriage; and to do this he stated to the church the divine rule agreed upon in the counsels of heaven before the founding of the earth. This was celestial, divine, eternal. Answering to the sacredness, the enduring nature of the covenant; for which man should be held to the strictest accounting in the day of judgment, the sanctity of prayer is invoked in the service as accepted by the church:—

May God add his blessings and keep you to fulfill your covenants from henceforth, and forever. — Section on marriage, D. C. III, (109.)

Felix Adler's conclusion that "absence of control over the institution is not wise, and the control must be exercised by the church," is correct in this; that the church must assume to teach marriage as having been of divine institution; and teach further that the obligations of the condition may not, must not, be lightly or inconsiderably assumed, and when assumed should be intelligently, lovingly, loyally, faithfully observed and discharged with direct reference to answering to God for the manner in which the covenant of marriage is kept.

Nor is this view taken upon the supposed inferiority of woman, as Professor Adler states that the Christian system is "founded on." It is taken upon the equality of man and woman in the spheres of the creation of each; each in the domain ordained of God. Any sort of effort to dislodge either from the position assigned of God is adverse to the wisdom of the Creator, and brings disruption and disaster. Especially is this true in the church; and the warning should be heeded, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord."

The church does not accede to the theories fast making encroachments on the "straight paths" of the Lord; and place woman as the equal of man, as a man; nor accept the medieval theory that woman is the chattel, the servant, the plaything of man, subject to his caress, his frown, his blow, as the whim, the caprice, the devilishness of his temper may suggest. But the church holds that woman is man's companion, his helpmeet, his divinely-appointed human coadjutor, counselor, comforter, character-beautifying, and ennobling complement of being. So, also, the church holds that man is to woman, the human stay, strong shelter, and defense; the pillar of her excellence, the safe repository of her honor, and her virtue; her safeguard to the world, her companion, the complement of her being.

The church insists that this rendition of the marriage relation being the divinely appointed one shall become, nay, is the voice of the Lord to the believers and the world. Observance of the obligations, as given in the Christ system, will in time abolish the need for divorce courts, and make void such objections as those urged by Professor Adler and his compeers, and restore to the companionship of man and woman the innocence and beauty of the intended Eden of God.

THE HOLY GHOST?

WE are favored with the following digest of conclusions and queries reached by a council of the priesthood of a branch of the church in an examination and discussion of the questions "The Holy Ghost; what is He, and what his office-work?" The essence of the discussion was about as follows:—

As David says, Psalms 139, "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it."

There is but one Holy Ghost, or Spirit of God. No distinction was offered.

This Holy Ghost is highly intelligent, being acquainted with "the things of God," the depth of whose knowledge is past finding out. (Rom. 11:33 with 1 Cor. 2:11.)

He is one of the Trinity or great councils as the apostles were commanded to officiate in his name as also in the name of the Father and the Son.

He is a witness, both in heaven and on earth at the same time. (1 John 5:7, 8.)

He attended the Savior and was the power by which he cast out devils and operated in his ministry.

He was an agency in the creation, as he moved upon the face of the great deep. (Gen. 1:2.)

He is the inspirer of the mind, that principle that quickeneth and giveth peace, assurance, and a knowledge of Christ.

Is he a personage and confined to a certain limited space? was a question which was not so clearly determined.

If a personage, how can he be in two individuals at the same time?

It was suggested: Perhaps it is not the identical particles of the Spirit which enter the sensibilities of man, but only the influence as one person has an influence over or upon another without his even being sensible (otherwise) of the presence of any.

The thought was also presented that the Spirit is a highly intelligent and refined matter, unorganized into a personality; but like the air, capable of existing everywhere; thus being cognizant of all action and capable of assuming a form, as he came upon the Savior in the bodily shape of a dove, etc., and appeared to Nephi as a person and talked with him.

If he is to be thus described, why does the Savior use the personal pronoun "He," in referring to him?

Without arriving at positive conclusions on these points, the council closed, having had a very interesting time.

TRIBUTE.

A SONG sung at the exercises in East Side schoolhouse, Lamoni, February 22, 1896, anniversary of Washington's birthday; prepared for the occasion:—

SONG OF WASHINGTON.

Tune, "America."

(Words prepared for this occasion.)

BY D. F. LAMBERT.

As children here we sing,
The praise of Washington,
Our nation's head;
By love he won his fame,
And hence we bless his name,
And praise the day he came,
And fought, and bled.

The world had nobly sought,
And men had bravely fought,
For freedom's peace.
But tyrants still defied;
And Truth still bleeding cried;
And men from hate and pride
Found no release.

Our hero and his band
Arose, redeemed the land,
For all men's sake;
The youth and gray-haired sire,
Inspired by patriot fire,
Heedless of tyrants' ire,
All freemen wake!

Their cry the breezes take,
Their shout the echoes wake,
O'er vale and hill.
This sound must belt the world,
Our flag must ne'er be furled,
Till wrong from throne is hurled,
And tyrants still.

Then let us love the truth,
In old age and in youth,
By night and day.
The truth is broad and grand,
It has the ocean spanned,
'Twill hold the world in grand,
Triumphal sway.

ROME is said to have granted an absolute divorce to Canadian parties; so says the following:—

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 20.—A decree of divorce approved by Pope Leo. XIII., the first of its kind ever recorded in Canada, has been granted John Keefe, separating him from his wife, on scriptural grounds. Much interest is excited by the concession from Rome, as never before has a divorce been recognized in this country by a Roman Catholic authority. The decree granted Keefe is not only one of separation but it permits a remarriage. A legal dissolution of the marriage tie has also been obtained from the Supreme Court.

AFTER THE ASSOCIATION.

ANOTHER MATTER WILL COME UP TO CAUSE TROUBLE.

WILL HAVE TROUBLES BESIDES SUNDAY BALL GAMES.

William Lewis For the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints Takes Exceptions to the Rulings of the Ministerial Association of St. Joseph in Regard to the Case of Elder Terry and Challenges the Organization to a Discussion.

WHEN the Ministerial Association of St. Joseph sat down on the application of Elder J. M. Terry of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at a meeting held a few days ago, they of course thought that was the end of the matter, and that the statement that they did not believe in the doctrines of Elder Terry, which is of the Joseph Smith order, would be a sufficient excuse to account for their refusal to accept him as a member of the association. In this they, however, have figured without their host, for in the assertion made that the doctrine as expounded by Elder Terry was heresy, they laid the foundation for a challenge which it is almost necessary for them to accept, or retire from the position they had taken.

There are a large number of the followers of Elder Terry in St. Joseph and they comprise some of the best people of the city among their number. When the result of the action of the association on Elder Terry's application was made known it raised a storm of indignation which will not blow over for some time to come.

The members of Elder Terry's church propose to see that their leader shall have a fair show at least, and the result is that they will give the ministers additional work to that of looking after proposed Sunday base ball, and the open saloon door. It will be necessary for the association to defend its action or else show cause why the charge of heresy as implied was made.

Yesterday Mr. William Lewis of Elder Terry's flock, who is one of St. Joseph's best citizens, sent the following open letter and challenge to the Ministerial Association. It will be seen that Elder Terry's members deny the right of the association to assert that the teaching of Joseph Smith is heresy, and they also offer to show that their doctrine is founded on as good evidence as that of the Ministerial Association. The challenge is as follows:—

MUST DEFEND THEIR POSITION.

"To the Ministerial Association of St. Joseph, Missouri. Gentlemen:—On page six of the St. Joseph Daily News of January 24, 1896, we read the following:—

"Terry is rejected. The Ministerial Association says no upon his application for membership in the organization composed of the pastors and preachers. The reason assigned for the above action is that they, the Ministerial Association, did not believe in the Joseph Smith doctrine, which they pronounce heresy.'

"In justice to Elder J. M. Terry and the branch of the church over which he presides here, and our many friends in this city, we make you the following proposition:—

"Inasmuch as you have accused this church of heresy, we most emphatically deny the assumption, and will furnish one of our ministers to meet any one of the members of the Ministerial Association of St. Joseph, Missouri, in public discussion, and we will affirm that the church of which Elder J. M. Terry is a member, known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is in harmony with the church of the New Testament in doctrine and organization; we to affirm and you to deny. Second, you to affirm that any one of the churches represented by you is in harmony with the New Testament in doctrine and organization, and we to deny. King James' translation to be the standard of evidence. The discussion to take place in this city.

"WILLIAM LEWIS."

We published a few weeks since, an account of the action of the Ministers' Association, of St. Joseph, which body refused to accept Bro. J. M. Terry into the realm of its membership. The foregoing item from the St. Joseph Daily Gazette of the 28th inst. indicates that the ministers comprising said organization have by no means disposed of the matter. Bro. William Lewis and others of the brethren of St. Joseph are widely known as good citizens and active business men, and as such will not be denied the right to ministerial representation in the religious work of the city. They have stood in the forefront ranks in efforts to preserve and advance the moral and religious interests of the city of St. Joseph and have deserved to be heard and to be recognized in the right common to all—to be judged by the merits of what they have represented in the line of moral and religious reform.

We are glad to note the spirit of liberality manifested by the press in giving them a hearing. It is our opinion that the spirit of progress is sufficiently prevalent in the live and progressive city of St. Joseph as to insure a broadminded recognition of the merits of the case in point and to cause a general disapproval of the narrowness of spirit that prompted the action of the ministers.

The Ministers' Association may treat the matter with silence. If it does, the people will refuse to be compromised by such sectarian exclusiveness. It had better try the merits of the case and submit its action and the creeds it represents to an open examination with the faith of the Saints which it denominates as "heresy." The tribunal of public opinion will hear the cause whether the ministers hear or refuse to hear.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRETHREN laboring in fields where prejudice is "ever present" will be tempted to envy Bro. A. Kent, who in a letter to Bro. A. S. Cochran, Secretary of the Herald Office, thus describes his favorable surroundings writing from Blue Rapids, Kansas:—

This leaves me well; never felt better in my life spiritually, and have enjoyed excellent liberty in speaking. The champion of the Philistine host fled and left me in possession of the field—praise the Lord! Satan is mad and I am glad; glory hallelujah! as the Salvation Army has it. I will close; everybody is converted; no sinners in this country. I will have to hunt up a new field to labor in! Love to all.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

LETTERS are received from Pearl R. Surbrook, Lexington, Michigan; Sr. Orrin Pitt, Adrian, Illinois.

Bro. F. A. Smith recently held services at Florence, Nebraska, with good liberty and attention. He thinks it a good point for preaching.

Everybody going to Kirtland conference must remember that the railway station at which they must leave the train is Willoughby. Both the Lake Shore and New York, Chicago and St. Louis (Nickel Plate) run through Willoughby, depots only a few rods apart. Kirtland lies about three miles to the southeast of Willoughby. A hack runs between the two towns daily, leaving Willoughby about one p. m. for Kirtland.

Bro. W. W. Blair left Lamoni on the 24th inst. for Council Bluffs and other Iowa points.

President Joseph Smith went to Des Moines on Friday, the 28th inst., to attend the conference of the Des Moines district.

Brethren laboring under General Conference appointment will doubtless remember the action requiring them to send reports to Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Reports should be in hand not later than March 15.

Original Poetry.

CONSTANCY.

BY ABBIE A. HORTON.

In cloud or sunshine, storm or calm,
Hope's promise comforts me;
For, leaning on our Father's arm,
A stay 'tis found to be.

O, may we never be afraid
On him in faith to call;
For he hath said, "Be not dismayed,
I'll be thy strength, thine all!"

O, trusting heart! then to him turn
In trouble or distress;
And may his Spirit in thee burn
And cleanse thee from all dross.

Love perfect shall cast out all fear,
And every doubt remove,
Make life a boon, and us sincere,
And death our faith approve.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"There's beauty all around our paths, if but our watchful eyes Can trace it midst familiar things, and through their lowly guise."

PERPLEXED.

My little four-year-old comes to me with the announcement, "Mamma, I know something I ain't going to tell you!" and looks up quit archly as if to challenge inquiry.

I take the sweet face between my hands and gaze down into the thoughtful brown eyes. Quickly divining my thought she hastens to assure me, "It isn't anything naughty, Mamma," vigorously shaking the brown curls.

In my heart I thank God that the little mind has so evidently retained the lesson which a few weeks before I had occasion to impress upon it.

But what's this? She looks up with a face, the merry sunshine of which is just touched with a shadow of doubt. The little quick mind recognizes that a fault lies somewhere, and so a little note of anxiety creeps into her voice as she adds, "It's something Annie told me, and told me not to tell you!"

Such a tumult of questions, perplexing, half vexing, rise clamorously in my mind! Should I let this opportunity of teaching her the importance of full confidence in myself pass unimproved? I realize how grave is the necessity of establishing and maintaining perfect and absolute her trust in me, and here she comes with a secret from Mamma! True, she says it is nothing harmful; but is she the best judge of that?

During the silence in which these queries rush through my mind, the brown eyes have been searching mine and the child is now thoroughly anxious.

"Did you tell Annie you wouldn't tell Mamma?"

"Annie said, 'Don't tell Mamma,' and I said, 'Alright,'" she answered.

"Well, my little daughter, Mamma feels very sorry that you cannot tell her everything; but if you promised not to tell, perhaps you had better wait now until you see Annie and ask her if you may tell Mamma?"

The fear arises that she perhaps needs just as seriously to be taught the necessity of keeping her words of faithfulness to promises, of perfect fidelity to any trust placed in her; and yet how can I teach both these lessons? I confess my perplexity.

With tears welling up in her innocent eyes, the little one solves the problem thus:—

"Mamma, I want to tell you. I will just this once before seeing Annie, and after this I'm never going to say not tell Mamma!"—and I listened.

Am I wrong?
LAMONI, IOWA.

MAY JUNE.

EAST DENNIS, Massachusetts.

Dear Sisters:—Not having the privilege to meet with the Saints this beautiful Sabbath morning I will meet you with these few lines. It has been a long time since I have written to the Home Column, but I have been striving to keep the faith from day to day. I confess my weakness and shortcomings in many ways through life. But wherein I have had a knowledge of these, I have striven to amend them.

I thought this morning while the bells were calling together the Saints, (and also many of the honest in heart that have the same zeal as in Paul's day, worshiping the unknown God,) how glad I was of the angel message. And I know great is my condemnation if I live not up to the covenant I have made with my heavenly Father. I can say together with you all, dear Saints, that this work is true.

There are a few Saints of us here in East Dennis, and it has been a long time since we have had a sermon preached to us. We think many times if we could only hear one more. We live about eight miles from the Dennis Port branch, which we meet with as often as possible. But of late the diphtheria has been in the place and no public worship was allowed by the Board of Health. As you saw through the Herald, our conference of December was not held. Two of our dear sisters were called to part with their loved children; Sr. Laura Nickerson with a little girl fourteen years old, and Sr. Solone Garfield with a boy six years old. How we have pitied them! All we can say, God knows best why we are called to pass through these fiery trials. Pray for them, dear Saints, that they may be helped in this great affliction by God's power. Once in awhile an elder comes to see us. We are as good to him as we know how to be, hoping he will come again. We were encouraged a year ago Christmas by Bro. George Robley being with us. We were blessed through him by God's Holy Spirit to still strive on. Last June Bro. Richard Bullard made us a short call, and how glad we were to have him with us, if for only a short time. We do so long to see Brn. Myron Bond and Joseph Luff. We have not heard many of the different elders here, so we feel those that have been here and broken unto us the bread of life are near and dear to us through the gospel.

Looking forward to that one bright day when we shall meet to part no more, and when we shall be satisfied when we awake in His likeness, I am,

Your sister in Christ,
ABBIE W. CHASE.

ELLENSBURG, Washington.

Dear Sisters:—I write to thank you all for so kindly writing to me when I was afflicted and troubled in mind. I am much improved in health. I feel that God has been very merciful to me; and can testify that I have received a great blessing at his hands. I was encouraged by the kind words and benefited by the advice of those writing to me. I had not the time to answer all the letters I received. I wish to say that I have some Heralds that I will send to any who may not be able to take it. I have not been able to settle my account at the Herald Office, so Autumn Leaves has been discontinued, and I have only received one Herald for some time. As I am alone in the faith, I had not the courage to write to the publishers to discontinue the magazine and paper, as they were all the reading matter I had. I hope to be able to make a full or a partial payment before long.

MRS. M. DAWSON.

A LESSON.

BEING tired in body from overwork, feeling disease creeping over me, and seeing so much to be done with no one to assist, and others to be cared for more feeble than myself, the spirit of complaint came over me and I began to murmur at my lot, and comparing my life with others I became very unhappy, and felt that God cared nothing for me. When I prayed he seemed far from me. I went to bed at night, but not to sleep, for I was too nervous and unhappy. While meditating upon these things the Spirit came to teach me a beautiful lesson. It was shown me in all its lights the reasons and needs of prayer.

It seemed that by prayer we were to understand right from wrong and we should not do anything to hinder the spirit of prayer, neither entertain thoughts, form associates, engage in amusements, enter into labor, seek company, hold conversation that would hinder prayer. While I was being so taught I began to feel anxious that my loved ones might be made to understand, (for if I have any good thing I like to share it with others,) and my mind soon left my own and went out to the whole church, and it seemed I must write, for I was taught that by prayer the Saints would be more bound together in the work, making themselves more useful, being drawn together in one unbroken band with a determined effort and full purpose of heart. Now while this was given to instruct and reprove me for my faults I feel that if others could see it in the light of the Spirit it would help them to see how dependent we are on prayer.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. MARGARET HICKS, of Spokane, Washington, requests your faith and prayers in behalf of Bro. Tollef Tollakson's wife, that she may be restored to her right mind. She has been in the insane asylum a long time. The brother came into the church January 29, 1896.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MARCH.

My beloved brethren, pray unto the Father with all energy of heart, that ye may be filled with this love which he hath bestowed upon all who are true followers of his Son Jesus Christ, that ye may become the sons of God, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is, that we may have this hope, that we may be purified even as he is pure.—Moroni 7: 4.

Thursday, March 5.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—1 John 4: 20, 21.

Thursday, March 12.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Prov. 23: 19-26.

Thursday, March 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Thess. 5: 14, 15.

Thursday, March 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—Doc. and Cov. 64: 8.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

WITH this issue begins a series of articles by J. F. McDowell. We are glad that active workers are coming to the support of the Sunday school column. We do not know just who will be benefited by this or that article, but when we offer our best thoughts we may rest assured that they are not lost.

HINTS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY J. F. M'DOWELL.

THE time has passed when the Sunday school shall be called a "baby institution." Who should be interested in the work? Everybody. No exceptions? None. Why? Because all we who are now adults were once children, and we each desired that some one should care for our welfare. Reader, you may have heard the expression, "What do I want to have to do with a pack of young ones?" Forgetful they were one of a "pack of young ones," days and years ago.

PARENTS.

Should parents strive to attend the school? This is a needless question. It may be that some are so situated as not able to be regular attendants, yet might be occasional visitors. The Sunday school is not a place for sending bothersome children alone; it has a higher object than that. All parents should be interested. No parent likes to see or know of other people's avoiding or acting indifferently toward his own children; then no parent should do so by theirs. Never let a child get the idea that the school is a makeshift concern gotten up for Sunday pastime. Every child has an eternal spirit, the interest of which should be cautiously and tenderly regarded. Who is more apt to so care than its parents? When the good lady of the house in spring-time seeks out some young, tender plant, she will guard it by placing sticks around, laying a little brush covering over it, at night covering it, lest an unexpected frost blight it. Is not the child plant "set out" in a world of dangerous surroundings worthy of special care? And more so than a vegetable plant? Every early autumn time plants are gathered in by the careful, and a constant warmth maintained to preserve their lives. Are not constancy and warmth of thought, feeling, and interest required for the saving of children from the blighting influences of sin?

Has the Sunday school no power in this direction? It has the more as parents lovingly seek to instill into their minds the importance of its work. The Sunday school's work is not for present good alone; it looks far out into the great future of possibilities, all time is couched in the wording—yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow! Yesterday was once to-day; to-morrow will become to-day. Manhood and womanhood, lie in the yet-to-be to-day. What shall the eternal years unfold as the bud of promise becomes the bloom of possession! This question lies largely in the power of every father and mother.

Parents should labor more earnestly for the eternal interest than for the temporal. I have known of parents seeking the temporal good and advancement of their offspring, while I have sadly observed the waning and withering decline of the spiritual in them. While the one should not be overlooked, the other should by no means be neglected. It is too much upon the order of the Christ-reproved Jewish method of "paying tithes of anise, myrrh, and cummin," to the neglect of "the weightier matters." Parents, one and all, you have responsibilities for which you will have to answer unto God concerning these things, and there will be no evading it. All parents have their trials and burdens, no doubt; but let us beseech of you, do not create for yourselves burdens hard to bear, that may yet come to you through present duties overlooked, or inadvertently neglected. Sometimes you will find delicate, careworn mothers anxiously engaged for their children's good, and desirous of doing more, while healthier mothers may be otherwise disposed.

ADULTS.

Should persons not married attend Sunday school? Yes. Why? Because all to be learned has not yet been taught. Because we may not possess nearly all the good we should; and we can teach the young that we are not so big but we remember we were once boys and girls ourselves. Then manhood is often softened and the hardened places in nature tendered by association. There is too much of a partition built up between adults and youth. Children feel as though they were of no consequence, and could not be because they are not men and women. I have but little sympathy or liking for the man or woman who is too big to notice children and youth.

Association, true and good, belittles no one; and you win young hearts unto God, and gain their respect; whereas a stoical passing-by only produces either sadness or harshness of feeling, or both, in the heart of a child. Don't feel too big because you have outgrown garments and shoes now too little for you. Somebody may have fondled you and caressed you, and maybe some who read this were put out into a cold world when they have craved a tender word; a little touch upon the shoulder; a smile from an adult face. Let us remember kindly the young, and give them a complimentary notice.

I heard an anecdote as follows: A gentleman engaged in Christian work while traveling in "the west," met a little miss, to whom he said: "Do you ever go to Sunday school?"

"I did where we moved from."

"Is there none hereabouts?"

"Not now; I have a kitten, a pup, and a calf, and used to have Sunday school with them, until awhile ago the calf got too big to go to Sunday school, so we have none now."

The grading of studies removes all claim formerly made for the school as a "baby concern." I hope no one who has thoughtlessly absented himself from the school who may read this will say, "I shall not change my mind on the matter; if I don't want to go, I'll not go." If any should so feel, let no one know of it. Those, who in youth may not have learned the worth of Sunday school influences may not be so favorably impressed with the work as others; but now is opportunity offered still to find out. And any who has indulged in the thought that the school was a "dry affair," has opportunity to moisten it a little by suggesting improved methods. The church and all its interests are of a schooling nature. If children and youth go to heaven, will any of us feel too big to go there on that account? Remember what Jesus said of children:—

"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

"Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven."

Let us begin, if any have not already done so, the association; so when we get "over yonder" we will not feel "out of place."

THE PURITY OF CHILDHOOD.

ONE of the greatest lovers of children is the Rev. Anthony W. Thorold, Lord Bishop of Winchester, who has written some very pretty and touching things regarding them, giving evidence of a close study of the conditions of childhood. He writes this inspiring paragraph, which will be read with delight by every mother.

"If our eyes are open, we presently see what children may become to us, as well as what we ought to be to them. For, in a suitable and reverent use of a great word with many meanings, children are the salvation of the race. They purify, they elevate, they stir, they instruct, they console, they reconcile, they gladden us. They are the ozone of human life, inspiring us with hope, rousing us to wholesome sacrifice. If, in the faults which they inherit, they show us the worst of ourselves, and so move us to a salutary repentance, they also stimulate our finer qualities; they cheat us of weary care; they preach to us, not so much by their lips as by their innocence; their questions set us thinking, and to better purpose than the syllogisms of philosophers; their helplessness makes us tender; their loveliness surprises us into a pure joy. To me at least, if I may say so much, a child, wherever I see it, and no matter whose it may be, is a thing of delight. These fingers tingle with a sensation of delight while I am writing about them here. My chilly friend need not have my joy if he does not believe in it; I will not force it on him, but he shall not take mine from me.

Letter Department.

BERWYN, Nebraska, Feb. 26.

Editors Herald:—There have not been any of the missionary force here. I have been doing what I could in a local way. I have been out in the work pretty nearly all the time this winter. About the 16th of January I went to Round Park, Valley County, and opened meeting and continued ten days. Some gave their names for baptism. I then passed on to other points and returned to the Park on February 8, and on the 9th I baptized and confirmed four. The ice was three or four inches thick, which was removed, and the brave but humble souls went right ahead, nothing daunted.

On the 19th I returned to Round Park again and continued preaching until the 23d and baptized four more precious souls in the cool, refreshing element, from which they arose with the avowed purpose of walking in newness of life. May God help them so to do. The country is stirred for many miles around, all kinds of reports flying, and "the people imagine a vain thing;"—they imagine that they have a Campbellite preacher that can prove we are wrong.

I am urgently requested to go to other new places and preach, to which I will respond as fast as I can. I go next Saturday where none of our people have ever been. May God bless his people.

Yours for truth,

C. W. PRETTYMAN.

KEOKUK FALLS, Ok., Feb. 24.

Editors Herald:—I presume that my experience in this great latter-day work has been about the same as all others who have built their hopes and rested their eternal interests upon its divinity. The longer I am in it and the nearer the end approaches the greater assurance I have that my hopes are well founded; that they are based upon the Rock which was the foundation of all the apostles and prophets in years gone by, even that of "everlasting truth." It is like coming to some great and glorious light; the nearer we approach the brighter and clearer it appears. The more I see of it the better I comprehend it and the more I desire of it; hence I feel greatly encouraged to press forward until the day dawn "when that which is perfect" has "come."

I am still trying to keep the royal banner of our great Master to the front; and notwithstanding I find many things connected with the work that I could wish were different, yet I feel no desire to lay my armor down, but try to make the best of all and take things as they come, the bitter, the sweet, and "the half-and-half," just as the good Father deals them out.

In some places I find quite an interest, while in others but little or none; but everywhere, whether good, or little, or no interest at all, there is an unaccountable backwardness in obeying. Whether this comes as a fault of the people, or preacher, or both, is not known; probably the latter. I have preached, so far in this year, well on to one hundred sermons, and have baptized but one—Bro. Daniel A. Bressman, of McLoud, Oklahoma. Notwithstanding poor success in that part of the missionary work, I have enjoyed a greater degree of the Spirit than in any year previous, which I believe is an evidence of acceptance by the Father.

I am laboring now in connection with Bro. E. A. Pratt, a teacher, whom I find to be quite an agreeable companion, or as Bro. Paul once expressed it, "Yokefellow." This brother, I believe, should he continue faithful and recover his health (which is quite poor) and continue to apply himself to the gospel work alone, will make a valuable and efficient laborer in due time.

Ever hopeful,

THOMAS J. SMITH.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 12.

Editors Herald:—I was baptized and confirmed with three others, last October, by Bro. Sheehy; and I realize what an important step it was, and my heart rejoices that my heavenly Father enabled me to do his righteous will.

I have been blessed with the Holy Spirit and I find a great deal of comfort in the study of the Bible and all the literature the church affords.

One evening on going to bed I humbled myself in prayer and I asked the Lord to watch and care for me during the night, and while I was thus humbling myself in prayer I felt the same power come over me as I did the night I was confirmed through the laying on of hands, only it was much more powerful and like a ball of fire, and the room was all lighted up beautifully and very much to be admired; and all at once there appeared four angels, and they were as white as the driven snow. My desire is to be remembered by all the Saints, as I am young in years and in this marvelous work.

Your sister,

CHARLOTTE JONES.

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, Feb. 17.

Editors Herald:—Not long since one of our noblest representatives wrote, "Responsibility is always great in debate." In that the writer heartily concurs. Anyone who fails to realize mighty responsibility in many phases of ministerial work certainly fails of the true realization of ordination to office. As Paul, or Peter had occasion to "stir" "pure minds" to "remembrance" so may our experience and positions we are placed in bestir us, if we are observant. Seconding Bro. Kelley and Griffith's efforts at New Washington, Ohio, where at considerable expense, Sr. J. A. Hamilton is trying to plant the work, so bestirred us. Two blessed weeks were spent at the home of Sr. Hamilton, the consolation of peace confirming work done. On the 13th I was called here by telegram to the bedside of Bro. R. B. Jones' son Mortimer, who five weeks before had his left hand crushed in the rollers of a paper mill. This long delay had been caused by various causes not necessary to recount, all of which by care could have been avoided; and most of which the distressed family were responsible for. Our sympathy, anxiety, and responsibility seemed multiplied by the number of days the sufferer had been in suspense. Truehearted Saints heartily joined us in the effort for help for the sufferer, who is comfortable, but if restored, badly maimed for life. May he be remembered by Saints. Observation should afford us so much education as to free us from many ills and errors. To be maimed for this life is bad, but for eternity is worse. Man's narrow conception works unlimited ills. Not watchful enough accident is often entailed on the body. The same principle applies in case of the soul's interests.

May the wail about $4.00 per week at Kirtland die soon and peacefully. Preachers and singers at its funeral can be plentifully supplied. Where shall the obsequies occur? That was the rate in 1883, also in 1887, we believe, and certainly as low comparatively, as $3.50 at Independence or $3 at Lamoni. It would be well to remember that Kirtland is almost made up of outsiders, and that whatever their mistake in this (if such it be), they did much just after the Braden-Kelley debate in two splendid social demonstrations involving the use of money to make the name of Latter Day Saints honorable. The helter-skelter inconvenience of starting up board-houses for a week or ten days is not like a settled business. Look the matter up in all its bearings, then decide. And are we willing to take leave of the old Temple, the facts of its erection and occupancy such as they have been? Ah, no! Let us not meet there every time, but occasionally, even at four dollars a week. Wonder if it wasn't considerable effort for Israel to get up that tabernacle in the wilderness and to maintain it? the temple in its time and to maintain it? The early and brief occupancy of Kirtland temple is hardly the consummation of its purpose, nor has it likely lapsed into the ordinary house of worship.

Might not controversialists profitably consider, that when God speaks on a matter giving the facts he lets it rest at that, no matter who murmurs or enters complaints? Of course men are not as certain to give the facts as God; but, when having put facts as nearly in the best shape as possible, why not run the risk of their fortune or fate? That very thing must be done as the finale; and the ground once covered, to the most minds, fresh matter would be more acceptable in most instances than continued controversy.

Splendid soldiers in the army of the Lord drive the pen in queer directions, and remind us that we are still this side of the veil. "My servants have been harsh one with another," has not wrought out its full mission as yet either.

May we be enabled to abide, overcome, and triumph.

In bonds,

R. ETZENHOUSER.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Feb. 9.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned home from Fresno, Tulare, and Merced Counties, where I have been for some time in company with Elder D. L. Harris. Since his last to the Herald another precious soul has been added to the kingdom of God, the first that has been baptized in that county, so I am informed. Among some who witnessed the baptism was one Mrs. Hardey of whom I wish to make honorable mention. She is a lady of culture and refinement; her husband, Mr. Hardey, is a man of advanced thought, who cannot be satisfied by modern theology or the doctrines of men; and I fully expect ere long to see them adopted into the family of God.

I have many invitations to call again, the hydra head of prejudice is fast subsiding and the latter-day message is taking hold of the honest hearts.

I often think of Socrates, Plato, Confucius, Servetus, and many others, some of whom have suffered torture and even death with only a limited view of God's eternal existence. Could these martyrs to a portion of truth, so limited and yet so full of hope and consolation, have handled immortal flesh and bones in the persons of Enoch or Elijah translated, or of Jesus raised from the dead; could they have learned from their sacred lips, and realized the full import of that joyful sentence, "Behold I make all things new," or have heard the promise, "There shall be no more death," issuing from the fountain of truth, prompted by infinite benevolence and charity, reëchoing amid the starry worlds, reaching down to earth, vibrating with a thrill of joy all the myriads of animated nature, penetrating the gloomy vaults of death and the prisons of the spirit world with a ray of hope, and causing to spring afresh the wellsprings of life and joy and love, even in the lonely dungeons of despair;—could the rulers of this world have beheld or even formed a conception of such riches, such nobility, such an eternal and exceeding weight of glory, it would seem as though they would have looked upon the wealth, pleasures, titles, and crowns of this world as mere toys, the playthings of a day; as dross, not worth the strife and toil of acquiring, or the trouble of maintaining, except as a duty or troublesome responsibility. With this view of the subject what man so base, so groveling, so blind to his own interests as to neglect those duties, self-denials, sacrifices, which are necessary in order to secure a part in the first resurrection, and a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory in that life which never ends!

I rejoice in the cause of truth. I rejoice in that gospel that Paul was not ashamed of, and hope to continue so to the end.

Yours in the faith,

WALTER SCOTT.

CANBORO, Mich., Feb. 12.

Editors Herald:—After ten weeks of busy toil and labor, preaching, lecturing, and debating the principles of this great latter-day work, I again find myself at home under my own vine and fig tree for a few days to enjoy the company of those that have so anxiously but patiently waited my return.

On the 12th of December I entered the large city of Grand Rapids, and found that the good Saints there (who had sent money to pay my fare) meant business; for they had meeting announced, and the order was, "Preach before you sleep." Well, I felt as if we wanted to give the old wheel the best turn we had, so accordingly went to work and in fifty-eight days we held seventy meetings, including six lectures and four debates.

Hundreds of people came to hear; some of the time there was not standing room in our large hall. It was not long before the hirelings found their sheep feeding in new pastures and at once began to sound their bugle horn by starting a protracted effort in the Methodist church, only a couple of blocks away. But alas! their people passed their own church doors and came to the hall to hear the gospel, having lost all desire for husks when good corn could be obtained at reduced prices. All that could be said or done did not change the minds of the people. Truth had come among them and they knew it.

The Baptist minister told his flock it was a disgrace for them to go to that Mormon meeting; and the good effect his untimely counsel had was that three of the singers in the Baptist church came and joined our choir, and have assisted us in singing ever since. Dozens of the Baptist people came nearly every night.

The second discussion I held was with Elder Storer, a man that seemed overly anxious to enter upon propositions for debate. I tried to tell him that it was not necessary to debate every little point of difference; but nothing but discussion would do him, so we arranged the following proposition: "Resolved that the Church of Christ as organized by Christ and his apostles has continued on earth since the days of the apostles with all its officers, gifts, and ordinances, and never became disorganized;" the Bible with good, reliable history to be the standard of argument. The battle drew on, and scarcely an hour had passed away before my opponent found that he was laboring under a good deal of difficulty, and that assumption would not move facts; for they were looking him right in the face. When he found it impossible to get through the discussion with modern sectarianism as the ancient church, he denounced the whole matter and said he "did not belong to that breed of cats;" that he as a minister stood "free from all modern institutions." Time was called, and my opponent sat down feeling splendid as the audience had laughed quite heartily, especially on the cat question.

I told the audience it was but a step from the sublime to the ridiculous; and as my opponent had made that his choice when he supplanted the word "church" in the proposition with the noun "cat," and then argued that he was not a sectarian cat, that I should follow him in his argument, and inasmuch as he denied the sectarian species and said he was not that breed, I wanted him to define his position and tell the audience just what kind of a cat he was; that I could prove he was not of the ancient order, hence he must be either a Roman cat, a wild cat, or a catamount. Upon turning to see how my opponent liked the logic, he reminded me some of a singed cat, for the audience had taken in the situation and were nearly killing themselves with laughter at his expense. I aired one or two more of his humorous witty sayings and the result was, when we met the next night my opponent failed to materialize, so I had to close the debate alone.

But a new thing under the sun occurred to his mind, and that was, if he could advertise a discussion in some other part of the city when I was away, most likely he would have better success in proving his points. Well, this is the very thing he did; for while I was six miles north, at Alpine, holding some meetings in the Union church, he advertised in all the daily papers that, "Elder Grant and the undersigned would hold a religious discussion in Mission Hall, on Spring Street, commencing at seven p. m." of that same date.

Unfortunately for him there was a sister present who told the audience that I knew nothing of that debate, as I was out of the city. This gave the thing away, and after some little inquiry he confessed that it was an arrangement of his own makeup, and told the audience that his points were so clear that it did not make any material difference whether Elder Grant was there or not, he was going to prove all he said he would anyway.

I returned to the city to fill my appointments and just before we opened meeting on Sunday at two p. m. the manager of the mission hall came to me and told me what had happened, and said if I would meet that man in their hall he would let us have the hall free and advertise it in all the papers. I told him to go ahead, that I would be there the next Thursday and Friday evenings. The next day I wrote up a correction for the papers and as I entered the editorial room behold my enemy was there. I told the editor what had happened, gave him my correction, and left him telling my opponent what would surely come to pass if he ever did such a thing again. Thursday night came, and the hall was packed. My opponent opened with an affirmative speech (the same proposition he used in the former discussion), made a few faint attacks on the sectarian churches, then sat down telling the people he had nothing to do. Well I was able to occupy my time as fast as it came and in my third speech was successful in knocking my opponent out entirely, so that when he was called upon to take the floor he got up nearly crying and told the people that he would not attempt to go any farther with the matter; that if God would forgive him this time he would never enter another debate as long as he lived. By consent of the chair I talked for thirty-five minutes on the coming forth of this latter-day work. At the close ninety per cent of all present took sides with the truth.

I baptized ten, blessed about a dozen children, administered to a few sick folks, and left hundreds believing. Several told me they wanted to be baptized when I came back. The name "Latter Day Saint" is held in high esteem in the parts of the city where the gospel has been preached. A letter from there tells me to shorten my visit at home and hasten my return, as the people are anxious to hear more of the truth.

More anon,

R. E. GRANT.

BRYN-MAWR, South Wales, Feb. 4.

Editors Herald:—Our precious paper, the Herald, is an ever-welcome visitor to my home. And our hearts are often made glad through reading the good news contained therein. I am glad to find that God has raised, and is still raising, able defenders of the gospel. I pray God that they may be master builders in deed and in truth.

I have not seen much news with reference to the work of God in South Wales, with the exception of the letters of Apostles G. T. Griffiths and James Caffall. I have no fault to find with the views of these brethren, as I believe them to be noble servants of God; but circumstances prevail in Wales over which these brethren, neither the local brethren, have any control, and militate very much against the prosperity of the church.

I have been a member of the church in Wales some twenty-seven years, and with the exception of some nine years residence in the United States have always lived in Wales; hence I thought perhaps I might be entitled to give the Herald readers a few of my thoughts with regard to the church in Wales.

It is a fact that cannot be successfully disputed that gallant little Wales has given a large number of her sons and daughters to the church of the living God. Thousands have left her hills and dales for the goodly land of Joseph, so that the church here has become very weak; and I may add that the people of Wales are intensely religious, or what they term religious. Even on Sunday afternoons you will find the majority of gray-haired fathers between sixty and eighty years of age in the Sunday school; and the young, and old, and middle-aged go in multitudes on Sunday to their different places of worship, and would hardly be seen talking to a Latter Day Saint, much less coming to hear one preach.

It may be thought that it is the bad conduct of the Saints themselves that have caused this; but I deny this and can prove that the conduct of the Saints in Wales will bear comparison with the Saints of America or any other country; and their generosity and liberality may be equalled, but cannot be excelled. I will bring a few cases to prove that it is not through unchristianlike conduct of the Saints that the growth of the work is so slow. For instance, take the case of Bro. Gould, of Cardiff, who is a sober, honest, upright man in every sense of the word. He has preached out on the streets times without number. Still the work of God in that great city is at a standstill, and has been for the past seven years; and shall this man's integrity be questioned because of the non-success of the church there? Take Bro. Griffiths, of Lydney, who is a strictly honorable man in every sense of the word. Shall the nonprosperity of the work under his charge be taken as a proof of his not living his religion? Take for an example, again, our deceased Brother Thomas E. Jenkins, who lived some twenty years in Dowlais, a good, sober, honest, man—a man of good repute among his neighbors. Still, during his twenty years upright living and surrounded within a radius of six miles, by some 120,000 people, none of these were convinced of the gospel, nor paid obedience thereto. But even the branch in Merthyr has died and is now disorganized. Take Brother J. R. Gibbs for instance, a strictly honest, sober, upright man, respected by nearly all the inhabitants of Morristown,—a man of good repute in the church and out of the church. But what has been the prosperity of the church in Morristown during the last twenty years? Very little, indeed. Shall this good brother's nobility of character be questioned because of the non-success of the church in his locality? There are several other brethren and localities that I could cite as proof against the insinuation that the cause of the non-success of the work is the bad conduct of the Saints. In my opinion the greatest obstacle against the prosperity of the work in Wales is the fact that the difference between the Reorganization and the Utah Church is not fully understood, and until the public is thoroughly convinced of this, there will be no prosperity in the Reorganized Church; and seeing that the people will not come to hear us, and if they would come we have not the means to pay for halls and of course not to build chapels. Hence, the question is, What course shall we adopt to reach the people?

I have thought over this matter considerably, and have come to the conclusion that one of the best ways would be for the church to purchase, or some good brother for the church, a traveling van on the same plan as the joyful news vans. An elder and his wife could live and travel from place to place in this van. He could have a good supply of church works, and an especially very large supply of those tracts that treat on the difference of our church and the Utah Church. On Saturdays and Mondays this elder would have at least a thousand people to speak to from his van. He could also sell the church works from the van; and it is my candid opinion that he could make enough commission to keep himself and wife. And of this I am certain, that he could preach to more people in one month than our missionaries on the lines that they now are working do in five years. In fact a good preacher, a sound reasoner, and a keen debater would reach more people and show the difference between the two churches more successfully than if the church sent twenty-five missionaries under present circumstances. I would like if the brethren that have been on missions to this country would take this matter up in the next April conference.

In gospel bonds,

ALMA NEPHI BISHOP.

BLAIRSTOWN, Mo., Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—The debate held at Quincy, Missouri, between J. L. Noblett, of the Christian Church, and Bro. F. L. Sawley closed on the evening of the 14th. The regular attendance was about four hundred. Though the contest was hot at times, and five dollars was offered for a rattlesnake to test Bro. Sawley's faith in the promises of God, also a bottle of poison presented by Elder Noblett to Sawley, wanting him to take it and if it did not kill him then Elder Noblett would "flop over," and the rest of his brethren and "be Mormons." We feel thankful that the promises of Christ do not depend on money-bought preachers and plug hat dudes. One noble sister was baptized at the close of debate and many friends made for the truth.

I preached four times out in the country about two miles from the place of debate and baptized one aged brother of sixty-three years; some others express their desire of accepting the work.

Last Sunday I preached at the Bunker Hill schoolhouse with good interest. Am to go there next Sunday.

Yours in the gospel,

D. C. WHITE.

MANTENO, Iowa, Feb. 19.

Editors Herald:—The work is moving along nicely in the Galland's Grove district at present. One reason for this is that all the serious difficulties, so far as I know, have been amicably adjusted, thus leaving the Saints in a good condition to enjoy the Holy Spirit in their worship, though in a few instances it has been found necessary to expel the transgressor. As the writer has received his information from reliable ministers and his own personal observations he feels justified in saying that the spiritual condition of the district was never better than now. Most of the local ministers and branch officers have done nobly in their respective branches.

Bro. J. F. McDowell has been unable to render us much assistance this winter, but we trust he may soon be well again. Brn. W. W. Whiting and C. J. Hunt when last heard from were battling for the truth.

Bro. Hunt's preaching at Defiance of late has aroused the Christians to activeness so they are looking for a man to meet our people in discussion. I was informed last night that they had found a man who would debate but wants first to deliver some lectures at Defiance on the immoral character of Joseph Smith for the benefit of his people, after which he will debate if we will take it to the "Grove" where they will have no members and where, as he thinks, he can tear our church to pieces. Perhaps he is a brave man, though at present we doubt it. However, no preventing providence, the writer will attend his lectures and if necessary will reply to them or send some one to do so.

We're not afraid of boasting priest,
With learning vast, from South or East;
For God is on his people's side,
So long as they in truth abide.

For truth is like a diamond bright,
That shines most clear in darkest night;
Though men may scoff, and hate, and fight,
It only makes the truth more bright.

The army of the Lord is vast,
They've held the truth both long and fast;
For though they're not all here in view,
We know they still are soldiers true.
Sometimes the Lord doth clear our sight,
And then we see his legions bright;
Who come down from the world of light,
To help us here while in the fight.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—Buckhannon is in Upshur County and one of the most religious, temperate, and flourishing towns in the State. It is the boast of Upshur County that never in all history has it been induced to give license for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Here is the place selected by the West Virginia conference of the M. E. Church for the location of its theological seminary; and that institution is now in full blast and actually one of the foremost schools of the kind in West Virginia. Buckhannon is overflowing with Methodism. Mr. Sam Small has been radiating here for the past few weeks. He has a peculiar way of "preaching Christ unto them," without preaching the word of God, and "the things concerning the kingdom," etc. Baptism is not quite as important as it used to be, and has been omitted "in this enlightened age." Besides, it is rather cold for such nonessentials just now; the river is frozen over. The laying on of hands has also ceased to be practiced, as the Holy Ghost comes at the instant of belief, and a sound conversion is sure to follow; and while the happy convert does not, as in olden times, prophesy and speak in other tongues (Acts 19: 6), yet his joy is ineffable. The new-born creature leaps up and about. Shaking hands with the faithful, running, screaming, clapping hands, laughing, and making all kinds of gestures and distortions of countenance; while others mocking say these men, and women, and children are full of excitement peculiar to their sect. Certainly this is true Wesleyism, but not Christianity, according to the New Testament. If we were to open the Bible and preach the word of God, these happy people would be offended.

I am sojourning at the present with Bro. and Sr. Henderson, who moved here from Pittsburg. Bro. H. is superintendent of William Flaccus and Son's tannery. Himself and wife are alone here as Saints, but hope that ere long a work will be done that will result in the establishment of the church here. It will be no easy task to introduce the latter-day work. Whoever does it will need great humility and spiritual power. Sectarianism has always predominated and the chief priests hold undisputed sway over almost all grades and classes of society—universalists and infidels excepted.

