NO SUNDAY IN CAIRO, EGYPT.

HON. D. N. RICHARDSON, in Davenport Democrat. Right here is a good bit of bronze, an old statuette of the Devil. He has, as you see, the bodily form of a man, though his head is that of a beast. The eyes are malign, ears upright and sharp. His hands are closed into fists, his arms swinging out right and left as though aroused to great wrath and intending violence. No; he has no fluked tail—that was an afterthought. But on his head you discover the dual crown, emblem of both Egypts, announcing that his reign is universal. His name is not Satan, but Sit.

Ra was the Lord, God Almighty of Egyptian theology. In the "Precepts of Ptah-hotep," the oldest of all books in the world, written 5,247 years ago, and thousands of years before the first line of the Bible was written, and before the great deluge scare, the name of Ra—of God, is many times repeated; and not once in the plural. He was from lasting unto everlasting, the maker of all things that are made—maker of the earth and the heavens above and hell beneath; maker of gods, men, and devils; and he was maker of Sit, the incarnate essence of sin—him you now see before you.

Sunday in Cairo! Daybreak and partly awake. Though the half open lattice of my chambre au lit steals upon my senses a simple, solemn melody, pleading and harmonious, from the neighboring minaret—the voice of a muezzin calling to prayer. Listen! "Ashadua an la ilaha ill' Allah . . . heyya ala-ssalah." I testify that there is no God but Allah. . . . Come, come to prayer!

"Prayer is the key of paradise!" It never gets rusty in Islam.

There comes no Sunday to Cairo, Friday is the week's holy day in Moselemdom, because on that day Adam was born and Eve given life.

The sound of the church-going bell the ear of the Sphinx hath not heard. On Sunday mankind are about in the streets and the shops. The day cuts no figure with the tradesmen; street peddlers yell their wares without compunction; the lank, laden camel grunts beneath his load, and the Christian sojourners mix in with the mass, or go on their ways the same as all the rest.

Is it wicked? When Moses was here he would have ignored such a question. It was not the first but the seventh day of the week that he wot of. Seven by the Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians, and the rest of the Oriental peoples of old, was invested with peculiar sanctity. Moses knew that the Egyptians invented the week, and that its last day was numbered seven,—seba,—the Sabbath. He knew that Sunday was the first day of the Egyptian week, and that it was in no respect holy. He knew that among Semetic people Sunday was devoted to the Sun, as it is even now, and in that sense it was not in any way sanctified. On arriving at Sinai with his people in hand,—just across the eastern border of Khem, he made know his idea as to the Sabbath through the terms of the Decalogue, and deemed that sufficient.

There is no Sunday in Cairo,—never was any. Our English friends have donkeyed away to the Mokattam quarries to inspect the soil where the great pyramid stone once rested in hopes of finding a relic. Our Yankee contingent in the Mooske bargaining for bangles, silks, and gewgaws, let's tackle the tiffin, make haste to the Bulaq and air out old religions.

You must think of it. This is no fairy tale that I am telling. You find in all our good books, in these latter days, that God created everything that has been created—the high and the low, the good and the bad, the heavens and the earth, the sun, moon, and stars, and even hell and the Devil.

Are the lines parallel? Was not the Egyptian child taught to believe, even as our children are taught to believe, the same things with respect to God and the Devil?

How came it about?

Have you not learned that Moses wrote the first books of the Bible? And does not our Bible declare that Moses was a man of Egyptian education, from the first to the last? and what should he write except of that which he was taught? He knew of Ra as the absolute monarch and ruler over all. Of what else could the Egyptian-taught Moses discourse?

And so, as you see, the God that we worship now is none other than Ra, and the Devil we are now warned to shun and abhor is none other than Sit, whose effigy now stands here on this shelf in front of your eyes.

What then? This, and this only. In matters of God and the Devil, we, of this enlightened era, are no more advised than were the autediluvian Egyptians—no more inspired.

They taught in their schools of theology in that far away time, that Ra had his partisans for good; and that Sit had his partisans for bad. They taught their students that the influences of Ra were for good while those of Sit were for bad. Ra was beneficent; Sit was malevolent. What else do we teach?

Look at this Sit. He made the poisonous plants, he introduced crime, corruption, and madness. The serpent, the scorpion, and the deadly nightshade were his. He brought on disease, war, famine, and murder—even transgression and the fall of mankind were the work of his hand—the hand of this venomous Sit you see with your eyes and may touch with your fingers.

Such is the lesson you learn this bright day in sight of the Sphinx—in sight of the obelisk to which Mary brought Christ in the dark days of Herod, the tetrarch. Is it good? Is it true? It is the Egyptian story of the fall of man from that high estate for which Ra had intended him. It is the way in which the temple divines figured it out before Cain murdered Abel. Have later ages and delving divines made any improvement thereon? Consider!

Here, too, is Osiris, as we find by his statuette. Would you hear a brief story of this man, virgin born? He was the opponent of Sit, a hater of sin, and Sit fought him even to death. Of all the gods he was the first one to die. He was king of the living and the dead. Even so it was taught in the theological schools of Memphis and On. Through the bad influence of Sit, Ra became disgusted with the work of his own hands, and Osiris came upon earth to regulate and mediate, and Sit slew him.

Never leave Egypt without going to the rock caves of Silsils and visit there fair Isis and Osiris,—the Mother and Son. You will see the child in the lap of his Mother. The infantile Savior of poor, fallen, man. You will instantly think of the Madonna painting of the great Italian masters and wonder if this is not the ante-type, the model of all such. You will quiver with wonder as you stand there and gaze. Mother and Son, bearing the emblem of heaven,—the cross well in hand. You may not wish to believe it; but the fact is before you,—and a stone carven fact that was sculptured in rock long hundreds of years before Jesus was born! You may wish that you never had seen it; you may try to dismiss it; try to free your mind from it, as thousands have done; but it will not go from you,—but will go along with you; will sit in your thought to the day of your death,—this rock-carven image of Mother and Son,—that dear Mother Isis and heavenly Child.

But the story runs on: Osiris fought Sit in all his dark ways. Sit compassed his death.

Let me show you this picture, a bas relief sculptured on stone. We are now in the temple of King Seti I., at Abydos. Look well at the picture,—you can never forget it. Osiris has been slain upon earth by the malignant Sit, and has descended to hell! This picture is hell. And here is Osiris. See his emblems of heavenly power—the protective crozier, flagellum, and cross! His head bears the crown of kingship and justice, and the hieroglyphic writings above his head relate the whole story; and before him stand Amentit and others; and he sits on a throne receiving the homage of Truth. Wonderful picture preserved through the ages as though God had decreed that it must not decay. You may hope to forget but your brain stands on guard. You may call it the work of the Devil,—call it sorcery, human delusion,—whatever you like, the tale stands recorded and will not depart.

Who carved it? I know not, nor care. It stands here to tell you and all of that people who lived here long, long ago before Moses was born, before Abraham lived,—the picture of the slain Savior of men, descended to hell.

And did he rise? In verity, yes. Look at the picture here on the stone. It comes from a Theban tomb, and is again to be seen at a temple at Philæ,—the resurrection of Osiris. Despite the Devil, or Sit, he came forth from the tomb and was again worshipped by men,—appeared in the presence of his faithful adherents, and for long centuries after was his mission believed on by millions of people.

A curious story. Yes, and will ever continue to be. It is an old story,—pagan story, if you please; the story of the creation of men, the advent of the Devil,—of Sit, of Ra's repenting himself of the work of his hands; of the coming of a virgin born mediator; of his terrible death; of his descent into hell; of his triumphant return; of his appearance to his devoted followers; his victory over death and the malignant Sit.

You may not believe it. You may even spurn it as sinful, unworthy, as thousands have done; but that wipes out no record nor baffles the truth. Remember that.

Strange people, you say? Were they stranger than we? We are enlightened. Yes; but in what? In these matters have we outstripped the cult of the people of Kem? Have we not copied them right faithfully? Are their laws not largely our own? Please do not answer quickly, but duly consider. Take time; weigh the testimony of the stone,—the rock-carven legends. Impeach them if you can, but do not hastily say that those pagans were liars; but consider as to the things that we have copied from them in establishing our enlightenment. That would be honest. . . .

KEY TO A PERPLEXING SITUATION.

The Presidential campaign upon which the country has already entered presents the most complex political situation which has been witnessed in the United States since the Civil War. The Republican and Democratic parties are shaken to their centers by clashing opinions upon the silver question. The Populist party, and the possibility if not probability of a distinct free coinage party, with a Presidential ticket of its own, serve to increase the confusion and perplexity in which even intelligent and candid observers find themselves. It is at such a time that the reader of Public Opinion appreciates the value of a paper that gives him a fair, unbiased, well-proportioned statement from week to week of the facts and of the drift of discussion. Public Opinion gives its readers a great deal more than this, but this is the thing for which it will be especially sought during the next eight months. Send a postal card to the Public Opinion Co., New York City, for a sample copy and premium offers, or call at this office for information.

MEXICO IS GROWING.

The American people are getting better acquainted with Mexico and the Mexican people than they were, but even now it will probably surprise many to learn that our nearest neighbor on the south has, according to a census taken last October, a population of 14,000,000, or about one-fifth the population of the United States. There are 196 cities and 496 villages, not to speak of towns, ranches, and hamlets in the republic. Mexico will hold an international exposition this year and American business-men who visit it will find that there is a great field in that country for American trade if it were only wisely cultivated.—Springfield Republican.

COME TO CONFERENCE.

THE day, the traditional day, for the convening of the Annual Conference is April 6. That day this year falls on Monday. Should the session last over two Sundays, as has been the usual custom, it will require a stay at Kirtland of thirteen days, from Monday the 6th to Monday the 20th. As it will be quite impracticable for all who intend attending to reach Kirtland in time for the morning session, April 6, without traveling on the Sunday, the Presidency suggests that those intending to attend will make arrangements to reach Kirtland on Saturday, April 4. This will give an opportunity to begin the session promptly on the morning of the 6th, and finish business that week, and still leave the two Sunday sessions undisturbed—the 5th and the 12th.

The preaching services are greatly enjoyed by all, and many attend the conferences for the sake of hearing the preaching. Numbers will be in attendance on the Sundays, both before and at the end of the session. These will be accommodated to the services of two Sundays, if the above suggestion to gather at Kirtland on Saturday the 4th is responded to, without subjecting the conference to wear out the second week in order to prolong the session over the two Sundays after convening on the 6th. It is worth considering.

PROGRESSING.

THE session of the Far West conference which met at St. Joseph, in the Saints' chapel there, Seventeenth and Faraon Streets, was a very good one. The business was done with promptness and dispatch.

A marked sign of progress was quite noticeable at this conference. Three young men had been recommended by the branches to which they severally belonged for ordination to the offices of priest and elder. Upon the presentation of their names it was evident that they had been properly called to the offices for which they were named. An excellent spirit was manifested by them, and the Spirit was present with the brethren by whom they were ordained. If we mistake not Brethren Arnold Nesser as elder, and G. J. Whitehead and Charles Hubacher as priests, will make an acceptable addition to the local ministry of the branches where they are members and the district at large as well.

They are young men and will take the positions assigned them by the call and ordination with the confidence of their brethren and the direction and sanction of the Spirit. It is an indication of the Lord's pleasure and a token of the impending forward movement this calling of the young men into the ranks of the workers for Christ. Hail to the young men.

Bro. David Chambers has so far recovered from his attack last fall and early winter that he has again been chosen to preside over the Little Sioux district. In a letter to Pres. W. W. Blair, dated Persia, Iowa, March 11, Bro. Chambers reports having an excellent conference at Magnolia. He writes:—

The gifts promised were present in prophecies and tongues unto the melting to tears of some in and some out of the church. O, what a wonderful power is connected with God's Spirit! Love, joy, and gladness of soul take possession at once.

Here, too, the Spirit indicated that certain of the young men were called into the ministry—men of excellent repute and ability. Surely the Lord is remembering the necessities of the work. How wonderful are the ways of the Lord!

THE injunction "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good," by no means involves the necessity or the wisdom of continually proving the same thing; over and over again. To do this is to admit that the thing proved has changed in importance, or that our first examination was a faulty one. In the greater number of the principles and topics connected with the latter-day work, the task of examination for the purpose of proving them has been earnestly undertaken, honestly carried out, and thoroughly done. There remains to us the duty of remaining steadfast in the faith, not attempting to reprove the things approved and held fast, but maintaining in memory the processes of our reasoning and the evidences found to be proof, acceptable and sufficient. This will always keep us in touch with the truth and in fellowship with the spirit of it.

Men say unto us, "Investigate;" and at the same time refuse to hold joint discussions for the purposes of investigation, stating that they have the truth, but refusing to put it to the test of public examination. Are these of the sort referred to by Paul,

For of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts.—2 Tim. 3: 6.

A MISTAKE.

THE branches at Independence, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Lamoni, and some other places have taxed the resources of their members to the utmost to build the church buildings now occupied by them. The branch at Independence has an amount of seven thousand dollars to pay to clear their building. The St. Joseph branch some four thousand. The building at St. Louis is too small and needs to be enlarged; so is the one at Lamoni. It is out of the question for these branches to help other branches until their own debts are paid; so that for other branches to expect aid from them is to be disappointed; for the reason that however good the will, the resources are lacking, notwithstanding the large numbers of members in those branches. The house at Council Bluffs is also too small, and is to be enlarged. The foregoing will account for the fact that but little or no help has been afforded sister branches from these large ones named. Our advice to all is to build only so far as the means are in hand. Keep out of debt.

ELDER JOSHUA R. CLARK and an assistant corps of twenty-eight elders, missionaries of the church in Utah, held a three days' conference at Independence, ending on Tuesday, March 19. They have been laboring in Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri. Among the number is Elder Samuel G. Spencer, son of Daniel Spencer, once resident at Nauvoo. They gathered on the Temple Lot, the lot being in the possession of the Church of Christ (Hedrickites), and with the stone church of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Josephites), formed a group and were photographed to commemorate the occasion. A number of them attended the services at the stone church in the evening and listened to Pres. W. W. Blair's discourse, which was very appropriate to the occasion. The Editor, President Blair, Bro. Moyer, and H. H. Robinson went among them on the Temple Lot and were introduced by Bro. Moyer, who knew several of them. They seemed to be affable and friendly. The Editor had an interview with Elder Spencer at the house of Bro. Joseph Luff on Wednesday morning.

The presence of these Utah missionaries presages that there is to be an active crusade of missionary effort carried on in the United States by the Utah Church. Some of them are sanguine that they will be able to reclaim many of those who have "apostatized" from the Utah dogmas and rule, now that there has been an abandonment of plural marriages; although the doctrine is still held to strongly.

Some of these elders assert confidently that "they are not representing the Utah of thirty years ago, but the Utah of to-day."

This is as wise a thing as they can say. Some go far enough to state that they are not "Brighamites," but if anything other than Latter Day Saints, are "Woodruffites;" meaning, doubtless, that they are not representatives and defenders of "Mormonism," as held and stated in the teachings and practices of President Brigham Young, but are representatives and advocates of the newer Utah, freed from the damaging entanglements and policies of the presidency of Brigham Young, and rejoicing in the broader, better views and policies of the more conservative rule of President Wilford Woodruff, and Utah as a State.

We of the Reorganized Church have never been moved by hatred to the people of Utah; but have done what we did through antagonism to what we had good reasons to know was foreign to the teaching of the primitive church under and by reason of the revelations of God to Joseph the Seer, as left on record in the books of the church, and the revelations of the Lord and his Spirit to us as individuals and as a people; hence we can, without being subject to just censure, or compromising any principle of faith or position, give credence and credit to this new awakening to the good in Mormonism visible in this missionary effort from Utah. Progression to us means the passing from conditions that are bad to those that are better; and this progression should be recognized and acknowledged wherever it may occur. For this reason we give credit where it is due.

Whether the elders sent out from Utah will continue to heed the instructions of their presiding authorities not to discuss with the Josephites, or not, or whether those authorities will continue such instruction, remains to be learned. But, we are impressed with the thought that they cannot expect the elders of the Reorganized Church to remain passive and silent while these elders from Utah are presenting what are deemed errors more or less gross and delusive in the presence of and to the membership of the Reorganized Church. It is a species of moral cowardice to refuse a proper comparison of views on either politics or religion; and it is still greater moral cowardice to let damaging errors go unrebuked. We trust that the elders of the Reorganization will stoutly defend themselves and their charges, in the spirit of courtesy and kindness, remembering always that Christians should never forget to be Christian gentlemen, however provoking the occasion, or desperate the situation in which they are called to act.

What the Reorganization has done it has done openly and fairly. We stand by the merit of our cause, or fall by reason of its demerit. None should be either ashamed or afraid to avow the truth, whether for us, or against us, when such truth is made known to us. At the same time all that is alleged by those who are opposing our work is not truth; hence, until the evidences are presented, examined, and found trustworthy, it is the privilege, the absolute duty of the eldership to dispute the ground claimed or attempted to be occupied. Be careful about taking positions hastily, and upon insufficient evidence. No matter how plausible those positions may seem at first thought, adverse criticism and argument may show them to be untenable. All classes of religionists have some truth. Especially is this true of the various divisions into which believers in the angel's message, the Book of Mormon, and the mission of Joseph Smith, are divided. The duty of the men for the time is to sift the theories held by all, eliminate the error, and cling to the truth. Error, no matter if it be hoary with age and flushed with zeal, has not sanctifying power. It can be but a burden at its best; and the sooner man is freed from it the better for its devotees and the rest of the race. There are half-truths men are obliged to hold and abide by because the whole truth is not known. We cannot afford to let go these half-truths until we are shown the whole truth. Nor is it either essential or safe to exchange a truth with which we are familiar and have evidences of, for one offered to us by others upon unsatisfactory evidences, because it may be alleged to be greater.

The final secret of safety for modern Israel is that they abide as fully as possible in the doctrine of Christ.

The Kansas City Star for March 14 has the following notice of the visit of the Utah elders and their holding conference at Independence:—

About thirty members of the Utah Mormon Church, followers of the branch of the church led by Brigham Young, and of which Wilford Woodruff is president at this time, are in Independence holding missionary meetings, called "the Iowa conference;" but the services are confined to religious services very much like the usual revival meetings of Protestant churches. Elder Joshua R. Clarke, president of the Northern States missions, is the presiding officer. Services will be held this evening at the courthouse and to-morrow at the Music Hall.

This is the first time since the Mormons were driven out, over sixty years ago, that the Utah branch has held any meetings in this city or had representation here. That branch claims to be three hundred thousand strong and believes, with every other branch of the original church, that Independence is the New Jerusalem of the church and that the Temple lot, chosen by divine revelation, will be the site of the grandest temple in the world erected to the Latter Day Saints; that when this temple is erected the Mormons will collect about it in multitudes and build their city of God.

The revelations indicate that the time for the building of this temple is drawing near and the meeting at Independence to-day is but a small advance guard of the Utah Church and presages the organization of a church in Independence. Heretofore the Reorganized Church, the followers of Joseph Smith, Jr., and the Hedrickites, were the only branches with an organized following at "the city of the temple lot."

How and whence these newspaper reporters get their information is a curiosity to men interested in the matters written about, and who are likely to know of them. Rumors are circulating that these Utah elders have stated that they would soon begin building on the Temple Lot. No evidences of such intention are known to the men in possession of the lot, so far as we could learn on our late visit to Independence. Nor is it probable that the men from Utah would make statements of that import under present existing conditions; they know too well the effect of rumors of that sort. The fact remains, however, that the "church in the valleys of the mountains" has been lately represented in Jackson County, a thing made possible by the labors and life of the Reorganized Church, with others who believe in the establishment of righteousness and peace among men.

CONSANGUINEOUS MARRIAGES.

EVIL RESULTS.

WITH regard to deaf-mutism, statistics show for the most part, that the closer the degree of relationship between the parents, the more numerous are the number of the deaf-mute children born. For example, one marriage between an aunt and nephew produced three deaf-mutes. Four marriages between uncle and niece produced eleven deaf-mutes. Twenty-six marriages between first cousins produced thirty-eight deaf-mutes. Sixteen marriages between second cousins produced twenty-eight deaf-mutes. Forty-seven marriages between blood relatives produced seventy-two deaf-mutes. These are important facts, which leave no measure of doubt as to the influence of the intermarriage of blood relatives in causing deaf-mutism.—Information.

The foregoing furnishes an interesting object lesson and one that contains much food for thought, and such food as the thoughtful will not disregard. Nature makes her protests against disregard or violations of her laws, and speaks in no uncertain tones when they are infringed upon. Though her language is plain and unmistakable, she is not harsh, but just and merciful; for man learns through her corrections not only that he cannot disregard her with impunity, but that all her ways are "true and righteous altogether;" that in them there are no contradictions. The Intelligence behind Nature is One whose "glory is intelligence." He rules in the eternal fitness of things, and his laws are based upon or express true principles. Regarded and observed, the proper relationships of all things are determined and made manifest, and all violations of the law of true adaptabilities avoided.

BRO. C. R. DUNCAN, Lebeck, Missouri, the 28th ult. :—

"David Batten, who came here from Harrison County, last summer, is located between here and Harwood, near Cedar Creek. He has raised one crop and likes the country very much. He is a member of the Church of Latter Day Saints and like most of those people, is a good, industrious, honest man. Of course he takes the Sun, and several other papers."

The above clipping is from the El Dorado Sun of the 24th inst. It is quite significant in view of the fact that Clark Braden has made one of the greatest efforts of his life to kill "Mormonism" in El Dorado.

A few days ago the writer was in conversation with Banker Cruce and he remarked: "One thing I like about your people, they encourage industry." The Saints stand well with the business men of El Dorado. So may it continue.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. W. WIGHT, Persia, Iowa, 26th:—

Had the pleasure of baptizing Mrs. A. J. Yarrington last Sunday, at Woodbine, in the midst of a driving snowstorm. Quite an excitement at Needmore, with debate talked of. Am feeling well, with ninety-four sermons to my credit in eighty-eight days, also four marriages; ten have been baptized. Trust you will have a spiritual feast at Kirtland.

Bro. J. W. Burget, of Cleveland, Ohio, sends us the following, dated March 22, concerning rates between Detroit and Cleveland, on the lake:—

Please give notice to Michigan Saints to notify Willard J. Smith, No. 485 Campbell Avenue, Detroit, Michigan, if they desire to go from Detroit to Cleveland and return, when going to the General Conference and Sunday School Convention. It will be much cheaper, as they will give us reduced rates from the 20th to the 6th of April to those going, and return at any time you wish, if the weather will permit boats to cross the lake. Take notice, W. J. Smith, of Detroit; see manager of Detroit and Cleveland boat line; arrangements made by J. W. Burget, of Cleveland, Ohio.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. FRANK CRILEY, our Business Manager, will be present at the coming Kirtland Conference with subscription lists of Herald Office publications; also with a full line of books and general church literature. He will be prepared to take subscriptions for HERALD, Leaves, Hope, and Quarterlies; also to receive payments on Herald Office book accounts, etc.

Bro. G. J. Waller, who expected to leave Honolulu, Hawaii, his home this year, to visit conference and the States, has decided to remain at home for the work's sake and with a view to remove permanently next year. The work at Honolulu is moving fairly under Bro. Waller's management.

Bro. Hubert Case, missionary to Society Islands, returned from Rarotonga to Papeete lately. He wrote that Bro. L. R. Devore and wife would leave the Islands for the States and home this summer. They have labored in that far-off mission faithfully. Bro. Case states that he thinks one, two, three, or four active young men should be sent over to labor there. If the conference so decides there are some excellent young ministers ready for that field.

We want an experienced man for the Hawaiian field. An active married man, able to take care of himself and help others, is the sort of man for that field.

Arrivals at Lamoni include Bro. and Sr. I. L. Rogers and Brn. J. W. Gilen and F. A. Smith. Members of the Twelve have departed for Kirtland. Others of the ministry and laity leave as we go to press.

Elders Daniel Walker and — Fackrell, of the Utah Church are to labor in Decatur County, Iowa, this season. They ask our people to "investigate," but refuse open and public discussion. They propose a "house-to-house canvass" of the people of their field, especially the members of the Reorganized Church. We hope our people will treat these elders as Christians should treat those who may differ from them in religious thought.

There are others of these elders from Utah who will labor where the Reorganized Church is represented in other places than Decatur County, Iowa, and the same wish for courteous treatment we express to the Saints of Decatur, we extend to those places.

These elders from Utah express the sentiment that they represent the Utah of to-day, not the Utah of thirty years ago. They also express the idea that "succession" is now the chief difference between the two churches. If they are sincere and intelligent they must see that if succession is really an issue the causes on which the difference is founded began and existed more than thirty years ago, and involve the rule of President Brigham Young, and the occurrences transpiring from June 27, 1844, onward. Nor can any amount of zeal, or assumed meekness and good feeling towards us of the Reorganized Church, or any pity for us as "misguided" good people, or "apostates," cover up the question, or evade the discussion of the issue. If succession is a difference it is a live issue — made alive by acts done during the period from 1844 to 1852 and onward; and neither ignoring those acts, nor refusing to discuss them will remove them from the controversy.

The Church of Christ, (Hedrickites,) at Independence, Missouri, through Messrs. Frisbie and Hedrick, have asked of Brn. Kelley and Criley, President of Board of Publication and Business Manager of Herald Office, the courtesy of a copy of the HERALD mailing list, with a view to sending specimen copies of their paper, the Searchlight, to HERALD subscribers. This has been granted, and our readers may look for the Searchlight to be sent to them. Should they wish to subscribe for that paper and have it continued to them, they should notify

J. R. Haldeman, George Hedrick, or George Frisbie, Independence, Missouri; if they do not want the paper they should return the second number sent to them with notice to the above-named persons to that effect.

The wood engraving outline which appears in this issue of the Sunday school department is the work of Bro. Burdette Bergerson, an employee of the Herald Office. It is his first effort in this direction and was made to avoid delay and expense incident to sending to Chicago for an engraving. He has been furnished tools, and we hope to have his assistance as he improves in this line of work.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Patience strengthens the spirit, sweetens the temper, stifles anger, extinguishes envy, subdues pride; it bridles the tongue, restrains the hand, and tramples upon temptations."

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., March 9.

Sr. Audie Anderson; Corresponding Secretary:—As it is nearing the close of another year, when the executive committee will look for a report from the societies throughout the church, we thought it would be well perhaps to let you know what progress our society here in Independence is making. Our secretary will no doubt furnish you with a statistical report. As not many more than one half the membership attended the meetings the last year and still less the previous year, we have inquired for the cause, and find that some lived a long distance from the place of meeting and others excuse themselves because of home cares and the number of different meetings they have been expected to attend; but there are many of us who recognize the importance of a regular attendance.

On April 25, 1895, the following were unanimously elected officers for the ensuing year: Abbie A. Horton chairman, Maggie Berg secretary, and Mary Robinson treasurer. At that time a resolution was passed requesting the Prayer Union to meet with us at the church on the 3d Thursday of each month, and that we change our time of meeting to three o'clock. The Sisters of the Prayer Union met at 1:30, making the united session from 1:30 to 4:30 p. m. The programs furnished through the Herald were always used and clippings bearing upon some feature of the work have been furnished by the chairman and subsequently sent to the Home Column.

We were much interested in the readings from Trumbull's Child-Training and they were generally followed by an interesting discussion. The visiting committees have not always been successful in getting the sisters to come out, but those who did attend always seemed ready to testify to the benefits derived from a membership in the society, to obtaining a clearer sense of the rights and possibilities of children, of the sanctity of home, and our own great responsibilities in regard to purity of word and action.

After cold weather set in the Prayer Union thought best to meet from house to house, and at one of the meetings it was moved and sustained that the Prayer Union invite the Daughters of Zion (who were meeting at the church) to meet with them on every Thursday; and on the third Thursday, the daughters have the privilege of going through with their program, the Prayer Union opening the meeting; but in a short time they separated, the daughters concluding it best to meet on the third Wednesday of each month and at the church. The reason assigned for this step was that there was not sufficient time for the devotional exercises of the Prayer Union and for the program of the daughters in one afternoon, so we meet on separate days.

In regard to the collections, our treasurer takes up at every meeting a voluntary contribution. Having so many calls for collections it was deemed by the society burdensome to adopt the method of the committee, that is, of collecting five cents at each meeting from each member who was considered "able to give."

The young daughters have never been very strong in numbers but they evidently are strong in purpose; and although those who come are interested and zealous, yet, as is the case also with the older daughters, there are a few to embrace these good opportunities for doing good and self-development compared with the large number of our sisters in this branch. They have also organized a physical culture class. The costume adopted is both attractive, beneficial, and suitable, the exercises chaste, graceful, and healthful; and we believe that every young lady who takes hold with a will in this particular line will ultimately be well rewarded for her effort. The books we have been studying, the leaflets, and the articles which have been published and selected for our reading, have been the kind to instruct; and if the members of our societies could induce others to come and work with them how much greater would be our influence! How true it is that "God helps those who help themselves," and if we could take the time to look more closely and prayerfully into the subjects concerning our physical, mental, and moral being, we would discover our minds to broaden on account of our increased knowledge and our spiritual needs be more fully supplied.

As some one has said concerning the good literature of this age, these subjects which have been brought forth for our inspection and study, may become a mighty agency for righteousness on earth. Perhaps but few of the older ones have had the privilege of studying the structure and functions of the organs in the human and plant life, and even those who have may learn yet more of the wonderful lesson of man's possibilities and of God's gracious beneficence.

How zealously ought we all to grasp the kindly helping hand which is offered through these sources of information! and as we heed the injunction, "Man, know thyself," and our needs increase, God will open up the way for us and supply greater facilities for our advancement. What may we not expect as our workers increase in number and their means for instruction increase, and especially if we live so as to receive God's Holy Spirit with all its power to impress and strengthen and help.

Let us be encouraged to go on, and do all we can to help others to advance with us, and may success crown the efforts of our sisters at the coming conference in whatever way may be devised for the advancement of the Daughters of Zion.

Yours in bonds,
ABBIE A. HORTON.

SYMPATHY.

O, there has many a tear been shed,
And many a heart been broken,
For want of a gentle hand stretched forth,
Or a word in kindness spoken.

Then O, with brotherly regard
Greet every son of sorrow;
So from each tone of love his heart
New hope, new strength, shall borrow.

That day is best wherein we give
A thought to others' sorrows;
Forgetting self we learn to live,
And blessings born of kindly deeds
Make golden our to-morrows.

Love is the medicine of all moral evil. By it the world is to be cured of sin.—Selected.

MEMORY TEXTS FOR APRIL.

"Learn of me, and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit and you shall have peace in me. I am Jesus Christ; I came by the will of the Father, and I do his will."—Doc. and Cov. 18: 2.

Memory Verses.—1 John 5: 3, 4.

Thursday, April 9.—Our families. Prayer for the members of our families by name, and for the families of each other and those of the ministry. For the youth of the church in general.

Memory Verses.—Jude 17-25.

Thursday, April 16.—Missions and Sunday school work, and the church publications. Also for the poor, the sick, and afflicted.

Memory Verses.—Mark 16: 15-18.

Thursday, April 23.—Zion, our country, its welfare and prosperity, and its speedy purification by the reception of truth. That the scattered remnants may be gathered in, and the kingdom of Christ be established.

Memory Verses.—Micah 4: 1-5.

Thursday, April 30.—The gathering of Israel to their own land, and the restoration to them of the pure gospel in its fullness, and its acceptance by them to their everlasting peace.

Memory Verses.—Amos 9: 14, 15.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A good story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache, or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good-humored man or woman is always welcomed, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere, and is a nuisance as well.—Selected.

REVIEWING NECESSARY IN ALL GOOD TEACHING.

(Read before the Fremont, Iowa, district Sunday school convention at Shenandoah, Iowa, March 6, 1896, by Joseph Roberts, of Thurman, Iowa.)

REVIEWING.	Purpose.	Test	For Teacher.
			For Pupil.
	Results.	Retention.
		Association.	Comparison.
		Success.	Contrast.
		Development.
		Necessary Because Pedagogical.

IN presenting this broad, inexhaustible subject for the consideration of teachers and experienced workers of the Sunday school, it will be necessary to assume many things that otherwise would not be expedient before a less experienced body. If we succeed in presenting a general outline of the subject matter, with, perhaps, a few illustrations, it will be all that is intended.

Reviewing, as an element of the teaching process, has a threefold purpose. 1. As a test. 2. To impress upon the mind more firmly the truths already taught. 3. To associate ideas in their proper relations. Hence we see the broad significance of the term "review" as applied to teaching.

Though it may be possible to teach without reviewing, yet there is wanting that element of success which is sure to follow a wise method in review. The teacher may be abundantly qualified in what might be termed all the essentials of the teaching process; but in what way is she able to ascertain whether lasting impressions are being made upon the mind, or whether her efforts are being spent in vain? And again, by what means are we to know as to the measure of success of our teaching only by a viewing again the truths once presented? So we conclude that it is not only a test to ascertain the progress of the pupil, but equally as good a mode to test the work of the teacher; for if by a thorough review of that which should have been taught we find we have failed in securing our intended results, there is something wrong somewhere, and that somewhere is nowhere but in the methods of the one attempting to teach.

This testing work must not be looked upon as separate from all instruction, but should be made a part of the teaching itself.

It is not alone in the testing work that reviewing is such an essential factor in the efforts to gain knowledge, but its worth is demonstrated in the impressing of the truths which the teacher has caused the pupil to know. It is a universal law that the constant repetition of anything tends to a degree of perfection. We notice this fact not only in the child who is learning to read, but likewise in the more mature minds. Hardly from the reading of some great author's masterpiece, is the adult mind able to grasp the thought, and then but vaguely, much less to retain it; but by a repetition the truth begins to shine more vividly and impressively.

The pianist who has made his first attempt at the instrument finds how provokingly stubborn his fingers pass over the keyboard and how utterly impossible it is to strike every key at exactly the right time; but by a continual repetition he becomes so proficient in the use of the instrument that it seems almost a part of his being. So it is with the impression upon the mind of truths taught by the teacher. As every stroke of the hammer drives the nail more deeply into the wood, likewise every repetition of a truth makes a deeper impression in the child mind. Then how better may a truth be repeated than by a systematic and almost constant review? Hence, we see that too much importance cannot be attached to this particular phase of review.

Never fail to impress, though the major portion of the time is given to reviewing. The teacher's good judgment and knowledge of her work will cause her to review at stated times, at beginning of lesson, at close of lesson, and at any time in the body of the lesson. Teaching may be necessary to cause the pupil to know a truth for time, but it takes reviewing to cause him to retain it eternally.

Reviewing for the purpose of associating truths, or new viewing as a whole, properly belongs to stated or periodical reviews. Reviewing the truth taught, as a whole, differs from reviewing for the purpose of impressing in this respect. A new viewing not only impresses, but there is an additional knowledge of the relations of the parts to the whole, while reviewing for the purpose of impressing is a repetition of the same truth, nothing new presented.

Time will not permit to show how man develops from infancy to age by this particular phase of the review work; but allow a simple illustration to explain what is meant by a new view of the whole, or the association of the parts. In our present quarter's work we learned the details of the birth of Moses; how he was preserved; the murdering of an Egyptian; the call of Moses; and the choosing of Aaron. These events were impressed so thoroughly upon the minds by reviewing that the majority of the pupils in the Sunday school could give the exact details of each. But before they are able to understand their relation to each other, and that they have a common relation there must be a review in which there is an entire new viewing. In our new viewing or associating the five events into one, we find they go to make up a new truth which we please to call Preparing to deliver Israel. In the first place or event a child was born; second, he was preserved; third, he killed an Egyptian, which killing caused him to flee for his life into a place where it was designed he should be prepared and fitted for the responsibilities soon to be placed upon him; fourth, he received his commission or authority to lead; fifth, Aaron was chosen for his assistant. Associating the five events together and viewing them as a whole gives us the new view.

EXPLANATION. The above was placed on the blackboard. First, the lines were drawn simply to write the events. Then the links were drawn at the bottom, which represents the events before taking our new view. Then erasing the links at the bottom, and placing them at the top make the chain or new view.

This viewing, which we have just illustrated, is the vital principle of mental development. It is that great means by which our sciences are wrought or in other words, it is classifying that which we have been caused to know. In Sunday school work, it is the means by which we should classify that which we learn from time to time. All history should be learned in the same way. And this is why some have such an extensive view and knowledge of history (sacred and profane) as one continuous whole.

Do you ask why some in our Sunday schools are getting a broad, systematic, and logical view of the subject, while others are simply learning a few memory verses and golden texts parrot fashion? Examine for yourself and find, if you can, where the success lies. And do you call it good teaching?

The results of a systematic review may now be briefly stated. 1. It results in a successful Sunday school; for without it, teachers, your work may be counted as chaff. 2. It results in mental development, which will cause millions to rejoice in their strong memories. Without it millions will grope in darkness and bewail their weak memories.

Reviewing is necessary: 1. Because without it the Sunday school is a failure, though it may live and its teachers and workers be enthusiastic and full of the knowledge of all other requisites, yet it fails to accomplish its purposed end. 2. It is necessary because it is pedagogical. It is that by which a pupil is lead into a state of development,

The cause of the Sunday school is so noble and important that the teacher cannot afford to neglect her review work. If you have but two hours in which to prepare your lesson for a recitation, devote one half hour to a preparation for bringing out the thought in the lesson, one hour and a half to your review work. I esteem the importance of reviewing of just such proportions to good teaching.

A GOOD TEACHER'S WORK.

"My teacher made me what I am," said a successful business man in our hearing a short time ago; and "what I am" was not so much the knowledge of books as his industry, thoroughness of work, patient waiting for results, and a high-minded, pure-souled manhood. These elements of his character are largely attributed to the teacher who had had the moulding of his habits in early life. The remark is suggestive. Books and their contents are a small portion of the wealth of the world, with which a child's mind should be made acquainted. The teacher who sees only the written text book as a part of the pupil's education, has a narrow vision. The teacher is herself the volume most thoroughly studied, and the life daily lived, in and out of the schoolroom, for a series of terms or years, tells strongly on the unfolding of the child nature. This object lesson is a constant one, and often overbalances all others; and the teacher who can conscientiously say to her pupils, "Be what I am as well as what I teach," will find precept and example the most powerful cohelpers in her work. The child is a bundle of habits, and the making of correct ones is a large part of the good teacher's work.—The Fountain.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, Feb. 15.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing to your columns I have done but little work of consequence. Have scattered tracts, Heralds, etc., among the people of Raratonga, both native and English.

Matters were not as we were led to believe they were before we went to Raratonga; we expected to find some seven or eight Saints, heads of families who would gladly give us a home and supply our wants. Instead we found but one, who at the time of our arrival had held fast to the truth. Afterwards our staunch old brother Ioane Purahui came from Aitutaki, and remained with us during our stay. Though he is bitterly persecuted he never thinks of retreat. In his broken English he says, "They say me fool; I say, Me fool, the Bible make me so." Would that we had many such faithful ones among the Hervey group.

I baptized none on Raratonga, but think our stay there was not entirely profitless. We made many warm, personal friends, who would be loth to hear us, or our belief, evil spoken of. Much prejudice has been removed, and I think that should another white missionary of our faith go there he would be well received.

We could not stay longer as we lacked means for obtaining the necessaries of life. Indeed we were almost destitute at times, but each time we were made to realize this truth: "The Lord will provide."

We had a pleasanter voyage than usual as we came from Raratonga to Papeete. My wife was less seasick than formerly, and the little six-weeks' old baby girl and myself as well as when on land. Hope we will do as well on the "Evanelia," as we start the 18th inst. for Manihi, where conference is to be held.

How badly we need more laborers in this mission! We earnestly hope more will be sent this spring. We hope for an interesting, profitable conference. We pray that the Spirit of the Master may be with us as we meet together, also with the like assembly in our native land. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, Your brother,

HUBERT CASE.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 27.

Editors Herald:—By letter just received from Bro. J. S. Hommes, of Garey, Santa Barbara County, California, I learn that one Dr. A. J. Clark, of Los Angeles, when "rid-dling Mormonism," as he boasted, said that the Reorganized Church "admitted the plurality of Gods," and quoted me as indorsing it in a conversation with him in Los Angeles. To this I reply:—

1. I do not remember to have ever, at any time, discussed the Godhead with him, in any manner; and,

2. If I ever did so, it must have been very brief and desultory in a running conversation, and my remarks must have been in keeping with Genesis 1: 26; John 5: 17-27; Hebrews 1: 2-10; with Psalms 45: 6, 7; also with Doctrine and Covenants, Lecture on Faith, section 5: 1-3; and Doctrine and Covenants section 18: 1, 2; 26: 1, etc., for such is my faith and teaching, and ever has been.

CENTER JUNCTION, Io., March 26.

Editors Herald:—Enroute for Ohio, having been previously invited by Bro. and Sr. W. B. Thomas of this place to attend the General Conference at Kirtland, (near the home of our childhood,) when it should again convene at that historic place, with them and at their expense, I arrived here last Friday morning. Finding them not ready to go as soon as expected, I regretted somewhat that I had not remained in Lamoni a day or two longer while there, spending also Sunday last at home, in Van Wert, especially attending the regular meetings of our branch in Leon, giving opportunity for the baptism of our little daughter whose eighth birthday was but the Thursday before, the day on which I left home, commending her to the special watch-care of the Lord, more so, if possible, than usual, since she had anxiously awaited the day when she might obey the pospel, taking a place safe within the fold of Christ.

Neither could I be reconciled to the situation or see why I had been permitted to break away from the environments that would have kept me at home one week longer, till attending the Butternut Grove Sunday school, near Onslow, where were gathered a goodly number of the Saints and their children, to whom I preached, after the school, from the text, "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him," as led by the Holy Spirit. Soon after the meeting, while some of us were yet at the home of Bro. Rill Green, where the meetings are held, Sr. Edwin Green's son of fourteen years requested baptism. As the afternoon was nearly gone and the river three miles away, Monday morning at nine o'clock was agreed upon as the hour for repairing to the place of baptism. Bro. Ruben's example was followed by his sister Grace, of twelve, their cousin Pearl Sutton of seventeen, and two of Bro. Rill Green's boys of ten and fourteen; making five precious souls giving themselves to Christ in early life, thus taking advantage of the opportunity to do a lifelong work for the Lord, and causing the little band of Saints "gathered where the waters glide," to rejoice. 'Twas easy now to see why I was here, instead of being at home a little longer, or further on the way to Ohio. I have learned again the lesson, taught in the Book of Mormon, to acknowledge the hand of the Lord in all things.

Yours, rejoicing in the gospel work,
O. B. THOMAS.

DEFIANCE, Iowa, March 23.

Editors Herald:—We were called here a short time ago to hear a Mr. Vankirk "expose Mormonism." The request being an urgent one, and district missionary in charge desiring our presence, if able to venture, we thought of the anecdote of a man asking a colored brother if the Lord should tell him to jump through a stone wall, would he do it? He said he would jump and leave it to the Lord to make the hole in the wall for passage. Although some at home place queried as to the wisdom of our going, we felt like trying, and to trust God for the balance.

Bro. Butterworth "took notes" and helped otherwise, and we were blessed for the work of the hour each evening during the reply. Had full houses, good attention.

One of the "Christian" members told us that Elder Hunt had been here lecturing on the Book of Mormon and they thought they would have Elder Vankirk come so the people could "hear the other side." But on the last evening of the gentleman's series, by permission, we told the people of this statement, but that we considered that Mr. Vankirk's lectures had not shown "the other side" of Elder Hunt's lectures, not a single argument having been met. We considered his talk "a side" of the question, and desired the friends to hear the other side of this side just concluded. He advised the people to go and hear. He was a twenty-dollars-a-week edition of an exposé. The replies so wrought up our Disciple friends that they wrote to their "Goliath" at Oklahoma, but he could not come.

The matter was like a man delivering lectures on the "divinity of the Bible," and then have Col. Ingersoll come after with one of his gainsaying talks, and call it "the other side!"

We were under the necessity one evening of listening to a rehash of the Spaldanic emetic; worse than a "threadbare" tale. The other portions of his lectures were simply Bradentic echoes. He managed to say: "impostor Joe," "rascals and scoundrels," "idiocy," "Mormon fallacies," etc.

Respectfully,
J. F. McDOWELL.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 20.

Editors Herald:—The end of another conference year finds me at home for a few days with my family. But my stay will be short, for the 1st of April will soon be here, then away for conference, then to my field of labor. As I write the thought comes, What of the year to come? will it be as the last, or will I be able to profit by the one gone and avoid the mistakes made and be able to come up a little higher? I hope at least to make some advancement in the divine life and do more towards spreading the gospel and building up the Master's kingdom here upon the earth.

So far as the work in Minnesota is concerned, there has been a gradual improvement, and we feel to take courage, and if sent back there shall enter upon the duties of another year feeling that at the end of the year we shall be able to report more work done and more brought into the kingdom. The last year has been one of peculiar experience to me because of that which I have had to meet, both from within and without. But in it all the Master has been with me and has forewarned of beforehand, so that I was not taken altogether unawares.

I have met some things that were both amusing and instructive, especially one in the city of Minneapolis. In company with Bro. Peter Anderson and C. I. Shallbetter we went to hear a noted trance-medium of the spiritualistic faith, and after her lecture a gentleman seated on the platform arose and, coming toward the audience, said that he could see "spirit forms" near one that he pointed out. He then went on to tell him how they looked and what they had to say; then, turning to me, said there was one just back of my chair, and by his actions he thought that I must be dealing in horses, and wanted to know if I was. In reply I said to him that if he could read the future and could tell me anything about my life he ought to be able to without asking questions. He said that he could not reveal the future, left me, and tried some one else. He seemed to have better success with others, as I could see that they sanctioned the most he told them. After he was through the lady that had given the lecture thought to try her skill upon me and said she could see four spirit-forms near me, and gave their names. One larger than the rest said his name was Samuel; and was quite anxious to communicate with me. She wanted to know if I had any dead friends by that name on either my father's or mother's side. I told her that there were none on either side. She then gave the names of the other three, but none of them were family names. She then became quite impatient and said that they were there anyway. She then left me, but said she would come back again, which she did and tried me three different times before she would give up. She then tried Bro. Shallbetter, but with no better success. Then turning to the congregation she said to them that there was a little nucleus in that corner that she could not control. But of course she did not know who or what we were. I had prayed that if they came to me they might be confounded, and they were completely.

Bro. Peter Anderson had never been to hear one of them before, and it was a new experience to him. Speaking of it afterwards he said that his heart went "pit-a-pat," for he was afraid that they would try him. They had tried their power on me before, and failed, as they did this time.

That there is a power in spiritualism none can deny that have been brought into contact with it; but there is no good there; and it will work harm to those that tamper with it. The gospel is good enough for me, for all that is good is embraced in it, and it is the power of God unto salvation. I want to live in the gospel, that I may die by it and receive the reward that is promised to those that obey it.

E. A. STEDMAN.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 23.

Editors Herald:—Just closed another discussion, Friday night, at Alpine. Prejudice ran high to start on, but at the close every one seemed well pleased and the writer was invited to occupy a church building in two of the adjoining neighborhoods. Four churches stand with open doors for us at any time. I occupy two, and hope to reach the others in the near future.

I must confess that out here in the Wolverine State where we have everything to combat, we don't go to the trouble to get satin grave clothes for skunks. We simply kill them with straight, plain truths and then let the dead bury the dead. Some more to be baptized next Sunday. All goes well.

POMONA, Mo., March 19.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference convened February 28, and was held with fair interest manifested in those present. The work spiritually is not what it might be, but we think from the noticeable prospects that we are on the very verge of bursting another "leaf" in the "bud" we are opening, and thereby to sip in more of the divine heat and light that gives us inspired vitality, with which we can bring forth the "fruit," by which the tree is known.

We voted Bro. Henry Sparling to represent us as district delegate to General Conference. Two new churches in our district are being built; one at the Vera Cruz branch, one at Ozark. The Saints at Ozark have been having some difficulty in getting a lot, the citizens not wanting anyone to sell to them for church building on account of their peculiar (?) religious belief.

At Sargent, on Tuesday, March 3, Bro. Sparling commenced a public discussion with W. T. Napier, Baptist, which lasted six days. We consider the debate a victory for truth. Some good friends were made for us, and much prejudice allayed. Bro. Sparling was nicely blessed in his effort, and both ably and yet humbly defended our position. I acted as moderator, and, as the opponent would not meet Bro. Sparling's argument, but simply brought up and read villainous history against the Mormons, all contrary to the rules of debate (for we denied being Mormons or all connections with the Salt Lake people), I called him to order several times, and every time the Baptists, including several ministers, would get angry and fairly rage with anger. This conduct was common the first two days, and at one time one of their men had to be held back to keep him from using violence on me. The last three days they "affirmed," and their argument was crushed to atoms under the "marvelous working" gospel. Prejudice was so removed at the close that they tamely submitted to Bro. Sparling bravely exposing them. Yet our lives were in constant danger. Let us be faithful and not boast.

LAMONI, Iowa, March 26.

Editors Herald:—Recently I made two trips to Leon, preaching four times at each visit. Found the little band (diminished in numbers by removals) doing quite well, under the circumstances. They received me kindly, and what they have done and are doing indicates that their love for the work has not expired. I have believed and do still believe that the work can be more fully established in Leon, if the matter is managed as it should be. Much more might have been done for the work there had it been thought wise and practicable, by those in charge, to have placed a suitable man there, for two months or more, in the winter of 1894-5. But, of course, we must bear the inevitable the best we can. No doubt we all have much to learn before we can say that we have found the best methods of presenting the work, or of using all the available forces for the greatest good of the work we love.

Through the labors of different ones, no doubt, including the branch officers, two were baptized last Sunday, a man of eighty-four and a maiden of fifteen. May God give grace that old man and young maiden may be faithful until death.

I see that some of the districts are instructing their delegates to vote for a continuation of the old practice of holding our General Conferences annually. To my mind this is a mistake, and a bad one too. It is using at least twice the amount of money necessary for the transaction of general church work. This superfluous expenditure of means, and also of time, in the light of present demands for ministerial labor, and the great scarcity, or inadequate supply, of church funds, is not only unwise, but sinful.

The second great evil which results from holding our General Conferences annually, is the strong and unmistakable tendency to localize our General Conferences. Many brethren from one of the leading quorums of the church, together with elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and members, who have been duly elected as delegates, stay away from the conference with a view to save what they can from the vast expenditure of means which is repeated every twelve months. It is not simply a question of getting together as often as we can to have a good time, but it is a question of solemn duty under existing circumstances. There is no law in any of the sacred books, that I am aware of, requiring annual conferences to be held at all, much less that they should be held perpetually. Much more might be said, but I do pray that when the Kirtland conference shall sit, we shall be found children in malice, but in understanding, men.

Yours for the spread of the gospel,
J. R. LAMBERT.

FULTON, Iowa, March 20.

Editors Herald:—This part of the Lord's vineyard does not seem to gain in members, but rather we have lost several by death. There was a time when we would get a large turnout at our common meetings, but it seems the honest are all gathered out for the time being; but we as a branch are, I think, bound together in love, while of course some seem to be asleep, lacking the push and energy that a Saint of God should have. But we must be patient in all this. It will not always do to find fault. We often do more harm by finding fault than if we would encourage by cheerfulness and by kind deeds, and also by kind words. We should learn a lesson of our dear Master; for he says, "Learn of me," for I am meek and lowly of heart. Then we would not be jealous over our brother or sister, but would esteem one another more highly than ourselves. We would not be overanxious to be placed in office, but would abide God's own due time.

We had a good conference at Brush Creek, Eastern Iowa. The Saints all seemed to rejoice in the gospel. Our business session was very good; peace and harmony prevailed. Three were added to the Brush Creek branch on Sunday by baptism. May God bless them there, for the Saints have a good prospect for others to obey the gospel, so many nice young folks, also several calls for preaching near there. May God send out noble defenders of the truth; men who are not afraid to go among strangers, to test God's promises that he will go before them and be their rearward.

The Saints have done nobly during the last year in this district by their means (tithes and offerings), for the times have been very close. They have to bear their share of hard times as well as others. Still, there is room for improvement. Some members in the district have not complied with the financial law at all. May God let them see that they will lose much, yes very much, in this life, and much more in the world to come. Dear Saints, let us do our duty, for life is very short at best.

JOHN HEIDE.

DOW CITY, Iowa, March 21.

Editors Herald:—The war cloud at Defiance, Iowa, has neither brought us rain nor snow, as nothing but dust is hurled about by the wind. Elder Vankirk of the Christian Church "exposed Mormonism" in four lectures at Defiance, though he presented little or nothing new to the Saints. His lectures were a rehash of Braden, Lamb, and Gregg. However, he did not [hesitate?] to call the authorities of the church and all the ministers some very hard names, while the membership was comprised of fools or dupes, according to his theory. Elder Vankirk's lectures commenced on the 9th and closed on the 12th inst.

By the kindness of I. McCord and son Archie the city hall was secured and Bro. J. F. McDowell commenced a reply on the 13th and closed on the 18th. He discoursed on Discipleism the last evening. The first evening the hall was crowded and the reply was good; and from reports received the attendance continued good to the last, and the reply was excellent; the writer was only privileged to hear the reply on the first evening on the account of his presence being needed in other parts.

That old veteran of the cross, Elder George Sweet, left us for the paradise of God on the 29th ult., aged eighty-three years, I believe. His family and the Saints will miss him very much, but we are satisfied that he will receive a glorious resurrection at the coming of Christ. Bro. W. D. Bullard was chosen to fill his place as president of the Salem branch and to feed the Saints with the bread of life. May God bless him and all other ministers who labor and sacrifice for the truth.

GEELONG, Victoria, Feb. 25.

Editors Herald:—For some few years I have had a longing desire to have a conversation with one of the Utah elders, to ascertain their real intention, as to whether they had given up the idea of polygamy or not; for the conviction with me has always been that "the manifesto" was only a makeshift to shield themselves from the punishment which the law inflicted upon transgressors, and to await future opportunities, when they might carry into effect their real intention. My desire was realized in meeting two young elders who are stationed in Melbourne, the chief city of Victoria, and in spending two afternoons in conversation upon polygamy, succession, rebaptism, etc., and not to my surprise they told me that they taught the principle of polygamy to every convert before they went to America; and that they believed in it as much as they ever did.

I asked if in case a man had a dozen wives when the manifesto came out, which ones would he dispose of?

The answer was, "The ones we didn't like." They said they had baptized two during the last year, and they have all the chance to preach that anyone could desire; for their parents in America furnish them sufficient money every month to keep them going.

I really felt sorry for the young men that "the wool" had been pulled so thickly over their eyes; for they know scarcely a passage to uphold their polygamic institution, and much less on succession. If I cited them to the Book of Mormon where the Lamanites had not forgotten the commandment of the Lord to have "save it be one wife" and other similar passages, the reply would be, "O, that was only to that people." Then I would turn to Doctrine and Covenants where the elders were commanded to teach the things which were contained in the Book of Mormon, Bible, etc., in which were the fullness of the everlasting gospel, and asked, "Do you do it?" Silence would then reign, and I could get no response. I gave them "One wife or many" by Joseph, and asked, "Do you believe that if 'a child' is 'trained' up in 'the way he should go,' that 'when he is old he will not depart from it?'" "Yes." "Well, if Joseph taught polygamy, how is it that the children are all against it?" No reply. I left with them "Why I am a Josephite" by Hyrum O. Smith, and will wait for future developments.

Our work is progressing nicely, and since the Church of England tried to "root out the abominable lot," as they called us, twenty have been added to the Hastings branch, and some called to the ministry. I am pleased to say that most of the officers in the church are waking up to a realization that they must work if they would reap a reward, and the work looks more encouraging at present.

EUCLID, Ark., March 18.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me at home, seeing after affairs for a few days. Last Monday fire got out on my farm and burned down one hundred and fifty panels of fencing, and on last Wednesday the people came in and gave me a lift by making one thousand rails towards rebuilding my fence.

I am holding meetings at home at present. Just returned from Scott and Polk Counties; responded to the call made by Bro. A. J. Shores, of Rich Mountain, Arkansas. Had a good time while there; baptized four and left others near the door.

While there a new sect styling themselves Disciples of Christ," became alarmed and sent for me to give an account of myself at Eagle Gap, on the 24th of February. This alarm was raised because some of that flock were turning out to hear the gospel and one of them I had baptized; so I met Rev. Coker to make arrangements for public debate, but he would not affirm his church to be in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures in organization, doctrine, and practice; but wanted me to deny the name and ceremony used by Peter on the day of Pentecost, as they claim and hold Acts 2: 38. In baptizing this is their hobby: they claim the name and the only name to be used is "Jesus Christ;" that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are not the names and never were so used by any of the apostles; so I did not wish to put myself up for a target in that style and have nothing to shoot at myself; so they quibbled and the debate was a flash. I left a proposition with Bro. Shores for him to affirm themselves to be in harmony with the Holy Scriptures in authority, organization, doctrine, and practice; and that we would do the same ourselves. The work is now opened up at that place and chances are good for the cause if seen after with care and at the right time. I hope conference will allow me a yokefellow in the gospel next conference year.

PORCUPINE, Wis., March 23.

Editors Herald:—I have been silent a long time, but not idle. After leaving Lamoni the last time, I went to the Kewanee conference in Illinois, where we had a very good, profitable time together. One sad feature was that Sr. Chisnall was not able to meet with the Saints, not having recovered sufficiently from a serious spell of sickness; but she was improving.

From there I went to Millersburg, Illinois, and shared the hospitality of Bro. M. T. Short and family while there, and treated the Saints to three nights of plain gospel talk on their duty as God's children. Whether they considered the treat a bad or good one, I did not stop to inquire, but went on to Joy, for two nights, then to Buffalo Prairie, accompanied by Bro. Short. We separated there, he going back to Millersburg, to fill an engagement to preach, and I to Joy again. There seems to be a few interested at Joy, Illinois. Brn. Wentworth, Holmes, James Terry, — Bean, and others of the Saints live there. From Joy I went to the Mission branch, in Lasalle County, Illinois, and preached during three of the coldest nights that I experienced the past winter. The last night I had a good turnout of Saints, and I tried to encourage them in the gospel work, as best I could.

From Mission I went to Plano, where I met Bro. F. G. Pitt by former agreement. I also fell in with Bro. Roush on my way there. We attended their business meeting at Plano, and they chose Bro. Keck as president, and the other branch officers expressed a willingness to do their duty, and it is to be hoped the branch will prosper. I remained another night, and preached. On Sunday morning Bro. Pitt preached in Plano, and I in Sandwich, then both went to Chicago for the afternoon.

After our services were over in Chicago, we went to hear Dr. Dowie preach in the Auditorium, where he spoke to nearly five thousand people, claiming that sectarianism was wrong, and arguing for original apostolic Christianity, in organization, ordinances, gifts, and all; said God gave those gifts as he would; that he had the gift of healing given to him, and was exercising it, and doing all the good he could. He evidently has great light. He got repentance before faith, but taking it all through, it seemed evident to me that he was doing great good, and certainly his work will break down prejudice against our doctrine. And he said they were waiting for God to designate the apostles and prophets, as they did not know whom he wanted. To me this is one of the signs that the hastening time has come.

From Chicago I went to De Kalb, Illinois, in company with Bro. Pitt. There I remained five nights, then went on to East Delavan, Wisconsin, to their district conference. The Saints there had a pleasant and profitable session. Bro. H. Southwick was chosen to preside over the district. Since that I have been traveling with our worthy brother, W. A. McDowell. We have visited the Evansville Saints (Janesville branch), Oregon branch, North Freedom, Valley Junction, and Reed, (or Twin Lake,) branches; and now we are holding forth here in the Porcupine branch. I am pleased to say the prospects seem good for an increase in membership in Wisconsin, and there seems to be a willingness to do right and honor God by keeping his law. In some places, there seems to be but little spirituality; others have more spiritual life; occasionally one has more zeal than wisdom, and this always hurts the individual, and, generally, the work. But taking it all together, the work is in fair condition, and prospects good for the future. I expect to go back to Chicago the last of this week to stay over Sunday, then go on to Kirtland, Ohio. Praying and working for final success,

I am still in the faith,

G. H. HILLIARD.

WESTON, Iowa, March 24.

Editors Herald:—The work of the Lord in the Pottawattamie district is moving onward nicely, and the faithful Saints are rejoicing as from time to time renewed evidences come to them of the divinity of the work. Bro. T. W. Williams has labored very successfully at Fontanelle recently and an ingathering is expected in the near future. We learn that the enemy is raging there in opposition to the work, but feel satisfied that if God's servants act wisely and all be faithful these things will all work for good in the end.

The writer and others of the ministry have done considerable preaching in Carson, occupying the Christian church, which for a time seemed to be cheerfully opened to us; but all at once unexpectedly its doors were closed, though we had declared our willingness to pay rent, and I was not even permitted to fill the appointment that had been made. Friends to our work proposed that the Saints should build a house of their own, offering to contribute to that end.

There being no organization of the church in Carson the district conference took the matter in hand, appointing a committee consisting of M. F. Elswick, Clara E. Briggs, and H. N. Hansen to take the matter under advisement, and Bro. Samuel Wood was subsequently added to committee. The committee was given power to act as it should deem wise, and it is our intention to push the building on to completion as fast as we can, a sufficient amount being subscribed to warrant us in commencing the work and having confidence in the Saints throughout the district that they will stand by us.

Mr. Frank Shinn, an attorney at law, has kindly donated a lot to build upon. He said he had lived among the latter Day Saints for thirty years, had found them honorable people, good citizens, and worthy of encouragement. What a help to the missionary when he finds that the Saints by their upright walk have gained the respect and confidence of those who have known them long!

Bro. Senterlow Butler is at work in the east end of our district and feels much encouraged since Bro. Williams' efforts at Fontanelle. Bro. C. Derry has been among us several times during the winter, and his labors have been much appreciated by the Saints. He is one of those who have "borne the burden in the heat of the day" when preaching the gospel was not a trip "upon flowery beds of ease." Who shall be able to take up the work of the veterans who have toiled and wrought amidst the difficulties of the past? It is encouraging that many of the young are coming to the front among God's ministry. Could they but profit by the experiences of those who have preceded them, they, with the advantages which are theirs, would indeed be towers of strength amidst the opposing forces. Some of our local brethren are doing well in the ministry, among them I will mention Brn. J. P. and J. Carlile, who always seem to be ready to do what they can. I am sorry to say that some seemingly have entertained the opinion that they are under no special obligation to labor because not under General Conference appointment. I think all who accept an ordination should seek to improve every opportunity to labor in their office and calling. Much successful work has been done in the past by men who have toiled during the six days of the week and upon the Sabbath preached the word of life; this in harmony with the pattern given in the Book of Mormon when in the days of Alma: "The priests left their labor, to impart the word of God unto the people, the people also left their labors to hear the word of God." (Alma 1:6.) Those following this example have been blessed in their labors to the blessing of others; they have retained the spirit and hope of the gospel. We have reason to fear that it will not be so well with those who sit with folded arms after having enlisted in the service of God. May the Master help each to faithfully occupy as he has intrusted to us.

KERRVILLE, Texas, March 23.

Editors Herald:—We have just closed a successful series of meetings in this city. We used the Union church here, a splendid building. It seats about five hundred and is the first absolute union church I ever saw. We will come back again in the summer. I never made more friends for our work in a place before in the same length of time. The Baptist minister, Rev. Lacado, reviewed my doctrine last night, and attempted to tell the people what our church originated from. He said that Joseph Smith received a revelation in 1843, instituting polygamy. I took him to task over it after the meeting, and the Congregational and Presbyterian ministers, Mr. Lacado, and myself, had a nice talk after the meeting. On my telling Rev. Lacado of his mistake in regard to the revelation on polygamy, he asked the Congregational minister how he understood it. That brother told him he made a mistake, for Mr. Smith never sanctioned such doctrine, but that Young was the author of it; and the Presbyterian minister said that was right. Rev. Lacado then said he was glad we had left the old church in Utah. Here again the Congregational minister took him to task and told him that we were the original church, as proven by the several decisions of the courts in regard to property; that Young left us, not that we left Young. Those brethren fought my battle well, and Rev. Lacado was getting in a close place. I reprimanded Rev. Lacado for bringing up the origin of our church, and Bro. Joseph Smith's work, as I had never mentioned those matters, but would whenever called for; that my mission was to preach the gospel of Christ.

My first three sermons here were on the subject of the kingdom of God. I maintained these facts: that the rock upon which the kingdom was established was revelation, and referred my congregation to that rock—revelation, for the only safe, absolutely only true foundation to build upon; that while a belief was very good, it took knowledge to stand the storms of opposition. I then introduced the apostles and prophets and their work, and Christ the chief corner stone, following this with a plain declaration of the spiritual gifts, headed by the text that the kingdom of God is not meat and drink but peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

My fourth sermon was on the subject of the resurrection, and a literal one too. The faces of my congregation were a study during this sermon. They laughed heartily while I voluntarily brought up the ridiculous quandaries and circumstances brought to oppose this doctrine, and were equally serious and attentive when I cleared away the mist with God's word. Many left the church after this sermon, declaring that this, the most difficult doctrine of the kingdom of God, was clearer now to them than ever before. "Thank God."

My fifth sermon was on the personality of God, compared with idolatry, using for a text, "Nevertheless, when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" A Christian brother said that was the best sermon ever delivered from a Kerrville pulpit.

My sixth and last sermon was one of my favorite ones. Those acquainted with me will recognize it. The text was, "God is love." Before I closed this effort I noticed the crystal tears on the cheeks of many of that large congregation as the true character of God became revealed to them. Thus closed my efforts. I felt a great love for those people, and I believe the same feeling for me rests in the hearts of most of them, if not all. I promised them faithfully to come back, and the large Union church is at my disposal and a dozen homes ready to receive me.

Kerrville, is a city of two thousand five hundred population, seventy-five miles northwest of San Antonio. This is a new opening. I must hasten back to San Antonio, for on the first of April, or first Sunday, we expect to open our work there in a new hall on Commerce Street, a seating room of seven hundred, brilliantly lighted with both gas and electricity, one of the finest halls in the city and in the most popular part of the town. The hall is used by six brotherhood orders, and the walls are decorated with their several charters and memorials well framed. Now, we wish to place among those the pictures of our present President, Joseph Smith, and his father, the prophet. Who will contribute those pictures for this beautiful hall and home of the Saints of San Antonio—who will? Please drop me a card and say which one you will give, then I will let you know about sending them. Address me at School No. 7, South Flores Street, San Antonio, Texas. I love Zion and her people and am proud of it too. May God bless his people in the coming conference.

Your brother in Christ,

H. P. CURTIS.

THINK OVER THIS.

THE time for the convening of the General Conference is nearing and from present indicating signs, unless a charge of sentiment sets in it may become necessary to drop a number of the General Conference appointees. Is the church ready to do this? And can it be done in propriety and without loss? Is there not a remedy? Finances seem to lie at the bottom of the matter. If memory is not at fault it was announced by the Bishop some time ago that only about one fifth of the church membership were good financial supporters of the work. Should not the other four fifths feel just now that there is a responsibility resting upon them to make some sacrifice by sending in necessary aid so as to make the outlook financially more hopeful, especially as a new conference year is soon to begin; and the outlining of future work rests somewhat upon the strength of the treasury? Or do they expect to reap well-earned rewards without effort, as others have to earn theirs?

This is the great dispensation of the restored gospel. It is to be sounded abroad to all the world. It is not a time to look backward or grow melancholy. Our ministerial force should be increased rather than diminished. It takes men to do this work. Because of the fading surplus in the treasury is it a correct policy in order to achieve success and strengthen our resources to destroy the effectiveness of a portion of our army force? It is said that difficulties are made to be overcome. Whoever heard of it being advised when an army was facing the enemy and finances were growing weak that it would be a skillful maneuver to render inactive a portion of the army in order to raise desired revenue and make the army more formidable and successful? Would it not be a better policy to increase the army, stimulate confidence, and by dint of effort raise the required revenue by placing a more formidable front to the enemy and thus raise the price of stocks?

The writer is of the opinion that the ministerial army is now too small for the work in hand; that the effort at increasing the list last year and the year before was a proper thing to do, and was made under the inspiration and light of the hour, as the following clearly attests:—

The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and the Seventy under their directions, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, leaving the branches and districts where organization is effected to the care and administration of the standing ministers, high priests, elders, priests, teachers and deacons, so far as possible; thus freeing these spiritual authorities and leaving them at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them; in which work, if they will but now take counsel, saith the Spirit, they shall feel a peace and vigor of mind surpassing what they have enjoyed in the past.—D. C. 122: 7.

This was accepted as a revelation and should be allowed to guide in the work it is intended to cover. This paragraph not only urges the Twelve and Seventy to push out into the field but also all high priests and elders who could travel and preach. The reasons assigned are that the magnitude of the work, “now lying before” them—“the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great;” “leaving the branches” and pushing “the preaching of the word,” etc.

It is clear that it was obligatory upon the church to make this move then; to release the ministry and increase the effective army. The Twelve made its recommendations in harmony with the Spirit and genius of this revelation, increased the army and the laborers were sent out. Now, has the required work had under contemplation been accomplished so soon? and are we ready to recommend to disband? to assume that our army of ministers is too large and unwieldy to be effective? Hardly! The same demands and urgent necessities to preach the gospel as a witness are upon us. All agreed! but it will be asked, “What about the revenue to support this army of workers?” Did not the Lord take this part into account when he inspired the paragraph cited? Or, did he do it recklessly without taking financial matters into account just to get the church into a hole—to embarrass it? Does he not know the ability of the church to do?

It is a fact that the Bishop congratulated the church publicly last spring upon the condition of the finances, stating that notwithstanding the hard times and increased demands upon the church treasury the finances were in a more healthy condition than the year previous. This condition harmonized with the spirit and letter of the revelation; that is, to increase the list of effective laborers. It agrees also with the requirements abroad. The appointments were recommended and made in harmony with the statement of the Bishop, the inspiration governing, and the demand of the work abroad. Was this an error? The writer thinks not; that just the right thing was done; and that when all of the returns are in for the year the aggregate will show that a substantial revenue has been raised one way and another to sustain the work. Time will tell, and it is a fact that needs no argument that we now need to increase our army of workers rather than to diminish it, in order to meet the demands abroad and properly to sustain ourselves before the brethren and the world.

We have been assured that “the hastening time has come;” and the revelation says to send out the available ministry—the Twelve, the Seventy, and high priests, and elders, by reason of the increasing demand for laborers—the “white” harvest. In view of this is the church ready to take a step backward by reducing the army, the very means by which success must be achieved, if at all?

But we are embarrassed financially. So are others; and some much more so. Even “Uncle Sam,” that rich old man, is forced to borrow millions to help him out of his present predicament. How came he in this dilemma? Mismanagement in some form, doubtless; and we too might adjust ourselves to the present circumstances, reform, profit by the past, and so meet the present; but not by eliminating effective workers, unless it is the last resort. True, a revision or reorganization in some respects might be wholesome in order to bring to the front the most effective, and, all things being equal, the least expensive; but none such should be lost to the service. It is now impossible to meet the demands upon us; and in some quarters those of the faith even tire of constantly aiding with little or no avail to them directly. Say what you may, the Saints and friends of the cause desire to see and hear, occasionally at least, the general ministry; and it is discouraging if they do not. They want to see the church’s select men and hear them; and to tell them that they must be content to go continuously to church and hear the inexperienced just to encourage them, and not receive desired information and food for thought, is more beautiful in theory and on paper than in practice. The world, the flesh, and the Devil are to be met, and it is the duty of the strong to occasionally strengthen and encourage the weak, as well as to warn the world. So in order to stimulate confidence, activity, and secure increased support, sympathy, and friendship, it is necessary to push the ministry among the people in positive contact. They will aid one present when they could not think of the absent. This is in harmony with the rule, They “will feed you, and clothe you,” etc.

Again, it is impracticable to fall solely back upon the Twelve and Seventies. To act wisely and do justly to the cause some discrimination must be made. There are wide fields where members of neither of these chief quorums reside, but efficient elders occupy. Under many circumstances to send seventies to take their place would be attended with increased expense and results no better than if the elder had been retained, or may-haps not so good. But some one says, "Make a seventy out of the elder." Aye! I fear enough haste has been manifest in that direction already, and how would that help the treasury?

"But what is to be done to increase our finances?" it is asked. Why, reform! But how? In many ways. In methods and expenditures, like others have to do. Let the other four fifths referred to do their part to begin with. Hold a less number of reunions, and farther apart in point of distance and time. This will save means to the church. They are good, but like sugar, too much is unwholesome and expensive. Then they are apt to keep some of the ministry, who like to take them all in, too long from their regular work. The impression is left upon some that the elders are out for a good time and recreation, and it chills the finances.

Put fewer mortgages on meeting-houses to tax the community to its full extent in order to keep the debt paid up. It keeps the accumulations of effort from the general work. Don't allow subscribers to become twenty-five thousand dollars in arrears to the Herald Office any more. It is a poor policy for the people and the business, and hard on the treasury. Stand by the present Business Manager in trying to put things upon a safe and paying basis, and collect in honest dues. Frank may appear a little harsh and crusty, perhaps stubborn, but he is a good business man, a pusher, and not a lazy hair in his head. He is a firm Latter Day Saint and uses his own money to help the cause. Take it well when he reminds you that you are in arrears; that it is time to pay up. That is what he is there for. Business is business! Don't be so touchy as though you were being imposed upon and that your pride and dignity had received a mortal wound because of receiving a statement. The most magnificent pride in the world is to be straightforward in deal—honest. He that is not so may be a regular attendant at church, get in a great deal of fine talk, weep much, and fool all of his brethren; aye! may reach the golden gates, but he will not go in.

Further: Charge the ministry for Heralds sent them in the future; at least the cost of material. Why not?

Stop putting so much money and effort into minor organizations, good enough in their place, but not fundamental. Our numbers are too few to support everything. Let's have a year's healthy growth once without increasing the outlay. Get on a better footing. We are getting topheavy with organizations, presiding functions and presidential material, all of which require increased financial aid. The contribution box is wide open all the time asking for all sorts of purposes, till the old saw, "Give more, give more," is not inapplicable, and becoming burdensome and discouraging to some; and they begin to think that we are growing worldly and that greed is becoming a strong factor with us as in the realms where priestcraft reigns. This should be corrected; people are suspicious and justly so. They have been deceived most all their lives.

Recently the writer was one of a committee to determine the wisdom of our Sabbath school joining the Sabbath school union, and it was decided adversely. Why? Not because the committee had no confidence in the work being done by the Sabbath school union, but that under present circumstances it would increase our expenses so as to become burdensome. Our district is hundreds of miles in extent. To send delegates to various places of meeting and cover incidentals would deplete our treasury. It is better to care for ourselves until our district is smaller or our numerical strength is increased and levies become less burdensome. Wait for growth and the way prepared. This is only a sample.

We want a sufficiency in the general church treasury to insure confidence and success. Place it in and don't get excited and anxious to start a new enterprise or lay the foundation of a church edifice which you cannot build just because there are fifty cents more in the treasury to-day than is required to pay off accounts. If not able to keep the gold reserve at the one hundred million mark, let us have something. Don't build any more colleges or gospel boats until we get on a good war footing. Strengthen the army, and other things may be added as a consequence; they cannot go before. Locate laborers in as small a compass of territory as practicable so as to avoid expensive traveling. We will likely have no more Temple Lot suits right away. These battles, both worthy and expensive, have been met and can be relegated. Be not in haste to copy after the world nor the style of the coming women. It is all vanity, and expensive. Give the cause a first thought all the time, and there is no question but we can move.

Sometimes elders get disconsolate and weary. Family demands press upon them and promised aid does not come promptly. They have no resources, and are cramped and tired. The liver gets out of order and everything looks green around them; and if they chance to speak or write under these circumstances it has a coloring of blue all through it; apt to forget that the Lord is going to have a tried people. By letting wisdom have perfect work much that lies at the foundation of our embarrassment may be avoided.

Strengthen the army.

P. S.—This article was written and sent in for publication some time ago, but it was thought that some of the verbiage might be construed to be in conflict with views expressed by others and might lead to injury; so by request it was returned, reread, and out of deference to others' judgment, everything that might be twisted to savor of infringement upon others' line of thought removed, even to the changing of the caption, except the inherited right of 1776, purchased a hundred years ago—that which has made the new world great and moulded the grandest of men—that of representation and free speech; this ever asserts itself. It is now returned for publication.

The writer is of the opinion that under the assured Divine aid, the depression in business and prices, the church is amply able to sustain itself and prosecute vigorously the mission work; that there is no time to hesitate, wait, or sidetrack. The conflict is on and the order should be, "Fill up the ranks; left dress; forward; guide right; march! to the conflict, and then the promised land!"

EVERLASTING HAPPINESS AND EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.—NO. 2.

BY ELDER J. L. BEAR.

GENERAL RESURRECTION AND FINAL JUDGMENT.

TO GET a clear understanding of the final reward for the righteous (so-called in some passages of scripture) and the punishment of the wicked, we have to investigate not only one or two passages, but let us take all the three books combined for our guide, and what may be hard to be understood, or given in a kind of obscure language, or insufficient explanation, or in a mysterious way, other passages may explain more fully without any actually contradicting others. The Gospel of Matthew, chapter 25, divides them into just two classes—sheep and goats; the sheep to inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world; the goats to go into everlasting punishment; but the righteous (sheep) into life eternal. Now, if a minister should just take this passage as a text and not seek other passages for further light, why surely he would only make two places out of it, heaven and hell so-called. Revelation 20: 12–27 speaks a little plainer. John saw the dead, small and great, standing before God, waiting for the final decision. Books were opened. What books? The law books: the Bible, Book of Mormon, and other records, which will come to light yet; which will be testimonies against those transgressors; and according to their works they will be judged, just as a criminal is brought before the tribunal, where the law books fix a certain punishment for certain crimes committed. Now here comes another book where it seems certain names are recorded, no doubt the names of the sheep; and whosoever names were not found written in this book were cast into the lake of fire. According to this, whosoever name was recorded in this book of life enters into a safe condition, having suffered in the prison house (or jail if you please) for their rebellion and wrong committed on earth in their probationary state.

Paul in 1 Corinthians 15 goes a little further in speaking of three different glories, celestial, terrestrial, and telestial; and divides the last one into innumerable divisions of glories; and as we search for further light we find still more in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants section 76, where it speaks of a fourth place or kingdom, in which there is no glory at all.

In examining all these points, we will have to come to the conclusion that those who shall receive their habitation in either of these glories are heirs of salvation; that their names are written in the Lamb's Book of life, on whom the second death shall have no power. Those who were thrust down to hades, hell, prison house, pit (jail), and a jail has many departments, so has that prison house many departments; some have it a little better than others, just according to their stubbornness, willfulness, or good behavior. Those who have served out their time in jail have suffered enough for their disobedience. Their deliverance comes at the day of judgment; they have been imprisoned for their evil committed. Then they will be rewarded for the good they have done, while they dwelt in the flesh. They will no more return to hades, hell, prison, or jail; but receive their inheritance in the kingdom which is prepared for them.

Some believe and teach universal salvation; that all men will be saved by and by. But such a belief is unscriptural, vain, and dangerous, as it cannot lead to any good; on the contrary, to the opposite.

Death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. "Well, see here," says the universal salvation man, "death will be destroyed, and hell will be destroyed; don't that show that there will be no more punishment, as there will be no more hell?" Don't be so hasty; wait a little. There will be no more death. Christ conquered death in bringing the resurrection; the jail, or prison house, is not needed any more; but there is something still just as bad, or rather worse than the jail was—you may call it penitentiary if you please; a place or a kingdom where the Devil and his angels will be—in the lake of fire, figuratively so called.

And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.—Rev. 20: 15. (See also verses 10–14.)

I will show by scriptural evidence that those who receive as their reward a kingdom without glory, which is called the second death, that it will be as everlasting as those in the kingdom of glories; also what kind of a people will constitute that class. Please read, now, carefully, these passages of scripture: First Book of Nephi 3, end of paragraph 8:—

Therefore remember, O man, for all thy doings, thou shalt be brought into judgment. Wherefore, if ye have sought to do wickedly in the days of your probation, then you are found unclean before the judgment seat of God; and no unclean thing can dwell with God: wherefore ye must be cast off forever.

Surely such don't belong to the sheep; they sought to do evil always; they did not get cleansed in the jail like the sheep.

That great pit which hath been digged for the destruction of men, shall be filled by those who digged it, unto their utter destruction, saith the Lamb of God; not the destruction of the soul, save it be the casting of it into that hell which hath no end.—Ibid. par. 44.

This cannot mean that hell, the prison house, because that will be abolished; but as the word "hell" is always used to represent a bad place, so no doubt that the prophet means that place where they suffer the second death.

A work which shall be everlasting, either on the one hand or on the other; either to the convincing of them unto peace and life eternal, or unto the deliverance of them to the hardness of their hearts and the blindness of their minds, unto their being brought down into captivity and also unto destruction both temporally and spiritually, according to the captivity of the devil [surely the second death].—Par. 45.

For the day should come that they must be judged of their works, yea, even the works which were done by the temporal body in their days of their probation; wherefore, if they should die in their wickedness, they must be cast off also, as to the things which are spiritual, which are pertaining to righteousness; wherefore, they must be brought to stand before God, to be judged of their works: and if their works have been filthiness, they must needs be filthy . . . wherefore, there must needs be a place of filthiness prepared for that which is filthy. And there is a place prepared, yea, even that awful hell of which I have spoken, and the devil is the foundation of it.—Chap. 4: 6.

In connection with Revelation 22: 11:—

He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

And in connection, Book of Mormon, chapter 4: 5:—

And now, I speak also concerning those who do not believe in Christ. Behold, will ye believe in the day of your visitation; behold, when the Lord shall come; yea, even that great day when the earth shall be rolled together as a scroll and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; yea, in that great day when ye shall be brought to stand before the Lamb of God, then will ye say that there is no God? Then will ye longer deny the Christ, or can ye behold the Lamb of God? . . . Do ye suppose that ye could be happy to dwell with that holy being, when your souls are racked with a consciousness of guilt, that ye have ever abused his laws? Behold I say unto you, that ye would be more miserable to dwell with a holy and just God, under a consciousness of your filthiness before him, than ye would to dwell with the damned souls in hell. For behold, when ye shall be brought to see your nakedness before God, and also the glory of God, and the holiness of Jesus Christ it will kindle a flame of unquenchable fire upon you.

This is a plain explanation of what the eternal fire or lake of fire and brimstone means.

Paragraph 6:—

Behold, he created Adam, and by Adam came the fall of man. And because of the fall of man, came Jesus Christ, even the Father and the Son; and because of Jesus Christ came the redemption of man. And because of the redemption of man, which came by Jesus Christ, they are brought back into the presence of the Lord: yea, this is wherein all men are redeemed, because the death of Christ bringeth to pass the resurrection, which bringeth to pass the redemption from an endless sleep, from which sleep all men shall be awoken by the power of God, when the trump shall sound; and they shall come forth, both small and great, and all shall stand before his bar, being redeemed and loosed from this eternal band of death, which death is a temporal death; and then cometh the judgment of the Holy One upon them; and then cometh the time that he that is filthy shall be filthy still, and he that is righteous, shall be righteous still; he that is happy, shall be happy still; and he that is unhappy, shall be unhappy still.

Can anyone class those filthy ones among the saved? There is happiness to some degree in the celestial glory. If not, it could not be a kingdom of glory, but those filthy ones must inherit a kingdom without glory. A filthy place is prepared for them, and they cannot get out of it; it is their final inheritance, as well as others have their inheritance.

Second Book of Nephi 1: 4; eternal destruction of both soul and body. If the reader will read all the passage carefully he will find what the prophet meant by this language.

End of paragraph 5, also paragraphs 6, 7, 8; this life our probationary state:—

And the days of the children of men were prolonged, according to the will of God, that they might repent while in the flesh; wherefore, their state became a state of probation, and their time was lengthened. . . . Wherefore, men are free according to the flesh; . . . they are free to choose liberty and eternal life, through the great mediation of all men, or to choose captivity and death, according to the captivity and power of the Devil: for he seeketh that all men might be miserable like unto himself.

Surely the second death.

Chapter 6. Please read the whole. Paragraphs 2-5 speak plainly of the resurrection of the bodies of all men, no distinction being made. The bodies of the wicked rise as well as the bodies of the righteous, and the wicked will have a perfect knowledge of their guilt, uncleanness, nakedness, and the righteous will have a perfect knowledge of their enjoyment and their righteousness, being clothed with purity; yes, even with the robe of righteousness.

When all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, inasmuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment; and then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God. And assuredly, as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God has spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which cannot pass away, that they who are righteous, shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy shall be filthy still; wherefore, they who are filthy, are the Devil and his angels [and if the reader watches and reads all those passages he will find that all those whose names are not written in the Lamb's book of life become angels to the Devil]; and they shall go away into everlasting fire prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever; and has no end.

You who want not only to save all men, without distinction, by and by, but the Devil and his angels also, I am afraid you will have a big job on hand to clear them of all their filth, as they cannot be cleansed in hell, but come out of their jail and confinement just as dirty as they entered it, to stand before the bar of God to receive their final doom, to inherit a filthy place for everlasting, where their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascended up for ever and ever, (a consciousness of their guilt,) which torments them for ever and has no end.

"O well," says one, that don't mean forever. It is the flames that have no end."

All right; let us see. The guilty conscience is or makes the flames;

then as long as there are flames, there must be the conscience; and as men cannot die any more, so their conscience will not die. Conscience must be annihilated; then the flames will cease to exist also. But it is written, There is no annihilation, and those flames "ascendeth up forever and ever;" and have "no end." And if the conscience would be quieted down, that it torment no more, and those flames are representing the guilty conscience which torments as flames, then common sense will tell us that there will also be an end of flames; but scripture says they shall ascend forever and ever and have no end.

And the Devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever.—Rev. 20: 10.

What a job it would be to hook him out of there and save him with all his colleagues!

Some objector may say, "It is written in the Book of Covenants section 18: 1 that there shall be an end to those torments;" but let us read it aright:—

Nevertheless, it is not written that there shall be no end to this torment; but it is written endless torment.

Now, look here, reader, it is also nowhere written that there shall be an end to those torments.

The second Book of Nephi 6: 6, lastly mentioned. I think it said just as much, at least I cannot see any difference in it, "and has no end." And as the prophet in the Book of Mormon says that the consciousness of their guilt is their torment, compared with a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascend up forever and ever, and "has no end,"—well, then, if their torment has an end, then there will also be an end of the lake of fire and brimstone (figuratively spoken) and an end of those flames; then what shall we do with the "forever and ever," with "eternal," with "everlasting," with "no end"? Now this is the only sentence mentioned in the Book of Covenants (Sec. 18:1) that the objector can bring against our position, and the language there is not plain enough to contradict such a cloud of witnesses as the Book of Mormon brings forth in such plain and positive language.

Now we will go to another passage of the Book of Covenants.

Thus saith the Lord, concerning all those who know my power, and have been made partakers thereof, and suffered themselves, through the power of the devil, to be overcome, and to deny the truth, and defy my power; they are they who are the sons of perdition, of whom I say it had been better for them never to have been born; [Cain was also a son of perdition, Genesis 5: 10 I. T.; John 17: 12; also better never been born, Matthew 26: 20;] for they are vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the devil and his angels, in eternity, concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come; having denied the Holy Spirit, after having received it, and having denied the only begotten Son of the Father; having crucified him unto themselves, and put him to an open shame: these are they who shall go away into the lake of fire and brimstone, with the devil and his angels, . . . in eternity, . . . which is their torment, and the end thereof, neither the place thereof nor their torment, no man knows; neither was it revealed, neither is, neither will be revealed unto man, except to them who are made partakers thereof: . . . Wherefore the end, the width, the height, the depth and the misery thereof, they understand not, neither any man except them who are ordained unto this condemnation.—76: 4.

According to this, no one has a right to preach and teach that everybody will be saved, yea even the Devil and his angels in time. It says that no man knoweth the end of their misery. Then stop telling a thing you do not know; when it is also written that it shall not be revealed to man. Then, I ask, Who revealed it to you? God says he has not.

And the wicked shall go away into unquenchable fire; and their end no man knoweth on earth, nor ever shall know, until they come before me in judgment.—D. C. 43: 7.

And they who are not sanctified through the law, which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom, even that of a terrestrial kingdom, or that of a telestial kingdom. For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, cannot abide a celestial glory; and he who cannot abide the law of a terrestrial kingdom, cannot abide a terrestrial glory; he who cannot abide the law of a telestial kingdom, cannot abide a telestial glory: therefore, he is not meet for a kingdom of glory. Therefore, he must abide a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory.—D. C. 85: 5.

He must abide, stay there; he cannot get out.

"God has never endowed any statesman or philosopher, nor any body of them, with wisdom enough to frame a system of government that everybody could go off and leave. To pay taxes and to submit to the laws are far short of the whole duty of the citizen."—Ex-President Harrison.

Whoever reads his Bible prayerfully will read it carefully.

Miscellaneous Department.

MINISTRY REPORTS FOR 1896.

Two hundred and ten reports of the ministry under appointment from the church, including the First Presidency, have been received and published in pamphlet form, and they go out with this issue of the Herald. But the reports of the following brethren did not come to hand, either because not sent, or because of miscarriage of mail or loss in transit. The brethren will please take notice, and if they wish to report to conference, send reports to President Joseph Smith, Temple, Lake County, Ohio, and they will probably be published in the pamphlet that will contain the minutes of the acts of the conference.

The following are the brethren whose reports failed to arrive: J. H. Peters, Arthur Leverton, J. L. Bear, W. T. Bozarth, J. T. Hackett, J. B. Heide, W. S. Macrae, A. E. Mortimer, W. H. Kelley (of Indiana), J. N. Ames, F. H. Lawn, and Adolphus Edwards,—12.

H. A. STEBBINS,

Church Secretary.

ENROLLMENT IN QUORUMS.

The following brethren are notified herewith that their applications for enrollment in quorums have been received since the conference one year ago, and that such applications are on file to be drawn by the quorums when they meet to fill vacancies existing in their ranks, but that it is not likely that any quorums of priests, teachers, or deacons will be able to meet this spring for business, as the conference is too far away from the main body of the church for much of a representation to be present of the lesser priesthood. Also it is not probable that more than one, or at the best, two of the quorum of elders will be present; hence the applications will have to remain on file until another year. The following are the names of applicants:—

A REACTION IN GERMANY AWAY FROM THE HIGHER CRITICS.

IN these days when modern biblical criticism has attained such a sway in Germany that there is no longer left in any of the Protestant theological faculties of the famous universities of the land a single defender of the Mosaic origin of the Pentateuch, it is interesting to note that men from the rank and file of the church are arising to defend the traditional positions and are doing so with a vigor that deserves recognition. It is doubtful whether at any time during the past twenty years or more there has been such a determined opposition to neological criticism in the land of Luther as is making itself felt now. Indeed, it is beginning to look as if a decided reaction had set in. A representative discussion along this line is found in the last two numbers of the Beweis des Glaubens, the leading apologetic journal in Germany. It attacks on both literary and theological grounds the current ideas of the Wellhausen school. The literary analysis and views expressed are largely those propagated in America by Professor Green of Princeton, in his recent publications. From a theological point of view, the writer of this discussion urges against the newer criticism the following points:—

1. According to the reconstruction theory of modern criticism the course of Israelitish and Old Testament history is thoroughly naturalistic and excludes God as the directing and providential factor in this history. It is openly acknowledged by the advocates of this theory that it is on the philosophical principle of evolution. Professor Meinhold says: "Let it not be forgotten that, as in all things, thus too in religion, the law of natural development prevails." From this point of view the existence and purposes of miracles cannot but be denied. Only natural factors and forces were operative in the production of the thought and history contained in the Old Testament. The evolution theory applied to the Scriptures must of necessity exclude all divine intervention in the normal and natural developments of religious thought, as well as also in its original production and in the history of the human race. Every account of a miracle in the Scriptures is accordingly the product of a myth, distorting the actual course of history. A special revelation given to any of the Patriarchs or Old Testament saints at any stage of the history recorded in the Bible cannot be accepted. The theory places the whole historical development on the Procrustean bed of the natural development hypotheses.