I will work and pray for an opening, but if no opening can be affected soon, I will go into the country where once upon a time auspicious our beloved brother, L. W. Williams, labored for a few days, making a few friends and dropping seeds now producing fruit, we are informed, like bread cast upon the waters. After I do what can be done in this part of the mission I will return to the good-begun work at Washburn in Ritchie County. Some are to be baptized there when I return. I will go there about the 10th of March. A special conference of the West Virginia district on the 8th inst. appointed delegates to the General Conference.

D. L. SHINN.

LIMERICK, Ohio, Feb. 10.

Editors Herald:—The work in this locality is not in as prosperous condition as we would like to see it; but, all things considered, it is in better shape than we expected to see it at this date. There are a few Saints here that are striving to do the best they know, while others seem to be at a standstill hardly able to keep their heads above the tide of opposition. Doubts and fears will creep in; all are to be tried as by fire; every son and daughter is to be chastized, and must endure to the end if received. I can truly say I have been in the furnace, if I have not gone through it. It is hard to bear up under these fiery trials, and the end is not yet. We will have many discouragements to meet all along the line, but if our condition is made better by the things we suffer it gives courage to fight the battles of the future. We can sympathize with the sufferer if we have been there.

For various reasons the branch at Limerick is but few in number. Several are in the Bierly branch, and quite a sprinkling in the Creola branch, and taking the cream all the time, it is no strange thing that the weak and puny few would be getting along slowly. By the way, the Glen Roy branch got part of our working members; but the worst has not been told,—the pruning knife has been brought to bear a part in the thinning process and we are of the opinion that better methods could and should have prevailed. In fact I am free to say that thinning has been done uncalled for, and contrary to law and without mercy when mercy was asked for. I think it best to err on the side of mercy if we err at all.

I have been preaching some this year but have not gone outside of my own county. I have not done all I could and intended doing, and was rather anxious to go to other points and had partly agreed to go, but seeing the branches were not left without plenty of preaching, and in some instances an overabundance, I thought it wisdom to stay with the weaker ones, and be with those of my equals, as this branch is without an officer when I go elsewhere, and meetings stop. I think this my place until the way opens and the traveling ministry get out in new fields and effect new organizations and then leave them to the care of the local workers as the law directs.

We have many counties in this district that have not been canvassed yet, though the work has been going on here for sixteen years. The Lord said many years ago to the elders, to get off the boat and go out to the perishing children on the shore and break the bread of life to the hungry, and stated that there was no safety on the waters, and it may be that a word of warning will be forthcoming to get the elders scared of Nahum's chariots that they may go and see what can be done on either side of the railing.

If our good Bro. Smith could have remained here for a time we think good would have been the result. We hope that when he comes again he will have the say when to move.

Notwithstanding the cheap fare offered at Kirtland during the Spring Conference, Limerick will underbid. Give us the conference and we will furnish the filling for two dollars and fifty cents per week, if we do have to go to Egypt to buy corn. With good wishes to all and malice to none,

T. J. BEATTY.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Feb. 20.

Editors Herald:—The branch at Council Bluffs has been making steady spiritual growth for some time past. Our social meetings have been feasts of love, and God's Spirit has been present in such measure that the Saints have been made to rejoice in the Lord greatly. There is a desire manifested to get nearer together in one bond of love and unity, and many people from the world are attracted to the meetings. If any differences exist they are not permitted to find a place in our little temple, or in our hearts. To God be praise. As usual Bro. Williams is busy, visiting and talking to the people and preparing for the series of discourses he is delivering.

The writer paid a visit to the Omaha branch last Sunday and talked to them at the morning hour, and attended the testimony meeting in the afternoon. We had a feast of fat things. Judging from what we saw and heard, Bro. Smith's work has borne abundant fruit, for the branch is a living, active force for good in that great city. On Saturday and Sunday, February 22 and 23, they have a two-days' meeting. Bro. Mintun is expected, and a good time is looked for. Bro. Williams will preach for them Saturday night, and Bro. Fred preaches for us in the Bluffs at 10:30 Sunday.

Altogether the outlook is good, and I pray

God that we may continue to live in love and harmony and strive to attain a higher spiritual plane of life, and be living examples of the power of the restored gospel.

In the one hope,

JOHN S. STRAIN.

VINCENNES, Iowa, Feb. 17.

Editors Herald:—Elder J. S. Snively, of Lamoni, closed last night, one of the most enjoyable series of meetings ever held here. For nine sermons delivered we can but express our sincere thanks to him, and our grateful hearts send forth praises to our Father who we feel sent our beloved brethren among us; for the Holy Spirit was in our midst in power to bless and comfort.

Six dear souls were baptized by him and confirmed Sunday evening by him and Bro. F. M. Weld, Bro. Weld being missionary in our district. He spoke one evening to our edification and we hope that the conference will return him next year.

Bro. Snively has awakened a great interest in our vicinity. Our new union chapel is open to all, the congregation mixed in belief, and when they bade him good-bye it was with a wish for him to return. We all feel as if he was needed here and hope the conference may appoint him to labor in our district the coming year. Your sister,

ELLEN I. SARGENT.

CAMERON, Neb., Feb. 17.

Editors Herald:—Bro. S. D. Payne, Mr. Richards, and I, have been traveling and working together since August. We have a light wagon covered and our horses take us from one place to another; so our expense is not very heavy. We carry an organ and violin and use the "Songs of Zion." We use the "tent and mission hymns" for the service, but use selections from the Harmony before and after the service. We carry about twenty-five of those little leaflets. The people soon learn to sing our songs and many say the composition and music are the best they ever heard, and they ask us if they can't have just one leaflet.

We have brought fifteen into the fold here. One came the 10th of January, and eight on the 9th of February, and six yesterday; and a lady told us last night that she wanted to be baptized. A man and his wife intended to be baptized yesterday, but their children were sick. There are many more to be gathered into the fold here. Eight more have said they are coming.

We are invited to come to the homes of the people and have visited many families and borne faithful testimony to the truth. There has been a great change. We commenced at the G. A. R. Hall January 22. Two revivals were going on near us; but we had the largest house and it was full, with splendid order. The people furnished oil and lights and paid for the janitor. The revivalists outdone themselves; they got a man who eclipsed all former records to excite the people and keep the young folks away; but the boys and girls tormented them until they were compelled to close, and one of their pillars came to our meetings, though they rebuked him for coming. There is quite a general expression of disgust with their methods of getting converts, and they did not get any there.

The Lord has blessed our work. One lady was blessed with evidence that the Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants were true, while I was talking with her. On Sunday she testified to the Saints the same thing. I A wicked man was sent for to lecture against Mormonism at Shelton. He made a bitter attack on the two books. He said the Book of Mormon had been changed five times and they had called in and burnt all the first copies. Bro. Payne reviewed him and showed the truth of the matter. We received the Herald with the historical account of the original manuscript of the Book of Mormon and where it was at that time; and while reading it before the crowd one of the sisters saw the manuscript in open vision. It was held in two hands before and above her. She described it, as I suppose it is, by the description. I have read of its size and shape.

The Saints are rejoicing in the truth. Bro. and Sr. Lippincott have visited us here. He preached one sermon and bore faithful testimony. Sr. L. is one of the sweet singers of Israel. The Saints here say they will proceed right away to have a Sunday school, using our Quarterlies and books to prepare their minds for the work. They want Bro. J. W. Gillen to come and visit them.

These people never heard a sermon by the Saints until we came here. We have had enough opposition to make the truth shine. An Adventist wanted to air his Sabbath hobby and three others met at different times and had oppositions to air. The truth shines bright and error must fall.

MRS. L. M. RICHARDS.

AYRSHIRE, Iowa, Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—I am doing gospel work here. Prejudice runs high, yet the attendance and interest are fair. The few Saints in these parts are hopeful. Brn. Edmond Ford and Joseph Carlson have been telling the blessed gospel story in this county, and we hope for good results. Labor on, brethren, and "pray in faith and pray unceasing."

C. J. HUNT.

MILTON, Fla., Feb. 16.

Editors Herald:—Since our quarterly conference in November Bro. E. Powell has baptized thirteen, and six more to be baptized on the third Sunday in March. Bro. T. C. Kelley also baptized several before his departure.

Bro. J. M. Baggerly is doing good work in the country east of us. He has preached at Holt, Milligan, Crestview, Laurel Hill, De Funiak Springs, Argyle, besides other points. He is now at Euchiana, Florida. Bro. Powell is holding a week's meeting at Cooper's Settlement. I assist the brethren all I can, and am glad to say the Saints are growing in spirituality, gradually.

We had a cyclone near Milton on the 5th inst. It struck the Christian or Campbellite church, near Arcadia, and picked it up and turned it upside down almost upon its foundation, making a complete wreck. The ridgecomb of the building struck the ground within about ten feet of the side blocks of the building. We ask the prayers of the Saints. Yours for the faith,

S. D. ALLEN.

ASHMONT, Ohio, Feb. 22.

Editors Herald:—My last communication to Herald was from New Washington, Ohio. While there I continued my efforts at the house of Sr. Hamilton, as I could not procure the use of the "Church of God" building, for the reason that the lady who had the charge of the building did not feel at liberty to let us have it without consent of the presiding elder. There was quite an interest manifested by some who attended our meetings. I am strongly of the opinion that souls will be gathered into the church in the Lord's own due time. That part of my last letter referring to Bro. W. H. Kelley's visit at New Washington should read "last summer" not last Sunday. Before leaving I was successful in making arrangements for a public hall, in which Bro. Etzenhouser has been holding forth, of which labors he will no doubt report.

I came to this place on the 7th and began preaching the following evening, in the M. E. church, which I continued for fifteen nights. Was greeted with large audiences on each occasion, with one exception, a severe storm intervening. However, there were sufficient present to preach to that night. I baptized one, a married man, on 22d. Others would have been baptized but the cold weather hindered. Numbers are very much interested, and will doubtless obey the gospel requirements, if proper care is taken of them. This is the place where a few years ago some of the brethren were turned out of the church, but I was invited to the homes of some of those who were the leading ones in closing the doors. Now they are interested and investigating the claims of our church. We have nine members there now, with good prospects ahead for the organization of a branch. Bro. Jump and family, Sr. Carpenter and her daughter Kittie, showed me every kindness; many thanks. Invitations to visit and dine with outsiders were numerous, hence I was busy with fireside preaching during the day. On the coming Saturday we contemplate organizing a branch in the city of Cleveland.

Bro. I. M. Smith is in the district and expects to visit and preach in Akron, Canton, New Philadelphia, and Goshen, between now and April Conference.

Now, just a few words to the Saints with regard to the "Cleveland Plain Dealer." The said company are going to a great expense to give us an interesting and fair representation, all the Saints throughout the church ought to sustain this enterprise by subscribing for the "daily," the cost of which is only thirty cents the entire conference. Do you as Saints realize that this is the only large newspaper company who has ever volunteered to give us prestige through the press? The reason of this was, because Mr. Prescott, the former manager, was the manager of the Salt Lake Tribune for fourteen years. He became acquainted with the Reorganization through our leading ministers to Utah, whom he sustained through the Tribune against the Utah people. The present managers are equally as friendly to us, and champion our cause frequently through their columns; therefore let all the Saints appreciate this mark of good friendship and send in their orders—"only thirty cents the entire conference." Perhaps some may think there is a money inducement to them, but if you stop and consider that they issue fifty or sixty thousand copies every morning, and the orders from Saints during our preceding conferences has not exceeded three hundred copies, you will readily see that we have not very strongly encouraged the enterprise. If anyone fails to receive their paper in due time notify me by postal forthwith.

Please send all orders to my address. Don't send checks on banks west of Chicago, but postal notes, orders, or stamps.

Yours for progress,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

FINDING THE TWENTY-FOUR GOLDEN PLATES OF ETHER.—No. 2.

(Concluded.)

ELDER C. W. SEWELL;

Dear Sir:—Your second article to hand. If the Book of Mormon really says that Ether hid the "twenty four plates" at Cumorah, why not point out chapter and verse and let that settle the question. If you should succeed in proving that Ether wrote every word of the record at Cumorah, it would not prove that he hid them there. The book is positively silent as to that, consequently you have no right to suppose they were hid at Cumorah and then on that supposition condemn the book.

That Ether wrote the record as he dwelt in the "cavity of a rock," the book is plain; that there were a few finishing touches to give the same after God commanded him to "go forth," is equally plain.

And as he dwelt in the cavity of a rock, he made the remainder of this record.—P. 527.

And the Lord spake unto Ether, and said unto him, Go forth. And he went forth, and beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled; and he finished his record, etc.—P. 532.

There is no contradiction here as you assert. The first quotation does not say that every word was written while he dwelt in the "cavity of a rock." The second explains and modifies the first. It is clear that the writer intended to be understood from the fact that he refers to it a second time, briefly stating that it was finished after he "went forth" from the "cave." Where he went when he "went forth" we are not directly informed by Moroni. You suppose he did not go far, but that he buried them right there at Cumorah. The book does not say so; on the contrary its teachings are directly against the position, as I showed in my former article. Ether prophesied of the death of Coriantumr and his burial by the people of Zarahemla, which event evidently took place in Central America.

And he went forth, and beheld that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled; and he finished his record, etc.—P. 532.

Part of those "words of the Lord" were fulfilled in Central America. The book says Ether saw it. Therefore he must have gone back to Central America. As he "finished his record" after he "saw that the words of the Lord had all been fulfilled," he therefore finished his record in Central America.

I did not say that Coriantumr went back to "South America" as you quote me; I said Central America. Therefore all of that parade of words you make about my trip to South America is based on your own error. The people of Zarahemla landed somewhere north of the "narrow neck" of land and went from there into the "land southward."

You think it an absurdity that Coriantumr should have made this trip, and proceeded to condemn the book as a fraud because it contains such a narrative; yet you can easily believe that a "great fish" swallowed the Prophet Jonah and carried him in his belly three days; and that when said Jonah had prayed and repented that the fish spewed him out on dry land. You can easily believe that Samson killed a lion with his fist, and that a swarm of bees used the carcass for a bee gum. You do not hesitate to believe the story that Samson killed a thousand men with the jawbone of an ass, and that when Samson got thirsty that the Lord caused water to run out of this jawbone to quench his thirst. All of these "large stories" are easily disposed of because they come to us in the Bible through popular tradition; but when you find a statement in the Book of Mormon, not one fourth part as unreasonable, you call it an "absurd story" and condemn the book, and that, too, wholly upon a theory of your own illogical "supposition."

You are inclined to think that these people in describing a country with a sea on each side of it would not call it "a land of many waters." On page 36 we read:—

And we beheld the sea, which we called Irreantum, which being interpreted, is, many waters.

If one sea was called "Irreantum," or "many waters" by the Book of Mormon writers, I am certainly not misrepresenting them by calling two very large seas "Irreantum," or "many waters."

You make a great parade of words about the fact that believers in the Book of Mormon disagree as to the geography of the book. The whole question hinges right on one point; viz.: A "narrow neck of land" is referred to, on which was the boundary line between Bountiful and Desolation. Some persons think that this "narrow neck" is the Isthmus of Panama, while others think it is the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. Now because this difference of opinion exists, or, as you would have it, "inspired White" contradicts "inspired Kelley" and "inspired Simon Smith," therefore, the Book of Mormon is a fraud! Fine logic, this!! Apply your logic to the Bible and see how long that book will stand the test. I find many hundreds of religious denominations contradicting each other on vital points in Christianity, all of them claiming to be led by the Spirit of God. Does this prove the Bible to be a fraud? Look at your own so-called Church of Christ. Leading men of your church are divided as to their opinion on questions of more importance than the boundary lines of the countries of ancient America. Is the Bible a fraud because your institution, with or without inspiration, is not agreed?

Look at the record in the fifteenth chapter of Acts. "Inspired" brethren of the ancient apostolic church had "much disputing" in their conference over the question of circumcision; and before the chapter ends we are informed that "inspired" Barnabas and "inspired" Paul had a "sharp contention"—could not agree, and separated company over it. Is the New Testament record a fraud because these "inspired" apostles failed to see "eye to eye" in all things? Certainly not.

It is very difficult to accurately locate all the countries mentioned in the Book of Mormon as the record is only "an abridgment" and does not go into details; and probably there were some important changes during the great cataclysm which took place on this continent at the crucifixion of Christ. Did we have to settle all the geographical boundaries of the different lands spoken of in the Bible without any additional knowledge of those countries more than what the Bible furnishes, we would have equally as great a task on our hands as we have in settling the Book of Mormon lands, or ancient America.

Many of the objections alleged against the Bible by infidels have been proven false by late archaeological discoveries in Bible lands. This is no less true in regard to the Book of Mormon. It has puzzled not a few how that the illiterate youth—Joseph Smith—in his Book of Mormon ancient history so completely harmonizes with a large majority of the leading American antiquarians. It surely is that puzzling "sealed" book, "delivered" to the "not learned" of Isaiah 29: 11, 12.

Again I assert that Desolation includes a part of the original Jaredite country, or "land which had been peopled and destroyed," your grammatical twisting to the contrary notwithstanding. If Desolation "came into" said country as stated on page 267, it must have been its northern boundary in that country, as anyone can plainly see; it therefore included a part of it. Page 384 informs us why the land was called "Desolation." It says, "Because of the greatness of the destruction of the people . . . it was called desolate;" therefore very appropriately named "Desolation." We are further informed that the "Land of Moron" where the king dwelt was near the land called Desolation by the Nephites. (P. 512.) The Jaredites dwelt in that region for about sixteen hundred years. They had many wars, in which thousands were slain. Coriantumr had a long war in the region of the capital before he retreated to Cumorah. We could reasonably expect the people of Zarahemla to find bones there when they came, and they very appropriately called it "Desolation." The people of Limhi referred to it as "a land which was covered with bones of men, and of beasts," etc. (P. 158.) The Book of Mormon therefore does not teach, as you assert, that the plates were hid at Cumorah, or that the people of Limhi found them there. But on the contrary they were both hidden and found in Central America. Your "eight extravagant stories," which you "supposed" you had found in the Book of Mormon, were found to be "extravagant" only in the manner you told them; the "extravagance" faded away by my simply stating the facts as the book declared them.

I. N. WHITE.

CRITICISM AND CONTROVERSY. NO. I.

BY J. R. LAMBERT.

THERE are many things in this world of ours which, if used in righteousness, and in wisdom, will produce great good; but when used without that wisdom which we all so much need, or for the purpose of gratifying an evil motive, they will result in great harm.

Many well-meaning people,—yes, even Saints, who ought to be wise as well as good,—seeing that much evil will result from certain kinds of controversy and criticism, at once set themselves in the way of opposition, and vigorously condemn that which, when properly used, will always bring good results. How unwise this is. And if the same course should be pursued in all other things, what great loss and disaster it would bring to us as individuals, and to the cause of truth and right. Can we afford to adopt such a policy? I think not.

Liberty, both religious and political, is a precious and God-given boon; but when used by the ignorant and corrupt-minded, it is dangerous in the extreme, and affords first-class opportunities for causing trouble, doing harm, and even bringing the thing itself into disrepute. Marriage, and the family organization; the power of speech; the printing press, together with the most sacred privileges granted by the divine Being, require both intelligence and sterling integrity on the part of those who are permitted to use these arts and privileges, else the purposes had in view by good men and the Creator, are frustrated. Just think of the indescribable suffering, including that of innocent children, caused by marriage and parentage by the really ignorant and desperately corrupt! But this should ever be borne in mind, that the abuse of a thing is no argument against the thing itself.

Now when we commend that which is good (though its abuse may result in great evil) until we come to certain things of the same character which we stoutly condemn, are we aware that by this very practice we simply furnish evidence that we have reached our limit, and we follow the common rule of condemning, because we need more knowledge?

Through knowledge, men have been able to discover and apply the mysterious and hidden forces of nature; but for the lack of knowledge, and sometimes because of bad motive, the use of these things has produced the most disastrous results. There was a time when men thought the Devil was in the printing press; and only a few years ago, many could be found who thought he was in the "fiddle." But now the masses regard the printing press as one of the greatest engines of reform, when rightly used; and the violin is used with good effect in connection with the song service in our churches.

Criticism is the examination of any principle, literary production, etc., for the purpose of passing judgment upon its true character, and determining, as well as we can, what degree of merit it possesses. In the accomplishment of this work, we must be governed by one leading purpose; viz., to see things, and represent them, as they are, not as we would have them appear. Hence strong integrity, as well as intelligence, are indispensable qualifications for the critic.

"Ah!" you say, "it is a high position to be a judge." Granted. But is it not a fact that God has laid this grave responsibility upon his people? And if so, shall we shun it by accepting everything as good which comes from our pulpit and press? If this is the correct policy, then it should not be confined to a few Latter Day Saints, but should include the whole world. And, under this rule, those who profess to be ministers of Jesus Christ must be accepted as such, in good faith, without regard to what they do or teach!

"But," you say, "the Saints have obeyed the gospel, others have not." Very well. Obedience to the gospel is required every day, and it is not completed before our probation is ended. Yes; that is right, the gospel is the standard by which we are to judge all, within and without, and the responsibility of judging by this standard has been placed upon us.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them.—Isa. 8: 20.

If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul. Ye shall walk after the Lord your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and cleave unto him.—Deut. 13: 1-4.

I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.—Gal. 1: 6-8.

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed.—2 John 9, 10.

It should be borne in mind that the above scripture was written to the Saints, and that it applies to both teaching and receiving, by the people of God. Who will say, then, that we are not to judge?

Now these are the words which Jesus taught his disciples that they should say unto the people. Judge not unrighteously, that ye be not judged; but judge righteous judgment. For with what judgment ye shall judge, ye shall be judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.—Matt. 7: 1-3. I. T.

I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say.—1 Cor. 10: 15.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.—1 Thess. 5: 21.

If the people to whom the apostles took the gospel, were competent, had the right, and were required to "judge righteous judgment," shall we say that the church has no such right, and is not qualified to judge? Is it probable that the Saints will ever be qualified to "judge the world," and even "angels," in a coming day, if they do not exercise this faculty, in righteousness, while in this world?

Some seem to think that we have the right to judge the world, but not the people of the church. This is certainly reversing the matter. We are privileged, and it is our duty to go much farther in judging each other, or the church, than we are in judging the world:—

For what have I to do to judge them also that are without? do not ye judge them that are within? But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore put away from among yourselves that wicked person.—1 Cor. 5: 12, 13.

The judgment of the world and angels referred to by Paul in 1 Corinthians 6: 2, 3, is not to be rendered in this world, but in the next; and it will, of course, be executed under the direct supervision of Jesus Christ, to whom the Father has committed all judgment. (See John 5: 22.)

There can be no proper judgment rendered on the condition and standing of persons in the church, except truth, justice, mercy, impartiality, etc., enter into the account. We are required to judge by the gospel, being influenced and helped by the Spirit of truth, without which there is no gospel of salvation. The divine law correctly represents God; the Holy Spirit correctly represents God, and it enables us to properly understand and execute the law. Hence the injunction already quoted:—

To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to THIS WORD, it is because there is no light in them.

The idea that we must leave or ignore plain teachings of the revelations of God, in order that we may be merciful, is, I think, very absurd. Under no circumstances whatever, are we justified in leaving the gospel, or any part of it, to accomplish God's work. Nor is it possible to improve the divine plan by the addition of anything of a dissimilar or contrary character. It is the gospel, and the gospel alone, which "is the power of God unto salvation." This divine plan is sufficiently high, and deep, and broad to include all good, and it is sufficiently pure to exclude all evil. If God's work does not contain the elements of life, love, power, mercy, and truth, which will insure its perpetuity, and the complete salvation of all who submit to its demands, I am in favor of letting it go down. On the other hand, if it does contain these elements, I am opposed to all props, stays, and supposed helps which are not provided for in the revelations of God, and in spirit and genius, are contrary to the gospel of Christ.

If our people ever get the idea that the Republican party, or the Democratic party, or the People's party, the Odd Fellows, or Free Masons, are going to be the leading means of triumph and success to this work, they will make a great mistake, and meet with bitter disappointment at last. "My kingdom is not of this world," is as true now as when the words were first spoken by Jesus to his ancient apostles. Our safety is found in doing just what God has commanded us to do, without being carried away by partisan politics, secret organizations, etc., none of which are in harmony with the kingdom of God.

Conference Minutes.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Conference convened in Unity Hall, Westminster Street, Providence, Rhode Island, February 8, 1896, at 2:30 p. m.; F. M. Sheehy in chair, Myron C. Fisher clerk. Reports received from Elders G. H. Gates, G. W. Robley, G. S. Yerrington, J. Smith, N. C. Eldridge, J. Gilbert, E. O. Toombs, W. Bradbury, C. A. Coombs, F. M. Sheehy, R. Bullard, J. B. Pearce; Priests A. B. Pierce, I. B. Ames, D. T. Shaw, T. H. Moore; Teachers H. W. Arnold, G. Smith; Deacons M. Gondolf, W. F. Frost. Bishop's agent, R. Bullard, reported: May 11, 1895, on hand $77.65; received $1,523.66; expended $1,413.92; February 8, 1896, on hand $187.39. Next conference to convene October 10, 1896, at Fall River, Massachusetts. Present district officers all continued. By motion it was ordered that all statistical and priesthood reports be sent to district clerk at least ten days before conference convenes. Reunion committee reported: Total receipts $339.06; total expenditures $336.76; on hand $2.30. Tent committee reported having collected $85.26. Both committees discharged and moneys turned over to district treasurer. Committee on branch reports found total of forty-three baptisms since last report. George Smith recommended to office of elder. Decision of Providence branch sustained regarding case of Geo. and Sarah Paxton and rehearing refused. Committee appointed, consisting of district president, officers of Providence branch, and missionary in charge to consider the application of Woodville people for new branch. Conference sustained the committee appointed by Philadelphia district to consider the division of their district. Preaching by George Smith, F. M. Sheehy, and W. H. Kelley.

DECATUR.

Conference met in Lamoni, at ten a. m., February 22, 1896; William Anderson president; E. L. Page secretary, J. A. Gunsolley assistant. President Anderson paid a just tribute to our deceased brother, Myron J. Haskins, referring in feeling terms to his faithful services in the mission, as also his dying testimony to the truth of the latter-day work. Branch reports: Leon 42. Lone Rock 88. Cainesville 50; 11 absent. Lucas 158; 1 dropped, 1 died, 10 absent. Davis City 68; 1 died, 26 absent. Hiteman 43; 4 absent. Centerville 40; 8 received, 7 removed, 1 died, 8 absent. Lamoni 1,093; 12 baptized, 28 received, 7 removed, 11 died. Pleasanton 114; no change. Greenville 40; 5 baptized, 5 absent. Allendale 81; 6 removed, 1 died, 16 absent. Wirt 34; 10 removed, 1 died, 15 absent. Ministry reporting: Elders J. Smith, W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert, H. A. Stebbins baptized 14, W. Anderson, R. M. Elvin, J. S. Snively baptized 6, G. Derry, A. S. Cochran baptized 3, J. Whitehead, D. Dancer, M. M. Turpen, R. S. Salyards, I. P. Baggerly, W. N. Ray, J. Shippy, D. W. Wight, M. Shaw, J. Allen, E. L. Page, T. J. Bell baptized 3, J. W. Loach, P. McPeck, S. V. Bailey, H. N. Snively, J. M. Brown, — Lane, S. Ackerly, E. Keeler, J. Wahlstrom; Priests C. H. Blakesley, S. D. Shippy, E. E. Marshall, E. McHarness, G. F. York, F. E. Cochran, J. A. Gunsolley, S. K. Sorenson, E. Sparks; Teacher J. Harp; Deacon C. F. Church. Report of seventeenth Sunday school convention: Met at Lamoni, February 20, continuing over two days, holding six sessions. Number of schools reporting 11; represented 9; schools in district last report 12; received since 1; present number 13. Total membership of district last report 685; present membership 710; gain 25. Amount on hand last report $23.81; received since $2; expended $24.70; on hand $1.11. Oral reports heard from district superintendent and secretary indicating in general a prosperous condition of the work. Delegates were elected to General Convention and the former officers of the association reelected; namely, superintendent, F. E. Cochran; associate, A. M. Chase; secretary, Elbert A. Smith; treasurer, Israel A. Smith. The officers were authorized to choose time and place of next convention, appoint program committee, etc. The balance of the time was spent in prayer and experience meetings and the rendering of suitable programs. Respectfully, Elbert A. Smith, secretary. Bishop's agent's report for term ending February 22, 1896: Receipts: Balance last report $1,440.20; tithes and offerings $1,226.20; from Bishop $1,035.06; house rent $28; total $3,729.46. Expenditures: To elders' families $3,185.32; to elders' expenses $43.79; others $298.18; notes to Bishop $200; repairs on house $1.95; postage 22 cents. Audited and found correct. The Lamoni branch requested that J. A. Gunsolley be ordained to the office of elder. Request granted. Report of tent committee read, accepted, and committee continued. Voted to take up during conference a collection for tent expenses. The following delegates were appointed to next General Conference (entitled to seventy-two votes): Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert, Alexander H. Smith, Frank Criley, William Anderson, H. A. Stebbins, E. L. Kelley, R. S. Salyards, J. W. Gillen, Joseph S. Snively, Heman C. Smith, F. M. Weld, S. V. Bailey, Fred A. Smith, I. P. Baggerly, Columbus Scott, J. W. Wight, Duncan Campbell, O. B. Thomas, I. N. Roberts, Sr. Anna Salyards, Charles H. Jones, William Thompson, E. C. Briggs, M. M. Turpen, A. D. Greer, E. B. Morgan, J. R. Evans, Lucy Resseguie, H. R. Harder, M. B. Williams. The delegates present were authorized to cast the entire vote. William Anderson was chosen district president and his selection was made unanimous. Nominees for district secretary: B. M. Anderson, H. R. Harder, and E. L. Page who declined serving longer. Of these B. M. Anderson was elected. Resolved that a vote of thanks be extended to Bro. Edward L. Page for his long and faithful services as district secretary, and that the district president, secretary, and Bishop's agent decide upon the amount to be paid Bro. Page. B. M. Anderson was appointed district treasurer. David Dancer was sustained as Bishop's agent. Ordered that elder's licenses be provided for Isaac Phillips, J. W. Loach, J. A. Gunsolley, and Price McPeck, and Priests Morgan D. Lewis, George Young, George York, and Ed McHarness. At Sunday prayer service J. A. Gunsolley was ordained an elder. Preaching by J. R. Lambert, Joseph Smith, and Mark H. Forscutt. Adjourned to meet at Hiteman, Iowa, June 20, 1896, at ten a. m.

OHIO.

Conference convened at Sand Run, Ohio, February 22, 1896, at ten a. m., choosing James Moler to preside, A. Haws associate; J. L. Goodrich secretary pro tem. Forenoon session occupied in ten-minute speeches by the ministry and others. Branch reports read and approved (except three, which were returned for correction, etc.), showing a total membership of 526, a gain of 22 since the reunion in August. Ministry reporting: Elders J. Moler, H. E. Moler, T. Mathews, R. Etzenhouser, A. Haws, J. L. Goodrich, C. Cooper, P. Ray, A. B. Kirkendall, and A. W. Kriebel; Priests D. J. Hannah and W. H. Rhoads. Reunion committee made partial report. Nothing definite decided upon. The following persons were selected delegates to the General Conference: Albert Haws, J. L. Goodrich, Mattie Moler, Eliza Goodrich, Edith Wren, Charles Cooper, Carrie Barstow, A. B. Kirkendall, H. E. Moler, S. J. Jeffers, V. M. Goodrich, Thomas Mathews, Elizabeth Jeffers, May Cooper, Mattie E. Kirkendall. Bishop's agent's report: Total receipts $661.23; expenses $621.15; due church $40.08. Preaching by Elders James Moler, S. J. Jeffers, J. L. Goodrich, T. Mathews, H. E. Moler, and A. Haws. By unanimous vote the present officers viz., James Moler president, A. B. Kirkendall secretary, and S. J. Jeffers; Bishop's agent, were continued. Resolved, that the committee on reunion report to the district president at its earliest convenience, and that the next conference be called by the district president.

NORTHEASTERN MISSOURI.

Bishop's agent's report referred to committee to audit and report at next conference. T. W. Chatburn, M. M. Turpen, and Louise Palfrey were chosen delegates to General Conference. Next conference will meet at Huntsville, Missouri, at call of district president, and the district tent will be used.

Sunday School Associations.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.

District association met at Springerton, Illinois, February 15, 1896, at three p. m.; Isaac A. Morris superintendent, M. R. Brown secretary pro tem. Treasurer's report: On hand $1.99. Some appropriate remarks by superintendent. The following schools reported: Zion's Hope, Kibbie, Mt. Pleasant. No report from Tunnel Hill and Bright Hope. The following brethren made short talks about the work: M. R. Brown, D. Webb, Wm. Brewer, H. Walker, H. Rankins, J. F. Thomas, and J. W. Stone. M. H. Bond was chosen delegate to the Convention at Kirtland, Ohio. Adjourned sine die. (Minutes arranged by Arthur H. Burroughs secretary.)

NOTICE.

The Annual Convention of the General Sunday School Association will meet at Kirtland, Ohio, on the 3d and 4th of April next. As large an attendance of workers as is possible is desired. All associations should see that they are represented by properly elected delegates. Some good reports are coming in, showing a marked progress in the work. All reports should be mailed to the secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, at once.

Respectfully soliciting a large attendance at this convention, I am,

In bonds,

E. A. BLAKESLEE.

TO THE SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

Matters of importance having been deferred from the last General Conference, with a likelihood that they shall come up for final action at the coming conference at Kirtland, Ohio, it is expedient that as many of the quorum as can possibly attend should do so. Several members of the quorum have informed me that they expect to attend, but in order that we may transact the business that will likely come up it will be necessary that a majority of the quorum should be present. It is also expedient that we become more fully organized at the coming conference.

Members need not report their labors to me; the report to the church secretary will suffice. So far as I know all the members are supplied with license. Should there be any who have not yet been supplied, please notify me.

Two of our number, viz., Brn. E. E. Wheeler and George W. Shute, have been called to lay down their armor and take their station in the majority marshalled on the other side. Thank God that in life they were valiant and in death they were firm. It is with feelings of sorrow that we so soon have been called upon to record the word "dead" opposite their names in our record.

If at all possible, brethren, attend the coming General Conference at Kirtland.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. WILLIAMS, Sec. of Quo.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Central California district conference will convene at Hollister, Friday, March 27, 1896, at ten a. m. Branch secretaries are requested to send in their reports in due season. The Sunday school convention will hold a session during the conference, at which all the officers in the district are expected to report.

EUREKA REFRIGERATOR.

BEST IN USE.

Cold Storage of Meats and Fruits Secured by an Improved, Simple, and Scientific Arrangement.

The Eureka Refrigerator is the result of over seven years experimenting. The inventor, a practical butcher and handler of meats in stock, has succeeded in so combining economy and utility that ice is very slowly consumed and moisture prevented from collecting on the walls of the Refrigerator—Low temperature, and Dry atmosphere combined at a moderate cost.

Compared with other Cooling boxes the Eureka requires but little ice. The walls of the box are always dry, so thoroughly dry that a match can be lighted on them at any time. Meats and fruits can be kept sweet and sound for a long time.

This is secured by a new and scientific system of ventilation, by which moisture is carried off and food products kept cold and dry.

Circulars and testimonials mailed on application. Address the manufacturer, M. WILLETT, LAMONI, IOWA.

THE THREE BOOKS

AT POPULAR PRICES.

CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

THE ETHICS OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

PRESTON W. SEARCH, in the Educational Review, New York, February. Condensed for PUBLIC OPINION.

THE great, the vital question of the educational world is, What are the schools doing toward the making of character? For this is the supreme end of all education. If the public schools are not giving a moral, as well as an intellectual and physical development; if they are not lifting mankind to a higher standard of life, then they are not meeting the requirements of their mission and have no right to their place in our National economy.

The charge is frequently heard, advanced by those who have not caught the spirit of modern education, that "the public schools are godless schools." This is the cheap doctrine frequently taught by those interested in the denominational school, and sometimes uttered by some narrow ecclesiastic who feels that his profession has a monopoly of all ethical teaching. Now I hold, essentially and fundamentally, to a complete separation of the church and the state; but there is one thing to be remembered—this is a nation founded in religious faith and characterized by the recognition of supreme intelligence. This is not a nation of agnosticism. This nation—the American nation—is fundamentally and forever a Christian nation, and as such has a right to the recognition of God in the public schools. I like the teacher free from religious cant and denominational bias; but, at the same time, I admire the one who in viewing creation does not close his eyes to glimpses of the Creator, and who does not hesitate to look up from "Nature to Nature's God." But while the idea of God has its entitled place in schoolroom recognition, I do not believe ethics is best taught as a creed. Ethics cannot be taught from the outside. Ethical training must be an integral part of the every exercise of daily life. With this view of the question, the public schools are pre-eminently the place where opportunity is given for character building.

Now let me consider a few cardinal features of the public schools that tend toward ethical culture. There is an ethical value in activity. "An idle brain is the Devil's workshop" is not only a trite saying but a truism. There is an ethical value in order, which is "heaven's first law." Disorder is immoral. The loss of respect for authority, the consciousness that there is something smart in evading the teacher and in doing wrong, the encouragement to deception and dishonesty—these, and a hundred other elements in a disorderly school, make for the unmaking of character. Now the order which is here deemed so desirable is not the old-time dead order of inspirationless form and absolute quiet, where the normal activities of life gave place to the more important ticking of the clock, but that happy condition of vitalized workers most favorable for the performance of work. That prohibition of whispering and other arbitrary exactions are immoral is more than susceptible of proof. Order to be of ethical value must be of natural character.

Again, there is an ethical value in habit. It is habit that forms us, that makes us or damns us. It is the mission of the school to form correct habit, to give correct thinking and the placing of one's life in conformity to that which is true and good. There is an ethical value in association. I admit that association under inactive, disorderly circumstances and conditions of improper habit is immoral; but, on the other hand, the child brought up by himself is fearfully unfortunate in his moral tendencies. The highest type of manhood is not developed in the monastery, or under circumstances of riotous imagination, but face to face with the realities and temptations of life. There are, no doubt, objectionable things that appear even in good schools; but compared with the things which will go wrong in model homes, it is a wonder that the superior results are so pronounced in the public schools.

Literary culture has its value in the formation of character. The analysis or framing of a pure sentence, the contact with a lofty thought, or the appreciation of a noble sentiment, all give color to the better tastes. Hence the subject-matter of the school-work has ethical value. There is an ethical value in play. Play in children is a divine expression. There is nothing on the school premises so fruitful in demoralization as the standing around of school children, or grouping together, with nothing to do. On the other hand, play, sport, and romp, under proper direction, have inestimable value.

In all the particulars already specified the public schools are making character of a higher order. But there is another and even a more powerful factor in ethical training, and that is motive. The old-time idea was that the child must bring his life into conformity to requirement. There was no choice, no volition, no spontaneity—all was repression and enforced obedience. It was taken for granted that the child disliked school, that the pursuit of knowledge was distasteful, and that there was no safe way for the master to maintain his place, excepting by breaking the will of disobedient pupils. Growing out of this spirit came a long line of false incentives. This reference is to rewards of merit, prizes, percentages, honor places, and a hundred other inventions, of the evil one. The child who is taught to work for a prize, be it even in committing to memory passages of the Scriptures, is bribed, and, to that extent, corrupted. He is not taught to love truth because of its own beauty. There grows up within him, not pure love for the thing presented, but a desire for something unnatural, something selfish, something temporary. Hence all such incentives are false to the spirit of education and are immoral in their tendencies. What should be given the child in their stead? Nothing but a higher motive; and that is, to work from pure love for work and because it is right. With the removal of the desire to surpass others for the bare sake of being ahead, there comes an interest in others' welfare, and cultivation is given to the true spirit of true socialism.

Consideration has been given to the motive involved in study; let us now direct attention to the motive belonging to government. All true government must be self-government. Personal responsibility belongs just as much to the child as to the maturer person. Many a man has been saved by responsibility, and so may be the case with the child. For this reason I do not like watching children and the employment of detective characteristics. The schoolroom should be characterized by natural order and self-reliant strength. No school is ever organized for effective work until self-government is possible. Self-reliance, independence, and character itself come from within, not without; and never until a child is so taught to work, is he safe for the duties of life and of citizenship.

THE HOPE OF IMMORTALITY.

ALLEGORY and metaphor at best are poor supports for the fainting soul perishing for hope in immortality. The sublime hope that lives within the heart of man rests upon a surer foundation than the delightful imagery of the poet. It is founded upon the eternal rock of truth, and will grow brighter and stronger with the years. Life is a wonderful, beautiful mystery, contrary in itself to all visible laws of the universe and therefore owing its existence to some unseen and incomprehensible power. We know that it is a part of the divine plan that man should exist, and the hope of future existence is therefore based upon an actuality. We further know that all things change, but none cease to exist. Ages cannot add one bit of star dust to the universe, nor take away one atom of the ether in which the worlds are supported. Who can believe that while gross materialism is indestructible, the soul, the intelligence, the master of matter, can be fitfully summoned from nowhere and as suddenly annihilated? We live to-day, imprisoned in a material cell. We shall not cease to exist when in the course of nature that prison house is no longer able to withhold the strengthened and triumphant soul from the sublime destiny willed for it by the supreme Ruler of the universe. It was not a part of the divine plan to demonstrate the future to mankind, but instead to cheer his fainting spirits with the bright star of hope of immortality. There was a time, before the divine spirit that God has implanted within the breast of man had learned to conquer the animal instincts, when this star shone fitfully and with uncertain light, but as the man comes nearer to his God, the star shines with a refulgence and a glory that no pessimism can dim, no insidious assaults of unbelief conceal.

MUST NOT REMARRY.

STARTLING DECISION REGARDING DIVORCE LAWS BY THE SUPREME COURT.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The Journal of this city states this morning that the Supreme Court of the United States has handed down a decision which apparently establishes a uniform divorce law affecting the whole country. The writer of this article also makes the astounding assertion that it is declared by the highest judicial authority in the land, on the face of the decision, that persons under the ban of divorce in one State, who have married in another State, are criminals and can be arrested for bigamy; that the decision illegitimizes children born of such unions. He continues: "A broad and general principle is here laid down which becomes operative, as interpreted by good constitutional lawyers, in all the States.

"Wherever there are persons who have been divorced and have married again, wherever there are children born of such marriage, and wherever there is property affected by such compact, the influence of this decision will be felt.

"Heretofore it has been supposed that the subject of divorce was one belonging exclusively to the State government. The result has been that we have laws on the subject varying from those of Oklahoma, where divorce is granted for almost any cause, to those of South Carolina, where no divorce of any kind is permitted. Few States have similar divorce laws, which are to be found in greater variety in this country than anywhere else on earth.

"This condition of affairs has made it possible for people to secure divorces and to remarry in utter disregard of decency. People divorced in one State, where one of the parties would be put under a prohibitory ban, would at once set the principles of the law at defiance by going over to another State, perhaps across the river, there to remarry and return to the original State, where this second marriage is usually regarded as binding.

"So flagrant has this scandal become that Congress was recently appealed to to put the whole subject upon a uniform basis with one of federal law of divorce applicable in all States.

"But now the Supreme Court at Washington has come forward and made a ruling which may add to the present tangle. The status of thousand of divorces and millions of property is involved in the decision of the court."—Kansas City World of March 2, 1896.

THE SITUATION IN UTAH.

THE situation is a perplexing, yet not altogether a discouraging one. It is peculiar that all who labor in this field have spiritual encouragement to believe that there is to be a great work done in Utah, and yet the prospect of its immediate accomplishment is by no means flattering. There was a time when our elders were heard by large audiences and many returned to the old paths resolved to walk therein; but now the scene has changed, and only the few can be induced to hear, and it is the ones of a family, and twos of a city that yield obedience to the truth.

The policy of the ministry has not materially changed. They have universally appealed to the standard church books, and also to the teachings of Joseph, the Seer, and the history of the church under him.

For one year it was thought by some that the action of the General Conference of 1893 had interfered with the use of church history, in our work, to our hurt; but others thought not. This matter was, however, set at rest by the action of the Joint Council provided for in the revelation of 1894, when they said:—

Resolved that it is the opinion of this council that there is nothing in the resolution of April, 1893, on church history, that should in any way interfere with the preparation and publication of an authentic church history by the church.

Resolved, further, that it is the opinion of this council that church history, both ancient and modern, may be freely used as a means of information, for what the same may be worth.

During this year the ministry in Utah had not ceased to so use history though thought by some to be handicapped. This resolution however removed all doubt as to the wisdom of their course, and so this policy has been uninterruptedly the same from the beginning; yet they have not been able to awaken the people of Utah from their lethargy. The facts are that the tendency of the Utah people has been to drift away from the books, both standard and historical; and hence an appeal to the books has no charms for them. With them what the church does is right and the end of controversy. This tendency upon their part will go far to explain the change in results. It could not have been because of a change of policy on our part, nor even a change of administration. The greatest change of any one period took place between 1879 and 1882 under the experienced and able management of Pres. W. W. Blair, whose zeal and devotion we all know to be equal to any of our ministry. Elder Joseph Luff in his autobiography relates how in 1879 Brn. Blair, Derry, Anthony, Deuel, and himself were received by crowded houses and many were added to the faith. Again he relates that he was returned to Utah from the fall conference of 1882, and on pages 254-5 he says:—

A change had come over the scene in Salt Lake, however, since the time of my former visit. The new chapel had been built, and we were no longer dependent in that respect; but the interest in hearing seemed to have died out or nearly so. The attendance at public preaching averaged from twenty-five to fifty and no effort we could make seemed to improve the situation.

In Salt Lake the situation remains to this day about as Elder Luff describes it. We have lost nothing of interest in these fourteen years, nor have we gained much. So it will be seen that the period of decline was emphatically from 1879 to 1882 just when we were so zealously and watchfully represented, and while we had a periodical especially devoted to the interests of Utah work.