2. According to the newer naturalistic theory the historical books of the Old Testament can no longer be regarded as God's Word or as a portion of the Scriptures. The older records of the Pentateuch are all regarded as myths. The Patriarchs are not historical persons. They are, according to Meinhold, only "the Ideal Israel." History really only begins with Moses. This claim is put forth on account of the unreliability of human tradition, the existence of double and treble accounts of the same event in Genesis and elsewhere, etc.

The writer defends the historical correctness of these records on the following grounds:—

(a) Even to the present day the Oriental people display a wonderful ability correctly to remember from generation to generation a multitude of events.

(b) Double and treble accounts of the same events naturally arise in a state of society the uniformity of which brought with it such repetitions.

(c) The contradictions claimed to exist between the different parts of the Pentateuch can by a fair and honest examination be largely removed.

(d) The honest and straightforward record also of the sins and weaknesses of the Patriarchs shows that these accounts are reliable and not distorted.

(e) Anthropological representations of God's dealings with man are found in later literature also.

3. According to the newer criticism Christ is no longer the fulfillment of the law, and is accordingly no longer the mediator of the new covenant. We are told that the law was not given by Moses, that it is not a uniform or harmonious whole, but a conglomerate of legal enactments representing a period of hundreds of years, in many respects self-contradictory. Especially is the chief portion of the law, the Levitical ordinances, regarded as a "tendency" production, and prepared in the interests of the priest caste. This is in direct contradiction to the books of the New Testament. The Epistle to the Hebrews recognizes in the law one fundamental and harmonious purpose, namely, to prefigure Christ as the great High Priest. The Epistle to the Galatians declares that the Law was a schoolmaster unto Christ. Accordingly the Law is not a human production, but of divine origin. This too is the direct teaching of Christ himself, who declared it to be his work to fulfill the Law (e. g., Matt. 5:17; John 5:46; John 3:14). The newer criticism is accordingly in hopeless and helpless contradiction to the teachings of Christ and the entire New Testament in reference to the origin, character, and purpose of the Mosaic law.

4. According to the newer criticism Jesus Christ can no longer be regarded as the Son of God, of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The legitimate consequences of this criticism lead to the conclusion that the theology too of the prophets was the result of the natural evolution of centuries of religious thought and life. It is the opinion of Wellhausen and others that this theology of the prophets was the end of a process the beginnings of which were heathen fetishism and totemism, and that Jehovah was originally only a national and local deity. Meinhold even calls him "the God of thunder" (Gewittergott). The whole New Testament conception of the Jehovah of the Old Testament is the very opposite of this. Christ calls himself the Son of God, in the sense that this God was also the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. If Abraham and the other Old Testament patriarchs worshiped steers, fetishes, etc., how can Christ be the Son of the God of Abraham?

Hence only one conclusion is possible, namely, that the biblico-historical foundations and teachings of the newer system of biblical criticism is absolutely unreconcilable with the teachings of the New Testament in every particle. The whole theory is based upon unproved philosophical premises. —Translated and Condensed for The Literary Digest.

THE NEW PAGANISM.

REFERRING to a recent address delivered before the students of Airedale College, England, on certain degenerate tendencies among the higher classes at the present time, The Christian Register (Unitarian, Boston) joins in deploring what it calls, "The New Paganism." By this is meant that disposition in society, literature, and even religion, to adopt pagan in preference to Christian ideals, to worship art for art's sake, and to promote culture without morality. These tendencies are noted in the literature of the time as represented in the productions of such writers as Zola and Grant Allen, and in the region of theatrical art where vulgar and impure displays are given the precedence and have the largest popularity. Continuing The Register says:—

"Then, further, there is growing up in our midst a large and increasing body of people who are often pure and noble in character, keeping all the commandments of the Old Testament, if not remarkable for the active enthusiasms and personal sacrifices of the New, who are living without any conscious recognition of God,—agnostics and indifferentists, who would be the first to admit that organized religion in any form is as remote from their daily lives as the planet Mars. They got a smattering of it when they were children at home, and perhaps expect to be buried under its sanctions; but it is alien to them and to their interests. Paul describes them exactly when he says, 'They do not wish to retain God in their thoughts.' They are educated, esthetic, of cultivated tastes and habits; but religion, in the shape of wonder, reverence, worship, has died out of them, if, indeed, they ever had much of it, while what the author of 'Ecce Homo' calls the enthusiasm of humanity—that special virtue of the Christian religion—seldom, if ever, disturbs their elegant and luxurious selfishness. And the sad feature in connection with them is not their own estrangement from Christianity, which is bad enough, but the education of their families in the new paganism. They themselves cannot wholly escape from the Christian influences in which they were reared, and which crop out unconsciously in the midst of non-religion and irreligion. But we look with justifiable fear upon a coming civilization from large tracts of which positive Christianity has been entirely eliminated. The sour grapes eaten by the fathers will set the children's teeth on edge. 'What,' says the speaker to whom we have referred, 'will be the moral and spiritual condition of those born into an atmosphere from which the very thought of God is absent? What kind of a race will that be which has never been touched by faith in God? What kind of young men and women will those be whose childhood is passed in homes where the name of God is never heard, where prayer to him is never offered, where praise to him is never sung?' We cannot contemplate a generation permeated with paganism of this kind without trembling for the future of what we value most in the home, the state, and the nation. But it is alleged education will save them. Will it? If experience has taught us anything, it is this, that, while knowledge is power, it is not of necessity power for good. It may be, and not infrequently is, power for evil. Education offers facilities for virtuous living, but it is assuredly not the force that is capable of grappling successfully with vice. Men are not saved by it; and it is open to question whether the moral standards of living among the cultured classes are much, if anything, better than the

"THE AMERICAN ISRAELITE" ON RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

"Eternal vigilance," says The American Israelite, Cincinnati, "is the price of liberty, and those who believe that the boon of religious liberty and the equality of all religious denominations before the law, which has been won after centuries of battle, can be held without constant watchfulness and effort, are most grievously in error. For on every hand we see preachers of religion, who should be seeking to teach morality, peace, fraternity, and charity, using every effort to destroy these virtues and uproot the principles upon which the fathers so wisely built our Government. The fight for freedom is not permanently won by any means. Nor will it be as long as the fanatics who have their headquarters at Pittsburg continue their efforts to have Jesus proclaimed God by the Congress of the United States and the legislatures of the various States. Not as long as the war upon the public schools is carried on by Protestant ministers under the plea of promoting morality by the reading of the Bible, Old and New Testaments, with explanations according to their interpretations. Not as long as the Catholic Church makes war upon the public school system, denouncing it as Godless and immoral, and places a ban upon those parents who send their children to it. Not as long as Catholics seek to seduce Protestants from their church and Protestants send missionaries among Catholics, and both are at work to corrupt the faith of the Jew. Until these remnants of previous centuries of bigotry, ignorance, and persecution, have passed away, the friends of religious liberty cannot lay off their armor and boast the battle won."—Sel.

REVIEW OF "WHO SHALL DECIDE?"

It sometimes becomes necessary to retrace the steps men take in order to discourse whether there is necessity to change views, methods, or practices. The necessity for such a retracing of footsteps may occur from any one of several causes. Doubt, created from new light on the topics treated of; the discovery of error, or the attack of one holding adversely, may create a desire to go back and look over the ground once occupied.

We give herein an article by A. V. Gibbons, of St. Johns, Apache County, Arizona, criticising an article written by Joseph Smith, dated Plano, February, 1879, published in HERALD for March 15, 1879.

ST. JOHNS, Apache County, Arizona,
January 11, 1896.

Editor Ensign, Independence, Missouri.—In your issue of December 28, 1895, appears an article headed "Who Shall Decide?" written by Joseph Smith. It apparently was published in answer to several communications from the West, and of course was an answer to mine to you of November 22, 1895. But it does not answer my question, "How came you by the apostleship?" satisfactorily to me. The article is misleading in the extreme, and is not a free and frank interpretation of the law.

I will point out some of its inconsistencies: The article is based upon the assumption that the church was rejected as a whole, and became disorganized. What does that mean? If it means anything, it is that God took from earth the priesthood, or power to act, and left mankind as they were before. If at some future time God saw fit to recommit it, he would certainly honor those holy men as in the first instance, thus requiring a new dispensation. Mr. Smith's reasoning that there remained in an unorganized form men whom God recognized after a general rejection had taken place, is strange logic indeed; and that the apostleship and the higher offices in the church could come from the lesser, is stranger still; it is unnatural; and then to claim as a precedent for such action the organization in "1830," is absurd.

I wish to show you how he has willfully (it seems) misinterpreted the law in order to brace up such a theory. He says: "An apostle is an elder; hence, those two called of God apostles were ordained to be called the first and second elders of the church. No higher priesthood attached to them than was couched in the word 'elder.'" I ask, Why were they called "apostles"? Was it a misnomer? or had they actually been ordained apostles? Read section 20, paragraphs 2, 3, Doctrine and Covenants, Utah Edition, a revelation given before the church was organized.

"Again," (I quote from article,) "from this beginning grew in fourteen years, a church numbering nearly two hundred thousand members, all the officers in which held their respective offices by reason of ordinations received under the hands of these two men."

Let me ask when "Joseph Smith, Jr., Oliver Cowdery, and David Whitmer placed their hands upon the head of P. P. Pratt" and ordained him to the apostleship, did they do it by virtue of their ordinations as elders, or did they do it by virtue of their ordinations as apostles? Now, I submit that an apostle is an elder, but an elder is not an apostle, and cannot confer the "apostleship." Oliver Cowdery said in his charge to the Twelve Apostles, "You have received your priesthood from those who have their power and authority from an angel."—History of Joseph Smith, page 154. What angel was it? Was it Peter? The Lord said that he did send Peter, James, and John to Joseph Smith the Seer, and others, who ordained and confirmed them to be apostles. (See sec. 27, par. 12, D. C. Utah ed.) Joseph said that the voice of Peter, James, and John was heard in the wilderness, declaring themselves as possessing the keys of the kingdom. (Sec. 128, par. 20, D. C.)

In view of the above facts did Joseph Smith hold the apostleship at the time he ordained Parley P. Pratt to be an apostle? If he did, Mr. Smith's theory is wrong.

Because the word "elder" is applied to all the offices in the Melchisedek priesthood, Mr. Smith rushes to the conclusion that the quorum of elders is equal in authority to the other quorums. We find in the law that in the Melchisedek priesthood, there are four degrees of authority, organized into quorums; each quorum has an organization peculiar to itself; and their duties are as varied as their construction. If the elder can perform all the duties of an apostle, seventy, or high priest, why not unite them and call them one quorum? But we find that each quorum has a duty to perform peculiar to itself. The apostle holds the keys to unlock the door of the kingdom of heaven unto all nations and to preside over all the churches. The seventy is to assist him in preaching the gospel. The high priest is to teach the art of presiding and to preside over the different stakes of Zion. The elder is a standing minister to the church; and is an "appendage" belonging unto "the high priesthood." Sec. 84, par. 29 Doctrine and Covenants. It is the "privilege" of the elder to enjoy the blessings of the Melchisedek priesthood in his ministrations in the church; but he cannot ordain to the higher offices.

Mr. Smith, after making several quotations from Doctrine and Covenants to prove that the Melchisedek priesthood has the right to preside, establish, organize, and reorganize the church, says: "If it be urged that an elder cannot receive commands to do this work, we reply, that the case is covered by the following: 'to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven; to have the heavens opened unto them; to commune with the assembly and church of the first born; and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father,'" etc. And I ask, After receiving all these favors and privileges referred to above, is the elder then authorized to set up the Church of Christ and ordain all the offices therein? I say no, because it is not the order of the priesthood. There is not a case on record in holy writ where the lesser has ordained the greater.

Mr. Smith says: "Again, It is provided that growing out of organization there is a necessity for presiding officers; and these are to be chosen 'out of, or from among' their peers, the priesthood which they respectively hold being equal, the fact of one being chosen to preside not changing that held by him."

We are to understand by the above that the quorums are equal; and that it would make no difference which quorum was chosen from; they would still retain that office in the priesthood which they previously held. And if we did not have the law before us, we would never know but what three elders could be "chosen by the body, appointed and ordained . . . to form a quorum of the presidency of the church." The law says: "Of the Melchisedek priesthood, three presiding high priests, chosen by the body," etc., constitute a [the] presidency of the church. Mr. Smith says in substance that the priesthood they hold being equal, the selection could be made from either quorum; that their different callings in the priesthood would cut no figure. Is this not misleading?

It appears that the "Reorganization" does not consider the apostle of much importance to the church; as I have read in some of their writings, "that the church got along without apostles for five years and could have continued." But this was not the case in the apostolic age; for we read, "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers," etc. The apostleship is the embodiment of all the offices in the church, and from which all came.

Mr. Editor, I feel that I have already trespassed. Hoping that you will publish the above article, I remain,

Very truly yours,

A. V. GIBBONS.

The above article by A. V. Gibbons is the occasion of this review:—

“WHO SHALL DECIDE?”

“WE have frequently been tempted to place some thoughts before the Saints, in defence of the Reorganization; and one principal reason why we have not done so long ere this, has been that it would, in some respects, savor of self defence. Some things lately occurring, have determined us to offer something for the consideration of some who claim to be thinkers, and are somewhat disturbed by their thoughts, and what they seem to think the anomalous position of the Reorganized Church.

‘First, In reply to the question, Is it not a new dispensation, requiring a new delegation of priesthood and ministerial power?’

‘We answer this at once. It is not a new dispensation, as contradistinguished from the church established in 1830. Nor is a new delegation of priesthood required; other than a commandment to those already empowered to move in given directions, to the magnifying of that already given.

‘Second, If it is not a new dispensation, requiring a relegation of priesthood authority; what is it?’

‘To this we answer, that it is what its name implies, a reorganization of elements that remained after a disorganization of an organized body had taken place.

‘Clearly to that portion of them that remained within the rule of faith and practice, given of God to govern the body when organized; or to such portion as may have once left that rule, and had returned thereto.

‘Fourth, The question, Where was the Church during the lapse of time between the disorganization and the reorganization?’

‘It was with the remnant scattered abroad, who remained true to the principles first given as the gospel of Christ; and with any body of such remnant, numbering six or more, under the pastoral charge of an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon.

‘Fifth, How could the church reorganize itself? ‘Can a stream rise higher than its fountain?’ If the priesthood was disorganized, did not paramount right remain with some one holding the highest authority, upon whom the duty rested, to ‘set the house of God in order,’ to ordain men to the higher offices in the priesthood and organize the quorums; and to whom the prerogative to ordain all others belonged; and without whose sanction nothing could legally be done to build up the kingdom of God upon the earth?’

‘The Church was organized in 1830 with six members, upon two of whom the eldership had been conferred by command of God; these two being called the first and second elders of the church. (D. & C. 17: 1.) From this beginning grew in fourteen years, a church numbering nearly two hundred thousand members, all the officers in which held their respective offices by reason of ordinations received under the hands of these two men, directly or indirectly, by virtue of the command of God, the call of the Spirit of Christ and the publicly confessed acknowledgment of the people, who by their votes said: ‘So let it be.’ The fountain whence this stream flowed, was the ‘will and commandments of God;’ (D. & C. 17: 1;) the stream, (as many apply it who object to the position of the Reorganized Church,) was the priesthood, the Melchisedek, in which is comprised all grades of authority, and any one of which is competent to the regulating and setting in order all the rest, under, and by reason of the force and power derived from the fountain. A command of God to do anything always conveys the right to do it, and guarantees to those commanded the powers necessary to carry into effect the command; hence, the command originally given to organize the church, conveyed the right, and vouchsafed the necessary power to do it. No attempt to cause the ‘stream to rise higher than its fountain’ has ever been made by the Reorganization. All that it has ever attempted to do has been to carry into effect the command originally given, and subsequently supplemented by command to the remnants, to ‘establish the church,’ by the preaching of the gospel, the doctrine revealed to the first elder.

‘The mistake that those who so frequently use this axiom, ‘a stream cannot rise higher than its fountain,’ have always and persistently made is, that they have located this fountain in a man,—authority attaching as a personal perquisite,—and, therefore, he could confer nothing he himself did not hold; forgetting the important fact that the law, the command, the Holy Ghost was, and is the fountain, the priesthood the stream, men the channels in which the stream runs. If the exclusive right and prerogative had been vested in one, precluding the directing, controlling and governing power from acting unless through that one, then did God singularly put the work in jeopardy, and divest himself of that right which reason suggests that he has always reserved unto himself, to act independently; to take into his own hands at any time the measures for carrying out his designs.

‘The provisions of the law given of God seemed to have been ample; but, for some unexplained reason, the church were not prepared by an intimate acquaintance with those provisions, for the emergency that occurred; or else they strangely mistook the nature of the command, and the powers necessary to carry it into effect. One of the provisions, states that ‘an apostle is an elder;’ hence, those two called of God apostles were ordained to be called ‘the first and second elders of the church.’ No higher priesthood attached to them than was couched in the word elder; the whole body of the Melchisedek order being referred to time after time in the commands given to the church, as ‘elders,’ ‘the elders of my church,’ ‘ye elders of my church.’ (D. & C. 17: 9, 13; 42: 1; 43: 1, 4.)

‘Another provision of the law declares that ‘the office of an elder comes under the priesthood of Melchisedek.’ This priesthood has ‘power and authority over all the offices of the church.’ (D. & C. 104: 3.) Another clause provides that, ‘an elder has a right to officiate in his stead when the high priest is not present.’ (D. & C. 104: 6.) Another still more specific, provides that ‘the high priest and elder are to administer in spiritual things, agreeably to the covenants and commandments of the church; and they have a right to officiate in all these offices of the church when there are no higher authorities present.' (D. & C. 104: 7.) Again, another, pointing still more clearly to the comprehensive character of the word elder, 'the power and authority of the higher, or Melchisedek priesthood, is to hold the keys [right to act] of all the spiritual blessings of the church.' (D. & C. 104: 9.)

'This conveys to us, clearly, that if the Melchisedek priesthood is present in any of its offices, the right to organize, or to reorganize; the power to establish, build up, and confirm all the church are there; and, if directed by command of God, to perform all the work necessary. If it be urged that an elder cannot receive commands to do this work, we reply, that the case is covered by the following: 'to have the privilege of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven; to have the heavens opened unto them; to commune with the assembly and church of the first born; and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father, and Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant' (D. & C. 104: 9); which appertains to and applies of right to all officers of that priesthood, that of elder being one of them.

'Again, It is provided that growing out of organization there is a necessity for presiding officers; and these are to be chosen 'out of, or from among' their peers, the priesthood which they respectively hold being equal, the fact of one being chosen to preside not changing that held by him. Hence, when organization required these officers at the beginning, authority was found in the body, by command, to ordain them; and when reorganization again demanded similar officers, authority was again found in the body, by command, and the work was done.

'If there was one, and one only, to whom the prerogative attached, and whose assent or dissent, made void, or legalized all acts done in the progress of building the kingdom, so-called; then this one, whoever he might have been, took the place of, 'Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law to govern my church.' (D. & C. 42: 16.) This has been objected to by the Reorganization; which has insisted that the law, and he who gave it, are the first authorities in the church. Hence, to assume that no act could be legal if unqualified by the approval of this person who was supposed to have been invested with supreme priesthood authority, was to deny the sanctioning power of the law and its giver, as exemplified in the cases, 'Separate me Barnabas and Saul;' and 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased.' The ground occupied by the church has been; what God clearly commands must be done; what the Spirit confirms, though it might be dictated by human wisdom, that is correct. 'Though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.' (Gal. 3: 15.)

'The Reorganization early took the position that morality, honesty, virtue and obedience would insure equal blessings to all; that there were no individuals exempt from the operation of the saving efficacy of the gospel, neither by reason of place, birth, nor importance; and therefore, the work of God could not and would not depend for an existence upon the earth to some privileged repository of priesthood, who, no matter what his acts or teaching, held, or could hold other co-workers in abeyance.

'To admit the theory that some one man did hold the only priesthood prerogative and right to act, without whom no organization could be legally effected, is to place the existence of the church as a visible aid and tangible help to the salvation of the human race, upon a precarious chance,—the chance that this one man should live, be wise, good, a worthy example, a willing, ready and active worker; and if any one of these qualities should be lacking, then the work would be frustrated, no church could be established; man's hand would turn the keys upon the Emmanuel, the anointed one, the Christ. Human sagacity might so have arranged the affairs of an earthly kingdom; but divine wisdom could surely have made no such mistake. There may be men in existence who claim that they are the ones who thus stand in the place of the axis upon which the spiritual world and work of God turn for poor humanity; and that unless the Lord and his human instrumentalities choose to arrange the wheel, and wheels within a wheel, of church government, organization and gospel labor, upon and with reference to this axis, the whole business must stop; but we sincerely hope there are none of them in the Reorganization. If there were such a man and he should die, churchly learning and gospel wisdom would die with him, and human hopes must be buried in his grave.

'But,' it is urged, 'such a man would not die; God would not let him die!'

'Moses was the man who led his people out of bondage, and gave emancipated Israel the tables of the law; yet Moses died, not entering the promised land. David disenthralled Israel from the Philistine yoke, yet David was not permitted to build the temple. Jesus fulfilled the law, and gave the crowning means of redemption to man, yet he died, and all hope of the many died with him, to rise only when by his resurrection the disciples were made to know that in his rising life had been given to his body, the church. Joseph Smith, to whom the fact was made known that Christ had a people upon the earth, whom he would call by a republication of the gospel message, and who was permitted to live to organize, by command, co-workers fitted and qualified for the dispensation in which they lived, died long before the work which the church must necessarily accomplish to fill the grand mission claimed for it had been done. Did wisdom die with Moses, David, or Joseph Smith? We apprehend not.

'Upon Joshua fell the labor left when Moses was taken away; upon Solomon rested the burden of building the temple; upon James, Peter and John and all the disciples was cast the propagation of the gospel of peace, with Jesus as the Christ, after the tragedy of the cross and the triumph of the resurrection. While those upon whom depended the work left by each of these, prosecuted their labors in accordance with the genius of the work as begun, and in keeping with the message entrusted to them, so long there seemed to follow great success; but Israel went widely astray after Moses and Joshua; the church was gradually submerged in departure from the faith after Christ and the disciples.

"When Joseph Smith died, he left a work which was to be proved a grand one. Those upon whom the first burden of the labor fell, had ample opportunity and means to know what the genius of that work was. An organization had been created by command, and growth, that challenged respect and admiration. Its spiritual power for good was being felt wherever its co-working laborers went. The life-pulses of that work, everywhere gave token that the Spirit of Christ was following the message; and that his supervising care was watching over it. So long as the workers kept within the lines of their message, the power that built them at the beginning built with them. But change came; the fabric began to shake. Ambition and lust of power and the flesh, usurped the places where single-heartedness and devotion had been; prosperity turned the leaders giddy; with giddiness came folly; hundreds of the honest and faithful, who, like Joshua, had testified truthfully, grew faint, remonstrated, then rebelled and scattered like sheep upon the mountains. Valiant men sprang out of the ranks, and essayed to stop the current of spiritual retrogression in vain; they were swept aside. Some kept battling away, calling upon modern Israel to return to the Word, to stay and inquire what the work demanded at their hands; but few heeded the call. The only body of any number that remained together for any considerable length of time was one that had incorporated into the doctrines originally received something in spirit and practice foreign to them. The result was, that large numbers of those who had received the first teachings were to be found in almost every quarter of the land, isolated and in groups, differing widely from the prevailing faction, and differing more or less from each other; all bewailing the scattered and fallen condition of the church, and anxiously enquiring of each other and the Lord, 'What shall we do?'

"At length the united, or strangely unanimous cry of these scattered and suffering ones was heard; almost simultaneous inquiries received separate but agreeing replies. The Lord, true to his promise and his care of his people, sent out the Spirit to fulfill his word. The people that were left thus scattered began to gather themselves together, and in conferring began to consider the law by which the church was to be governed. The Spirit aided them, a command was received, and history repeated itself. Those whose purposes were to serve God and him only; whose hearts were set to do his will, waiting only his direction, were shown that there was a remnant remaining, with whom was left a sufficient degree of authority to do what was commanded, and the Reorganization was a fact, an existent, tangible reality. The question of authority to organize was sprung at an early day, thoroughly discussed, and agreement finally reached. It was found that in several instances branch organizations, which had been established in the days of Joseph, the Martyr, under the ruling of the church as then organized, still remained, retaining their organization, form of worship, and declaration of belief, unbroken and undisturbed. This simplified the character of the defence set up by the elders, who were elders of the church before the death of Joseph and elders of the reorganized one, elementary fragments, remnants of the people of God. The principle was announced, Sunday, June 13th, 1852. 'We believe that the Church of Christ, organized on the 6th day of April, A. D. 1830, exists as on that day, wherever six or more Saints are organized according to the pattern in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.'—Hist. of R. p. 3.

"This principle became one of the underlying sills upon which the church fabric rested; and when it was supplemented by what followed, the ground work for success was laid.

"Resolved 'That the whole law of the Church of Jesus Christ is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.'—Hist. of R. p. 4.

"Here is an element of strength that must enter into the discussion of the claims of the Reorganization. If one or more of the branches of the church, organized between the years 1830 and 1844, were found to have retained their organization untouched by the spirit of apostasy, and unbroken by the assaults of false doctrine, there was found a witness, who, like Joshua, had testified truthfully, and was found sufficient to the work of reorganizing the hosts of Israel. We believe it to be susceptible of proof that there were two, if not three, one at Beloit, one at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, and one at Jeffersonville, Illinois. The latter was built up by Elder Thomas P. Green, who was sent into that region of country by Joseph Smith the Martyr, himself, and was there at the death of Joseph and Hyrum, in 1844, retaining his branch in the truth.

"Here, as in 1830, the elements from which the Church was created, existed; here, as then, commandment guaranteed authority; the channels of manifestation existed, priesthood having already been conferred, the right to act was given and the duty of the priesthood made clear. The charter of their Christian liberty was declared to be the law which had been accepted by the whole Church in solemn assembly, and each and every claim not in harmony and keeping with that charter were denied. The result of constant adhesion to that line of policy, that rule of conduct, faith and practice is clearly seen. The tide of prosperity that rolled unchecked from April, 1830, to June, 1844, gradually receded before the 'iniquity' that came in 'like a flood,' until almost everywhere the name of Mormon stank and was a synonym for evil; until scarcely an organized branch of the polygamic faction was found in America, except in Deseret. Further on, the tocsin of reorganization was heard. It sounded faintly and feebly over the wastes of spiritual Babylon; but here and there it reached the ears of the scattered captives, who took up the cry, until it reverberated from hill top and valley, until from three lone, solitary folds, the number has grown to many hundred folds; the 'Spirit of the Lord raised up the standard,' and it has been carried by earnest men along the front of the battle, cheering the wayworn and weary, and making firm the strong. One by one the claimants to the royal place have passed away, until only the polygamic departure and the Reorganization stand face to face upon the field. Which shall yield remains for the future to determine.

“Sixth. Where was the present leader of the Reorganization? and why did he not come into notice before 1860? What of the interval? Where was the priesthood during the time from 1844 to 1860?

“These questions are easily answered in the light of what has already been presented. The present Joseph Smith was where his father had left him; a member of Christ's body, properly baptized and confirmed, dwelling in the city where reposed the ashes of his father and uncle, ready to perform his life-work when pointed out to him. The reasons why he did not come into notice sooner is that he was not sooner made aware of his duty. When his duty was pointed out in the winter of 1859 and '60 he did not tarry longer; and in obedience to call, in fulfillment of prophecy and in accordance with the wisdom directing the reorganizing effort, he put himself in the way of the work. He could not have come sooner in consistency, and he makes no apology for the delay.

“It is the belief of the writer that no effort would have been successful in resisting the tide of evil which was creeping over the Church prior to the Reorganization. The spirit of confusion and adultery seemed to have a period of undisputed sway. Men would not listen to the voice of faith; and although the apparently ruling majority were boldly met and their abominations denounced by faithful, warning witnesses, who knew and know the truth, they were laughed at and derided,—the time had not yet come. The Spirit of the Lord was at work among the faithful; the spirit of mischief among the unfaithful. The Lord was watching over his own. In June, 1852, a public assembly in which the unbroken branches—the remnants—were represented, was held; and there the ground of hope for the Latter Day Saints was retaken and reaffirmed. This declaration of principles was opportune, for on August 29th of the same year, the dogma of ‘plural marriage’ was announced in Utah. That which had been at work in the hearts of the children of disobedience until secrecy was no longer possible, now raised its formal head. Untruth put on the livery of heaven to shield its devotees; but truth though seemingly slow, had recorded her solemn and dignified protest months before. The quiet grandeur of righteousness was now arrayed against the brazen effrontery of crime against the law of the land and transgression of the law of God, as given to his Church in 1830 and 1831, ‘a righteous law’ and sacred then. All this was taking place during the interval; the powers of church organization and government conferred by the divine mind for the last time, ‘incapable of annihilation’ had remained with the people; and in their exercise, by the command of God, at the opportune time, provided the means of escape and defense. Eight years from the death of Joseph and Hyrum the Apostasy was completed in the public declaration of its shame. At the same time the standard against iniquity was raised; the enemy was now an open one, and was declared against by the Church, the faithful remnant. Two months before the polygamic faction had submitted to the shackles of error put on the people by Brigham Young, the affirmation of the principles of safety had been completed; and thus a solemn protest against that enslavement had been made. This we believe to have been wisely provided for by the Lord, that the Reorganization might have the surer foundation. Eight years after this, the son of the Martyr, by divine direction, became identified with the Church, the body remaining true to the doctrines of the Church into which he [had] been baptized, and the spirit of which he had received under the hands of his father. The conditions of the work seemingly demanded him and he was added to its workers.

“The priesthood, so far as ordained men constitute the priesthood, was scattered here and there over the whole land; some in transgression wilfully, some ignorantly and some innocently; some in despair; some in suspense and anxiety; some in hope; some dejected; some in infidelity, rank and gross; some in doubt, and some in confident expectation; but so far as delegated authority from God makes priesthood, the priesthood right to act in the name of the Church as ministers for Christ, remained with the faithful elder, priest, teacher and deacon, who had not bowed to Baal, nor spotted his garments with unholy lust. And if there had been no more than a Joshua, the son of Nun, and a Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, there would have been enough; but as there were more, there were more than enough.

“The powers of government, and the ‘law, to be my law, to govern my church,’ (D. & C. 42: 16,) had been conferred; divine wisdom had dictated both. The purpose for which they had been conferred had been clearly set forth; the design unmistakably stated. Neither design nor purpose contemplated a hierarchy of priestcraft and oppression, of lust, wealth, priestly aristocracy, or power. When, therefore, leading men, ordained men, either knowingly and willfully, ignorantly and blunderingly, or themselves innocently deceived and deceiving, introduced that which subverted the design and turned aside the purpose, their right to act ceased; the ‘amen’ was spoken ‘to their priesthood,’ and they unchurched themselves; they had spoken that which the Lord had not declared, and had spoken presumptuously, they were not to be feared. Hence, the design and purpose remaining unchanged, those to whom had fallen the lot to be instrumental in carrying them out who remained faithful to their trust, must be acknowledged of God. That they were and are so acknowledged of God in the Reorganization we are most certainly assured.

“This then answers the query as to where the priesthood was during the period between June, 1844, and April, 1860. The Reorganization has not claimed a new dispensation; have denied that one was necessary: and any one reading the Doctrine and Covenants, must discover, that a claim to a new dispensation, a new revelation other than a direction to already authorized messengers, disposes of the question of succession of work and creates a new body of Christ; and fond and slow as many fancy that the Reorganized Church has been, it has not been so foolish as that. The men properly received into the Church prior to 1844, who present themselves to the Reorganization for identification with that body, are only asked to verify their original reception, and state their desire for affiliation; these are held to justify their reception and fellowship. The position they occupied, within the rule of organization provided for in the law, is accorded to them as of right, upon a proper confession of faith. No other body of believers growing out of the latter day work has, as we believe, ever taken this ground; but all have held it essential that all applicants must be baptized into the specific order to which their application was made. It was not the individual that they feared, it was the application and working of the principle. They supposed some precious prerogative would be jeopardized by the acknowledgment of a principle that might possibly take in a wide range, that might involve the return, in mass, of other bodies holding similar offices and officers to fill them. The Reorganization stated and affirmed the principle, and have abided by its just issues.

"The question is rapidly nearing the solution. The Reorganization is occupying the ground it first assumed, and morally and socially is standing more firmly than ever before. The blows it could strike but feebly at the first are being restructed with earnestness and force. The energizing forces of gospel truth are at work; and except for internal dissensions, private brawls, priestly jealousy and contentions, alike contemptible and disgraceful, an era of spiritual prosperity is again upon and before us. The issues are being fairly made; the refuge of lies is being uncovered; the day at hand when it may be properly said to Latter Day Saints of every shade of belief and unbelief, 'choose ye, this day, whom ye will serve;' decide ye, upon which side you will be found, the side of primitive Mormonism, the law, virtue, and ultimate peace; or the side of rebellion, subverted law, lust, and ultimate disgrace.

"JOSEPH SMITH.

"PLANO, February, 1879."

The inference that the article, Who Shall Decide? was written "in answer to several communications from the West," is like some of the other inferences made in the criticism of Mr. Gibbons, without support, as nothing is found in the article itself warranting the inference. Mr. Gibbons writes that the article "Who Shall Decide?" "is misleading in the extreme, and is not a free and frank interpretation of the law," and proceeds to point out some of its inconsistencies, or states that he will. In doing this he proceeds upon a direct misconstruction of what was written, and on that misconstruction carried all the way though his criticism he argues and makes unsustained statements as conclusions. He writes that the article "Who Shall Decide?" was based upon the "assumption that the church was rejected as a whole and became disorganized;" then proceeds to state, "What does this mean? If it means anything, it is that God took from the earth the priesthood, or power to act, and left mankind as they were before." This conclusion is an inference only, and has no warrant in the article criticised, and is so far from being correct that the position taken on the point is precisely to the contrary, that notwithstanding the departure from the faith, and the consequent rejection of the church as a whole, the priesthood and the right and power to act attached to and continued with individuals, who had remained in the faith, hence were of the church. Having made this blunder in understanding what the base of the arguments in "Who Shall Decide?" was, it is easy to see how Mr. A. V. Gibbons failed to comprehend the argument made.

It is a well-known and long established principle in law, both ecclesiastic and secular, that where a church, or a number of believers have become members of a recognized body, having a name and a confession of belief, and rules of organization and procedure, no change can be made in confession of faith, or rules of procedure, by which those rules and principles of faith are denied, reversed, changed, or abandoned, against the wish, knowledge, and consent of the membership. And if any number, few or many, choose to retain the faith and practices at first obtaining and under which they became members of such body, those persons thus remaining true to the original faith are, and of right ought to be held to be the original body, or church. This is good law and is plain common sense. It agrees with the revelation of God to the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, given in May, 1829:—

And now, behold, whosoever is of my church, and endureth of my church to the end, him will I establish on my Rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against him.—D. C. 9:17 Lamoni Edition. (10, Utah Ed.)

The reference made by Mr. Gibbons that the contention that men remained authorized to act in the calling and offices to which they had been called and ordained under the rule of the Prophet Joseph Smith, after the church as an organization had been rejected, is "strange logic," comes with bad grace from one who should be acquainted with the history of the latter-day work. The organization of the church itself was not until April 6, 1830, and yet men had been preaching and baptizing for months; and only six out of a possible membership of thirty were present on that occasion. The principle obtained there and then; that "wherever there were six, or more regularly baptized members anyone of whom was an elder, priest, teacher, or deacon, there was the church."

The priesthood of these men 'had been hid with Christ in God.' They were entitled to it by the "lineage" of their "Fathers" (D. C. Sec. 84, par. 3; Utah Ed. 86), and it required only the command of God to authorize them to act and set them at work. The world had been without this command. A great and terrible apostasy had occurred; men had been seduced from the right ways, the ways of the Lord; the Adversary had taken advantage of the ambition and lusts of men, and evil and seducing dogmas had been introduced and the people led away; until the right to act was denied unto men. This right to act was restored by the coming of the angel and men were called and ordained, and the priesthood conferred for "the last times." (D. C. 26, par. 3; Utah 27; 32:1; Utah 33.)

The writer of "Who Shall Decide?" knew that the dispensation involved this conferring of the priesthood for "the last times," hence did not make the mistake of presuming that the Reorganization meant, or could mean a new dispensation. Nor did the disruption of the church at or after the death of Joseph Smith necessarily involve the taking away of the priesthood, or power to act, from the earth as this critic assumes.

The church existed from April 6, 1830, to the calling and setting apart of the apostles some four years after; and no one cares to dispute the right of those men who were called to be the first and second elders in the church to act in all that God commanded them to do.

Mr. Gibbons has made the common mistake that all the divisions of the Latter Day Saints except the Reorganized Church have made in failing to distinguish between the priesthood and the offices in the priesthood. If the revelations given to the church from the first are of value, then there are but two priesthoods, the Melchisedek and the Aaronic. So states section 104; (Utah 107). The priesthood by virtue of which an elder is called and ordained and acts as a servant of Christ and the church is the Melchisedek, and the priesthood of an apostle is just the same. The office and work may and do differ, when the quorums are organized, their priesthood is the same. Any argument based upon any other assumption must fail when examined.

Oliver Cowdery's charge to the "Twelve Apostles" does not change this plain acceptation (for it is not an interpretation) of the law as stated in the section of the book referred to.

Again, this critic mistakes the position taken in "Who Shall Decide?" in that he assumes that the writer states that the work done by Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and others was done by virtue of their office as elders only.

The argument in that article was that by command of God any officer in the Melchisedek priesthood could ordain any and all other officers necessary to the carrying on of the whole work of the church. No other conclusion can be reached or maintained.

We quote from section 19 (Utah 21), paragraph 3, last half of the paragraph the following:—

Wherefore, it behooveth me, that he should be ordained by you, Oliver Cowdery, mine apostle; this being an ordinance unto you, that you are an elder under his hand, he being the first unto you, that you might be an elder unto this Church of Christ, bearing my name; and the first preacher of this church unto the church, and before the world; yea, before the Gentiles; yea, and thus saith the Lord God, lo, lo! to the Jews, also. Amen.

To use Mr. Gibbon's own language; "Why were they called" elders? "Was it a misnomer?" In the quotation given above Oliver Cowdery is commanded to ordain Joseph Smith, because he, Oliver, himself, was an elder under Joseph Smith's hand. Why should this order be given to Oliver because he was an elder? Why did not the Lord say, Ordain my servant Joseph Smith, mine apostle; because you are an apostle under his hand? If Oliver Cowdery as an elder was thus commanded to ordain, is it not prima facie evidence that he as an elder could legitimately so ordain, by virtue of that commandment? This command was given April 6, 1830. The contention in "Who Shall Decide?" on this point is that an elder because holding the Melchisedek priesthood, may when commanded of God do anything that any officer in that priesthood may do. To this agrees in spirit the 43d paragraph of section 104; (Utah 107:98), of the Doctrine and Covenants, a revelation showing the order of the priesthood:—

Whereas, other officers of the church, who belong not unto the twelve neither to the seventy, are not under the responsibility to travel among all nations, but are to travel as their circumstances shall allow, notwithstanding they may hold as high and responsible offices in the church.

If Mr. Gibbons will read as he should, with open eyes, he will see that neither Joseph Smith in the article "Who Shall Decide?" nor any others of the Reorganized Church can justly be made responsible for the parallel standing made between the officers in the church, so far as priesthood is concerned; it was made by Him who gave the vision. The twelve (apostles), the seventy, are required to travel, other officers, including the elders, may hold "as high and responsible offices in the church." This too is not an interpretation but a direct statement by the law, the word of the Lord to the church. The position taken in "Who Shall Decide?" was, and is taken from the law and is consistent therewith.

Mr. Gibbons errs again when he states,

Because the word "elder" is applied to all the officers in the Melchisedek priesthood, Mr. Smith rushes to the conclusion that the quorum of elders is equal in authority to the other quorums.

This shows that Mr. Gibbons neither reads the law, nor the article correctly. Mr. Smith nowhere stated that the quorum of elders was equal in authority to the other quorums. Mr. Gibbons should have known that there are three quorums that in their decisions are made equal, the three presiding high priests, (the Presidency), the Quorum of the Twelve, and the Quorum of the Seventy. These three the law makes equal. The same law makes all the "other authorities or offices" under God and the Son, in the church to be "appendages to this priesthood," the Melchisedek. (D. C. 104; 107 Utah.)

The same law, states that "an elder has the right to officiate in his stead when the high priest is not present." Who makes these to hold similar right to act? (D. C. 104: 6; 107 Utah Ed.)

The same law states that

The high priest and elder are to administer in spiritual things, agreeably to the covenants and commandments of the church; and they have a right to officiate in all these offices of the church when there are no higher authorities present.—D. C. 104: 7. (107 Utah Ed.)

Who makes the high priest and elder the equal to higher authorities in the church, in this citation from the law?

These citations from the law support the positions taken in "Who Shall Decide?" It was because of them that the article in defense of the Reorganization was written.

Mr. Gibbons misconstrues the position taken in "Who Shall Decide?" again in this way; he states:—

Mr. Smith says, "Again, it is provided that growing out of organization there is a necessity for presiding officers; and these are to be chosen 'out of, or from among' their peers, the priesthood which they respectively hold being equal, the fact of one being chosen to preside not changing that held by him."

Mr. Gibbons assumes this to mean thus:—

We are to understand by the above that the quorums are equal, and that it would make no difference which quorum was chosen from; they would still retain that office in the priesthood which they previously held.

He tries to make this apply to the choosing of three elders from the quorum of elders to form the First Presidency, etc.

The meaning of the statement is this: The law provides that out of organization there grew the necessity for presiding officers. These are chosen from among those presided over; the Presidency is formed by the choosing, appointing, and ordaining three, who shall be, after their call and ordination, three presiding high priests, to preside over the Melchisedek priesthood. All the qualifications mentioned in the paragraph of the law in which this necessity for presiding officers is stated is that they are of the Melchisedek priesthood. Elsewhere it is stated that the President of this High Priesthood is to be appointed by revelation. The President of the Quorum of Twelve is to be one of the Twelve Apostles; the Presidents of the Seventy are to be of the Seventy, not of the Twelve, nor of the High Priests, nor of the Elders' quorums; the President of the Elders' quorum is to be an elder; of the Priests, a bishop or a priest; of the Teachers a teacher, and of the Deacons a deacon, each quorum as such being presided over by one holding the priesthood of that quorum. Hence Mr. Gibbons misled himself in his criticism, and makes it improper and inapplicable.

Taken as a whole the criticism is faulty, and does not criticise. And we suggest that as the intervening sixteen years since the article was penned has not changed our opinion, Mr. Gibbons read it a little closer, and see if he cannot discover the one clearly made proviso that the command of God is the authority upon which the church was first organized, by which Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery baptized and confirmed and ordained each other; and that by the same royal mandate, there remaining after the disruption at Nauvoo officers holding the Melchisedek priesthood such officers could establish, build up, and reorganize the church.

In this we may not have answered to Mr. Gibbons' satisfaction, but we have answered according to the law, and have not attempted to evade any of the responsibilities that the law imposes. Jesus was greater than John, yet John baptized him; and the baptism was acknowledged of God.

The prophet that anointed Saul to be king, was not the superior to the king, but by the command of God he set him apart to be the king.

What God does by his servants he does by himself; what a man does by an agent he does by himself. What God commands to be done he gives authority to do.

The church having been duly organized, the means of its perpetuation was provided in the laws given to it; and the powers of its government, like the powers of the government of the Colonists, given by God, were "incapable of annihilation," and when those placed in authority perverted and abused their prerogatives, those just powers of self-preservation and government returned to the people as provided. "Nevertheless, through you shall the oracles be given to another; yea, even unto the church."—D. C. 87:2. (Utah Ed. 90.)

THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

THE sixth annual convention of the General Sunday School Association convened in the Temple, at Kirtland, Ohio, on Friday, April 3, 1896, at two p. m. The program provided for a morning session, but a sufficient number of delegates to do business did not arrive until the noon hour.

The Superintendent not being present the assembly was called to order by Sr. Anna Salyards, the Assistant Superintendent. The hymn, "Send us showers of blessing," was sung, and prayer was offered by Bro. J. F. Burton, of California. By request of the Assistant Superintendent and by action of the body Bro. F. G. Pitt was chosen to preside during the convention sessions. Being authorized to appoint a committee on credentials he nominated Brn. J. F. Mintun, F. M. Sheehy, and T. A. Hougas.

Bro. G. W. Robley, of Rhode Island, then delivered an address of welcome. The speaker reviewed, to some extent, the growth of the work of the past, calling attention to the demands and labors of the present and future, to the work of which all who had gathered in its interests were welcomed and encouraged to continue actively.

The hymn, "When we meet safe at home in the morning," was sung, when the minutes of the convention of 1895 were read by the Secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson.

The committee on credentials reported. Report adopted, committee continued.

The reports of officers was next in order.

The Secretary stated that he had not received a report from the superintendent.

The Assistant Superintendent stated that she could not report any work done as assistant because none had been given her to do, and that she had not been consulted concerning the work of the association; that she was obliged to make such statement in answer to the call for her report.

The Secretary presented the following report:—

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

My report of the work done during the past year is perhaps best covered by a statement that I have occupied quite a considerable time in attending to the various duties that devolve upon the Secretary of the General Sunday School Association. These duties are defined in the Constitution and By-laws, as a record to be kept of the districts and schools by their reports; a report be prepared for the General Assembly, annually, and keeping the meetings of the annual sessions.

There is involved in this work the necessity of a great deal of correspondence relating to the making of accurate reports and incidentally there comes many questions of work in general caused by the association still being in its early youth and the consequent absence of complete information, as we hope some day all members of the association will have.

By coöperation with the Superintendent, I have answered a great many letters and have attended to the labors as above outlined as best I could. For two years prior to this we corresponded with the general missionaries of the church, sending them various Sunday school literature, circular letters, etc., but this year our Superintendent thought best not to have this done. We did, however, distribute quite generally a letter discouraging the workers of Sunday schools from selecting the users of tobacco as their officers or teachers. A more detailed report of this will be read before you later.

There is one thing I believe the association could do to have the Secretary feel freer in his labors during the year without necessarily amending the Constitution, and that is by general consent, or by special instruction, permit him to attend to a great deal of the correspondence of the association with the consent and through the instruction of the superintendency.

The Constitution provides for the Superintendent attending to the correspondence, sending out the printed instructions, etc.

All this requires a great deal of time for the Superintendent, whereas, if it was simply required that he have the oversight and direction of this and the Secretary to attend to the clerical work, more time could be used by the Superintendent in attending to other duties, such as traveling and instructing the various districts, associations, and schools.

The reports from the district officers indicate a desire to see more of the general officers and from them receive increased life and energy which come from receiving personal instruction and information relative to the general and special features of the association and Sunday school work.

This was illustrated quite forcibly to my mind last summer when on a seven weeks' pleasure trip through the East. The schools we visited and the workers we talked with seemed anxious to hear from the work in general, and where improvement was needed, showed a keen desire to know what should be done to accomplish the best results for the cause. This trip ended with the Logan reunion, where they had the best series of Sunday school meetings I have yet had the pleasure of attending.

The growth and improvement of the association is perhaps best shown by the statistical report which I have made quite full and complete this year.

He also presented an exhaustive statistical report in detail, from which we make the extracts that follow, from the footings of "totals." The entire report may be published in full when completed, for the information of those interested in the Sunday school department: Total number of Sunday schools in district associations in the year 1895, 163; in 1896, 174. Membership 1895, 8,154; 1896, 8,589. Number of scholars in schools not connected with district associations, in 1895, 168; 1896, 179.

The report was received and ordered spread upon the minutes. The report of the treasurer, Sr. C. B. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, was read and referred to an auditing committee consisting of Brn. Myron Fisher, A. H. Mills, and T. W. Williams. A summary of its receipts and expenditures shows the following figures: Balance on hand last year $928.18; cash receipts from Quarterlies issued at Herald Office, and from interest on amounts loaned Herald Office, $1,788.10; due from subscribers to Quarterlies, $203.30; total receipts, $1,991.40. Expenditures: Editing Quarterlies, $420.00; Herald Office, $1,107.45; E. A. Blakeslee expenses to Logan, Iowa, $28.56; A. H. Mills, on music committee work, $2.00; postage, etc., $4.86; total $1,562.87. Balance on hand $1,356.71.

The committee appointed in 1895 to issue a circular to various districts and schools expressing disapproval of the practice of tobacco using, reported that it had issued a general circular, as follows:—

To Bro. ———, Supt.,

Dear Brother:—By resolution of the General Sunday School Association, we were instructed to notify you of their disapproval of the selection of officers and teachers of the various schools in your district who are addicted to the use of tobacco. A moment's reflection upon your part will satisfy you as to the wisdom of this resolution. Children to a large degree are copyists and partake very largely of the habits of older persons with whom they are associated. What father or mother is there in the church who would wish to have their children grow to manhood having acquired the habit of chewing and smoking tobacco through the example set by the officers or teachers in the Sunday school? We doubt if we could find one true Latter Day Saint who would approve of such a course for their child.

This being true (and we assume that it is) then it is our duty as officers in this work to secure as officers and teachers in the various schools those who will set proper examples of morality and cleanliness. You will kindly notify the schools in your jurisdiction and, we trust, cooperate with them in securing the enforcement of this resolution of the General Association.

Ever praying for the success of the work, we are, in bonds of truth,

E. A. BLAKESLEE, Supt.

W. N. ROBINSON, Sec.

The report of committee was adopted.

Brn. F. M. Sheehy, T. W. Williams, and G. W. Robley were appointed to furnish information concerning the convention and the general Sunday school work to representatives of the public press.

Bro. T. A. Hougas was chosen chorister, A. H. Mills and Sr. Ada Clark organists for the convention.

The privilege of the floor was extended to all members of the ministry present. Hymn 102 Winnowed Songs was then sung, when the assembly was dismissed with the benediction.

The weather has been and yet remains quite cold and the attendance is much smaller than at other conventions. For these reasons the life and interest of the convention work has not yet been as highly developed as at former gatherings. However, an excellent spirit prevails and unity of heart and purpose exists among the delegates to such an extent that the progress being made is quite satisfactory.

The evening exercises were opened in the usual manner. The feature of the evening was a paper on "Securing and retaining attention," written by Sr. Ruth M. Sheehy, of Boston. Discussion of the paper followed and was participated in by Brn. R. S. Salyards, F. G. Pitt, J. F. Mintun, C. D. Carter, T. A. Hougas, and G. W. Robley. The primary class work and address provided for in the program were omitted, those appointed to take part not being present.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?

AMONG the bills introduced in the Utah Senate is one by Senator Sutherland, which, as reported in the minutes of proceedings as published in the Deseret News for March 17, is to the following effect. We give the extract below:—

POLYGAMOUS CHILDREN.

Sutherland introduced S. B. 120, which is entitled a bill for an act to legitimate the issue of bigamous and polygamous marriages, born on or prior to January 4th, 1896, and declaring their heritable and other rights. It provides that the issue of bigamous and polygamous marriages, heretofore contracted between members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, born on or prior to the fourth day of January, A. D. eighteen hundred and ninety six, are hereby legitimated; and such issue are entitled to inherit from both parents and have and enjoy all rights to the same extent and in the same manner as though born in lawful wedlock. The act is to take effect upon approval.

There is a certain amount of curiosity in the minds of some whether this bill introduced by Senator Sutherland should apply later than the date of the issuing and adoption of the manifesto of President Wilford Woodruff. As the acceptance of the manifesto is understood by the outside world away from Utah to have been the ending of polygamous marriages in the Utah Church, it would seem by this attempt at legislation to make polygamous children legitimate, thus legalizing polygamous marriages, that such legislation should not be made to apply to marriages entered into later than the date of the adoption of the manifesto abandoning it.

It has a peculiar look, this bill, and is in effect prima facie evidence that there have been continuing polygamous marriage relations, not only to the adopting of the manifesto, but all the time prior to January 4, 1896, the date sought to be fixed by the bill.

The outside world have been asked to believe that the abandonment of the dogma and practice of polygamy by the Mormon Church was done in good faith and was final. This bill suggests strongly that the outside world made a mistake; that no such thing was intended.

It should be suggested, if not insisted upon, by some up to date senator, that the bill in the form it is presented in the report published in the News is highly objectionable in this, that the marriages referred to in the bill, the issue of which it is intended to legalize, are the marriages between members of the church, the hitherto polygamous church in Utah, and in this is a species of direct and mischievous legislation. The bill is an attempt to legalize bigamous marriages and their issue. Why should the bigamous marriages contracted prior to January 4, 1896, between the members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints be legalized, and the bigamous marriages contracted by other persons not members of that church and the issue of them be left unprovided for, and their illegality emphasized by such legislation? Is there any just reason for the one not applicable to the other?

This bill of Senator Sutherland has a peculiar look, and before it becomes a law it should get an airing in discussion that will test both the propriety of it and its probable constitutional legality, if it should get into the United States Courts.

HERE'S A CHANCE.

A SISTER writes to us thus:—

In Doctrine and Covenants 86:1 it says that tobacco is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. Now who has got that judgment and skill to give others instructions how to use tobacco? As we have got a valuable cow sick I thought of this statement. Who will answer for the good of all?

Somebody must have an idea what the ways in which this weed of weeds can be safely and wisely used as a medicine are. Will they give us an article on the subject, and oblige the sister and others? We will wait awhile and if two or more articles are sent will use the best one presented, with added comment on the topic. Let us hear from you.

A PRACTICAL ASPECT OF THE BIBLE.

A STUDY of the Bible reveals at once the fact that those elements universally acknowledged as indispensable in a prosperous business man are those pointed out as stepping-stones to earthly honor and success. Diligence, honesty, truthfulness, sobriety, and the fear of God, are repeatedly mentioned as constituting the only enduring foundation of a happy, useful, and prosperous life. Many of our practical business men realize this fact, and so take the Bible in preference to any other book as guide in the management of their affairs.

A young man just commencing business for himself wrote to the editor of the New York Tribune, inquiring how he could manage to prevent insubordination on the one hand, and make a decided success as an employer on the other, and asking, also, if he knew of any books that would help him, received the following sensible reply: "The best single treatise is the New Testament, next to this is the Book of Proverbs. The best business man we ever knew memorized the entire Book of Proverbs at twenty-two, and, when he became an employer himself, gave a copy of the book to every employee, with a friendly inscription commending it as an admirable business guide."

Here we have the clear testimony of a practical man to the great worth of the Bible as a guide in the management of business affairs. The same thing may be said of this book as of the godliness it teaches, it is "profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Even in material pursuits he will be much the gainer who makes the inspired volume his everyday counselor.

The Scriptures are designed, not alone to awaken faith and stimulate spirituality, but as well to fit men, in the best sense, for their career in this world. This feature is too often lost sight of in the more general belief that the Bible is designed wholly to teach the doctrines and principles of religion. To be sure, this is its chief aim, but as a repository of simple, practical maxims, helpful to our guidance in the discharge of our everyday duty, it is worth more than its weight in gold to any man. To him who daily consults its sacred pages it proves a veritable "lamp unto his feet."—Rev. H. H. Parry in Sunday School Times.

NOW IS THE TIME.

TO THE dear sisters, adopted children of the kingdom, and one with you in preparation for the coming of the great King, I address this letter. After reading the letter of Sr. Burlingame in this week's issue, I continued thinking of the purport of it, the needs of the present time to continue the ministry in the field, wondering what I might do in the matter. And while my mind was so engrossed, a dream I had some few years ago came to my recollection. I will relate it:—

Before me was spread different countries, oceans, and islands, places far away from this land; a ship sailing to these places. Then I was near a church, midst Saints—sisters, and money was contributed, each one making a sacrifice to give. Some gifts were twenty-five cents, some five cents, and it was given humbly and freely and lovingly, and a good look was on their faces as they passed by, one after another, and my heart went out to them in a fullness of love. I knew none of them, only they were Saints. Then I said, "How good of them to make this sacrifice; and they don't know it isn't needed." Then a voice said, "No, they are permitted to make this sacrifice that they may receive a blessing."

To-day I thought, Is this the time for the fulfillment of my dream? and are we sisters now to contribute and make sacrifice in a "free will offering" (for I thought it was such) to the church, to carry the good news to all people that our King is coming; and that we may receive a blessing? What say you, sisters? All of you; aye, all. Though it be but a penny, God can bless it. Let this be a united effort, and let not the right hand know what the left hand does, (for so I saw it,) and let a fervent prayer go with each offering. This would be as a ring binding us together in a circlet of love. It could be arranged in this way: Take a pasteboard box (a shoe box would do), tie a strong cord around it to keep the cover in place, cut a slit in the top large enough to put a silver dollar through. Let each sister wrap her gift in a piece of paper before leaving home (this in branches where there is a Bishop's agent), and drop through the slit, the Bishop's agent taking charge, and reporting amount to Bishop Kelley. Those who live near Lamoni could send direct to Bishop Kelley, without signature. In a reasonable time he could announce the whole offering, not a single one or the offering of a branch. Hoping this will meet with approval, I will start it by inclosing my offering in this letter to Bishop E. L. Kelley. A SISTER.

WEBB CITY, Missouri.

Dear Sisters:—I feel impressed to write a few words this evening, hoping something I write may encourage some one to press on. I attended our Sisters' Prayer Union this afternoon. Though few in number the Lord always verifies his promises, "where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." And we indeed were blessed and strengthened. Though all felt as though they were making sacrifice of time and strength, all realized they were amply repaid for all they had done, and were willing to make a greater effort to be present at every meeting.

Dear sisters, let us make an effort to meet in these meetings. For if you feel discouraged, or are downcast when you go, you will feel differently (if you do your duty) before you leave. Let us as young sisters make it a point, if possible, to meet with them. Don't think it is no place for you, but for the older sisters. If it is a place to receive spiritual aid, I am sure we need all the help we can receive from the Lord, as much as anyone. Let us strive to press on.

I am young, but feel like there is a work for all of us to do, great or small, and I desire to do my part. "Let us pray for one another." Your sister,

MIRTIE JONES.

DONT'S FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY REV. DWIGHT E. MARVIN.

OFFICERS.

1. Don't talk. The influence of a teacher's words is often destroyed by a "few practical lessons" from the superintendent or a speech from a visitor. The words spoken may be excellent, but they are out of place after the lesson.

2. Don't disturb a class by speaking to the teacher or any other member of the school during lesson hour. The time should be sacred to Bible study. Interruptions are without excuse.

3. Don't hold business meetings on the Sabbath. Considering secular affairs turns the mind away from sacred things.

4. Don't practice for Sunday school concerts after the session. Let the scholar go home with the words of the teacher fresh in the mind, or remain for words of counsel and helpfulness.

TEACHERS.

5. Don't absent yourself from the school without providing a substitute. It is discouraging to the class and embarrassing to the superintendent.

6. Don't be late. A late teacher makes a late class, and late scholars disturb the school.

7. Don't visit in the school. Teachers often injure their influence by visiting other teachers during the opening and closing exercises.

8. Don't allow a scholar to be absent two successive Sabbaths without knowing the reason. The teacher's responsibility in this particular does not end with the Sabbath.

9. Don't leave the checking of class books and taking collections until the secretary or treasurer comes around, but attend to the matter before the lesson begins.

10. Don't allow scholars to have new library books or papers until the close of the lesson.

11. Don't permit lesson quarterlies and lesson leaves to be substituted for the Scriptures. They are often excellent helps for home study. The Bible is the only allowable textbook.

12. Don't forget that your mission is to lead to Jesus Christ and not merely to entertain. So instruct that the unconverted may be led to the Savior, and the Christian into closer fellowship with the Redeemer.

13. Don't rest contented with simply knowing your class is in the school, but visit the scholars in their homes.

14. Don't think you can teach without knowing the scholars as well as the lesson. Have private conversation with each member of the class on the subject of personal religion.

SCHOLARS.

15. Don't think you have done your whole duty in attending Sabbath school. The church services are for you as well as others.

16. Don't think home preparation of the lesson unnecessary. Faithful study should precede class recitation.

17. Don't allow yourself to be inattentive during the opening and closing exercises, or indifferent to instruction lest you disturb the school and discourage your teacher, besides losing much that would do you good.

18. Don't listen to the teacher of another class, but attend to the instruction of your own teacher. Many are thoughtlessly discourteous in this particular.

19. Don't neglect to mind the bell; it is rung for a purpose. It is a message from the superintendent to you.

20. Don't forget that regularity, promptness, earnestness, knowledge, and courtesy are five characteristics of a good scholar.

—The Ram's Horn.

To have no aim in life is to sooner or later fall into the ditch.

It is hard to believe that a sin will bite if it has gold in its teeth.—Ram's Horn.

LITTLE HELPERS.

"I will be a little helper,"

Lisps the brook.

On its silvery way it goes,
Never stopping for repose,
Till it turns the busy mill,
In some nook.

"I will be a little helper,"

Smiles the flower.

By the wayside, in the field,
All its beauty is revealed
Unto sad and weary hearts, Though skies lower.

"I will be a little helper,"

Sings the bird.

And it carols forth a song
Though the cheerless day be long,
Bringing to some helpless one
Some sweet word.

You can be a little helper,

Child so fair!

And your kindly deeds can make;
For the Heavenly Father's sake,
Sunshine, love, and happiness
Everywhere!—S. S. Times.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 23.

Dear Sister Royce:—Seeing your plea in the Herald for contributions I thought I would hand in my mite. The first time I ever met any of the Saints here was at Sunday school. There were just two families and they met at one brother's house and held Sunday school each Sunday, though there were but six children in all. Last June our Sunday school went into the association. Our enrollment is twenty-two, and nearly all are regular attendants. We feel proud of our collections, as each week they greatly exceed the number in attendance. The teachers keep a record of their classes in the little class record books which can be procured from the Herald Office. The secretary keeps a record of attendance and collection by classes, giving the attendance of each class and the total attendance, and the collection in the same way.

I teach a primary class and would like to hear from other primary teachers. I tell my pupils Bible stories, and teach them questions on the Bible as they cannot read. When an opportunity offers itself I ask them to decide between right and wrong, and they nearly always answer correctly. Let me urge every teacher, especially of the children, to be very careful of her conduct. What is grander than the pure love of children, and how they will love us if we give them a chance! But how soon they will lose all faith in us, and all love for us, if we tell them they must do certain things, and then we make no effort to practice what we teach.

May God grant that we, as teachers, may realize the responsibility of our position, and be successful in our efforts to teach the coming men and women to fear and serve the Lord aright.

Your sister in Christ,

HESTER YOUNG.

CLARION, Iowa, March 29.

Editors Herald:—It has been nearly eight years since I became a member of the Church of Christ and I know as I grow older in years the stronger I grow in the love of Christ. I attend the Christain Endeavor here, always take an active part to let them know I am a follower of Christ. I have been called upon to lead a number of times, and then I try to sprinkle a little of our doctrine in. We have Bible reading every Sabbath evening, and the Endeavor has a union meeting at the county jail once a month, where we read our Bibles, sing songs, and pray. We have had good attendance and the prisoners always give us a hearty welcome. It is a good plan for the young brothers and sisters of the church whenever we have the opportunity of visiting the meetings of the young people of other churches to take part and show them we are not ashamed to own Christ. We must not sit still, but be up and doing with a willing heart and hand; if we cannot say or do very much, why, a little is something accomplished. God will bless us and help us in doing small things just as long as we do our part. I know the Lord has blessed me. He has answered my prayers before I joined the church.

May the young brothers and sisters live so we can show the ones around us in our daily lives the right from wrong, that we may lead others to the kingdom of God, is my prayer. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may ever be found faithful.

In the bonds of Christ,

FLORENCE CARLSON.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Jan. 31.

Editors Herald:—It may be of interest to say that I interviewed several elders out of seven of the Utah Church on board ship before it sailed for America. There were fourteen in all on board, some of whom were "gathering"; the elders were returning after finishing missions of from two and a half to three years in New Zealand and Sydney. In answer to questions we ascertained that they have about sixty missionaries in this mission, most of them in New Zealand. They have nearly four times our force in Australia proper. They claim about three thousand members in New Zealand (mostly native Maoris); so if you don't wish us three boys to be swamped or completely vanquished, just prevail on the coming conference to augment our force. We were informed that public sentiment had changed (but wondered if it wasn't the Utah Church that has changed) and they were now "reopening" this mission.

The elder declared that Utah is only a stake and was never regarded as anything else (but they flatly contradicted each other, unknown to one another, on this point); from which we concluded that it were well for them to go home, find out what is really in the books, and then agree on a line of argument.

Further questions brought out the usual statements concerning Joseph Smith's teaching polygamy and his practice of it, and the usual absence of proof of the same. After all these questions (and an occasional "Are you positive?") it is amusing to think they did not see that we were too familiar with Latter Day Saint subjects to be a real reporter of a Sydney paper. But they seemed proud to be "interviewed" up to the very last, and had we not to hurry down the gang plank, would have explained. But as it is never too late to explain I send reports to the journals I represent—Herald and Ensign. As they desired very much a copy of the interview you may send a copy of this to the address inclosed. I have in hand a verbatim report of the interview, but besides being rather long, the matter is little more than the usual edition of Utah failures to satisfy the critical reader. It also reveals the fact that most Utah missionaries are quite ignorant of the truths of revelation and facts of history contained in their own books. If home-keeping apostles and leaders in Utah doubt this, let them untie the hands of their "force" over here, by removing the stricture, "Let them severally alone," and we will endeavor to make good the above affirmation.

G. R. WELLS.

COLDWATER, Mich., Jan. 13.

Editors Herald:—I believe we all may think for ourselves and present our ideas, that we may investigate and come to a better understanding. We believe the gospel is free, for Christ said to the apostles, "Freely ye have received, freely give." Also, "Provide neither gold nor silver, . . . for the workman is worthy of his meat." This gives us to understand that they must be cared for by some one.

Let us reflect for a moment: When an elder first came into our respective neighborhoods how we rejoiced when we became convinced and obeyed the restored gospel! Now those elders were never caught up bodily at some other point and carried and set into our church or schoolhouse, with their pockets full of cake, ready to present the word of life to us. O no; but quite differently from that; for some one had to bear their expenses, and we have enjoyed the fruit of their labor. Now shall we in like manner help with our means that elders may be sent to present the glad tidings of great joy to others that have not yet heard the gospel, that they too may rejoice with us?

Yes, the gospel is free; but those that use all their time in presenting it—their families must be cared for.

We must become interested in the financial question of the church. To my mind it is something like this: If I have property in Michigan I am interested in the laws that regulate Michigan. I may read the laws of Indiana, but I give them but little thought; but if I hold property also in Indiana, I will be equally interested in her laws. So it is: if our hearts are wholly upon the things of this world, we are interested in its laws only; but if we give to the church, we also become interested in the laws regulating the same. Could we only see that money paid into the treasury of the church is like placing it in a savings bank, the kind Father being in charge, it will never become bankrupt and all along in this life we will receive a dividend, and at death we will not be forgotten; but we will not receive the full amount until the day of judgment; then all will receive according as they have placed in God's hands.

Let us ask ourselves how much we love this work; if enough that we are willing to make a sacrifice for its progress. I believe it would do us good to keep an accurate account of all our expenditures for one year and then look it over and see if it would not present to us a sad picture. Perhaps down along the line of articles we would see tea, coffee, tobacco, and many other articles we could dispense with if necessary; yes, and farther along we might see "attending operas" so much; horse racing and baseball games so much. And should we add these up it makes quite a sum. Now let us see what we have paid into the church. O, how little some of us have given!

It is not my intention to say whether you should use those articles or go to such places or not, for we have the church publication that we can read and draw our own conclusions; but I will say, I think that if we can't pay into the church and meet those other expenses, we had better pay into the church. It will give us better returns, and when we think of the church—it is the grandest organization we can unite with. The poor as well as the rich will be recognized and receive its benefits, if they will help to bear its expenses, in proportion as the Lord has blessed them. If I am worth one hundred and Bro. A is worth one thousand dollars, when I pay ten dollars I will receive the same benefits and blessings as my brother who has paid one hundred dollars. This is all the Lord has asked—that we give as he has blessed us. He will never reap where he has not sown. Then let us be consistent and never say we can't help in the good cause we are engaged in, when we meet such expenses as I have mentioned.

We are not all preachers, yet there is a work for each one to do, no matter how weak we feel; and if the elders are willing to give all their time we ought to give one tenth of our time, or equivalent to that when we can be at home with our families. It is not as pleasant as some of us might suppose to bid our loved ones adieu, to be gone a year or more, and some to cross the waters deep. And what object have they in view? Is it for wealth or honor? We answer, No; but in the interest of this great latter-day work that has cost some of the best blood of this nineteenth century, to bring about what we today enjoy. Then should we not awaken to our duty and aid the servants of God, by our means and prayers, that they may stand in boldness and present the glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people, until the Father shall say, "It is enough; come up higher"?

Let us try and make them feel at home when they are with us, not that we need make any great ado over them, and place them in our parlor bed, where there has not been any fire for weeks, and make our kindness a detriment instead of a blessing to them; but treat the ministers as one of the family, give them as warm a bed as the house affords, and this I believe will be all they will ask for.

Will those in charge of the branches of this district make an extra effort that every member's name, as near as possible, may appear on the book, remembering that the Lord will recognize the effort we make to do all we can, and not the amount we give. So let us do all we can, whether it is much or little, remembering the widow's mite; how she gave more than they all.

As I have been appointed to take up the work where our honorable and worthy brother—Bro. Lockerby—laid it down, I ask an interest in your prayers that what I do may be done in that way that the kind Father will approve of it, and that I may never betray the confidence of the brethren and sisters that recommended me at our late conference.

Your brother in the faith,
SAMUEL STROH,
Bishop's Agent.

CAIN HILL, Mo., March 21.

Editors Herald:—I have just been reading an article from the pen of our worthy brother and apostle, J. R. Lambert, which I indorse; and when I say indorse I think I voice the sentiment of every true Saint. Bro. Lambert believes in friendly criticism when it is done in harmony with the spirit and letter of the perfect law of God. "The perfect law" teaches us that the path of duty is straight. Now as the path in which we are to walk is straight and narrow, and the Saints are only fallible creatures, should not a brother or sister in the right way inform those who step aside from the path of duty that they have erred from the way of truth, and that without offending the erring ones? In this work the ministry are the teachers and the laity are those who are taught; but if the Saints say either in words or actions that they do not wish to be taught, then they displease the Lord, for he has placed the ministry in the church for that special purpose. The ministry cannot teach the Saints without seeing errors among them, and when the error is detected and exposed it is termed criticism. We may progress in two ways. One is to see our own mistakes and correct them, and the other is to allow others to tell us of our faults and then forsake them. Both of these ways should be in constant use among the Saints. While each member in the church needs to be watched over in the spirit of love, the same is true in households, branches, districts, and in general church work.

While criticism at the proper time, at the proper place, and in the right spirit, is just what we need and must have, yet when indulged in at the wrong time, place, or in the spirit of contention, it is sin.

In regard to settling all differences of opinion in quorum work, it is impossible. Many differences may be settled in quorum work, no doubt, but as many questions arise between conferences which need to be solved before the conference, it would be unwise to defer the settlement of such for the quorum work.

I do not think it wise for anyone to write some theory to the Herald which is merely speculative and of little or no benefit to its readers. When we send our views to the Herald they should be on such subjects as are of vital importance. When one lacks information relative to church doctrine it may often be obtained by asking a branch officer, a missionary, or missionary in charge, or it may be obtained from the Bible, Book of Mormon, or Doctrine and Covenants. I hope and pray that the Spirit of Christ may prevail in the General Conference.

APRIL 1.—Bro. Joseph Ward and I have been holding meetings at Cain Hill, Missouri, four miles east of Thayer, for the past two weeks, with good success. Bro. and Sr. Frisbie were the first baptized there, and by living right others have been baptized from time to time till we now have eight members at that place. In the meeting just held we baptized four persons by the name of Madden, who I think will make good members. I blessed three children and organized a Latter Day Saint Sunday school, which I hope will prosper. In the faith,

C. J. SPURLOCK.

PIN OAK, Illinois, April 2.

Editors Herald:—At present writing there is a discussion going on between Bro. I. N. White, of the Saints Church, and W. J. Moore, of the Missionary Baptist Church, at Arrington Station, on the Air Line Railroad, six miles from here. Bro. White affirms for the Saints Church that it is identical with the church of the New Testament; Mr. Moore denies. Mr. Moore affirms the Baptist Church is identical with the New Testament church set up by Christ and the apostles. To the present Bro. White has coolly and calmly set forth his arguments, backed by abundant Scripture evidence, gaining friends for the truth every speech, while Mr. Moore misrepresents and uses vile epithets, to the disgust of every reasonable minded person who hears him. I feel to thank God. The truth will lose nothing by this little rub; it will only shine the brighter. For the ultimate triumph of the truth I ever pray.

Your brother,
JOHN F. SIMMS.

ELDORADO, Kansas, March 29.

Editors Herald:—Eldorado is quite a good Western town, well represented by churches, (as Asia was in times of the apostles,) together with the Salvation Army and the Seventh-day Adventists as appendages, the latter having just closed a series of meetings of about thirty-five sermons. They have awakened quite an interest along their line, particularly on the Sabbath question and the angel's message, fulfillment of prophecy, and kindred topics. They boldly assault other faiths and show up their mistakes, but one thing is very noticeable: they soon have business somewhere else after becoming aware that they are in contact with a Latter Day

Saint. This is very much to my satisfaction; but I am glad of their effort, as it has made an awakening in the minds of the people, and I am improving the opportunity as best I can to sow the pure gospel seed, especially in regard to the restoration, as they have opened the way by preparing the minds of the people. Last night the speaker was to introduce Elijah that was to come before the great and notable day of the Lord. So the house was crowded, with all eyes ablaze for Elijah, but disappointment was the result, for no one was presented to represent him. Now while these people are in their present state of unrest, I feel that the Voice of Warning would be a good thing to present to them, and if I can be furnished with a copy by way of donation I will endeavor to have it worn out by keeping it in the hands of those who may want to investigate on that line.

Your brother in the restored gospel,
J. E. STALEY.

CALKINSVILLE, Mich., March 22.

Editors Herald:—The work was started here by Bro. E. J. Martindale, of Coleman, about a year ago. He worked in the mill there and came down every Sunday to preach, a distance of about twelve miles, and last fall he and J. J. Cornish came for a week with the tent, and this winter Bro. F. C. Smith came and held meetings and baptized five. Last Sunday we went to Coleman and Bro. Martindale baptized four. At two p. m. we met for confirmation, but Elder Bailey was impressed by the Spirit to put off confirmation. They met at Bro. and Sr. Moxon's and confirmed one young man that evening and had a good meeting, and on Tuesday morning confirmed the other three; and my husband's sister, who has been investigating, arose and said she had been so troubled she could not sleep since she heard Bro. Smith preach, and that she did not know why. When she sat down Bro. F. C. Smith arose and under the influence of the Spirit spoke directly to her: "Verily, thus saith the Lord, Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins;" and after speaking a few words to her came the blessed assurance, "I am well pleased with my people this day," and promised us blessings if we are faithful. The sister has been a long time serving God to the best light she has had and asks the prayers of all for her husband, who is opposing this work.

Pray for us that we may endure to the end and that we may let our light shine. I love this work. The hardest trial I have to bear is, that of a family of ten brothers and sisters I am alone in this work, and my dear father and mother are not with me either. Dear Saints, pray for them and me; my brothers and sisters do not want to hear anything about the Latter Day Saints.

EVERLASTING HAPPINESS AND EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.—NO. 3.

BY ELDER J. L. BEAR.

PARAGRAPH 6 speaks of the different glories to be inherited by the different classes of men; and those that remain do not receive an inheritance in any of these glories:—

They shall return again to their own place to enjoy that which they are willing to receive, because they were not willing to enjoy that which they might have received.

And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willetth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment; therefore they must remain filthy still.—Par. 8.

2 Nephi 6: 8-10 reads:—

But wo unto him that has the law given; yea, that has all the commandments of God, like unto us, and that transgresseth them, and that wasteth the days of his probation; for awful is his state!

Paragraph 11:—

And they shall perish.

Paragraph 12:—

And, in fine, wo unto all those who die in their sins: for they shall return to God, and behold his face, and remain in their sins.

Second Book of Nephi 12: 3:—

But behold that great and abominable church, the whore of all the earth, must tumble to the earth; and great must be the fall thereof: for the kingdom of the devil must shake, and they which belong to it must needs be stirred up unto repentance, or the devil will grasp them with his everlasting chains, and they be stirred up to anger and perish: for behold, at that day shall he rage in the hearts of the children of men, and stir them up to anger against that which is good; and others will he pacify, and lull them away into carnal security, that they will say, All is well in Zion: yea, Zion prospereth, all is well; and thus the devil cheateth their souls, and leadeth them away carefully down to hell. And behold, others he flattereth away, and telleth them there is no hell; and he saith unto them, I am no devil, for there is none; and thus he whispereth in their ears, until he grasps them with his awful chains, from whence there is no deliverance. Yea, they are grasped with death and hell; and death, and hell, and the devil, and all that have been seized therewith, must stand before the throne of God and be judged according to their works, from whence they must go into the place prepared for them, even a lake of fire and brimstone, which is endless torment.

Chapter 13: 3. Better never had known the Lord.

Book of Jacob, 4; please read it.

I call the reader's particular attention to the following:—

For behold, there is a wo pronounced upon him who listeth to obey that Spirit; for if he listeth to obey him, and remaineth and dieth in his sins, the same drinketh damnation to his own soul, for he receiveth for his wages an everlasting punishment, having transgressed the law of God contrary to his own knowledge.—Mosiah 1: 10.

This, after they have been taught the ways of God and his laws, and then transgress, and go contrary to that which has been spoken, withdrawing themselves from the Spirit of the Lord:—

I say unto you, that the man that doeth this, the same cometh out in open rebellion against God: therefore he listeth to obey the evil spirit, and becometh an enemy to all righteousness; therefore, the Lord has no place in him, for he dwelleth not in unholy temples. Therefore, if that man repenteth not, and remaineth and dieth an enemy to God, the demands of divine justice doth awaken his immortal soul to a lively sense of his own guilt, which doth cause him to shrink from the presence of the Lord, and doth fill his breast with guilt and pain and anguish, which is like an unquenchable fire, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever. And now I say unto you, that mercy hath no claim on that man; therefore, his final doom is to endure a never ending torment.—Par. 11.

For behold, they are blessed in all things, both temporal and spiritual; and if they hold out faithful to the end, they are received into heaven, that thereby they may dwell with God in a state of never ending happiness. O remember, remember that these things are true, for the Lord God hath spoken it.

Is it possible that there are any who profess to be Latter Day Saints who will doubt the truthfulness and correctness of such plain language? Can the Lord speak any plainer to man than he does here in this Book of Mosiah? If it don't mean what it says, then there is no reliance to be placed on the rest that is written in the book, and consequently it would be good for nothing. Then the latter-day work is a humbug, and if the latter-day work is a humbug, then there is no God, and no Devil, and all is humbug, and we ourselves are nothing but humbugs!

It is a universal belief, and we as a people, also believe that the righteous will inherit eternal life, a happy future state, which happiness will last forever—will be enjoyed everlastingly, be never ending. O, yes; we all believe that. Now, there is just one ing: If the word "everlasting" means what it says in one way, why not in the other? If "forever and ever" means what it says in one way, why not in the other?" Where it says they shall dwell with God in a state of never-ending happiness, and on the other hand that his final doom is to endure a never-ending torment, just exactly the same language is used; and if it don't mean the same, then I would not give a fig for such a foolish and incorrect language. Why, such a language would be sheer nonsense. And indeed the Lord himself would be culpable and he could not be depended upon, because mankind would never know what he means when he speaks. Therefore if it is eternal life on the one hand, it is eternal damnation on the other; if it is never-ending happiness, it is never-ending torment. And if never-ending torment has an end, then it is not never-ending torment, and consequently false. Then the prophets spoke falsely in the name of the Lord.

According to the common sense of the word, if that never-ending torment has an end, then look out, your never-ending happiness will also have an end! Then what in the world do you know will become of you hereafter? Take another probationary state, and maybe become a devil, subject to a devil, and afterwards be damned? And the wicked, he advances, gets out of that misery, gets up higher and higher and will be saved? O, what a continual change we would have to go through, damned and saved, saved and damned, one continual round of misery and happiness.

Book of Mosiah 1:16:—

And now, I have spoken the words which the Lord God hath commanded me. And thus saith the Lord: They shall stand as a bright testimony against this people, at the judgment day; whereof, they shall be judged, every man, according to his works, whether they be good, or whether they be evil; and if they be evil, they are consigned to an awful view of their own guilt and abominations, which doth cause them to shrink from the presence of the Lord, into a state of misery and endless torment, from whence they can no more return: therefore, they have drunk damnation to their own souls. Therefore they have drunk out of the cup of the wrath of God, which justice could no more deny unto them, than it could deny that Adam should fall, because of his partaking of the forbidden fruit; therefore, mercy could have claim on them no more forever.

And their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames are unquenchable, and whose smoke ascendeth up forever and ever. Thus hath the Lord commanded me. Amen.

The flames of the guilty conscience cannot be quenched:—

Except he repenteth of that which he hath done, he perisheth forever.—Mosiah 2:3.

That we may not bring upon ourselves a never-ending torment, as has been spoken by the angel.—Ibid 3:1.

The Lord redeemeth none such that rebel against him, and die in their sins; yea, even all those that have perished in their sins ever since the word began, that have willfully rebelled against God, that have known the commandments of God, and would not keep them; . . . neither can the Lord redeem such: for he cannot deny himself: for he cannot deny justice when it has its claim.—Ibid. 8:6.

But remember, that he that persists in his own carnal nature, and goes on in the ways of sin and rebellion against God, remaineth in his fallen state, and the devil hath all power over him. Therefore he is as though there was no redemption made; being an enemy to God, and also is the devil an enemy to God.—Par. 8.

Gospel of Matthew 23:35, Inspired Translation. They sinned willfully and knowingly, consequently come under the same heading. Gospel of John 8:21, 24. Die in their sins, belong to the same class. Matthew 12:20, 29, Inspired Translation. They sinned against the Holy Ghost; come also under the same heading. Chapter 16:26. Losing his soul in the world to come, belongs to the same company.

Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.—Matt. 15:13.

May the blessing of the loving God, who instituted this union, be with them on their journey.

DIED.

DUNCAN.—At Lebeck, Missouri, March 21, Claude R., son of Elder C. R. and May Duncan, aged 8 months and 11 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Swen Swenson, on Sunday, March 22, at Coal Hill chapel. Only those who have passed through such an experience can realize what it is to part with their only little bud of promise.

JONES.—At her home in San Bernardino, California, March 24, 1896, Sr. Susan I. Jones. She was born August 3, 1820, at Lewis, Essex County, New York; became a Latter Day Saint in the early rise of the church; went to Nauvoo; was married to William Jones, December 31, 1843. Mr. Jones died March 16, 1844. She was again married to Alonzo E. Jones, March 3, 1847. She came to San Bernardino in 1853, and was baptized into the Reorganized Church, June, 1864. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon by Elder W. Gibson.

ERVIN.—Near Union, Nebraska, March 12, 1896, Bro. John Erwin. He was born near London, Ohio, March 9, 1807; came to Nebraska in 1858 and located at the same place where he died; baptized about 1882, and remained firm in the faith until death. Funeral sermon was delivered by Elder Warren E. Peak, assisted by Elder J. W. Waldsmith, in the United Brethren church, which was crowded, notwithstanding the snowstorm that prevailed. Our United Brethren friends were very courteous in furnishing the church and choir, and the elder in charge of the church exhibited especial kindness in trying to make us feel welcome in his church.

JONES.—Franklin Richard Jones was born in Saint Helena, Nebraska, April 3, 1865; was baptized into the Reorganized Church November 1, 1888, by Bro. F. G. Pitt; February 12, 1890, he was married to Sr. Anna Holdsworth, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Henry Holdsworth, of Independence, Missouri, and went

There were born to himself and wife three children, two girls and one boy, two of whom preceded their father to the realm of rest. One little girl is left to mourn the loss sustained by this sad visitation. May the Lord bless them in their hours of trouble.

LINES PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 4, 1896.—To My Sister Anna: After dark shadows had visited her home, by the loss of her little boy and girl not long since, and immediately after, the death of her beloved husband, Frank R. Jones, this paraphrase is affectionately inscribed.

The Lord is my Comforter Shepherd and Guide, Protector and Father, with me he'll abide.
I shall not be found wanting for things that are just
If I in the Lord, my Savior, will trust.

He directs me to go where pastures are green;
To rest where bright roses and lilies are seen;
By pure springs where waters of life ever flow,
And perfume, and sweetness with zephyrs that blow.

His sin's he'll forgive when I call on his name,
My soul to restore to his kingdom again.
In righteousness, too, by paths that are straight,
He leadeth me then for his blessed name's sake.

O, Father in heaven, teach me to say,
"Thy will be done," as thou hast taken away
My two little babies and husband so dear,
And my happy home turned to sorrow and tear.

Let the life of dear Florence be precious to thee;
Permit her to live a comfort to me,
Until she is called by thy dear voice of love,
To meet with our dear ones in heaven above.

And if I should walk through death's shadows so dark,
Or dangers of death where life seems but a spark,
I shall call on thy name, so blessed to hear,
And thy comfort shall banish all evil and fear.

For thou, my dear Savior, art always with me,
At home or abroad, or wherever it be;
When trouble and trials come near to my heart
Thy rod, staff, and comfort bid them to depart.

To those who forsake me or enemies be,
And try to make hardships, misfortunes for me,
In their presence my storehouse is filled by thy hand,
O, Lord, in thy service forever I stand.

I know that God's mercy, and goodness, and light
Shall follow me all the days of my life;
And if I will serve him and trust in his word,
I'll be saved in his kingdom, the house of the Lord.

May the comfort of God be with you, my sister. THOMAS HOLDSWORTH.

BARTON.—Sr. Catharine Barton departed this life at her home in Liberty Township, Jackson County, Ohio, aged 69 years, 10 months, and 4 days. She leaves two children and four grandchildren to mourn their loss. She and her husband, Bro. George Barton, who preceded her to the spirit world, November 17, 1893, were among the first to accept the gospel when presented to them by Bro. Devore, by whom they were baptized, February 18, 1880, and continued in the faith through many severe trials. Funeral at the residence, sermon by Elder T. J. Beatty. Interment in the family burying ground.

OWENS.—At her home in Roslyn, Washington, March 8, 1896, Sr. Ann M. Owens. She was born at Glamorganshire, South Wales, June 12, 1836; united in marriage to David Owens; emigrated to America in 1860; united with the reorganized Church in 1863, at Merthyr Tydvil, South Wales; came to Roslyn seven years ago last January. Four children, one daughter and three sons, mourn. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder D. W. Davis, assisted by Bro. Asher Allen, in the Presbyterian church, which was filled to an overflowing.

MCKEE.—At Providence, Rhode Island, November 18, 1895, Freddie, aged 7 years and 11 months. On November 26 he was followed by his little playmate sister, Lottie, aged 3 years and 8 months. These were the youngest children of Bro. James and Sr. Myra McKee. Elder George H. Gates conducted burial services, seeking to bring to the bereaved ones the consolation of the gospel in the assurance that such as these are the purchased possession of Christ our Lord. These were pure, bright little jewels, fit indeed for the Master's crown.

Two vacant places around the hearthstone;
Two shining angels before the great throne.
The ties are not broken, made by their love,
They're drawing us upward to mansions above.

PIERCE.—Mary Pierce, at her home in Raglan Township, Harrison County, Iowa, March 19, 1896. Deceased was born at Dublin, New Hampshire, July 31, 1825; baptized in 1860 by Elder E. C. Briggs. She continued to live in harmony with the gospel law, her life being a testimony never to be forgotten. A few days before her decease she said, "I am anxious to go, and will depart in the hope of a glorious resurrection. Funeral service at her home, sermon by Elder A. M. Fyrando. Interment in Magnolia cemetery.

LATTA.—At New Buda, Iowa, March 19, 1896, Mrs. Rachel Latta. From youth she was a member of the Presbyterian Church. She departed this life at the age of 71 years, 6 months, and 24 days, on the fiftieth anniversary of her marriage to Calvin Latta. She was mother of seven children, five of whom are living and were present at the funeral. The sermon was by Elder R. M. Elvin; interment in Davis City cemetery, by the side of her husband.

Baptized March 16, 1871, by Elder J. S. Lee. Funeral services at the M. E. church in Mirable, which was kindly tendered for the occasion. The very large concourse of people attending gave evidence of the popularity and moral worth of Grandma Ballinger. Sermon by T. W. Chatburn, assisted by Peter Peterson.

CROMWELL.—Sr. Martha J. Cromwell, at Smithland, Iowa, March 17, 1896. She died firm in the faith of the church, being the only one of the family in the church. She was baptized by Bro. Fred A. Smith about three years ago. Sr. Cromwell was born at Johnson, Missouri, July 12, 1852. Husband, two sons, and one daughter mourn her decease. Funeral was conducted by Rev. J. F. Baker, of the M. E. Church. She sent for an elder before her death, but none arrived in time to see her alive.

FENNER.—At Thornton, Rhode Island, November 4, 1895, Sr. Betsy Ann, companion of Bro. William Fenner, in her 64th year. She was baptized by Elder C. N. Brown and lived faithful to her covenant. VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

THE BEST KIND OF BREAD.

It has been recognized for some time that the modern processes for making fine wheat flour are lessening the value of the grain as a food by removing some of its most necessary constituents. By some it has been thought that the bran contained these constituents, and they have sought to remedy the matter by adding it to bolted flour. That this does not go far enough in some respects, although it goes too far in others, is shown by a review of the subject in the Paris edition of the New York Herald (February 9), parts of which we quote below:—

"We have only to consider the composition of the wheat-berry, and to know what portions of it are used for the bread we eat, to realize the amount of material that is wasted in the present system of panification.

"Proceeding from the outside to the inside of the wheat-berry is composed of the following portions: 1. An external wrapping, or episperm, containing only fibers, fatty and aromatic substances, and salts, representing 14.36 per cent of the total weight of the berry. 2. A farinaceous portion, "equal to 84.21 of the total weight, and whose richness in starch increases from the periphery to the center, whereas the amount of gluten and phosphates increases from the center to the periphery. 3. The germ, or embryo, which is only equal to 1.43 of the weight of the berry, but is very rich in phosphates and in nitrogenous and fatty substances.

"The mineral substances are composed largely of very assimilable phosphates; they are chiefly to be found in the germ, or embryo, which is usually thrown away with the other unused parts, especially now that milling-stones have been replaced by metallic cylinders, and their richness in nitrogenous and fatty matter is relatively considerable. The layer of starch that sticks to the inner layer of the episperm, and is hard to separate from it, remains with the gray meal that is not mixed with the fine white flour, or white meal, for fear of altering the color of the bread.

"In this way is produced a flour of good quality, containing only six grams of mineral substances, whereas the kilogram of wheat that furnished it contains ten. The difference is so marked that the time seems to have come to use every possible effort to find some way of remedying it."

That this is a state of things that really requires a remedy is shown by the fact that these mineral substances—the phosphates—are absolutely necessary for the development of bone and muscle, so much so that phosphates are now administered medicinally in many cases where iron was formerly given. We are thus removing from our food and throwing away the substances that we are forced to take later in the shape of expensive medicinal preparations. To resume the quotation:—

"From what we have said it will have been seen that as regards introducing phosphates into our daily food it would be very advantageous to use not only the germs, but the most peripheral gray and red portions of the grain. Bread will only be entire when it contains all the truly alimentary portions of the wheat-berry.

"This, however, is very different from what is meant by persons who consider entire bread as ordinary bread to which the bran has been added. Once more let it be said that the only bread worthy of such a denomination is that made with flour containing all the assimilable elements of the wheat by being sent a number of times through the grinding surfaces. The difficulty is to separate by bolting the coarse bran which is of no use from the starchy portions that adhere so closely to the fine bran that lines the coarse wrapping of the berry. . . .