There may have been other causes for the decline besides the one we have mentioned. We are inclined to think that there were some special causes, one of which was the part the church took in sending brethren to Washington in the interest of legislation touching polygamy. It certainly embittered the people of Utah against us, and they did look, and have ever since looked upon this as done in a spirit of persecution. This policy may have been a mistake, but we are not prepared to say so. If we knew just how much or how little influence the brethren had in shaping legislation in Washington, and what the result would have been had they not been there, we might compare said results with results now obtaining and form some conclusion, but as this we cannot know, this question must be one of those to be laid aside for future adjudication. But this we do know, that the people of Utah misunderstood the motive prompting this action, and what was intended in self-defense and in the interests of truth and justice was interpreted to be persecution.

Another reason for their standing aloof seems evident to us to be that sense of conscious weakness which shrinks from contact with that manifestly stronger. What else could cause their authorities to forbid discussion with us under the special plea that God will care for his own work, while they feel it incumbent to defend that same work when assailed by others than the Reorganization? And what else could prompt their almost universal advice not to hear the Josephites? Occasionally we see in their own publications that a sectarian minister has advised his flock not to hear the Utah elders, and they interpret it to mean that he was afraid that his craft was in danger. Is not this philosophy as good applied to themselves?

Another cause for the present lack of interest is the attitude of the secular press. When the division existed between the People's and the Liberal party, the Liberal press was constantly advertising our work under the supposition that what was against Utah Mormonism was in favor of the Liberal cause, and to their interest to uphold. Now, since the division on national party lines, the press of both parties is anxious to draw within their lines Mormon support, and so with fawning flattery the once "nasty polygamist" is an honorable man. Even the Salt Lake Tribune, once thought to be an uncompromising foe to the Mormons, and which voluntarily espoused our cause, has changed front. He who once in Tribune parlance was "old smooth-bore," is now "Hon. George Q. Cannon," and he who was once "the one-eyed pirate of the mountains," is now "that dear old man the Hon. Daniel H. Wells," etc.

It is said that one of the issues once existing between us is dead; viz.: polygamy; yet they are ever ready to defend it, and publish and keep on sale constantly books teaching and upholding the practice of this dogma. It is much as one of our associates once wrote: "You may go into a neighborhood and preach a sermon on the New Jerusalem, making not the most distant allusion to polygamy, and they will crowd the subject upon you for discussion before you can get out of the house."

We wish sincerely that our observation, after months spent in their midst, would justify the conclusion that they had practically abandoned this doctrine. We would then have more confidence in the sincerity of their declarations. But perhaps we speak hastily. Have they ever officially declared a practical abandonment? If so, will some one please point us to such official declaration? The famous "manifesto" says:—

And I now publicly declare that my advice to the Latter Day Saints is to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the law of the land.

This signed by the president of the church and adopted by the church in General Conference, plainly forbids the solemnization of plural marriages, but does not touch the point as to whether those already in that relation, when the manifesto was adopted, should continue in that relation or not.

How about the Constitution of the State of Utah, which Mormon delegates signed in the most solemn manner, and which was afterwards ratified so overwhelmingly at the polls? is there anything more in this document? Here it is:—

Perfect toleration of religious sentiment is guaranteed. No inhabitant of this State shall ever be molested in person or property on account of his or her mode of religious worship; but polygamous or plural marriages are forever prohibited.

It will be seen that this covers just so much as and no more ground than the manifesto, leaving untouched the question of practice on the part of those already involved. Perhaps, however, this is as much as the constitution should contain, and now it all rests with the legislature as to whether they will provide adequate penalty for such practice, or not. Have they done so, or will they do so?

But this is the darker side of the picture. Though we may not at present be able to reach the multitudes, there are honest souls in almost every place hungering for the bread of life, those who only need encouragement to enable them to face social ostracism and stand on the side of truth and right. The church should maintain as strong and vigorous a ministry in Utah as possible, and continue in love to the people, and with trust in God to strike sturdy, wise, and faithful blows, then the final results need not be feared. The fact that the weak force sustained in Utah has, notwithstanding these many and increasing obstacles, held their ground with unwavering interest for fourteen years argues that if their numbers are increased and they sustained progress will be assured. Shall this be done? or will the church continue to spend time and means in holding on? "As wise men, judge ye." That the opposition is weakening on some lines is apparent.

What in the present crisis would be good generalship?

AUTUMN LEAVES.

SUBSCRIBERS to Autumn Leaves for the year 1896 have undoubtedly been gratified by the fulfillment of the pledges of the editor, made during the close of the preceding year—to keep up the standard of the magazine and to make improvement so far as possible with the facilities at command.

The January, February, and March numbers of the Leaves have already spoken, indicating what its contributors have labored to present for the instruction and entertainment of its readers. Numerous excellent articles appeared in those numbers, the worth of which have doubtless been noted by many if not all the readers of the magazine. The April number is also replete with excellent matter, rich in moral and spiritual value. We shall not undertake, nor is it necessary, to mention articles in particular. It is enough to state that the subject matter of the periodical has steadily fulfilled what was promised in its behalf with the numbers of the new year.

Its past and its present are well known as a means for good and an educational force among its readers, young and old. Its continued growth and success as a power for good is a matter of interest to the church as a body and to its membership individually.

Not through the sense of hearing alone is the heart, the mind, reached, and thoughtful attention obtained; it is also through the personal attention secured and held in the act of reading that much of the good work of moral and mental education is advanced. The practice of reading is invaluable in the work of self-help, self-education, self-discipline, and essential to the success of it. What one reads is also a matter of very great importance; for character for good or ill is determined by what one absorbs, retains; and is influenced by and made up of what is stored in the mind. "As a man thinketh so is he," is an old and often quoted phrase that has both practical and psychological truth as its basis; hence the need of furnishing children, young people, and adults with proper mental aliment that the standards of moral and spiritual truths erected and maintained be "true and righteous altogether."

It is said of a well-known popular writer that the works written in his later years gave evidence of the author's having retrograded; that they were not up to his former productions. And, the reason assigned for it was, that his later reading had not been of the high character that had been taken up by him in the past. He had degenerated by mental association with or absorption of matter that resulted in lowering his standards; hence the results were manifested in the written expressions, the literary productions of the author.

It has been and is our belief that the inspiration of the latter-day work is approaching and has entered upon what we might term the scientific or higher features of its development, that is, the disclosure, the revelation of things in the complete light as truth defines them; viz., "as they have been, as they are, and as they are to come."—Doctrine and Covenants.

To us this means that actual, practical, constant manifestation and application of the principles and power of truth that shall constantly increase the light and power of its forces, attracting and retaining the love of the "true" and the "honest in heart" that shall cause the army of the Lord to become "very great" in its advocacy and defense of truth. Truth should be and is the most attractive and most potent force in the world. Nothing should nor can ever equal it in the scope and power of its hold upon the mental, moral, social, intellectual, and religious nature of men, women, youth, and children. It is the force—the only true force that can fully bring out, educate, rightly direct, properly control, carefully guard, and fully and ultimately perfect the social forces and intellectual powers of mankind. God is the creator of the divine faculties of the soul, the preserver and director of the admirable qualities of mind and heart with which he has so richly endowed the creature made in his image. No study can be equal to the course prescribed in the true realm of spiritual light; no enjoyment keener, higher, grander than that vouchsafed and to be vouchsafed to "the children of God."

If we can "receive it," casting off the incumbrances that hamper the way to light; those practices, foibles, and follies that to a great degree obstruct the path to "true knowledge"—which "is power," we shall receive more and see more of the possibilities of life and soul made manifest in the social amiableness, the inherent nobility, and the spiritual acquirements possible in "the glorious liberty of the children of God."

This is not merely a fanciful expectation, it is a correct and a true one—one that we may justly anticipate and labor for. The path to God is the way to what the uninspired mind hath not seen, that hath not yet entered into the heart—that prepared for those who seek to "see" and "do" his will in all things.

The best expressions of emancipated human nature—the divine nature apart from the purely human, those manifest in nature's noblemen and noblewomen are, we believe, portrayals, portraitures—to a degree at least, of what we believe is to be seen and known in those who shall comprehend and grasp the scope of the spirit of the gospel. It cannot overlook nor fail to provide for the complete development of the children of the covenant. It is of God, hence comprehensive, complete, perfect.

We believe that the spirit of the work implies, clearly teaches, a complete harmonious development of the nature of man; that it designs to supply, to provide, the true education, the refinement, the happiness of our young people, and old people—of all; that the result of it will be pure minds, sound bodies, high standards, and rightly-directed powers and activities; that in all our work, literary and general, we should seek for, obtain, and apply the inspiration of life in this broad sense.

Our work is general and its spirit broad and far-reaching. We believe Autumn Leaves to be one of the factors for good in the cause and so commend it to our readers.

ANOTHER SPLIT IN THE CHURCH.

FROM present indications it is pretty certain that the Salvation Army which Captain General Booth has been so anxiously endeavoring to make a universal agent for the redemption of many from the lower haunts of vice in the cities all over the world in one grand army, will become divided, and an American Army be organized independently of the original English one.

Mr. William Ballington Booth, son of the General, and his wife, have been at work in America, and succeeded well in getting things in working order, and in securing the love and confidence of the Army on this side the great waters. But, for reasons that it is said do not all appear on the surface of things, the General in command of the whole army recalled the able general commanding in America, and proposed to send some other to take his place. This the American contingent protests against, asking that William Ballington Booth and wife be retained in the command.

So far has the contest gone that it is now in contemplation to make the American Army independent of the English entirely. Mr. Booth will be asked to remain, become an American citizen, and take command.

We suppose this is fitting and proper; though it does disrupt the magnificent idea of the elder General, that of a great army all arrayed under one banner, subject to one command, and knowing but one set of methods. The American methods of army work are said to be an improvement on those in vogue in England, and differ from them; owing to the difference of climate, localities, and the people among whom the labor is being done. But, alas! it emphasizes the fact that divisions will occur where human ambitions enter into the motives of those who engage in such measures for human redemption. Whence comes the Salvation Army? The Methodist Church in America was not many years old, nor many thousands strong when it slipped from the rule of its founder, John Wesley, and became exclusively American in its character. So it will be with this Salvation Army movement. It is the Devil's business to sow dissension, and he may be remembering the value of his tactics in diverting the forces of this Salvation Army.

STILL ANOTHER MEDIUM.

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 24.—"Prof." Gilmore, an alleged medium, who has been communing with the departed spirits, while here, has been exposed by the turning on of the lights in the midst of an interesting seance. As a result the "professor" narrowly escaped being mobbed by a crowd of excited spiritualists. For several weeks the "professor" has been holding forth, and has been fairly coining money.

By the way, what kind of a conception of God is it that accepts the methods adopted by mediums as an expression of the workings of the intelligences of the universe? What capacity or sense of fitness is expressed in those who see in the means employed by mediums an evidence of divinity, worthy the workings and methods of the Intelligence who presides in the midst of all things? It is strange that anyone should be duped and deluded by such phantasies as those shown forth in the operations of spiritism. A wholesome share of the good sense of this world is helpful in things pertaining to the world to come. Fanaticism and jugglery have no connection with true religion. They give expression to the latter who are free from the former.

IS IT WANTED?

THE Herald Office has received a number of requests for a larger-type edition of the Inspired Translation of the Bible.

In order to test the strength of such demand it has been decided to make the following statement and offer: The office will issue a new edition of the Old Testament—the Old Testament only, in the type in which this matter appears—bourgeois—and sell the same, bound in cloth, at $2.00 per copy, in leather backs and corners at $2.50, in full leather at $3.00, and in higher-priced binding as ordered; provided, however, that orders for one thousand copies are sent in before beginning the work.

The required one thousand must be ordered ahead before work on the edition is begun, in order to guarantee sufficient sale to justify the outlay of $2,000, the cost of the edition. Good, unglazed book paper will be used, if the edition is ordered.

The book would be some larger than the "Two Records"—the Book of Mormon and New Testament combined.

This also should be understood—that the New Testament will not be included in the work. It can be bound in, if desired, at an added cost of 75 cents—$2.75 for the Bible complete. However, the type of the New Testament will be the large pica type of the large-type edition of the Testament.

The Herald Office management does not advise the issue of this work. The book so issued would be cumbersome and quite too large for general use. However, to answer the repeated requests of a number this offer is made. It is apparent that such editions cannot be issued to accommodate a limited number of persons.

The type of our present Inspired Translation of the Bible is as large and as plain as the Oxford and other popular editions of the Bible.

The above is respectfully submitted for consideration. Orders need not be accompanied by cash until books are issued.

Address the Business Manager, Frank Criley, at Lamoni, Iowa.

THIS IS FOR THE SUPERSTITIOUS.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 4.—A. K. McDonald, a copyist in the Recorder's Office, died last Sunday. When he was stricken by the fatal illness McDonald was working on record book No. 1313, he was engaged in entering deed No. 13, which was filed February 13. He will be buried by Undertaker Cullinane, whose place of business is at No. 1313 North Jefferson Avenue. The superstitiously inclined will construe these circumstances into an evidence of fatality.

The above, heading and all, is what we find in a leading daily. We reprint it for the benefit of any whom it may concern, though we hope it directly concerns none of our readers, because the spirit of our work is so foreign, so antagonistic to the superstitious, that we take it for granted that none of our people are burdened with such vagaries as belief in the "thirteen" or "Friday" theory. It is only when individuals are insufficiently enlightened and strengthened by "the light of truth" that the fanatical element of spirituality, so-called, creeps in and a mysticism attended by fear attaches to their conceptions of spiritual things. "There is no fear in love," wrote the apostle; and it may be added, in harmony with the spirit of the liberty of the children of God, "There is no semblance of superstition in the spirit of the gospel."

We would just as soon start on a journey on Friday and in a company of thirteen as on another day or with a different number. The Apostle Paul was interested in "casting down imaginations." Like the work in which he took part our work is in opposition to all forms of the leaven of superstition.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS, ATTENTION.

TO AVOID duplicate orders for the Gospel Quarterlies all schools are requested to see that new secretaries or others do not send duplicate orders for Quarterlies. That is frequently done by newly elected officers remitting and requesting Quarterlies sent to their address, failing to make change of the old address—that of the former secretary or one ordering instead.

Neglect to order properly has caused loss of postage and much unnecessary labor. Please be particular, and oblige the business department.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

VICTORIA, Ill., March 2.

Rev. E. L. Kelley:—Inclosed please find $10,—which my wife [Mrs. Bessie P. Temple] in her last sickness wished me to send you, in trust for the use of the church to which she belonged. While I am not myself a member I will faithfully execute for her, any directions or wishes of hers; and I am free to say, No better wife, mother, and friend ever lived. Will you please insert the inclosed obituary notice in your paper, and oblige,

Your friend,

J. W. TEMPLE.

We insert the foregoing letter of Mr. Temple, as it bears a just tribute to a worthy sister and exhibits her devotion to the Master's work, even in the hour of her departure to the other side. His witnesses are indeed in the one family—in earth and in heaven.

WANTED, GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.

THE Herald Office wishes to obtain the following numbers of the Quarterlies, to be bound for use of the General Association. Who can furnish the numbers?

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE call attention to the letter of Bro. S. W. L. Scott in notice of an extract taken by us from a late Indianapolis News. Our apology to Brn. Columbus and Leonard Scott for inserting the extract in HERALD is that the article as a whole seemed to us to reflect credit on the Scott family, rather than discredit; recognizing their devotion to what they held to be truth, and gave their life influence and talents to make that truth known to others. We further saw in the extract quoted the acknowledgement that the gospel of Jesus Christ as espoused by John A. Scott and his sons, with others of the Scott family, had by its spiritual grace and power made able advocates and defenders of the truth of Brethren Columbus and Leonard; worthy of the love and esteem of their comrades in faith, and the respect of the opponents of the work. We regret that Bro. Leonard was hurt, or offended; and while we assure him that the HERALD, though slow in attaining to majority, is earnestly striving to observe the force and properly estimate the value of the Savior's injunction to the disciples, "Except ye become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven;" we ask him to pardon us our offense.

We publish on the cover of this week's issue a report of a purported decision by the United States Supreme Court on the divorce question, from which it appears that a national divorce law, applicable to all the States, is to be the finale of the present regrettable and baneful looseness made possible under the varied and low statute standards of many States on this social question. The report may not be true; however, we publish the clipping for its moral effect. That the Supreme Court should lend the weight of its great influence in behalf of a national uniform legal standard by which the marriage relation would more sacredly be guarded, and regulated according to the law given man "in the beginning," and which permits of legal separation for but one cause, is in our opinion worthy of the high character and according to the exalted functions of said court.

Twenty-four have been baptized at and near Cameron, Nebraska, since Brn. Payne and Richards began labor there; others interested. This Sr. L. M. Richards writes in a recent letter. Sr. R. also states that Bro. Payne makes the truth so plain and apparent that children can understand it. That is right, and something we fear our elders often fail to do—make their meaning and points sufficiently plain and simple. The average elder so often quotes passages of scripture that he supposes such passages are fairly well known to the majority of hearers, while in fact they are not. Many speakers also talk too rapidly, forgetting that all cannot follow them closely. We believe men are safe in treating even well-known passages of scripture deliberately, thus making sure that their expositions are clearly understood by their hearers. Personally, we have listened very many times to analyses of the passages that support the first principles of the gospel and are yet not tired of so doing. We want to encourage the elders not to grow weary in doing their work closely and plainly. No one should fear lest what he preaches has been "heard before." The truth bears rehearing; indeed its plainest principles need to be well known and to be planted deeply in the heart and mind. Too much of the preaching receives a passing hearing; and some of it goes over the heads of audiences. Only that that is heard attentively, understandingly, and that finds lodgment in the heart, is effective. A minister engaged to conduct service in Windsor Castle was asked how he managed to preach to both the Queen and the hardworking servants, replied: "I preach to the scullery maid and the Queen understands me."

Mrs. Henry Sheffer, a sister living at Cheboygan, Michigan, writes that she has awakened an interest in the faith and believes good would be done could an elder visit that place. Her husband desires baptism. Anyone writing them would be met at Cheboygan or Mackinaw. An open schoolhouse and a home await the coming elder.

Sr. N. V. Pearson writes from Hamon, Texas, including herself among the numerous scattered Saints who long to see the work established in the localities where they reside. Bro. T. J. Sheppard had preached there in August, 1894. She asks that elders in the Southwest labor at that point, where good could be done.

Bro. Quincy Anderson, of Ozark, Missouri, says the Saints at that point are at work on a new chapel, which they hope to complete by fall. Bro. Henry Sparling had been refused use of other church buildings, hence the movement for a church of their own.

The government of Peru—Roman Catholic Peru—is taking steps to secure legislation to provide for the registration of Protestant marriages; another factor in the separation of church and state; another step in progress.

Bro. W. R. Elston, of Houston, Texas, wishes the elders who can do so to make him a call. His address is No. 1615, West Street.

Mr. D. A. McAllister, of Marlin, Texas, whose letter we published in a late issue, writes of his growing convictions of the truth of our work, which he will obey and for which he hopes to do what he can. Like thousands of others he rejoices because having found the true way.

Bro. Edward Trimby, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, expresses the opinion that more frequent visitations there by the ministry of the East would be of great value to those already in the faith and result in additions to the church, of some now not far from the kingdom. Those of the fold need to be fed, he says, and a permanent organization established and maintained in that large city. Brighamite elders had called, but were readily rejected as out of harmony with the word.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly is laboring in Northern Missouri, where he will continue until General Conference.

A shock of earthquake in Berks County, Pennsylvania, was sufficient to break window glass in some places.

Events of the week: Spanish mobs have assaulted Consulates of the United States, at Barcelona and Valencia. Li Hung Chang, of China, and representatives of other nations have been delegated to attend the ceremonies of the coronation of the Czar of Russia—a significant fact. Italian troops have been defeated and almost annihilated in Abyssinia, the latter being aided, it is said, by Russian and French military experts. The Italian government ministry has resigned and the country is in an uproar. Henri Rochefort, the French editor, predicts a revolution in Spain; others predict the lessening of Italian influence in European powers and policies. Altogether, things in this world are moving and practically "in commotion."

Enterprising Oriental statesmanship seems under full swing at present, and its methods largely determining the course of modern politics in Asia and Africa. A detachment of Russian marines landed at the Korean capital on February 10, whereupon the king ordered the premier and seven others of his ministers beheaded. Japanese proclivities in the ministers are said to have determined their fate. It is supposed that in Corea, for the present at least, the office seeks the man.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"As the bright blue of heaven brightens into stars,
So God's great love shines forth in promises,
Which, falling softly through our prison bars,
Daze not our eyes, but with their soft light bless."

WE are in receipt of a letter from a brother in the field, charming in its contents, from which we give an extract:—

"A strong indication of growing compliance with the injunction, 'Come up higher,' has found expression by a noble Daughter of Zion placing in my hand a ring to be exchanged for cash at some jeweler's, and find its way to the tithing fund. The set of the ring has been valued at sixty-five dollars; what will be realized remains to be seen. The procedure on the part of this sister is certainly in evidence that, with her, the treasures of earth, with its glittering gems, are not to be compared with heavenly treasure. How cheering it is to see the children of God comply with the various requirements he has made, nor is it being too rapidly done in these 'hastening times.'"

When a call was made by the Bishop for money to carry on the Temple Lot business, the response was so ready and willing that it became necessary for him to say, "Don't send any more." Do not all these things indicate that the Lord is moving upon the hearts of his people in preparation for the consummation of his work?

Another incident: In testimony meeting last Sabbath, a young brother arose, and while bearing his testimony the Spirit rested upon him in power and the gift of tongues came upon him. The interpretation not being given after a time prayer was made that it might be given. After the meeting was over a brother who was sitting near the young man who spoke, asked of another what they meant by praying for the interpretation of a tongue when no tongue had been given. When told that the young brother just in front of him had spoken in tongues, he stoutly denied it, saying, "Every word he spoke was in English." There were too many witnesses against him and he then said, "I noticed a change in his language at one point in his testimony, but it was all plain English to me. At first his language was broken and imperfect, but all at once it fell upon my ear smooth and elegant like this: 'Even as the rays of light shine upon all living things, vivifying and strengthening them, so in like manner shall my Spirit shine upon my people to vivify and strengthen them, if they obey the commands given them.'"

If we are tried in any way, let us remember that we have but to hold fast to the rod of iron and our Helper is near.

COMFORTING THOUGHTS.

BY SR. ALMIRA.

"I CANNOT be reconciled," thought a sorrow-stricken mother as she sat at the open window, gazing toward the churchyard in the distance, where recently had been laid the object of her fondest love. "I cannot be reconciled to the loss of my darling Gracie. She was the life and the joy of the household. Her prattling voice turned the monotony of domestic labor into the pastime of a summer's day. In my walks she was at my side, and at night she nestled in my bosom. She was mine—my child. O cruel, relentless death that tore her from my heart and left an incurable wound. Why should my child be taken, when I have ample means to meet her every want, and the children of the destitute be spared them? And again why are so many idiots and cripples suffered to live and my beautiful, perfect child taken from me, to whom she was such a comfort,—and more, from the world, when she bade so fair to move in the highest circle? Am I more vile than they who are so inferior to me and mine? Ah, no; for I have lived an exemplary life and taught her to lisp her evening prayer to the Father, God, and I implored him to spare her to me—my own, my darling Gracie. But alas! he sent the messenger, and bore her from my sight. If she could return, I would be reconciled, even if another's hand should administer to her wants, and another's bosom be her pillow. If I only knew that she were happy!"

The mother bowed her head and dreamed. A white-robed personage stood by her side with a comforting message. He had witnessed all her sorrow and her murmuring thoughts, and he knew it was the human part that cried out in rebellion above the spiritual, so he came close to solace her. He whispered:—

"I came not to chide thee, afflicted one, but to breathe to you words of comfort concerning the Father's mysterious dealings. This sad affliction is a blessing in disguise. In the present you cannot fully understand it, but in the great future those unfathomable mysteries will be opened before you as plainly as are the experiences of one's childhood in after years. You loved your darling child, and it is right that you should, to a certain extent. Children are given for a comfort and a blessing, and she was the center of all your joys, all your hopes. You saw her suffer, fade, and die, and your heart rebelled at the dealings of that God you professed to love and revere. But he knew what temptations, what trials, what sufferings your child would have been heir to if you had retained her in this world of sin, and I was sent as a loving messenger to bear her from your arms, back to her home of eternal peace and rest. If she could come to you and have the most magnificent home on earth, she would be subject to the sins, pains, and disappointments of earth. She is secure from every woe in the fold of Christ—one of his little lambs. He bears them in his bosom, and they develop in the glory and the sunshine of perfect love. There is no sin there to hinder or tarnish their development. The curse that came by Adam's transgression was wiped out by the blood of Christ—"Suffer them to come unto me and forbid them not," is the evidence of the fact. The little ones have no sin of their own for they know not the plan of redemption, and where there is no law there is no condemnation. So dry your tears, cease your murmuring, and look up with renewed love to him who cares for your child. Lay your will on the altar, and the burden will fall at his feet. Think of the poor heathen mothers who sacrifice their loved ones to their gods. Think you that they love their children less than you do yours? Nay; they have the tie of nature, but in their blinded devotion they lay down their will and sacrifice the dearest object of their hearts to please their gods. In that respect those who are under the gospel teaching may look to the heathen for an example of devotion and trust. Your little one is not dead, for 'all are alive to God.' She is only asleep to you, and awake to Jesus, and when the trump shall sound you will behold your child more perfect than when she left you. And you shall dwell with her, if henceforth you are as obedient to God's laws as you would have required her to have been to yours. The child was his—he only lent it to you, then took it back where it never should know sorrow, never more know pain, never be weary, but with the harp and the voice of an angel, praise him who is worthy of all praise.

"Poor, sorrowing one, cannot you believe that he in loving-kindness transplanted your child to paradise? Cannot you look up through your scalding tears and say, 'Thy will be done'? If not, trust and wait and power will be given. Mortals cannot comfort you, 'tis only the Holy Spirit that can assuage your grief and heal the wound. Accept it and fill your mission—be faithful to yourself, your family, and your God."

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MARCH.

My beloved brethren, pray unto the Father with all energy of heart, that ye may be filled with this love which he hath bestowed upon all who are true followers of his Son Jesus Christ, that ye may become the sons of God, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is, that we may have this hope, that we may be purified even as he is pure.—Moroni 7: 4.

Thursday, March 12.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Prov. 23: 19–26.

Thursday, March 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Thess. 5: 14, 15.

Thursday, March 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—Doe. and Cov. 64: 8.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

SLEEPY superintendent, sleepy school.

Just in time is just too late at Sunday school.

Teachers, do you draw out or pour out?

When do you commence preparing the next Sunday's lesson?

A good way to help along a failure in the Sunday school convention is to write to different parties to take part on program, telling each to choose his own subject. Another good way is to take most of the time for the election of officers and then top out with promiscuous recitations and select readings and take no time for the discussion of helpful methods, needs, etc.

Try either of the above and then listen to hear some sensible old brother say, "Well, I don't go much on Sunday schools nohow."

HINTS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.—NO. 2.

BY J. F. M'DOWELL.

SUPERINTENDENTS.

THIS class of individuals should be of the pleasant, attractive sort, so far as it is possible to obtain such. Do not place a "yard-long" faced man or woman at the head of a Sunday school. Life, activity, smiles, cheery words, a little ripple of laughter in place, all send light and gleeful feeling to young hearts. The word says: "Not with much laughter, for this is sin." Pupils require sunlight.

These leaders should not be too talkative in school so as to be wearisome; nor be dry discourses. Superintend is the idea—to have the charge of and oversight; to oversee. They should be exemplary, systematic, go-ahead, orderly, but not puritanical; avoiding all stereotyped formalities. They should so thoroughly acquaint themselves with the lessons, as to be able to answer questions from teachers or pupils, and thus intelligently preside. They should see that all class books are properly kept, and attendance noted, etc. They should be so conversant with the number and faces of all attending, that the absence of anyone excites inquiry as to cause.

TEACHERS.

These should be as carefully selected as possible. Those who will faithfully strive to be regular attendants, so far as lies in their power are desirable. They should be pleasant, agreeable, and instructive. They should be praying, humble folks—well acquainted with God's word; and, where possible, acquainted to some extent with oriental history and customs. The possessing of good Bible dictionaries is desirable. Dissect your lessons, analyzing carefully—question your own resources upon it, and be ready to teach. Draw your pupils out upon the lesson. Do not be a user of bywords, no matter how "convenient" or "expressive." You are teaching God's truth; let it be unmixed with foreign phrases. While a Sunday school teacher should be as well versed as possible in biblical truth, yet let no one when called upon to teach a class refuse on account of real or supposed inability; for in teaching others we instruct ourselves as well. Natural ability is essential, as is also acquired ability. The latter cannot be attained without practice. Young folks look upon older than they as possessing some knowledge of God's word and work, and to refuse to teach may betray a supposed ignorance, not very enviable.

LESSONS.

These should not be too lengthy. Brevity is the soul of wit, and it is the soul of truth. If any doubt, read studiously the Lord's prayer. Lengthy lessons cannot be so thoroughly canvassed as a lesson ought to be. A casual reading of verses does not constitute a lesson, it is but the subject matter found in them. The lesson must be drawn therefrom. Time, thought, question, and answer are essential. The teacher ought to be acquainted with the lesson matter. To teach, implies the impartation of belief in or knowledge of that which may be read. As the time for Sunday school lessons is short, brevity is important as each one should act as a participant.

MAPS, ETC.

All schools as far as practicable should have maps of eastern and western * countries; good sized ones so the territorial divisions may be plainly outlined, thus being readily seen by the school. In lessons where towns, cities, lakes, seas, etc., are named, if these were pointed out by the superintendent at close of recitations, the contents of lesson could be more fully impressed upon the minds of pupils. Bible dictionaries give illustrations of seas, and surrounding country; of town sites, etc., that could be pointed out by teachers. The writer has what he considers a very good dictionary, well bound in cloth, and may be had for $1.25. It contains engravings, tables, and five excellent maps, published by "American Tract Society," New York City, 150 Nassau Street. It is very complete, and treats quite fully upon various topics. Every teacher ought to have one. Where such can be had conveniently for primary classes, a blackboard and colored chalk texts artistically delineated are attractive. A board four feet long, two feet wide, set on a homemade easel, is a handy size. The blackboard can be easily made.

MONEY BOXES.

Whatever plan may be had in use for raising money, or collecting, we found a pleasant way as follows: Have a money box placed on a stand in the schoolroom, and at close of lesson work, have the pupils of each class, one class at a time, by number or letter, go in order to the box, and make their deposit. This gives a marching exercise, relieves the monotony of sitting, and looks very nice. The pupils will vie with each other in having money—for no child likes to be seen sitting in seat without making a deposit. And where teachers are able and have very poor children that may not be able to have a penny, give them one, but teach them independence, and the getting of a penny honestly for Sunday school. No parent should ever think of such a thing, if at all able, as sending a son or daughter to school penniless. The editor of Hope may be thought of as too much for money; but the writer is of earnest conviction that the saying, "the gospel without money or price," has been so erroneously taught, that the church has suffered, and may yet be suffering to some extent on account of lack of wisdom upon this. The gospel is of and from God, no one need pay for its reception; but at the same time money is ever needed for the prosecution of the work. Its publishing departments are not carried on by pauperism; the ministry is not composed of pauperites, nor their families to be so considered. Money for books, money for cards, money for papers, money for necessities in all lines! The Sunday school officers and teachers cannot furnish all free. Children young, children old, ought to be taught that each one is an actual helper, not a looker-on, a receiver, and never to be a giver. There is more honor in independence than dependence. I pity the man, woman, or child that thinks and shall be taught to glory in the thought that they are "pulling through" in the real or supposed glory of the latter-day work upon the line of, "it has cost me very little." The Sunday school attendants all should give as able, and do it pleasurably. If account as to how much each class contributes is desired, let account be taken by each teacher ere deposit is made. Any who have not tried this method will find it a good one.

* Western maps could be used for Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants studies frequently.

DISMISSAL.

The promiscuous dismissal of school may be remedied by class exits. The teacher leads her class to the door, thus extending a courteous "good-bye," and seeing them out personally. The class dismissal may be done by the superintendent announcing the preceding Sunday—and repeating on the day for use, a few-worded verse of Scripture as a dismissal motto. A class rising at tap of bell, with the teacher, will recite verse, and teacher leading, pass out, each class noting how orderly this can be done. This makes a very pretty showing, and avoids confusion.

LIBRARIES.

Where these may not be had, and yet books be desired, a method we have employed, and satisfactorily too, is this: The pupils understanding that attendance entitles them to a small card, have it understood that a small card of same kind as attendance one, may be had for perfect recitation of, say eight Bible verses, and not over sixteen any one Sunday to be recited. For four small tickets give one twice its size; two or three of second size to obtain a larger one; two of the larger gains a book, which may be purchased by superintendent or teacher, from treasury money; a book suitable to age of pupil, of course. Some very good books can be had for forty to fifty cents of from three hundred to four hundred pages of the Alta or other editions. The book is retained by winner. This incites to money contributions, teaching and showing the young what an accumulation of cents, nickels, and dimes can and will do for them; and that their money placed in Sunday deposit obtains such good results. The cards, of course, are exchanged, all coming back to the school, care being taken to preserve them, torn or badly soiled cards not receivable, thus requiring a longer time ere book be had. Of course money must be had, and "children" are encouraged to give.

Neither let us be slandered from our duty by false accusations against us, nor frightened from it by menaces of destruction to the Government, nor of dungeons to ourselves. Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln, 1860.

Letter Department.

Editors Herald:—From observations made on my recent visit to Pittsburg, Allegheny City, and Wheeling, I am persuaded that in those cities and vicinities there are mission fields as promising as any to be found in the United States, and that will, if occupied by faithful, competent ministers, yield as abundant returns as any others. By the grace of God I planted the work of the Reorganized Church in that region in the summer of 1860, following up that effort in 1864 to 1868 with good results, and I feel a keen desire to see the work of the Lord flourish there and prevail. A large amount of excellent work has been bestowed there in the past and has borne blessed fruit, and the work is now in the hands principally of converts made since 1868, and they, with some of the older ones, are doing good service for the Master and are rejoicing in the success attained. I greatly missed Brethren and Sisters Ells, Parsons, McDowell, Smith, Price, Faulkner, Savary, Hulmes, Brown, Winder, and Liston; also Brethren Spratley, Ebeling, George, and many other noble brethren and sisters who have passed on and joined "the great majority" in the paradise of God, and left names "like precious ointment" to cheer and gladden those who remain.

There are competent, willing workers in all the above-mentioned places, both in the church and the Sunday school; and there are not a few others who are coming to the work in an early day who will do much to build up the church and spread the knowledge of salvation to benighted, perishing souls.

I was pleased to see needed activity and watchfulness manifest in both church and Sunday school work, also to see unity and harmony following in these departments with no trace of jealousy, envy, or unholy ambition. Surely the Lord will continue to notably bless his work in all those places and give a rich harvest of souls to the patient, faithful laborers.

W. W. BLAIR.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 1.

Editors Herald:—Inasmuch as your columns are not often burdened with reports I thought a few lines might not be amiss. One of the difficulties we encounter in the work being done in St. Louis is the scattered condition of the Saints, and it is one of the mysteries of this world to me why it is that our people when moving to the city will oftentimes locate just as far from the church as they possibly can. My experience is that it keeps us busy to attend church regularly when living within half a mile or a mile of the place of meeting, instead of moving out four or five miles and then be unable to attend church either on account of car fare or want of time. Possibly this may be prompted by the spirit of faultfinding, so we refrain; but it will do the Saints who live in cities no harm to think of this a little.

From a spiritual standpoint we have made quite rapid progress during the past few months, and it is not uncommon to hear some of the members who have lived here for a great many years say they have never seen our branch in a better condition. It is encouraging to all, and the crowds that attend our Sunday evening services are increasing, until the subject of enlarging our church building is crowding itself upon us as being a necessity. We appreciate the importance, however, of having the spiritual condition healthy before endeavoring to place brick and mortar around it. If the experience of the past few months continues, there is little doubt but what we would be perfectly safe should we commence laying the brick part to-morrow.

Though we are surrounded with modern Babylon on every hand, there is untold satisfaction gained by complying with the written word, assembling ourselves together and partaking of that Spirit that will lead us into all truth. The results of the Temple Lot suit do not weaken our faith in the least in this latter-day work. Truth will ultimately triumph if those to whom it has been intrusted prove worthy of their trust.

Your brother,

J. C. HITCHCOCK.

NASHVILLE, Mo., Feb. 27.

Editors Herald:—Your weekly visits do me much good and make me feel that "it's good to be a Saint." We recently came from the flint-rock regions of Barry County, where we have labored most of the winter. In my estimation this is an excellent field and should not be neglected. Of course an elder need not expect to find a well-improved country and a people highly polished in all the modern arts and customs; but there is plenty of Latter Day Saint material in that section, if it can only be developed. The people are poor, but poverty is not a disgrace, if one cannot help it. We missionaries will always find poor people wherever we go; and it is improper for a minister to enjoy the hospitality of such persons and then enter another neighborhood and make fun of and ridicule them on account of their poverty. Such conduct causes much comment and is detrimental to the work. The majority of our missionaries have not the cash to be too aristocratic and should endeavor to make those with whom we associate know that we can live upon most anything that anyone else can. As a rule most of the sisters put themselves to more trouble than is necessary when the elders come around. Dear readers, you will excuse me if I deal with a few plain facts. The Lord has promised to open up the way and provide the missionary with the necessities of life. Therefore it is not necessary for an elder to "drum" the Saints for money to pay their car fare from one point to another. This is not our business, it belongs to the Lord. If I had to do this kind of work I would quit preaching and go to work.

At present we contemplate holding a series of meetings about four miles northwest of Nashville. Our labors have been principally in new fields, "breaking new ground," and if our success this winter depends upon the number of baptisms, we will not be counted successful. We have tried to labor as the Lord would direct and trust next year we can do more for the cause. This is all for this time, and I am like the brother from Kentucky, "You may hear from me again if some one doesn't jump onto this with both feet."

Possibly this manuscript may have to be sent to headquarters for correction before it is fit for publication. There may be a few "slang phrases" in it.

Yours for truth,

A. M. BAKER.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Jan. 25.

Editors Herald:—Writing, this weather, is a labor. The heat of this summer is unparalleled in the history of this country. Mercury has registered 108° here in Sydney, while farther inland 116 to 120 has been reached—all in the shade. The heat along the coast of New South Wales has heretofore been tempered by the sea breezes, but we have lately had even a hot sea breeze. Deaths from sunstroke are common, the mortality being greatest inland. Old people and babies are falling as before a scourge, and there seems no abatement. Meteorologists are at a loss to account for this extraordinary condition. Were we to point out that greatest of weather forecasts in Luke 21, "The powers of heaven shall be shaken," we should perhaps meet only a smile of professional contempt. Even the elements bear witness to the arrival of the latter-day message. Gospel meetings suffer just now and we are merely existing, and panting for a change.

District conference convened at New Castle in the newly finished chapel of the Hamilton branch. Everything passed off smoothly and satisfactorily. It is not saying too much to announce it as one of the best yet held in this district. Many of the new Saints came away rejoicing, while the older ones were refreshed. The Spirit approved of the effort put forth locally, and (at a called meeting the day following adjournment) two brethren were pointed out by way of prophecy for future work. The much vexed "yea and nay" vote was put into actual working form to the gratification of all, and distrust and misunderstanding seem to have disappeared; at least we hope so.

Reports showed an excellent increase for the year, for the labor bestowed, and also improvement in other departments—notably Sunday school and Daughters of Zion. It was decided to have forty-five copies of conference opening edition of the Plain Dealer sent to the leading editors of newspapers in Australasia to enlighten as to the character of our work. It is hoped that the lines of distinction between us and the Utah Church will be clearly drawn, which if done will result in good to our cause in this mission.

We made an effort to get a correction in the Salvation Army's organ, the War Cry, but it failed. According to this paper the Army is doing a good work in Salt Lake City, though it admits that the collections are exceedingly small (so we doubt the good news).

Three more missionaries from the Utah Church arrived this month to relieve the present force. The "force" is no doubt overjoyed at being "relieved," for they've done nothing but wear the time away, making an occasional futile effort.

Immediately after the conference Elder Kaler went into a four-nights' debate with a Mr. Bell, the ablest Christadelphian in New South Wales. The first two nights were taken up on the question "Does the Bible teach that the kingdom of God began to be set up in the days of Christ and the apostles and exists now in a progressive state?" (Kaler affirmed, Bell denied.) The last two nights were occupied with the question, "Does the Bible teach that man is dual in nature; viz., having a body subject to corruption, and a spiritual entity which exists, consciously, separate from the body in death?" (Kaler affirmed, Bell denied.) I was moderator for Elder K., and Mr. Mogg of New Castle for Mr. B., while an Anglican lay-reader (Mr. Card) occupied the chair; and a good one he proved to be.

While the attendance was less than expected, yet good was done. Mr. B. was surprised at the advanced position Elder Kaler took and found much of the thunder used in discussions with other religionists gone at once. His people were disappointed because we didn't affirm an "immortal soul" and therefore declared that Elder Kaler "hadn't touched the subject."

Mr. Bell proved himself a gentleman and a clever tactician and reasoner. Twenty minutes each was agreed on for each evening for the use of the Socratic method. Mr. Bell showed himself at home here and seemingly run his opponent into a corner several times, but Elder K. usually made up for it in his next speech. Here is a sample of Mr. Bell's questions:—

"Was Paul in the kingdom?" (Yes.) "Why then did he have a desire to depart or leave it, which was far better?"

Elder Kaler did not answer all questions as promptly nor in the way he wished. At the close I remarked to him that his questions were not the success he hoped, and suggested that it was new method to Elder Kaler. To this he replied: "O that's all right. I only objected to his delays because it consumed my time. But that fellow is no fool if he is a little slow." Publicly he stated, at the close, that he now had a better opinion of Mormonism and the men engaged in promulgating it than before the debate. The daily paper noticed the discussion each day, but made a sorry attempt. One report made Elder K. a fair spiritist and Mr. B. an infidel.

One was baptized during the discussion, and two here since my return to Sydney. It is my opinion that what ground we gain from now on we must work hard for in Sydney. We are not without discouraging and retarding features, notwithstanding we rejoice for what we've seen.

Mr. B. H. Roberts' book on Succession is at hand. His effort to throw discredit on the testimony concerning the anointing of the successor to the first Seer is considered out of harmony with past teachings received by converts here twenty-five to thirty years ago. Some who are now with us tell me they were repeatedly taught that "Young Joseph" would yet take his father's place, and hence they expected his ministry. But when he did begin his father's work, the elders kept it from them (here) as long as possible, and when it was discovered threw discredit on the same. Bro. Ellis tells me this was the course of Elder Beauchamp awhile before the arrival of our pioneers, Rodger and Wandell.

If, as Mr. Roberts hints, the idea of "Young Joseph" being his father's successor is a modern invention, we would like to know upon what the president and elders of the Utah Church predicated that same announcement twenty-five to forty years ago. We should like to have the force who have come here to "relieve" kindly relieve our minds of this query, so we can make haste to abandon the house which Roberts claims will come under the category of President Young's prophecy, and on whose walls is written, "Mene, mene," etc. We are all open to conviction and they can begin their mission on us.

This week (on the 22d) this branch held an anniversary service, celebrating the arrival of the unadulterated gospel by accredited ambassadors (Rodger and Wandell) in 1874. This is in harmony with the request of Elder Wandell before his demise. All took part, old and young, and a pleasant evening was spent in recitations, songs, and instrumental music with a historical sketch by the writer. This is to be a regular anniversary from now on. It is also the anniversary of the reorganization of the Sydney branch by Elder J. W. Wight in 1893. Since then it has grown to three times its then size. Other churches have their anniversaries here, why not we?

Elder Kaler and wife are still at New Castle where he has had fair audiences in the new chapel since the debate. They expect to leave for home soon—Tuncurry.

For fear you may think the unusual heat is having an unusual effect on me, will close. Wishing you a successful conference,

GOMER WELLS.

BENNETT, Neb., Feb. 28.

Editors Herald:—On the 21st we started for Wilber, to attend the Sunday school association and district conference. A few hours' ride through a country that indicated by the small cornstalks, empty corn cribs, and dusty fields that nature had withheld the necessary amount of moisture to cause this productive country to bring forth in its strength, brought us to our destination, a pleasant little town where the saloons and churches seemed to have struggled for the ascendancy in numbers and votaries; but the former have long since written victory on their banner.

The reports of Sunday schools indicated quite an advancement in this line since the organization of this district. The organization was opposed by some for awhile, but on obtaining a better understanding of its advantages, they have become efficient supporters. Thus it is, brethren, in all advanced steps in life; when you have an understanding beyond your associates, stand firmly, wait patiently, and educate them to your position. Truth will triumph. The officers are entitled to praise for the wisdom, patience, and indomitable courage manifested in their work. The evening entertainment was encouraging and instructive to the young. What a power for good the Sunday school work is! And its opportunities are just beginning to be realized. Many of us realize something of our loss by not having such privileges in childhood.

Our genial and respected missionary in charge was with us, assisting by wise counsel and encouraging with words of comfort. It was with pleasure we noted that although it is well on to seven years since we traveled with him in Northern Minnesota, he has changed so little and gives evidence of years of useful service to the church. He delivered two sermons that enlivened our souls as the water from an irrigating ditch does the withering vegetation on the parched lands of Western Nebraska. We felt that "it is good to be a Saint in latter days."

We had a vast amount of business to transact in our conference and were very thankful that our apostle was with us and his apostolic wisdom was manifested "for the perfecting of the Saints." The district is prospering, the mission field is widening, and opportunities for spreading the work were never better. May we all move wisely with an eye single to God's glory, lest we become entangled with those peculiar combinations that sometimes arise in districts where good opportunities are found.

The loss of the Temple Lot case has had no effect on the faith and hopes of the Saints in this district. We were somewhat surprised but not dismayed. Every Saint I have met who donated to the fund seemed to be renewed spiritually and was rejoicing in his religion more than usual. We have done our duty. What more could be asked? God permitted men to condemn Christ in court, cast Paul in prison, crucify Peter, and drive the Saints out in Missouri according to their interpretation of their laws, yet those who did their duty were accepted and blessed and God's work will be accomplished just as he designed. Some said, "God will secure the lot in his own time and I won't donate a cent." Yes, and the gospel will be preached in "all the world" "in his own time;" but will we help and receive the benefits? Think of it.