"There is evidently a happy medium to be found between bread that is too white and the too entire bread that certain enthusiasts wish to impose upon us as the ideal of bakery, and which by containing a great deal of bran is useful to persons whose intestinal functions are not what they should be, but is of no advantage to healthy persons. The country bread, pain de menage, which was formerly so extensively used, is both nourishing and agreeable to the taste, and we regret very much that this bread has gradually disappeared from use in large cities as being an inferior article.

"Majendie demonstrated a long time ago that dogs fed exclusively on white bread die in fifty days, whereas they live, and without signs of falling off, on coarse bread. These experiments, which were made many years back, should not have been forgotten, and amply warrant the campaign that has been undertaken in favor of entire bread."—Literary Digest.

WHAT KRUPP DOES FOR HIS WORKMEN.

It has been noted as singular that Krupp, the great "cannon king" of Essen, in Westphalia, who has tens of thousands of men in his employ, is never troubled with strikes or labor difficulties. A recent Leipsic journal gives a summary of what he has done and what he is doing for his employees, and thinks that these facts, to a great extent at least, explain why he lives at continued peace with his men.

Krupp is the owner of about 4,000 dwelling-houses, occupied by 27,000 persons. The rents are very low and are calculated on a basis of only 2 per cent on capital invested. As the number of houses does not suffice for all his workingmen, of whom there are about 30,000 in all, with their families numbering 100,000 persons, it has been decided that only those who have been in the employ of the firm for ten years can secure such a house. Krupp has also taken vigorous measures against the saloons and whisky-shops, as also other businesses dangerous to his workingmen. He bought up all the saloons and arranged for so-called "consume" businesses. In these, which are found in all his workingmen's colonies, he has in store all the necessities of life, and sells them for cash at a very low price. He has established special bakeries, slaughtering-houses, tailoring establishments, etc., for his men; excellent restaurants furnish good meals virtually at cost price; good coffee can be secured at 2 pfennigs a cup, and together with sugar and a roll at 5 pfennigs (100 pfennigs = 1 mark = 24 cents). The widows and other dependents of deceased employees receive employment of some kind, and if it is desired can get a sewing-machine at cost price by the payment of 3 marks a month. Krupp has also erected bath-houses, hospitals, and barracks for time of epidemic diseases. The sick-fund affords help really in excess of the amount demanded by the law, the firm making large contributions to this treasury every year. By the payment of 1.25 marks a year the family can secure free of cost the service of a physician and the necessary medicine for any member. There is a pension-fund for widows and orphans to which the firm subscribe each year 250,000 marks. The working hours are from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M., with two hours' intermission at noon. Coming to work too late is punished. Promptness in arriving at work throughout the year is rewarded at the end with 6 marks. Women and children's work is absolutely prohibited in any of the shops. For the workingmen who live at a distance, eating-houses have been erected, and a good meal can be secured for 80 pfennigs. Then there is a home for unmarried men and an old folks' home for invalids. The firm expends 70,000 marks per year to secure protection and refreshments for those who are engaged in particularly hard work. In addition excellent schools, with manual training, etc., have been built; and Krupp has shown that he has a heart for his people. The above is only a brief selection from the list of enterprises he has carried out for their good.—Literary Digest.

DELUGE.

THE NEW SCIENTIFIC VIEW.

FOR many generations now there have been two schools of thought in Christian countries concerning the deluge in the scriptural narrative. Men of science have not hesitated to affirm, on evidence deduced from studies in geology, that the flood must have been merely local. Devout Christians maintained that the inspired history must be literally interpreted, in other words, that the waters covered the whole earth. So persistent have been the learned men, that latterly it might almost be said the weight of public opinion, though Christian, accepted the theory of a local flood. There are not wanting, however, indications pointing to a change of faith on the part of students. Professor Prestwich has read a compendious treatise before the Royal Society of Great Britain, in which he sets forth his belief in the reality of the deluge. He states that the superficial deposits of loam, gravel, and sand have been the result of human operations throughout ages, but there is a remaining drift, a residuum, which cannot be explained save by the action of a deluge. This residual drift was often carried by the subsiding waters beyond the ancient cliffs, and in it are found the ruins of animals overtaken by the tide, land shells and flints shaped by man of the Paleolithic age. By like arguments Professor Prestwich extensively marshals the witnesses in support of his faith. Professor Prestwich's view is held also by Sir Henry Howorth, in his book on The Mammoth and the Flood, and other eminent men.—Information.

MESSAGE FOR HEADACHE.

In many cases massage will be found invaluable in relieving the pain of a congestive headache. The movement should be made with the palmar surface of the fingers and be a vigorous one.

Begin on top of the head and continue backward and downward to the base of the brain. Continue the rubbing also from the temples backward and downward. Much and heavy rotation at the base of the brain should follow; also crosswise rubbing on the back of the neck and stroking from the head down back of the ears to the shoulders, for the purpose of emptying the veins.

SALOONS ENOUGH TO GO AROUND.—According to the report of the New York Commissioners of Excise, just issued, there are 9,058 liquor saloons in that metropolis. The estimated population is 1,908,259, which gives one saloon for each 210 inhabitants, or more than double the proportion of Boston. The revenue from liquor licenses is distributed almost entirely for charitable purposes. Last year it was divided up as follows: Seven hundred thousand dollars to benevolent and charitable institutions, $500,000 to the general fund, $300,000 to the police pension fund, $75,000 to the fire department relief fund, and $134,290 for excise expenses.

No boy, no girl, can ever come to be utterly bad who remembers only love and tenderness and unselfishness and sweetness as associated with father and mother in the old-time home. Give them manly and womanly example, give them training, give them the inspiration of devoted lives, give them these higher, deeper things. Do not care so much as to whether you are accumulating money, so that you can leave them a fortune. I really believe that the chances are against that's being a blessing for a boy. But leave them an accumulated fortune of memories and inspirations and examples and hopes, so that they are rich in brain and heart and soul and service. Then, if you happen to leave them the fortune besides, if they have all these, the fortune will be shorn of its possibilities of evil, and will become an instrument of higher and nobler good.—*Minot J. LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 15, 1896.

THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

SATURDAY, April 4.—The convention assembled at nine o'clock; Bro. F. G. Pitt in the chair. A hymn was sung, followed with prayer by J. F. Mintun. Minutes of former sessions read and approved. Bro. A. H. Mills was appointed to assist the Secretary during the session. The committee appointed to audit the Treasurer's statement reported having found it correct. The report was ordered spread upon the minutes, and the committee discharged.

The committee on blackboard work reported the labor done by them, the difficulties to be encountered, etc., and recommended that a committee be appointed to provide for blackboard work. Further consideration was deferred till the afternoon session.

Notice was given of various items of business to come before the body. A request from a school in Arkansas, unable to purchase Quarterlies, that such be supplied to said school, was granted. A report was read from the Austral school of Sydney, New South Wales, Australia; also a letter from Sr. J. H. Royce, Editor of the HERALD Sunday school column; a report was also read from Bro. W. R. Armstrong, assistant superintendent of Manchester, England, district.

The election of officers was then taken up and the following were selected for the ensuing year: Bro. Thomas A. Hougas, of Henderson, Iowa, Superintendent; Sr. Christiana Salyards, of Lamoni, Iowa, Assistant Superintendent; Bro. Wallace N. Robinson, of Independence, Missouri, Secretary; Sr. Cassie B. Kelley, of Lamoni, Iowa, Treasurer. The election of each was made unanimous.

A motion providing for the appointment of a publishing board to provide

Sunday school literature, general supplies, etc., was voted down, after which a revising committee of three to revise all lesson literature, to appoint editors of the Quarterlies and fix their compensation as heretofore, was provided for. On motion, and in the order named, Brn. R. S. Salyards, J. A. Gunsolley, and W. W. Blair were appointed said committee.

Bro. T. A. Hougas was appointed chairman of the program committee, the officers to appoint the two remaining members.

By resolution it was decided to donate four hundred dollars ($400.00) of the association's funds to the general church for the prosecution of missionary work, and the treasurer was instructed to pay that amount to the Presiding Bishop.

The action of the Pottawattamie district, in selecting as its superintendent one not a member of the church, was declared to be, in the opinion of the convention, not a violation of the constitution, under the circumstances in which said district was placed.

The assembly then adjourned till the noon hour, closing with a song, the benediction being pronounced by President Joseph Smith.

At two p. m. the opening hymn was sung; prayer was offered by Bro. James McKiernan, after which the minutes were read.

A communication was received from the former Superintendent. It stated the numerical increase of membership, also the financial gain, etc., reporting the general progress made during the year. It mentioned the completion of files of the Quarterlies; also of the former Teachers' Helps used by the earlier schools, for an association library.

An interesting report of the condition of the Sunday school work in the Society Islands, from Sr. L. R. Devore, was read. Progress was being made among the native brethren and sisters.

The request of the Spring River district concerning the wearing of a distinctive garb by sisters engaged in Sunday school mission work in order to obtain reduced railroad rates, was referred to a committee.

Bro. W. N. Robinson, as instructed by the Independence district, introduced a resolution providing that the lessons of the Primary Quarterlies be made to correspond to the Senior and Intermediate grade lessons — to be based upon the same lesson texts, by which all grades of lessons shall be upon the same subjects but adapted to the requirements and conditions of each. The motion was seconded by Bro. J. F. Mintun, also instructed to so move. The question was freely discussed, time being given for a complete canvassing of the subject. The motion was lost.

The chair appointed Brn. T. A. Hougas, Bro. T. W. Williams, and Sr. Bertha Murdock a committee on railway rates.

Bro. E. A. Blakeslee presented a bill of $46.80 to cover the expenses of Sr. J. H. Royce to the Logan reunion of 1895. The bill was allowed after a lengthy discussion.

The report of the committee on blackboard work was disposed of by referring the matter of providing for blackboard work to the association officers, with power to act for the body as they shall deem necessary.

A motion was adopted providing for the appointment of a committee to confer with the church Board of Publication with a view to making the Hope the association organ in Sunday school work, under its charge. The officers of the association were appointed said committee and empowered to act.

The constitution of district associations was amended to provide that district officers and officers of schools be made ex officio members of district associations.

A bill covering incidental expenses of the Secretary was ordered paid.

Provision was made to supply districts or schools with lesson helps when such were financially unable to purchase them, and the matter of so providing left discretionary with the Superintendent of the General Association.

Bro. B. M. Anderson, of Lamoni, was appointed to act as Librarian of the association.

Adjourned to the evening session; benediction by Bro. F. A. Smith.

The evening session of Saturday the 4th, was opened at 7:30, in charge of Bro. F. G. Pitt.

The attendance by this time was larger than at any previous session of the convention, being augmented by incoming delegates and visitors to General Conference who came in time to be present at the Sunday services. The Temple was fairly well filled and the more moderate weather made the audience comfortable, the lake breeze having previously rendered the auditorium too cool for entire satisfaction and ease.

After an opening song prayer was offered by Bro. Alexander H. Smith.

The first item of business was the report of the committee appointed to consider a request made by the Spring River district that a distinctive garb be worn by sisters engaged in Sunday school work, in order to secure half fare permits. The committee reported that it knew of no rule of passenger associations that provided half fare permits to any except those constantly engaged in said work, missionaries constantly in the field, pastors, etc.; and recommended that no distinctive garb be worn to secure favors from the world. The report was adopted, as was also a resolution disapproving of the wearing of any such garb.

An action was taken expressing the opinion that that clause of the constitution which refers to members of district conventions refers to regularly constituted members, not those present who are not delegates to or ex officio members of said conventions.

Twenty dollars were allowed the Secretary to assist in defraying his traveling expenses to the convention.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn presented a resolution providing, in effect, that the various districts and schools be requested to examine the question of a uniformity of texts for all grades of lessons, of keeping Senior, Intermediate, and Primary lessons together and based on the same Bible texts; that their delegates be advised of their preferences in the matter that said delegates might report to the next convention the wishes of the various districts in this matter, the question to be then decided.

It was resolved that the next convention be held at the place of convening of next General Conference, the time to be left to the appointment of the program committee.

A vote of thanks was tendered the former Superintendent of the association.

Following the transaction of this business, Sr. Hattie R. Griffiths conducted an intermediate class drill. The scholars did well, being in close sympathy with the teacher, who evidently possessed an influence over them that tended to win their love and confidence and to draw them out.

The effort was a good one, because it was natural and unstilted, and the audience appreciated it. It suggested to the writer what his observations have heretofore led him to conclude, that no mere formality should be mistaken for system and order in any department of work. Methods, means, and rules, are all essential, but only so far as necessary to proper order and to aid the execution of work. Successful efforts are natural ones. He who would succeed in teaching must succeed in reaching the sympathies and intellects of those he would instruct. By naturalness in the instructor good work is done. The Master, the great Teacher, made use of natural methods and succeeded because his teaching was characterized by love and simplicity.

The convention was a success. Entire good fellowship prevailed and the work for the coming year seems laid upon a good foundation. May such prove to be true and may the Sunday school do its part in the gospel work of bringing souls to a knowledge of God and to the principles of his truth.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

SUNDAY, April 5.—The work of the conference was introduced by the prayer, preaching, and Sunday school exercises of the Lord's day. Brn. E. L. Kelley and G. H. Hilliard were placed in charge of the morning social and sacramental service, which opened at half past eight o'clock.

The Holy Spirit was present in a marked degree, melting the hearts of many—of strong men as well as those more easily affected, and the time was well spent in prayer, in testimony, in song, and in partaking of the emblems of the Lord's supper. It was of the spirit of love and fellowship, of humility and charity. It was timely and efficient as a "preparation of heart" and conducive to the unity of spirit required according to the law of the Spirit of Christ. Deep feeling was apparent and a spirit of gratitude manifest in the expressions of all. It was a favorable indication. It meant that God recognized his people; that he bore witness again that he would be their wisdom and their strength, directing them concerning the interests of his great work, inspiring them to exceed the wisdom of mere human nature in the prosecution of his work.

The sermon at eleven o'clock was delivered by President Joseph Smith, he being assisted by his counselor, Pres. W. W. Blair. The audience was sympathetic. They were pleased to hear again from their beloved President, and he was in that fraternal spirit and close touch with the people that is characteristic of him.

At two o'clock Bro. John J. Cornish delivered one of his characteristic sermons on the first principles of the gospel. He was assisted by Bro. J. A. Grant.

The local Sunday school, reinforced by school workers from other localities, held a session at four o'clock, in charge of Bro. T. A. Hougas; Brn. F. G. Pitt, W. H. Garrett, Sr. Hattie R. Griffiths, and others assisting. Various classes were organized and a profitable season enjoyed by those participating. The workers were alive and improved their opportunity.

The services of the day closed with a sermon by Bro. Alexander H. Smith, who addressed a large audience on the subject of the life and influence of Christ the Lord. The speaker was assisted by Bro. F. M. Weld.

Monday, April 6.—Promptly at ten o'clock in the morning President Joseph Smith called the assembly to order. The hymn, "Redeemer of Israel," was sung, and prayer was offered by Pres. W. W. Blair. The Temple was fairly well filled by delegates and visitors and the assembly proceeded to perfect a permanent organization. President Joseph Smith was chosen president, Pres. W. W. assistant president, Bro. R. S. Sal-yards secretary pro tem., and authorized to name his assistants. He selected Brn. W. H. Garrett and T. W. Williams. Brn. F. G. Pitt and T. A. Hougas were chosen choristers and empowered to nominate organists. They named Bro. A. H. Mills and Sr. Ada Clark. Bro. John Gillespie was appointed usher and authorized to select assistants. Being so authorized, the chair appointed as a committee on credentials Brn. O. B. Thomas, J. A. Grant, and H. E. Moler.

Addresses were then called for, to which President Joseph Smith, Pres. W. W. Blair, Bro. Alexander H. Smith, of the Twelve, and Bishop E. L. Kelley responded.

The substance of President Joseph Smith's address is as follows:—

It will be difficult for me to make a selection of a topic that will be more interesting than another.

I think upon the basis of this reassurance of the general outcome of the work, that there will be more done by it, than any other conference that has happened for many years. Not because I do not apprehend difficulty; but because I have more confidence in the component parts of which the conference is composed. I believe that there is a feeling generally prevailing that there are no private or personal interests to be served in this great work. I feel that I voice the sentiment of the great majority of the traveling ministry in this statement.

I began this work with the underlying belief that it was God's work, and that I should never be under the necessity of regretting the step I then took. That in the religion founded by my father, under God, there was truth and that nothing would transpire in connection with that history that would destroy that truth. I do not propose to assume whether he was right or wrong, as to whether he was guilty or not guilty of what he has been charged with; the faith, the doctrine was of God, and I was not called to sanction the wrong if any existed; but was pledged to the right. As a man he himself was responsible for his own deeds. But I did propose so far as lay in me to make the faith presented by him honorable and to make the name honorable. To so live and so teach and do, that no man speaking of him, whether in the work or out of it, should have occasion to say from my acts that my father was a bad man. I have not been alone in this; I have had noble coadjutors. The men who have stood with me have acted upon their love for the truth, their adherence to the right. I believe this is universally the case; and that the truth of the angel's message did not depend upon the consideration whether he was guilty or not guilty of transgression.

A number of years have passed—thirty-six this morning—since I united with this body. I united with it because I was told to do so. It was distinctly stated and it was distinctly understood, too. If God had told me to go to the Catholics, to the Mohammedans, or to go to Salt Lake, I should have gone in obedience to the command. I entered this work with the understanding that it was for life; without any reserve until death; unless I should become wicked and enter into transgression, and be cut off for cause, or unless set aside for another whom God may choose to do the work better than I. You can see that I can say this without prejudice to any other individual from the nature and position of the men. I must either stand or fall with the work. I do not believe that I shall be excused until the last great call to the judgment.

The moral position taken by the church is a high one; a position the right to which no man can afford to forfeit. I believe that if a man permits himself to fall below this standard he will bring great reproach upon himself, consequently upon the church.

No matter whether a man's talents be great or small, we cannot afford to let that man hold his position as a minister who forgets his duty to God and the church and falls below the standard. This position is one that must be made effective by a continuance of effort to become thoroughly acquainted with all the underlying principles of the work from its inception; together with a knowledge of what is surrounding us in the religions of our neighbors of different faiths. I know it is a good thing to be able to say that we "know the work is true," but it is also necessary that we should comprehend all that may have relation with the work with a view to its success.

We are the center of attack made by all other churches or sects, especially so of the different divisions into which the church divided at the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. We might have effected affiliation with one faction if we had been willing to put out of the faith a part of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; another if we had put the whole book away; and still another had we received what has been added by them.

Our ministry is to preach the gospel; that is the primary work of the church. There is a necessity for a cultivation of a presiding ministry. There are a good many who are very capable by latent talent, but have not had experience. It has been said that if a person is placed where he will have to act he will get experience.

I congratulate the ministry in the progress of the past year. While in some instances there has been some unpleasantness there should be none. I once heard a brother say that he was willing to work anywhere that he could do the most for the work, or where it was best for him to work, even if it were the office of janitor. I may say the same; that where I can do the best for the work there I am willing to work. Whatever the qualifications or standing of a man may be they should be above official jealousy.

Some years ago there was a man here in Ohio connected with Mr. Zadoc Brooks in his work. He believed he was called to the office of leader of the latter-day work, and felt irritated because I seemed to be standing in his way. I told him that if the Lord should make manifest that he was right, I would remove out of his way at once. In the meantime I told him to go at his work, if he had any to do, and not find fault with others who would work.

We are sufficiently numerous now to require the care of local presiding officers in districts.

Of course the records will show the actual number of members. The statistical report will be satisfactory. There are several items of business that will be presented; but none I think calculated to bring on animosity in debate; though in the discussion of the simplest question there may something arise that will bring an unpleasant feeling.

It is distressing to think of the many calls coming to us at the center asking for ministers. They are too numerous for us to respond to. I know of one place where there are some thirteen waiting for baptism, but it is a difficult thing for us to send them a missionary. I mean that we have not a minister that would fill these various places; and we have the sentiment expressed that God will "send more laborers into the field." He has told us to gain knowledge from every possible source. For this reason I hope that these elders will avail themselves of these advantages offered them to become acquainted with the various topics connected with the work we have in hand.

Closing, I may say that so far as I am aware, you brethren of the missionary force have the esteem and confidence of your presiding officers. I do not know of any barrier between us. I hope that when the conference shall close we shall not only have a friendly feeling but ministerial regard.

Pres. W. W. Blair then spoke briefly. He said the Utah church is slowly getting back to the early church and is even publicly declaring that many things practiced in the past never were a part of the church doctrine.

I am glad that these people are willing to investigate. They honestly think they are right. Even recently, President Woodruff of that church claimed to have a revelation regarding the practice of sealing which obtained since 1844. And in this respect a great reform has been instituted. It is a good and hopeful sign. I feel encouraged over the unity in the Reorganized Church. I believe there is a large amount of trouble in the world caused by surmising things that never occur. Let us see things that confront us and not conjure up evils that never existed. The people look at the errors that have been committed and seem afraid. There is absolutely no cause for it. We know the work is of God. We know it is divine in origin. We know God sustains it as in the ancient time. We know it is building up character, the best kind of society we can have. The influence of these characters go out like a light to the world at large.

Bro. A. H. Smith's address:—

The President has mentioned a subject upon which I can offer some remarks—the necessity of presiding officers, to preside over districts and branches. The church has for thirty years and over been bending every energy to educate a missionary force, and the prayer has been constantly sent up to the Lord of the vineyard to send more laborers into the field, and every man who joined the church who had or developed ability was pushed to the front and made a missionary, and these men who have been put to the front have developed and been educated into that line of thought, and the spirit of that education has developed a traveling ministry, until the church now has a splendid noble band of missionaries. But now the church must face the fact that this system of using every available man in the traveling ministry has been at the expense of the local ministry, until at the present time the church is suffering from a lack of men of ability in the local ministry to preside over districts and branches which have been raised up and organized by the missionaries; and many districts and branches are now languishing and dying because we have no capable presiding officers among the local ministry to keep them alive. We must have men who are qualified to preside; to hold the ground won by our traveling ministry; to hold the fort while the missionaries push on into new fields. The traveling ministry must in the very nature of their work possess presiding ability, to enable them to enter in wherever they find disorder and preside while correcting the evils found; but our traveling forces have largely been built up at the expense or depletion of the local forces. The church stands in this condition and is suffering. We must meet the issue and begin to educate the local ministry in the duties of presiding officers. The local ministry must educate themselves to take those positions and hold the fields already won. We should devise the best means for doing this work. Unfortunately for the many calls of which the President speaks we have more ministers than we have finances to put them in the field. We have to work according to our resources.

The necessity and policy of the past has resulted in putting a greater number of the local ministry in the field than we have traveling ministry under the law. This ought not to be, for how can they be expected to fill the calls for presiding when they are pushed out into the missionary fields?

Now, how to meet this puzzling question is the work before us. That prayer so often made should be changed and we should now pray the Lord to send men qualified to preside and means to keep them in the field.

This work is being pushed forward in other sections of the world and upon the islands of the sea, and we must move forward with it.

If the church will now make as persistent an effort to educate a presiding ministry as she has to educate a traveling ministry, ten years from now will make a showing which will compel the world to recognize the work. I cannot divest myself of the thought that this work is no ideal chimera of the brain of man, but that it is a realistic truth, a preparatory work to fit us to occupy places of trust in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes to reign in person upon the throne of David most gloriously; and the better we are prepared to occupy positions of trust now and here, the better we will be prepared to occupy there.

It requires more than simply to be able to preside over meetings of the members of the church to be a good presiding officer. A minister must be able to preach, to interest the members and outsiders as well, and feed them on spiritual food. All ministers do not have these necessary qualifications. It is realistic work and we should have a stalwart force of men who shall hold the work and abide in it; and when these men are found, a great effort should be made to put them in the position whereunto they are called. This is the work which lies before us. May God aid us to perform it. Amen.

Bishop E. L. Kelley:—

The work of the conference year has been a successful one in many ways. We are in a better condition to-day to carry forward the gospel proclamation than we have been before since the commencement of the Reorganization.

It is true as has been stated by the President of the Twelve that it requires not only men to perform this work, but means to aid and supply their necessities and the necessities of their families.

The efforts of the Saints to keep the missionaries in the field the past year have been very noble. A few days ago when I noticed the large sum used by elders for expenses during the year I thought that I would call attention to the fact that a large amount of this should be saved and thus aid in placing others into the field; but later, when I had taken occasion to make an estimate of the average expenditure by each individual for traveling expenses and clothing and found that it amounted to but about $56, I concluded that we were so far in advance in regard to reduction and economy of any other people in the world that it would be out of place to stop to raise objection. This sum does not embody the amount supplied to the families of these elders.

We are nearer up to-day in our work of supplying the families of the ministry than before at the close of the annual appointments for the past five years. You will notice in the financial statement a falling off in the assets of about three thousand dollars. This arises from the fact that the judgment for costs in the Temple Lot case which was in our favor at last report was entered as an account receivable. This year the case was lost to us, and the conditions are changed.

I wish to say one word in regard to this suit. We did not get our case, notwithstanding the fact that the evidence and the law were in our favor; and I have the statement from one of the highest authorities of the country that the decision of the Court of Appeals is an outrageous thing.

There is a little more in this case than many perhaps know about, and I do not intend to always keep quiet about it. I have always been ready to quietly submit when fairly beaten in a contest, but in this instance we were not beaten, but in the hour of victory our case was stolen under the technical application of the doctrine of laches when fairly the law and facts were in our favor. Our only chance to correct the error was to show to the Supreme Court that the matters in dispute were of such public interest as that body should certify the case before it for examination; but the Supreme Court refused to hear the case, and hence we were left no remedy or redress of the wrong done by the Court of Appeals.

I make this statement for the reason that the truth touching this is often misunderstood, persons having claimed that the Supreme Court had passed upon the case. The Supreme Court never had the case before it for hearing. That court only passed upon the question of whether the case should be brought before it to be heard upon its merits, and denied it a hearing.

It is proper to state here that what we lost in the decision of the Court of Appeals was simply the possession of the lot on the technical finding that our suit should have been begun earlier. No finding of the Circuit Court that we were the true and lawful succession of the original church and that defendants were factional; that a trust originally existed and that the Reorganized Church was the proper body to carry this out because it had not varied from the teaching and purposes of the original body was reversed. The Court of Appeals simply says by its decision, The Reorganized Church may be right in its claim to all this, but it should have begun its suit sooner. All the moral questions passed upon are with us as found by the trial court, the technicalities are by the Court of Appeals against us, and that court, although sitting as a court of equity, stood upon these. We prefer to stand as we do with right in our favor without the lot than to have had the lot given to us and that justice was on the other side. I give notice that any wishing the opinion of the Court of Appeals to read for themselves and judge as to whether I have overstated the case can obtain it by sending to the Herald Office. This together with that of the Circuit Court may be had for twenty-five cents.

The character and time of other meetings and the appointment of speakers and officers therefor was left discretionary with the presiding officers. Adjournment was then taken, President Smith pronouncing the benediction.

At two o'clock the usual opening exercises were observed, the prayer being offered by President Smith. The minutes were read and stood approved. The committee on credentials reported admitting various delegates. Claims and statements of other delegates were referred to said committee.

The annual report of the General Church Secretary and Recorder was read. It showed the following statistics since the report of 1895: Gain: New names placed on record 3,564; baptisms 2,592 (200 less than last year, but with that exception the largest number of any previous year of the Reorganization); "received" on evidence of membership 972. Losses: By death 447; by expulsion 93; by letters of removal 1,099; total loss 1,639. Net gain 1,925. Present membership 34,814. It may safely be reported as 35,000 of an enrolled membership; and if families were counted the number would easily run up to 75,000 or 100,000. Ordinations 247; and 267 changes of names by marriage. Michigan leads with a gain of 336; Missouri with 245, Iowa with a net gain of 203, Canada with 130, Nebraska with 111, Ohio with 94, and Illinois with 82, follow in their respective order. New branches organized 28. Australia shows a net gain of 17, England of 51, Wales of 10. The State of Iowa has the largest membership; viz., 6,743; Missouri 4,796; Michigan 2,463, etc. Complete statistics will appear in the report published in the "minutes" of conference.

A portion of the report that referred to losses to the church by the issuance of letters of removal, many of which were not placed on branch records, caused considerable discussion, and notice was given that action would be taken to provide that secretaries of branches do not remove members from their records until another branch certified that such removing members had been recorded there. The Secretary's report was adopted.

The summary of the annual report of the Presiding Bishop, as published in the "Ministry Reports" for the present year, was read.

The Bishop stated that no report was presented from the Board of Publication because the board had not been able to get together.

No report from the Church Librarian.

The Board of Trustees of Grace-land College reported. It will appear later, in the regular minutes. It reported the progress thus far made in laying out and adorning the college grounds and erecting the college building, not yet completed. It announced desirable building lots for sale by the trustees, said lots being on or a part of the original college ground and to be sold to aid the college fund. Received from all sources $11,150.39; expended $10,912.39. It would be necessary to elect three trustees to fill vacancies caused by the expired one year terms of Brn. E. L. Kelley, Daniel Anderson, and Robert Winning. Joseph Smith was chairman, William Anderson treasurer, and D. F. Nicholson secretary of said Board.

The Board of Directors of Grace-land College also reported. Joseph Smith was president, D. F. Lambert secretary. College educational work had been commenced in temporary quarters pending completion of the permanent building. Instructors had been appointed and the work opened in September, 1895. The faculty consisted of T. J. Fitzpatrick Professor of Sciences and Mathematics; J. T. Pence Professor of Languages; J. A. Gunsolley in charge the Commercial and Shorthand Department; Miss Nellie Davis in charge of Instrumental Music. Total enrollment 35, which was quite good, all things considered. A library had been founded by purchase and donation, already numbering nearly six hundred volumes, to which considerable accessions would be made in the near future. Large botanical and geological collections, the property of Prof. T. J. Fitzpatrick, would be placed in the college building as soon as completed.

In order to properly conduct the work during the coming year it would be necessary to secure a professor in German and French, also a professor in English Literature, in addition to the faculty now employed.

The Board urged upon the conference, especially upon the ministry, the need of working in its behalf by sending or securing students for it. Loyal and persistent work to that end was needed in order to secure success. The conference was requested to instruct the ministry upon this important point. Three vacancies were to be filled; viz., the one-year term of Brn. Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, and E. A. Blakeslee.

The foregoing was supplemented by an itemized report of William Anderson, treasurer, which will appear in full in the regular minutes, as will all other reports.

A lengthy communication was read from Bro. James Caffall, of the European mission. It advised against the holding of annual General Conferences and too many reunions, especially where the latter involved much expenditure by calling ministers from other fields. The writer favored the holding of the coming fall reunion at Nauvoo, Illinois. The communication was read and ordered spread upon the minutes.

An application for a mission and a report was referred to the Quorum of the Twelve.

An additional communication from Bro. Caffall was read. It asked information and advice concerning the organization of ministerial quorums in Great Britain. It was referred to the First Presidency and the Twelve.

The Southern Nebraska district petitioned that the State be divided by the Platte River into northern and southern mission divisions, instead of into eastern and western divisions as at present. Petition referred to the First Presidency.

Petitions concerning the appointment of missionary in charge of Michigan, and another requesting the return of Bro. E. C. Briggs to his present field, were referred to the Presidency; and a number of petitions asking that Bro. F. G. Pitt be returned to Northern Illinois were referred to the Twelve.

The Second Quorum of Priests reported. Twelve of its number had preached 221 sermons and baptized 13; S. D. Shippy president.

Bro. T. W. Chatburn gave notice that he would renew the motion voted down at last conference, which provided for the removal of the Herald Office plant to Independence, Missouri.

A communication from the Northern California district was read. It asked for the appointment of one of the Quorum of the Twelve in charge of the Pacific Slope mission—Bro. J. R. Lambert preferred. It was referred to the First Presidency.

Items of business deferred from last session—a document on the divorce question, also requests from the Teachers and Deacons that they be granted ex officio privileges—were announced. The assembly then adjourned.

The evening sermon was delivered by Bro. Heman C. Smith, who was assisted by Bro. J. H. Lake.

Tuesday, the 7th.—The prayer service at nine a. m. was in charge of Brn. William Anderson and Albert Haws. Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser preached at eleven o'clock, assisted by Bro. Arthur Allen.

Business was resumed at two o'clock; prayer was offered by Bro. Columbus Scott. After the reading of minutes and other formalities business was taken up.

The committee on credentials made a further report.

The First Presidency reported on a petition from Buel, Michigan, stating it to be irregular, and recommending that it be filed because of such irregularity. Report adopted.

The committee appointed to compile the Saints' Hymnal reported. The report was adopted, as was also a vote of thanks to Prof. Ph. Dornberg, who had assisted the committee. The work of the committee was approved and it was then discharged.

A resolution providing that steps be taken to obtain half fare permits for local officers recommended for such by their branches or districts was read; also a petition asking action providing for a General Reunion at or near Nauvoo, Illinois, during the present year.

The feature of the day was a resolution providing that section 113 of Doctrine and Covenants be hereafter published with due explanation, or if thought wise by the Board of Publication that it be eliminated from the Book of Covenants because not a revelation but an individual statement. After some discussion an amendment was moved that the section be published as heretofore with an explanatory statement or preface, said statement to be prepared by the President of the Church and Board of Publication. The general subject was discussed at length, some favoring entire elimination, others the amendment, while some thought the original should be revised and continued as said section. The amendment was finally adopted by a vote of 81 to 21.

At this juncture a substitute was offered, when the assembly deferred the matter until the next session. Adjournment was then taken, and Bro.

W. Chambers dismissed the audience.

At half past seven Bro. Joseph Luff occupied the stand; Bro. Roderick May assisted.

Wednesday, the 8th.—The morning prayer and testimony service was in charge of Brn. John Chisnall and David Chambers. A quiet, earnest spirit prevailed and deep feeling was apparent. Gratitude for the gospel as a power to holiness of life was the general sentiment expressed. The writer can do little more than make general reference to these services. Such is probably all that need be reported, however.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, of California, was the preacher at eleven o'clock. He was assisted by Bro. J. A. Grant. Bro. Clapp has not been present at any intervening conference since 1888. His many friends were glad to see and hear from him again.

There is an excellent feeling among the ministry and delegates. We never saw more unity of spirit than has been manifest at this conference. It is a source of satisfaction to all who love their brethren and who also have the success of the cause at heart. The weather has been somewhat cool, but the spring season is making a strong effort to assert itself, and this morning the sunshine and warmth are in the ascendancy. This is as it should be and is in harmony with the condition of our spiritual interests, which are brightening and give assurances that progress is before the people of God. Altogether there is much to encourage the laborers; to cheer them on in performing the work necessary to be done in "establishing" the work of God more permanently in the various fields or planting it elsewhere. This not too sanguine but hopeful view is based upon the observation that God's people are growing in understanding, in devotion, and in application to the work committed to their trust. It is apparent that the devoted and studious workers are those that are being used to push the work. The doers of the work are being blessed. Their personal progress and growing usefulness is manifest. Men and women grow in usefulness by understanding and due activity in both spiritual and natural lines of work. No one can afford to miss the opportunity that lies before him, whether in the laity or ministry. The privilege of sowing and reaping is granted to all, necessarily and justly so, because of the general possession of talent and the prevailing need.

President Joseph Smith offered prayer at the afternoon business session. After reading the minutes the Secretary called the roll of ex officio members, which was completed by enrolling the names of all ex officios present.

The question concerning section 113 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was then taken up. Two substitutes for the motion amended were presented. Substitute No. 1 provided that the section be removed. Substitute No. 2 provided that the section be removed and that the First Presidency and Board of Publication be requested to furnish a suitable article on the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, to be inserted in place of the present section. Both substitutes were rejected. The original motion as amended was then adopted. It is as follows:—

Resolved, that inasmuch as section 113 in Book of Doctrine and Covenants was not given by inspiration, but seems to be an individual statement relative to the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and in some degree has a tendency to do the church harm, when used by the enemy as it is now published, that the President of the church and the Board of Publication be instructed to prepare and publish an explanation with said section.

The General Sunday School Association made report. A vote of thanks was tendered for its donation of four hundred dollars to the church.

The petition presented by the committee appointed by the Park's Bluff reunion of 1895, asking that the church hold a General Reunion at or near Nauvoo, Illinois, was taken up. The petition was granted and the committee presenting said petition was made the conference committee and authorized to select time, place, and to make other necessary arrangements. It consists of Brn. James McKiernan, J. R. Lambert, Daniel Tripp, F. G. Pitt, and J. S. Roth.

No doubt the General Reunion at Nauvoo will be an interesting and significant one and be largely attended. The hope is entertained that it will be a leading factor in demonstrating that the work in its purity is stronger than the errors of the past; that the truth of the gospel of Christ represented and maintained by the ministrations of Joseph and Hyrum Smith and other faithful Saints is now as then, potent enough to redeem the world, including the waste places and "former desolations;" that truth crushed to earth cannot forever be suppressed, but rises again. The promise—that they that remained (true to the faith) and were "pure in heart," they and their children should return and build up the waste places of Zion, is being verified. The Reorganization contains those faithful elements that remained true to the principles of the faith with others who have united with it, and is steadily building up the waste places once occupied by the church in the Martyr's day; also "the regions round about." It is too late for the Utah Church or any other faction to do that work. Only as they may accept and identify themselves with the Reorganization can they assist in doing it. The Reorganized Church has already borne the brunt of it and manifested the moral force of the spirit of the work in strength and power for good. It is destined to continue it because it has learned to stand by and honor the revealed and accepted word of God, and God is in it because it honors him in so doing.

The resolution providing means to secure half fare railroad permits for certain local officers was adopted. See regular minutes for full particulars.

Items of new business stated, not yet presented, were read.

A report from an elder in the field was not read because not sent to headquarters for publication as provided by the rule.

The assembly then adjourned and President Smith pronounced the benediction.

At half past seven o'clock Elder Leonard Scott preached, assisted by Bro. Frederick A. Smith.

Thursday, the 9th.—The morning prayer service was in charge of Brn. John Chisnall and J. W. Waldsmith.

The sermon at the eleven o'clock service was preached by Bro. J. F. Burton. Bro. James Moler was in charge.

Business was resumed promptly at two o'clock, Bro. J. S. Snively offering prayer for divine blessing and guidance.

The committee on credentials reported; also the Fourth Quorum of Elders and Third Quorum of Priests.

The assembly then proceeded to decide where the next General Conference should be held. Lamoni, Iowa, Independence, Missouri, Los Angeles, California, and Detroit, Michigan, were placed in nomination. The four were voted on, after which Lamoni and Independence were voted for, resulting in a decision for Lamoni by a vote of 60 to 21. The vote in favor of Lamoni was then made unanimous.

The time of holding the next conference was then taken up. A resolution providing that adjournment be taken until April 6, 1898, or at the call of the First Presidency, was moved. This was followed by an amendment which provided that the conference meet April 6, 1897. The amendment was adopted by a vote of 54 to 35. The usual annual General Conference will therefore convene at Lamoni, April 6, 1897.

The committee on archæology reported the result of its labors to date. The report is a lengthy paper and contains much matter of value concerning the geography of Book of Mormon countries, the river Sidon, the land Bountiful, and other topics connected with the history of the people recorded in the Book of Mormon. The committee also presented a map prepared by Bro. G. F. Weston by instruction of said committee.

The report and an appendix to it were received and the committee continued with instruction to complete its report so far as practicable. It was further moved that the completed report be published, together with the map, in pamphlet form. The present report and appendix will be published in the regular minutes.

The report of the Board of Trustees of Graceland College was next taken up. It was adopted. The assembly then proceeded to choose three trustees to fill vacancies caused by expired terms. Brn. E. L. Kelley, Frank Criley, and Daniel Anderson were chosen and the choice made unanimous.

The report of the Board of Directors was then read. It was received, approved, and ordered published in the minutes. Three directors were then chosen; viz., Brn. Joseph Smith,

J. F. Burton, and O. H. Riggs. The last named is Dr. O. H. Riggs, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The session was then adjourned and was dismissed by the President.

Bro. T. W. Williams occupied the stand in the evening hour, assisted by Bro. D. L. Shinn.

Friday, the 10th.—Brn. J. S. Snively and J. M. Terry conducted the prayer and testimony service at nine o'clock.

At eleven o'clock Bro. F. M. Sheehy explained the archæological committee's map of Book of Mormon lands.

The business session at two o'clock was opened in the usual manner, Bro. J. W. Gillen offering the prayer.

Reports were received from the First Quorum of Elders and First Quorum of Priests.

The following resolution was then adopted:—

Whereas, we are at a disadvantage with some railroads, the Pennsylvania lines and others, in reference to permits, therefore be it resolved that the President, Secretary, and Bishop are hereby requested to make effort to secure our rights and privileges in such matters and that the action before passed by us in this conference be hereby placed in the hands of this committee, to be consummated or not as shall be found advisable.

A resolution providing that the Herald Office plant be removed to Independence, Missouri, as soon as practicable was substituted by another providing for the purchase of the Ensign by the Board of Publication, if found practicable and deemed advisable. The substitute was adopted.

The Presiding Bishop reported that no changes in the Board of Publication were to be recommended, and the present board—Brn. E. L. Kelley, W. W. Blair, David Dancer, Joseph Luff, and Frank Criley—were sustained.

The resolution providing that the office of Secretary and Recorder of the church be divided and that Bro. W. H. Garrett be appointed Secretary, was taken up.

An amendment, that it be continued as at present—as one office—was lost. A motion to separate the office was then presented and adopted.

It was then moved that Bro. W. H. Garrett be appointed Secretary. This was sought to be amended by striking out the name and inserting that of Bro. R. S. Salyards. A further amendment presented the name of Bro. W. N. Robinson. The vote was called on the several names and Bro. R. S. Salyards was chosen.

On motion Bro. H. A. Stebbins was retained as Recorder.

A motion providing that no one who uses tobacco be ordained to any office was laid on the table.

A resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a Church Historian. Brn. Frederick M. Smith, W. W. Blair, and Heman C. Smith were nominated. It was then moved to refer to the Board of Publication with instructions to choose a Church Historian. This was adopted.

Various resolutions providing for certain rules governing the issuance and recording of letters of removal were then presented and discussed, all being finally rejected or laid on the table.

A resolution providing for revision of certain portions of the Voice of Warning was adopted, and Bro. E. L. Kelley as President of the Board of Publication, and Brn. J. R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, and W. W. Blair were selected as the revising committee.

A resolution stating that the Lectures on Faith are no part of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was laid on the table.

The Secretary asked what was the proper designation of the office to which he had been appointed. A resolution was adopted stating the office to be "Secretary of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints."

Bishop E. L. Kelley and First Counselor G. H. Hilliard were appointed to occupy in the evening service and President Joseph Smith dismissed the session.

Saturday, the 11th.—The morning social service was conducted by Brn. J. S. Snively and I. N. Roberts.

Pres. W. W. Blair preached on the subjects, "Gathering, and temple building." He was assisted by Bro. M. H. Bond.

Consideration of business was resumed at the two o'clock session. Bro. J. F. Burton offered prayer and the minutes were read and approved.

A report from the Second Quorum of Elders was read.

The committee appointed to audit accounts of general church departments made a further report.

The Presidents of Seventy reported recommending the following named brethren for ordination to the office of seventy: T. J. Sheppard, G. R. Wells, D. L. Harris, G. W. Robley, S. D. Payne, R. W. Davis, C. J. Spurlock, R. T. Walters, F. M. Slover, Swen Swenson, M. F. Gowell, C. L. Snow, J. L. Goodrich, Joseph Ward, S. W. L. Simmons.

The names were approved by the conference, provision being made for the ordination of those not present, by missionaries in charge.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported: Number present 20; reporting 58; baptisms 604. Losses: 1 expelled; 1 dropped; 3 honorably released because of old age and infirmity; present number 63. Statistics of the previous year, not reported to the conference of 1895: Present 33; reporting 58; baptisms 743. Loss: By death 1; number then in quorum 69.

A petition requesting the appointment of a high priest to the city of Des Moines, Iowa, was referred to the Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric.

Brn. R. M. Elvin, J. M. Terry, and F. M. Weld were appointed a committee to audit general church accounts next year.

The Fourth Quorum of Priests made report.

The document on "divorce" deferred from the last conference was taken up and discussed at some length. The document was amended by adding the words, "Nothing in this article shall be so construed as to prevent the inquiry provided for in Doctrine and Covenants 42: 20." The document thus amended was adopted.

The question of granting ex officio rights to priests, teachers, and deacons was taken up and deferred until next General Conference.

Provision was made for the ordination of Dr. O. H. Riggs, of Cincinnati, Ohio, to the eldership.

"OPEN WAR ON CIGARETTES."

CHICAGO people have declared war on the cigarette, that modern abomination of youthful precocity. The testimony adduced in support of its injurious effects was voluminous and startling. In one case testified of a boy had been rendered unconscious and had remained in that condition fourteen hours as a result of smoking but one of the paper-wrapped mixtures. It is well known that tobaccos, both those prepared for "chewing" and "smoking," are "flavored" and "drugged" by strong poisons and other very injurious substances, especially is this true of tobacco used for cigarettes. The paper in which it is so wrapped also contains very injurious compounds.

Here is a brief item concerning the Chicago crusade, taken from the Tribune of March 27:—

Mrs. C. V. Waite, President of the National Anti-Cigarette Association, and Thomas Brennan, chairman of the School Management Committee of the Board of Education, held a short conference in Mr. Brennan's office yesterday afternoon and completed arrangements for an active campaign against cigarettes in the Chicago public schools.

They will meet at the same place at two o'clock on Monday afternoon with Mrs. M. E. D. Gilmore, organizer of the association, probably going thence at once to some prominent school to begin the work of pledging the pupils. The Thomas Hoyne school will probably be selected to begin with, as Principal Helen Blanchard is deeply interested in the movement. Mrs. Waite and Mrs. Gilmore were much impressed by Mrs. Blanchard's protest against the use of cigarettes.

PRINCIPAL BLANCHARD'S PROTEST.

This protest, which was first published in the Tribune of Monday last, was as follows:—

"It is impossible for one to be a teacher in Chicago and not be greatly concerned in regard to the cigarette habit. After careful investigation I find that less than ten per cent of the three hundred and twenty boys now in the school are addicted to the habit. That the percentage is no larger is due to 'eternal vigilance' on the part of teachers. Confirmed cigarette smokers do not stay in school long. They rarely finish even the primary school course. The reason for this is the intellect becomes so dulled, the power of application so weakened, that to learn is an impossibility. I have known boys of sixteen who could not do the work of second and third grades. The physical effects are apparent to the most casual observer. The cigarette smoker is almost invariably undersized, hollow-cheeked, and pale and thin, and always has dull eyes and unsteady gaze. I personally know two boys, one thirteen, the other eighteen, who are the same size now as at the age of six or seven. I know others who have made a scarcely perceptible growth in five years. I have had one case of entire loss of voice from the habit. The cigarette smoker is always a moral coward. He loses all regard for truth and honor, and cannot keep his word. With the loss of mental and physical strength there necessarily follows the loss of ambition. This habit renders a boy of sweetish temper and most careful breeding sullen and boorish. If a boy becomes intractable in nine cases out of ten cigarettes are the cause. As teachers we look upon this growing evil as the greatest obstacle to our work."

PLAN OF WORK.

Mrs. Waite and Mrs. Gilmore, and perhaps Mrs. Blanchard and Mr. Brennan, will make short addresses to the children, telling them plainly of the evil effects of tobacco, physically, intellectually, and morally. The boys will then be asked to pledge themselves not to smoke cigarettes nor to give them to others, and to discourage their use by other boys. The girls will probably be asked to sign a pledge to use their influence to discountenance cigarette smoking.

The plan formulated also includes the organization of the anti-cigarette societies of boys in every school. They will be expected to manage these societies by themselves, and the object will be to keep up interest in the anti-cigarette propaganda. If the societies desire they will be furnished with badges in the form of buttons or pins, with the red, white, and blue bars signifying American manhood, and the letters "A. C. B.," for "Anti-Cigarette Brigade." The girls may be allowed to join the societies as honorary members and to wear the badges.

The work will be extended to every school in the city. Mr. Brennan has promised his hearty coöperation, and the majority of the members of the School Management committee and of the school board are known to be heartily in accord with the crusade.

PLEDGING ADULTS.

In addition to pledging the children their parents and other adults will be enlisted in the movement. They will be asked to sign a promise to do all they can to dissuade all their young acquaintances from using cigarettes and to "work for the enactment of such municipal and State laws, with an effective penalty attached thereto, as shall prevent the manufacture and sale of this mind-destroying and death-dealing curse."

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

AS AN evidence of the growth of public sentiment in favor of the settlement of international disputes between the great political powers of the world we publish the following invitation to attend a national conference to be held, as stated, especially in the interest of promoting peace between the two great English-speaking nations—the United States and Great Britain.

The efforts of all who have labored at home and abroad to promote fraternity of spirit and concurrence of action between the two nations in favor of universal arbitration can scarcely be too highly commended. The cultivation and triumph of such principles would go far toward the elevation of nations and tend to strengthen the spirit of international justice and fraternity in behalf of advancing civilization and emancipation of the race.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12, 1896.

Dear Sir:—A widespread desire has been manifested both in the United States and in Great Britain for the establishment between these two countries of a permanent system of arbitration.

With a view to the accomplishment of that end we hereby invite you to attend a National Conference, to be held in the city of Washington, on Wednesday and Thursday, the 22d and 23d of April next, to express the general conviction that such a system of arbitration should be speedily provided for by the proper authorities and with the most comprehensive application practicable.

It is earnestly desired that all parts of the country should be fully represented at this conference, and, in order that this may be assured, a similar invitation has been sent to representative men, irrespective of party or creed, in every State and Territory in the Union—the combined membership of the two houses of Congress being taken as a general basis of numbers and apportionment.

Assuming that you share our belief as to the importance of the end proposed, we deem it unnecessary in this communication to enter into an extended statement on the subject. By repeated acts, as well as by repeated declarations, our government has appeared before the world in advocacy of international arbitration, as a measure conformable to our own interests and the genius of our institutions, as well as to the cause of general justice and civilization. To this effect patriotism, philanthropy, statesmanship, and religion have spoken as with one voice.

In confining the present movement to the promotion of arbitration between the United States and Great Britain, we are not unconcerned for the wider application of the principle involved. But, taking into consideration the importance and the value of practical results, it has seemed wise to concentrate our immediate efforts upon the attainment of a permanent system between the two great English-speaking peoples.

Earnestly trusting that we may receive at an early day your acceptance of the invitation hereby extended, we remain,

Yours faithfully,

That the spirit of peace and good will is not confined to America we append the following cablegram to the New York Journal. It is but one of similar gatherings reported from Great Britain:—

LONDON, March 20.—Next Tuesday the association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, a body whose importance it is impossible to overrate in commerce, will hold its usual annual meeting in London. One of the most important resolutions to come up emanates from the Sheffield Chamber. It is that the Associated Chambers of Commerce desire to express to the New York Chamber of Commerce their appreciation of its friendly feeling and their strong desire that some method acceptable to both nations may be found for settling in a conciliatory spirit the differences between the two nations, and that copies of the resolution be sent to the governments of the United States and Great Britain.

BOYHOOD AND GIRLHOOD.

"CHILDHOOD succeeds babyhood by imperceptible degrees, and is itself merged into boyhood and girlhood by degrees as imperceptible. We cannot mark the exact time when the change takes place, but we feel the change. The laughing, romping little maiden who used to run into our arms, or perch upon our shoulder with the abandon of a bird, grows shy and thoughtful, greets us demurely and blushes as she speaks; the boy, too, grows shy and awkward from self-consciousness, and both unconsciously proclaim that they have crossed the invisible line which forever separates them from childhood. . . .

"Each marked period of life is preceded by such a period of thoughtfulness. At such seasons the mind delights to test its developing strength upon insolvable problems, hence the truth of the proverb, 'a child will ask questions which a philosopher cannot answer.' This is emphatically the age of questioning; much of the future development of the mind depends upon how these questions are met. Nothing more certainly quashes the intellect, than to meet the child's honest questions with a banter, a frown, or a sneer.

"On the other hand there is great danger of pert, forward children growing into nuisances by their meaningless questions resulting from mere idle curiosity. In the case of the little child the greatest kindness is to answer its questions in the shortest and simplest way, not trying to tell him all about the topic, for that he cannot grasp, but be sure that what you do give is absolute truth. Abbott illustrates this point well; Johnny, at first sight of a rainbow asks: 'Mother, mother, what makes the rainbow?' His wise mother does not attempt to give the little fellow a lecture upon the properties of light, and talk learnedly of its decomposition into primary colors and so on, nor does she say, 'Do be still, don't bother me with questions about things you cannot understand;' she simply answers, 'The sun,' and goes on with the conversation Johnny's question has interrupted. Johnny is satisfied for the time; it is a new and grand idea to him that the sun makes the rainbow, and he thinks it over and over.

"Presently he is ready for another step, and he asks 'How does the sun make the rainbow?' she answers simply, 'By shining on the cloud,' and here is another new thought for him to ponder, and he does ponder it; he notices that there is a black cloud just behind the rainbow, that the beautiful arch is exactly opposite the sun, which is low down in the west and shining straight upon it, and thus he fixes in his mind the necessary conditions for a rainbow. Thus far he can go, but now he has reached the end of his own powers, and he appeals again to his mother: 'Mother, how does the sun make a rainbow by shining on a cloud?' She replies that it shines on millions of little drops of rain in the cloud, and makes them of all colors, like the drops of dew on the grass, and all the colors together make the rainbow.' Thus step by step she has given him all that his mind can grasp concerning the rainbow, and in giving it has exemplified the principles which should govern us in meeting the questions of children of a larger growth.

"She answers him truthfully. When Johnny studies philosophy in the high school he will not have to unlearn what his mother told him about the rainbow. She did not tell all she knew at once. If she had done so his own mind would not have been kept active; she gave him one simple fact at a time, and let his mind work on that till it had fully taken it in, and asked for more. She did not give him any information until he was ready for it, as shown by his asking for it. Here comes into play a principle, not generally recognized, but true nevertheless; each answer should be studiously designed to communicate only a small amount of knowledge. It thus sets the mind of the questioner at work and brings into play that law of self-activity, which we have seen is the foundation of all true development.

"Now apply these principles to the problem of meeting the questions of boys and girls. They should be answered truly, and thus a firm foundation laid for future knowledge; they should be answered in such a way as to keep their powers active in searching out answers for themselves; they should purposely give only enough information to assist the young minds in searching out the answer.

"Another thing: never be afraid to say 'I don't know.'

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, Than were ever dreamed of in thy philosophy."

"This is as true now as in the days of Shakespeare, and these things undreamed of in our philosophy are often the very ones on which the keen, questioning spirit of the boy or girl seizes. When this occurs do not be ashamed to say, 'I do not know; perhaps by the time you are as old as I am, the answer will have been discovered, but we do not know it now.' Such an answer at once satisfies and inspires the young heart. If with it you give the story of the boy Watt, sitting for hours watching the steam of his grandmother's teakettle, questioning what power it was which lifted the lid, and showing how from these boy-questionings grew the knowledge of the power of steam which has revolutionized the industries of the world, you deepen the inspiration. Or, if it is your daughter who questions you, tell her the story of Jenny Arkwright's overturned wheel, whose spindle, still whirling as it lay on the floor, gave the idea of the spinning Jenny, which perpetuates her name and makes it possible for one girl, now, to attend to sixty spindles turned by steam, each doing more work than her single wheel could have done in the old days, before steam spinning superseded our grandmother's spinning wheel."

Next in importance to answering a child's questions correctly in order that he may obtain accurate and useful knowledge is teaching him the habit of close observation. An excellent way to do this is to keep a book for the purpose of writing down all observations made by the child.

"Besides cultivating habits of close and accurate observation, it might be made the means of unifying the family, old and young joining in making the observations. It would cultivate a spirit of mutual helpfulness, the older brothers and sisters writing down what the little ones saw, but could not write out for themselves. It would furnish pleasant and profitable employment for odd moments, thus helping to form the very useful habit of utilizing them. 'The use we make of the odd minutes,' says Dr. Bateman, 'determines whether we shall become wise or remain ignorant.'

"These observations could include animal as well as vegetable life; no one can thus watch the habits of domestic animals and birds without becoming too much interested in them to do them harm; thus kindness to animals is secured much better than it can be by strict orders on the subject. The facts thus learned in regard to plant and animal life are often useful to the farmer and gardener. Especially is this true in regard to injurious insects. . . .

"In a group of brothers and sisters who have grown up together, and who have roamed the fields and woods together, you will find one who can tell you all about the flowers, trees, and other forms of vegetable life; another who knows very little about these, but has an intimate acquaintance with all the 'little folks in fur and feathers' in the neighborhood. Another has tested with his mimic mill the water power of every stream, and can describe accurately every windmill, thrashing machine, and reaper in the region.

"Our boys and girls should be trained to seek for answers to their questions in books, as well as in nature. . . . For this purpose every home should be furnished with a few good books of reference, cyclopedias, where possible, and other books containing information upon common topics. It is not enough that these books are on the shelves of the family library; our young folks should be taught to use them.

"At this period of life the vital forces are intensely active. There is much 'surplus energy,' which must be disposed of, for good or for evil. A whole life may be wrecked by giving a wrong tendency to this surplus energy; rightly directed, it will become an immense power for good. The animal life surges strong within our boys and girls, and they begin to feel temptations to 'fleshly lusts that war against the soul.' In all their lives there will never be a time when they will be more in need of wise, loving, parental guidance than now. As you value your own happiness and your children's souls, see that you do not fail them in this their hour of need. Prepare them for the physical changes whose premonitions are now making themselves felt through every fibre of their tense-strung being. Let your children learn all they need to know concerning their own bodies—and this is very much—from your own lips. Do not leave your boys to gather this knowledge from ribald tongues upon the streets, nor your girls to go without it till they perish for lack of knowledge.

"Very few of us, in the circle of our own acquaintances, have not known cases of girls dying of quick consumption, or living invalid lives, because, from feelings of false modesty, their mothers failed to prepare them for the coming change; it came upon them unawares, and reckless exposure, which the mother should have guarded against, wrought dire vengeance for the neglect. At this critical time, if at no other, let us be honest with our boys and girls, true to their better nature; let us impress upon them the sacredness of the body, as the temple of the living God, that they shall never defile it; and so exalt their ideas of their spiritual natures that they shall ever 'keep the soul on top.' Remember, too, that at this period the physical resources are severely taxed. Growth is rapid, and it absorbs the strength of the body. See that the body is not overtaxed, lest it be stunted or deformed.

"Physical changes are not the only ones going on now. The whole being is in a turmoil; newly awakened emotions and passions surge in perplexing whirl; the whole nature seems in a state of chaos and uncertainty. No wonder there is irritability or peevishness. This is the season when the girl cries 'for nothing,' and the boy swaggers and struts and takes to tyrannizing over his younger brother and sister. Yet he doesn't seem happy withal; as Mrs. Stowe says, 'At this period he often wishes himself dead, and makes himself such a nuisance that other people sometimes wish so too.'

"But patience, fathers, mothers, and teachers, almost infinite patience seems sometimes needed,—patience and loving care, and your boy and girl will come through the ordeal safely. One of the most important things is pleasant occupation, which turns thought away from self while it does not overtax the physical system. Many fond parents err just here; for fear of overtaxing their children, they give them nothing to do, than which nothing could be more hurtful. A tendency to moody introspection is one of the characteristics of this age, and idleness fosters it. Keep the young folks busy and interested in something outside of themselves. If from childhood you have trained them to systematic industry, you will now have your reward, for nothing will go so far as such habits in tiding them safely over this critical period. The lighter work of the household and the farm, such as would naturally fall to the share of boys and girls, is excellent for this purpose. But brighten it up, as you can; don't make it mere drudgery; and don't forget how you felt when you were of their age, and how much you needed sympathy. I don't believe there is one of us who really does remember how we felt then, that can look back at our forlorn selves of that period without pity. Now will come into good play the love of nature and of natural history whose growth we have encouraged from childhood. It will give the thoughts something to dwell upon and will lead to health-giving outdoor excursions."

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. CLARA STEARLEY, of Shelton, Nebraska, desires the prayers of the sisters, as she is afflicted, and wishes to grow stronger and have more faith.

Sr. Hannah Cairns, of Elmira, Kansas, asks the prayers of the elders and the sisters, that the Lord will give her husband health and strength, and that the disease that is preying on her system be rebuked.

Bro. William Franklin, of Fish Creek, Wisconsin, being isolated from the Saints, feels the need of their prayers and the Prayer Union to remember him that the evil one may have no power over him. Are there not some who, sympathizing with his isolated condition, can send him a cheering letter?

LOOK NOT.

Looking is the door to wishing,
Therefore shun the sight of sin;
Turn away your eyes from evil,
Stop the wrong ere you begin.

Look not, then, my little children,
And desire will be unknown.
What is harmful, what is wicked,
We should ever let alone.

THE SUCCESSFUL TEACHER.

IN a revelation given to the church in 1873 the Lord said: "Behold, if my servants and my handmaidens of the different organizations for good among my people, shall continue in righteousness, they shall be blessed."—D. C. 117: 12.

From this we arrive at the conclusion that the Sunday school movement is acknowledged and approved of God as it is an institution "for good." It is intended to be a nursery to the church, to educate and build up its members with the "sincere milk of the word," a means of "help" as suggested by the great apostle in 1 Corinthians 12, to bring the Saints into a closer relationship with the great purposes of God as revealed in the sacred Scriptures.

When we consider the amount of truth contained in the old adage, that "the children of to-day are the nation and the church of to-morrow," then we can readily perceive what an important duty it is to educate the children that we are brought in contact with Sunday after Sunday. It is one thing to be a teacher in name and another thing to teach, in the same sense as it is often applied to the ministry, that "many are called but few are chosen."

are oftentimes perplexing, but should that fact discourage us and cause that noble army of teachers to decline to labor in the vineyard of the Lord? Nay, a thousand times nay! It should rather stimulate noble men and women to a greater zeal. As President Joseph Smith once truly remarked, "All are not equally intelligent, but we may be equally zealous and diligent." If we have in our own bosom a burning desire to labor for the Master, then the many cares and obstacles which we come in contact with in life we will overcome and surmount through unceasing prayer to God that the Spirit of his Son may dwell richly in us to illuminate our minds, and inspire our thoughts, for the faithful believer has the promise of the Holy Spirit to communicate knowledge of the things of the Father, to lead and guide into all truth. Having concluded that prayerfulness is one of the characteristics of the successful teacher, that he may be blessed of God in his endeavors to do good, and to rightly understand the sacred writ, we will proceed to notice briefly a few others; namely, study: This may be said to go hand in hand with prayer. We read of the Apostle Paul, under the inspiration of God, admonishing Timothy, his son in the gospel covenant, in the following suggestive words: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."—2 Timothy 2: 15. If it is necessary that the ministry should study to show themselves approved of God, how equally essential it is for the Sunday school teachers to study. The work is the same, the Sunday school being a department in the enterprise of saving immortal souls. In the gospel economy the results reached are one, in the consummation of all things through the various "helps and governments" which the Almighty has set in his church. It is said that "thoroughness is the foundation of education;" then it is the Sunday school teachers' duty as well as privilege to search and study all good books within their reach, and as far as their pocketbooks allow, in order to be thoroughly equipped to impart knowledge to others as well as to develop their own minds that they may be wise servants.

Patience: The Sunday school teacher will find ample need of this virtue. There are times when her patience will be tried to the uttermost by the restlessness and the seeming indifference among the pupils. Then again, she may see no immediate good results following her labors as she would often like to see, but by being patient, she will still press forward, for it is God that giveth the increase in his own due time.

"Thy purpose firm is equal to the deed.
Who does the best his circumstances allow,
Does well, acts nobly, angels could no more.
The secret to success is constancy to purpose."

Love: To love all others should be the teacher's aim. Paul wrote, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." If we have the love of God dwelling in our hearts, we will have charity for all. Charity is no respecter of persons. It neither speaketh nor thinketh evil. As Paul says, "It is kind and endureth long." Love should predominate in all

THE PASTOR AND THE SCHOOL.

This bright summary of the pastor's opportunities in the Sunday school was prepared by J. A. Haddock for the meeting of the Chester Presbytery, at Media, Pennsylvania.

It's well worth reading and possibly might be used to good advantage in other meetings of pastors and Sunday school workers.

our words and actions. May we take kindly all that is kindly meant, "be first to thank, be last to resent."

A saintly life: This covers the whole ground. It includes all the characteristics that are embodied in a true follower of the meek and lowly one. The true Sunday school worker will endeavor to cultivate a meek and forgiving spirit, and strip himself of all malice, envy, and jealousy. Again, the great apostle wrote, "Be ye followers of me, even as I am of Christ."

"A saint of latter days, one born of God,
Of water, and the Spirit's quickening love
One born to manifest through life to death
The life, and ways of him who came to save."

If it is true as it is often stated, that "Example is better than precept" then the Sunday school worker cannot be too careful in determining what course to pursue. We oftentimes sing;

"Cast thy bread upon the waters
For as sure as God is true,
In this world, or in the other
It will yet return to you."

We may not now behold the fruit of our good labors, but we can now draw consolation and comfort from the Holy Scriptures where it is said: "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Ah, yes! if we faint not. It was Jesus who once said that "men should always pray, and faint not." These are words of much import. Courage, then, ye noble band of teachers. Let us go on from faith to faith. "Trust in the Lord, and do good." We know our cause is just, and if we will be faithful to our trust, Jesus, in the distribution of rewards, will remember us and we will be filled with joy unspeakable, and in the full fruition of our hopes, the many sorrows, anxieties, and vexations that we have passed through, will be lost sight of and forgotten. In the meantime let us work "till Jesus comes," for the crowning day is coming by and by.

FRANK J. PIERCE.

FANNING, Kansas,

Letter Department.

ORCHARDVILLE, Ill., April 6.

Editors Herald.—Bro. I. N. White on his way to General Conference stopped off at Sims, Illinois, and held a six days' debate with W. J. Moore, of the Missionary Baptist Church. The debate closed April 4. It was a grand victory for the latter-day work. Each disputant affirmed that the church with which he stood identified is identical in organization, faith, and practice with the church established by Christ. Bro. White gained many friends while here. He maintained his proposition according to the Bible, which was the standard of evidence agreed on by both parties.

Mr. Moore used those old stories against us which we hear so often from an outsider. He presented nothing new against the Reorganized Church, so I do not deem it necessary to burden the Herald columns with those things with which the Saints are already acquainted; such as harsh words to Bro. White and trying to fasten the sins of other factions on our people. He tried for three days to prove the Baptist Church identical with the church of Christ in organization, faith, and practice. All the ability of the Baptist Church put together cannot prove such a proposition as this. I speak by experience. They have but few men that will affirm that for their church. Mr. Moore claimed that it was organized by Christ and has stood ever since. I am satisfied that the debate has done good. Bro. White showed up the Baptist doctrine in its true light, that it is not in harmony with the Bible in gifts and blessings.

Rev. Throgmorton, one of their best men, was with us part of the time. Would have been glad to have had him with us all through the debate. He gave us a good talk while with us. He showed a friendly spirit toward the Saints. We heard him in debate with Bro. I. M. Smith a few years ago. He seemed to act fair and kind in his warfare against us. When we enter into debate we are glad to meet such kind-hearted men.

The debate at Sims has been a blessing to the cause. Bro. White did a grand work for the truth. The majority of the people saw the weakness of the opposite side.

Yours for that which is true and good,
F. M. SLOVER.

DRAIN, Oregon, April 3.

Editors Herald.—Although we are a quiet people we are alive in the work of furthering the Master's cause. We are all poor in this world's goods and not gifted in the talent of speaking, but we feel that we are rich. Latter Day Saints should feel that they are rich when they have the assurance of eternal life in exchange for their earthly goods and life, if they devote both to God's work. I can only wish that I had more means and talent to lend to the Lord. I ask the Saints to pray for me that my tongue may be loosed that I may proclaim to the world God's most holy words. We need some one here that can talk and I hope and pray that Bro. J. C. Clapp will succeed in getting some one to come here and help us this summer. The few Saints here try as best they can to forward the work by trying to get people to read, but I find that a great many who say they want to read are so indifferent about their soul's salvation that they will lay the reading matter by and never read it; but they would listen to some good talker explain the doctrine.

We have such bad roads in this country in the winter time that it is almost impossible to get together to hold meetings, still we try to have prayer meeting every month. It is now drawing near the close of the rainy season, so we will try to have our meetings oftener.

I wish to ask the Saints of the Prayer

Union and all others to pray for our dear brother, L. M. Tracy, who has met with a severe accident by a falling limb of a tree and is prostrated on his bed, that he may, if it is God's will, be healed, as he has a family of five small children who need his care.

WILLIAM TAYLOR.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., March 16.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me in fair health and all of New South Wales to myself. Elder Kaler has been called to Victoria for a three months' campaign with the missionary in charge. It is his first trip, and the conditions are more favorable than when I went eighteen months ago. Prospects have altered to brighter since then; and I look for good results from the present effort being put forth there "two by two."

Elder W. J. Trembath, who was thinking of entering the field on his own responsibility, was invited to make a visit to New South Wales, during the absence of Elder Kaler. This invitation was accepted, and we, happy in the thought of having his efficient help, began to plan accordingly, when word came from him saying it was not possible to get away at the present time, and putting off his visit to the remote future. Of course we regret it, for the work demands help; but we must do the best we can and leave the rest.

Yours, wondering if the coming conference can do anything for us,

GOMER WELLS.

CONIFER, Colo., March 31.

Editors Herald:—I am very happy to report progress in the State of Colorado. I have been laboring of late in the northern part of this State, where I found the people more anxious to hear the truth than ever before. I held a week's meetings at a place called a La Porte, in Larimer County, and had good congregations all the time with a pressing invitation to come again.

I next went over into Weld County, near a place called New Windsor; held meeting for eight nights in a large schoolhouse, with unabated interest, and on Sunday morning, March 22, I had the pleasure of baptizing four precious souls into the kingdom of God's dear Son, witnessed by quite a number of outsiders, after which we repaired to the house of Bro. L. Bradshaw for confirmation and sacrament meeting. Had a good time and blessed two children and married one couple. One brother who was baptized had been a member and steward of the M. E. Church; but he found that our doctrine was more in harmony with the Bible, so he made up his mind to unite with us. I believe that he will be a firm member and an honor to the cause. Sr. Ralston had also been a member of the Methodist Church. I believe they will be shining lights. We left others believing and ere long Sr. Ralston's husband and others of her family will unite with the church if the work is kept up. This is a new place and some of the people never heard the gospel preached before in their lives. We had a good turnout all the time and the last Sunday night the house was full to listen to a discourse on the divine mission of Joseph Smith, and I never saw people more attentive in my life. It was past ten o'clock before we left the schoolhouse.

A change has come over the people in Colorado and prejudice is giving way. This will be pleasing news to our beloved brother Calfall, for he has labored much and tried hard to establish the work in this State. Thank God, calls are coming to me from over the State, east, west, north, and south, to come and preach, and I only wish that my circumstances were such that I could devote my whole time to the work of the ministry, for I feel that many souls are starving for the bread of life. We truly need more laborers in the vineyard of the Lord, for the harvest is great and the field is white. O let the reapers go forth and gather in the grain while the day lasts, for the night will soon come when no man can work. I want to say with Bro. C. Scott,

Shall sheaves lie there ungathered,
And waste upon the plain?

May God help us to be more united in sending forth more missionaries into the great harvest field of God Almighty, is my prayer. Amen.

JAMES KEMP.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 8.

Editors Herald:—Our work in the Fremont district is still alive. I preached a few nights in Hamburg just before coming home, and had a splendid interest; quite a number of outsiders in attendance. We were actually surprised to see the people turn out, and so were the Saints of that branch. The few Saints of this place have struggled hard for life, but we are thankful to say they still live and enjoy fair spiritual health. Bro. Simon Becksted has done a noble work in opening a hall for the preaching of the word and holding Sunday school, and we trust he will never slacken his hand in the interests of the work, but continue to the end and obtain the reward of the doers of the work. He is president of the branch, and is ably assisted by the officers of the branch; his son Frank as priest, and Elder Nathan Mortimore acting as teacher, and preaching the word, with Bro. Charles Cace as deacon, who is ever on hand and diligent in service. May God bless the faithful ones of this branch and give them patience and endurance that they may obtain eternal life. I shall return to this place first if returned to my present field.

In gospel bonds,

EVERLASTING HAPPINESS AND EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT.—NO. 4.

BY ELDER J. L. BEAR.

RESURRECTION AND JUDGMENT.

BOOK of Mosiah 8: 9.

Their works, . . . If they be good, to the resurrection of endless life and happiness, and if they be evil, to the resurrection of endless damnation; being delivered up to the devil, who hath subjected them, which is damnation; having gone according to their own carnal wills and desires, having never called upon the Lord, while the arms of mercy were extended towards them; for the arms of mercy were extended toward them, and they would not; they being warned of their iniquities, and yet they would not depart from them; and they were commanded to repent, and yet they would not repent.

Book of Alma 3: 6. The prophet explains here the difference between the sheep of Christ and of those who are of the fold of the Devil, and he their shepherd; and whoso denieth this is a liar and a child of the Devil himself. They receive their wages from him, which is death as to things pertaining unto righteousness, being dead unto all good works.

How plainly it is described here what the second death means. Harken further to the language of the prophet:—

I speak in the energy of my soul; for behold, I have spoken unto you plain, that ye cannot err, or have spoken according to the commandments of God.

Chapter 9: 3:—

And now, behold I say unto you, then cometh a death, even a second death, which is a spiritual death; then is a time that whosoever dieth in his sins, as to a temporal death, shall also die a spiritual death: yea he shall die as to things pertaining unto righteousness; then is the time when their torments shall be as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever; and then is the time that they shall be chained down to an everlasting destruction, according to the power and captivity of Satan; he having subjected them according to his will. Then I say unto you, they shall be as though there had been no redemption made; for they cannot be redeemed according to God's justice; and they cannot die, seeing there is no more corruption.

Go ahead reader; read the whole of the chapter.

The penalty being the second death, which is a second death, which is an everlasting death as to things pertaining unto righteousness. Everlasting destruction of the soul. Last death as well as the first.

Alma 19: 8. Raised to endless happiness, to inherit the kingdom of God; or to endless misery, to inherit the kingdom of the Devil: the one on the one hand, the other on the other. Here again we have two words alike: endless on the one hand, and endless on the other. If the misery ends, then the happiness ends.

And surely, those who receive an inheritance in the three different glories do not belong to this last class. Then we are informed that they are goats, or the children of the Devil, who receive their inheritance with the Devil and his angels in a kingdom in which is no glory; a good strongly built penitentiary for life sentence; and as there is no more death, they cannot die any more, then certainly it is forever; just as a criminal who commits certain murder, receives life sentence in the pen, if he is not strangled with the rope. Reader, please read the whole chapter and you will get light, if you desire light and love light, instead of your own ideas and reasonings.

Now, they did not sin ignorantly, for they knew the will of God concerning them, for it had been taught unto them; therefore they did willfully rebel against God.—Book of Nephi 3: 3.

Chapter 12: 3. By and by the end cometh, and they are hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence there is no return.

Some make objections like this: "Well does Christ not say that he will save all men? Does he not say in John's Gospel 12: 32, 'And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me'?" So you see he will save them all."

What argument, what shallow reasoning, to draw such a conclusion from those few words! We elders in preaching to the world find that they, the world, take up a certain passage, thinking thereby to prove their faith correct and that they have vanquished our doctrine, we generally answer, "Why don't you read so and so?" Now, what does the next verse say?

This he said, signifying what death he should die.

But let us see what is recorded in the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel. Book of Nephi chapter 12, end of paragraph 3, and beginning of paragraph 4:—

Behold I have given unto you my gospel, and this is the gospel which I have given unto you, that I came into the world to do the will of my Father, because my Father sent me; and my Father sent me that I might be lifted up upon the cross; and after that I have been lifted up upon the cross, I might draw all men unto me; that as I have been lifted up by men, even so should men be lifted up by the Father, to stand before me, to be judged of their works, whether they be good or whether they be evil; and for this cause have I been lifted up; therefore, according to the power of the Father, I will draw all men unto me, that they may be judged according to their works.—Par. 3.

This looks a little different; no proof here for universal salvation. Let us still go a little farther:—

And it shall come to pass, that whoso repented and is baptized in my name, shall be filled; and if he endureth to the end, behold, him will I hold guiltless before my Father, at that day when I shall stand to judge the world. And he that endureth not unto the end, the same is he that is also hewn down and cast into the fire, from whence they can no more return, because of the justice of the Father.—Par. 4.

Chapter 13, end of paragraph 5: He will not receive them at the last day; and it would be better for them if they had not been born.

End of paragraph 6:—

For he that doeth this, shall become the son of perdition, for whom there was no mercy, according to the word of Christ.

This settles and explains that passage of John 12: 32, for what purpose Christ was lifted up.

LOSING HIS SOUL.

Matthew 16: 29, Inspired Translation:—

Therefore, forsake the world, and save your souls; for what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?

Some that would not believe:—

John 6: 64, 70, 71, Inspired Translation:—

But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?

He spake of Judas Iscariot the son of Simon: for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

Some have said that Judas will be saved, and that he will occupy one of the twelve thrones along with the other apostles, to judge the house of Israel. It is blasphemy so to believe and to utter such sentiments. I for one could not look up to him with my feelings of respect; contrarily, I would feel to say, "What a shame, to make such a criminal (whom Christ called a son of perdition, a devil, a hypocrite, a thief) one whom it had been better never to have been born, better a millstone be hanged about his neck and he be drowned in the depth of the sea, to be a judge; to assist the other eleven to judge the whole house or Israel; millions of human beings who are a thousand times better than this judge himself! And I am sorry, yea it is painful just to think that some who claim to be Latter Day Saints not only believe, but teach such abominable and inconsistent doctrines.

EVIL MAN CANNOT DO GOOD.

Book of Moroni, chapter 7:—

By their works ye shall know them; for if their works be good, then they are good also. For behold, God hath said, a man being evil, cannot do that which is good; for if he offereth a gift, or prayeth unto God, except he shall do it with real intent, it profiteth him nothing. For behold, it is not counted unto him for righteousness. For behold, if a man being evil, giveth a gift, he doth it grudgingly; . . . wherefore, he is counted evil before God. And likewise also is it counted evil unto a man, if he shall pray, and not with real intent of heart; yea, and it profiteth him nothing; for God receiveth none such, wherefore, a man being evil, cannot do that which is good; neither will he give a good gift. For behold, a bitter fountain cannot bring forth good water, neither can a good fountain bring forth bitter water; wherefore a man being a servant of the devil cannot follow Christ; and if he follow Christ he cannot be a servant of the devil.

See Matthew 6: 1, 2, 5, 24; 7: 24-29; 13: 36-38. Can a thistle ever be changed, or propagated to a tame plant or herb? I think our wise, smart, and so well-educated men in science and botany and in every art of agricultural pursuits should have tried to transform this obnoxious weed into some useful plant; but all we can learn from them is that they are trying to study some plan or other to annihilate instead of propagating them. Grapes have not been gathered from them yet, neither did ever any potatoes grow on their roots, nor the golden button at the end of the root. The farmers in the Northern States would be glad if that Canadian and Russian thistle could be entirely destroyed. So it is the same with the thorns; they will always sting like the thistle; never were any figs gathered from them, nor any other useful fruit. They cannot be changed; they are and remain thorns and thistles; so with all other weeds.

THE GOOD SEED ARE THE CHILDREN OF THE KINGDOM.

The sheep belong to the good seed; nevertheless, they are so much choked by the weeds (drought or flood or neglect or otherwise figuratively speaking) that the crop turns out to be a poor one (the crop means the good works performed by those sheep), while the faithful Saints bring forth thirty, sixty, and a hundred fold. Still it is wheat, no matter how small the crop is, and how poorly the grain looks. It will be preserved in the garner of Almighty God; but the chaff, the weeds, the briars, thistles, etc., are burned;—those who are linked with Satan, his angels and men (goats), tares, corrupt trees, bad fish, good for nothing else but to be thrown away; who have covenanted with Satan to serve him; enemies to all truth and righteousness; persecutors of the truth, of God's chosen ones; and hinder the sheep from joining God's army; hinder them from entering into the kingdom of heaven, his church. Matthew 23: 10. Yea, those wicked ones shall have their share with the Devil and his angels, where their "worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." They shall inherit a kingdom without glory; they shall suffer the second death, being dead to all things that are good; dead to righteousness; penitentiary affair for life. The stone that shall fall on them judges them and sends them to their final home. Jesus, whom they despised and mocked, will grind them to powder. (Matthew 21: 46, 51, 54. I. T.)

Christ also says,

Every plant, which my Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

According to the Scriptures there is a chance given to every one to repent, and whosoever repents yet in this probationary state, yea before his spirit leaves this mortal tabernacle, there is a chance for him to inhabit the celestial glory. I mean those who do not embrace the gospel here on earth, but have a chance to hear it, or do hear it, but still do not embrace it; being careless, negligent, or still more, who persecuted the work to some extent; if they repent yet while in the flesh, there is mercy extended to them on the judgment day, and they will be rewarded for every good deed done. They belong to the sheep, but did not live up to their privileges, consequently lost the greater salvation. But those who die in their sins, will remain in their sins; the filthy ones will be filthy still, and a filthy place is prepared for them, a kingdom without glory.

Some may say, "Look here, did not Judas repent that he betrayed Christ before he died? According to your own argument, he has a chance of being saved in the lesser glory."

All right, was Judas' repentance genuine? When I injure some one more or less, for instance rob him of a certain sum of money, then afterwards go and acknowledge my evil deed to the Lord and ask him to forgive me, will the Lord forgive me as long as I don't try to reconcile myself with the person injured? Should I not leave my gift before the altar and go and reconcile myself first with the injured one and then go and offer my gift (prayer to the Lord)? Did Judas go to Christ with humility of heart, acknowledging the wrong done him, and ask his mercy and forgiveness? No, he did not, but instead of doing so, he committed another crime in committing self-murder.

We have evidences in holy writ that when man has gone too far in sin, it is not easy for him to repent any more, because the Devil has him bound with his chains. The thief on the cross did not go so far as Judas did, and did ask mercy and grace of Christ, when both were on the cross, and it was granted.

The Saints, who inherit the celestial glory will inherit it forever and ever. Those who inherit the terrestrial glory will inherit it forever and ever. Those who inherit the telestial glory will inherit it forever and ever. Those who inherit a kingdom without glory will inherit it forever and ever.

Now those who preach universal salvation would do well to read Second Book of Nephi 12: 1 and ponder over it, examine themselves, and see if they do not partially fulfill the prediction of this prophecy:—

Yea, and there shall be many which shall say, Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die: and it shall be well with us. And there shall also be many which shall say, Eat, drink, and be merry; nevertheless, fear God, he will justify in committing a little sin: yea, lie a little, take the advantage of one because of his words, dig a pit for thy neighbor; there is no harm in this. And do all these things, for tomorrow we die; and if it so be that we are guilty, God will beat us with a few stripes, and at last we shall be saved in the kingdom of God. Yea, and there shall be many which shall teach after this maner false, and vain, and foolish doctrines.

Orange growing in Arizona is declared to have passed the experimental stage, and will become an important industry in the territory. This year's crop in the Salt River Valley, where most of the experimental groves are situated, is large and excellent quality. The Arizona orange ripens somewhat earlier than those in Southern California.

A fool learns from no one. A wise man learns from everybody.

Life's toils and cares, to choose the right;

The tokens of thy love and might.

DIED.

PARTRIDGE.—Ramson R. Partridge was born in Madison County, New York, August 17, 1819, in which place he lived until November 25, 1845, when he married Mary V. Rogers, sister of Bro. I. L. Rogers. He then removed to Georgetown, New York, residing there until sometime in 1854, when he removed to Illinois, in the vicinity of Sandwich, residing there up to within a few years ago, when he moved into town, where he died April 3, 1896, leaving his wife, one son, and four daughters, besides a number of grandchildren, to mourn. Bro. Partridge united with the church early in the sixties and was firm in the faith to the time of his death. The funeral was held at his late residence, April 6, W. Vickery, assisted by E. M. Wildermuth, conducting the services. Interment in the Dixon cemetery.

BANTA.—Hattie E. Crosby was born January 13, 1847, at Deerfield, New York, but her parents removed to Minnesota while she was yet a girl. There she heard the gospel, and was baptized at Chatfield, September 6, 1869, by Elder E. C. Briggs. On November 29, 1877, she was married to Bro. Elijah Banta, and removed to Decatur County, Iowa. Four children were born to them, three of whom survive her; namely, Mary aged sixteen, Ethel fourteen, and Albert eleven years. Bro. Banta died in March, 1889. In March, 1894, Sr. Banta became aware that the dread disease called cancer was fastened upon her, but all efforts to remove it failed. During the last year she suffered much, especially during the few months before the end came. She died April 10, 1896. She was an excellent mother to the children whom God gave her, but who are now both fatherless and motherless. The sermon was preached by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, assisted by Bro. A. S. Cochran. About eight hundred people attended the services. Brn. A. K. Anderson, S. V. Bailey, John Scott, Charles Bradfield, Charles Butler, and Thomas France were the bearers of the mortal form to its resting place in Rose Hill cemetery.

FICKLE.—Sr. Matilda Fickle, at the home of her nephew, five miles northwest, of Galesburg, March 17, 1896, aged 85 years and 11 months. She was baptized by Elder Z. H. Gurley in 1861, and continued faithful until the end of her life, which was very peaceful. Funeral services conducted by Bro. Alma Whitehouse, of Kewanee, Illinois.

HUPP.—On April 2, 1896, Sr. Maggie Pearl Hupp, wife of Bro. Frank Hupp, and daughter of Bro. S. B. and Sister Caroline Kibler, after an illness of about seven weeks. Born October 5, 1873, in Woodbine, Iowa; baptized October 8, 1886, by Elder Phineas Cadwell. United in matrimony to Bro. Frank Hupp, June 21, 1893. Theirs was indeed a blessed union, as they lived together in the most perfect harmony to the moment of her death. From her birth to her demise she was dearly loved by all who knew her, and those who knew her best loved her most; in fact, she was ever worthy of the deepest, purest love, exemplary in her conduct, pure in her conversation, and a noble pattern of true, Christlike piety. As a child, ever loving and obedient, and as a wife, a faithful example of true womanhood. We all thank God for such a noble example of excellent virtue. Such are indeed "the salt of the earth," glorious rays of light and love sent of God to gladden the heart of man and make the world better and purer by their Christlike lives. I would to God we were all such. As organist in the church she was always at her post, but always ready to divide the honors of duty with her sister members, always careful to avoid anything that would create jealousy. Her musical powers were scarcely less than angelic; music was one of her chief delights. Her place in the Sabbath school was never vacant, unless hindered by some uncontrollable circumstance. Her loved and loving husband mourns deeply his irreparable loss. The grief of her parents and brother and sister is too deep to portray, and scarcely less poignant is that of the Woodbine branch; in fact, the whole town wept at her departure. Beauteous gifts of flowers came pouring in from all quarters without regard to creed, thus evincing their appreciation of the noble woman whose spirit had taken its flight to the paradise of God. A short period before her death her darling babe was placed upon her breast, received the last sad, but sweet and loving kiss from those dying lips. She had hoped to live to raise it for God; but he who doeth all things well had decreed better things for her, and she committed her babe to the hands of God, and her mother's care. While consciousness remained her angel face bore a smile for all—her trust in God never faltered for a moment. She was perfectly resigned to his will whether it should be for life or death. Truly for her to live was Christ, and for her to die was her eternal gain. Elder A. M. Fyrando preached the sermon, assisted by C. Derry. It seemed as though all Woodbine had assembled to give evidence of their love and sorrow. "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like his." C. D.

SWEET.—Bro. George Sweet was born September 18, 1812, near Woodstock, Canada. He joined the church in 1845, and the next year came West and located near Council Bluffs. He has been an elder in the church for over forty years, and many of the Saints whom he has baptized will remember him when they read they read this account. He died February 29, 1896, at his home near Persia. Funeral at the Latter Day Saints church at Persia; sermon by Elder Wm. A. Smith, assisted by Elder D. Chambers. He was laid away in the Walker Grove cemetery. Many children and friends mourn the loss of our brother.

PHILLIPS.—Sr. Mary Phillips, of Penygraig, South Wales, died March 14, 1896, in her eighty-seventh year. She remained faithful to the end. Interment in Methodist burial ground, Hafod. Funeral conducted by Elder Rees Jenkins.

JONES.—Edith Jones, infant daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Alice Jones, of Nantyglo, Mon, South Wales, died March 24, 1896. Interment in public cemetery, Byrnawr, March 26, 1896. Funeral conducted by Elder Alma N. Bishop, assisted by Elder Rees Jenkins.

BARMORE.—At Birdseye, Indiana, February 20, 1896, James D. Barmore, Sr. He was born June 26, 1835; baptized with his wife December 18, 1873, by Elder B. V. Springer; ordained to the office of priest February 1, 1890. He was married to Elizabeth F. McDonald February 22, 1858. To them ten children were born, eight of whom are still living. He never was sick or seriously afflicted until December 7, 1894, when he received a stroke of paralysis, and though disabled thereby, his health remained good in some respects. The second stroke, February 16 last, seemed slight at first, but terminated fatally. That evening he bore his testimony to the latter-day work. Like Paul, he had fought a good fight, finished his course, kept the faith, and knew there is a crown of righteousness laid up for him. His wife, children, three sisters, one brother, a number of other relatives, and many friends mourn. All of his near relatives were present at the time of his death except his brother. He was interred by the side of his parents in the cemetery at West Fork, Indiana. The obsequies were in charge of Elder L. F. Daniel.

BROWN.—March 15, 1896, Dora Lillian Brown, aged 12 years, 8 months, and 11 days. She had been a great sufferer for many years, but a sweet, loving child, beloved by all who knew her. It was hard for her parents to give her up, but she has gone to rest. Funeral sermon by Elder Henry Kemp.

BECKMAN.—Harry Edmund Beckman, son of Bro. John A. and Sr. Mercy Beckman, was born October 27, 1894; died at Unionburg, April 1, 1896. Services at the house by Elder Thomas Thomas, assisted by Elder W. D. Bullard.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE EVOLUTION OF RATIONAL LIFE.*

Rev. JOHN T. GULICK, Ph. D., in the Bibliotheca Sacra, Oberlin, Ohio. Condensed for PUBLIC OPINION.

MAN is rational and he finds himself part of a universe that is capable of being interpreted and used by reason. But rationality includes not only the adjusting of means, but the weighing and choosing of ends;—not only intelligence, but morality; not only knowledge, but love guiding in the use of knowledge. Man finds himself part of a social system in which regard for the good of all is the guiding principle that brings order out of confusion. The history of social evolution shows that, in proportion as man gains faith in this principle, and applies it intelligently to wider groups of society

* Under date of December 25, 1890, George J. Romanes, the late editor of Nature, the London scientific journal, wrote to Mr. Gulick, then a missionary in Japan. After concluding the strictly scientific part of the letter, Mr. Romanes turns to thoughts which were even then uppermost in his mind, and writes in part as follows:—

How is it that you have retained your Christian belief? . . . Years ago my own belief was shattered—and all the worth of life destroyed—by what has ever since appeared to me overpowering assaults from the side of rationality; and yours is the only mind I have met with, which, while greatly superior to mine in the latter respect, appears to have reached on opposite conclusion. Therefore I should like to know in a general way how you view the matter as a whole.

This reply, with the distinguished savant's personal acquaintance with Mr. Gulick, was among the prominent influences which led to Mr. Romanes's substantial return to the Christian faith. In publishing an article of Mr. Gulick's which appeared in Nature in the issue for April 10, 1890, Mr. Romanes writes as follows:—

I cannot allow the present communication to appear in these columns without again recording my conviction that the writer is the most profound of living thinkers upon Darwinian topics, and that the generalizations which have been reached by his 20 years of thought are of more importance to the theory of evolution than any that have been published during the post-Darwinian period.—[Eds. Bibliotheca Sacra.

and to each and all of the relations of social organization, in that proportion has he advanced in happiness and dignity. We also find that a very large share of this advancement has been due to Christianity. In populous regions there seems to have been a slow biological evolution through which altruistic instincts have gained increasing force; but no power outside of Christianity seems able to take man as he is, in any and every land, and set him on a new course. The cause of this wonderful power in Christianity seems to lie in its ability to assure men of the fatherhood of God as well as of the brotherhood of man.