I never enjoyed more light in my work than this year, and can see that the faithful Saints can say the same.

Your colaborer,

TUNNEL HILL, Illinois, Mar. 2.

Editors Herald:—Bro. J. F. Henson and I came from conference to Tunnel Hill on February 17 and held nearly a two weeks' meeting, Bro. Henson doing most of the preaching. I never saw such an interest in Tunnel Hill branch before. They came from far and near. The house was crowded almost ever night and all seemed to be very attentive.

There were twenty-eight baptized, Bro. Henson doing the baptizing; so the good work moves on in these parts.

Bro. Henson left on the 29th. I go to De Soto to-morrow to look after the interests of the work. There are some members there but no branch. Some there wish to be baptized. I shall try to further the work all I possibly can. In bonds, WEIDMAN, Mich., March 2.

Editors Herald, Dear Brethren:—I wrote some time ago from the place where Musser had given us such a going over, telling you some were believing the gospel and thought they would obey soon. Well, last Sunday a week ago, we baptized five of them at Coleman. Others are believing, and the good work goes on.

Yesterday Bro. J. R. Beckley baptized a man and wife here. More seem quite interested. It does me good to see the young ministry coming to the front and helping to uphold the banner of King Immanuel. Bro. Beckley has been in the work about five years and is doing a good work for the Master. May he go on and have many bright jewels in his crown when Jesus comes to crown the faithful servants. May God inspire every young minister with a spirit of spreading the gospel word to a nation perishing for want of the words of life. We want more help, dear young brethren preachers, get to the front; help is wanted everywhere.

When I see so many young men who have been called to the work and see them doing so little to spread the work, the words of hymn No. 1075 come to my mind:—

*“Why stand ye idle, waiting
For reapers more to come,
The golden morn is coming,
Why sit ye idle, dumb?”
Mount up the height of wisdom,
And crush each error low;
Keep back no works of knowledge,
That human hearts should know.*

Ever your brother and laborer for Christ,

CRITICISM AND CONTROVERSY. NO. 2.

BY J. R. LAMBERT.

BRANCH officers are required to labor with the members, and report from time to time their spiritual condition. The courts of trial provided for in the law — “common court,” “Bishop’s court,” and “High Council”—are required to carefully hear and consider evidence, and decide guilty or not guilty. Now, can some one tell us how the branch officers, and the members of the above-named courts, can do all this work without judging?

Again: when persons are proven guilty of criminal or unchristianlike conduct, they are presented to the respective branches of which they are members, that the branches may expel, or decide what the proper punishment shall be. Can they do this without judging? So we conclude that when we are told unqualifiedly that none have the right to judge we are told that which is not true.

The foregoing positions are made much stronger by reference to latter-day revelations:—

Behold, I, the Lord, have made my church in these last days, like unto a judge sitting on a hill, or in a high place, to judge the nations; for it shall come to pass, that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion; and liars, and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known.—D. C. 64: 7.

In Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4 we are commanded to teach our children the principles of the gospel; also to teach them to pray, and to walk uprightly before God. We are forbidden to be idle, greedy, and worldly-minded; and it is said that the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord. We are to observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy. And the Lord says of certain conditions which had obtained among the inhabitants of Zion,

These things ought not to be, and must be done away from among them; wherefore, let my servant Oliver Cowdrey carry these sayings unto the land of Zion. And a commandment I give unto them, that he that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the judge of my people. These sayings are true and faithful; wherefore transgress them not, neither take therefrom. Behold, I am Alpha and Omega, and I come quickly. Amen.

In Doctrine and Covenants 46: 1, the Lord says, when speaking of sacrament meetings:—

Nevertheless, if any have trespassed, let him not partake until he makes reconciliation.

The above passages clearly show that the inhabitants of Zion are required to decide upon very important matters which affect official claims, spiritual standing in the church, doctrine, works, etc. The ministry, if faithful, are invested with the right and wisdom to judge, in exact proportion to the nature and duties belonging to the offices to which they have been called. Good hearts, sound minds, and the authority and enlightening influences of the Holy Spirit are all needed that we may be qualified for this important work. Not only needed, but they are essential. And with the restoration of the divine plan came all the needed provisions for its establishment and perpetuity, that the faithful might be saved in the “everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.”

And all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.—D. C. 1:4.

Thus, under the divine plan, the means of knowledge, growth, and protection are afforded. The members of the church, holding no priesthood authority, can “speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world,” as members, by virtue of the divine Spirit to which they are entitled, as an abiding “Comforter.” The officers speak in the name of the same Lord, and by the same Spirit; but they speak as duly authorized ministers of the word and representatives of Christ, each one in the particular office to which he has been called. The teachers and ministers of the church are to teach by the Spirit of truth; and those who are taught are to receive by the Spirit of truth. Thus teacher and hearer understand one another, and both are edified. They (the people) should follow so far as God authorizes them to go, walking in the light, and making their constant appeal to divine standards. Thus they are safe, and God’s name is glorified; the people are in fact, “taught of God,” and the finality is eternal salvation, grand and complete!

Some seem to think that if the wording of the preacher, or the one speaking in prophecy or by inspiration, represents the correct sentiment, then certainly it is of God. But latter-day revelations show clearly that it is not of God unless spoken by the Spirit of truth. In this respect the Book of Doctrine and Covenants throws a flood of light upon a very important matter, and thus meets a special demand of the last days, when there were to be false Christs, false prophets, false apostles, false teachers, and false inspirations, both within and without the church.

Hearken, O ye elders of my church, and give ear to the voice of the living God; and attend to the words of wisdom which shall be given unto you, according as ye have asked and are agreed as touching the church, and the spirits which have gone abroad in the earth. Behold, verily I say unto you, that there are many spirits which are false spirits, which have gone forth in the earth, deceiving the world: and also Satan hath sought to deceive you, that he might overthrow you.

Behold, I the Lord have looked upon you, and have seen abominations in the church, that profess my name; but blessed are they who are faithful and endure, whether in life or in death, for they shall inherit eternal life, But wo unto them that are deceivers, and hypocrites, for thus saith the Lord, I will bring them to judgment.

Behold, verily I say unto you, there are hypocrites among you, and have deceived some, which has given the adversary power, but behold such shall be reclaimed; but the hypocrites shall be detected and shall be cut off, either in life or in death, even as I will, and wo unto them who are cut off from my church, for the same are overcome of the world; wherefore, let every man beware lest he do that which is not in truth and righteousness before me.—D. C. 50: 1-3.

In paragraph 4 the Lord invites the elders to reason with him that they may understand. He talks to them very plainly about their calling, and with that strongest of all rebukes, that of love, he reproves them for having received spirits which they "could not understand," and receiving them "to be of God."

Paragraph 5 tells us that neither the preaching nor receiving is of God unless it is done by the Spirit of truth. The closing words of this paragraph and the first part of paragraph 6 read as follows:—

Therefore, why is it that ye cannot understand and know that he that receiveth the word by the Spirit of truth, receiveth it as it is preached by the Spirit of truth? Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understandeth one another, and both are edified and rejoice together; and that which doth not edify, is not of God, and is darkness: that which is of God is light, and he that receiveth light and continueth in God, receiveth more light, and that light groweth brighter and brighter, until the perfect day.

I have quoted at length, because every sentence is important; and even now it would be much better for the reader of this article to read the entire section.

Why did the Lord tell the church in May, 1831, that there were hypocrites among them? I suppose it was because he wanted them to know it, was it not? Then he wants us to believe that good men are good, and that evil-minded men are evil, does he? Certainly. He wants us to believe that which is true, always, and not that which is false.

Why did the Lord tell the church about false spirits, and false inspiration, and instruct the elders how to detect and expose that which is not of him? Evidently because he wanted them to know all these things, and not be deceived. Why did the Lord tell the Saints that preaching and receiving the gospel is not of him unless it is preached and received by the Spirit of truth? Because he did not want them to preach and obey in that way. Why not? Because it is "not of God," and will not secure eternal salvation.

Paragraph 3 tells us that there were hypocrites among the Saints even at that early day; that some had been deceived, and that this gave the adversary power. It is more than probable, is it not, that those who were deceived by these hypocrites believed them to be true servants of God? If so, the conclusion is easy. Believing an evil-minded person to be a model minister of Christ, or a model Saint, as the case may be, does not bring us nearer to God, but takes us nearer to Satan. Then the further conclusion is a logical one, and not at all hard to reach; viz., that to believe an arrant hypocrite to be a true Saint, is not charity. What is charity? "The pure love of God," the Book of Mormon says. God, then, is the only one who possesses this love in its fullness. Does this love, or charity, blind God so he cannot see our imperfections? Hardly. Does a portion of it blind anybody else? I think not. As I view it, the high standard of the gospel is, to see men and things as they are; and even though evil-minded persons may be seeking every means known to them to injure, or destroy you, you have no disposition to do the person any wrong, or return evil for evil received. Charity "thinketh no evil."

And again, I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations; wherefore he that prayeth whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me, if he obey mine ordinances. He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances. And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise, and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you.

And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me; wherefore by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases, under the whole heavens. And the days have come, according to men's faith it shall be done unto them. Behold, this commandment is given unto all the elders whom I have chosen.—D. C. 52: 4, 5.

The above pattern is in harmony with the teachings of the Bible, but is more complete, and plainer than any one passage in that sacred volume, which I am now able to call to mind. No person of experience in the Church of God, who is truly spiritually-minded, can fail to admire it, and see therein one of the strongest evidences of divine wisdom and love. It is plain, comprehensive, and complete. To me, it is one of the grandest productions of Joseph the Seer. Among all the varieties and peculiar phases of false inspiration which have made their appearance since 1831, the time when this revelation was given, not one can be found which agrees in every respect with this pattern! Why is this? Because God is its author. He knows all the wiles of Satan, and has given to his people a perfect guarantee of safety.

But a divine pattern, given to the people of God, is given to be used as often as occasion requires; and, therefore, somebody must use it. The Lord says:—

Behold, this commandment is given unto all the elders whom I have chosen.

The term "elders," as herein used, evidently applies to all who hold the Melchisedek priesthood, which priesthood holds the right of presidency, and has power and authority over all the offices in the church, in all ages of the world, to administer in spiritual things.—D. C. 104: 3.

As the presiding responsibility is vested with the elders, the Lord evidently designed that they should be prepared for all the duties belonging thereto, and to properly meet the peculiar exigencies that might arise, caused by the manifestations of Satan's power and inspiration.

Doctrine and Covenants 17: 8, 9, throws light upon the responsibility of the eldership, and shows that it includes the highest officers in the church:—

An apostle is an elder, and it is his calling to baptize, and to ordain other elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, and to administer bread and wine—the emblems of the flesh and blood of Christ—and to confirm those who are baptized into the church, by the laying on of hands for the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, according to the scriptures; and to teach, expound, exhort, baptize, and watch over the church; and to confirm the church by the laying on of the hands, and giving of the Holy Ghost, and to take the lead of all meetings.

The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God.

In section 46 Doctrine and Covenants we are instructed concerning the gifts of the Spirit; and in the closing portion of paragraph 7 we are furnished with excellent proof of the correctness of our position. After telling what the gifts of the Spirit are; for what purpose they were given; and warning us to “beware, lest ye are deceived,” the Lord says:—

And unto the bishop of the church, and unto such as God shall appoint and ordain to watch over the church, and to be elders unto the church, are to have it given unto them to discern all those gifts, lest there shall be any among you professing and yet be not of God.

Now suppose some elder of the church should present the substance of what I have adduced from the Doctrine and Covenants to a congregation of Saints, from the pulpit. Would it not sound strange for me to address that same congregation of Saints, at a subsequent time, and say to them, that I was sorry that any should speak against the gifts? that it is too much for any human being to say that this gift is of God, but that one is not? Let us, I beseech you, not leave the revelations of God, for so sure as we do, we will go into the dark.

WHERE IS THE WISDOM?

In Herald of the 5th inst. appears an item copied as an editorial, from the Indianapolis News of the 25th ult. over the signature of Kalgos, upon which please grant me space to make a remark.

The statement is somewhat reflective on my father's family, of which I appear to be the chief factor of invectives; and were I ignorant of the grounds upon which such attacks are based and passive with respect to results, no expression partaking of the nature of reply would be essential. And had Kalgos been definite as to the cause impelling his reference to my boyish tricks, perhaps this article would be unnecessary. That I was a mischievous lad, I do not deny, but that I was “unruly and brooked all parental restraint,” I do deny, and feel to rejoice in after life because of my loyalty to parental authority and influence.

Kalgos knows that an overgrowth of Campbellite influence was thrown around me when at the ages of ten and twelve years by his own kith and kin, to persuade me away from the home hearth, to bring trouble on my parents because of their Latter Day Saint faith. They sought by every conceivable method, aided by preachers—some of whom were closely related to Kalgos, to cause me to so act as would bring disparagement to Pa and Ma, and disrespect to their religion, with a view to win me over and ordain me to champion the ever-changing Campbellite cause. Their failure in this regard, I suspect, is what actuates Kalgos to pick up these childish episodes, which his kind are responsible for, and throw them to the public. But, sometimes, “curses, like chickens, come home to roost.” We dislike to be found guilty by Cain, and to receive sentence from Ananias and Sapphira.

That I fell into the habit of chewing tobacco with the “other boys,” I willingly confess; but that I ran away from home for the purpose of begging it, neither Kalgos nor any other person has the right to say. Of one thing I am quite certain: a preacher of the Disciple persuasion would stealthily get the “filthy weed” to me in opposition to Father's will.

As to begging for something “to eat,” or being “barefooted when the ground was covered with snow,” my memory is utterly at fault, if it be true. And here this argues the insufficiency of my father's table and resources to supply the children's necessities; a low dash to bring discredit. Father was a poor man, in this world's goods, but “rich in faith,” moral, and intellectual endowments, and “heir of the kingdom” eternal. He labored incessantly, both manually and intellectually, and as far as memory serves me, had his table spread with the common luxuries of life, and as plentifully as the “common people” of that country. Why, some of Kalgos' near relatives came and bought produce of my father in those days. He brought his family consisting of wife, two boys, and four girls, through some trying hours; but not one of them was, or is now, indisposed to labor at anything honorable. My father stood up for his faith and lifted on high the weapons of eternal truth; and it meant the downfall of Campbellite air-blown bubbles; and herein lay the secret of malice toward him and family; and, thanks to the Giver of all good, his two sons have at least the disposition to try to keep the standard in as pure an atmosphere, though he, (peace to his memory,) has passed behind the veil, sleeps in the quiet of the just.

Well do I remember an evening in the old home west of the chapel devoted to us Disciples, when Father and family were upon their knees in prayer, just before retiring to rest, and a shower of stones was hurled against roof, door, and windows by a crowd of young people returning from the service. This occurred in good old Disciple days. Perhaps Kalgos can inform us where the responsibility for this act lay. We have an idea where it will lodge when my father meets them before a competent tribunal “some sweet day” “by and by.”

But while I peruse the item questions crowd upon me, among them the following: Is the Herald, that peerless official church organ; that expositor and representative of sound doctrine; quite hard pressed for matter? If not, why submit to its columns the version of secular journals with reference to “boyish tricks” so highly chromatized with prejudice and hate, which contribute nothing to the spread of the gospel, but materially lowers the standard of clean journalism? Did the Herald copy said item in order to give me opportunity to reply? Then why place me in a position to defend myself against two attacks instead of one? The News from which the Herald copied could have been sent me, and had I then disposed to reply or correct could have met the original with better grace—not bearing the “wound” “received in the house of my friends.” Why has the Herald the right to so change the base of the battle in such a way as to render unavoidable the turning of batteries on the ranks of our own? Is it right to cause mutiny among our ranks? If so, the wisdom of such proceeding does not yet appear. It places clubs in the hands of our foes to slay us—to weaken our position. We have enough of the “silly” to reply to every day, against Joseph Smith and family, without the Herald joining hands to circulate more of it, to impose greater and unnecessary labor. In more than one instance have I felt the force of an opponent's “cuteness” in snatching unwise editorials from the recognized authorities of the church. It is the public, the wavering, doubting, unsettled public who are endangered to be carried away by the flood which the dragon throws out of his mouth. Just two weeks ago I replied to an M. E. divine who made an onslaught on the church. He quoted a statement or certificate of fourteen men to the effect that Bro. Joseph's defense of his father in the Saints' Herald, contained language “obscene,” and his teaching tended to “free loveism” and “spiritual wifery.” This is published in Canada, pamphlet form, by Pomeroy. Would it be wise to print or copy such in the county papers? No, some unscrupulous or low-lived person would snatch it, and use it as a club against the work. Again; the Board of Publication recently reminded us all to do something to increase the subscription of the Herald. Now, I am enlisting the interest of numbers of people in the latter-day work at California, Michigan. Reports are busy with my name; Satan is alive;—he isn't dead over here yet; and the condition of heart and mind is very tender. Could I do anything for the Herald among them and take the issue of February 5, for a sample copy? I am not averse to talking over childish things, as a child among children, but “when I became a man,” I endeavored to “put away childish things;” and it appears that the Herald is a long time reaching its majority in such things.

I have sufficient to bear without the journals of the day going back to my childhood and carrying over into my future path such silly childishness as will be enlarged upon and distorted to my hurt. It will avail the enemies of the Scott family nothing to attempt discredit by “fables.” We have reached the years of accountability and stand on individuality; and looking across the horizon of the past, are enabled to see more clearly the grounds of ill will; and we are inclined to continue in the work taught us and exemplified by our father, whom, we believe, God inspired to shine like a planet over against the murky cloud, causing the mists of Campbellism to evaporate into the nothingness which they really are. And when the results of the work meet at the great door of God's house, the welcome accorded one will be accorded the other, and a proper dividend determined without Kalgos or the Indianapolis News.

Good will toward all,

Yours, hopefully mischievous,
S. W. L. SCOTT.

TO THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF MINISTERS' ALLIANCE, OF SAINT JOSEPH, MISSOURI.

My apology for delay in answering your objections to my admission to the Alliance is a combination of business and sickness. The objections focused would be, “I believe that Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon were inspired, in a Bible sense.”

You deign to call this “a grave error,” and “a heresy.” You offer not one scriptural text to prove either assertion. If I am in such gross error and a heretic, why not as friends point out from a scriptural standpoint the evidences of my error and save not only me but my following in St. Joseph and thousands of others from this gross disception?

It is an easy matter, brethren, from a mind filled with a mixture of prejudice against and ignorance of our position to cry out “heretic! heretic!” So the ancient religionists treated Paul, calling him a ringleader of the Nazarenes and of a sect everywhere spoken against. In Paul's answer he says:—

After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets.—Acts. 24: 14.

History repeats itself; I am worshipping the same God with Paul and am preaching the same blessed gospel, and with him believe all things in the law and in the prophets. In your rejecting my name you have simply fulfilled the words of Christ who said, “They will persecute you.” The history of this case is a counterpart of Paul's experience.

As ministers for Christ and students of the Bible you should know that there are unfailing rules by which to test every principle, or creed, or teacher, or prophet, or discipline; whether it be Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Latter Day Saint, or any other creed. By a proper application of the scriptural method it will soon appear who are evangelical and who are heterodox.

Jesus says:—

A tree is known by its fruits.

He whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God.—John 3: 34.

He that knoweth God heareth us [the apostles].—1 John 4: 6. (See also 2 John 9.)

All these indicate positively that the words of the apostles of Christ—the doctrine of Christ—should be a test of the truthfulness of any system. We fear not to be tested by this, the only legal and fair standard. Are you willing to go before the public with a representative of our faith affirming the scriptural correctness of your church or churches, and we in affirming the scriptural correctness of our church and the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon? If you wish to free St. Joseph of this heresy, you have an opportunity.

Joseph Smith presented to the world a religious philosophy which in every respect harmonizes with the plan presented by Christ and promulgated by his authorized servants. If so, how can he be the impostor and deceiver the wicked world would have him? If he was an instrument in restoring the gospel in its primitive completeness, why do you call me a heretic for believing it?

I am prepared to prove from the Scriptures that he thus did. He presented Christ as the only Redeemer and the great teacher sent from heaven to reveal the perfect system. He presented as the gospel of Christ: faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost, and to heal the sick, etc., the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment.

If you will take the trouble to read the tracts sent, “What we believe,” and the “Voice of Warning,” they will give you the scriptural texts in evidence.

In organization the church is formed after the ancient pattern: apostles, prophets, etc. (See 1 Cor. 12; Eph. 4.)

We, with you, believe there was an apostasy from the original Christianity and that the dominant power destroyed the pure plan, and instituted a manmade system, I presume you will not deny this. With all the combined efforts of the "Reformers," good men as they were, they failed to reproduce the church after the ancient pattern. Even all combined will fail to fill the ancient pattern in organization and doctrine.

This great work of "restoration" was to be accomplished by inspiration. (See Rev. 14: 6.) Joseph Smith and others testify that they were visited by a heavenly messenger and received instruction as to church doctrine and organization which resulted in the restoration of the gospel and establishment of the kingdom of God as anciently organized. He testifies that he knows he saw an angel. What more did Paul? Others have received the gospel and are enabled to testify by the same Spirit that they know the work is divine, thus proving the truth of the Savior's promise, that "he that will do the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine." Can you testify that you know the peculiar creeds you represent are true?

Either Joseph Smith was inspired to do his work or he by natural wisdom surpassed all who preceded him in the reformatory work, as the results plainly show; as he in organization and doctrine came nearest following the pattern.

Joseph Smith as an inspired man will stand every Bible test, even to being persecuted by the religious world (which you are aiding in doing), and even sealing his testimony with his own life, leaving behind him the kingdom restored. (Dan. 2: 44; Isa. 29: 4, 9, 10-14, 17, 22, 24.)

Isaiah 29: 9, 10 denotes condition of people; 11, 12 a book to come forth (verse 4); 13, 14 an inspirational work to begin because of darkened condition; in verse 13 same as Daniel's 2: 44; verse 17, the time when this work will begin—just before the restoration of Lebanon to a fruitful field. Verse 18, a miraculous power will attend the coming forth of the book; verse 19 and the poor shall have the gospel preached unto them; verse 22 Israel will advance and begin to gather back, be freed from their bondage, and inhabit their own land.

This great restoration is also contemplated in Isaiah 40: 1-11; 12: 11, 12; 18: 3; Malachi 4: 5, 6; and in many other places too numerous to mention.

By your action you say I am not "evangelical." I most emphatically protest against this inferred charge and to the contrary assert, and am able to prove, that according to Webster I am preëminently orthodox, being sound in faith and strictly in harmony with the gospel of Jesus Christ, whom I preach in his true light, as I understand it.

Let me say in conclusion. If I am in harmony with the gospel; if I preach Jesus Christ and him crucified; if the church I represent is in harmony with every elevating principle whether moral or spiritual;—have you not done me an injustice by your acts? And let me warn you to consider well your ways lest you be found fighting against the work of God. And lastly, Have you not violated that law which says, "Any evangelical minister can unite with the organization," etc.

I write this, largely to enlighten you as to our position and to give you a chance to make reparation.

Yours for truth,

J. M. TERRY,

Pastor L. D. S. Church.

ST. JOSEPH, MISSOURI, Feb. 14, 1896.

GOD'S LOVE.

O MY Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me.—Matt. 26: 39.

What a wailing cry to go up unto the ears of the Almighty one! The Son had but little before had deep solicitude for his followers, praying earnestly for their union with each other, such as he and the Father had maintained; but when the full force of what he was about to suffer came upon him, the human seemed for the time to gain the ascendancy. Yet he said, "Thy will, not mine be done."

"If it be possible;" but no, it was not possible. And so the suffering had to be endured.

We turn to see what the anguish must have been in the bosom of the Father. This Son, of whom he had made the announcement at his baptism, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased;" this Son, who was with him in the beginning before the world was, he was now going to sacrifice for us.

His love is so much beyond ours in intensity that our human intelligence can scarcely grasp a tithe of its fullness and depth. We are amazed at Abraham, and have felt so much pity for him when told to offer up his only son, but his hand was stayed. Not so with God's dear Son. God did not stay the cruel mob as he did the knife of Abraham.

But what must have been the feelings of that loving Father when the piteous cry came to his ears, "O, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me"! But "not my will, but thine, be done." Our Father did not harden his heart; it was still tender, loving, and pitiful as ever; but for all these nations lying under the curse, his children by creation, though wandering far away, there was no salvation save in the death of his Son. He must let him suffer, because he loved us, too.

So the Father upheld him by his presence, and enabled him, while listening to the scoffs of the mob about him to say, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." But for a little time, while suspended on the cross, the Father saw fit to withdraw even his presence from him. And O, what a cry of anguish we hear in that moan! "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me." From the time his prayed in the garden, not one word of complaint was heard from his lips through all the physical suffering he endured, until his Father saw fit to hide his face from him. Then what a wail was heard! Surely heaven as well as earth felt the shock. No wonder the rocks were burst asunder, and the vail of the temple rent in twain. No wonder the multitude fell upon their faces as dead men.

And all this was for us, because God loved us so much. Who can sound the depths of the passage,

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

I am so glad that word whosoever is there, for that includes you and me.

Yes, praise the Lord, I am not left out. His death has made him my Savior; his resurrection has given me victory over the grave; and his ascension gives a promise that he will return to dwell with us on the earth in a purified state.

Let us stop for a moment and think how we would feel if we had made a great sacrifice for another, and that one had made no response, gave back no answering love, nor seemed in the least to appreciate what we had done. No one, even the most hardened, would hesitate to condemn us for being so ungrateful. And yet many in this land of Bible privileges act just that way toward our blessed Savior. After all he has done, after all his great love, they turn their backs with scorn and derision. His bleeding hands and feet are nothing to them. They would not treat an earthly friend like that.

The promise of a friend who will be dearer than a brother does not move them, the new heavens and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness has no attraction for them; but to the loving and obedient, the promises are precious, and they rejoice in the liberty wherewith Christ has set them free.

Conference Minutes.

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.

Conference convened at Netawaka, Kansas, February 22, at 10:30 a. m.; Bishop E. L. Kelley presiding, assisted by Elder J. Arthur Davis; J. Baillie secretary. Remarks by E. L. Kelley and J. A. Davis. Reports of branches: Scranton 97, Topeka 8, Netawaka 59, Atchison 60, Centralia 12, Fanning 72, Baker no report. Reports of ministry: E. L. Kelley, P. Cadwell, J. T. Davis, J. Arthur Davis, W. S. Pender, W. Lewis, D. Williams, W. Hopkins, H. Green, J. Buckley, Bro. Powell, H. Parker, J. Baillie, C. E. Guinand, J. B. Jarvis, W. Gurwell; Priests Bro. Hudgens, J. Cairns, J. D. Price, Bro. McDougal, Bro. Thomas, P. Pement; Teachers Boston and Oxendale; Deacons J. W. Burns and J. Patterson. Report of committee on dividing line of Northeastern Kansas and Spring River districts: South line of Bourbon, Woodson, and Allen counties is the dividing line between the two districts. Report accepted and committee discharged. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $10.45; received $19.70; expended $27; on hand $3.15. A collection was taken to defray expenses of record book and a book for conference minutes, and to have copies of the Plain Dealer sent to principal newspapers in this district. Delegates to General Conference: J. T. Davis, W. S. Pender, H. Parker, J. Arthur Davis, J. Cairns, J. Buckley, G. Gurwell, C. E. Tillinghast, J. D. Price, Bro. Hudgens, Bro. McDougal, W. Hopkins, H. Green, W. Lewis. Delegates were instructed to vote in favor of holding General Conferences every year as has been heretofore. Alexander Cherry was ordained an elder and two children were blessed. Motion prevailed to sustain all church authorities and district officers. Preaching by Elders E. L. Kelley and W. S. Pender. Adjourned to meet at Atchison on June 20 and 21, at ten a. m.

QUORUM OF APOSTLES.

To the Quorum of Apostles; Greeting:—The time for conference work is approaching, and our part of it is of such a character that it will be needful for us to meet as early as the first of April. I therefore give notice that on the first day of April, 1896, the quorum will be expected to meet in the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, at ten a. m. It is desirable that as many of the members of the quorum as can will be on hand promptly, for there may be very important business come before us. And may God ever bless our convening that his name be glorified.

ALEX. HALE SMITH,
President of Apostles' Quorum.

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Will the members of this quorum please make reports of labor performed in the past year, and place the reports in an envelope addressed to the Third Quorum of Elders, care of Henry A. Stebbins, Temple, Lake County, Ohio. Please have them in by April 6.

JOHN T. KINNAMAN, Pres.
CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec.

CLARKSDALE, Missouri, March 2, 1896.

FIRST QUORUM OF TEACHERS.

You are hereby requested to report at once to the secretary in order that our quorum report may be made ready in time for General Conference. Some of the members have not been heard from for two or three years and their whereabouts are unknown to the secretary. Please give this your attention. We want to hear from all as soon as possible. Address me at Independence, Missouri.

GEO. H. HIDY, SEC.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Yours in bonds,
E. W. NUNLEY, Dist. Pres.

BORN.

LEETUN.—Orin Cornelius Leetun, born January 18, 1896, near Holmes, Iowa. Blessed February 13, 1896, near Holmes, Iowa, by Elder C. Scott.

BAUGHMAN.—Elven, son of Mr. H. M. and Sr. Irene Baughman, was born November 29, 1895, and blessed at the Saints' chapel, Galland's Grove, Iowa, February 23, 1896, by Elders C. E. Butterworth and A. Jackson.

MARRIED.

DE LONG—HARTMAN.—At Greenville church, near Lamoni, Iowa, on Sunday, March 8, 1896, Mr. John R. De Long to Sr. Gertrude Hartman; Elder R. S. Salyards officiating.

VAN TRUMP—CRACRAFT.—In the church in the Des Moines branch, Des Moines, Iowa, Sunday, March 1, 1896, at the close of the morning service, Elder Nicholas Stamm officiating, Mr. William Van Trump and Sr. Lizzie Ellen Cracraft, all of Des Moines. The contracting parties were accompanied by the "best man" and "bridesmaid;" and were marshalled to the front of the stand, where in the presence of a house full of friends, relatives, Saints, and spectators, Bro. Stamm celebrated the rite in an efficient and pleasing manner.

DIED.

MEFFORD.—George Mefford died at his residence in Douglas Township, Harrison County, Iowa, February 13, 1896. Born in Logan County, Kentucky, May 11, 1810. United in wedlock with Miss Elizabeth Hunt, July 20, 1832. Baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Daniel Hunt, in 1844. Removed from Kentucky to Harrison County, Iowa, in 1850, where he has continuously resided. This marriage was a happy one. His faithful wife preceded him to the paradise of God several years. To them were born fourteen children, thirteen of whom were reared to man and womanhood. Of these, eleven are now living all of whom reside in and around Woodbine, except two daughters. His grandfather, Jacob Mefford, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Bro. Mefford's character for honest, upright manhood was manifest in all his dealings with mankind. He loved the truth, was an elder in the church, and was faithful unto death. His dying wish was that his three grandchildren, whom he had raised, the sons of Sr. Elizabeth Lumley, might obey the gospel, and live a Christian life, and he requested the writer to endeavor to persuade them so to do. Thus has passed to his rest another true witness for God, in full hope of a glorious resurrection. His funeral sermon was preached at his residence on the 16th inst. by Elder Charles Derry, assisted by Brn. Kibler and Wight. A very large concourse of people evidenced their deep esteem for Bro. Mefford by their presence.

HEINAMAN.—At his home, January 19, 1896, Bro. A. G. Heinaman. The brother was born April 22, 1855, in Red River County, Texas; joined the church March 15, 1879; baptized by W. T. Bozarth; was ordained deacon the same day. Bro. Heinaman leaves six children and many warm friends to mourn. The brother lived a faithful Christian and was of great use to the church. He was always willing to do his part, always earnestly contending for the faith. He passed through many trials and persecutions, but lived true in all circumstances, and died with a bright hope of the first resurrection.

COOPER.—Charles William Cooper, son of Bro. Charles and Sr. May Cooper, died February 24, 1896, aged 1 year, 5 months and 19 days. The child was sick only about twenty hours, and was taken, as it were, without a moment's warning. Funeral sermon by Elder H. E. Moler, assisted by Elder Albert Haws, in the United Brethren church. A large concourse of relatives and friends attended the funeral. Although a severe blow, the young parents have borne up bravely.

BORLAND.—Near Florence, Nebraska, February 17, 1896, at the home of his son, Bro. James L. Borland; aged 78 years, 5 months, and 5 days. The deceased was a member of the church in the Martyr's day; was baptized into the Reorganization May 12, 1867, at Pleasant Grove, Harrison County, Iowa, by Elder S. D. Condit; was ordained a priest in September, 1867. Interment in Forest Lawn cemetery; funeral sermon by Elder F. A. Smith. He leaves four sons, a daughter, and grandchildren to mourn their loss.

MARBLE.—At Davis City, Iowa, March 1, 1896, Abel Marble. He was born May 4, 1804, in Chenango County, New York. United with the church in 1840, and came into the Reorganization in 1861; baptized by Elder Samuel Powers, who also ordained him an elder in 1864. He was the father of ten children, seven of whom, together with an aged companion of eighty-five, survive him. Funeral from the Saints' church, Davis City, March 1. The sermon was from Job 5:26, by Elder Robert M. Elvin. There was a large and attentive audience, the number of aged people were especially noticeable.

TEMPLE.—On February 24, 1896, in the 69th year of her age, at her home in Copley Township, Knox County, Illinois, Sister Bessie P. Temple, a worthy member of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints; a sincere Christian, a loving wife and mother, a true friend, a kind neighbor; loved by all who knew her, and mourned as a loss by the society in which she moved; and most deeply of all by the home circle in which she was loved and prized as only such a wife, mother, counselor, and friend is valued by husband and children. Dear, faithful heart, rest in peace!

THE THREE BOOKS
AT POPULAR PRICES.
CHEAP AND DURABLE.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

Orders solicited. The three standard books of the church are now within the reach of all.

SOME PARKHURST EPIGRAMS.

REV. CHARLES H. PARKHURST, D. D., in his initial paper for young men, for The Ladies' Home Journal (in February issue), gives brilliant emphasis to his text, "The stuff that makes young manhood," by the frequent employment of forcible epigrams. He considers a proper "getting ready" as the greatest value in preparing for life's work, and upon this point flashes his strongest, brightest lights in brilliant radiance.

Putting a buttercup to school will not graduate it a butterfly even if it is a very good school. Its only wholesome ambition will be to be as good as it can as a buttercup.

I have watched a good many brooding hens, but I never saw one facilitate the hatching process by pecking the shell. The chick on the inside will get out if he is worth it.

More men are injured by having things made easy for them than by having their path beset with difficulties, for it encourages them to stay themselves on circumstances, whereas their supreme reliance needs to be on their own personal stuff.

Young men are constantly worrying lest they be failures and nonentities.

Every man will count for all he is worth.

There is as much a science of success as there is a science of hydraulics.

The less a young man talks about luck and untowardness of circumstances, and the coquettishness of popular favor, and the like, the better for him and for the world to which he owes himself. Every man will have all the power he earns, and the power that he has will tell, not because people like it or like him, but because it is power.

Personal pressure can no more be hooted down, or voted down, or argued out of existence than can the push of the wind or the pull of the moon. If you weigh a ton you will exert a ton's pressure.

There is probably such a thing as genius, although ninety nine hundredths of it is doubtless the name which lazy people give to results which others have earned by hard work in those hours when the lazy people themselves were either sleeping or wishing they could gain it without toiling for it.

There is faculty enough in almost anybody to become genius if only all that faculty were lumped.

We are more likely to find a good destiny by going afoot than by riding.

The world cares very little for experts, and the course of events is only infinitesimally determined by them.

The man whose entire capital is one of enthusiasm will be conspicuous for his abundance of torch, at the same time lacking the timber which the torch exists primarily to enkindle.

Sowing still antedates reaping, and the amount sowed determines pretty closely the size of the harvest.

Empty barns in October are the logical sequence of empty furrows in spring. The young man may as well understand that there are no gratuities in this life, and that success is never reached "across lots."

During these months of extraordinary unrest in foreign politics, the Review of Reviews devotes its attention in large measure to international affairs. Its editorial department discusses matters in South Africa, the attitude of the great European powers, and the most recent phases of the movement among the nations for the arbitration of disputes; the March number also contains a most timely article on "The Government of France and Its Recent Changes," by Baron Pierre de Coubertin; "A Review of Canadian Affairs," by J. W. Russell, and a character sketch of "Cecil Rhodes, of Africa," by W. T. Stead. It can hardly be said that the Review of Reviews is narrowly provincial in its outlook on men and events!

THE CARE OF THE AGED.

WHEN a man or woman passes seventy years of age, great care should be given to the conditions surrounding him or her for the prolonging of life. The vital forces are greatly enfeebled at that period of life, and the powers of resistance in consequence of age are the weakest. A man of threescore years and ten, and over, is like an old machine that by proper care given to its condition has been kept running many years, and is still able to do work, but its wheels and axles and pinions are much worn and are rickety, and if it should be pushed, even to a small extent, in excess of its diminished powers, it breaks down and cannot be repaired, for every part of it is shattered. But if worked carefully and intelligently by a person who understands its condition and knows its capabilities, it can be kept in action a much longer time than would be possible if a careless engineer controlled it. In these fast times, however, it is generally not profitable to husband the resources of an old machine. But this is not true as regards our old men and women. It is desirable to hold on to them as long as possible, and if we can succeed in prolonging their lives five or ten years, or more, it will greatly enhance our happiness.

KIRTLAND CONFERENCE QUESTION.

THE Conference for April, 1895, decided by vote that the session for 1896 should be held at Kirtland, Ohio.

The brethren at the point openly designated by the conference as the one at which the session for 1896 was to be held took the action of conference as decisive, and in proper time selected of their number men qualified to perform all the duties appertaining to making suitable preparations for the holding of the session there. From the knowledge of these men thus chosen of the needs of the assembly, their judgment as to the number of those likely to be present, their observation and knowledge of the place and the facilities of the dwellers there to care for the assembly, and the amount of expense likely to be incurred by each, this committee made their estimate of what it would be proper to fix as the price of board per week for those attending the session. This they presented in a statement to the church through the HERALD, as was proper and right.

The matter should have rested there. What had been done was in accordance with resolution of the body, and the best judgment of those chosen to act in the matter for all; which judgment the men were and are amply qualified to exercise. It was not and is not the province or business of those living either east or west of Kirtland to interfere and do what these men were chosen to do; or to revise and correct what they did, according to conditions, prices, etc., obtaining and ruling in other localities.

The disposition not to pay tribute to Cæsar is strong in many; and is commendable at proper times and in proper places; but in the case of the coming session of conference at Kirtland it is not proper, neither commendable.

No further discussion of the question of the price of board, or the sort of accommodations to be offered and enjoyed at the conference will be permitted in the HERALD. Quite enough has been said and written on the topic—more than enough in some directions, as it involves the question of motive, which is always of questionable propriety, and in this case unnecessary and out of character.

Personally, we believe the price is little enough under the conditions existing; and we advise those who had intended going not to be deterred by what has been said and written about it. However, if there are any who are of the mind to resent the action of the committee, we advise them to drop the discussion of the matter and stay away, as it would be improper to take the spirit of dissatisfaction and fault-finding with them to conference, to spoil not only their enjoyment of the session but the peace and good will and enjoyment of others, who believe the cost of attending to be not too high, or who are willing to cheerfully submit to the judgment of their brethren to whom the arrangement and decision were assigned.

We are getting tired of the exhibition of bad taste among those who are not contented with letting those properly appointed to do business for the body to attend to their duties without interference while doing them, and unnecessary criticism and fault-finding after the work is done. It is causing sensible, capable, conscientious, painstaking, but sensitive men to hesitate about accepting appointments in which work for the body is required of them; and is even causing some to refuse such appointment, because they do not care to submit themselves to the ordeal through which such criticism calls them to pass. It is time for better things.

WE see by the Shelby County Republican that on Monday, March 2, Bro. Jonas W. Chatburn was chosen mayor of Harlan, same county, by a majority of forty-three in a total vote of four hundred and ninety-one. It was an election held under the operation of a new order of things, and hence the choice of Bro. Jonas was a fine compliment to him. The Republican has this to say of it:—

Judge Chatburn's election to the mayoralty of Harlan by a decisive majority is only one of the many evidences of the sincere respect the people of this town have for him. The conceded popularity of his opponent, ex-Mayor Baughn, adds considerable prestige to the victory. We have no doubt Mayor Chatburn will administer the affairs of the city with justice and impartiality. What more could anyone wish?

SECRET SOCIETIES.

WE have been so often importuned about secret societies that the subject is getting worn.

So far as the church is concerned there is no provision in its rules, charges, obligations, and duties for secret societies. Neither is there rule, command, nor enactment against them. Whether persons belonging to the church may, or shall not join secret societies the church has made no rule, or order. It is a matter of personal conduct left to the discretion of the members to exercise at their will.

Personally, and as a member of the church, we have neither time, nor money to spend in the necessary attendance upon any of the societies called secret, or partially so, now so numerous and fashionable among men. The demands of the most of them on the time and means of members, we think might be expended to better advantage in a different direction; but that is an opinion, formed from observation only, not from experience, for, never having belonged to any we cannot write from experience. Of this, however, we can write from knowledge, that there is no good which a man may bind himself by an oath made to his fellow lodge, or society mates to observe and to his fellow man, but what he is in honor bound to do by his baptismal obligation, no matter what that good is.

Time after time effort has been made to force the HERALD editors into the adverse discussion of secret societies. The editors have invariably declined to discuss the question either way, leaving it where we believe it belongs, to the individual consciences of the members to determine respective action in the premises.

Similar efforts have been made to draw the editor into wordy warfare and condemnation of the Catholic Church as such. Also to indorse the quasi political organization known as the A. P. A. society. The same may be said in regard to some labor unions. Some have gone so far as to state that because the editor was silent in regard to some of these things he was remiss in his duty. Of course it looks that way to those disposed to be radical on the points named, some one way, and some another. Should the church at any time make declaration on any of these points, the HERALD will state them, but until then the editor shall do as heretofore, leave them alone, for every man to determine for himself.

We are asked, "Is it a fact that Joseph, the first prophet of the church, was a Mason?" To this we answer that he was at his death a member of a Masonic Lodge. What his standing and degree, we do not know. Neither do we know what effect it had on his work and life, only from conjecture. It was rumored that when attacked in Carthage jail and killed, he made use of the Masonic sign, or hail of distress, and that Masons among the mob recognized, but disregarded the sign. Of this we know nothing, but can hardly believe other than that such statement must have come from those engaged in the murder, as none others could have seen it and reported on it. But whether it was so or not is immaterial, for the reason that his having become a Mason did not and could not make the society a good one and joining it a virtue, any more than the abstaining of his sons from joining the society now makes it a bad one, and joining it a departure from moral right. Neither the Masonic society, nor any other is good simply because an elder, or elders of the church belong to it. Nor are such societies bad simply because other elders refuse to join them.

What is written above applies to purely benevolent, or beneficiary societies, fire and life insurance companies, loan and building associations, and other institutions of similar character.

NEWS CONCERNING RAILROAD RATES.

BURLINGTON, Iowa, March 13.

Editors Herald:—I think the ministry could doubtless obtain trip permits over the "Lake Shore," by working the business up with A. J. Smith, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, whose address is Cleveland, Ohio. I think if our preachers would state the facts in the case, get it certified to and stamped by their railroad agents and forward letters of appointment, or their license to identify them, Mr. Smith would duly honor their applications and respond cheerfully.

His line has through coaches to Willoughby, whereas the New York, Chicago, and St. Louis (Nickel Plate) used to stop at Cleveland over night.

B. F. Horner, of Cleveland, Ohio, is the General Passenger agent of the latter road, and a regular clergyman's permit over that line can be obtained by sending direct an application with accompanying credentials of identification.

Hoping to aid some of the brethren I send inclosed, etc. M. T. SHORT.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 4.

MR. M. T. SHORT, Millersburg, Ill.,

Dear Sir:—I have yours of the 2d, making application for a clergy order good for the month of April. From the information contained in your letter you would not come within our rules for such an order, not being located on our line of road. Under our rules we issue single trip clergy orders to regularly ordained ministers of the gospel, when application for same is stamped and certified by some railroad agent at the applicant's place of residence. If you come within these rules, and desire trip permits under the conditions as above stated, I can furnish them on proper application. Yours truly,

A. J. SMITH,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent.

We publish the foregoing that brethren of the ministry who desire may avail themselves of the suggestions of Bro. Short. It will be noticed that the offer of Mr. Smith of the Lake Shore road applies only to the ministry, and is for "single" trip clergy orders. We suppose the words "trip permits" is intended to cover round trips, but suggest that care be taken by applicants to so state, and that sufficient time be obtained to secure return trip orders good until the time covered by the conference.

The Nickel Plate road, it will be noticed, issues half-fare clerical permits good during the year. Their best train leaves Chicago daily at 9:20 p. m., arriving at Willoughby at 10:57 a. m. Another leaves at 1:30 p. m. daily, reaching Cleveland at 11:41 p. m., necessitating an all-night stop over at Cleveland. Still another leaves at 8:05 a. m. "daily except Sunday," arriving at Cleveland nine p. m., also necessitating an all-night stop over; this according to latest schedule. A train from the east leaves Buffalo at 12:05 p. m., reaching Willoughby at 5:58 a. m.

We do not give Lake Shore time table, having no schedule. Trains on that road are numerous. All do not stop at Willoughby, however.

CHURCH AT CLEVELAND, OHIO.

THE Plain Dealer for March 9 has this notice of an organization of a branch at Cleveland, Ohio:—

On the night of February 29 an organization of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was effected by Elder G. T. Griffiths of Kirtland, Ohio, at Wieber Hall, Pearl Street. Elder William T. Rushton, late of Leeds, England, was made pastor, and Messrs. Adolphus Edwards, Burget, and Lake were appointed his associate officers.

The ministers of said church have been operating in the city for about two years under the jurisdiction of Elders Griffiths and W. H. Kelley. Elder M. H. Bond, now pastor of the church at St. Louis, R. Etzenhouser, at present at Middletown, Ohio, and Elder William H. Garrett, president of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district, have also done considerable preaching in the city, and as the result of the active efforts of the ministers quite a goodly number have become identified with the church; hence the present organization.

The local organizations of this church vary considerably from other church organizations. First, they have at the head a pastor, or presiding elder, who must be a high priest or an elder. He has supervision of all the church work. He is assisted by three other officers; namely, a priest, whose duty it is to visit the house of each member and look after their spiritual welfare; the second officer is a teacher, whose duty it is to see that no iniquity is indulged in by members, report on same; third, a deacon, who assists the teacher and has charge of the local temple affairs.

The members meet at Wieber Hall on Pearl Street every Sunday at eleven a. m. and 7:30 p. m. They are in no way connected with the Mormon Church. They believe in Trinity; in repentance; in baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; in the laying on of hands for the reception of the Holy Ghost and confirmation of members in the church; in two resurrections yet to be, one of the righteous, which will take place one thousand years prior to the last or general resurrection; in the second coming of Christ.

The officers of the church consist of the presidency, composed of three men; twelve apostles, seventies, high priests, pastors and elders, bishops, priests, teachers, and deacons.

APPRECIATION.

It is pleasant for a man engaged in arduous mental duties in which care for the good of others is more or less involved to receive tokens from those for whom interest is taken indicative that they are appreciated. Of this character is the following note. The psalm accompanying is evidently from a mind earnestly striving to attain unto nearness to God; however humble the effort may seem to himself and others:—

Dear Brother:—My heart and soul are filled this morning with the love that comes with the influence of God's Holy Spirit; but I lack words to express the adoration that seems to fill me, and thrills me as a strong current of electricity running through the body.

Dear brother, please pray for me, and may God's blessed Spirit be with you as you call on his name.

May the angels of heaven ever be round about you and preserve you from all that would be harmful unto you, or others. O, brother, may God's richest blessings be upon you ever, shall be my constant prayer.

I am trying to draw nearer each day to my heavenly Father.

PSALM.

Unto the Lord will we say,
"O Lord revive thy work."

We will come unto thee with full heart's supplication,
And praise thee, forever and aye,
As we offer to thee our soul's adoration;
And ask thee, Receive us to-day.

O, turn not away, but lend us thine ear, dear Father, in heaven. Grant that thy Spirit come in power upon thy people; and that with renewed energy they shall strengthen themselves by thy grace and say, What wilt thou have us to do? And in Zion may glory and honor be thine, commingled with praise and true love.

We know that thou art ever condemning all that is evil; but that which is righteous is lovely in thy sight.

O Lord, build up thy work on earth, that all may have opportunity to be righteous before thee.

Blessed be thy name O, Lord! Make it a precious word unto all; and one much sought after by thy children, in sincerity and in truth. Amen.

March 11, 1896.

By the kindness of the music firm of J. Fischer & Bro., 7 Bible House, New York, we have received the following pieces of sacred music, which on trial are found to be good:—

1. Awake my soul to joyful lays. Duet for Soprano and Alto. By J. Wiegand. Price, 50 cents.

2. Alleluia. Easter anthem for four voices. By J. Wiegand. Price, 15 cents.

3. Christ above all glory seated. For four voices. By Fr. Verdussen. Price 15 cents.

Each of these pieces is a composition of rare merit of devotional and dignified, as well as pleasing character, with beautiful accompaniments.

We anticipate for them a considerable demand in church choirs for the coming Easter service and other celebrations.

A new and decidedly attractive song, "I'll tell Papa on you," is the title of a new and most delightful song, composed by Fred. Lone, and published by J. Fischer & Bro., No. 7 Bible House, New York. Price 40 cents.

It is written in a sweet, flowing, and graceful style, with a pleasing and effective accompaniment. We predict for it a merited success.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. M. R. SCOTT, card from Correct, Indiana, March 9:—

The great Mormon "annihilator," H. B. Sherman, failed to show up on March 2, as agreed to by him. His cunning diatribe fell to the ground, thus throwing the prestige of the people in our favor. M. R. Scott, Jr., T. F. Wheeler and wife, J. T. Scott, and William Marshall were present. I have received invitations to go to four new openings of late. Am now holding forth at Whitehall; interest grand; the hoary-headed as well as the young attend meeting. The editor of the Versailles Republican has been fair in printing articles for us.

Bro. F. G. Pitt wrote thus from Chicago, the 14th, in reference to railroad rates:—

I hope the Saints will avail themselves of the $5.10 rate for ten or more to Cleveland. It would be pleasant if a sufficient number could leave at one time so as to secure a car to ourselves. The Nickel Plate is cheaper than the Lake Shore. Those who have permits can go to Cleveland for $4.68.

The Nickel Plate depot is located at corner of Clark and Twelfth Streets.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

RAILROAD RATES.—Rates between Chicago and Cleveland—the best obtainable—are announced by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. See his statement in Miscellaneous Department.

Sr. L. M. Cochrane, of Stockville, Nebraska, regrets that none of the elders has ever called and labored at that point. She is anxious to meet some of the ministry there. Three of her family are ready for baptism. Some neighbors are interested.

From a half column notice of the conference of the Northern California district, recently held at Oakland, published in the San Francisco Examiner, we learn that the district is in good condition under the excellent administration of Bro. J. F. Burton, missionary in charge, and Brn. J. C. Clapp and Thomas Daley of the missionary force. The district numbers eight hundred with eighty-four additions in the year. Pretty good showing.

Pres. Joseph Smith returned from the Des Moines, Iowa, conference on the 6th and left home again on the 13th, going to St. Joseph, Independence, and other points.

Elder Thomas Bell, of Lamoni, has preached seventy-nine sermons since last General Conference, baptized eleven, administered to two hundred or more; and all this notwithstanding his daily employment as salesman in one of the general stores at Lamoni. His preaching has been done within a radius of about fifteen miles of Lamoni and on Sundays. Here is an object lesson in what a man can do for the work, even though other duties or business cares press heavily upon him. It proves that men can do very much for the cause even though not under General Conference appointment; also that the diligent elder can be reaping and laying up the heavenly treasures if he wills to "thrust in his sickle." If the country adjacent to Lamoni needs the preaching of the word, it is a fair presumption that little or no difficulty need be had in securing openings in territory where the faith is but little known.

Bro. W. W. Blair arrived in from Western Iowa on the 9th and departed again for the missionary field on the 12th. He will labor at St. Joseph, St. Louis, and other points until General Conference.

Arrivals during the week include Bro. F. M. Weld, of the Nauvoo district; Elder Bradbury Robinson, from Iowa and Missouri points; Bro. J. S. Snively from Wirt, Iowa; Bishop E. L. Kelley from Kansas City; and Bro. M. M. Turpen, of Pleasanton, Iowa.

F. C. Smith writes that he baptized two at Stanton, Michigan, March 8. Good interest there.

Elder T. F. Stafford, of the Kewanee, Illinois, district who has been visiting his brother, Elder Edwin Stafford, of Lamoni, has returned to his home after a pleasant sojourn among relatives and friends. We found Bro. Stafford enjoying the same spirit of love for the truth that he has retained since the days of his boyhood, when at Nauvoo with his parents he was a witness to the events of those early times. We were glad to hear again his testimony and to note the spirit of it.

Bro. Columbus Scott arrived at Lamoni on the 12th, called home because of the serious illness of his father-in-law, Bro. S. P. Bass.

THE INEVITABLE.

I like the man who faces what he must
With step triumphant, and a heart of cheer;
Who fights the daily battle without fear;
Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unflinching trust
That God is God; that somehow, true and just
His plans work out for mortals; not a tear
Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear,
Falls from his grasp: better, with love, a crust
Than living in dishonor: envies not
Nor loses faith in man; but does his best,
Nor ever murmurs at his humbler lot,
But with a smile and words of hope, gives zest
To every toiler. He alone is great
Who by a life heroic conquers fate.—Sarah Knowles

SELECT READING FOR APRIL MEETING OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

SELF-DENIAL.

"CHILDREN should be trained to self-denial. Without it no strong characters are developed. They cannot reason the matter out and know what is best for them, but they can be trained to so trust their parents' wisdom and love as to accept cheerfully the self-denials imposed by their parents. This lays the ax at the root of the tree upon which grows most of the fretfulness, complaining, and grumbling which often make childhood so hateful. Prompt obedience to rightly constituted authority is the most important lesson for a child to learn, as it is the prime characteristic of a good citizen."

TRAINING TO WORK.

"Closely connected with training to obedience is training to work. Without this training no child develops symmetrically. All should be trained to take their share in home work. This makes them feel themselves a part of the family, necessary to its well-being, and thus is developed a feeling of responsibility. Let the work be suited to their strength and age, but so far as possible let it be regular work to be done each day at a specified time and let the children feel if they do not do it, it goes undone. Thus will be laid the foundations of steady industry, without which they will accomplish little in mature life."

(Let this point be fully discussed and suggestions made of work which little children can do. Also which is the better work, in the house or out of doors.)

PUNCTUALITY.

"Punctuality and promptness is closely allied to training to work. Determine how much time a child ought to occupy in doing a certain amount of work, then see that he does it in that time. If you allow him to be two hours in doing what he ought to do in one fourth of that time, you are training him to lazy, shiftless ways. 'Work while you work, play while you play,' should be the motto. There is one kind of work every child should be taught in connection with his play, that is to put his playthings away when he is done with them. This is a good motto for nursery or play room:—

"When you are done with play, put all your things away.

"Punctuality is the comfort of life, the lack of it is selfishness," said Dean Stanley's mother. Train children from childhood by being always punctual yourself, by expecting them to be so, and allowing them to suffer the consequences when they are not. I once knew a family which had grown slack in regard to breakfast hours, cured by a rule made by the father that anyone being five minutes late must go back to bed and stay an hour. The first to incur its penalty was the grown daughter, but it was enforced, and soon wrought a reformation. Mary is promised a ride if she will be ready at five o'clock. Five o'clock comes and so does the carriage. Father and mother are ready, but Mary is not. What is to be done? Call and call her again and wait till she comes? Yes, if you wish to teach her that time is of no consequence. But if you wish to teach her punctuality, go and leave her; she will be on hand next time."

TRUTHFULNESS.

"Truthfulness is the corner stone of character. Lying is so ready and cheap a cover for all sorts of shortcomings and is so much a fashion amongst all sorts of people, that a child can hardly help observing what use is made of it upon all occasions, and so can scarcely help, without great care, from getting into it. But it is so ill a quality, and the mother of so many ill ones that spawn from it and take shelter under it, that a child should be brought up in greatest abhorrence of it. When occasionally it comes to be mentioned before him, it should always be spoken of with the utmost detestation."

(We have not space to quote more from our author here, but honestly recommended that the sisters discuss this freely, giving examples which have come to their notice, and especially dwelling upon and bringing out such treatment as may induce a child to lie and such as will strengthen him to speak the truth. Consider closely the influence which companionship and associates may exert over them in this respect.)

"The whole atmosphere of the home must be saturated with truth, purity, honesty, if we would have the children therein grow up truthful, pure, honest. But the best of earthly parents are fallible. We must therefore early give the child a higher standard by bringing him to know his heavenly Father and to recognize himself as not only the child of nature and humanity, but as the child of God."

TEACHING TO PRAY.

"Froebel says: 'The most delicate, the most difficult, the most important part of the training of children, consists in the development of their inner and higher life of feeling and of soul—the religious life that is at one with God in feeling, in thought, and in action.' How shall this work be done? Not certainly by teaching children to babble over set prayers which are meaningless to them. O how much 'taking the name of the Lord in vain' is done by unconscious children whose parents never taught them the beauty and significance of the words they say! Music finds its way to the human soul more readily than does speech. Through it, influences may be brought to bear even upon young children to draw them to God. A mother instinctively sings her children to sleep. Let the songs she sings bear on their wings the truth she would impress on the childish heart. Thousands of children have been hushed to rest by their mother's voice singing this simple hymn, and they have learned to love the gracious Savior of whom she sung:—

"Gracious Savior, gentle Shepherd,
Little ones are dear to thee;
Gathered in thine arms and carried
In thy bosom may we be.

"Tender Shepherd never leave us,
From the fold to go astray,
By thy look of love directing,
May we walk the narrow way.

"Taught to lip the holy praises
Which on earth thy children sing,
May we with thy saints in glory,
Join to praise our Lord and King.

"As the child's life centers in the mother, and she is its interpreter of earthly relationships, so is she of the heavenly. As her children are going to sleep she kneels by their bedside and prays. At first they may not understand the words, simple though they should be, but gesture, the direct expression of the soul, is understood by the youngest child as it is by animals and savages. The kneeling form, the bowed head, the clasped hands, all speak to the little one's heart of a being above his mother, whom she loves and to whose care she confides him. His little hands are clasped and soon he is able to join in his mother's prayer. That it may not degenerate into parrothe repetition her prayer must be in close connection with his experiences and feelings. She should know how to draw out these feelings. As he lies there in the peace and quietness of his own bed, she can talk to him of the pleasures and blessings of the day, arouse in him a feeling of gratitude towards all who have helped to make his day happy, and thus lead his mind up to gratitude towards God. In such a mood the simple words, 'Dear Father in heaven, I thank thee,' will be a real prayer. . . .

"When prayer has become a real thing to the child, then it will help his devotions by teaching him the little prayer so dear to the heart of childhood that many of us, though in the midst of life's battle or life's decline, never close our eyes to sleep without repeating it:—

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep,
If I should die before I wake
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take,
And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

THE PETRIFIED FERN.

In a valley, centuries ago,
Grew a green fern leaf, green and slender—
Veining delicate, and fibres tender—
Waving, when the wind crept down so low;
Rushes tall, and moss, and grass, grew round it,
Playful sunbeams darted in and found it,
Drops of dew stole in by night and crowned it,
But no foot of man e'er trod that way;
Earth was young, and keeping holiday.

Monster fishes swam the silent main,
Stately forests waved their giant branches,
Mountains hurled their snowy avalanches,
Mammoth creatures stalked along the plain:
Nature reveled in grand mysteries,
But the little fern was not of these,
Did not number with the hills and trees;
Only grew and waved its sweet, wild way;
No one came to note it, day by day.

Earth, one time, put on a frolic mood,
Heaved the rocks, and changed the mighty motion

Of the deep, strong currents of the ocean;
Moved the plain, and shook the haughty
wood,

Crushed the little fern in soft, moist clay,
Covered it, and hid it safe away.

O, the long, long centuries since that day!
O, the agony! O, life's bitter cost,
Since that useless little fern was lost!

Useless? Lost? There came a thoughtful man,

Searching Nature's secrets, far and deep;
From a fissure in a rocky steep
He withdrew a stone o'er which there ran
Fairy pencilings, a quaint design,
Veinings, leafage, fibers, clear and fine,
And the fern's life lay in every line!
So, I think, God hides some souls away,
Sweetly to surprise us the last day.

PRAYER UNION SUBJECTS.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR MARCH.

My beloved brethren, pray unto the Father with all energy of heart, that ye may be filled with this love which he hath bestowed upon all who are true followers of his Son Jesus Christ, that ye may become the sons of God, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is, that we may have this hope, that we may be purified even as he is pure.—Moroni 7: 4.

Thursday, March 19.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—1 Thess. 5: 14, 15.

Thursday, March 26.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verse.—Doc. and Cov. 64: 8.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SISTER HOUCK, of Radcliffe, Iowa, desires your faith and prayers in behalf of her grandchild, Pearl Houck, who is afflicted with a disease of her limb. She received benefit by administration in November, by Elder Scott. She has not had any pain since, but is unable to walk yet. And also for her son who is threatened with consumption, that if it is the Lord's will he may be healed.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

WE take the liberty of quoting the following from a private letter recently received from Sr. Ella Housman Davis, of Clear Lake, Indiana: "I am glad to tell you that we are found in line of duty according to circular letter of resolutions of last General Convention relative to tobacco. . . . O, how I love the Sunday school! It is the place most dear on earth to me. I love to see the bright, smiling faces of the young; I love to tell them the simple gospel stories; I love to talk to them of duties to God and their fellow man; and, best of all, I love to see them heed my teaching, as also that of their Elder Brother, Jesus, whose example and pattern I daily strive to imitate."

As the time of the General Convention approaches each department of the work should receive some thought, not forgetting our Sunday school column in the Herald. When we took hold of this work we were much in the dark as to the needs of the workers and their desire to occupy more advanced grounds. Through correspondence and otherwise we have learned some of the things desired. Our work should be directed in a more systematic line. Earnest teachers are seeking for the best ways of presenting the weekly lesson. While the Quarterlies are full of good thoughts, they are not supposed to cover the ground in full. Hints should be given through our columns on the lessons of at least three departments: viz., Senior, Intermediate, and Primary. Each department should be assigned to some person qualified to do the work of the same—some one who is so in love with the work that he will esteem it a privilege to give of his time for the benefit of those who desire to make the most of every lesson.

If we would build symmetrically we cannot well depart from a psychological basis. We are assured that there are plenty in the church who are qualified to carry on the work in an approved manner. When the workers meet in convention, if they approve of these suggestive thoughts, they will be able to select such workers as are needed. Then with our space thus occupied, together with such material as the diagram committee may plan, we will feel that we can do no better until such time as the Sunday school is able to support an organ for its own individual work.

"With the child," says M. Marion, "the heart anticipates the head, and it is rather through the heart than through the reason that we have our hold on him. It is then to the heart that we must first address ourselves. The sensibilities of the child are already very active at a time when his intelligence is yet scarcely awakened. It would then be waste of time to teach him general precepts, but to the same degree it would be a useful undertaking to devote our energies to touching his heart, to giving him a love, and, so to speak, an agitation for the good, a longing for what is better."

"We do not teach a child morals in order that he may know, but in order that he may do."

"A real model acting before the eyes of the child will always be more efficient than the models borrowed from history or fiction."

HINTS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.—NO. 3.

BY J. F. M'DOWELL.

TEXT-BOOKS.

THE Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Compendium? Yes; when and where practicable. If a school be made up considerably of "outsiders," young folk, the Bible might be principally used, ideas carefully suggested seasonably from other books. Latter named should not be intrusively presented so as to offend; win over, not force over to "our side," should be the rule. Where the Bible is used almost exclusively, the same lesson for Bible and intermediate classes might prevail as then comment thereon would be made easier by superintendent, and maps used, etc., to better satisfaction. Question books are good; but let no teacher who uses them think they necessarily contain all thought needed to be expressed, for such I think the author had not in mind; they are aids to supply, and not the demand fully supplied. Keep the Bible in the school. The Inspired Translation can be well used by teachers in referring to superior texts, where text is not clearly expressed in King James' Version.

TEACHERS' MEETINGS.

Where teachers reside reasonably close to each other, meetings should be held. These greatly assist in defining terms, phrases, ideas; bringing out thought, opinion, and facts connected with lessons. The superintendent should meet with them when possible. Where these meetings are not held, teachers enter school comparative strangers to one another, and "no mortal idea" is known as to what anyone thinks of the lesson, how to more systematically teach a lesson, or what the lesson really contains. As no one person may be able to think out all that may be in it, is evident. Advanced thought is had by interchange of views; and where pupils are aware that teachers hold meetings weekly, they may feel better disposed to attend school, knowing that some definite knowledge has been obtained by the teachers. The teachers have more confidence; there is unity, strength, friendship, and congeniality of feeling, awakened by such method. They have an inspiring and lawful aspiring tendency, and ought, by all means to be cultivated. If Sunday school is a "dry place," it is so from lack of thought, study, push, life, and concentration of spiritual energies. Richness, the product of freshness, of thought in teaching is very desirable in a Sunday school. All this may be had by a spiritual, prayerful, studious teachers' meeting. An hour, two hours spent in rehearsal and questioning, not for talk's sake, but to learn, is time well spent. Sabbath school work demands all that is good, true, and life-giving, or it is an insipid institution indeed.

MUSIC.

We all know how a band causes everybody to go to doors and windows as it passes along the street. See the young follow it! Do not be afraid of music in Sunday schools. I have seen and heard piano, organ, violins, cornet, flute, in Sunday school; and O, my! the merry faces there were, and it sounded like one were in heaven. And the voices—clear, full, and sweet—rang out on the air. Where music, if not more than an organ, can be had, it ought to be in Sunday school. Get all the music you can. Cheery, inspiring, and uplifting. If Sunday school is worth anything, it is worth all you can do for it. It is making somebody happy; it is building up human characters and lives for time and eternity; it is laying foundation stones for future structures to stand upon; it is making sons and daughters for God; it is getting ready future fathers and mothers for other work that is good. The school is for father, mother, brother, sister, aunt, uncle, cousin, nephew, niece, grandpa, grandma! My! what a sight! Why, it thrills my soul with spiritual joy as I write, and my eyes moisten with gladness as I see before me such a sight; hear the sweet voices; the trembling notes. Music! Music in the thought! Music in the view! Music in the work—the work for God's humanity! Who'll work for the Sunday school?

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., March 10.

Editors Herald:—Our district Sunday school association, convened at Wilber, Nebraska, February 22. District superintendent Schafer being absent, Elder Walter M. Self, of Bennett, was chosen to preside. Secretary Diefendorf, of Lincoln, was present and acted in his office. The business session passed pleasantly; the officers of the association were all sustained and continued. The delegates chosen to represent at the General Association were Elder C.H. Porter, of Wilber, and J. W. Waldsmith, of Nebraska City. A good literary program was rendered in the evening.

The conference of the Southern district of Nebraska convened at the same place on the 23d; J. W. Waldsmith presiding, J. L. Diefendorf secretary, Apostle A. H. Smith assistant president. The day was most pleasantly and profitably spent by the preaching of the gospel. Elder Warren E. Peak, of Netawaka, Kansas, delivered a splendid sermon at the morning hour, and Elder A. J. Myers, of Fairbury, Nebraska, delivered a very logical discourse in the afternoon, to an attentive audience. At 7:30 p. m. Apostle Alex. H. Smith delivered a splendid discourse to a congregation so large that all could not be seated, but he held the undivided attention of those present.

On Monday, the 24th, met for business; held one session in the forenoon and another session in the afternoon. Everything went on smoothly; a good feeling prevailed. We were blessed with the presence and wise counsel of Bro. A. H. Smith, who took part in our deliberations. Brn. C. H. Porter, of Wilber, and J. W. Waldsmith, of Nebraska City, were chosen as delegates to General Conference. At night Bro. A. H. Smith preached another excellent sermon to a good audience. The sermon was well received. Thus ended our conference.

On Wednesday, the 26th, we took train for Nebraska City, Bro. Smith accompanying the writer. Here Bro. Smith commenced a series of twelve sermons. He had good liberty and a goodly degree of the Spirit throughout. The church was crowded, most of the time to its full capacity. Bro. S. left a good impression with the people. I realize that his effort has been duly appreciated by the Saints, and was well received and will be kindly remembered by many of the outside world. That God may bless and prosper him in his good-begun work wherever he may go, will be the prayer and desire of many a one at Nebraska City.

The Saints are alive and active at this place. They hold meeting of some kind nearly every night in the week. Many are the compliments we hear made for Bro. Forscutt, for what he has done for the Nebraska City branch the last year.

Brn. A. H. Smith and Warren E. Peak, went from here yesterday, the 9th, to Brownville, where they expect to hold services for several days. I am hopeful for the triumph of Zion's cause. Fraternally,

J. W. WALDSMITH.

WOODBINE, Iowa, March 10.

Editors Herald:—It is now fourteen years since I first entered a Latter Day Saints' meetinghouse, in London, England. The first noticeable feature to me was the Scripture texts hanging on the walls; second, the kindly welcome; third, the preaching of the word of God; fourth, the presence of the Holy Spirit (which had not been a stranger to me); fifth, the manifestation of the gifts promised by Christ in Mark 16: 16, 17; viz.: revelation and the casting out of devils.

I have just returned from the quarterly conference held at Magnolia, Iowa. At the request of several brethren I pen a few lines to some extent descriptive of the same. High priests, seventies, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons, and members were there. Some whose heads have silvered with age and labor in the army of the Lord; men of valor who have traveled over mountains, fed on roots to satisfy the cravings of hunger, and to obtain the necessary bodily strength for the battle of truth; also children of those gone before, who suffered the lash and prison for God and simple truth.

"Noble men were they,
Who struggled hard for sacred rights,
And bravely won the day."

When I entered the meetinghouse during a business session I felt the presence of the Holy Spirit. There was no harsh criticisms, no misunderstandings. At the Sunday school convention valuable instruction was given by Brn. J. C. Crabb, J. F. Mintun, and Charles Derry. Bro. Bullard tendered his resignation as district superintendent, which was accepted, and thanks given for services rendered. Bro. Alma Fyrando was elected to fill the vacancy. The prayer and testimony meetings were remarkable for the thankful spirit manifest; fervent prayers, continuous pleading for the sick that they might be restored to health. Testimony was given concerning the casting out of devils; tongues, interpretation, and prophecy were given. To one was given the promise of present help and future revelation concerning his work, with the administration of angels in foreign countries. To another the promise was that he should preach to the Lamanites in their own tongue by the power of the Holy Ghost; another is to go to the islands of the sea with the same promise; that is, preaching in tongues by the Holy Spirit.

Tears of joy, songs of praise, reconsecration of life to God's service, were some of the results of the outpouring of the Spirit. The preaching services were well attended, undisturbed by whispering or trifling; peaceful seasons. The aged ones rejoice that God is raising up young men to take their places; the young ones rejoice that they are accounted worthy to serve; and all the Saints rejoiced to be in God's own kingdom. We parted with brightened hopes, firmer purposes, and more confidence in the ultimate victory of sterling truth and the sweet remembrance of the joy it was to be at that conference.

In bonds,

WILLIAM WATERMAN.

ELLSTON, Iowa, March 9.

Editors Herald:—Elder Joseph Snively has been preaching the word of eternal life to the people of this place during the past week, declaring the glorious truth of the Son of God. The attendance at the meetings is fairly good. A marked and close attention is being paid to the word preached, quite a large number of young people attending; good order prevails during service. Bro. Snively is blessed with great liberty of the Spirit, and we are led to believe that some are very near the kingdom—"almost persuaded" and ready to accept the glorious truth revealed in these the latter days.

O, how our heart is made to rejoice when we hear this faithful and earnest servant of Christ reasoning so plainly out of the Scriptures with such force and convincing proof that it cannot truthfully be gainsaid or denied. Truly they who deny such plain facts must do violence to their better judgment.

We feel thankful to our heavenly Father for his tender mercies and loving-kindness to us, in that he has so often permitted us to listen to the words of life preached with power and much assurance by this brother; and we hope and pray that success may attend his labors for the spreading of truth, here as elsewhere, and crown his efforts for the advancement and good of the cause, bringing many precious souls into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Surely the Saints in this place must have realized more than ever before while attending the meeting that God was at the head of this work, guiding and overruling for their good and the good of the cause they so ardently love. O, how we love this pleasing story of Jesus and his love! It speaks sweetly to our soul. It is like the cool, refreshing breeze that comes after a hot summer day.

With deep, burning love and mingled feelings of joy and gladness we are led to exclaim, Praise to the Giver of all good and perfect gifts! and to thank him that he has led us from darkness and error into the light and knowledge of his dear Son.

Bro. Snively was asked to visit a sick man, Mr. Conner, living at this place, thought by many to be near death's door. After talking with him about his physical condition, Bro. Snively asked him of the hope he had for the life to come. He replied, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." "How do you know?" said Bro. Snively. He answered: "I once thought I was going to die, and I prayed, then fell down and became insensible. On awaking I saw a bright light and heard a voice speaking to me." Said Bro. Snively: "That is all very good; I too believe in seeing visions and lights. They are evidences that convince us that the Redeemer lives; but seeing visions and lights will not alone save us. We also must obey God's laws and ordinances." Then quoting Acts 9: 3, 4, he said: "Paul saw a light, and heard a voice, but was told to go to Ananias, a man sent of God, and be baptized, and wash away his sins, calling on the name of God."

The Presbyterians of this place, thinking, we suppose, that too much truth was being preached for the good of their craft, sent to headquarters for one of their "big guns;" so we were told. He came and preached in their chapel on Sunday evening. From the large crowd that attended the Saints' meeting in the evening we are led to believe that most of the people prefer wholesome food, rather than being fed on husks; and hearing that they will not continue meeting any longer, we conclude that the "big gun" exploded, having been loaded too heavily with paper wad. The Saints' meeting concluded by Bro. Snively preaching the funeral sermon of an aged lady, Rachel Hanshett, the like result having followed a series of meetings held here about two years ago by the same brother. The Christian chapel where the funeral services were held was filled, a large crowd being present, some having to stand.

The Saints here are feeling cheered and encouraged, and it is the general desire of them all as well as of the many friends that the conference appoint Elder Snively again to this district. In love of the truth,

CYRUS B. RUSH.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., March 9.

Editors Herald:—I left home the 29th of February in company with Bro. T. F. Wheeler and wife, of Galena, for Jefferson County. Stopped over night with the writer's brother and on Sunday met at Union church and was edified by Bro. T. F. Wheeler, on the principles of the restored gospel. In the evening we started for New Marion, Ripley County, in company with Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., in order to be there in time to rest and make some necessary arrangements for the long-talked-of and eagerly-expected debate that was to take place between Elder M. R. Scott, Jr., of our faith, and Elder H. B. Sherman, of the Christian or Disciple faith. But, lo and behold! when the time rolled around and the people gathered, no Sherman could be found. After talking and blowing so much through the county papers about how he intended to unmask the fraud and deception covered up under the cloak of religion, and the Satan there was in "Momonism," Sherman retreated and could not be found in the neighborhood.

Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., took charge of the meeting and told the audience that he did not deem it wise to do the debating by himself so as Sherman could not be found there would be no debate. He then gave us a good thirty minutes' talk on the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith; and by this time Bro. M. R. Scott, Sr., came to our rescue and told the audience that this was the second time he had come to Ripley County to take part in a religious debate and no debate yet; and the third time he hoped would be the charm. He then gave the people some logical reasons for believing that the gospel had been restored by the administration of an angel, and said in a clear, keen, cutting manner that if there had been no apostasy or falling away (2 Thess. 2:3) it would supersede the necessity of a restoration; and again, that if the kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2:44 was set up in the days of Christ and the apostles, down goes the claim of Joseph Smith. The people were very much interested and we continued meetings in Malotte schoolhouse a few nights, and on Thursday night moved to Whitehall schoolhouse, a new place opened up by Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr. A good interest is manifest all through that county.

Bro. Scott, though young in years, has made a host of friends for the cause he so ably represents. The way Mr. Sherman acted about the debate has caused a good many of those of "the Bible and Bible alone" faith to investigate for themselves, and he, being State Evangelist, and boasting so much about Mormon frauds and deception caused two of his congregations to hire other ministers. Excitement is high and I think ere long many will be translated out of Nature's darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of God's dear Son.

The writer and his father left Ripley County on the 7th inst. for Floyd County, and after boarding the train and finding a seat, what should I hear but a conversation between two parties about the "Mormon Fizzle" as they called it, and I walked up and introduced myself, and Bro. Sherman looked somewhat red in the face. I told him that I had been up to hear the debate that was to have taken place, but was very much disappointed. "Yes," he said, "I guess Scott is having things his own way. You Mormons can crawl out of the least holes of any set I ever saw. Scott and I entered into an agreement or contract to hold a religious debate, and Scott could not get out of it any other way, so he drops he a card telling me the matter of debate is turned over to 'our missionary E. C. Briggs, of Valparaiso, Indiana.' Now he, Scott, wants me to issue a search warrant to find a Mormon to debate with; so I dropped the matter. I will have no more to do with them." I said: "Mr. Sherman, it looks like the search warrant should have been issued by our people." The reverend gentleman uses this as a loophole to get out of meeting the issue. He, Sherman, was told when the argeement was entered into that it was rula- ble in our church to refer the matter of debate to the missionary in charge and whoever he chose would be on hand at the specified time to defend the doctrine of the church; but Mr. Sherman saw this was a dodge for him and took advantage of it.

After signing the propositions and rules governing Sherman said, "Scott, bring the best man you have, for there will be no honor in spanking a boy, and afterward hear it said that you have better men." He was then notified that the man the church put there to do the debating would be indorsed by the church. I told Mr. Sherman that if he did not have enough nerve or backbone to face the issue he had better stop boasting so much through the papers and keep silent about frauds and deceivers. He will do much good in opening up the work in new places.

The second night we occupied at "Malotte" we had a call from his own neighborhood. Many new places are ready to hear the restored gospel in this district. Plenty of work, but few laborers; so the good work goes on. The Ripley County papers are open for our correspondence and there has been much prejudice allayed in that way.

In hope of eternal life,

JOHN T. SCOTT.

CARBONDALE, Ill., March 9.

Editors Herald:—When I went to De Soto, Illinois, I could not get a house to preach in, although there were four churches in the place. I preached twice in a private house, then went about three miles and preached twice in a schoolhouse and once in a private house, thence again to De Soto and preached twice in the school building at that place. I distributed a goodly number of Epitomes and raised quite an interest, and had good attentive audiences on the last two nights. One gentleman came to hear me and when he went home aroused his wife and talked over what he had heard until two o'clock the next morning. I left with many invitations to come again and stay longer.

I don't think I ever had as good liberty in presenting the word as I did at that place. Bro. I. M. Smith preached there a few times about fourteen years ago, and Bro. T. C. Kelley a few times about four years ago. That is all the preaching that has been done there until I went there on the 3d of this month. I had the pleasure of baptizing three while there. Two of them had joined the Christian Church just three weeks before I baptized them. I think if I had stayed another week I could have baptized others, but I thought it best to leave and let them read and investigate further.

I like to induct men and women into the kingdom of God as much as anybody, but I want them to thoroughly understand what they are going into, that the work may not have to be done over again. I want to return as soon as I can and give them more gospel food as best I can. I think there will be a good work done there if the work is kept up,

We now have seven members, and look for more in the near future. If any of the elders of this district can go there at any time, drop a card to Bro. A. J. Manr, or Joseph Burlison, and they will meet them at the train and welcome them there.

I go from here into Williamson County and will stay over next Sunday and try to break the bread of life to the few Saints and others that will come out, as best I can; thence into Johnson County and try to open up some new places there. I expect to labor there until conference is over and then go wherever the conference thinks best. My desires are to remain in the field and do all I possibly can for the cause we love so dearly.

There had been two Utah preachers at De Soto just before I went there. I tried to show the people that there was a difference between us. They hold conference at Marion, March 27. Your brother,

W. R. SMITH.

RUNNELLS, Iowa, March 9.

Editors Herald:—There are some encouraging features attending the Lord's work in the twenty-six counties comprising the Des Moines district, and of these we would not leave the Herald readers ignorant. Most of the Saints are striving to realize the necessity of activity in the Master's cause; and the local ministry are looking after its interests. Calls for the preaching of the word are opening up in new fields, and the present missionary force in this field is not adequate to the demands for labor. A lessening of the missionary force in this field will work ill to the work. It ought to be increased for the coming conference year.

I have wondered lately whether the church is aware of the great opportunity now before her for moving forward to the spread of the work; or, whether we would arise to the necessity and grandeur of the opportunity now so urgently inviting. A change in the feelings of the people toward the work, is slowly but surely coming. It is a favorable change; churchhouses are opening to us in many places, where hitherto we were not permitted to be heard. Prejudice is weakening; people are investigating. Shall we as a church arouse to the importance of the opportunity and the work? or, shall we halt while time glides by and to a certain extent fail?

The crying need is more ministerial workers! The field for labor is enlarging. Souls are hungering, starving for the bread of life. The church's duty is to supply this demand. Will we respond? "Shall sheaves lie there ungathered, and waste upon the plain?" Saints, help us. All unitedly add a mite to the Lord's treasury. We are not asking a salary, nor an increase of our family's stipend; we are asking for more men to save souls! a little more financial aid. God asks the church for those souls. Will we "rob" him of them? What say you, Saints? Speak out!

Let us untie the hands of good men now anxious to labor in God's great harvest field, that they may treasure up eternal life to themselves and others. Have all done their whole duty in this regard, so that like Paul of old, that grand missionary and apostle;—"I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men"?

Our late Sunday school convention and district conference held at the city of Des Moines was a success in most regards. Some growth in numbers has attended the Sunday school work, also in experience and other regards. I think the workers realize more fully the importance of improving on their talents, and of going forward. Parents are beginning to see the importance of their action, urging the children onward and aiding them. This is a most important point in connection with the Sunday school work. Prompt, concurrent, parental action greatly encourages and aids the children in "the how and the where."

The presence and encouraging lead of President Joseph Smith at the conference was encouraging to Saints and ministry.

Many not of the faith were unable to gain admission to the church to hear Bro. Joseph preach, and all available room was occupied at the preaching services. While we feel glad that our churches are generally too small for our conferences, we regretted that we had not more than double the room on this occasion. Business was quietly and pleasantly done, and the Spirit's presence gave tone and a greater activity in the various services. Five persons were baptized and confirmed on Sunday; three children were blessed, a number were administered to for illness, and divine blessings were realized by us. We all hope the Lord will send Bro. Joseph this way again "betimes." I greatly appreciated his visit and labor, and am satisfied all the Saints did.

Yours at work,

Editors Herald:—Our conference held in Shenandoah last Saturday and Sunday was among the best ever held in this district; also our district Sunday school convention on the 6th and 7th was excellent. In the Sunday school work there has been an advance step taken for the better. Great credit is due our worthy workers in this line.

The business of the conference passed off smoothly, without a jar; the preaching was just to the point, and ably done, by Brn. W. W. Blair and O. B. Thomas. All were glad to see Bro. Blair; it made many think of happy days gone by.

Our social meeting was spirited and all hearts were made to rejoice in the hope of life set before them through the means ordained of our heavenly Father. We are all rejoicing, and thankful to God for the gospel restored; and trying in our weakness to spread the tidings of peace and the knowledge of the truth, to our fellows; and many are investigating our claims, and quite a number have conceded the correctness of them, and some have made known their intentions to obey.

The way opens up in every direction for preaching the word. We are unable to fill one fourth of the calls made; still we do what we can, trusting to our Father for results. Many of the local brethren are doing well.

All speak highly of Bro. Thomas and request his return to this field.

We had good success southwest of River-ton, in a Christian church, a new place, with Brn. Nathan Mortimore and James Comstock, in preaching the word with good liberty and a request to return; also at a new place on the Missouri bottom, in the old Wright settlement, in connection with Bro. Samuel Orton, who is ever willing to do work for the Master. Here we had an excellent time; good audiences, and splendid attention and some we believe almost persuaded to obey. We expect to return for future labor in this place as soon as consistent.

We have no fault to find with any; we have been treated well, and our wants supplied. Have been wonderfully blessed with the Holy Spirit in our work. May God bless the work and his servants called to labor in its interest. May the coming conference prove to be good and of great benefit to those who attend, and a general blessing to the church at large.

In the interest of the truth,

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from a trip to Moose and Bermidji, in Beltrami County, this State. There are some scattered Saints there; at Moose, Bro. and Sr. Hubert Campbell, Bro. and Sr. Reuben Oakes, and Sr. Allen. I preached three times in their schoolhouse to a full house with good interest and never was treated better. I hope to go back again sometime. From there I went to Bermidji, twenty-five miles, the home of Mr. and Sr. Nye, and Bro. and Sr. Waldron. This is a new town springing up in the wilderness, about sixty miles from the railroad at Fosston, and fifty-five from the railroad at Park Rapids. Saints and friends were glad to see me; they procured a hall and I preached twice, also held sacrament meetings. I had good liberty in preaching and couldn't ask to be treated better. May God reward them.

Our meeting Sunday at Lakeview was well attended. Quite a number not members of the church were present. I feel encouraged to press on. The Saints are for the most part well.

As ever,

□ Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote you I opened up a new field; best of liberty, good attention; and a good-sized congregation. I am invited to preach in another new place. Will do so soon as I can. Last Saturday and Sunday was set for our conference at Little Deer Isle, but such a storm came up the people did not get there, but on Saturday afternoon Bro. Greene came in and attended the Sunday school convention and returned home because of sickness in his family, so he said.

J. J. Billings vice president of the district, J. W. Blastow, and J. C. Foss of the eldership; Priests S. G. Cunningham, J. Eaton, and W. D. Haskell, acting secretary, met Saturday evening. The writer was chosen to preside, not because of the incompetency of the vice president, for Bro. John is a worthy one of honor and respect, but as a matter of choice. The business was done all but adjourning. On Sunday it rained all day, so we had no service. On Monday morning before we left for home a few of us met in front of the schoolhouse, having no key to open the door, and adjourned. Soon after that it commenced to rain. For six days and nights on the coast of Maine we have had rain, snow, high winds, and considerable damage to property.

I have a good place near the church in Independence, Missouri, that I will sell for cash or part down, and the Bishop can have the money to use for the church without interest till I want to use it.

Yours ever,
J. C. FOSS.

GUILFORD, Mo., March 9.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference was a success and passed off very peacefully. Bro. Henry Kemp was present and as congenial in his way as ever. Bro. M. P. Madison was at his post and was reelected for the coming term, which I think was wise, more especially under existing circumstances. He is a member of the Second Quorum of Seventy. I am not aware that his ordination has detracted aught from his ability, or from the authority he held when an elder. He has not been able to travel, neither is he now able to go outside of Nodaway, or Fremont, or some neighboring field. The interpretation of the last revelation that seems to have gained precedence in some localities makes it almost a crime for a seventy to preside. The fact that the Presidency made choice of so many of the Seventies for ordination to the office of high priest at our General Conference of 1894 shows their confidence in their presiding ability at least. Again, there are some districts that have, in their zeal, placed an elder to preside, then the seventy has had to perform the work of president while others held the office. While I am not pleading for seventies to preside, I do think that there are conditions and exigencies under which it is advisable that they should.

Brn. C. C. Nelson and E. S. Fannon were ordained to the office of elder. They are excellent men; they preach by their daily life. Bro. Fannon was educated for the Methodist ministry.

The Nodaway district needs laborers. There is a wide field with very few to occupy as preachers of the word. The outsiders are a kind and hospitable class of people. They have treated me with kindness and respect all along the line; so that my prayers to God are not for vengeance upon them, but for mercy, which of course should be the case under all circumstances.

I am very sorry that there is not more activity and interest manifested in Sabbath school work in this district. It is true that circumstances militate somewhat against it, yet I do not regard them as insurmountable. There is quite a number of excellent young people in this district. Talented in music, with their good voices, they attract the people and do good service in keeping up the interest. We have held meetings here during the last two weeks every night and twice on Sunday, with the exception of three nights. Bro. Kemp was with me during the opening of this series and spoke twice; then he went to Barnard and held two meetings in the Christian church. His preaching has a good influence. He is moderate and rather winning in his method. Bro. John Byergo spoke yesterday morning and made a good effort. Last evening we closed our meeting with unabated interest and the kind words spoken by outsiders indicated their appreciation of our efforts; and their presence night after night confirmed their words. I am told by the Saints that it was the best attendance of outsiders ever had in Guilford. They seem to be a good people. It was easy to preach to them.

There is a man here by the name of Mr. Cayton, who was with the mob that drove the Saints away from Independence, Missouri. He speaks well of the Saints, and particularly so of Joseph Smith. He says the Saints were a fine people and very industrious. He saw the press destroyed, and told of Edward Partridge—that he was tarred and feathered; said the mob was mostly a drunken set; that had it not been for the accident (if it was an accident) that ended the life of Mr. Barzell, the lawyer, the Saints would not have been driven then, for Mr. Barzell was a friend, and advised peace, and plead for the Mormons. I leave here to-day or to-morrow for Long Branch, then for home.

CRITICISM AND CONTROVERSY. NO. 3.

BY J. R. LAMBERT.

FROM what has been presented in numbers 1 and 2 of this article, it is quite evident that God desires his people, and especially the ministry, to become a school of spiritual critics. Our work is of such a character that there is a constant demand for correct and keen discrimination between right and wrong, truth and error, good and evil. But it should be borne in mind that there is a vast difference between a true critic and a fossiliferous grumbler, or faultfinder. The latter is largely, if not altogether, destitute of charity, without which there can be no true critic.

Jesus Christ was the great Teacher sent from God. What a wonderful critic he was, and how often he was engaged in earnest controversy. He commenced the latter when he was about twelve years old. (Or at least I infer that there was controversy between him and the doctors of the law—see Luke 2: 46, 47.) Christ's ministers are also required to teach the people. They are his ambassadors, (2 Cor. 5: 20,) and as such are required to correctly represent him.

How can anyone be a true teacher unless he is more or less of a critic? To teach truly, we must cause those who are taught to understand that there are some things which they must do, and there are some things which they must not do. After this manner has God dealt with us, and true development cannot be had unless we strictly observe his mandatory and prohibitory commandments. The Lord says to his people, "Thou shalt," and, "Thou shalt not."

We are required to teach one another, and to teach diligently, that God's grace may attend us. We cannot do this without pointing out from time to time, in kindness, and for the express purposes of benefiting individuals and the cause of truth, that which we deem to be wrong. If we make a mistake by offering our strictures and commendations at an inopportune time, and in an unwise manner, we should strive to profit by it, and if possible, avoid a repetition of the mistake. The best of people sometimes make mistakes in their honest efforts to perform the most important and essential work. "It is human to err, but to forgive is divine." When the criticisms are made in wisdom, and with pure motives, the degree of good accomplished very largely depends upon how they are received. If we suffer ourselves to become more anxious about how to retain prestige already secured, and to secure more, than to be just right, we will surely become darkened in mind, and very largely disqualified to see ourselves as we are. The right of those criticised to oppose the criticisms made by writing up the "other side," is not questioned for a moment; but the point is this: If the criticisms are true, just, and right, what is to be gained by such opposition? Is it due to ourselves or the cause, that we should try to retain prestige at the expense of principle?

But some one will object to this manner, upon the grounds that it says, by implication, that somebody is guilty, without pointing him out. I answer, I am simply illustrating a principle, and leaving every one to decide for himself whether he is guilty or not guilty. Is this wrong?