Science rests on the assumption that unity, order, and law pervade the universe. Morality rests on the assumption that the obligations of benevolence are a reality, extending to the uttermost bounds of our influence. Religion rests on the assumption that power, wisdom, and love underlie the foundations of the universe. The first is the condition for any rational use of means, methods, and opportunities; the second is the condition for wisdom in the choice of ends and in the regulating of our lives; the third is the necessary condition for courage, confidence, and joy in realizing the two previous conditions. There is also an interdependence between the first and second conditions which seems to make it necessary that they should advance together.

But is it wise, is it rational, to act on these assumptions before we prove that they are in accordance with fact? I believe it is. Irrational creatures, as well as man, put faith in the reality of the objects revealed by their senses, though the only proof that the assumption is not a delusion is that it works well in serving the purposes of life, and that the knowledge derived from different senses is harmonious. Now, it seems to me that confidence in the postulates of our reason is justified in the same way. They are necessary to the continuance of rational life. They give vigor, enthusiasm, and joy to life; and they bring all parts of our knowledge into a harmonious whole. Again it may be asked, Are not the first two of these postulates sufficient without the last? And does the last stand on as sure a basis as the other two? It seems to me that the three are inseparably connected. Rational man is the fruit of nature, and the nature that bore him everywhere responds to his reason. What can be more rational than to believe that the nature of the universe is rooted in reason?

I am sure Christianity could not retain its hold on the modern world, any more than Buddhism, if it did not show superior power in elevating the lives of men. But the great power of Christianity lies in the direct effects of the character of Christ. His influence on the world is due not only to his elevated conception of the fatherhood of God, but to the new aspirations awakened by his realization of the most exalted life and his promises to lead others to the attainment of a similar life, in their devotion to him and to the kingdom of God which he establishes on earth. Not only has Christ become a leading factor in the evolution of society, but in the survival of the meek and the righteous he has opened to us the philosophy of this higher evolution, and the truth of the philosophy is sustained by the gradual fulfillment of the predictions based on the philosophy.

Concerning the nature of Christ's authority, and the ground on which he makes such great promises, and assumes such absolute leadership, I try simply to understand what he claims for himself. His life and its influence on the world seem to me as unique as his death and resurrection. Each sustains the other, and the harmony and consistency of the whole seem to me unlike the fabrications of the myth-making faculty or the productions of idealizing art. An extraordinary life may be the occasion for myths attempting to explain that life; but it is entirely incredible that myths and subjective delusions should originate a character on a wholly new range of thought, and then give it power to transform, first the original subjects of the delusion, making them consistent and persistent witnesses and martyrs, and then through them the whole structure of society.

Making allowance for the fact that the very names of things sometimes express the causes to which popular belief attributes them, we find that the records of Christ's life are chiefly the simplest possible recitals of what he did and said, with only the briefest references to the explanation of the facts. And of the facts recorded, nearly all relate to the last three years of his life. Passing by all explanations of the nature of his life, and giving attention simply to the main facts of these three years and to their influence on those who were with Him, and through them, on the world, we are brought to the irresistible conclusion that he was a new type of man, possessed of a character of complete devotion to the good of others, and of unparalleled power in transforming and elevating the lives of others. In biological evolution a new type has influence only as its offspring multiply to the exclusion of other types; but, in rational evolution, a new character may propagate itself by transforming other types into more or less conformity to its own standards without any infusion of new blood. This is the method of Christ's influence on the world. In closing, I may say, that our philosophical explanations undergo transformation, but the great facts of Christianity seem to me to remain untouched.

TELEGRAPHY.

A MULTIPLEX PRINTER.

PROF. HENRY A. ROWLAND of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, after nearly a year's labor, has obtained successful results from a remarkable invention for transmitting telegrams written upon a typewriter at the place of sending and reproduced in typewritten form at the receiving point. In addition to the typewriting part of the invention, Prof. Rowland, with his new machine, can send over the same wire five or six different messages at the same time in one direction, which, in duplex, makes ten or twelve messages which can be transmitted on the same wire at the same time. Thus, with five operators at each end of a line, sending each an average of thirty words a minute, three hundred words can be transmitted each minute. Dr. Rowland has been informed by the Patent Office officials that no such invention has ever been received there, typewriting telegraphy having been attempted before, but upon entirely different principles. He has used a synchronous device in his invention, and in the mechanical arrangements of the typewriter has used but eight signals, the letters being produced by combinations. The current of electricity transmitting the message can be relayed, and in this manner the invention can be operated for great distances. In finished form the instrument will be as convenient and as easily operated as the ordinary telegraphic apparatus. Prof. Rowland calls his invention the Multiplex Printing Telegraph.—Information.

HOPE OF THE "DOWNTRODDEN JEW."

NO RACE or tribe or clan has been so much abused, wronged, and outraged as the children of Israel, says The America Israelite. Mentioning first the fact that Jews were enslaved in Egypt, and that at the dawn of freedom, when they had shaken off the bondage of Pharaoh's land, there was Amalek to cut off the faint and the weak in the rear of the camp, the writer proceeds:—

"The same was the case when the sons of Judah came back from the Babylonian captivity under Zerubabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah; scarcely were they organized under a shadow of independence when there came Haman, the prime minister of Ahasuerus, and planned the destruction of the whole people, as did also Antiochus Epiphanes after him, and as Vespasian, Titus, and Hadrian nearly accomplished it after them. That which came after the fall of Bethar and lasted sixteen centuries long baffles description. Every day of sunshine was followed by ten of storm, darkness, and devastation. The entire flood of human and barbarian wickedness went over the heads of the sons of Israel. The Pharaohs of Europe never became as conscientious as the Pharaoh of Egypt that exclaimed, 'Jehovah is the righteous, I and my people are the wicked.' They went on and on condemning, ostracizing, torturing, and slaying the seed of Abraham—the work of the Crusaders and the Inquisition were only a little louder episodes in the history of crime—until God slew the firstborn by the revolutions of America and France, and subsequent insurrections, which crushed the serpent's head, the head of despotism in state and church, and the Pharaohs are now the mere shadows of former autocrats. This new state of affairs brought relief also to the downtrodden Jew. Liberty, as far as her domain reaches, offered him a home and the enjoyment of the inalienable rights of man. Not long, however, did Israel breathe the air of freedom when reaction set in, in the different forms of Judophobia, running into stupid and malicious anti-Semitism in one place, into sweet and smooth-faced bigotry in another, in social ostracism elsewhere; and there we are yet, right now. Still here we are as numerous and vigorous as ever; physically, morally, and intellectually unimpaired, and our optimism unalloyed. How do you account for that, philosopher of history? If you cannot do it, read in Moses, Leviticus 26: 44, 45, or in Jeremiah 46: 28. These and similar passages explain the miracle and confirm the truth of prophecy. Do not forget to read those passages repeatedly, and learn from them how the will of the Lord is done."

LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 22, 1896.

PRES. W. W. BLAIR DEAD.

It is with a deep sense of sadness that we announce the death of Pres. W. W. Blair, which occurred on the morning of Saturday, April 18, near Chariton, Iowa, on the train which left Chicago at 10:30 on the previous night, and in which he was returning home from the late General Conference.

The circumstances attending his death are as follows: He had contracted a severe cold at Cleveland, Ohio, while enroute to Kirtland. However, he was able to attend the sessions of the Sunday School Convention and General Conference until about the fourth or fifth day of the latter, when he became so ill that he was confined to his bed with cold, which seemingly developed into neuralgia of the stomach, and which caused severe paroxysms of pain. Toward the end of the session he improved somewhat, though relapsing at times. However, he felt sufficiently improved to start home, which he did in company with a number of the brethren, on the morning of Thursday, the 16th. He stood the journey reasonably well, but remained for rest at Chicago until the night of Friday, the 17th, taking a sleeper on the train leaving for the west at 10:30. At Burlington, Iowa, he joined Bro. F. M. Weld, also enroute from Chicago, and in the forward portion of the train, and who cared for and ministered to him in his last moments.

He became worse during the journey, suffering severely at times. Physicians were telegraphed for to Ottumwa, but none were obtainable, and he continued to grow worse, until just before reaching Chariton, Iowa, when he passed away. At Chariton his body was carried to the depot hotel and everything possible done to restore him, but it was too late—the end had come.

The death of Bro. Blair removes a historic and honored figure from the ranks of the Reorganized Church. He was loved and respected by the Saints universally, among whom he was widely known and by whom his death will be greatly mourned. His connection with the church dates from the year 1851 and with the Reorganization almost from its inception.

The remains were embalmed at Chariton and brought home on Sunday, the 19th.

A complete biographical and obituary notice will appear in the HERALD on the arrival of President Joseph Smith, the chief editor. The funeral will take place this afternoon, Monday, the 20th inst., as the HERALD goes to press.

Sister Blair and her bereaved family have the sincere sympathy and prayers of the Saints in their deep affliction.

THE CONFERENCE.

THE Annual Conference just ended at Kirtland will be noted in the memories of those who attended its sessions, as one of the most peaceful and pleasant spirited ever held by the Reorganization. From the opening to the close not a jar occurred. The whole of the routine work was closely watched and at the close none had been hurried, overlooked, or ignored.

The ministry to whom missions were appointed were satisfied with their fields, with possibly an exception or two; but these acquiesced in good humor after the moment of surprise was past.

There were much more urgent calls for ministers than any year previous, and the brethren made strong efforts to secure such as would be effectual laborers. In every direction to which the laborers could be sent the request and demand were, "Send us a live, active worker." It would have been pleasing to all at the conference if this could have been complied with, but, though the fields are wide and white, the laborers are comparatively few.

The preaching during the session may not have been very much better than on former occasions; but it was noticeable that a marked improvement in manner and expression had been made by some. There was less of repetition of subject matter and less of the use of objectionable expressions, showing that the suggestions and criticisms hitherto made have been noticed by the ministry, and, taken in good part, has been productive of good results.

We were privileged to attend but one testimony service, and that was very good.

The attendance of those not members of the church was not large, the weather, which was cold and stormy at the first, and the bad condition of the roads prevented many from coming. The attention was excellent.

The attendance of the ministry and delegates was not full; especially from the West; but as a representative body the conference was notable. An excellent spirit marked the session from start to finish. President Blair was so disabled by a cold contracted on the road from St. Louis—a warm climate to a raging snow and sleet storm incident to Northern Ohio—so affected his throat after protracted efforts at St. Louis, Belleville, and elsewhere, that he could take but little part in the deliberations except as a spectator, except the one sermon delivered by him. He was attacked on Monday, the 13th, at noon, by "la grippe" as is supposed, and could not be present during the last two sessions, those of the 13th and 14th. He was, however, much better on the 15th.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

SATURDAY, April 11, Continued.—A request from the Wheeling, West Virginia, branch for the ordination of Bro. F. J. Ebeling, was also approved, inasmuch as the district conference would not convene until the fall season. Being authorized to provide for the ordinations approved, President Smith appointed Brn. A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert to officiate. After singing and prayer the ordinations were attended to, in which the Holy Spirit was present in confirming peace and power.

The President was asked a question, as follows:—

A brother who runs in debt to brethren and others, making no efforts to pay or settle said debts—branch officers knowing of and acquainted with such conditions—although no charges in fact having been filed against said brother, would it be right to recommend such brother to other branches as a member in good standing?

The President's answer:—

Decidedly, No!

Provision was made for a collection to be taken up during one of the Sunday services to cover current expenses of conference, any remaining amount to be used in repairs on the Temple, now needing some. Adjourned; benediction by Bro. Blair.

Preaching at 7:30 by Bro. I. M. Smith, Bro. Alfred White assisting.

Sunday, the 12th, dawned fairly clear and quite warm, the temperature being in marked contrast with that that had formerly prevailed. Spring might now be announced in Kirtland, and the natural attractiveness of the country became more pronounced. The usual morning prayer service was held, in charge of Brn. J. C. Crabb and I. P. Baggerly. Bro. J. R. Lambert preached at eleven o'clock, Bro. J. W. Gillen assisting him. Pres. Joseph Smith preached in the afternoon, being assisted by Bro. Columbus Scott. A choir composed of Welsh sisters and brethren rendered some good vocal music which was enjoyed by all who heard it. At four o'clock a Sunday school session was held in the upper auditorium. At its close delegates, visitors, and the inhabitants in general assembled on "the flats" at the bank of the Chagrin River to witness the baptism of some young people, Bro. M. H. Bond administering in the rite. Many of the Saints were baptized in the same river in early days, by the Martyr and his colaborers. Its ever-flowing water and the baptism of many in it at the present time indicate that the Reorganization has indeed entered into the labors of the men who wrought to establish the work in the beginning of this dispensation, and that it is succeeding under God in perpetuating that work and extending it as a power for good in the world.

The services of the day closed with a sermon in the evening by Bro. R. C. Evans, who was assisted by Bro. O. B. Thomas.

Monday, the 13th.—The weather continued warm. Many visitors and some delegates and ex officios had departed; but members of the general ministry remained, with few exceptions. Prayer service at nine o'clock was conducted by Brn. F. G. Pitt and David Chambers. We were told that Bro. Chambers expressed himself as constrained to warn the Saints against pride. It seems evident that human nature has need to heed this admonition so often given the people of God. All the teachings of the gospel are designed to develop strong characters in men and women; necessarily so as the work is of God and in opposition to all that is vain, frivolous, and unsubstantial. We may perhaps be pardoned in suggesting that pride in dress and general outward adornment is not the only phase of pride discouraged or warned against by the word of God; for there is a tendency to pride in other things than dress, that all members of the great family of man need to bar out and keep a safe distance from. For instance, the pride of ambition to excel for personal reasons, by which one's ambition to attract attention or wield influence for personal ends, etc., may well be guarded against. A really honest and intelligent man or woman will not want to be estimated or appear for more than he is worth, if he loves the cause; and individuals in any station in life who love the welfare of their fellows will graciously acknowledge ability to do work better than they can do it and recognize and freely support the appointments by which anyone is authorized to act in any respect, religious or general, for the benefit of humanity.

The morning sermon was by Bro. J. D. Erwin, Bro. J. W. Waldsmith assisting.

At the resumption of business in the afternoon the attendance was noticeably diminished. Those remaining were not disposed to "rush through" important business, however. There was a manifest disposition to stay long enough to give the Lord's business such thought and consideration as its character and general importance required and deserved. Work hastily done is often poorly done, at least imperfectly; and the transaction of spiritual business is evidently no exception to the rule.

Bro. David Chambers offered prayer. The President declared the committee on credentials discharged, its work being completed.

The Presidents of Seventy reported further, recommending that Brn. W. W. Blanchard, S. D. Condit, and H. J. Davison of the Elders be ordained to the office of seventy. The conference so ordered and provision for the ordinations was made.

The Second Quorum of Seventy reported 397 baptisms by thirty-two of its members. All its members were active save one. A statement that Bro. Columbus Scott had been selected as its presiding officer, together with other matters of interest to both quorums of Seventy, was referred to the first Quorum of Seventy for consideration and report.

The Quorum of High Priests reported: Total membership 51; number reporting 42; sermons preached 1,971; baptisms 198. They were laboring diligently to "feed the flock of God." They presented the names of Brn. James Moler, S. J. Jeffers, W. H. Garrett, E. F. Shupe, J. B. Price, Arthur Leverton, G. E. Harrington, F. M. Weld, G. H. Godby, and Nelson Van Fleet, presented to and approved by them, for ordination to the office of high priest. The names were approved and the ordination of the brethren named indorsed and ordered provided for by the conference.

The First Presidency reported the following appointments of the Quorum of Twelve:—

1. A. H. Smith; Iowa (exclusive of Decatur district), Eastern Nebraska, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Northern Illinois, and Wisconsin.
2. James Caffall; European mission, in charge.
3. J. H. Lake; the Canadas.
4. Joseph Luff; Pacific Slope mission.

10. J. R. Lambert; Missouri (Decatur district excluded), Kansas, and Southern Illinois.

11. We recommend that the quorum, by agreement as to fields and time of holding, appoint special conferences, visiting them two by two, in those places where it may be deemed such conferences may be productive of good results; at such conferences ascertaining the needs of the work in those places and instituting measures to more effectually organize and set at work the local ministry.

The report was followed by a resolution from the Quorum of Twelve, as follows:—

Resolved that we approve of the Presidency's appointments of Brn. A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert, except that part which relates to the exclusion of Decatur district from their fields.

Consideration was deferred until the joint council of the Presidency and Twelve was concluded, and the appointments announced.

The Fifth Quorum of Elders reported. See full report in minutes. It asked for the ordination of Bro. Frank Criley as president and Brn. T. J. Bell and J. A. Gunsolley as counselors. The ordinations were approved.

President Smith then addressed the ministry on matters connected with their public ministrations. We hope to publish this address in full in the HERALD at a later time.

Three were baptized by Bro. E. L. Kelley early in the evening.

Bro. G. W. Robley preached at half past seven o'clock. He was assisted by Bro. E. A. Stedman.

Tuesday, the 14th.—Prayer service at nine o'clock in charge of Brn. R. May and J. M. Terry; preaching at eleven by Bro. W. J. Smith, Bro. J. C. Foss assisting.

At two o'clock prayer was offered by Bro. M. T. Short, and the minutes were read.

The First Quorum of Seventy reported its action on the matter referred to it: A resolution to acquiesce in the request of the Second Quorum for the release of Bro. C. Scott to become a member of the Second Quorum as its president was rejected; a motion to temporarily release the brother named from membership in the First Quorum had been adopted.

Following this report the request of the Second Quorum was granted.

A resolution was adopted providing that the First Presidency and Bishopric be appointed to look after the interests of the church in the Temple Lot.

The following resolution from the Quorum of Twelve was read:—

Resolved that we ask the General Conference to decide upon the advisability of continuing Decatur district under the direction of the Presidency without the appointment of one of the missionary force to the charge thereof.

The report of the joint council was then read:—

17. G. H. Godby; Northeast Kentucky and West Virginia.
18. F. M. Weld; Nauvoo district.

This was discussed and the following substitute was moved and prevailed:—

Resolved, that in the opinion of this body it will be advisable to place Decatur district under the charge of the missionaries who are in charge of the territory in which said district is found.

The chair instructed the Secretary to strike from the appointments of Brn. A. H. Smith and J. R. Lambert those portions that referred to the exclusion of Decatur district.

The name of W. R. Smith should appear in and is added to the list of appointments—to Kentucky and Tennessee; overlooked but reported since conference; also that of F. J. Ebeling.

Bro. T. J. Sheldon was presented by Bro. F. G. Pitt for appointment. The matter was referred to the missionary in charge of Northern Illinois and the Bishopric.

The appointments of the Twelve were then adopted.

The following interesting statement was made to the body by Mr. George H. Gordon, correspondent of the Cleveland, Ohio, Plain Dealer, present:—

*To President Smith and the Delegates to the Latter Day Saints' Conference; Dear Sirs and Brothers:—*As your conference draws to a close and you depart to your many fields of work very soon, I want to at this time thank you for the uniform courtesy and kindness extended to me during my work in Kirtland.

I will ever regard the week just past as one of the brightest in my life. I am not converted to your faith but I part from you, feeling that my life will be better because of the week's association with noble men and women, who are doing an unquestionably good work in uplifting humanity.

I have a vastly different opinion of the Latter Day Saints than when I first came among you. Where you then had, because of my ignorance, an indifferent enemy, you now have a warm friend.

It may be sometime that I can be able to remove from the minds of others many of the false ideas they have of your society. I have in my reportorial capacity been closely associated with the many denominations, and I want to volunteer the testimony that in my judgment you are the nearest to the Carpenter of Nazareth that I have seen.

I have endeavored to make a fair and accurate report of your proceedings, and if I have offended anyone I assure him it was purely an accident, and contained naught of malice.

Wishing you a large measure of success in your work of love and sacrifice,

I remain, yours truly,

GEORGE H. GORDON,

Plain Dealer Correspondent.

It was moved and adopted that a vote of thanks be extended to Mr. Gordon for his good will and report of conference, and that a statement of it be presented in writing.

The brethren present who were to be ordained were referred to the Quorum of the Twelve with a request to appoint a time and ordain said brethren. Brn. T. J. Bell and J. A. Gunsolley were referred to the missionary in charge of Iowa for ordination. The ordination of Brn. G. E. Harrington, Nelson Van Fleet, and J. B. Price to the office of high priest was referred to Bro. Joseph Luff; that of Bro. E. F.

Shupe to Bro. J. W. Gillen; that of Arthur Leverton to Bro. J. H. Lake.

The First Presidency, the Twelve, the Seventy, the High Priests, Bishopric, High Council, Elders, Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, Recorder, Secretary, Librarian, and Board of Publication were sustained.

Thanks were voted to the Kirtland committee, and Saints, and citizens for kindness, entertainment, etc.; also to the Plain Dealer Publishing Company for its good report of the conference; also to choristers and organists for their services.

The Trustees and Directors of Graceland College were sustained.

The session then adjourned until 7:30 p. m., and the benediction was pronounced by President Smith.

In the evening Bro. W. W. Blanchard was ordained to the office of seventy by Brn. Griffiths and Luff; Bro. W. H. Garrett as a high priest by Brn. Briggs and Gillen; Bro. F. M. Weld a high priest by Brn. C. E. Butterworth, A. H. Smith, and David Chambers; Bro. G. H. Godby as a high priest by Brn. J. R. Lambert and J. H. Lake; Bro. James Moler as a high priest by Brn. A. H. Smith, C. E. Butterworth, and David Chambers; Bro. Frank Criley as President of Fifth Quorum of Elders by Brn. Joseph Luff and G. T. Griffiths. Bro. S. J. Jeffers had previously been ordained a high priest by members of the Twelve—on the 13th.

At 7:30 p. m. President Joseph Smith preached, assisted by Bro. T. W. Chatburn. At the conclusion of the sermon the minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved.

The Twelve reported an additional appointment—Bro. F. J. Ebeling to the Pittsburg and Kirtland and West Virginia districts, which was confirmed.

Thanks were tendered to the ushers and assistants. The General Sunday School Association was sustained.

The conference then duly adjourned to meet at Lamoni, Iowa, April 6, 1897.

Hymn No. 198 of the Hymnal was sung and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. T. W. Chatburn.

NEWS from Utah indicate that the friction between the Jew and Gentile has not been altogether overcome by the granting of statehood.

The following from the daily press of date April 14 is significant, if true:—

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 13. — E. B. Critchlow, a Gentile member of the legislature, in a half column article in the Tribune, attacks the alleged methods of the Mormon Church officials on political matters. He makes the statement that not a single bill passed by the last legislature was signed by the governor until it had first been submitted to the church officials.

Governor Wells has been interviewed on the subject, and says the statement is unqualifiedly false.

THE RELIGIOUS SITUATION IN NEW ENGLAND.

IT has been significantly noted by thoughtful persons that the old-fashioned revival has practically passed away in New England, and the inquiry is active as to what has taken its place. In former years two forces have been mainly instrumental in leading people to a definite religious purpose. One has been Christian nature and education, and the other has been the influence of a religion of fear and punishment. It is now over twenty years since the latter method of arousing religious interest has disappeared. It has been fought all along the lines, and it will be hard to find ministers in New England of education and intelligence who pursue the old methods. Its decadence has led to the other extreme and the preaching of to-day consists chiefly of the exhortation, "Be good, and if you can't be good, be as good as you can." The clergy formerly hurled the thunderbolts of the Almighty at incorrigible sinners with a power which everybody felt, but to-day such teaching would be of no avail, working against those who taught it. It was formerly a powerful incentive to virtue to teach that a man will be doomed eternally for a condition of things from which he could not escape. That condition has passed away with the old doctrine of punishment, and the modified Calvinism of to day has not depended upon it for its power. A generation has grown up since the dogma of eternal punishment was enforced that knows nothing of its horrors and of its influence in distorting religious truth, and we now hear nothing of the results of the setting forth of the doom of the wicked upon mankind. The pulpit would not be honored that set forth the old teaching. The last point in the overthrow was reached when the American Board of Missions ceased to insist that the doctrine of eternal punishment should be enforced in foreign missions.

We are in a new dispensation to-day, where the Universalist, the Unitarian, the Baptist, the Congregationalist, the Churchman, and the Roman Catholic, when they do not insist upon their differences of creed, all present very nearly the same moral teaching, enforced by the same sanction. The positive truths of Christianity are taught with great force, and the old doctrines of sin and repentance have been comparatively ignored. Truth and duty are insisted upon with greater vigor than ever, and the whole tendency of things has been to uplift character and give it a higher sanction. Without openly acknowledging that Christian instruction is one of the chief means of turning others to righteousness, the preaching of to-day is more largely ethical and reformatory than it is punitive and condemnatory. Under these influences, the motive cause that led to revivals of religion has been lost. The old machinery has gone out of use, and the whole attitude of Christian thought is different from what it was twenty-five years ago. It occupies a higher plane and works more constructively. "The Religion of Hope" is the title of a volume of sermons by one of our best-known divines, and it is characterized by a strong presentation of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, but no clergyman and no communion has yet presented a system of religious truth which occupies a medium and constructive position between a religion of fear and a religion of hope. The impression widely prevails that the reaction from the teaching of eternal punishment has gone too far, and that something has been left out of the full Christian belief, while the religion of hope has also been carried to too great lengths in the other direction. Most teachers in all the communions are quietly revising their positions, studying the problem of evolution, working out for themselves a new way of studying the Bible, and holding themselves in reserve for a better expression of truth than they have reached.

During this transition period, when no one has been in a position to speak with authority, and all men have tried to escape and forget the gloomy theology of New England, it is notable that the present generation, brought up, not under the influence of fear, but of love, has not run away from the churches, but has been moved by kindly influences to a higher life. The attendance upon religious worship has not decreased; works of charity have not been neglected, and the humane influences in society have obtained wider and wider recognition. The whole Christian church has broadened its sphere of work, and has undertaken to regenerate society as well as the individual. It is not a small thing to have reached a development of this type, and whatever difference may exist, Christian people think and act more on common lines than they used to. The conviction is strong that we are growing into a better expression of Christian truth than has been taught since the Reformation, and that the time is near when evolution, ethics, the new criticism, and the scientific method will find expression in a working creed that will again use some of the compulsions of the old theology in a broader and more consistent order of Christian teaching than has heretofore prevailed. No one man is likely to formulate such a system, but in a thousand channels thoughtful and practical minds are working at this problem, and nothing shows more clearly their determination and strength of purpose than the earnestness with which they are trying to reach a better solution. The religious change which the community is passing through is less apparent than real, but the working together of so many minds upon the same problem is one of most significant facts of our own time.

The foregoing, an editorial from the Boston Herald of March 16, will be read and closely analyzed by careful readers among the ministry and laity. It is a terse general statement of the changed religious conditions that have come to New England, the home of Puritanism and theological learning; the seat of piety and divinity schools.

The paper furnishes much food for reflection and comment, more of the latter than our present limited space permits. It is largely suggestive and will repay thought. Such statements and admissions as it contains are valuable as showing how clearly the inspiration of the latter-day work revealed the general religious situation as early as 1827-30 and on, and predicted the downfall of creeds—"the precepts of men."

The wisdom and prescience of God in the latter-day work shines out preëminent above the wrecks of human wisdom, the "wisdom" of the "wise men" which was to "perish." (Isaiah 29.) The kingdom of God established in this dispensation of the fullness of times proclaims its message of "hope" based upon a foundation authoritative, sure, steadfast, eternal; with the inspiration, truth, the seal and life-power of its divinity granted unto every one who will hearken to the teachings of that gospel delivered unto man "in the beginning." God has given and continues to give abundant assurance to those who obey from the heart that form of doctrine delivered unto the apostles and restored in these last days by the angel's message. It is well indeed for humanity that God has called forth and established his church, thus anticipating and providing for the necessities of the present age.

Let the "higher critics" and "advanced theologians" work out and present a "modern" and "ethical" and "scientific" creed, if they will. With due credit to whatever of liberality and good they may possess and indicate (and which they imbibe from the advancing spirit of the present age—that by which the Almighty is preparing the world for the message and work of the gospel), it will be apparent always that they cannot do the work that requires authority and inspiration from God to do, and in the doing of which they need his constant direction and supervision—"power from on high."

The Father of the spirits of all flesh has met the issue and has lifted up "the standard," "the ensign" for the nations. The creeds of men past and present have been found wanting. The theologies that men are now formulating or may yet formulate will meet the same fate. The word and ways of the Lord are "true" and "righteous altogether." The gospel—the law of the Lord—is perfect, and searching, analytical criticism and opposition in all its forms have but served to demonstrate the perfectness of its principles.

MAMMON.

Ques.—Is "mammonism" taught in the Bible? If not why does the Lord say unto his disciples in Luke 16: 9, "And I say unto you, make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations"?

The so-called churches of Christ to-day have fallen into the worldly way of putting position before principle, riches before righteousness, conforming to a political sentiment. Those churches like all the rest of the world have dropped into the procession and are following the crowd toward the altar of mammon and away from God; they cannot serve both; but this text seems to justify them. In the 8th verse the Lord commended the unjust steward, because he had given a portion of the Lord's goods away; and seems to give his disciples to understand that this is the best thing to do.

Again in verse 13 it is stated that no servant can serve two masters, and why? Please explain and harmonize.

Ans.—To the average reader and thinker the main difficulty in understanding this passage is that he mistakes the intention of the Savior's teaching. His intention was not to teach them to act dishonestly or to defraud others. The steward was in absolute control of his lord's affairs, and while in the steward's office could rightfully exercise his discretion in favoring the poor debtors as he did. His action in the premises was taken with the design in view that when he was put out of the stewardship those whom he had thus befriended should receive him with favor in return. The steward's lord, when he heard of what that servant of his had done, commended him for his wisdom and sagacity. This commendation is usually taken as coming from the Savior, which is a clear mistake; it was the lord of the steward himself who thus commended him. And this commendation was in accordance with the wisdom of "the children of this world in their generation;" that is in the affairs of their time and nation. The Savior was taking opportunity from this parable to teach his disciples the true principle of life regarding the use of the mammon of unrighteousness, or the unrighteous mammon, the perishable things of this world. The common mistake is to think that the Savior in this saying taught that a man was to so deal that the mammon of unrighteousness would receive him into favor and fortune. This was farthest from his intention. The friends referred to which men were to make unto themselves were such friends as would be able to receive them into everlasting habitations. The debtors of the steward's lord were in a condition to help the steward if he failed to make proper defense to the accusation made against him of having wasted his lord's goods, when the inquiry should be made, and he should be deposed from the stewardship. It does not appear that the steward was so deposed, but that the lord on inquiry commended him for his action. These friends of the steward could not receive him into "everlasting habitations," but only into "their houses." The friends whom the Savior's teaching enjoins to make shall be able to receive them into "everlasting habitations." There are but two that we know of who can do this, the Father and the Son. The injunction then would be, "Make to yourselves friends of [by the use of, or with] the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when ye fail on earth, the Father and the Son may receive you into everlasting habitations." With this understanding the whole parable is made plain; and there is no conflict with the closing sentence of verse 13, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

How may a man make friends with, by, or of the things of this world?

The following will help to illustrate:—

Wherefore, O King, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquility.—Dan. 4: 27.

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.—Matt. 6: 19-21.

Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.—Matt. 19: 21.

But rather give alms of such things as ye have; and, behold, all things are clean unto you.—Luke 11: 41.

The men of the period in which this teaching of Jesus was given were as wise in the conduct of their worldly affairs, as the men of this time, and the fact is made use of by him to show what the true riches were; and also to enforce the lesson of faithfulness and diligence in the pursuit of those things that lead to exaltation and the blessedness of heaven.

If a man's heart is with his treasure; then if his treasures are of an earthly nature his heart is there of an earthly nature as well; and if he has fixed on them his intention and his care and labor he will not have time, inclination, nor care to expend on the true riches; hence he is serving mammon, and his devotion is paid at that altar. But, if a man's heart is set to attain heavenly treasure, he will give attention to those ways and means by which his heavenly treasure is created, increased, and kept, and at the altars of peace and righteousness will he pay his devotions. This is the lesson the Savior teaches.

The things of this world are desirable and necessary to a certain extent. To this extent laudable effort may be made to attain unto their possession and use. According to this teaching of Jesus in the parable being considered the right use of the things of the mammon of righteousness is the thing taught. These things are to be so used that he who uses them may by such use be commended, not blamed. This is taught in the parable of the ten talents. The reward to the one and the condemnation of the other were based upon the same consideration. So also is the injunction, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you;" "for your heavenly Father knoweth that you have need of all these things." Matthew 6: 31-33, Luke 12: 29-31.

Construe the passage as it is evident Jesus intended it to be understood, and there is no conflict between one portion and another; but give to one part an arbitrary rendition like the one suggested by the question and neither we nor any other can either reconcile or explain it. To us it is plain as above stated. Hence we reply: No, the Bible does not teach mammonism as a thing to be observed and practiced.

THEOSOPHY.

It is hard to get at just what is meant by the term theosophy, with reference to the society bearing the name. But if it may be told in few words, the following from "Marian," in the Post, Washington, D. C., for January 19, sent us by Bro. W. W. Blair, from the Capital, may inform them:—

THEOSOPHY.—WHAT IS THE SOUL?

Soul is a generic term. There is the soul of the world, the soul of man, and the soul of things. Theosophy gives man a seven-fold constitution, with the result of less confusion in regard to the meaning of the term soul. First, the body; second, the astral body; third, vitality; fourth, animal soul; fifth, human soul; sixth, spiritual soul; and seventh, spirit. It must not be supposed from this division that man is composed of seven separate entities, but all the principles are differentiated aspects of the monad. All other divisions of man are vague in meaning, and really give him no true conception of the grand possibilities and powers that are within. The physical body, with its wonderful organs, has been brought more closely within the knowledge of man and needs no definition in this article. The astral body is the model on which the physical body is constructed; in it dwell the real organs of the outer senses; it is magnetic and electric in its essence, and is the same matter of which the world was composed previous to its present gross materiality. In it are the subjective perception and latent memory that explain so much of the mysterious in results of the hypnotizer's power; it is capable of reflecting thoughts, actions, and knowledge of the man after death or separation of the principles. It is considered "the balance principle," as the desires have two aspects—a higher and a lower, and to it adhere all the animal tendencies or desires after death. It is through desire that the will is moved, but back of desire is the most important of all—thought. The third principle, vitality or life energy, pervades all things, in its ocean the earth floats. The sixth and seventh principles, spirit and its vehicle, spiritual soul, constitute the true monad, one and the same with all monads. The object of life is to individualize and to impart through evolution divine qualities. At the beginning of manifestation the monad, which is inseparable from the universal consciousness, began its work of individualizing, by contact with the opposite pole of life, matter. It is present in all of the kingdoms commencing with the mineral, but individualized monads cannot be said to have existed until the self-conscious link between spirit and matter, the fifth principle, the mind, the thinker, was given to the man with sufficient brain capacity to appreciate to some degree the light of manas. It is the "I am I" consciousness. This mind essence was imparted by one of the classes of higher beings that constructed man as he is seen to-day. It is the heirloom, the ego that incarnates, the human soul; all hope of the future is centered in this principle. This mind principle has two aspects, the higher and the lower. Man on earth has two selves—one reigning on the physical plane, the other dwelling in spiritual abodes. The lower is the physical mind that grows or develops with the man; it is fettered by desire and animal tendencies, it then exists for that time as the animal soul, not feeling or knowing any light from its other or higher aspect. The real mind has not become active yet, only the lower self predominates in most people. In the next cycle the higher manas or mind will be fully developed, and man then will have to make his future knowingly. The two selves can be united now if man desires. How? Through thought. Thought is back of desire; desire moves the will; it then becomes perfectly possible to kill the animal man through the potency of thought. Man is what he thinks. Thought is creative; if man has dark and unkind thoughts, his creations will be realizations of them. Will increases in effect as we approach the Divine; the spiritual will overcomes the mental, and the intellectual will overpowers the animal will. The lower only realizes the higher mind when it is conscious of higher aspirations than those earth life could impart. All unselfishness, all purity of desire, all inclinations towards spirituality come from the higher self; when man has succeeded in uniting his lower self to his higher, immortality for him has been achieved. It is not easy to bring about this union, the door is only opened through brotherhood; there must be no separateness in man's consideration of his fellow man; each soul must be considered as being a part of the one soul. Each monad has to experience the cycles of race, of globe, planet, adding to its knowledge, ever pushing the boundary line of its perception to a greater distance until perfect consciousness is reached, and even then it will exist on planes that we cannot approach, even in imagination. Earth is the battleground, the soul the storehouse of the energies, and foolish man too often dissipates those energies on the physical plane, leaving nothing for the higher mind to carry on the journey to perfection. Even after man has succeeded in lifting the curtain a little and sees the way, the road is beset by counter allurements and difficulties hitherto unsuspected. All obstacles must be gone round, through, or over, and he must live in the present, neither fearing the future nor concerned about the past. Thought is the keynote for all future harmonies or discords; it is the attitude of the mind that influences karma, the law of cause and effect, that guides the reincarnation ego. Thought can imprison the aspirations and bind them with obstructions, or through it man can obtain release from all fetters and look with tranquility alike on the past and to the future, not being stirred with remorse for the one or desire to be rewarded in the other, for it is said in the "Voice of the Silence" that mind is like a mirror; it gathers dust while it reflects. It needs the gentle breeze of soul wisdom to brush away the dust of our illusions. Then man can become like the ocean which receives all streams and rivers. The ocean's mighty calm remains unmoved; it feels them not.

WOMEN AS DELEGATES.

THE Methodist Episcopal Church, of the United States, has been considering the question of permitting women to be chosen as delegates to the general conferences held by that church. A dispatch published in the Cleveland, Ohio, Plain Dealer, April 14, gives notice to the probable result:—

PITTSBURG, April 13.—The question of the admission of women delegates to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has been practically settled in their favor. A letter received to-day by Rev. C. W. Smith, D. D., editor of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, from Rev. D. S. Monroe, D. D., of Altoona, secretary of the general conference, stated that the constitutional amendment, which carries with it the fate of the proposed women delegates, had received more than the requisite three fourths vote of those present and voting in the annual conferences. Ten of the 120 annual conferences have not yet voted, but when they do, it cannot effect a change in the present state of the movement. The vote to date is 6,937 in favor of the amendment and 2,187 against it. This gives the required majority, with 375 votes to spare.

A WRITER in a late issue of a Rock Island paper, has this to say about Joseph Smith and the gospel:—

This remarkable man was none other than a prophet, seer, revelator and translator of the Most High, having been inspired to bring the church out of the wilderness, and organize it according to the original plan and pattern as shown forth by Jesus Christ. The Saints have ever and uniformly believed in a personal, physical, Almighty God; the divine Messiahship of our Savior, the fall of Adam, or original sin; individual accountability, and the atonement upon the cruel Cross. The unchangeable, and unchanged, the immutable and eternal principles of the doctrine, or gospel of Christ are as follows:—

1. An enlightened faith or genuine belief in the plan of life and salvation,

2. An honest, thorough, firm and pure repentance from dead works to serve the living God.

3. Baptismal regeneration, by immersion, for the remission of past sins.

4. The laying on of hands, of the eldership in confirmation for the Holy Spirit.

5. A literal resurrection of all mankind.

6. Eternal judgment, which is to be in proportion to the degree of good, or evil anyone shall have done.

The four first named cardinal principles of the doctrine are the invariable rules of adoption into the Kingdom of God's dear son. There are at least two resurrections in the future, but much time will intervene between the coming forth of the righteous and the rising of all the pale faced nations of the dead. Punishment is administered in mercy, and is of a temporary and reformatory character. Gifts, signs and spiritual blessings all as in olden time are had and enjoyed among the faithful whereas the ministry are called, qualified, sent and inspired of God to officiate in ordinances and preach the Gospel.

THE following from the Ottumwa Daily Courier, of March 25, is sent us by Bro. John Jervis, Keb, Iowa:—

VICTORY FOR THE MORMONS.

The joint resolution restoring to the Mormon church the property and money now in the hands of the receiver and formerly belonging to the church, to be used for the payment of the church debts and its charitable objects, was called up by Mr. Broderick (rep., Kansas) who asked to have substituted for the house measure the joint resolution which had passed the senate. The property involved is of the value of nearly $300,000.

After a brief statement by Mr. Allen (rep., Utah) that every step taken by the Mormons in the past six years manifested an honest intention to abolish the practice of polygamy and that everybody in Utah favored the return of the property, the senate joint resolution was passed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A. M. ALDRICH, Burlington, Wisconsin, April 11, writing of his mother, Mrs. H. K. Aldrich, says:—

It is probable that the older members of the church that know her would like to hear about Mother. She has been in feeble health for several years, especially winters. Her memory fails, as well as her strength, especially in regard to matters of recent occurrence. She has had several sinking spells this winter when we feared she had received her summons; but she rallied and is able to be around the house, sitting up most of the time and able to read a little. She was eighty-three years old December 27, 1895. Her brother, Uncle J. O. Montgomery, was eighty the 2d of this month and still is able to saw and split the family firewood. They are the eldest son and daughter of their parents, who had a large family, and have survived the rest of the family.

Sr. Zonie M. Stephenson, writing from Grand Rapids, Michigan, March 30:—

The Saints in this city are so happy that we feel like singing the Doxology. We have some more new relation, Bro. R. E. Grant having baptized nine yesterday, making nineteen in all since the first of January. Our new relatives consist of three brothers and six sisters, ranging all the way from young manhood and womanhood to the aged. Two of the young ladies baptized have been singing in our choir for some time, having previously sang in the Baptist church choir. The baptism took place at North Park, and as we stood on the bank of the little stream lined with a hundred or more people, some friends and some curious lookers-on, and saw our dear friends buried with Christ in baptism and arise to walk in a new life, we silently thanked God that he had been so mindful of us,—that when we were a mere handful struggling to keep the work alive, hoping and praying for such progress in the work as we were witnessing,—that he had taken cognizance of us and brought it to pass. The interest here is spreading wider and deeper every day, and the people are awakening to the fact that there is something wrong with their churches, that there is something for them to do. Some of the sectarian preachers are doing all they can to poison the minds of the people against the truth, acting on the Jesuitical idea that "The end justifies the means," anything to keep people from going to the meetings, but they are about to their strings' ends as the people are getting tired of their "skim-milk" doctrine and want more substantial diet.

Bro. A. Greek writes from Roseburg, Oregon, April 4:—

Should be glad if some of the elders could call on Mrs. R. J. Brown, Darkesville, West Virginia, as she wants to see them, and I also ask prayers that she may be healed and come into the kingdom.

Bro. W. H. Kephart, writing from Milo, Warren County, Iowa:—

I had the pleasure of baptizing Sister Turner on the 25th, and three more the 29th of March. This makes seven in this new point since February. Twenty-four others have given their names for baptism. Those coming in are among the very best people in this neighborhood.

BRO. G. T. GRIFFITHS requests us to state that no conference news was contained in the Cleveland Plain Dealer of the 9th inst. IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the cares and crosses
Crowded round our neighbor's way;
If we knew the little losses,
Sorely grievous day by day,
Would we then so often chide him
For the lack of thrift and gain—
Leaving on his heart a shadow,
Leaving on our heart a stain?

If we knew that clouds above us,
Held by gentle blessings there,
Would we turn away all trembling,
In our blind and weak despair?
Would we shrink from little shadows
Lying on the dewy grass,
While 'tis only birds of Eden,
Just in mercy flying past?

If we knew the silent story
Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would our womanhood dare doom them
Black to haunts of vice and shame?
Life has many a tangled crossing,
Joy has many a break of woe,
And the cheeks tear-washed are whitest,
This the blessed angels know.

Let us reach within our bosoms
For the key to other lives,
And with love to erring nature,
Cherish good that still survives;
So that when our disrobed spirits
Soar to realms of light again,
We may say, "Dear Father, judge us
As we judge our fellow men."

A CONVERSATION BETWEEN FATHERS.

"How can I secure perfect obedience from my child?" This question is daily agitated by thousands of well-meaning fathers and mothers. Various answers might be given to suit various cases, all of which would be more or less helpful, such as "Don't nag," "Don't demand too much," "Don't punish in anger," "Give the child a chance to exercise a right of choice," "Trust your boy," "Show your faith in his good intentions," "Sympathize with him in his weakness,—some of which he may have inherited from you, and which he sees in you," "Treat him as though his youth were not his fault, and don't let it debar him from obtaining simple justice."

But there is one answer which is above and beyond all these; in truth it lies back of them and includes them. The shortest and surest way to get obedience from your child is to think less about what you are going to get, and more about what you are going to give. Think less of yourself as his master than as his helper. God's truth is a unit, and the infallible rule against self-seeking applies in this as in every other sphere of life. It applies in God's own dealings with his creatures. His whole nature is outgoing. Humanly speaking, his first concern is for his children.

"But," replies the inquiring father, "I don't call that self-seeking. Paul says that children ought to obey their parents; and, as a parent, it is my duty to train my child to do what he ought to do."

Good father, you and Paul are right; but it makes a great difference whether, in your general desire to so train your child, the burden of your anxiety falls most upon your deserts as his father, or upon his deserts as your son.

Of course, the child must understand that it is under authority, and it must grow by doing for and serving you; but that is quite apart from your indulging yourself in the despotic delights of "my authority" as the finality of your parental thinking. The man who lies awake at night over the proposition, "How can I get obedience?" is not likely to think beyond that obedience when he gets it by fair means or by foul. He will rest satisfied in the ultimate achievement of his purpose to be obeyed. And if the demands that he makes upon his child for obedience are unreasonable, not to say immoral, he will still have reached the goal of securing obedience,—which was what he started out to do.

And what about the obedient child's character in the meantime?

"Oh!" answers the good father, "I wouldn't make unreasonable demands, and of course I purpose to be morally correct in my rulings."

Let the moral question pass. Are you sure you would not be unreasonable? Are you sure that you could not misunderstand your child sometime, that you could not be unfair to him, could not slight him, could not even be impolite to him? Are you sure you are fallible in everything except this one business of being your child's master and ruler?

"Oh! certainly I should make mistakes," replies the father; "wouldn't you yourself?"