Another thing to which I call attention in this connection: When a wrong policy is thought to be pursued, or strong assertions made which cannot be proved (and needless ones at that), and when there is no moral principle involved, but it is simply an error of the head; and when the ministers who have been guilty of these errors can be found all over the country—here and there one—it is eminently proper that the criticisms be made publicly, through the church organ, so as to benefit all concerned, who are willing to be set right. But, of course, such efforts should be entirely free from personality. I think the proper bases for all such efforts is the good of the work at large, and the greatest good of the greatest number concerned. If I have the right to affirm certain things, in a definite and strong manner, either with or without proof, whenever and wherever I please, is it wrong for my fellow minister who deems the policy to be a wrong one, to call attention to it through the Herald, our church organ, in a friendly manner, and without mentioning any names?

Criticism when replied to, becomes controversy; and it is often not difficult to get at the truth and right of the matter, if the hearer, or reader, as the case may be, will but carefully consider both sides. If when anyone undertakes to reply, he changes the real criticism made, or the issue, before attacking it, or before completing his reply, it is evidence of weakness on the part of the opposition, but is highly complimentary to the real positions of the critic. Or if the one who wishes to show up the "other side" should squarely contradict himself, in positions taken, or find himself under the necessity to advocate doctrine foreign to the gospel, it is strong evidence against him. As a matter of course, the same would be true if manifested in the work of the critic.

There can but be one proper object, or purpose, to criticism or controversy, and that is the truth, or right of the matter under consideration; and when the first effort made is opposed with only this purpose in view, the results are sure to be good, all around. But whether the "other side" is shown up in this way, and for this purpose; or in some other way, and for some other purpose, it will, nevertheless, benefit all who are careful to retain their integrity, and who act wisely. It helps us to more easily determine what degree of merit is found in the first article, speech, or sermon, and to decide with greater safety for or against the positions affirmed. "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," will apply here, as elsewhere, and Latter Day Saints ought to practice what they preach.

Allow me to illustrate my meaning. Bro. A. writes for the Herald under the caption of "Where is the proof?" He takes the position that we should not positively and unqualifiedly affirm that which we cannot prove; that it is unsafe, injurious to the cause, and wrong to do so. He cites as cases in point, without mentioning anybody's name, the practice of some elders in affirming that Nicodemus was ashamed to be seen in the company of Jesus in the daytime, hence went "to Jesus by night;" and he says, by implication, that there is no good evidence to sustain the assertion.

Bro. B. writes up a reply, and calls it the "other side." Now what would we reasonably expect from the other side when we consider the caption and first position of Bro. A's. article? Why, nothing less than this, surely, that he should at least furnish us with the supposed proof which forms the basis upon which the strong statement rests, that Nicodemus was a moral "coward." Does he undertake to point out the proof? No, not in his reply to Bro. A's. article referred to above. What does he do? He says that he believes from inference that Nicodemus was "a coward," but he has always "been careful to use the term 'doubtless' so as to stand on the safer basis." Now no one should quarrel with Bro. B. because of his belief, nor for a proper expression of that belief; and if this is what he means by using the word "doubtless," then he does not come under the "ban" of the criticism at all, and we are led to ask, why did he so promptly throw up his hand and answer to the charge? This serves to show the difference between true and false reasoning. The reply hardly touches the criticism made.

But Bro. B. writes a second article in reply to Bro. A's. "defense," in which he says:—

I infer the man to have been a coward or he would not have chosen the night rather than the day to visit the Master, hence there is neither doubt nor question in my mind.

At last, we have the proof, and the only proof that can be found, I think, which so thoroughly convinced Bro. B. that there is left neither "doubt nor question in" his "mind." What is it? Why, he says, Nicodemus chose the "night rather than the day to visit the Master." How does Bro. B. know that Nicodemus chose the night in preference to the day? "Where is the proof?" "Why, the record says he went at night!" Yes, so it does, and only a short time ago my wife and I went to see Bro. and Sr. Ray "by night." Not because the night was our choice, but because it was not practicable for us to go in the daytime. Now we think it would be very unjust for anyone to call us cowards for having gone by night. If Elder B. or anybody else can have all "doubt" or "question" removed from his mind by such evidences as these, which he himself furnishes, so that he can regard it right and proper to call Nicodemus a "coward," I submit that it is high time that some one should write a criticism. Such an imputation against Nicodemus is not only uncharitable, but it is unjust.

The truth is, that the strongest assertion that can be made within the realm of safety and justice, is something like this: "Possibly the reason why Nicodemus 'came to Jesus by night' was because he was ashamed to be seen with him in the broad light of day, on account of the upopularity of Jesus and his doctrine."

Some seem to think that all controversy should be excluded from the church organ; and one leading reason given is, that they do not like outsiders to know that we are divided on these questions. For the same reason there should be no division of sentiment expressed in our conferences, nor in our branch meetings, nor anywhere else where outsiders can hear or learn of it. The first article written, or the first speech made, must go to the world as a correct representation of our faith on the topics under consideration, even if two thirds of the other representatives of the church think differently on some of the points set forth. Would such a course be safe and right?

"But," you say, "let all these differences be settled in quorum and council meetings, away from all public meetings of the church or the world." Much may be done by such quorum and council meetings, but it is not difficult to see, I think, that to confine all controversy to the quorums and councils of the church is impracticable and unsafe. Proper agitation must be had, more or less, elsewhere. When different and conflicting views are entertained by those who have an equal right to be heard, is it proper that all should be shut off except those who happen to speak first? Moreover, it is not the way of light and progress for fallible man to allow but one set of views to appear before the people, which is proven by all the history of the past. Reform and progress are invariably preceded by controversy; and when we get the idea that we are just right in our views, and we want everybody to let us alone, it is positive evidence that we are just wrong, whatever may be the character of our views. If we are in possession of the truth and the "Spirit of truth," we will not object to any proper opposition, for it can do us no harm; we have nothing to lose, but much, very much to gain.

How can any journal, religious or political, be independent and free if it excludes all views from its pages except those which are in harmony with the belief of the editor? One of the grandest blessings which the restored gospel has brought to us, as I view it, is that every man and woman, in his or her place, as minister or member, is free to believe, speak, and do that which is right, according to his or her highest convictions; provided, always, that these convictions do not lead him or her to oppose any rule or action of the body, except when it properly comes before the body for reconsideration. And provided further, that the carrying into effect the convictions held, does not interfere with the rights and liberties of others, either within or without the church. The body is always greater than any one part of it. Even the head is not equal to the whole body, including the head. And further, that which is right for us to believe, say, and do, will never inflict wrong or injustice on others. But when governed by these considerations, we are free to express our best convictions of truth and right, both in pulpit and press. And if free, then we are independent, having but one object in view; viz.: the correct representation of God and his truth to the people.

The character of the opposition serves to show that there exists no proper grounds from which to oppose proper controversy. To illustrate, I cite a paragraph found in Herald for December 18, page 814. Speaking of controversy the brother says:—

Labor as we will, in at least nine out of every ten case it is safe to say that a desire for the "mastery" rather than the truth is apparent on the part of both sides, and expressions harsh in their nature are used which it were much better had been left unsaid.

If nine tenths of our ministers, when engaged in controversy, permit a desire for the mastery rather than the truth to govern them, is it a necessity? or is it right? If this desire governs them altogether, what kind of representatives are they? Are they working up to gospel standards? If the statement be true, God pity the ministers, and the church which they are sent out to represent! But I think the brother is mistaken. We are supposed to know how it is with ourselves, but cannot be too careful in judging the motives of others. I have been accused of seeing the dark side too much, but I have a much better opinion of our ministry, as a whole, than this, and I deeply regret that such a statement should go to the church and the world from one of our leading representatives. Were it necessary for us to pass upon the matter in this manner, one tenth I think, would be much nearer the truth. The reflection is a sweeping, severe, and unjust one. But it may be said that this desire for mastery rather than truth is only apparent in a small degree with the "nine tenths" spoken of. Very well, if the ministers of the church resist and overcome temptation on all points save a few, is there any force or consistency in presenting these few as an argument against controversy?

As to harsh expressions which should not be used, they are by no means confined to those who engage in controversy, or to the time of controversy. It is true that improper terms should not be used; but when our opponents are present and are permitted to speak for themselves, is the time when we can justly use the strongest terms allowable. Occasionally we find a man who uses stronger and harsher terms in the pulpit, when his opponent is not present, than if he were present and permitted to speak for himself. The truth is, so far as the effect on ourselves is concerned, controversy affords rare and excellent opportunities for development in all that enters into a strong and noble character; and to cut ourselves off from these opportunities because they are more or less abused, is like refusing to take money because it is frequently counterfeited, or refusing to marry because misery, quarreling, and separation are frequent results.

Did it ever occur to the reader that if the Herald should represent the ministers and members of the church as believing precisely alike on all points, that it would be a misrepresentation of the facts in the case? Would such misrepresentation be right? Even from the low standard of policy alone, it would react, and prove a curse rather than a blessing. There are some things which we need to fear; but our differences of opinion, when taken as a whole, are neither of sufficient dimensions, nor of such a character, as to cause alarm. Indeed the cause for alarm is when the free interchange of thought is interfered with.

This imperfect effort has been made under some very embarrassing circumstances; not because others were less able to make it—far from that—but because, after long waiting, this exact field did not seem to be occupied. Should it prove the means of awakening thought on that which is very important to us as a people, and of enlisting more able pens to treat on the themes presented, I shall be glad. One thing we should have learned ere this: No unity on any point can be reached that will materially benefit those concerned, except it is produced by their intelligent consent, after proper investigation. This kind of unity of sentiment and union of believers, based upon the revelations of God, will stand secure,

"Unhurt amid the war of elements,
The wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds."

BOOK OF MORMON GEOGRAPHY.

WHATEVER the landing place of the Nephites, even the casual reader will have observed that northward the star of empire wended its way. Those who have read up on American archaeology are aware that in Peru and in Central America the two main clusters of wonderful ruins are to be found. Bancroft, Short, Baldwin, and Pidgeon all certify that Central America ruins show the occupancy of two distinct civilizations.

These two civilizations, answering to Jaredite and Nephite colonizations, and as the Nephite occupied elsewhere long years before they knew of the former people—the Jaredites—and when their records, bones, and ruins were found it was far to the northward,—it points to South America as the first and long-time abode of the Nephites.

The magnificent roads, aqueducts, bridges, etc., of Peru, attesting occupancy by Nephites, and the rich treasure houses, palaces lined with gold, attesting facts of both Nephite and Lamanite phases of life.

The fact that the section of territory between Peru and Central America abounds in less magnificent ruins is explained in that the occupancy of that part by the Nephites was a period of almost incessant war; hence less durable and also less magnificent structures were builded. Upon what other basis could it be accounted for that Peru, the first home of the Nephites, and then Central America where they built and also rebuilt so very magnificently, abound in such ruins, while the intervening district has yielded but little to the store of the archaeologists?

A basis to Nephite geography, so far as may be possible to unravel it, is found on pages 267 and 268 of the small type edition of the Book of Mormon. Read them very carefully. The following points appear:—

1. A narrow strip of wilderness that extended or ran from the sea east, even to the sea west. . . . And thus were the Lamanites and Nephites divided.

It is natural to think of that narrow strip of wilderness which divided as being on a straight line from ocean to ocean, but, it is made circuitous by this:—

And thus the Nephites were nearly surrounded by the Lamanites.

It next follows that there was a wilderness about the head waters of Sidon—round about on the wilderness side; on the north, even until they came to the land which they called Bountiful. And it bordered on the land which they called Desolation; it being so far northward, that it came into the land which had been peopled, and been destroyed, of whose bones we have spoken, which was discovered by the people of Zarahemla; it being the place of their first landing. And they came from there up into the south wilderness. Thus the land on the northward was called Desolation, and the land southward was called Bountiful; it being the wilderness which is filled with all manner of wild animals of every kind; a part of which had come from the land northward, for food.

It should be noted that the northern part of South America is called Bountiful, as will appear upon a critical rereading; and also that South America, "the land southward," is also called Bountiful; while North America is called Desolation; and sometimes the term "desolation" refers only to its southern part, or Central America. It is clearly stated that the Zarahemlaites first landed where the "land had been peopled"—Central America — and "they came from there up into the south wilderness," or into South America.

A rereading of page 267 will disclose that the Lamanites were on the west, in the land of Nephi: yea, and also on the west of the land of Zarahemla, in the borders by the seashore, and on the west, the land of Nephi, in the place of their fathers' first inheritance, and thus bordering along by the seashore.

Remembering that the Zarahemlaites came from their first landing place up into the south wilderness, read page 137, of the discovery of Zarahemla by Mosiah, speaking of the former people; "their bones lay scattered in the land northward." This, too, locates Zarahemla in South America. Page 158 gives the account of king Limhi's forty-three men searching for Zarahemla. Being on first territory, occupied, these men strike out for Zarahemla, miss it, and turn up in Central America as the description clearly indicates.

Returning to page 267:—

And now it was only the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite, on the line Bountiful, and the land Desolation, from the east to the west sea; and thus the land of Nephi, and the land of Zarahemla, were nearly surrounded by water; there being a small neck of land between the land northward, and the land southward.

Here again the lands of Nephi and Zarahemla are located in the land southward, South America. Page 387; Nephite possessions and territory, including of necessity Zarahemla, are mentioned:—

And thus those dissenters of the Nephites, with the help of a numerous army of the Lamanites, had obtained all the possession of the Nephites which was in the land southward.

Page 422, the phrase, upon the face of the whole earth, from the west to the east, both in the land north and in the land south, certifies that land north or northward could only be North America; and that south or southward could only be South America.

Again, page 427 shows a gathering in the land of Zarahemla and the land Bountiful. . . . Now Lachoneus did cause that they should gather themselves together in the land southward, because of the great curse which was upon the land northward.

Page 482; Mormon writing:—

And it came to pass that I, being eleven years old, was carried by my father into the land southward, even to the land of Zarahemla.

So it was the interior, in South America.

Page 380, paragraph 5, shows Zarahemla to have been "in the heart of their lands;" not land, but "lands," referring to different sections of different names, as Jershon, Nephi, Gideon, Manti, Bountiful, etc.

Page 381 discloses Zarahemla to have been "the capital city" and "center of the land" (southward); and Bountiful in this statement is the section of Northern South America before written of; while sometimes it refers to the whole of South America.

Page 382, paragraph 6, shows that Lehi cut off the Lamanite forces before they reached the land Bountiful, repulsed them, and caused them to "retreat back towards the land of Zarahemla."

An undue appreciation of the "Botturini and Gemelli charts" has led different brethren to untenable and wholly unreliable conclusions, such as, the location of land of Nephi and the land of Zarahemla in Central America. If the points developed so far are the clearest and best those charts contain, they are as worthless as so much blank paper.

This article is written upon the general principle involved of a needed basis from which to figure out Book of Mormon geography.

The next and all-important fact to find out is, What river is the "river Sidon?" The land of Nephi and the land of Zarahemla give us a fairly good basis to work north and south from; and as the river Sidon is the point that points east or west are delineated from, if that can be determined, the basis is clear. The Magdalena River is most too much to the west, for Zarahemla was in the heart or center of the land, and is located to the west of Sidon. The magnitude of "the river Sidon" too would rather indicate the Amazon, but its course is wrong according to the oft-repeated "east of Sidon," or, "west of Sidon."

The report of the competent committee we have should be searched so critically when it is made as to certify that it is well founded on FACTS, or shown to be useless, as we are verily led to believe, the "Botturini and Gemelli" charts are. Who will locate Sidon?
R. ETZENHOUSER.

"CHARITY."

UNDER the above caption I wish to pen a few thoughts for the reflection of the loved ones scattered abroad. O that my pen may be the conductor of proper thought.

Charity is a principle incorporated in all exercises, whether social, religious, or politic. It is not only incorporated in, but it is one of the fundamental principles of all established institutions, whether of God or of man. It is the cement of society without which all institutions would dissolve and utterly fail of the accomplishment of their purpose.

Charity is one of the abiding principles that cluster around God's throne, by which all of the heavens' retinue is bound together in the accomplishment of the grand purpose for which they were created. Charity is the principle that moved the heavens—Infinite Wisdom—when we were in a helpless condition; that moved God to give up his dear Son in order that we might be redeemed. It is the cement and basis of all civilized governments, that inspires confidence to trust one another in all the positions of honor, and binds as with a golden cord all to one common interest. The lack of charity produces distrust, discontent, and finally disorder and dissolution will occur.

To the lack of it we may justly attribute the present condition of our loved country. Charity will enable us to have a proper regard one for the other in the science of literature, and to assist one another in the accomplishment of highest attainments possible for the greatest amount of good to all. Being destitute of hate or envy, charity is a principle of infinite importance, more to be desired than gold or rubies. It has within it the power of assimilation, and if cultivated will develop and grow to a marvelous extent. It enables us to master our own dispositions and to have a proper influence over our friends.

Charity is an abiding principle, as we are informed by holy writ; when all else fails, it continues and "abides forever." Charity is a detective and enables us to discern if anyone is acting from an improper motive. It enables us to judge the acts of all by the motive that prompts the actions. It also enables us to never act from an improper motive. It has immortalized the names of those in the past who have been governed by its principles, as all principles are eternal, and by abiding in the bonds of them we will accomplish the greatest good here and attain the highest condition hereafter. If it were possible to speak with the tongues of angels, being destitute of charity, it would profit us nothing. Should we attain the highest position in the science of literature, and like the philanthropist of the ages past bestow of our goods for the benefit of the poor, if charity be absent we would be found like "tinkling brass," an "empty sound."

If we are in the possession of charity, its attributes predominate in our moral characters. As we are informed in the divine writ that

Charity suffereth long, and is kind; . . . charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth.—1 Cor. 13: 4-6.

It was present at the dedication of the heavens and earth, when the foundations thereof were laid, when the "morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy."

Let us cultivate and develop under its influence, and success is ours, and we will be beneficial to society, and the world will be bettered by us having lived in it.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.—1 Cor. 13: 13.

In gospel bonds,

Report of C. E. Hand, tent committee: Received $8.17; expended $8.17. The report was accepted. J. M. Keck was granted a letter of removal from the Davenport branch. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions of condolence to the family of Elder Jerome Ruby. Report of committee: Whereas, God in his wisdom hath removed from our midst our worthy and esteemed brother, Elder Jerome Ruby, who has labored many years for the cause of Zion in this Eastern Iowa district, therefore be it resolved that this conference do tender a vote of condolence to the bereaved family and relatives of our deceased brother, and that such words of condolence be published in the Herald and Ensign. Moved that we adopt the report of the district president and sustain him in his ruling and decision in the Apostolic branch in declaring the business meetings called by F. J. Potter illegal; also the ordination of J. W. Wilson and William Potter null and void, also the expulsion of those two members null and void, and the granting of letters of removal to Warren Turner and family illegal and void, and that the names of Bro. Turner and family be replaced on the branch record again, and that F. J. Potter remain silenced and he be not allowed to officiate in any of the church offices until he confess his error to the district conference and ask its forgiveness. Motion carried. The following resolutions were adopted: Whereas the Lord has requested the Saints to come up higher; and in a revelation given to the church April 11, 1887, paragraph 3, page 344, Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord has spoken and said, "Men of God, who bear the vessels of the Lord, . . . avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink in any form," therefore in order that we may be in harmony with God's word, Be it resolved, that from the passage of this act, no man shall be allowed to act as teacher, priest, or elder in this district or any branch thereof, as a branch or district officer, who uses intoxicating liquor, or tobacco in any form. Anyone violating this resolution will be dealt with for unchristianlike conduct; and hereafter no one shall be ordained to any of the above-named offices who is addicted to the use of tobacco in any form, or uses intoxicating drinks until he has abstained from all for one year immediately before his ordination. This resolution shall be spread on the conference record and sent to the Herald Office for publication in the Herald. John Heide was sustained Bishop's agent, J. S. Roth district president, and C. E. Hand was elected assistant. W. W. Beal, Jr., was sustained as district secretary. The president of the district was given charge of the tent. J. S. Roth and Sr. S. Thomas were appointed delegates to General Conference. Conference adjourned to Fulton, Iowa, August 22 and 23, 1896, at 10:30 a. m.

WESTERN MAINE.

Conference of the Western Maine district convened at Little Deer Isle, February 29, 1896; J. C. Foss chosen to preside with J. J. Billings to assist; William Haskell clerk pro tem. Branches reporting: West Surry, Green's Landing, Bray's Mountain, Little Deer Isle. Elders reporting: J. C. Foss, J. J. Billings, J. W. Blastow, W. G. Pert, U. W. Greene; Priests S. G. Cunningham, J. E. Eaton. Bishop's agent's report read and approved: On hand last report $18.65; received $137.60; paid out $148.56; on hand $7.69. W. G. Pert sustained district president, J. J. Billings assistant, E. H. Pert district clerk. J. C. Foss, U. W. Greene, and W. W. Blanchard were chosen delegates to General Conference. The request of the West Surry branch to ordain S. G. Cunningham to the office of elder, and Hollis E. Saunders to the office of teacher received and laid on the table subject to call. Adjourned to meet at West Surry, June 20, 1896.

INDEPENDENCE.

Conference convened at Holden, Missouri, March 7, 1896, at ten a. m., President R. May in the chair, Arthur Allen secretary. R. May spoke encouragingly of the work of the district. Branch reports were then read. Bishop's agent's report was read as follows: Cash on hand at last report $44.23; received since $1,239.03; paid out $1,214.25; on hand $69.01. Twenty-two elders and eight priests reported. A report from the Sunday school association was read, which was very encouraging. The committee on the Dumbauld case reported and the report was adopted. The following were elected delegates to the General Conference: A. Allen, R. May, I. N. White, W. N. Robinson, A. H. Mills, Sr. O. L. James, G. H. Hilliard, J. A. Robinson, Joseph Luff, H. H. Robinson, and W. T. Bozarth. Those present, of the above-named delegates, were authorized to cast the entire vote of the district. By invitation of the Independence branch, and by action of this conference, the delegates were instructed to invite the next General Conference to convene at Independence. It was moved that when we adjourn we do so to meet at Independence, June 6 and 7, 1896. A petition from the Lee's Summit branch, recommending A. Z. Rudd to be ordained an elder was referred to the president of the district and missionary in charge. This committee reported that according to their judgment, it would not be advisable to ordain said brother to the office of an elder at the present, but would recommend that he be ordained to the office of a priest. Their report was referred to the Lee's Summit branch. The following were appointed a committee to consider the dividing line between the First and Second Kansas City, Missouri, branches: R. May, J. Hoffman, and George Hicklin. R. May spoke of the necessity of camp seats for the tent. In response to this eighteen seats were vouched for by different members. Adjourned to meet at 7:30 p. m. Preaching by Arthur Allen, R. May, and D. C. White. The following motion was offered: Resolved that we petition the committee in charge of the Southwestern reunion to locate the next reunion somewhere in the Independence district, Harrisonville or Warrensburg preferred. A splendid conference was had, the Spirit of the Lord being present throughout.

SOUTHERN MISSOURI.

Conference convened with the president, C. M. Bootman, in the chair, W. A. Brooner clerk. Reports of the president and other ministry were read, including Elders C. M. Bootman, A. M. D. McGuire, C. J. Spurlock, W. C. Cather, J. P. Knox, J. Ward, W. N. Currier, H. Sparling, and S. T. Maylock; Priests H. H. Montgomery, M. L. Davis, and S. Carrow. The secretary's report was read: Total number of names on the district record 308; the statistical branch reports that came in at the conference showed an increase of 24, which makes total of 332, including 1 seventy, 6 elders, 9 priests, 4 teachers, and 3 deacons. The branches reporting were Burnham, West Plains, Vera Cruz, Woodside, and Ozark. The treasurer's report was read and showed there had been spent during the last four months $1.34, leaving a balance in the treasury with what had been paid in from the different branches during conference, of $4.11. Bishop's agent's report: Received $1,099.43; received from the Bishop $150; expended to elders' families $456.82; paid to the Bishop $654.91; on hand $137.70. Reports were accepted. A resolution was passed requiring all branches in the district to hold their business meeting at least two weeks before conference convenes in order that their reports may be sent in to the district clerk in time for him to make out his report before conference convenes. Voted to recommend Bro. Wedlock to General Conference for appointment as missionary to this district. Voted to recommend our present missionaries to General Conference for another year. Henry Sparling was sustained as Bishop's agent. Officers elected for the next four months were: W. C. Cather president, C. J. Spurlock vice president, and W. A. Brooner secretary and treasurer. Henry Sparling was elected delegate to General Conference. Adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

J. C. Foss, No. 72 Crescent Street, Rockland, Maine.

Sunday School Associations.

INDEPENDENCE.

Association convened at Holden, Missouri, at 2:30 p. m.; A. L. Newton superintendent, Abbie A. Horton secretary. There were forty present. Reports of the superintendent, treasurer, and secretary of the Literary Exchange were severally read and approved. Treasurer's report: On hand December 6, 1895, $6.36; received from Pleasant View Sunday school 59 cents, Armstrong $2.42; paid to Literary Exchange $2; secretary's expenses $2; on hand $5.37. Literary Exchange: On hand December 6, 1895, 53 cents; received from association $2; paid for stationery 42 cents; for stamps $2; on hand 11 cents. The reports of the schools on being read were ordered spread upon the minutes: Mt. Zion, enrollment 295; Armstrong 102, First Kansas City 48, Holden 42, Zion's Summit 38, Pleasant View 30, Second Kansas City 30 (organized January 26, 1896), Knobnoster 13. W. N. Robinson explained the object of the resolution concerning tobacco using by any officers or teachers connected with our schools. The election of officers was then taken up and W. N. Robinson was chosen superintendent, Fred Scarelliff assistant, Anna Murphy secretary, and Abbie A. Horton treasurer, to whom a vote of thanks was tendered for services rendered. The following were elected delegates to the General Convention: Arthur Allen, A. H. Mills, W. N. Robinson, J. A. Robinson, H. H. Robinson, R. May, and Sr. Belle James. The program for the evening's entertainment consisted of song 164, "City of Gold;" prayer by Bro. Hicklin; song 158; declamation by Bro. Mannerling; quartet; instruction on "Teachers and Teaching," by W. N. Robinson; declamation, Miss King; closing song, "God be with you till we meet again." Saturday morning's meeting was devoted, first, to prayer and testimony from eight to nine o'clock (fifteen present), and from nine to ten to a discussion on the subjects, "Grading in the schools," and "How to teach the primary grade." All took part and excellent and instructive ideas were set forth. A vote of thanks was tendered the Saints of Holden for their hospitality, and the convention adjourned to meet at Independence, June 5, 1896, at nine a. m.

NAUVOO.

Convention convened at Saints' church, corner of Twelfth and Locust Streets, Burlington, Iowa, March 6, 1896; A. D. Greer secretary pro tem. Morning session taken up with business. C. N. Craig was elected superintendent, C. S. Swanson assistant, R. D. Williams secretary, Mary Morton treasurer. The afternoon was spent by the reading of essays, chalk talks, etc. Sr. L. L. Resseguie, of Lamoni, was present, by invitation, and gave an interesting exhibition of juvenile class work, illustrating her work by use of map. The essays were all of an excellent character and showed deep thought and comprehensiveness of the needs of the Sunday school work. A nice program was rendered in the evening by the Burlington school. We think the association has cause for congratulation at the great advancement being made through wise management and the zeal of its officers.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Association convened at Dow City, February 29, 1896; superintendent R. Wight in the chair, Dora Young secretary. Number of schools reporting 6; number of schools represented 5; delegates present 20; number of schools in district 8; total membership of district 327, a gain of 14 over last year; balance in treasury $7.46.

Miscellaneous Department.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

RAILWAY RATES.

Having had correspondence with both the Western and the Central Passenger Associations I learned that the Western would do nothing until the Central made arrangements; but the latter refused to give a one-and-one-third rate east of Chicago, unless there were purchased one hundred full fare first-class tickets. If less than that, then those going must pay full fare in returning. As any of the ministry who are preaching or presiding can obtain half-fare permits over the New York, Chicago, and Saint Louis ("Nickel Plate") road, we could not pledge the purchase of one hundred full fare tickets from the west.

However, upon correspondence with Bro. F. G. Pitt, of Chicago, we now learn that the Lake Shore road will take ten or more at a time for two cents per mile; and the Nickel Plate and the Baltimore and Ohio will carry parties of ten or more from Chicago to Cleveland for $5.10 each, and we suppose will return them at the same rate. Full fare is $8.50 each way.

Bro. Pitt writes that if twenty-five or thirty will go together they will give us a car to ourselves, which would, as he says, be pleasant for those going. As the "Nickel Plate" is favoring our ministers with half-fare permits, he thinks that all would do well to go over that road.

Bro. Pitt adds: "I shall be glad to render any assistance in my power; so, if you like, you can say through the Herald that if any will write me as to time they desire to leave Chicago, I will make the necessary arrangements and will meet as many as I can at the railway stations and aid them in securing tickets, etc."

His address is No. 277 Sheffield Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

By the time table I see that the morning train leaves Chicago at 8 a. m., and reaches Cleveland at 9 p. m. The evening train leaves at 9 p. m. and arrives at Cleveland at 10 a. m. the next day. Those leaving Chicago in the morning will need to stay at Cleveland over night and take the morning train to Wiloughby, fourteen miles east.

The ministry who have not yet obtained half fare permits can send to Mr. B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent of the "Nickel Plate" road, Cleveland, Ohio. He will send a blank and this must be filled out and certified to by some local railway agent who is acquainted with the applicant.

Those whom Bro. Pitt assists should not forget that it costs him for street car fare for each trip he makes, and that in a city this is a large item of expense. Therefore, as he gives his time he should not be permitted to pay the expenses in thus assisting others.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 10, 1896.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

St. Louis district conference will convene at 2518 Elliott Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri, at ten a. m., Saturday, March 21, 1896. President W. W. Blair is expected to be present. A good turnout of the brethren and sisters is desired. The delegate system of representation in our district conference will be considered, and other business of importance. Provisions for entertainment have been made for all who come.

J. G. SMITH, Sec.

A REQUEST.

We the reunion committee of the Ohio district request that all who expect to attend the reunion to be held at or near McArthur this next summer will please notify us as soon as possible, especially those that will bring tents, as that is the part we wish to know more particularly about; as we can get the Fair Grounds, a most desirable and convenient place, if there will only be enough come with tents to make it profitable to occupy the grounds.

S. J. JEFFERS, Chairman.

ARBAUGH, Ohio, March 8, 1896.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of Philadelphia District:—Alfred (commonly called Fred) Wattez was expelled from the church March 12, 1896.

A. H. PARSONS, Dist. Pres.

Those sending orders for Cleveland Plain Dealer should not send postal orders on Temple, but on Willoughby, Ohio. Procure money orders where possible and avoid sending stamps. All orders should reach me by April 4 to entitle you to the first issue. If you fail to get your papers in due time, let me know immediately by postal. Send on your orders for dailies.

TEMPLE, Ohio.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

Editors Herald:—In making out the Pottawattamie district report I left out the reports of Elder S. Butler and Priest Samuel Underwood. This was an oversight. I ask pardon of the brethren for failing to insert their names in the minutes.

THOS. SCOTT, Sec.

BORN.

LEAVERTON.—To Bro. and Sr. Arthur Leaverton, at Stanberry, Missouri, a son, and at the age of 6 months and 8 days was blessed by Elders J. M. Terry and A. W. Head. Done after the meeting, and the ordinance was greatly admired by many of the audience, who had not witnessed the like before.

PARMENTER.—Vinnie, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Jasper Parmeter, was born at Adelphi, Iowa, September 4, 1895; blessed March 1, 1896, at Des Moines, Iowa, by Elders C. Scott and W. S. Parbee.

DIED.

WOODS.—Electa Allen was born November 22, 1821, in Warren County, New York; removed to Illinois in 1847; was married to Hannibal Woods (who deceased November 25, 1888) December 7, 1849; moved to Benton County, Iowa, in 1850; joined the Freewill Baptist Church in 1859; removed to Nebraska in 1866; united with the United Brethren Church in 1873, and became a member of the Reorganized Church under the administration of R. J. Anthony, and for nearly ten years has been a faithful, patient member of that church. She passed away as the zephyr of a May morning. The brief funeral service was at the house and conducted by Elder J. D. Bennett.

DEDICATED TO THE MEMORY OF SISTER ELECTA WOODS.

How sweetly rests this aged one,
Whose sufferings here are o'er;
Whose patient spirit now hath flown
To view that brightest shore.

Those tired hands and weary feet
Shall weary nevermore;
For they shall rest where angels meet
Upon that golden shore.

Her absence here we keenly feel,
That she must from us part;
But she has left a precious seal
Of love on every heart.

Peaceful be her heavenly rest,
Though we are left to weep;
We know that she is truly blest—
That we again shall meet.

February 15, 1896.

J. D. B.

BOWMER.—At her home in Standley, Indian Territory, February 16, 1896, Sr. Leora, wife of Bro. James B. Bowmer, and Monday morning, February 17, their infant babe, ten days old, passed away. Sr. Bowmer was born September 27, 1873, at Royalton, Kentucky; baptized June 12, 1894, by Bro. Heman C. Smith. Her spirit took its flight peacefully and quietly as a little child might sink to sleep. She was universally beloved for her modest, unassuming ways and her gain will be a loss to the entire community. She died firm in the faith, in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral services February 17, in charge of Elder Ellis Short. A large concourse of people assembled and a large and respectful procession accompanied the remains to where they were laid to rest. Husband and a little boy of six years mourn.

"Good-bye, good-bye, with latest breath we say it,
A legacy of faith and hope and love.
Parting must come; we cannot long delay it,
But one in him we hope to meet above,
If God be with us." E. M. B.

HALL.—At Jonesport, Maine, February 25, 1896, Bro. Daniel Hall, who was born in Jonesport seventy-two years ago. Forty-nine years ago was married to Miss Rebecca Sawyer, to whom there was born nine children. As a moral man he was much liked; as a Christian he was much esteemed by the Saints, and was always ready to bear his testimony to the truthfulness of the work of God. He leaves to mourn his death a wife, several children, and a host of friends. Funeral services were held in the Union church, February 27, Elder S. O. Foss officiating. The throng of people present evinced the esteem with which the deceased was regarded.

EATON.—At Green's Landing, Maine December 12, 1896, George F., eldest son of Elder George W. and Sr. Hannah Eaton; born at Campobello, New Brunswick, April 15, 1865; baptized February 9, 1891, by his father. He was a faithful boy to his parents, looking after his mother and her little ones with almost a father's care, while his father went to preach the gospel. Loved and respected by all who knew him, he leaves a large circle of friends and mother, father, two sisters, and one brother to mourn his loss. His death was very sudden, as he went out in full health one day in his boat and when found was near his boat, which had evidently dragged ashore, and in trying to save it he had perished. By the look of sweet repose on his face it is quite evident he did not suffer, only being tired lay down to rest and thus fell asleep. His distracted parents ask the prayers of all Saints that may become somewhat reconciled to this great bereavement. Funeral sermon by John J. Billings from Saints' Chapel; interment in Woodlawn Cemetery, Green's Landing.

MORSE.—At her home in San Bernardino, California, March 3, 1896, aged 91, Sr. Jane Morse. She was in Nauvoo when Joseph was killed. She was a devoted follower of Christ. She went to Utah in 1851, but did not like Utah, and came to California in 1853, and was baptized in San Bernardino, California, by Elder W. W. Blair, in 1866, into the Reorganized Church. She died in full faith in the latter-day work. She was loved of all that knew her. She leaves one daughter to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder W. M. Gibson, assisted by Bishop Hatch, of Utah.

GRAZIER.—At Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, February 23, 1896, Sr. Annie Mary Grazier, wife of Bro. William Grazier, of Kirtland, Ohio, eldest daughter of Elder Jacob Reese, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. Born August 7, 1864; baptized by Apostle T. W. Smith, November 2, 1879; confirmed also by him, assisted by Elder Jacob Reese. Our sister has been a great sufferer for several years with physical pain, which has ended finally in her departure to realms where pain and sorrow cannot enter to mar the joy of existence. She was buried from the home of her father at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, funeral services being conducted by Elder G. H. Hulmes.

SMITH.—At San Rafael, Marin County, California, February 23, 1896, Bro. Orren Smith. He was born February 20, 1808, at Hadam, Middlesex County. The body was brought to Irvington for burial; services held at the home of his daughter, Sr. Hiram Davis, by Elder J. C. Clapp, an old-time and loved friend of the family.

INMAN.—H. B. Alison, son of W. Alexander and Sophia Ellen Inman, born near Grimes, Iowa, died March 3, 1896, aged 2 years, 1 month, and 17 days. A bright and beautiful child. Was ill but 11 days. A budding rose severed from the family tree while yet so young and pure. Funeral by C. Scott from the words: "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord."

IS IT WANTED?

The Herald Office has received a number of requests for a larger-type edition of the Inspired Translation of the Bible.

In order to test the strength of such demand it has been decided to make the following statement and offer: The office will issue a new edition of the Old Testament—the Old Testament only, in the type in which this matter appears—bourgeois—and sell the same, bound in cloth, at $2.00 per copy, in leather backs and corners at $2.50, in full leather at $3.00, and in higher-priced binding as ordered; provided, however, that orders for one thousand copies are sent in before beginning the work.

The required one thousand must be ordered ahead before work on the edition is begun, in order to guarantee sufficient sale to justify the outlay of $2,000, the cost of the edition. Good, unglazed book paper will be used, if the edition is ordered.

The book would be some larger than the "Two Records"—the Book of Mormon and New Testament combined.

This also should be understood—that the New Testament will not be included in the work. It can be bound in, if desired, at an added cost of 75 cents—$2.75 for the Bible complete. However, the type of the New Testament will be the large pica type of the large-type edition of the Testament.

The Herald Office management does not advise the issue of this work. The book so issued would be cumbersome and quite too large for general use. However, to answer the repeated requests of a number this offer is made. It is apparent that such editions cannot be issued to accommodate a limited number of persons.

The type of our present Inspired Translation of the Bible is as large and as plain as the Oxford and other popular editions of the Bible.

The above is respectfully submitted for consideration. Orders need not be accompanied by cash until books are issued.

NO APPROPRIATIONS FOR SECTARIAN INSTITUTIONS.

THE House of Representatives last week struck out from the Indian Appropriation bill all appropriations in aid of sectarian schools. Congressman Linton, of Michigan, an A. P. A. member and a Republican, led the successful fight against the customary appropriation, claiming that the entire amount, $250,000, would go to Catholic schools. Democrats voted almost solidly against cutting off the appropriation this year; Republicans were divided. The vote in committee of the whole was 93 to 64 in favor of the Linton amendment, to which the House agreed without division. This is the second demonstration at this session in opposition to Congressional appropriations to sectarian institutions. The District of Columbia appropriation bill containing appropriations for charitable institutions under denominational control has been recommitted after having failed to pass by a vote of 135 to 143.

"SHOW YOUR HANDS, CONGRESSMEN."—"It appears that the lower house of the present Congress is in the power of the A. P. A. Only recently we had occasion to note its action in regard to appropriations for the charitable institutions of the District of Columbia. Again, on last Monday, the House of Representatives in the most cowardly way obeyed the behests of the conspirators, led by Mr. Linton, a bitter anti-Catholic, sent to legislate in Washington by one of the Michigan districts, and struck all appropriations for the support of Indian schools conducted by religious denominations. But as the great majority of these are Catholic, it was they, of course, that the blow was aimed at. Now, as the Government in Washington has shown no disposition to supply schools of its own for the education of the Indian children, it follows that the A. P. A., from sheer hatred of the Catholic Church, prefers that these children should remain ignorant savages rather than become civilized as Catholics.

"But why was it that no member present had the courage to call for the yea and nay vote, so that the names of those taking sides would have to go on record and become known? The same trick had been resorted to in the previous action, as we noted at the time, and warning had been given to prevent its repetition. The House of Representatives of the Fifty-fourth Congress is evidently made up of bigots and cowards."—Catholic Standard and Times, Philadelphia.

A SOUND PRINCIPLE RUN TO EXTREMES.—"With some little knowledge of these Indian schools and the conditions on the reservations we have always thought the best results were obtained in educating Indian children by having it done by denominational schools, no matter whether they were Methodist, Catholic, Presbyterian, Episcopal, or Baptist, all of which denominations have taken part. Therefore the wisest expenditure the Government could make of its Indian school fund was to divert a portion of it to these religious schools. The question is entirely different from that of the sectarian appropriations for schools among the whites. With the Indians some degree of religious education should go hand in hand with the secular education. Among the white people of this land this may be safely left to the family, the church, or the Sunday-school. The environment is that of Christianity. With the Indians it is different. They are pagans or heathen, so far as early training goes in the tenets of Christianity. The Government schools, which in time will take the place of the denominational schools, may teach a sound morality, but they are debarred from teaching the principles of Christian faith. These considerations should have operated in the House against the rescinding of the gradual system of stopping these appropriations, and initiating one of immediate and absolute prohibition, with the result that thousands of Indian children are left unprovided for. It is a case of running a sound principle to extremes, and making it fit exceptional conditions."—The Post, Pittsburg.

SHOULD BE VIEWED IN A BROAD LIGHT.—"It is a notorious fact that millions of dollars of public money have in the past been voted to sectarian educational institutions, contrary to the Constitution. For a long time all the denominations which maintained Indian schools asked for and received such appropriations. Latterly, however, the Protestant churches, feeling that such use of public money could not be justified, have declined to ask for public assistance for their schools. The Catholic Church continued, though, to beg for appropriations, and it has maintained a bureau at Washington for that purpose. It has always been able to get what it wanted until this year, and the usual appropriation would have been voted at this session, perhaps, but for the vigorous opposition of Representative Linton. . . . Regardless of A. P. A. influence, and regardless also of the interests of the Roman Catholic Church, the members of Congress should maintain firmly the position they have taken and forever hereafter refuse to appropriate a dollar of public money for a sectarian purpose."—The Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN COMMON SCHOOLS AND INDIAN SCHOOLS.—"The question of public aid to Indian schools ought not to be confounded with the general question of 'religion in the schools.' The two questions have properly nothing to do with each other. The element of religious intolerance has entered into each, and has in each case produced mischief.

"In the common-school system in general the only method of eliminating sectarian jealousy is to eliminate religious instruction and to make the public instruction entirely secular, leaving religious instruction to be supplied by other agencies. Some Roman Catholics object to this because they desire that the school fund, or what they call their 'share' of that fund, shall be employed to inculcate their doctrines. Some Protestant ministers object to it because they desire that the whole of the school fund shall be used to propagate Protestant doctrines. It is only by withstanding both parties that the schools can be confined to their proper purpose of teaching the elements of knowledge, upon the necessity of which to all are agreed. But no question of this kind arises in relation to the Indian schools. The Government does not profess to teach the Indians upon its own account and by its own methods. Either instruction will be given by charitable associations, that is, by the churches, or it will not, in existing circumstances, be given at all."—The Times, New York.

THE GOVERNMENT'S IMPLIED CONTRACTS.—"When the State, by legislation, encourages individuals to make costly investments to carry on work believed to be beneficial to the public, it enters into an implied contract with those individuals. Regard for its own dignity, as well as for the principle of equity, demands that that contract be scrupulously regarded, and that if a new policy be decided upon, its introduction shall be made so gradual as to avoid hardship to the investors.

"The observance of this rule by the Democratic Congress which summarily repealed the law providing a bounty for the production of sugar, would have enabled the planters to save themselves from loss, and would have been more creditable to the nation than the course which was pursued. The same principle applies in the case of the withdrawal of Government appropriations from sectarian schools for the education of the Indians. There should be a separation of church and state, and it is evident that a vast majority of the people would look with disfavor upon the perpetuation of the policy inaugurated under President Grant. But the dignified and equitable way to effect a change would be the way recommended by the Congressional committee on Indian affairs, which proposed an annual reduction of the appropriation amounting to 20 per cent., which would result in the entire withdrawal of Government support at the end of five years."—The Evening Wisconsin, Milwaukee.

"We are glad that the national House of Representatives had the courage of its convictions to break down a long-established precedent, and we are glad, too, that the motive which actuated the House did not spring from the demands of any special organization but that the members of Congress should vote to discontinue the appropriation because of their convictions of duty as American citizens, devoted to a pure form of popular government, free from the entangling conditions that dominate nearly all the other governments of the world."—The Hawkeye, Burlington, Iowa.

'Government support of sectarian schools is inconsistent with that clause of the Federal Constitution which says 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' We do not here say that Government support of sectarian schools is a plain violation of that clause of the Constitution, but that it is inconsistent therewith we do not see how anyone can deny. Any recognition of sectarianism by the Government, except in cases where moral depravity is covered with a veil called religion, is incompatible with a long-established American doctrine."—The Journal, Detroit.

USE OF THE FLESH BRUSH.

Said a prominent physician recently: "That longevity is promoted by friction there can be little doubt. The declining energy and decay from age appear to arise, or at all events, are accomplished and accelerated by the gradually decreasing energy of the circulation, and the use of the flesh brush restores energy to the parts. It is therefore recommended as a panacea for premature decay and all the diseases depending on it." It takes but a few minutes to give a vigorous rubbing to the entire body on jumping out of bed in the morning, and the beneficial results will amply repay the time and trouble.

According to Prof. A. H. Sayce the researches of the last few years confirm a previously entertained idea that Syria and Palestine were under Babylonian domination long before the days of Abraham, and certainly a century before the exodus. Excavations carried on three years ago by Prof. Flinders Petrie have unearthed fragments of the dictionaries used by the scribes in the Egyptian Foreign Office. Among the tablets recently discovered are fragments of Babylonian stories which had served as reading lessons to the Egyptian or Canaanite student in the Egyptian language and mode of representing it for the reader. One of these fragments contains an attempt to account for the origin of sin in the world.

General Booth, says the Indian Witness, is bringing with him to India an ambitious scheme for peasant settlements in this country, and he will ask the Indian Government to assist him by giving grants of land on which to establish these settlements. He proposes to ask for 50,000 acres of land in blocks of from 500 to 5,000 acres free of taxes for five years. His scheme includes not only the peasant settlements, but also a land agency, whose business it will be to utilize in the interests of the poor the various tracts of waste land near the towns.

Yes, here in this poor, miserable, hampered, despicable actual, wherein thou even now standest, here or nowhere is thy ideal. Work it out, therefrom, and, working, believe, live, be free. Fool! the ideal is in thyself, the impediment, too, is in thyself; thy condition is but the stuff thou art to shape that same Ideal out of. What matters whether such stuff be of this sort or that, so the form thou give it be heroic—be poetic? O thou that pinest in the imprisonment of the actual, and criest bitterly to the gods for a kingdom wherein to rule and create, know this of a truth: the thing thou seekest is already with thee, here or nowhere, couldst thou only see! —Thomas Carlyle, in "Sartor Resartus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

We are desirous to answer as many of the questions that are sent to the office as it is possible to do, with the time at our disposal from other duties. Some of these queries require degrees of searching in the word, which would be quite profitable for the questioners. And in cases where it is known no specific statements are made, in either of the books, the answers must of a necessity be a matter of opinion, or speculation only. We are quite ready to venture an opinion; but do not care to have such opinion taken as law. Some of the questions given below are of this sort, we think.

Ques.—Do the priesthood meetings organized in different branches for the instruction of the priesthood, take the place of the school of the prophets organized in the old church?

Ans.—By no means. These are the voluntary meetings of the local officers, for mutual benefit as to duties and calling.

Q.—Is it wisdom to exclude the inquiring minds of the laity from such meetings when held for improvement only?

A.—We are not aware that any such are excluded. Wisdom would rather say, Admit those who may be desirous to attend for the benefit of instruction, if known.

Q.—Did David have reference to his soul not being left in hell? Or did he have reference to Christ's soul not being left in hell? See Psalms 16: 10.

A.—It is our opinion that the Psalmist had reference to his own soul, when he said, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell;" and referred to Jesus when he said, "Neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." It is thought however, by some, that the whole quotation was intended to apply to Christ; and Acts 2: 27, is used as an evidence to confirm the idea; but, we do not so read the text. Peter, moved to eloquence on the subject of the newly discovered Lord of Life, says:—

For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope: because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

The language in Psalms and in Acts is a little different: "I have set the Lord always before me," rather than "I foresaw the Lord always before my face." The evident meaning is the same, however, and is that because it had been shown to the Psalmist that the Lord would bring to pass the redemption from the grave, in proof of which the Holy One should not see corruption; for that reason his (the Psalmist's) flesh—that is, his body—should "rest in hope;" and his soul be not left in hell.

Precisely the same thought is credited to the Psalmist by Peter in Acts 2: 27. While in verse 31 he applies both expressions "my soul" and "thine Holy One" to Christ, in employing the pronoun his to mean either; which is clearly wrong. It is easy to see however that the mistake could readily be made, in not providing the distinction "thine Holy One" clearly in verse 31.

Our view is strengthened by a consideration of Psalms 49: 15, where the Psalmist, writing of the power and dominion of God, as contrasted with the feebleness and folly of man, states:—

But God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave: for he shall receive me.

This view is still further fortified by the argument made by Paul in the synagogue at Antioch, when he called attention to himself by saying, "Men of Israel, and ye that fear God, give audience." In the course of this argument concerning the resurrection, referring to what was written in the Psalms, he said:—

And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, I will give thee the sure mercies of David, wherefore he saith also in another psalm, Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption. For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption: but he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.—Acts 13: 34-37.

It seems to us to be improper to conclude that David, writing of himself, should use terms that would apply only to Jesus; and it is quite clear that the words "my soul" as used in Psalms 16: 10 refer to David; and the words, "thine Holy One," used in the same text, refer to Jesus. This is our understanding of the text.

Q.—Did the Savior atone for all sins that had been committed before the atonement, as well as those that were committed after, with the exception of the sin against the Holy Ghost?

A.—So far as it was made needful for the purposes of salvation to all the race, the atonement of Jesus was for all sin. We who now live were not in condition—that is, in existence, and had no sins to be atoned for, at the time the atonement was made; but coming after the atonement was made, and having need that there should have been such atonement, our sins were thus atoned for, the same as for those who had gone before that time.

In this we do not pretend to state how far, nor to what sins as pertaining to individuals, the atonement is intended to be made to apply, leaving that to be decided by Him to whom judgment has been committed.

Q.—When Christ went to hades to preach to the captive spirits, the Apostle Paul said that he led captivity captive. Did he lead all the host of hell out, or did he only lead out a portion of them?

A.—The expression, "he led captivity captive," does not necessarily mean that he led any person, or soul out of the prison, but does mean that by virtue of his obedience to the Father he had achieved such a victory that he had so overcome the power of him, the adversary of souls, who kept souls in captivity, that his power to keep in such captivity was broken, and Christ at his will could and would set the captives free. It was the power to keep captives in captivity that the Savior led captive, and not the captives. Whether he led all out at the time or only a portion, we are not authorized to state; nor is it essential to an understanding of what was intended by the text referred to in the question. By the way, the Apostle Paul did not put the matter just as the question has it, but in this form:—

Wherefore he saith, when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.—Eph. 4: 8.

Q.—The angels that kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation and were to be reserved in chains of darkness until the day of judgment—did they have a chance to accept the gospel when Christ preached to the captive spirits?

A.—We do not know; but from the expression, “until the day of judgment,” we conclude not.

SOBRIETY IN CONGRESS.

THE following from the current news of the day, is pleasantly significant of an improvement in the tone of the public men sent by the several States of the Union to represent the nation in Congress.

Congressman Hopkins is from Aurora, fourteen miles east of Plano, Illinois, and was known to the HERALD force before he began his political career, as an excellent representative citizen. We are pleased that he maintains his good reputation; crackers and milk are better food for brainy men than mince pie and brandy; and far safer for the good of the people and the destinies of the nation.

A few more years of refusal on the part of the people to send drunkards to the House and Senate of both the State and the nation, and legislation enacted while representatives are drunk will be a thing of the past. It is becoming unfashionable to become drunken. Keep that in view and the generations to come are safe from the drink habit.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 23.—Good livers are not conspicuous in the ranks of the Fifty-fourth Congress, although Representative Hitt of Illinois is the acknowledged epicure on the Republican side of the House of Representatives. It is the custom of Mr. Hitt to indulge himself in the best the market affords, whether in or out of season, and the caterer at the House restaurant always makes it a point to satisfy his cravings for the good things of life properly cooked.

Over on the Democratic side Amos Cummings of New York is conceded the palm for knowing just what constitutes a good meal, and while Mr. Hitt is prone to plain cooking the embryo Mayor of Gotham likes fancy dishes with sauces and highly seasoned trimmings in the way of salads.

One thing is noticeable about both these epicures, and that is neither appears to be partial to wine at meals, but prefers a cup of good coffee for the stomach's sake instead of wine. In fact, there is little drinking at the capital by Congressmen, and outside of an occasional bottle of beer it is the rarest thing to find intoxicants used as an accompaniment for meals. Adjoining the House restaurant is a counter where a stand-up lurcher is served daily during the sessions of Congress. In this narrow passage way Congressman Connolly of Illinois usually partakes of a piece of apple pie and a glass of milk, and rather enjoys the distinction of being the only member of the Illinois delegation who thus fortifies himself for the cares and turmoil of the House. Representative Hopkins usually indulges in a big bowl of crackers and milk for his luncheon and seems to enjoy this modest repast as much as some of the high livers who content themselves with a hot broiled bird and a nice cold bottle. Members of the Chicago delegation like to make up a party when they go “to have a bite,” as they put it, and it is not an unusual thing for Billy Lorimer, Frank Aldrich, George White, and Hugh Belknap to be found with their feet touching under the same mahogany. Generally they have blue points on the half shell, an entrée, with celery or salad attachment, but invariably a good-sized piece of pie, which is washed down with the best quality of coffee obtainable.

WAITING AN ANSWER.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS HAVE NOT HEARD FROM THEIR CHALLENGE.

THE St. Joseph members of the Church of Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ have not so far had a response to their challenge which they issued some days ago to the members of the Ministerial Association, and have begun to wonder if they will hear from them. Yesterday one of the most prominent of the members of the Latter Day Saints Church of this city, called at the Gazette office and left the following communication which explains itself:—

To the Editor of the Gazette:—Since reading the challenge of the Latter Day Saints to the Ministerial Association some two weeks ago, I have looked forward to an announcement of acceptance through the papers by the association, because I think the propositions contained in the challenge were fair and would give the association a chance to prove the charge, that of teaching heresy, to be true to the members of the different denominations as well as the Latter Day Saints, and it would give the “Saints” a chance to forsake their doctrines and be converted to orthodoxy.

But utter silence reigns supreme as far as the Ministerial Association is concerned. Can the association not prove the charge?

Then they should, like good Christians, apologize, and free the Saints from the stigma “Heretics,” which they have fastened upon them.

But are the charges true, then they (the members of the association) as ministers of Christ, have a duty resting upon them, and that is, to at least try and convince the Latter Day Saints of their error. In the first chapter of Galatians, about the 8th verse, Paul uses this language: “But though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.”

Very strong language indeed! Do the Latter Day Saints preach another gospel than Paul preached?

If so, is it worth while to convert the three or four hundred Latter Day Saints of this city and the many thousands throughout the land to save them from that curse?

There is no better chance to do so than to meet them in public debate and show up their heresy.

By just what means the Ministerial Association of St. Joseph seeks or may seek to justify its action in refusing to receive our ministerial representatives of that city into membership, also its subsequent action in pursuing a policy of silence in regard to the plea for an open investigation of the faith of the Saints and other churches involved in the question, it may be out of our province to conjecture. However, we venture to express the opinion that it is entirely too late in the day to expect public approval of such a policy; and, further, that if said association is to answer the purported end of its creation it must step to the front and come into harmony with the spirit of Americanism, which challenges and supports open, manly investigation, and urges upon the public mind and supports the spirit of religious toleration and free speech.

It is too late for any organization in this country to attempt to frown down any proper appeal to the public mind. The people are practical, open-hearted, and broad-minded, and their sympathies go out to those things that are in normal touch and tone with them. These are the days that try men's creeds, also the lines of policy that are the fruits of such creeds. The practical, liberal-minded citizens of St. Joseph, men and women, are not going to hold in very high esteem, nor expect very much in the line of moral reform from a body of men who refuse to grant a common privilege while they deny investigation of the claims upon which such right to recognition is urged. These are the days of reform. Taxation without representation was long ago decided upon by the American people as a "heresy" and false in principle. "The people" are still resolutely opposed to such a policy and will vigorously express their pronounced disapproval of it as occasion requires. The spirit of '76, the days when men and measures were judged by their merits and their merits alone, is growing and expanding.

SCHLATTER, SCHRADER, ET AL.

PRESS items have made reference to the failures of Schrader, the so-called "divine healer," at Chicago and at other points. Without republishing the evil things charged against this man we insert the item that follows as indicating some of the drift of his methods. What this man may do for humanity possibly yet remains to be seen. Schlatter has disappeared from the scene and left no definite results for good to comfort and confirm with knowledge those attracted to him. It seems scarcely necessary to state the contrasts between such characters and those sent of God to bless the world. Those commissioned of God have benefited mankind by establishing men and women in the truth, blessing them with permanent good in this life and confirming them in that that inspires with "knowledge" concerning the world to come. They who are established in the truth and the soundness of mind peculiar to it will scarcely give heed to passing sensationalists or so-called wonder-workers. Practical hard common sense is essential to true spirituality and never to be departed from by all who have correct conceptions of inspiration. The man or woman who fails to exercise it in things spiritual fails to include an element strictly necessary in the gospel economy, and essential to his safety. Truth is never in conflict with itself; principle harmonizes with principle. All manifestations of the Spirit of truth and all operations of those who move in harmony with it will bear close, critical inspection. Proper criticism can be had without resort to unjust, irreverent methods. True criticism is always respectful, but refuses to be diverted from proper examination by anything that denies and decries inspection. Belief is designed to result in knowledge. By analysis truth is revealed, brought to light, comprehended, known, and applied. Belief is essential, but knowledge is the power of God applied unto salvation. To know the truth is to be made free in Christ and to escape deception and imposition. But here is the news item:—

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 16. — Healer Schrader opened house in a storeroom to-day, and many went to see him out of curiosity. Berryman, his manager, and Kinkhead, his secretary, say the slanderous reports about Schrader were caused by a case of mistaken identity, and that the Schrader who collected money under false pretenses is named Ernest Schrader, while this man's name is August Schrader. The only revenue expected here is from the sale of photographs at twenty-five cents each. Terre Haute is expecting to make money out of Schrader's presence by the coming of excursionists.

WHY NOT POINT THEM OUT?

THE Hedrickite friends seem to be stirred up over Bishop Kelley's article entitled, "The Court of Appeals' Decision," and say it contains "inaccuracies" and "misleading statements." They do not, however, undertake to point out one. On the contrary, the first article in the Searchlight admits the correctness of the claim made by Bishop Kelley, confirming his statement of the false findings of the court.

If an inaccuracy or misstatement can be found in the article as claimed by the Searchlight, is it as great as that found in the decision of the Court of Appeals, wherein it says the Hedrickites built their little church on the lot in the year "1882," and that the Reorganized Church stood by and made no protest until "1887;" when in No. 2 issue of the Searchlight, page 1, the statement is that the church was built in "1887." This is the material averment upon which the court based its finding of laches. Will the Searchlight be fair enough now to tell its readers whether the "inaccuracy" or "misstatement" was by Bro. Kelley or by the court?

The Searchlight should also revise its position in claiming that the "Supreme Court of the United States has set its approval of the decision of the Court of Appeals," unless it means to claim that the Supreme Court passed upon a matter that was never before it.

Is this the position of our Hedrickite friends? By such a procedure it is possible that the Supreme Court would have held with the Court of Appeals. But we prefer to believe better of our Supreme Court. The only question the Supreme Court was asked to pass upon by the writ of certiorari was, to have the case brought before it for a hearing. The Supreme Court "denied the case a hearing." Do the defendants congratulate themselves in that they are approved by a court in a case that the court would not hear? If this position is happyfying, then darkness is as good as light.

We would modestly suggest to the Searchlight that a disposition of fairness will be to point out "inaccuracies" and "misstatements," instead of to make assertions. What are some of them? It will not do to pose as a searchlight and then be revealed as a tallow dip.

FLOATING newspaper items report the sessions of a conference of Brighamite elders held in Kansas City, Missouri, at which it was said that over twenty ministers were present, etc., one telegraphic report stating that very few others were present; that some of said elders expressed the opinion that polygamy was taught in the Hebrew Scriptures but not practiced in Utah because such practice was forbidden by the United States government, etc. We cannot vouch for the correctness of all reports, but judge from what we learn from representatives of the Utah Church that belief in the principle of polygamy is yet a cardinal feature of Utah theology, however much the practice of it may be denied. This attitude of the Utah Church, together with the requirement that its ministers refrain from entering into public discussion of the merits of their doctrines with representatives of the Reorganized Church, is enough to forestall their efforts and practically to shut them out of the general missionary field. The American people are lovers of investigation and insist upon the principle of open, public examination.

A few converts may be picked up by the present "quiet" missionary policy of the Brighamite elders in the States, but men and women of force of character can never be proselyted by its methods nor to some of its doctrines, methods, and past history. The Reorganized Church entertains due regard for the honest in heart in Utah and stands ready at all times to manifest the spirit of true kindness and a proper attitude toward them; however, it comprehends its mission, that of representing true, genuine, unadulterated Latter Day Saintism—as it was, as it is, and as it is to be—the gospel of Jesus Christ in its fullness and purity. Men representing a perversion of the faith need not be surprised to find the ministry of the Reorganized Church alert and on hand to challenge misrepresentations of the faith and to “stand up and contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints.” To make manifest the truth is the greatest kindness possible to and the surest indication of good will toward the people of Utah. The Reorganization has not failed in duty toward them and we believe it will continue not to fail in that respect, and in the spirit of kindness and good will.

The following is from the Chicago Tribune of March 14 and may be of interest to those who long ago became satisfied that scientific investigation would never set aside the truth of Genesis, that God “created” man and “in the beginning”:

Prof. J. J. Tobias lectured on the topic, “Is man a biological evolution of the fish or the son of an ape?” at the Chicago Academy of Sciences last night. The lecture was in the nature of a dual reply to the Rev. Lyman Abbott's declaration: “Man is an animal: Sub-kingdom, vertebrate; class, mammal; order, apes;” and the fish theory of Henry Drummond as given in his work, the “Ascent of Man.”

Prof. Tobias asserts both theories are radically wrong, and adduces in support of his own views Brücke's claims of the necessity of structure being the basis of vital phenomena.

The Professor further introduced in evidence an outline of the skull of the Cromagnon man conceded to be over 2,000 years old, and which shows a development of 119 cubic centimeters more brain than the present average European possesses.

We learn the Latter Day Saints are coming back to Six Mile Grove to wake up the people there. They have thrown some pretty hot shot at others. A. B. Case has asked several questions. F. Gilson has talked several times, and A. T. Peckenpaugh asked one very important question. The question was: “Is the Bible sufficient for our salvation?” The answer was: “The Bible is a history of the Eastern Continent and the Book of Mormon is a history of the Western Continent, so we put the two together and have two witnesses.” Mrs. F. W. Dow asked them to please explain verses one and two in the first chapter of Hebrews. The Latter Day Saints are very earnest in their belief. Better let them alone, boys.

Bro. J. W. Wight sends us the foregoing from “Pleasant Hill correspondence” of the Harrison County, Iowa, Nucleus, which indicates that the people in that region of country are being awakened. The advice of the writer seems to indicate that his observations have led him to believe the Saints and their representatives apt in answering Bible questions, which reminds us of the statement of another to the effect that the Bible was the poorest thing in the world to knock a Latter Day Saint down with, etc.

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 13.—A party of pilgrims from San Saba and Lampasas Counties passed through this city to-day on the way to Jerusalem. The pilgrimage is caused by the belief the world will soon come to an end and they wish to be in the Holy City to meet Christ when the end comes.

Growing interest in the Hebrew metropolis continues and the city of the Great King attracts the attention of pilgrims and tourists. A party of religious enthusiasts left Chicago recently for Jerusalem, and now we have the following report. Fanatical movements toward Jerusalem may and probably will continue, but behind it all, the Jew—the destined, permanent inhabitant of Palestine, silently but surely settles in the promised land and is prospering in the home bequeathed him by the God of his fathers. His title to it is clear, beyond question, and not even modern knavery can rob him of nor drive him from it. The force moving him homeward is one that overrules all human destinies to the consummation of its purposes. God himself has declared that Judah shall gather home never to be driven again.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. S. LEE, writing from Kennedy, Cherry County, Nebraska, March 6, says:—

The hunter is not dead yet, although I have been very busy, building, ditching, and plowing, which is very necessary for improving a new place; yet I found time to stop this kind of work on February 1 last, to answer an earnest request to visit the Pine Ridge country, some one hundred miles west of this place. I was gone until March 1. I found the Saints in that locality alive to the work and was kept very busy while there, preaching and administering in the ordinances of God's house. Bro. J. Shepherd of the Elkhorn branch assisted me in most of my labors. We also spent one week near Chadron, on White River, with Bro. John Davidson, and held six services while there; blessed three children. The Saints and outsiders treated me well while with them and I found it hard to leave them to shut myself in my sandhill home. I spoke twenty-two times, baptized and confirmed one, and blessed four children while on my tour.

Bro. Robert Trimmer, Santa Barbara, California, March 4:—

I wish to extend an invitation through the columns of the Herald to some elder to bring the gospel here. So far as I can learn none have visited this place. I believe some good could be accomplished. This is a rather small place, and the people are creedbound, and spiritualism has a strong foothold; but surely there are some who would hear the voice of the Good Shepherd. If an elder should come he is welcome to the best I have; and if he would write me when he is coming I would meet him at the depot.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE again remind brethren that we cannot publish requests for aid from branches or individuals that contemplate building chapels, unless such appeals are approved by the Presiding Bishop or the Bishopric. A little thought should convince anyone that it will not do for branches or a few individuals to launch out on building operations with but a few dollars in hand, placing dependence upon public generosity to supply the balance required, through general subscription made indiscriminately. A brother writes us making a lengthy appeal to the Lamoni Saints and others, stating that if each one helps “maybe” they can build a church. We appreciate the zeal and motive actuating those making such appeals, and join with them in the wish that our people had chapels in the villages and cities throughout the world; however we call the attention of all who contemplate such enterprises to the law and acts of conferences, in harmony with which the collection and expenditure of funds is placed in charge of the Bishopric and others called to administer in temporalities. Those who build houses of worship would do well to consult the authorities appointed to have charge of temporal things.

Sr. S. E. Olson, of Newell, Buena

Vista County, Iowa, requests that some of the ministry call and labor there. She is ill and desires administration and her husband is ready for baptism.

Ka Elele Evanelio is the title of a paper published by our brethren in Honolulu, Hawaii, of which Bro. G. J. Waller sends us several copies. It contains eight large pages and is published monthly in the interests of the work in Hawaii. Bro. J. M. Poepoe, we understand, is the editor. From what we are able to make out we discover that our Sunday school Quarterly lessons are published in full, also various items of church news from the HERALD, and various original articles, including letters from native brethren, etc. A cut of Bro. Albert Haws, with a sketch of his labors, appears on the first page of the February number. The enterprise of our Honolulu brethren is worthy of commendation. We are glad to see Ka Elele Evanelio, and trust it will prove a medium of great good.

We acknowledge receipt of a copy of Te Toreia for December 21, 1895, published at Raratonga, Cook Islands, and sent us by Bro. Hubert Case. It is a newspaper, published in both English and Raratongan, the latter showing manifest similarity to the Tahitian and Hawaiian languages.

Bro. J. P. Benson, writing from Mount Grove, Missouri, expresses appreciation of sympathy and interest manifested in behalf of himself and family during the late affliction of his wife, who passed away after a lingering illness. He asks prayer in behalf of himself and family. He hopes to resume field work at an early day.

Late Lamoni arrivals include Brn. A. H. Smith, Charles Dillen, Heman C. Smith, and E. A. Stedman, from various fields west and north; also Bro. William Lewis, of St. Joseph.

Bro. Pitt has a word to say to those going to conference via Chicago. See his letter.

A careful study of general moral laws will reveal the fact that hitherto in the world too much relative stress has been laid upon the duties of children to parents, while too little attention has been given to the duties of parents to their children; this for the reason that books upon duty have been written by parents, and the children's side of the question has been quite ignored.—Johonnot.

IS IT SIN?

Dear Sisters—As some things have been brought to my notice of late, I have felt it my duty to write them to you to make such use of as you see fit. I am not one who makes excuses for anything, much less my ability to write to the Herald; for I believe that if we feel it is our duty to write, that is, or ought to be, an assurance that we have the ability for that at least. I do not believe that God ever gave anyone anything to do that he could not perform.

There was a lady agent called on me the other day, selling a medicine to prevent child-bearing. Of course it was a health medicine. She had used it herself for nine years and had excellent health. And it was no harm to use it as it was only a preventive. People made slaves of themselves, both men and women, raising such large families (I have five little girls, and am not yet thirty), and that was more sin than to use a preventive. Another thing, she nearly always sold to minister's wives, and if we would use more brain work we would make our washings lighter, etc., etc., (as it was wash morning.) She did not call on another Saint in town, but I know that she called on others, and that some bought of her. She also sold some of the same medicine for cold in the head and catarrh.

Now the question is, is it sin? If so, is there any danger of any of our sisters being deceived? For surely such people are deceivers. If so, ought they not to be warned, if needs be, often, that they may be on the alert for such things? It seems to me that the answer ought to be, Yes; it is sin. But when I hear sisters use such expressions as, "They cause me to commit more sin than anything else," referring to an unruly family, it leads me to fear that there are some who are, or should be, in the light, who might be deceived.

I know this work is of God, and I am trying to so live that I may be worthy of doing some good for others, as I have received so many blessings, the light and knowledge. Surely it is good to be a Saint in latter days.

Now one testimony in healing: When my baby was one year old she had the measles, and in a week or ten days seemed growing weaker. Then she had boils or carbuncles until she had seventeen, and with other troubles, such as cutting eight teeth and the worst form of bowel complaint, she grew weak and poor until she had not strength to raise her head, and was only a living skeleton. But we put our trust in God. She did not take a drop of anything but olive oil. She was administered to twice, but no one thought she could live. They even said that if she did she would be an idiot, as fifteen of the boils were on her head and face. But she is now as smart and healthy a baby as can be found, and to God be the praise, for he did the work. Your sister, ELIZA BRACKENBURY.

KINGSLEY, Michigan.

MUST THE ELDERS LEAVE THE FIELD?

ON reading Bro. Alexander's statement concerning the work, I began to inquire in my mind if it was necessary to diminish rather than broaden the work, when the demand was still greater than years before; and it seemed with the increasing number of Saints each year, we ought to send more into the field. But the question is, How can it be done? The answer, By the united effort of the whole church; not a set few, but every one. Every little helps, and it is by the many drops the ocean is formed. Is God less willing to prosper the Saints than other people? I think not. I believe it is his good pleasure to give us the kingdom, but it is by obedience we shall obtain it; and when we have learned this, prosperity must come. There is so much to learn, so many laws to keep, even the first requires some forethought. What business can prosper without order? What good can come from confusion? And cleanliness, which is next to godliness, cannot be overlooked with profit.

I believe there should be no more thrifty people than the Saints, keeping the needs of the church ever before our minds, making all our plans for the advancement of the work. It is true it may call for sacrifice but what great event has ever been that did not? Can the Saints afford to let the work wane? Is there nothing more we can go without for the work's sake? Is this any less worthy cause than the fitting Columbus for his voyage? Have we no treasures to offer? The time we have to labor is too short to spend our time and means for that which does not profit.

O that we might have this great latter-day work so much at heart that we would fear to use the means God has intrusted to our care in any way but by the strictest economy and fear to use one penny of the tenth part of our income which belongs to God alone! Let us trust God and see if he will not pour us out a blessing. I do not expect we can gather where we have not sown, or by idling obtain the prize, but inasmuch as God has given us strength to work with our hands we can acknowledge the blessings by using them for the advancement of the cause, and if any are too feeble to work or too poor to give, they can pray while others work, so all will be doing something for the Master; and praying is not the least there is to be done, by any means. Hoping we may all feel the interest in the work required to keep every elder at his post, I will pray.

SISTER BURLINGAME.

CUMBERLAND HILL, R. I., March 6.

COIN, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—I address you all, but especially the isolated ones like myself, whose only visits with each other are through our church publications; and surely they are a feast of fat things to my soul from week to week. I have oft been bidden by the Spirit to write of my visit to Lamoni some time ago, but household cares and poor health have seemed to take up my entire time and strength; but since I have received such great blessings from the Lord of late I feel to devote part of my time to his service.

I was up at Shenandoah recently to our sacrament services, and O what a blessing was poured out upon us all while there. Three were baptized; one who had belonged to the old organization and then was a Cutlerite, I believe. He and his were baptized and confirmed at the sacrament meeting, and a young brother about fourteen. I have forgotten their names. God's Spirit was revealed to us through the gift of tongues that the recording angel was in our midst and was taking cognizance of that meeting, and that the covenants that had been made were acceptable to him. Also that one of the elders there had received an answer to his prayers. How glorious is the word of the Lord direct to us! I felt to be more diligent in prayer that my heart's desires might be answered.

Now about my Lamoni visit: As my husband had been laying brick there and around there all summer I felt justified in spending the money to go there that I might be with our church for a season. What a feast I did enjoy attending our beautiful large church that seats one thousand; and it was nearly always full. I was there six weeks, and O, what a large Sunday school! over four hundred scholars, and how diligent the teachers and officers were in teaching them the word of God! I sat and listened and learned like a little child. How I do wish that I and my children might attend such a Sunday school! I feel that I have so much to learn yet. What good sermons I did hear from Brn. Smith, Wight, Elvin, Scott, Cochran, and Williams. It was a treat to me, but I never saw the evil one work harder than there to destroy their peace of mind. I could not help but think, There will be five wise and five foolish. O dear Saints, let us each and all take God's Holy Spirit for our guide, and be meek and humble, and help bear one another's burdens and not conform to the fashions of the world.

God says, "Let your garments be plain," and that our stewardships he would require at our hands. I wonder if it will have anything to do with our inheritance throughout that thousand years? If I was worth my thousands, a plain dress would be good enough for me to attend church in, so that my apparel would not draw the attention of some weaker sister from the preacher. Dear sisters, forgive me if I have hurt anyone's feelings, for I love you all, and do want you to enjoy all of God's Spirit that you can possibly, which can be only obtained by a diligent study and searching of his word, with fasting and prayer and striving with all your heart, mind, and strength to follow in the footsteps of Jesus and be doing the things that he commanded while here upon earth.

It is more blessed to give than to receive; and again, we will be blessed even as we bless others of the household of faith. O that I might be more like my blessed Master each day of my life is my daily prayer. I did so enjoy my visit there and learned so much how to live the life of a saint. I find I have so many things to overcome; but I know God will help me.

I so anticipated seeing Sister Walker and having a visit with her; but when she was pointed out to me I could read her countenance like a book. She looked so careworn and tired I had not the heart to take up a minute of her time, but just prayed in my heart for God to give her strength and health as her day should be. Remember her in your prayers, dear sisters, that her courage may not fail, for I have received so much light from her writings we cannot spare her until we are all gathered to Zion.

I found it was very hard for the poor Saints there to earn a living. I would advise the poor not to move there unless they were shown by God's Spirit that it was his will for them to go, as property is very high, and work is scarce and wages low. Still those in the East are commanded to come to the West in the regions round about, but I believe you could earn a living easier in other towns and obtain a home of your own cheaper.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

"Learn of me, and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit and you shall have peace in me. I am Jesus Christ; I came by the will of the Father, and I do his will."—Doc. and Cov 18: 2.

Thursday, April 2.—The church, its ministers and membership. That righteousness, love, and zeal in the work and spread of the gospel may increase and to this end the Saints with one heart and mind bring their tithes and offerings into the Lord's storehouse. That God will continue to reveal his mind to his servants in the direction of the affairs of the church.

Memory Verses.—1 John 5: 3, 4.

Thursday, April 9.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Jude 17-25.

Thursday, April 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications.

Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted. Memory Verses.—Mark 16: 15-18.

Thursday, April 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Micah 4: 1-5.

Thursday, April 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Amos 9: 14, 15.

GOOD TEACHERS

1. Have definite plans for each lesson.
 2. Let thoughts grow ripe before giving them as food. Unripe thoughts are unwholesome.
 3. Measure their thoughts by God's word.
 4. Seek spiritual guidance in understanding the word.
 5. Ask help in presenting the same.
 6. Think of the class individually.
 7. Aim to divide the word to meet the needs of each.
 8. Do not measure child action by their own present standard.
 9. Try to recall their own childhood, remembering how they were misjudged.
 10. Draw practical applications from everyday life.
 11. Keep the class in mind in daily readings.
 12. Keep a note book handy, and jot down helpful hints.
 13. Search for pictures, blackboard outlines, etc.; remembering that the child learns ten times as much through the sense of sight as the sense of hearing.
 14. Confer with parents often, seeking their coöperation always.
 15. Read all the helps they can get and use what mature judgment approves.
 16. Attend teachers' meeting whenever possible.
 17. Make best use of material in reach and keep on reaching.
 18. Are not content with doing just as well as they did last year.
 19. Try to be as good as they teach others to be. In fact they
- Rejoice in the Lord,
Ask his assistance,
Love his words,
Love his children,
Yearn for the salvation of souls;

Think before teaching,
Help others to think,
Encourage the weak and diffident;
Study the books of the church,
Carry truth wherever they go,
Hold up the hands of other workers,
Oppose nothing that will help the work along,
Overrate not their own abilities,
Let their lights so shine that others seeing their good works may glorify the Father.

It seems inexcusable that any should take upon themselves the responsibility of teaching, and especially of teaching religious truth, and deliberately neglect to prepare themselves to do it. A little time every day would enable them to do it well, but a hurried glancing at the lesson just before going into the class is no proper preparation to teach. A class can be held better and more easily by good teaching than in any other way: no expedients can make up for its loss. Teachers who are too indifferent to prepare as thoroughly as they can for each lesson are little help and often a great hindrance. Hundreds of grown boys and girls leave Sunday school every year on this account. They are used to good teaching in the day school and they know it or its absence. If the teacher does not respect them enough to prepare, they will not respect the teacher enough to attend.—Superintendent and Teacher.

ANYTHING which will send people to the Bible is of value. A suggestion from the Sunday school Record is given below, which is worthy of trial:—

Each child was given a slip of paper upon which were written the following questions: "Who was commanded to put his house in order? Who told him to put his house in order? Who turned his face to the wall to pray?" Written on the lower part of the slip was: "Answers to the above questions can be found in the book of Isaiah." The latter information was given so that those looking for the answers would have no just reason for becoming discouraged.

Each scholar was given twelve questions, and for their correct answering would receive the present of a small booklet. The idea was to get the parents to read the Bible, as very few of the scholars can read. The promised reward caused the children to see that the answers were gotten. This met with far greater success than was even expected, and will be resumed in the near future.—Superintendent and Teacher.

CHRIST'S PUNCTUATION POINTS.

My class of girls was no more frivolous than girls who are just entering the high school are apt to be, but I was getting discouraged about them. Especially when I tried to make a serious impression on them—and failed. I had only taught a class in the Sunday school long enough for the "new feeling" to be wearing off, and they had not yet learned to answer questions, even when I made the questions as simple and direct as I could. Their former teacher had lectured to them without much effect. When I asked a question that had to do with personal religion they would not respond at all. I think they considered it bad form. There was not a professed Christian girl in the whole class.

A few weeks ago I found that Mabel had written on the hymn leaflet, "I wonder what the Interrogation Point will ask to-day?" Below Edith had scribbled, "Something pious, of course."

So they called me the Interrogation Point, and my questions evidently bored them. I must try a new line of teaching; I must find some point of interest from which to start toward the spiritual truths which I must teach.

Therefore it was that on the next Sabbath, instead of taking up the lesson verse by verse, or asking questions about it, I began to talk to them about their studies. I did this deliberately, intending to use the enthusiasm for knowledge which I knew the girls felt as a lever to overthrow their indifference to the saving truth which they needed so much to learn. It was applying the well-known principle that we must begin where we find the pupil,—at the point of experiential knowledge. They had been studying punctuation. (I had learned that before coming to the class.) I found them ready to discuss the matter with me. I then swung into the lesson for the day with the remark that it contained Christ's comma. It was the lesson on the Early Ministry of Jesus, in which Christ stopped at a comma when he read from the sixty-first chapter of the Book of Isaiah the words which described his mission. Having read promises of grace and mercy, he paused in the midst of a sentence rather than pronounce doom, in the beginning of his ministry, against the people who heard. We talked a good deal about this, and I was glad to have Kate, one of the most thoughtful of the girls, say in answer to a question, "I think Christ's comma, which has stood for so long, holds good yet."

Next we discussed Christ's period: "Before Abraham was I am." I am—what? This was as strange a place for Christ to put a period as the other had been. We were learning that Christ was a unique person. We all remembered the strange verse in capitals in Exodus where God revealed himself by the name I AM. The bell tapped while the girls were looking up, of their own accord, verses which added different endings to the "I am" of Christ: "I am the way," "the light of the world," and such a long list that Edith said, "It seems as if he was everything that was good."

Our next lesson on Christ's punctuation points began with Christ's exclamation. The girls were by this time so interested that they came prepared with references. Mabel brought, "He marvelled at their unbelief;" Kate, "Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life!" Matthew twenty-third we agreed was the most exclamatory chapter in the gospels. Even saucy Edith's eyes filled with tears as we studied together the tenderest of all the exclamations, "How often would I have gathered thy children . . . and ye would not!"

The last punctuation point which we studied was Christ's interrogation. This time there was but one interrogation quoted, a mighty alternative. This time the girls listened attentively, and even ventured a few timid questions. I am sure I saw deep feeling in more than one face as I pressed Christ's tremendous interrogation, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

I rejoice to say that the girls are answering the question as I wanted them to.—Rev. William Futhy Gibbons in Sunday School Times.

No. 277 Sheffield Avenue,
CHICAGO, Illinois, Mar. 19.

Editors Herald:—There are doubtless a number who would go to conference if they were sure of obtaining cheap rates from Chicago, who otherwise would feel unable to go; therefore to benefit all concerned, if those who intend to go to Kirtland via Chicago will drop me a card stating the time they want to leave this city, it will enable me to secure the rate mentioned—$5.10 to Cleveland; same rate to return; also a special car if a sufficient number can start at the same time. I would suggest Thursday night, April 2, for the majority. This will enable us to attend the Sunday school convention a part of Friday.

Some may want to leave earlier and some later than this. If all will drop me a card we may be able to provide for two or three parties.

Some may be going in a company of sufficient number to obtain rates for themselves, but by letting it be known others may be benefited by being able to accompany them, who otherwise would have to remain at home.

I will not be able to meet all who come in at the various depots, but will do the best I can if they will let me know in time. I will try and be at the Union Depot on Wednesday and Thursday from 9:30 a. m. to twelve noon to render any assistance in my power.

To obtain this rate ten or more must go together.

I will answer all who inclose a card or stamp for reply. In bonds,

F. G. PITT.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, March 19.

Editors Herald:—Your editorial, "Kirtland conference question," appreciated. If aught I have written has seemed to reflect on "motive" of committee I am sincerely sorry. Naught was intended. While I publicly expressed an opinion, others murmured behind the scenes. I thought my course preferable. It may have been best to have done neither. One may entertain a different opinion and still not question another's integrity. Public acts should always be judged upon their merits. If when work is delegated to committee we must unquestionably accept, ours is an unenviable position. Committee work is subject to approval of those interested or affected or both. Motive should never be questioned; findings may. Kirtland Saints are liberal and broadminded. If a difference of opinion would lessen their respect for me, or mine for them, my faith in human nature would be lessened. I think we are above such things. Some who have differed from me most I treasure as my best friends. Had I known that a public reference to the matter would have been so construed I would have written the committee privately, which would have been better.

Delivered eighteen discourses at Fontanelle in fourteen days. Crowds increased each evening until church would not hold them; numbers turned away; town completely stirred up. Prospects of a discussion with an M. E. minister, also with one of the Disciple persuasion; some ready for baptism. Expect to return in May. There are but few Saints there and they labor under great disadvantage, Bro. S. Butler is in charge.

Spent one night in Creston, where resident Saints desire an opening. If a capable minister were located there for a year lasting good would follow. Our business meeting, with installation of new officers, next Wednesday. We hope some one will be appointed to labor in Council Bluffs next year; the work demands it. Have done but little work here this year save on Sunday. Have been out of the city most of the time. May God bless all and the Devil afflict none.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

BRIDGEPORT, Wash., Feb. 29.

Editors Herald:—I have been sowing all the gospel seed that circumstances will admit. I love to hear of the spread of this glorious latter-day work. It is my greatest comfort to hear of the truth cutting its way. I am very lonely; I am the only Latter Day Saint in this part. I am preaching and teaching as I have the opportunity. A great many people appear very favorable to the truth. I think if a good elder could come here a good work could be done. I hope General Conference will send a good elder here. I should be glad to send the money for an elder to come, but I can't.

I ask the prayers of all the Saints that I may be strong in body and have greater understanding of the Scriptures that I may be the means of doing much good in my Father's vineyard. My prayer is that the Saints may be faithful and rise higher. We should be a light to the world. May the Lord bless all his Saints.

EDMORE, Mich., March 15.

Editors Herald:—I am having quite exciting times here, three miles from Edmore in the Union church. I went to Stanton to preach a little, and baptize a man and wife there. I baptized them and on my way back stopped at this place, and quite a good many are very much interested, and there is a people here who say they are saved and cannot sin any more; and that they are resurrected and living with Christ now; and say that the reign of Christ is of the Devil. One woman jumped at me and said I lied; that it was not in the Bible, and she knew it wasn't.

Bro. Elles preached a few sermons here and is liked very much, and by the way the people talk they want him to return. The work is onward. We are gaining favor in the eyes of the people. The honest in heart believe the truth, and a people are being prepared for the second coming of Christ, and we can truly say of Zion in the language of the poet,

Ere long her King will rend the skies, majestic and divine.

May we all be ready to meet him when he comes.

LIMERICK, Ohio, March 13.

Editors Herald:—To-day I returned from Rocky Hill, Jackson County. Sr. Nellie Stewart having moved into that locality a few months ago was desirous that her neighbors have the opportunity of hearing the message of life, and wrote me to come or send a minister. I obeyed the call and was refused the M. E. chapel, but was invited to preach in the house of a Methodist member, which I did a few evenings. I preached once in Sr. Stewart's house and twice in the Kansas school-house. The attendance was not large but very orderly and attentive, and yesterday I baptized Sr. Stewart's husband, also her brother James, and blessed their two youngest children. I also administered to Sr. Stewart when she was almost distracted with toothache and neuralgia. She was relieved almost instantly. Nellie married out of the church, but she lived her religion and her husband saw her consistent life and the necessity of obedience, and they both rejoiced and praised God at his baptism. May the Holy Spirit ever abide with them.

I see in a recent Herald a letter from Limerick, in which the writer seems to think there may be a word of warning to scare the elders off the cars. I don't see that anybody has got very badly scared at the waters, as the missionaries whose duty calls them to travel on the waters seem to be perfectly at ease while so occupying; and I think quite a few of the elders have been examining the things that are on either side of the rails.

And now in regard to the ministry getting out into new fields and leaving the organizations in the care of the local ministry, the Lord has so directed, "so far as possible;" and who shall decide how far is possible unless it be those in charge of the missions? I call to mind one branch in this district (with the cars running within one hundred yards of their place of meeting) that had not had a sermon preached to them for twelve months till myself and another missionary visited them last December. And I, having a right, and knowing something of the thinning process here, referred to in the letter, wish to say for those who may not know, that the law was honored in each case—unless it should be one where it is claimed the party asked for a longer time; but I have inquired of the officer who it is claimed had charge of the meeting when the mercy was asked for, and he informed me that he knew nothing about it. And of the five persons that have been expelled from this branch in the last four or five years, two of them requested to be expelled, saying they were not worthy to belong to the church; one has been baptized into the church again; one other made an effort to return without baptism; and the other is the one who claims he asked for mercy. Now, I think this: If every one will get rid of the spirit of faultfinding and work in their place, we will be able to see the mote in our brethren's eyes, if so be the mote is there.

This past year has been my most successful year's work for this church, and notwithstanding I have traveled some on Nahum's wagons, my expense has been about as light as any year that I have traveled. And I have not left the branches in the district altogether to the care of the local ministry; and so far as I am concerned I do not expect to until the locals are in condition to be able to care for the work. Until then I do not think it "possible."

May God bless his children with the Spirit of wisdom; and may all acquaint themselves with the law; and may all labor contentedly in their place. With a desire and prayer for the prosperity of the work,

Your brother,

JAMES MOLER.

GREENBUSH, Michigan.

Editors Herald:—There are a few Saints here. Elder David Smith is the only elder that we ever hear up here; that is, as a rule, for others have preached here as they called, but not to do regular preaching. Bro. Smith has done a good work in this part, and should be taken from the field because of a lack of funds to support the elders' families (as I understand from an article in the Herald a short time ago that some would possibly be taken from the field on account of not enough being sent to keep up the expense of keeping their families—that is, those who received help from the church), I am sure I hardly know what we would do, as there is no other near that could fill his place.

While at Gustin Centre a good interest was aroused and I think many were investigating the work when he left there. He came here and organized a Sunday school on January 17, and we are getting along finely. We received our Sunday school supplies and trust that by the Lord's aid we may do some little good in this work.

My heart is in this latter-day work and I want to see it spread, and good being done. It is nearly four years since I obeyed the gospel, and I have never felt like giving up and going back, although at times I have had many trials and everything seemed dark; but God's hand was guiding all for the best, and I know that when we do our part he never will fail us. My greatest desire is to live humble and do my duty in all things as it may please the Lord.

A number of Saints here say they are going to pay their tithing soon. We hope that all will be well so that Bro. Smith will be continued here.

An aunt of mine living at Plympton, a place somewhere near Warwick, West Ontario, not far from Waterford, would like very much to hear the gospel preached. She was here about two years ago and never tired of hearing about the gospel. We sent our Ensigns to her for over a year and she enjoyed reading them very much. Her daughter says, "I will never be satisfied until I am immersed in the waters of baptism by the Saints' ministers, for I am almost a Saint." All of these are not exactly her words but as near as I remember, only she said a great deal more. Could not an elder go there and preach? He would be welcomed at my aunt's home, for she said so, and she is a good woman and I believe she is honest in heart and will obey the gospel when she hears it.

Trusting that an elder can go there and preach, and that Elder David Smith may be in this part again, I will now close. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may ever live humble and be faithful to the end.

Your sister,

ALICE M. JOSLYN.

ST. CHARLES, Mich., March 10.

Editors Herald:—We are here holding meetings every evening and our interest is splendid. Latter Day Saintism is new here, but the people are honest and there is a hungering and thirsting after righteousness which makes it easy and pleasant for the preacher and all. We look for some to unite; the indications are that quite a number will obey here. I am glad to have such good interest. Last evening I spoke on the Foundation of Christ's Church. I tried to convince the people that possibly something was wrong with their foundation, but did not question their integrity or honesty. I gave scriptural proof of the church in Bible times and the difference was marked so plainly that the people are waking up to facts and we are trying to "declare the whole counsel of God." Good, honest-hearted people that have not attended church for years are there every night. I am feeling good and am blessed in presenting the way of life. Am looking for good results.

Yours in bonds,

E. DELONG.

TENANT'S HARBOR, Maine, March 17.

Editors Herald:—The weather of late has been so bad it has hindered us some about holding meetings. I gave out notice to speak at Long Cove Hall last week, but a storm came upon us and we had to stay at home till wisdom said, J. C., move on. I then gave out notice to speak in the hall on Friday evening and over Sunday and at Wild Cat on Saturday evening. The weather was fair and fine, as Bro. Seavey, started out for the meeting with his little Fan.

We found the hall very well filled with good and very attentive listeners, never before have I seen any better interest. The choir sang for us, they sang beautifully; splendid musical voices. They have been trained by Mr. Smith, of Long Cove, who was present and led the choir. It pleased Bro. David so well, he laughs, and says, "Couldn't you hear those little young boys and girls sing?" "It did me good," he says, so it did me, and I had them sing a second piece before Bro. David offered prayer. There is no one there that belongs to our church, but I judge from what I hear that they are like the drunken man, who leaning up against a church and as a man passed by said, "Do you belong to that church?" The answer was, "No, but I am leaning that way." One lady said to me, "I have people in Kansas, and they write me their faith is greatly shaken by the preaching of the elders of your church." That's right, my brother elder, shake away till you shake them out of darkness into light; out of Satan's kingdom, into the kingdom of God's dear Son. Well, everybody is preaching around here now; some for and others against the latter-day work. We'll try and stand by the old gospel gun the best we can, and fight it out on the rocky bound coast of the old Pine Tree State.

Before Judge Philips gave his decision in the Temple Lot suit I was in prayer, asking God to guide in the matter. The Spirit said to me, "Let the matter rest; it shall be well in its time." I told President Joseph Smith near the church at Lamoni what the Spirit said to me. The Searchlight comes to me. I should like to know what those little fellows are trying to do. There will be a temple built on the temple lot. The Brighamites may assist in building it if they repent; but there won't be left a grease spot of the Hedrickites after God gets through with them.

Yours for the right,

J. C. FOSS.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 18.

Editors Herald:—We have just been treated to an ocular evidence of the advancement of the marvelous work, in the largely attended and very interesting quarterly conference just closed here, to which notability was added by the presence of the "First Presidency" and the "President of the Twelve," whose presence was a vital force in carrying us over the rough places and giving cheer and comfort by timely counsel and decisions. It is the universal testimony from all quarters, where these brethren have attended quarterly conferences that "they do good wherever they go."

Our preaching services were above the average in attendance, attention, and subject matter. The social meeting was good, considering the crowded condition of the room.

Bro. William Lewis succeeds Bro. T. T. Hinderks in the presidency of the district, with Bro. William Summerfield as vice president. Bro. Hinderks asked for release to attend to other duties. Bro. Blair sanctioned the request. Ten or more from the Northeastern Kansas district and Bro. A. Leaverton and R. F. Hill and wife from the Nodaway, Missouri, district were in attendance.

On the 23d we begin a series of meetings at Dearborn, Platte County, a comparatively new point, having offered us the use of a good hall free, and the promise of a musician and singers to help along the services, and the columns of the local paper for advertising. Now if we can manage to have the preaching consequently good, all will be well.

In harmony with the editorial we have neither time nor money to expend in secret orders, but have no words of condemnation for those who think they have. Money is a scarce article with us, but time is more so.

We feel a degree of anxiety as we look into the coming conference year, wondering what it will reveal to us in its experiences. So far as appointment is concerned, we are not troubled, having implicit confidence in the wisdom of the appointing authorities; but we are curious. Whatever may await us in this line we feel a determination to enter in and occupy diligently and wisely, leaving the results with the Great Shepherd.

This truly is a day of warning, and of few words. Many are the calls for preaching, I have now calls from three different points, north, east, and south; and there is work in the city. The harvest is white and awaiting the sickle.

The incipient cry of the Savior is very applicable in this day, "Repent and believe the gospel." In harmony with this is the instruction, "Say nothing but repentance to this generation." In our efforts we discover the nearer the central figure and thought (Christ) we keep the greater are we blessed.

We have heard nothing from the Ministerial Alliance, only indirectly the remark that we were only seeking notoriety. If this refers to the gospel, we plead guilty; but quite evidently we will not be gratified.

The work moves on apace; the Saints are climbing to higher altitudes; the diligent among the young Saints are growing rapidly and strong. So let the gospel go to every nation that the peaceful millennium may come, is my prayer.

J. M. TERRY.

BANDON, Oregon, March 12.

Editors Herald:—I am alone in the faith at this place, and the first Latter Day Saint, so I am informed, that has ever been in this part of Oregon. I have had a hard fight of it, and at one time had all the clergy in the city thundering away at the so-called heretical doctrine, and have experienced any amount of sympathy for being such a dupe. I brought about this storm by attending their respective places of worship and distributing tracts to the people as they passed out, and by continually bringing before the minds of the people with whom I became acquainted the fact of the restoration of the true gospel. But, praise the Lord, his "grace is sufficient," and the gospel only shines the brighter under opposition.

Some have been led to honestly and earnestly investigate the claims of the Reorganized Church, and I have been told by some that they could find no fault with our belief as set forth; and one said to me, "The church just fills my ideal;" and she has often expressed to me the wish that there was a branch near, that she might hear the gospel preached. Truly the harvest is "ripe." Christ expects each to work in his appointed place; and thanks to the excellency of our church publications, we can all share in the work of spreading abroad the glad gospel tidings.

Everything in the public mind here just now is eclipsed by the wonders of a new doctrine which is being taught in this county by one Millard, who claims to be the promulgator of it, and who claims divine inspiration and authority. Your brother,

BURT FISHER.

EVERLASTING HAPPINESS AND EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.—NO. I.

BY ELDER J. L. BEAR.

AS A diversity of beliefs and opinions exists among elders of the church, and members are taught such different ways in regard to the resurrection, and the final reward of the righteous, and punishment of the wicked, I concluded, after long deliberation, to set before the readers of the Herald some scriptural facts (not men's views or opinions) out of the three standard books of the church in regard to those points now under consideration. And, as the Book of Mormon speaks plainer and more understandingly than the Bible about those subjects, I will have to quote largely from it in connection with the Bible and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

In First Book of Nephi, chapter 3, paragraphs 40 and 41, it is recorded that that great and abominable church has taken away from the gospel many plain and most precious parts, and many covenants of the Lord; and after they have done this, then the book (Bible) went forth to all the Gentile nations; and because of the taking away of many plain and precious things—which things were plain unto the understanding of the children of men—an exceeding great many do stumble; so God is bringing forth to light the records of the Nephites, in which shall be written the gospel, the rock and salvation.

In Book of Mormon, chapter 4, paragraph 2, is a warning to all those who treat lightly the book, and who say there are faults and mistakes in it:—

Behold, I make an end of speaking concerning this people. I am the son of Mormon, and my father was a descendant of Nephi; and I am the same who hideth up this record unto the Lord; the plates thereof are of no worth, because of the commandment of the Lord. For he truly saith, that no one shall have them to get gain; but the record thereof is of great worth; and whoso shall bring it to light, him will the Lord bless; for none can have power to bring it to light, save it be given him of God; for God wills that it shall be done with an eye single to his glory, or the welfare of the ancient and long dispersed covenant people of the Lord. And blessed be him that shall bring this thing to light; for it shall be brought out of darkness unto light, according to the word of God; yea, it shall be brought out of the earth, and it shall shine forth out of darkness, and come unto the knowledge of the people; and it shall be done by the power of God; and if there be faults, they be the faults of a man. But behold, we know no fault; nevertheless, God knoweth all things; therefore he that condemneth, let him beware lest he shall be in danger of hell fire.

Book of Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2; the Book of Mormon contains the fullness of the everlasting gospel.

And again, the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel.—D. C. 42: 5.

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them.—D. C. 83: 8.

These things ought to be a warning to us as a church, just as well as it was to the old church. The book has not changed since then; it is the same now that it was when first translated by the Seer. But indeed, I have to say with feelings of regret and sorrow, that many of the Saints are very little if at all acquainted with the Book of Mormon, and seem to have but little desire to get acquainted with it; which cause seems to me is that they are not taught and instructed to do so.

RESURRECTION.

The Scriptures inform us that all men will be raised from the dead, the righteous and the wicked; that spirit and body will be reunited, nevermore to die; or, better to say, nevermore to see corruption.

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.—1 Cor. 15: 21, 22.

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God. . . . And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works.—Rev. 20: 12, 13.

The wicked remain as though there had been no redemption made, except it be the loosing of the bands of death; for he-hold, the day cometh that all shall rise from the dead and stand before God, and be judged according to their works. Now there is a death which is called a temporal death; and the death of Christ shall loose the bands of this temporal death, that all shall be raised from this temporal death; the spirit and the body shall be reunited again, in its perfect form; both limb and joint shall be restored to its proper frame, even as we now are at this time; and we shall be brought to stand before God, knowing even as we know now, and have a bright recollection of all our guilt. Now this restoration shall come to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, both the wicked and the righteous; and even there shall not so much as a hair of their heads be lost; but all things shall be restored to its perfect frame, as it is now, or in the body, and shall be brought and be arraigned before the bar of Christ the Son, and God the Father, and the Holy Spirit, which is one eternal God, to be judged according to their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil.

Now behold I have spoken unto you concerning the death of the mortal body, and also concerning the resurrection of the mortal body. I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; that is from death; even from the first death, unto life, that they can die no more; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided; thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption.—Alma 8: 10, 11.

Chapter 19: 7 also speaks as plainly as the foregoing. Now does this read that those who come forth in the second resurrection shall only receive a spiritual body—that they shall not receive their bodies back like the Saints? What does this mean?

The soul shall be restored to the body, and the body to the soul, . . . even a hair of their head shall not be lost.

Is it spiritual hair that shall not be lost? Are they all spiritual limbs and spiritual joints that shall be restored to the spiritual body? Does it read so? It would be well for those who have such strange ideas to try and get acquainted with the Book of Mormon. So indeed, according to scripture, all men, good and evil, will come forth in the resurrection and receive their bodies, which bodies in their resurrected state will never more see corruption. There are bodies celestial, terrestrial, and telestial; and the celestials will be more bright and beautiful than the terrestrial; and the terrestrial more beautiful than the telestial; and the telestial differ from one another in beauty as the stars differ from one another; also their habitation and occupations.

"EVERY MAN IN HIS OWN ORDER."

Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.—1 Cor. 15: 23.

It is recorded, that a resurrection took place at the resurrection of Christ:—

And the graves were opened; and the bodies of the saints which slept, arose, who were many, and came out of their graves. And after his resurrection, went into the holy city and appeared unto many.—Matt. 27: 56, 57. I. T. (See also third Book of Nephi, chapter 10, end of paragraph 3.)

According to this, it may be taken for granted, that the saints of God did arise, no matter where they died, in Judea, in America, or anywhere else; those from the time of Adam down to Christ; indeed a goodly number.

Jude in his general epistle, verse 14, says:—

And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment.

Surely those saints must have been resurrected in Christ's time. (See also Book of Mosiah 8: 6.)

And there shall be silence in heaven for the space of half an hour, and immediately after shall the curtain of heaven be unfolded, as a scroll is unfolded after it is rolled up, and the face of the Lord shall be unveiled; and the saints that are upon the earth, who are alive, shall be quickened, and be caught up to meet him. And they who have slept in their graves shall come forth; for their graves shall be opened, and they also shall be caught up to meet him in the midst of the pillar of heaven: they are Christ's, the firstfruits: they who shall descend with him first [who were resurrected in Christ's time assuredly], and they who are on the earth and in their graves, who are first caught up to meet him; and all this by the voice of the sounding of the trumpet of the angel of God.—D. C. 85: 27. (See also Sec. 36: 11, 13.)

The Book of Alma, 19: 7 reads:—

It meaneth the reuniting of the soul with the body of those from the days of Adam, down to the resurrection of Christ. Now whether the souls and the bodies of those of whom have been spoken, shall all be reunited at once, the wicked as well as the righteous, I do not say; let it suffice, that I say that they all come forth; or in other words, their resurrection cometh to pass before the resurrection of those who die after the resurrection of Christ. Now my son, I do not say that their resurrection cometh at the resurrection of Christ; but behold, I give it as my opinion, that the souls and the bodies are reunited, of the righteous, at the resurrection of Christ, and his ascension into heaven.

It must be remembered that Alma lived several hundred years before Christ came. We find his statement verified not only in Judea, but also on this continent.

According to all these passages it is easy to be understood that Christ by his second coming will bring those resurrected saints with him with all the holy angels. Then will those who have died in Christ since, and who have been martyred for the gospel's sake and have kept the testimony of Jesus, arise from their graves; receive their resurrected bodies, and be caught up to meet Christ with his host in the air; and the Saints which are alive at his coming shall be quickened and also be caught up with the rest, not to receive their celestial bodies, but to be quickened, except it may be some of the aged ones.

He that liveth when the Lord shall come, and has kept the faith, blessed is he; nevertheless it is appointed to him to die at the age of man; wherefore children shall grow up until they become old, old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye [from mortality to immortality].—D. C. 63: 13.

And then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming; who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh.—D. C. 85: 28.

And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection; and it shall be tolerable for them.—D. C. 45: 10.

Here we have a resurrection at the resurrection of Christ; another one at his second coming, the Saints to meet him in the air; a third one when he has come. But those two resurrections transpire so close together that it is generally called one, the first resurrection, then comes the fourth or general resurrection, when all the rest of the dead come forth.

BLESSED STATE OF SAINTS OF GOD IN THE MILLENNIAL REIGN.

They shall live and reign with Christ a thousand years. (Rev. 20: 4, 6.)

And I have made the earth rich, and behold it is my footstool: wherefore, again I will stand upon it; and I hold forth and deign to give unto you greater riches, even a land of promise; a land flowing with milk and honey, upon which there shall be no curse when the Lord cometh [surely his second coming before the Millennial reign]; and I will give it unto you for the land of your inheritance, if you seek it with all your hearts: and this shall be my covenant with you, ye shall have it for the land of your inheritance, and for the inheritance of your children forever, while the earth shall stand [till the last great change takes place, when there shall be a new heaven and a new earth or, better to say, when the earth goes into its celestial and glorified estate]; and ye shall possess it again in eternity [in the new earth so-called], no more to pass away.—D. C. 38: 4. (See 52: 9; 56: 6; 57: 1; 58: 4, 7; 100: 3.)

The Seer in a letter to W. W. Phelps in 1832, says:—

Yea, thus said the still small voice, which whispereth through and pierceth all things, and oftentimes it makes my bones to quake, while it maketh manifest, saying: and it shall come to pass that I the Lord will send one mighty and strong, holding the scepter of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words: while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, to arrange by lot the inheritance of the saints, whose names are found, and the names of their fathers, and of their children, enrolled in the book of the law of God. And all they who are not found written in the book of remembrance, shall find none inheritance in that day, but they shall be cut asunder, and their portion shall be appointed them among unbelievers, where is wailing and gnashing of teeth.

Now when shall the Saints receive their inheritances? after the millennium? on the new earth? No, indeed. It is after the Saints have gathered to the place designated, where the temple shall be built; yea, Zion shall "flourish" upon "the hills" and the Lamanites "blossom as the rose," before the Lord shall come; yea, before the millennium is actually ushered in. Then Zion on this continent and Jerusalem on the eastern continent will be the reigning, princely, capital cities of the world in the millennial reign.

Zechariah chapter 14 describes the great battle which is to take place before or at the coming of Christ at Jerusalem—the same battle which is described in Revelation 11 and in Ezekiel 38 and 39.

Then it shall come to pass that every one that is left of all nations which come against Jerusalem shall go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, and to keep the feasts of tabernacles; and upon those that will not go up shall fall no rain.

The Saints, the children of God, will receive their inheritance about the time of Christ's coming, and after, and they will be the ruling people in the millennium and possess their inheritance forever and ever, after the sanctification of the earth. Is the kingdom of God not established on the earth when Christ dwells with us on this globe? Daniel chapter 2 tells when the kingdom of God shall be established on the earth and that the Saints shall possess the kingdom. What kingdom? The kingdom set up by God and his Christ on the earth; and that they shall reign with him in his kingdom a thousand years, and in the sanctified world forever. God and his Christ with all the Saints will then have full control over all creation during the millennial reign; Satan being bound in a helpless condition, having power to deceive neither men nor beasts. Then surely God's kingdom is established and the Saints shall inherit it, and after the end it will still be more beautiful and glorious, sanctified and celestialized. O, what a grand, sublime, beautiful, and glorious future is before those who love God and keep his commandments!

The brother in the article on "Thoughts on the Resurrection," in Herald for August 22, got mixed in explaining not only about the resurrection, but also in section 85: 33, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, where he means that this will be fulfilled after the millennium. Please read paragraph 32:—

And again, another angel shall sound his trump, which is the sixth angel, saying, She is fallen, who made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication: she is fallen! is fallen!

Who is fallen? Why, Babylon, the Mother of Harlots, mentioned in Revelation, just somewhere around the second coming of Christ; and in the next paragraph, 33:—

It is finished! it is finished! the Lamb of God hath overcome, and trodden the winepress alone.

Then the Saints receive their inheritance, when he hath fought the great battle at Jerusalem.

In paragraph 35 you will see, when the angel sweareth, there shall be time no longer. Satan shall be bound and not be loosed for a thousand years; then he will be loosed for a little season, to gather his armies for the last time. Then Michael, the seventh angel, gathers his armies, the host of heaven; not Christ this time, Michael, no doubt, being next in authority under Christ over the heavenly hosts. (See Zech. 14; Rev. 11; 6: 12-17; 14: 14-20; 16: 13-20; 19: 11-21; Zeph. 3: 8; Joel 3; Ezek. 38 and 39; Isa. 66: 15, 16; 63.) I wish the reader would read all those chapters and verses. This will explain when and where Christ will tread the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God. All before the millennium, assuredly.

THE GOSPEL.

I HAVE been patiently waiting to see some of the elders accept the invitation to criticise Bro. B. B. W's. article of October 10, 1894, on that marvelous transaction at Pentecost, and give us all the information and new light that has been received up to the present.

I have watched the Herald closely for several years to see this point brought up, so as to ascertain the views of the church relative to the matter that when preaching, I might not misrepresent the body.

I have read the article over carefully several times, and must confess that I cannot view this event in the same light as does the brother. It appears to me that there was an unusual power made manifest similar, to a certain extent, to that which had been prophesied by Joel concerning the last days, when all God's creation would be favored with a special endowment from above. And it was not limited solely to the one hundred and twenty disciples, but graciously extended to the whole concourse. The disciples were assembled to await the endowment from on high, in order to qualify them to become competent witnesses to the nations; for he said:—

Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1: 8.

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.—Acts 2: 1-4.

Says the brother:—

A very natural testimony meeting. The house of God is a house of order. The Holy Spirit is not the author of confusion, and it reigned supreme there.

I believe that; but the conclusions that the brother comes to would lead one to believe that there was considerable confusion displayed. Let us examine the order upon such occasions, or the ordinary manifestations in the church.

For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries. . . . He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself.—1 Cor. 14: 2, 4.

This peculiar manifestation is unprofitable to anyone except the power of understanding or interpretation is given, which I maintain was extended to all, both disciples and multitude.

So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.—1 Cor. 14: 9.

Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.—1 Cor. 14: 13.

Now, we are not led to conclude from the narrative by Luke, that that was the manner of procedure; hence not a "natural testimony meeting;" but a remarkable, unusual meeting, such as is seldom observed. Usually where two or at most three had spoken in tongues, one necessarily would have to interpret before the hearers would be benefited;

Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

But it was not so upon this occasion, for all knew the voice of tongues, and were led to exclaim:—

We [multitude] do hear them [disciples] speak in our own tongues, the wonderful words of God; that is, a representation of every nation under heaven, hears the different speakers to their own understanding, by the power of the Spirit which conveyed the message to them.

Bro. Mark Forscutt prayed in the Tahitian tongue, which caused the nations to weep for joy; but did he understand what he said? Not unless the natives told him, or the Lord made his mind fruitful, and then he would receive it in his own tongue. If a man speak in tongues, and several nationalities happen to be present who are favored with the interpretation, the Spirit conveys the message to the understanding of each, and this seems to have been that that caused the marvel among the multitude; "for how hear we every man in our own tongue wherein we were born?" Says the brother, "and were it one of the Apostles preaching and each of those different nationalities hearing in his own language, then the gift would be with the hearer, and not with the speaker, which is not presumable, seeing they were not believers." Well, that is just what did take place; for they all, apostles included, began to speak in other tongues and every man heard in his own language, "wherein he was born." So the gift would necessarily be with both speaker and hearer. I would hardly call devout men, such as the Pentecostians were and such as Cornelius, whose prayers were had in memorial before God, unbelievers, and to show that God did bestow his miraculous power upon just such people as were at Pentecost, we have only to go with the same apostle who was chief spokesman upon that occasion down to the household of Cornelius.

And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning.—Acts 11: 15.

For they heard them speak with tongues.—Acts 10: 46.

Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I, that I could withstand God?—Acts 10: 17.

A score of similar manifestations might be cited, which we think unnecessary; but if others are required, please read Elder Blair's sermon on inspiration, and there you will see the unlimited favor shown in various forms to all God's creation.

The gift was undoubtedly upon the speakers who delivered the "wonderful words of God," and I could hardly believe that Peter's after address would have greater weight with the people than the voice of God himself in the tongues wherein they were born. Now it would be unreasonable to suppose that if one of the disciples arose to bear his testimony and began to speak in, say, the Egyptian tongue, that no one would understand save Egyptians only, for several reasons: first, the speaker himself would not understand what was being said; second, the one hundred and twenty people would not be benefited, for they knew not the Egyptian tongue, and if an equal representation were present, from each nation, only one out of eighteen would be any the wiser through the manifestation.

This would cause confusion, for the disciples must know what is being said, to keep them from protesting against the operation.

Wherefore, it shall come to pass, that if you behold a spirit manifested that you cannot understand, and you receive not that spirit, ye shall ask of the Father in the name of Jesus, and if he give not unto you that spirit; that you may know that it is not of God; and it shall be given unto you power over that spirit, and you shall proclaim against that spirit with a loud voice, that it is not of God.—D. C. 50: 7.

Seeing that there was none of this work displayed, we conclude that the disciples knew, or understood in substance, the purport of every speaker, and so did the multitude. Call it preaching or whatever you wish, it was the "wonderful words of God."

The social meeting must necessarily have begun at an early hour; for the news of this meeting was carried about the city, the multitude assembled and listened to the testimonies of the different speakers, all before nine a. m.; for when Peter began his sermon he says it is but the third hour, which was from six to nine a. m. Again says the brother, "They all, one after another, spoke in tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance, bearing testimony the same as we would hear anywhere in the church now when the Spirit of God was poured out upon the Saints."

If that were the case, then the greater amount of evidence and conviction was given by the disciples through tongues; for should anyone come into the church to-day and hear tongues, he would say they were mad, unless the interpretation was given. It would then be as a prophecy and they would be convinced of all, and judged of all. So upon this occasion; when listening to the mighty prophecy through tongues, they, three thousand at least, were convinced of all, and needed then to be pointed to their past conduct, and to the means God had provided for their escape; which was promptly done by Peter.

The brother intimates that all the different nationalities could hear in their own language providing they were not there until the meeting was half over, if all spoke in tongues, seeing there were one hundred and twenty disciples and only eighteen nationalities. That style of carrying on God's work would appear to me nothing but confusion, after taking the whole transaction into consideration; therefore, I cannot see it in that line but as I said before, I believe the Holy Spirit conveyed the message of each speaker to the understanding of the whole concourse, and that the "wonderful words of God" had a great deal to do towards convincing them. There was no time to group out a few here of one nation, and another few there, and appoint some one to speak to them in their mother tongue, but a mixed audience came marching up from the different parts of the city, and upon hearing were lead to exclaim, "how hear we every man in our own tongue?" Thus I would conclude that the Spirit was present with the hearers as well as with the speakers.

Again says the brother, had Peter's address been in tongues, "they would only include him with the drunken ones." Not necessarily so any more than the former speakers, "others mocking said," etc., no doubt this class would have continued mocking, but the honest in heart would have received the tongues by Peter as readily as any of the others; but he may have addressed them in a language commonly known to all.

Conference Minutes.

PITTSBURG AND KIRTLAND.

Meeting called to order at 10:30 a. m. in the Saints' Hall, by presiding elder, W. H. Garrett; E. S. Fairley secretary. Statistical reports: Kirtland 76; 2 baptized, 4 received, 16 removed, 1 died. Blake's Mills 64; gain 1. Fair View 44; no change. Youngstown 28; no change. Wheeling 131; 3 baptized, 1 removed. Conneaut Township 23; no change. Sharon 22; 1 removed. Washingtonville 17; 4 removed. Pittsburg 168; 13 received, 1 expelled. Bishop's agent's report: Total receipts $656.61; total expenditures $650; on hand $6.61. W. H. Garret reelected president of the district and E. S. Fairley reelected secretary for the ensuing term. Cleveland reports new branch organized in that city with 30 members.

Resolved: That the by-laws of the Pittsburg and Kirtland district be changed as follows:—

The officers shall consist of a president and secretary.

The president shall preside at all meetings of conferences where the Quorum of the Presidency or Twelve are not represented; he shall state questions, and in case of a tie shall cast the decisive vote; preserve order, and perform all duties usually discharged by an executive as authorized by the "Book of Rules" of the church.

The secretary shall have charge of all records and papers pertaining to the business of the district. All documents or papers shall be classified, titled, and carefully filed so as to be readily accessible for reference at any time. To facilitate this, after being handled as above, all papers should be wrapped in a bundle for each year and carefully tied and labelled. He shall have power to appoint an assistant at each conference if he so desires, and such assistant shall perform whatever duties the secretary may require.

The conferences shall convene at whatever point decided upon by vote of previous conference the Saturday before the first Sunday of May and November of each year, provided that for good and sufficient reasons the presiding elder of the district may change both time and place for holding any conference if necessity so requires, but due and timely notice must be given through the Herald and Ensign of such change.

Resolved: That we herewith send greeting to the new branch at Cleveland, Ohio, and that the secretary of this conference be instructed to convey our warm acceptance of the new branch with prayer and hopes for her future usefulness and success.

Resolved: That hereafter our district conferences be annual instead of semiannual, commencing with our next district conference. This resolution was laid over until next district conference. Cleveland, Ohio, was named as place for holding next conference, October 31 and November 1, 1896.

NODAWAY.

Conference convened at Guilford, February 22 and 23, 1896. Elders reporting: H. Kemp, O. Madison, A. Jackson, E. B. Morgan, F. J. Ford; R. K. Ross, M. P. Madison, also encouraging remarks from Brn. Kent and Terry; Priests A. Jenson, E. Fannon, R. F. Hill. Bishop's agent's report: February 1, 1896: On hand last report $44.20; received since $277.15; paid out $261.85; on hand $59.50. Statistical report of branches. Platte 112; loss 7. Ross Grove 34; gain 2. Rising Hope 19; gain 6. Sweet Home 48; no change. There were two ordinations provided for: Edward Fannon and C. C. Nelson to the office of elder. Adjourned to meet at Union church the fourth Saturday and Sunday in June, 1896.

DES MOINES.

Conference convened at 10:15 a. m., February 29, at the Saints' church in Des Moines; W. C. Nirk president, Joseph Smith associate; William Johnson secretary. Business of the conference was promptly disposed of. A spirit of unity prevailed throughout. Elders reporting: C. Scott, D. M. Rudd, W. Thompson, W. C. Nirk, W. H. Kephart, J. W. Morgan, N. Stamm, E. Hayer, J. Sayer, W. S. Barbee, W. Johnson, and M. H. Cook; Priests W. T. Maitland, J. Lilly, E. Rowley; Teacher J. Prosser. Branches reporting: Angus, Boonesboro, Head Grove,

What Cheer, Oskaloosa, Richland, Eden-ville, Des Moines, Newton, and Valley. Bishop's agent reported; report was audited and found correct. Five were baptized during conference. Part of the afternoon was taken up in short speeches from Brn. Joseph Smith, C. Scott, W. C. Nirk, and William Thompson, which were much enjoyed; they were both interesting and instructive. Preaching by Elders Joseph Smith and C. Scott. Adjourned to meet with the Boonesboro branch, May 30 and 31.

FAR WEST.

Conference convened with the St. Joseph branch, March 14 and 15, 1896; Presidents Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair were requested to preside; T. T. Hinderks assistant; C. P. Faul secretary. Bishop's agent's report: On hand last report $80.11; received and on hand, including $74.77 for Temple Lot suit, $942.12; paid out $827.80; on hand $114.32. Audited and found correct. Branch reports: Pleasant Grove 88, Delano 95, Wakenda 50, Kingston 98, German Stewartsville 72, Edgerton Junction 42, De Kalb 29, Stewartsville 115, and St. Joseph 329. No report from Alma branch. Ministry reporting: Elders T. T. Hinderks baptized 1, J. M. Terry baptized 18, W. Lewis, T. W. Chatburn, D. E. Powell baptized 1, F. C. Graham, W. E. Summerfield baptized 1, J. Burlington, A. W. Head, B. Dice baptized 1, L. L. Babbitt, R. Archibald, D. J. Flanders, C. P. Faul, R. C. Marchant, W. Hawkins, J. Wedlock, Sr., baptized 9; Priests J. C. Anderson, W. Haden, C. Hinderks, H. D. Ennis, P. Peterson, A. Nesser, and F. Mauzey; Teachers Z. Best, R. Garlich, and J. Piepergorders; Deacons G. J. Whitehead and G. Mauzey. An appeal was read from William Lewis, which stated that the St. Joseph branch granted J. R. Wedlock a letter of removal, this letter being still in the hands of the clerk of the branch. The appeal was to the effect to restrain the branch from sending this letter until Bro. Wedlock complies with the recommendation of our last conference found in minutes as published in Herald of October 23, 1895, in the Far West district minutes. The matter was referred to a committee, W. E. Summerfield, A. W. Head, and T. J. Mauzey. The committee reported that it found the branch was not knowing to facts in the case at the time of granting the letter, no complaint having been made prior to the granting of the letter, hence the branch had a right to grant the letter. The report was received and the petition denied. A request came from the De Kalb branch asking that A. Nesser, Jr., be ordained an elder, also one from the St. Joseph branch that G. J. Whitehead and Charles Hubacher be ordained priests, and they were so ordained. The matter affecting the ordination of Charles Householder, as referred to Joseph Luff at the last conference, came up for consideration. Bro. Luff having decided that Bro. Householder's ordination was legal, his decision was adopted. A petition from the German branch asking for the release of T. T. Hinderks from the presidency of the district was granted. Officers for the coming quarter: William Lewis president, W. E. Summerfield vice president, C. P. Faul secretary. William Lewis was sustained as Bishop's agent. An appeal was presented by Bro. and Sr. J. G. Pointer. It was referred to a committee, W. E. Summerfield, D. E. Powell, and A. W. Head, to investigate and report with recommendation to the next conference. Delegates to General Conference: T. W. Chatburn, D. E. Powell, William Lewis, T. T. Hinderks, J. M. Terry, and C. P. Faul. Delegates were instructed to vote that the General Conference be held as heretofore, once each year; also to request General Conference to appoint the Secretary and Bishop to procure reduced railroad fare to and from conference hereafter. It was ordered that the district pay the expenses of T. W. Chatburn to General Conference as a delegate, pro rata with the Northeastern Missouri district, according to a communication received from the secretary of the district. Voted to extend an invitation to the brethren of the Northeastern Kansas district to unite with us in holding a reunion next fall. Adjourned to meet with the Pleasant Grove branch, June 20, 1896. Preaching by Brn. A. H. Smith, W. W. Blair, and Joseph Smith.

KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE.

Conference convened with the Foundry Hill branch, February 22, 1896; C. L. Snow president, D. E. Tucker assistant; A. S. Snow clerk, J. H. Winn assistant. Branch reports: Foundry Hill 32, Farmington 80, Caldwell 19. Elders reporting: T. C. Kelley, D. E. Tucker, J. H. Adair, P. B. Seaton baptized 1, C. L. Snow baptized 6, W. R. Smith baptized 4; Priests D. W. Cook, R. Warn; Teachers A. S. Snow, Bro. Ross; Deacons G. P. Snow, W. F. Stephens. Bishop's agent's report sent back for correction. Committee appointed to purchase a horse and buggy reported they had done so. Committee continued. Ordination of Robert Warn to the office of elder was postponed until further evidence of his calling was received. Election of officers: C. L. Snow was sustained president for one year, J. H. Winn clerk. Adjourned to meet at call of president. Preaching by Brn. D. E. Tucker, T. C. Kelley, J. H. Adair, and Robert Warn.

FORSTER.

Annual conference convened in the new chapel at Hamilton, New South Wales, December 28 and 29, 1895; G. R. Wells president, C. S. McLaren secretary, assisted by J. R. Taylor. Branch reports: Balmain 76; 46 baptized, 1 received. Tuncurry 74; 2 removed, 1 expelled. Nambucca 56; no change. Wallsend 42; 3 removed. Hamilton 26; gain 9. Scattered members: Increase of 5 by baptism. Ministry reporting: Elders G. R. Wells baptized 28, John Kaler baptized 23, H. Broadway baptized 4, A. Seaberg, R. Ellis, E. J. Haworth, W. Clark, J. Dickinson, J. Wright, T. Gregory; Priests J. B. Hoyle, C. A. Davis, C. S. McLaren, W. Lewis; Teachers G. Lewis, J. Smith. Branch spiritual reports: Tuncurry, by president J. Wright, fairly good generally. Nambucca, by Sr. Ada Ballard, fair, and improving rapidly since the adoption of "Zion's Religio" in the branch. Sunday school report: Austral branch, 84 members; conditions and prospects splendid. Branch representative votes allotted as follows: Sydney 13, Tuncurry 13, Nambucca 10, Wallsend 7, Hamilton 5. Resolved that the revised Book of Rules be adopted by this district as the standard of procedure in all its deliberative assemblages, and that priests, teachers, and deacons shall have power and authority to vote equally with elders. Bishop's agent, John Wright, reported: Balance on hand at last report £5. 19s. 1d.; total receipts for year £34. 18s. 6d.; total expenditures for year $18. 7s. 1d.; balance on hand £22. 10s. 6d. This was duly examined and adopted. Committee on last year's reunion discharged. Resolved that each branch shall contribute the sum of 1s. 6d. to purchase and distribute among editors of leading papers, and branches of this district first numbers of General Conference edition of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. After considerable discussion it was resolved that the name of this district shall now be changed from Forster to Sydney. A resolution from the Sydney branch changing its name to Balmain was submitted and received district indorsement. Resolved that Brn. J. F. Burton, J. W. Wight, and J. W. Gillen be appointed delegates to represent this district at the forthcoming General Conference. Resolved that this district shall not give any instructions to its delegates to General Conference regarding the question of excluding political speakers from our chapels. District officers were sustained as follows: G. R. Wells president, H. Broadway vice president, C. S. McLaren secretary, George Lewis assistant secretary, John Wright Bishop's agent. An expression of confidence in our traveling ministry and the officers of the church generally was recorded. A motion that our next district conference be held in June next was subjected to the yea and nay vote (chiefly to exemplify this particular mode of voting), with the result of 1 for, 64 against. It was subsequently resolved that our next district conference be held on the last Saturday and Sunday in the year 1896, and further resolved that it be held in Sydney. Resolved that branch delegates present shall recommend to their respective branches that an event of a suitable nature be held therein to commemorate the advent of the gospel message to these shores, through the media of the beloved Brn. Wandell and Rodger deceased. Preaching by Elder J. Kaler. A vote of thanks was accorded the Hamilton and Wallsend Saints for their kindness to visiting Saints.

"Archdeacon Govett," says the Rock, London, "calls attention to the deep and widespread mischief which has been for years silently effected by the illustrations in Punch. Since a Roman Catholic became its editor, scarcely a week has passed in which our bishops, our clergy, and the nonconforming ministers have not been made the subject of some objectionable caricature, delineating them in some unmanly, cowardly, ridiculous, or contemptible aspect."

PHILADELPHIA.

Convention convened at Brooklyn, New York, March 7, at 1:30 p. m. The superintendent, Mrs. A. H. Parsons, not being present, the assistant, William F. Atkinson, took charge. The association in all its deliberations indicated improvement and a desire to move on and keep pace with the advance move in the Sunday school work. The district now numbers five schools, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Baldwin, Broad River, and New Park, with a membership of 204. Treasurer's report shows $2.64 on hand at last report, received since $6.21; expenses $0.85; on hand $8. It was thought best that hereafter the association hold its convention separate from the district conference, hence an adjournment was had to convene in Broad River, Connecticut, in August, time to be designated by the superintendent, W. F. Atkinson. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Wm. F. Atkinson, of Bank, Maryland, superintendent; A. R. L. Gunn associate superintendent; E. B. Hull, No. 2716 Darien Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, secretary; John Zimmerman treasurer. Business passed off pleasantly and an entertainment was in vogue for the evening, providing the conference would allow the association the time, which was graciously granted. The house was filled to overflowing. The entertainment was composed of singing, recitations, readings, and dialogues, with instrumental music interspersed. As a whole it was a success, and we trust it may waken within the souls of many who were present, a more and intense interest in the Sunday school work. All the schools reported in a growing condition, New Park Sunday school having been organized within the past six months. Thus closed an interesting convention. [By request of the secretary, this report was furnished by Bro. A. H. Parsons.—Ed.]

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.

Convention convened at Netawaka, February 21, at eleven a. m.; Sarah Ann Parker superintendent, James Burns secretary pro tem. Schools reporting: Scranton 50, Netawaka 34, Atchison 46, Fanning 55. The following officers were elected for the next four months: Sarah A. Parker superintendent, Mary Miller assistant superintendent, Mary Hudgens secretary, Sr. Cairns treasurer. The outlook in this district is good for better work in the Sabbath school. Closed with an entertainment in the evening. Adjourned to meet at Atchison, June 19, at ten a. m.

NORTHWESTERN KANSAS.

Association convened at Blue Rapids, Kansas, March 6, at 7:30 p. m., about thirty being present. William Landers superintendent, Ella M. Landers secretary. The following schools reported: Hope, at Minneapolis; Zion's Hope Union, of Clay Center; Zion's Hope, of Minersville; and Blue Rapids. Constitution and By-Laws of General Association read. Moved and carried that we take the proper steps to join the General Sunday School Association. W. S. Pender, then being called upon, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the Sunday school work. J. T. Davis also spoke words of encouragement, of the good that has been and can be done by this branch of church work. Then followed short talks by several, and a lively interest seemed to be manifest by all present, and a general good feeling that we are moving in the right direction. Adjourned to meet subject to the call of the superintendent.

POTTAWATTAMIE.

Convention convened at Council Bluffs, February 23, at two p. m.; A. E. Dempsey superintendent, Julia E. Hansen secretary, pro tem. Number of schools reporting 5. Report of treasurer read and accepted. The following officers were elected for the year 1896: Julia E. Hansen superintendent, Grace Beebe assistant superintendent, Ada E. Scott secretary and treasurer. The delegates chosen to represent the district at the General Association were as follows: W. W. Blair, T. W. Williams, and Julia E. Hansen. Isaac Carlile, H. N. Hansen, and A. E. Dempsey reported work done in the district. Resolved that we request the General Association to designate the superintendent and assistant superintendent as ex officio members of the district association. Voted that the General Association be requested to state upon what basis the delegates be elected by Sunday schools to the district association.

Voted that we instruct our delegates to the coming General Association to seek to have the association amend article 4 of by-laws, by inserting the words, "if practicable" after the word "must," so as to read, "The superintendent must, if practicable, be a Latter Day Saint in good standing; persons not Latter Day Saints are eligible to other offices." The superintendent, assistant superintendent, and secretary were chosen to act as committee on program for the coming convention. Adjourned to meet Friday, at two p. m., before the convening of the early fall district conference at same place as conference is held.

REUNION NOTICE.

To the Saints of Minnesota and the Dakotas:—As per resolution passed by the Northern Minnesota district conference, there will be a reunion of the Saints held at Fergus Falls, Minnesota. The committee on arrangements met on February 29, 1896, and set the time for said reunion to begin, on June 20, at ten a. m., and continue over two Sundays. It is the desire of the committee to make this meeting a success in every particular; therefore we ask the hearty cooperation of all the Saints that the meeting may result in good. The committee has agreed to purchase a new tent for the mission, and asks all to come to its assistance with the means to carry out the desire of said committee, that the work of God may be carried on to victory. There are members enough in the three States to purchase a good large tent, and the cost per head will not exceed fifty cents. Certainly we can make that small sacrifice that we may spread the gospel to fallen humanity.

The committee wills to make this meeting the model effort of this mission. Will you help us? President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley have expressed a desire to be with us, and the committee hereby extends them a cordial invitation, also the missionaries in the mission, and any others who feel that they can aid us in this meeting. The committee consists of the following brethren: I. N. Roberts, W. W. McLeod, William Nunn, W. W. Gould, William Barnhard, H. B. Fay, and F. B. Sharman. Each one of the committee is to solicit moneys for the tent. All parties sending means for this purpose will send them to Bro. W. W. Gould, Battle Lake, Minnesota. Everybody come to this meeting, and come prepared to stay until its close. Hay, straw, and other things needful will be looked after and arrangements published later on. Yours truly,

I. N. ROBERTS,
Chairman and Secretary.

BEWARE.

Recent development necessitates the following advice, to the Saints in England, and Wales: One William Smith, claiming to be a member of the Reorganized Church, has, under false promises, extorted money from some bona fide members of the church at Headingly, Yorkshire, near Leeds, England.

We the undersigned therefore advise the Saints not to countenance, receive, nor fellowship any as members of the church unless presenting evidence of their membership; and even if this is done, be very cautious in loaning money. And we especially advise that none be received as representatives of the church unless evidence of a proper ordination is produced.

Further: While we believe it commendable in acting the part of the "good Samaritan," at least (if possible) in alleviating present suffering, the Saints are under no necessity to aid financially those who are not in the missionary fields by virtue of a legitimate appointment.

And we further advise that if necessity compels any brother to leave his home in quest of employment, as a breadwinner for self and dependents, that he secure a letter of recommend or introduction from the president of the district to which he belongs; and in the event of his happening in a town or city where Saints are found that they assist the unfortunate by a meal or two, and a night's lodging, if possible. For how do they know but that in the changes of life they themselves may be similarly placed or situated. In these trying times Saints should be benevolent and kind to each other in life's uneven journey.

Missionary in Charge.

BORN.

BIRCH.—Ralph Earlscoret, son of Mr. William and Sr. Mary Eliza Birch, was born October 14, 1895, and blessed at his grandparents' March 1, 1896, by his grandfather, Elder J. B. Wayt, of Glen Easton, West Virginia.

DEWALD.—At Fairbank, Iowa, November 2, 1895, to Bro. and Sr. Milt Dewald, a daughter, and named Daisy Fern. Blessed February 19, by Elder J. S. Roth.

ROTH.—At Sonora, Iowa, August 28, 1895, to Bro. and Sr. William C. Roth, a son, and named Jesse Elmer. Blessed March 17, 1896, by Elder J. S. Roth.

MARRIED.

HOLMES—WOODMAN.—On March 14, 1896, at Montour, Iowa, by Elder J. S. Roth, Mr. John M. Holmes to Sr. Nellie M. Woodman. We hope they will soon be one in gospel bonds.

DIED.

ROBBINS.—Bro. John M. Robbins passed away at his late residence, Attleboro, Massachusetts, February 25, 1896. He suffered but a short time with his final sickness, but had suffered for years with rheumatism. He was born March 16, 1828, in Hampton County, Connecticut. He was baptized by Elder C.

A. Coombs on August 15, 1886. Bro. Robbins was respected and loved by all the Saints who knew him and by a large number of friends outside of the church. He was a loyal member of the G. A. R. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder C. A. Coombs to a large concourse of neighbors, G. A. R. friends, and others, with relatives not a few, and many of the Saints of the Plainville branch in attendance. He leaves a widow and several adult sons, and daughters, and grandchildren to mourn. A. B. P.

HAYER.—Austin Hayer was born July 17, 1826, at Telemarken, Norway; died at his home in Miller Township, La Salle County, Illinois, March 9, 1896. He came to La Salle County in 1843, and has lived in the town of Miller since 1851. He was married January 22, 1846, to Miss Elizabeth Jacobs, who died in 1851, leaving one child. Married again December 23, 1854, to Miss Anna Danielson. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church June, 1861, by Elder John Shippy. Was ordained a priest April 14, 1863, by W. W. Blair and Henry Cuedon. Bro. Hayer has been identified with the early history of this county, and was among the leading citizens in all improvements, leaving behind him a handsomely improved estate, which was all wild prairie when he first settled on it. He leaves besides, a sorrowing wife, four children, and a number of other relatives and friends, who mourn the loss of a kind father, a loving husband, a Christian man, and an esteemed fellow citizen. Funeral services conducted by Elder John B. Roush, assisted by Elder Thomas Hougas.

COLE.—Minerva Cole was born January 22, 1828, in Portage County, Ohio; married to Orin Cole, January 15, 1850; died March 6, 1896. Funeral service by N. C. Enge. Husband, 5 children, and 1 grandchild mourn. She united with the Christian Church in September, 1854. Her testimony before death was that she would unite with the Reorganized Church, having fully accepted the teachings of that body. She hoped for the redemption of her body at the first resurrection. She was kind and compassionate and had the welfare of her fellow creatures at heart. She imparted of her substance to the needy, and specially to the servants of the Lord. May the Lord grant that her husband and children will take courage, and give a declaration like unto her, and obey the gospel.

BABER.—Sr. Ann Baber was born May 22, 1826, in Washington County, West Virginia; died at her home in Dow City, Iowa, March 15, 1896. She was married to Mr. John R. Baber in the fall of 1857. Of this union one son and two daughters still survive her. By her marriage she became stepmother to three sons and three daughters, all of whom revere her as a kind, patient, and loving mother. Sr. Baber was baptized at Deloit, Iowa, May 8, 1867, by Elder Thomas Dobson. Grandpa Baber and children have the sympathy of the entire community. Services were held in Saints' chapel, Dow City, Iowa, March 17, 1896, at eleven a. m., in charge of Elder C. E. Butterworth, the sermon being delivered by Elder J. M. Baker.