Undoubtedly I might. But, other things being equal, when my child's due was my first thought I should be in far less danger of making mistakes than when that thought was for myself. Now let me tell you a good old secret: "Nature is commanded by obeying her." Child-nature is one of God's forms of nature. Study it,—it will take about all the brains and heart and time that you have to spare. In dealing with little children we obey God, so far, by obeying child-nature,—that is, complying with natural conditions. Work from that point of view, and you will be surprised to find how naturally your child obeys God by obeying you. Get by giving, but don't give for the purpose of getting. Obedience to you is the child's business. If you do your part faithfully toward the child, he will easily do his part toward his father. When he fails in his duty, as occasionally he will, it will not be too soon to look back of his failure for your own. Obedience can be obtained through fear, or the mechanism of so-called discipline. But obedience for love's sake is the easiest to obtain, and is worth most when you get it.—Sunday School Times.

CHILI—ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS.

STRIP away the flag and the epaulet, remove the drumbeat and the piteous glaze called glory, and you have bare, red-handed murder. It is nothing else, it is nothing more, and the day has gone by when the laws of God permit or the laws of man should condone the thing.

Into this pit of misery and blood are we going to suffer ourselves ourselves to be plunged by the delirium of a moment, by a misplaced sense of honor, by the restlessness of idle officers, or by the latent longing to see how the new cruisers work, or whether the new guns will explode, or perhaps by the notion to prove that we have a navy after all, or even by the mere impulse to box the ears of a little South American boy?

War! What is war? Who forgets? Not he who has carried dripping sword or smoking musket. Not he who starved at Andersonville or writhed at Gettysburg. Not she who has ever picked lint, or rolled bandages, or searched the lists of "killed—wounded—missing" at home. Not she who creeps away yet, on Sunday afternoons, to lay a flower upon the grave by whose gaping mouth she hung, heart-broken, a quarter of a century ago. Those of us who have "lived a war" remember.

Enter your protest, sick and failing, aging veterans. Lift your voices, women whose lifelong anguish has filled an abyss in which ten hundred Chilis could be sunken out of sight. Plead the case, ye 400,000 whose invisible presence should float like ghosts the breath of the Almighty between this country and another war!—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, In "Boston Herald," Jan. 20, 1892.

FALLBROOK, Cal., April 8.

Editors Herald:—The Herald for April 1 has made its appearance, and no April fool about it, either. What would we do without it? The spoken word is so seldom heard, it is like the proverbial angel's visits.

We try to hold the banner firm and let the signal light shine clear, yet none of those around us seem to know their danger, or that there is a way of perfect safety. With the family of Bro. F. C. Bell we meet as often as practicable—though five miles apart—to study the history of ancient Israel as outlined by the Gospel Quarterlies, and are blessed by so doing. We have had no preaching here since about May 1, 1894, then Elder W. P. Pickering visited us and was frozen out of two localities. Elder Harris has called on us once since but could not preach on account of rain. We note Bro. Gilbert's report in Ministry Reports wherein he says, "Very few calls for preaching in Southern California, and openings are hard to make." We wonder if he tried Fallbrook or any of the neighboring schoolhouses; we did not hear of it. Let us know next time, Bro. Gilbert. If you are still in this field and wish for an opening, let us hear from you.

To Bro. W. H. Kelley's article in this issue of Herald we say, Amen! Last but not least, we thank the Herald management for the cover article; let us know more of it. Give us history from authentic authors on the same subject. How emphatically it proves that the ancients knew the whole story of the creation and fall and the plan of redemption.

Our names are not on the tithing list, but do not blame us for spending the few spare dimes we have in putting the printed word where an elder seldom comes.

May the Holy Spirit guide and help us to be a faithful people until we gain the promised land.
H. B. ROOT.

ORTING, Wash., March 30.

Editors Herald:—Elder John Davis and the writer have held a series of meetings here with good attendance, and growing interest. Two noble sisters have been baptized, Srs. Taylor and Cole, who for some time previous to their baptism were friends and diligent advocates of the cause. It is hoped that in the near future several others will obey the gospel. Orting is a nice little town, with nice, hospitable inhabitants. Bro. Davis is well liked by the majority who have heard him.

The interest was visibly increased by the appearance of Elder D. W. Davis, of Roslyn, who is an able exhorter and private conversationalist. The writer will, according to grace, try to keep the camp fire blazing until greater forces appear upon the scene. We hope that Bro. J. Davis will again be appointed to this mission. The writer asks to be remembered by the true and the tried before the throne of grace.

Yours in the faith,

KINGSLEY, Michigan, April 11.

Editors Herald:—My testimony to every son and daughter of Adam is that I know that this gospel is of God. Some say, "How do you know this?" My first proof is that it agrees with the word; next the Spirit bears record of it, by God confirming the word with signs following, such as prophecy, tongues, and interpretation, gifts of healing, etc. God has done his part, but O how far I have come short! Some of my friends have said that Fred was all right but he was deceived; but I wish I were as perfect as the system I am connected with.

On April 5 I baptized a widowed lady, Mrs. Mary Williams, of Antioch, Lake County, Illinois. She wants the ministry to call and see her, and she will do all she can to get the gospel before the people. She desires to know if there are any Saints living near her. Bro. Robert Davis has been among us with his wise council. We appreciate it. Come again, Bro. Davis. When in Michigan please try and give Kingsley branch a call if you can, Bro. Briggs.

Your brother,

F. S. BRACKENBURY.

WHEAT AND TARES.

SOME time ago there appeared in the Ensign, an editorially written article [presumably], entitled, "Tares among the wheat," in which we have an excellent and forcible statement of causes that hinder church progress, and which through unruly, careless, unspiritual lives upon the part of those called to be Saints have not only hindered but have actually disgraced and degraded the church and gospel of Jesus Christ, by which they not only have hindered or destroyed themselves, but have kept officers busy, the church in an uproar, and have made the name of Saint a jest among onlookers.

Is there no remedy? Evidently and largely, if not wholly, (if the interpretation placed upon the above caption, in the article referred to, be correct,) No, not until "the end of the world;" and that may yet be a good while, comparatively speaking.

That there will be wise and foolish virgins; that there will be those who cannot be reached by a fair interpretation of the law of God; who live so close to the line occupied by those "that offend" that no church officer would be justified in bringing accusation, and which the clearer light of the judgment day, or of angelic discernment, a finer and more just discrimination, than we may at present possess could alone justify judgment in their cases; none will deny. But, is "Christ divided" against himself? We think not, that is, if we will allow him to interpret himself, instead of placing a construction upon his words which he very evidently never intended to be placed upon them. "The field is the world;" not the church, or the kingdom. "The good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one," the Devil's offspring, and not Saints, good, bad, or indifferent—at least as here referred to by our Savior; the harvest is not now, but "the end of the world."—(Matt. 13: 38-40.)

As if to forestall ambiguous, damaging, or contradictory explanation or interpretation, we have in Doctrine and Covenants, section 84, a "Thus saith the Lord" in explanation of this question, which it seems to me to be plain enough. It is here stated that "the tares choke the wheat," "the good seed," "the children of the kingdom," "and drive the church into the wilderness." The apostles, we are informed, "were the sowers of the seed," and "the apostate, the whore, even Babylon, that maketh all nations to drink of her cup, in whose hearts the enemy, even Satan, sitteth to reign; behold, he soweth the tares, wherefore the tares choke the wheat and drive the church into the wilderness."

The same war is now on, and sectarian Babylon is again, through its founder, and his servants, at her old work of tare-sowing, obstruction, and of destruction of the Church of Jesus Christ; and Behold, verily I say unto you, the angels [not the elders, officers, or teachers, whose duty it is to "see that my law is kept."—D. C. 41:1] are crying unto the Lord day and night, who are ready and waiting to be sent forth to reap down the fields [the world]; but the Lord saith unto them [the angels], Pluck not up the tares while the blade is yet tender . . . lest you destroy the wheat also; therefore let the wheat and the tares grow together until the harvest [the end of the world] is fully ripe; then ye shall first gather out the wheat from among the tares, and after the gathering of the wheat, behold, and lo, the tares are bound in bundles, and the field remaineth to be burned.

The "tares," the apostate Babylon, is, I think, being bound into "bundles" already, as here predicted, through oathbound covenants for protection against "man's inhumanity to man," etc., and, in my opinion, does not refer to the Saints at all.

The end of all things was not in the apostles' time, neither when this revelation was given. There was a work to do; there is a work yet to be done. Their faith was weak, and so I fear is ours, and we are not ready to receive the kingdom as yet; nor will we be, in my opinion, until the law of Christ is more fully honored among us as a people.

We agree with the editor of the Ensign that it is entirely possible and probable in some places and in some instances that some, in their zeal to execute the law as to the letter, and in their determination to be officially active, have sacrificed the spirit, and have crowded out of the fold those who slow of development, have been rich in elements of worth which the church could ill afford to spare.

But, we may remark, that it might be said of most anybody upon earth that was ever connected with this church, Brigham Young, John D. Lee, or even "the Devil" for that matter, that they were "rich in elements of worth," but the time came in their history when the world and the Church of Christ could and would have gotten along even a little sooner than they did without their company or association.

We do not believe in the doctrine of total depravity. A man or woman may stop a long way this side of that, and yet not possess the appreciation of a standard of character, "fit for the kingdom of God."

But the same writer in the article referred to goes on to say that The law makes specific provision for cases of transgression, and the law should be executed in the spirit of him who gave it.

Just so; but if the subsequent statement made by the writer in his conclusion; viz., "'Twas wise when Jesus said it, 'tis wise to-day, wait 'till the harvest," means anything, it simply places Jesus Christ against himself. By this construction and argument no distinction is made between a big "tare" and a little one. All, if any, are to be let alone to grow unrestricted and unhindered, until "the time of the harvest," "the end of the world."

I submit, that if the Lord is permitted to define this question the section in Doctrine and Covenants referred to has no allusion to the membership of the Church of Christ, and the Lord here says that this is an explanation of the parable referred to or as recorded by St. Matthew:—

"The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;" but it is made the duty of certain mortals now, to "purge ye out the iniquity that is among you." (D. C. 43: 3.) The Lord or his angels will find enough of hypocrites, evaders of the law — those whose spiritual status may be quite apparent, but whose life or action involves the church in no disgrace. Many people committing minor offenses, such as tobacco using, nonattendance, or decidedly irregular attendance at the place appointed for worship; people who could seldom or never be reached because of a lack of proper visiting officers—people who have been "let alone," who have successfully defied discipline—who show no interest in gospel work whatever; some who have even requested their names dropped from the church record, or perhaps may have joined some other church, but whose shepherds have hoped, Micawber like, "that something would turn up" to bring them around without labor or enforcement of law. The Lord, I say, will find enough of that work that the church couldn't, or wouldn't do, to "gather out of his kingdom" that "offend" when he comes; enough of "foolish virgins" to fill up the quota, and a few to spare from some quarters, I presume, without anything that savors of a "want" advertisement, in the columns of our church papers.

The nearest approach to plausibility for the writer's interpretation in the article referred to, is found in the second paragraph:—

Wheat and tares are the chief features in the parable; the former are said to be "the children of the kingdom; sown by the Son of Man; the latter, are explained to be, "the children of the wicked one," sown by the Devil. Both are in the "kingdom" which exists in the "field," which is the "world."

True, but that doesn't explain the parable, nor justify its use against discipline. For example, my wife asks me for the bottle of oil. I tell her that it is in the city of St. Louis, or in the State of Missouri, or in the world, which is true; but it is not an answer to her inquiry. I put water in a bottle, and set the bottle in a pail; but it would be an evasion or play upon words to say that the water is in the pail.

The kingdom is in the world, but the children of the kingdom are not in the world, which is the field out of which the tares referred to by our Savior are to be gathered at harvest time, which is the "end of the world." "I have chosen you out of the world," said Jesus, to his disciples. The Colossian saints were translated into the "kingdom of God's dear Son."

The Book of Covenants is so plain upon this matter that further discussion upon the question would seem unnecessary. It reads:—

And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, that great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood, she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the trees of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore, she is ready to be burned, etc.—D. C. 85: 26.

We are made by the law of Christ, our "brother's keeper," and are "saviors of men" to the extent of teaching and enforcing, within the limits of the law, the law itself. To the elders of the church in 1831, it was said concerning the church, "And inasmuch as they break not my laws, thou shalt bear their infirmities." (D. C. 42: 13.) But suppose they do "break my laws," persistently, defiantly? Let them keep on breaking, until they break up the church, cripple its advance—until discipline is laughed at, order ignored, and, in some cases, organization broken up? Let us see:—

Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called; behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, . . . and ye shall see that my law is kept. He that receiveth my law and doeth it, the same is my disciple, and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you; for it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom, should be given unto them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.—D. C. 41: 1, 2.

Jude the brother of James speaks of those in his day who "despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities." "These," said he, "are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear," etc. The ingenuity and cunning of the Devil in keeping good people out of the church is only equaled by the subtle tricks he is enabled to employ in getting and keeping the bad ones in. To obliterate the line of works that truly designate the relative positions occupied by the Church of Jesus Christ and the world has been the constant aim of the enemy. How much of faith or belief and how little of works is the safe ground for Latter Day Saints—officers, teachers, and members, to occupy?

Once more I insist upon being understood that there is a larger scope for belief and individual action within the church, in my opinion, and which I claim for myself and for every member in the church, than many perhaps would allow; that is, where the statement of belief, or faith, or rule of action is not clearly defined, or the ethical influence of which cannot, under the circumstances, be determined. I am only speaking of that theory or action that is universally acknowledged or plainly stated to be in contravention of wholesome law, discipline, and restraint, as defined by the plain wording of the law.

To bind a man in his every thought and action is to deprive him of a heritage God-given and make of him a simple automaton. But there is neither inconsistency nor tyranny in saying that a man shall be expected to fulfill a contract made of his own volition, to the extent of the privileges of fellowship when that fellowship is neither desired, nor appreciated, or is made a source of disgrace or damage to others.

We are all our "brother's keeper;" the gospel bond is a mutual one, and "we are all member of the body," and whether "one member suffer," all the members "suffer with it;" but when it becomes a matter of impossibility to arrest the decay that threatens the life and peace of the whole body, by longsuffering and patient labor; when the stench rises higher than our power to deodorize or disinfect, it is fair to presume that the time has come for the surgeon's knife. You are in but little danger of killing a dead thing, and the law determines the action that betrays life.

The man who continues long and persistently in sin loses his power of perception in regard to the scheme of salvation, and the ignis fatuus possesses him sometimes that his name on the church books may stand in place of virtue when the day of settlement comes. Church excommunication necessarily burns no bridges, nor makes a return unto the ways of salvation or the aid of church fellowship, an impossibility. In fact, in many cases it has proved the only possible means of waking up to a sense of real danger.

"The law," we are told, was made "for the lawless and disobedient." In fact, as a rule, too many of them know little or nothing about the law, and thus are often led to construe a God-fearing, earnest, and loving effort to honor the law by obedience through an attempt at enforcement as a personal attack prompted by motives and a spirit which are but simply a reflection of their own heart and mind.

The writer, at the present time, considers himself in fair standing in the church; at least he is unconscious of any breach of discipline, and quite sure of a measure of approbation of God. I consider myself better capable of determining my real need under the law than at some possible future time when I might fall into neglect of duty, into a violation of God's law, when I might become so careless as to desire to be "let alone" and undisturbed, making no disturbance even, until such time as a trial for my church membership stared me in the face. I will then begin to talk, with the help of a few friends, about the parable of the wheat and the tares. I will argue about "brotherly love," and quote a seventy-times-seventy-seven rule of forgiveness, though I have but little ears for the rule of repentance as laid down by the lawgiver. (D. and C. 58: 9.)

The golden rule, than which there is none better, or more effectual for government, human or divine, I purpose to assume for reference in my case in the future, an essential feature of that law which is said to be "perfect," and which in its enforcement must of necessity tend to perfect results; viz.:-

Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.—Matt. 7: 12.

When my conduct becomes a matter of jeopardy to my eternal salvation I insist that the law of restraint, if necessity occurs, be enforced in my case. It is not necessary to stipulate with any true saint or proper officer of this church that he shall not make the law a vehicle for personal spite, but the law administered with gentle, loving, but firm hand, I now make bid and advertisement for.

Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.—1 Tim. 5: 24.

I covet the first judgment; I want justice, mingled with that temper of love and mercy which the law permits and enjoins to settle my case now. I cannot expect more or less hereafter.

The kingdom of God upon earth. We say it is here; I believe it. The "saints shall judge the world." (1 Cor. 6: 2.) They ought to be in practice enough by this time to judge a cheap little rascal now, to say whether a man or woman is guilty or not, and not leave so much of it, or the whole business, for Jesus Christ and the angels to attend to. To enforce law, is to settle a good deal of gossip sometimes. Slander, trials at the bar of private opinion, may have wrought incalculable injury to the innocent and to the church. Let the law say who is reprehensible, not Mrs. Grundy.

We have men—elders, high priests, apostles—men, good and true, with judgment in their heads, and love of Christ and all humanity in their hearts; why should an honest man or woman be afraid of their judgment! God's ways and God's laws are "perfect," and all who earnestly desire perfection should be willing to submit to the only means ever devised for that end.

It may be my lack of discernment, judgment, or experience that possesses me and leads me to thus express myself; but God knows whether or not I have in my heart and conscience the love of him, the welfare of his church, and of the brethren; whether of hasty desire to be officious, or rather at the final day to receive from the lips of him who gave to us his law, "Well done," or not.

Some men's praise is blame. It has been said of a prominent public man of our day, "We love him for the enemies that he has made." We are liable to flatter ourselves, or think others clever, perhaps, when they refuse to antagonize a friend, or wound his sensitiveness, and refuse to oppose his method; when, as a matter of fact, a close analysis of the case will reveal a state of moral cowardice, more of a fear to incur something unpleasant or inconvenient to ourselves, than of real desire to benefit our neighbor.

If I have been made to sense anything in my church experience, it is to note the fact that it is too little rather than too much discipline that to-day, as well as in the past, hinders church progress; that honest, God-fearing endeavor to look after the erring and draw the line between the government of God and persistent, willful lawlessness has met with divine approval, spiritual awakening, and material and substantial results.

I do not believe either, that this good work should be hindered by giving the enemy aid and indorsement by a misapplication of the Scriptures, or wresting from them something that would destroy their original meaning; and the use made of the parable of the "tares and wheat" is a case in point. And that this text of scripture has been in the mouth of unruly members and of their supposed friends, perhaps more than any other quotation, many of the elders of this church well know.

I knew of a good brother, who went to law with another brother in the church, giving as an excuse, the parable and interpretation referred to; viz., that under this instruction from Christ, no matter what was done, excommunication was forbidden. The sad results in this case are, to those who knew the circumstances, the only comment necessary. Yet, if Jesus referred to the children of the kingdom, good or bad, as the "tares," he was right, excommunication for any cause, is wrong. A man may become a Saint and afterward an inmate of the penitentiary for life, and unrepentant; but the work of separation is to be deferred until "the harvest," "the end of the world," and the job turned over to Jesus Christ and the angels.

Elders' courts, and the weary, weary trial and task of getting at the facts, in order to form a just decision, could all be done away until the "time of the harvest." To preach, baptize, organize, and turn over our work to the Devil to run it, would relieve us of many burdens at present. But is it safe? Is it right? Is it the wish and will of God?

The great bulk of teaching, instruction, warning, and anathema in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants is directed toward the people who were called to be the people and the chosen of God; called to be, not only kingdom builders, but kingdom preservers. And the struggle of the ages has been to preserve that standard of order and conduct of citizenship in the kingdom of God whose setting up on earth cannot be celebrated until its laws have practical illustration in the lives of its citizens.

The twelve are a traveling, presiding high council, to officiate in the name of the Lord, under the direction of the presidency of the church, to build up the church," etc.—D. C. 104: 12.

If a church is "built" when a branch of six members are baptized and organized, who regulates? What saith the law? Apostles; either the Twelve or the Seventy; and especially is this the case where no high priests are or can be had under the provision made in the law. "Feed my sheep!" "Feed my lambs!" was apostolic business as well as proselyting among the Gentiles in the days of Christ.

I am a believer in the inspiration that gave the last communication to the church, though I may differ in the interpretation of this, as in some other revelations, from some of my brethren; and when churches are organized aright, set in order, according to the provisions made in the law, properly officered in large branches or cities especially, according to "the revelation which went before and in accordance with which it was written," and the parallel referred to in paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 of the revelation of 1894, the decisions of the joint council subsequently, (D. C. 49: 1, 2; and 43: 2, 3, especially upon these points as citations of law governing,) there will be a better representation of the mind and will of God than now obtains in many places.

It is the duty of the traveling high council to call upon the seventy when they need assistance, to fill the several calls for preaching and administering the gospel, instead of any others.—D. C. 104: 16.

To "administer the gospel" unto salvation, in some places is to do a great deal more than to baptize and lay on hands upon the Gentiles. For instance, the St. Louis district has been thirty or thirty-five years in building up the kingdom of God, eight branches have been organized, one yet remains quite a large branch numerically, three have a name to live, four have been disorganized, and thus we progress sometimes. Lax discipline, or no discipline at all, I count as one of the most potent factors in producing this result.

We need a thousand high priests like Alma of old "to administer the gospel," and make the "kingdom of God" to appear.

And again, verily I say unto you, that which is governed by law, is also preserved by law, and perfected and sanctified by the same. That which breaketh a law, and abideth not by law, but seeketh to become a law unto itself, and willetth to abide in sin, and altogether abideth in sin, cannot be sanctified by law, neither by mercy, justice, or judgment.—D. C. 85: 8.

The Lord here informs us that not even mercy can save those who persistently will to abide in sin; on the contrary, these indiscriminate applications of charity and mercy in the writer's experience have usually resulted in a contempt for the church, for its officers, and an authority that authorizes nothing, or compels nobody, by the very people they are supposed to benefit.

This writing, which has already exceeded by far the limit at first thought, is not intended as a reflection upon the work of any person or persons, specifically speaking. If any explanation is offered it is this: The whole church has been more or less culpable. We are all of us more apt to be possessed by the fear of man than the fear of God; and the very hardest part of our fleshly service is that every man shall learn his duty, and then act in his calling as provided for in the law. So far as local matters are concerned, no allusion is suggested or intended as regards those who have labored here in the past. There have been extraordinary complications to deal with. St. Louis is the place which Brigham Young designated, as "the Devil's kitchen;" and the odor of Brighamism, and of "his Majesty's" "fat frying," isn't wholly out of the atmosphere yet. A very big slice of the "apostasy" floated down from Nauvoo and landed at St. Louis, and it is the writer's opinion that it was not all loaded into the wagons that were fitted out at this place that went over the plains to the "salt land."

We have as good people here as there are to be found anywhere; faithful, zealous, and true. But the enemy has enlarged himself and has not been slow to avail himself of exceptional opportunities, and we shall do well to erect barriers for successful defense against further encroachments with the limited forces at our command, while trying, as we have opportunity, to warn the world.

St. Louis is said to be a commercially sound city, and noted for its hospitality; but there are more beer and beggars, more Sabbath desecration, Sunday amusements, and things to attract and draw the minds, especially of the young, away from wholesome, moral influences, to say nothing of away from religious culture, than any city I was ever in. Sunday excursions, theatrical or dramatic entertainments, dances, etc., for the benefit of some church with a very holy name, are the commonest of things in this great city. The cause of temperance seems to have few apostles or defenders. Decent people, temperance people, are obliged to patronize the rum shop, as ninety per cent of the grocers, market men, etc., have a beer saloon and gin shop connected with their sale of life's necessities.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners," and it would be but natural to expect that these influences should more or less affect Saints who neglect church duties and church privileges. "Come out of her my people!" should be the cry of those placed upon the towers as Zion's watchmen.

In hope and faith of the final triumph of right and righteousness,

M. H. BOND.

St. Louis, Missouri, February 18, 1896.

IS SALVATION FREE?

A CERTAIN poet sang:—

Salvation's free for you and me,
I'm glad salvation's free.

And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely.—Rev. 22: 17.

And, behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be.—Rev. 22: 12.

It is just possible to take a thing freely and yet pay for it. The gifts of life through the Son and faith are free gifts, but life and faith are not all there is in salvation. The Savior came and died for us that we might live, but exaltation in life is a matter left to our own choice; that is, the degree of exaltation that we may attain to is left with us, else every one would not be rewarded according to his works. I wish to show that there is a work to be done before we can have salvation, and that if it depends upon a work, then it is not free, but earned or wrought out.

He that believeth . . . shall be saved.—Mark 16: 16.

This is faith, the gift of God, which is free. We could not be saved without faith, could we? Here it seems to me that I can hear every believer in God's word say, No.

Without faith it is impossible to please him [God].—Heb. 11: 6.

If we did not please God, you see it would be impossible to be saved. Then we have faith as the first saving principle in the gospel of Christ.

Then Peter said unto them, Repent, . . . every one of you.—Acts 2: 38.

Then we must repent. Could we be saved without repenting? We see that the word of God tells us that we must have faith and repent of our sins, and it being the word of God I do not see how we can expect salvation in any other way. In order to secure the reward we find there is a work for us to do, and we have seen we must have faith and repent of our sins. If we do not do this work, we cannot expect the reward of the believing and repentant, so that the reward after all depends upon our doing the work. Then, do we earn our reward or not? How is that? If we cannot get salvation without this work why is salvation free?

This is not all the work we are required to do:—

He that . . . is baptized shall be saved.—Mark 16: 16.

Repent, and be baptized every one of you.—Acts 2: 38.

Here is baptism, also, that must be complied with before we can claim salvation. We have found three kinds of work which we must do to claim salvation; viz., faith, repentance, and tism. Now if we don't do these things, can we expect to be saved? That is, if we do not do our part, can we expect to be saved? If your employer pays you, you will do his work as he directs you to do it, otherwise he owes you nothing because you have earned him nothing.

The Lord's work is, believe, repent, and be baptized. Now, if you do not the work set before you, you can expect no reward.

And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.—Acts 1: 4, 5.

This Holy Ghost is the means of inspiration, and you see by the above that they were not to administer in the things of the Lord until they had received the means of inspiration which had been promised. The following is the promise:—

When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come.—John 16: 13.

Also John 16: 7 and 15: 26.

But if you want the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, the Lord has laid down a plan by which you are to receive that gift. Here then is another work to be done before you can get the reward. In primitive Christianity the manner in which this business was done was as follows:—

Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (for as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.—Acts 8: 14-17.

He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. . . . And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came upon them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.—Acts 19: 2-6.

Some think it is not absolutely necessary that we have this Holy Ghost in order to be saved, but if we would be inspired as these men were, it is absolutely necessary to have this same Holy Ghost; if we would speak in tongues and prophesy as they did, we must do so by the same agency which they did, this same Holy Ghost. And we must receive the Holy Spirit in the same way that they did; that is, by the laying on of hands. The Holy Ghost assists greatly in obtaining our salvation, because according to the following we can never know whether or not we are in a saved condition without it:—

When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: . . . and he will show you things to come.—John 16: 13.

So if you desire the inspiration by which the Scriptures were given, you must have the Holy Ghost, and there is just one way and no other known to the Scriptures, by which you can have it, and that is by laying on of hands. It is absolutely necessary for us to have the Holy Ghost in order to be saved, and it is absolutely necessary that our faith, repentance, and baptism be godly, because without godly sorrow there can be no repentance. Repentance to be godly means forsaking of sin, and if sin is not forsaken there is no repentance, and no faith. Paul has this to say:—

But without faith it is impossible to please him [God]: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Heb. 11:6.

If the faith is godly it is such a faith as depends upon God for everything. And if repentance is godly, it is that repentance which forsakes sin and evil, and so God's will will be done. This is the reason that godly faith, repentance, and baptism are saving ordinances.

If it is a repentance that God will recognize, it will cause the possessor to do the will of God, and thus it will work his salvation. We know this: if I have the inspiration of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands, I will be greatly strengthened in my ability to do God's will. I am better able to battle with sin, because I have the testimony of the Holy Ghost that I am a child of God. Do not all Christians know that to live a godly life is to be continually at war with sin? And yet we are told that salvation is free!

Salvation is like everything else, it must be wrought out, and the man who thinks he can get it without working it out will be greatly surprised to find, eventually, that salvation is as hard to secure as any other precious boon. Since there are different awards for different degrees of work, so there are different degrees of exaltation. (See 1 Cor. 15: 30-42.) By reading the passage referred to we learn that there are at least three degrees of glory; represented by the sun, moon, and stars. So that the degree of glory that we attain will depend upon the righteousness, faithfulness, and diligence that we put in the work that we do. Think of it, and if you find that this is so, then commence work if you have not already done so, and work out as great an exaltation as you can.

NATHAN LINDSEY.

BE FAITHFUL AND DILIGENT.

THIS query often comes to the writer's mind when taking a retrospective view of this latter-day work, When will Zion be redeemed? It is said that there is no surer way of judging the future than by the past. And if we so judge, what are we to expect? For when we look backward down the vista of the past we see many that were once enlightened by the gospel of the Savior, but have fallen away and are standing to-day in the byways of vice and sin. Many have become careless and unconcerned, many are flitting their lives away in the ballroom; many are letting precious time that will be theirs no more slip out of their grasp for ever; loitering at the gaming table; others have given over their lives to that curse of the world, intemperance. Saints, let us arise and shake off this lethargy that seems to be settling down upon us:—

"Let us shake off the coals from our garments,
And arise in the strength of the Lord."

We all have a work to do that none can do for us; the Master is coming by and by, and do not let him find that work undone. Do not let him find us in the ballroom or at the gaming table. Do not let him find us careless and unconcerned, or worse still, do not let him find us standing in a drunkard's shoes. Let us improve the opportunities that are ours, that we may hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

God placed man upon earth that he might fit and prepare himself for a better life in the beyond, and where we lay down life here we must take it up on the other shore; and those that have idled away the God-given opportunities here in life can never make it up in the endless expanse of eternity, for they are just that much behind those that availed themselves of the opportunities given; just that far behind those that have improved upon the golden opportunities of life, that have searched for knowledge wherever to be found, that have studied all good books, learning here a little, there a little; storing the mind with useful knowledge thereby improving upon the talent God has given. As sure as there is a God man must come to a knowledge of the mysteries of heavenly and earthly things, and if we wait until we cross the mystic river before we make an effort to look into the things pertaining to the here and hereafter we will find ourselves consigned to the foot of the class, so to speak, on our arrival there, and we may be assured that there we will remain.

The life in the beyond may be likened to a railroad train, the last car will travel just as fast as the head one but it will never overtake it on that run, it started the last one and must so remain. So with those that foolishly let the time allotted them here slip by unimproved, spent in idle amusements. The moments thus spent are lost to us forever. Think of it, Saints, the Master cannot love an idler as he does those that keep his commandments. He said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments," and to keep his laws means labor from the cradle to the grave. The race is not to the swift or strong, but to those who are faithful to the end.

God has given every human being a talent and expects that talent to be improved upon. To one he has given a love for music, to another that of books, some one thing, some another. And as sure as we live we will be held responsible as to the use of these gifts, for gifts they are. God will expect us to use them to his glory and not to our selfish amusements. Because some of us are young in life we must not think he will stay his coming that we may have sown our wild oats. It is written, "They have sown the wind and they shall reap the whirlwind." Neither will death stay his hand because we are not ready.

If we do not wish to be numbered with the foolish virgins, we must have our lamps trimmed and burning. This means to be ever ready to do the work assigned us by church, Sunday school, or any of the organizations in God's kingdom. We all have our place and work; then let us be up and doing, and not be found where we would not ask the Savior to meet with us.

READ WHAT BISHOP FOWLER SAYS.

"Going to General Conference is not such a task as it was in the days of Bishop Asbury. He went on horseback, riding by the week or month. If he had gone from Chicago, it would have been a very serious journey. But we, the heirs of his victories, get into a palace car at Chicago and roll over the Nickel Plate, direct line, and soon we are in Cleveland, more rested than when we started. Always sincerely,

"C. H. FOWLER,"

DIED.

STARRH.—In Anaconda, Montana, April 7, 1896, R. M. Starrh, aged 77 years. Funeral from the residence of his son, John M. Starrh, the afternoon of the 11th inst.

STEWART.—Mrs. Jane Stewart, wife of Bro. Thomas Stewart, at their residence, Kansas City, Kansas, March 8, 1896. She was born February 5, 1822, at Newport Pagnell, England; baptized by John Jaques in 1851 into the Brighamite Church in England; had not joined the Reorganized Church. She was a good woman and a faithful wife. Funeral services in the Saints' chapel, Armstrong, were conducted by Elder George Hicklin, assisted by Elder Edgar Harrington.

Interment in Oak Grove cemetery. Her husband mourns her departure.

COMSTOCK.—Bro. Daniel Comstock was born March 1, 1823, in Kentucky; died April 10, 1896, at his home near Riverton, Iowa. At about twenty-two years of age he was united in marriage to Miss Lucinda Case. Six children blessed their union. Three are still living; the others, with their mother, having passed on before. He united with the Later Day Saints Church, January 15, 1865, being baptized by Bro. John H. Lake in Lee County, Iowa. He was again united in marriage with Mrs. Mary Welch in 1867, she being the mother of three children by her union with Mr. Welch, who found a home with Bro. Comstock. His union with Mrs. Welch was blessed by one son. He therefore leaves his aged companion and seven children. He ever remained faithful to the first testimony he received and died in the hope of a part in the first resurrection. Funeral in the Utterback church five miles south of Riverton; sermon by Elder H. F. Durfey, from Hebrews 9:27 to a large assembly of relatives and friends who mourn their loss, but not as those who have no hope.

HOLMES.—Sr. Ella Jane Holmes was born in Pontotoc County, Mississippi, September 15, 1851; baptized by Elder John R. Cook, March 7, 1874, at Long Valley, California, where, with her husband, Elder John C. Holmes, and a large family of boys and girls, she remained till her death; which occurred April 2, 1896. Husband, six sons, two daughters, two sisters, and many relatives and friends mourn. Sister Ella bore her troubles apparently with superhuman courage and meekness and always bore a faithful testimony. Sermon by J. H. Lawn, assisted by J. E. Holt. Her body lies in Long Valley cemetery, with her four children, to await the summons of their Redeemer.

TORY.—At Deer Isle, Maine, March 30, 1896, Jacob D., son of Jacob and Lovina Tory, aged 2 years, and 6 months. A bright, beautiful child; was ill but a few days. A budding rose, severed from the family tree. "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord." Funeral sermon by J. J. Billings.

MIDGORDEN.—Burton Lyle, son of Bro. John and Sister Isabel Midgorden, was born June 13, 1895; blessed October 13, 1895, by Elders Henry A. Stebbins and J. B. Roush; died March 5, 1896. Funeral services conducted by Elder John B. Roush, assisted by Elder Thomas Hougas. Bro. and Sr. Midgorden have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in their bereavement.

GILLMAN.—Near Victor, Montana, Hattie Gillman. Deceased was born May 12, 1881, and died March 22, 1896. The funeral sermon was preached to a large concourse of people in the Methodist church in the town of Victor, Montana, near her home. Her death created a sadness seldom experienced. Cut off so young, and just as she was budding into lovely womanhood, her death cast a gloom and a sorrow over all. She was loved by all who knew her, and many mourned and wept bitter tears who knew her not. May the Lord give peace to those who mourn. The sermon was preached by R. J. Anthony, assisted by Reverend Blair, of the Presbyterian Church.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

ABOUT DISCONTENTED WOMEN.

WHICH is to blame, if either, for the spirit of discontent that has marred human life for six thousand years—man or woman? Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, writing for The North American Review, rather inclines to blame the woman. Every human being has a complaining side, she says, "but discontent is bound up in the heart of woman; it is her original sin." Mrs. Barr argues that if the first woman had been satisfied with her conditions, if she had not aspired to be "as gods," and hankered after unlawful knowledge, Satan would hardly have thought it worth his while to discuss her rights and wrongs with her; that, with or without reason, woman has been perpetually subject to discontent with her conditions, and, according to her nature, has been moved by its influence. Some women, she thinks, it has made peevish, some plaintive, some ambitious, some reckless, while a noble majority have found in its very control that serene composure and cheerfulness which is granted to those who conquer, rather than to those who inherit. Mrs. Barr believes that with all its variations of influence and activity there has never been a time in the world's history when female discontent has assumed so much and demanded so much as at the present day; "and," says she, "both the satisfied and the dissatisfied woman may well pause to consider whether the fierce fever of unrest which has possessed so large a number of the sex is not rather a delirium than a conviction—whether, indeed, they are not just as foolishly impatient to get out of their Eden as was the woman Eve six thousand years ago." Early in her argument Mrs. Barr says:—

"We may premise, in order to clear the way, that there is a noble discontent which has a great work to do in the world; a discontent which is the antidote to conceit and self-satisfaction, and which urges the worker of every kind continually to realize a higher ideal. Springing from Regret and Desire, between these two sighs, all horizons lift; and the very passion of its longing gives to those who feel this divine discontent the power to over-leap whatever separates them from their hope and their aspiration.

"Having acknowledged so much in favor of discontent, we may now consider some of the most objectionable forms in which it has attacked certain women of our own generation. In the van of these malcontents are the women dissatisfied with their home duties. One of the saddest domestic features of the day is the disrepute into which housekeeping has fallen; for that is a woman's first natural duty and answers to the needs of her best nature. It is by no means necessary that she should be a Cinderella among the ashes, or Nausicaa washing linen, or a Penelope forever at her needle, but all women of intelligence now understand that good cooking is a liberal science, and that there is a most intimate connection between food and virtue, and food and health, and food and thought. Indeed, many things are called crimes that are not as bad as the savagery of an Irish cook or the messes of a fourth-rate confectioner.

"It must be noted that this revolt of certain woman against housekeeping is not a revolt against their husbands; it is simply a revolt against their duties. They consider housework hard and monotonous and inferior, and confess with a cynical frankness that they prefer to engross paper, or dabble in art, or embroider pillowshams, or sell goods, or in some way make money to pay servants who will cook their husband's dinner and nurse their babies for them. And they believe that in this way they show themselves to have superior minds, and ask credit for a deed which ought to cover them with shame. For actions speak louder than words; and what does such action say? In first place, it asserts that any stranger—even a young uneducated peasant girl hired for a few dollars a month—is able to perform the duties of the house-mistress and the mother. In the second place, it substitutes a poor ambition for love, and hand service for heart service. In the third place, it is a visible abasement of the loftiest duties of womanhood to the capacity of the lowest paid service. A wife and mother cannot thus absolve her own soul; she simply disgraces and traduces her holiest work."

Mrs. Barr lays it down that housekeeping is no more hard and monotonous than men's work in the city. She suggests that the first lesson a business man has to learn is to do pleasantly what he does not like to do. As for housekeeping being degrading, she rules that out as the veriest nonsense, saying that it is only the weakest, silliest women who cannot lift their work to the level of their thoughts and so ennobled both. She continues:—

"There are other types of the discontented wife, with whom we are all too familiar: for instance, the wife who is stunned and miserable because she discovers that marriage is not a lasting picnic; who cannot realize that her husband must be different from the lover; and spends her days in impotent whining. She is always being neglected, and always taking offense; she has an insatiable craving for attentions, and needs continual assurances of affection, wasting her time and feelings in getting up pathetic scenes of accusations, which finally weary, and then alienate her husband. Her own fault! There is nothing a man hates more than a woman going sobbing and complaining about the house with red eyes; unless it be a woman with whom he must live in a perpetual fool's paradise of perfection.

"There are also discontented wives, who goad their husbands into extravagant expenditure, and urge them to projects from which they would naturally recoil. There are others, whose social ambitions slay their domestic ones, and who strain every nerve, in season and out of season, and lose all their self-respect, for a few crumbs of contemptuous patronage from some person of greater wealth than their own. Some wives fret if they have no children, others just as much if children come. In the first case, they are disappointed; in the second, inconvenienced, and in both, discontented. Some lead themselves and others wretched lives because they have not three times as many servants as are necessary; a still greater number because they cannot compass a life of constant amusement and excitement."

Mrs. Barr finds that married women are by no means the only complainers. She sees a great army of discontents who, having no men to care for them, are clamoring for their share of the world's work and wages. On the whole she thinks justice is on their side. We quote again:—

"The discontent of workingwomen is understandable, but it is a wide jump from the woman discontented about her work or wages to the woman discontented about her political position. Of all the shrill complainers that vex the ears of mortals there are none so foolish as the women who have discovered that the founders of our Republic left their work half-finished, and that the better half remains for them to do. While more practical and sensible women are trying to put their kitchens, nurseries, and drawing-rooms in order, and to clothe themselves rationally, this class of Discontents are dabbling in the gravest national and economic questions. Possessed by a restless discontent with their appointed sphere and its duties, and forcing themselves to the front in order to ventilate their theories and show the quality of their brains, they demand the right of suffrage as the symbol and guaranty of all other rights.

"This is their cardinal point, though it naturally follows that the right to elect contains the right to be elected. If this result be gained, even women whose minds are not taken up with the things of the state, but who are simply housewives and mothers, may easily predicate a few of such results as are particularly plain to the feminine intellect and observation. The first of these would be an entirely new set of agitators, who would use means quite foreign to male intelligence. For instance, every favorite priest and preacher would gain enormously in influence and power; for the ecclesiastical zeal which now expends itself in fairs and testimonials would then expend itself in the securing of votes in whatever direction they were instructed to secure them. It might even end in the introduction of the clerical element into our great political council chambers—the Bishops in the House of Lords would be a sufficient precedent—and a great many women would really believe that the charming rhetoric of the pulpit would infuse a higher tone in legislative assemblies.

"Again, most women would be in favor of helping any picturesque nationality, without regard to the Monroe doctrine, or the state of finances, or the needs of the market. Most women would think it a good action to sacrifice their party for a friend. Most women would change their politics, if they saw it to be their interest to do so, without a moment's hesitation. Most women would refuse the primary obligation on which all franchises rest—that is, to defend their country by force of arms, if necessary. And if a majority of women passed a law which the majority of men felt themselves justified in resisting by physical force, what would women do? Such a position in sequence of female suffrage is not beyond probability, and yet if it happened, not only one law, but all law would be in danger."

In closing her article, Mrs. Barr says that the one unanswerable excuse for woman's entrance into active public life of any kind is need, though in the beginning, she adds, this need sprang from discontented women preferring the work and duties of men to their own work and duties.—Literary Digest.

MANY RELIGIONS.

THE Czar of Russia belongs to the Greek Catholic Church; the Sultan of Turkey is a Mohammedan; the Emperor of Austria, the King of Italy, the Queen Regent of Spain, the King of Portugal, the King of Belgium and the president of the French Republic are Roman Catholics; the Emperor of Germany belongs to the Evangelical Protestant Church; the Queen of England is an Episcopalian; the King of Denmark and the King of Sweden are Lutherans; the royal family of the Netherlands belong to the Reformed Church; the Mikado of Japan is very liberal in his respect for both Shintoism and Buddhism; the Emperor of China is a follower of Confucius; the Shah of Persia is a Mohammedan; the Queen of Madagascar professes the Christian faith of the London Missionary Society; the President of the Mexican Republic is a liberal Roman Catholic, as are each of the Spanish-American republics and the President of Brazil; most of the lesser rulers in Africa and Asia are Mohammedans; the King of Siam is a Buddhist; the Presidents of the United States have all been Protestants.—New York Sun.

The Review of Reviews is almost indispensable to the general reader who wishes to keep abreast of the rapidly developing international questions of the day. In the April number there is a full and able editorial discussion of the complicated African situation, which is described as "the drama of 'Europe in Africa.'" The mixed interests and motives of England, Russia, Italy, and France in the Dark Continent are clearly set forth. Russia's general attitude toward the European powers is also discussed, and the editor comments briefly on America's relations with Spain, our interest in the Cuban revolution, and the present status of the Venezuelan boundary dispute. In addition to this editorial treatment (in the department entitled "The Progress of the World") the Review presents a remarkably complete survey of the Cuban situation by Murat Halstead, a summary of the best current thought in England on the subject of international arbitration, and a vivid account of the relief work now going on in Armenia. In short, the Review of Reviews records a month's activities in both hemispheres.

TO THE CHURCH.

IN the death of Pres. William Wallace Blair, the Reorganized Church suffers a great loss. He was so well known everywhere, from his long continued work in the ministry, his extensive reading and acquired knowledge of the church and its history, and intimate connection with the leading men of the church in his position of Counselor to the President, that when he was called from his sphere of labor and post of occupation, one was taken whom the church could ill afford to spare; judging from human understanding. It is, however, but just for the church to bow, as to a dispensation of the divine will, and say, "Thy will, O Lord, be done!"

A council was held at Lamoni, April 22, at which President Joseph Smith; Bishop E. L. Kelley; and President Alexander H. Smith, James W. Gillen, Joseph R. Lambert, Heman C. Smith, and Joseph Luff, of the Twelve, were present, at which council it was considered and determined that in the absence of divine direction, otherwise, and pending the necessity for the calling of a special council, or conference for more authoritative action, President Alexander H. Smith, should, by virtue of his office as President of the Twelve, act for and with the Presidency, as counselor; the work of the church to be carried on during the current conference year, as already provided by action of conference at the late April session.

This will notify the church that the great loss to the work sustained in losing the services of Pres. Blair is fully recognized, the gravity of the situation understood, and the need for a concert of understanding and action among the leading officers and the ministry, traveling and local, realized and provided for.

While we feel the deepest human sorrow because of this sudden and saddening visitation, and sympathize and condole with the family of President Blair, and the many who will experience bitter anguish from contemplation of their loss; we counsel the Saints everywhere, to calmness and patience; the ministry to carefulness, lest in the disappointment caused by the breaking of hopes, the failure of aspirations, and the dread engendered by doubts and fears, confidence should be shattered and faith hurt.

The Lord under whose guidance and direction Bro. W. W. Blair, with the rest of the ministry of the Reorganized Church, have so long wrought, will still care for the work; so that none need to falter, or hesitate to move right on in the work, closing up the vacancy in the ranks caused by the falling of the new recruit, or the veteran laborer; it is the Lord's work, and he will care for his servants.

The ministry are hereby enjoined to use the utmost diligence to push the publication of the gospel, fully yielding to the mandate of the Master, "Occupy till I come."

THE following is what an authority on newspapers circulations has to say of the HERALD:—

Among all the twenty-eight religious papers in Iowa but one has credit for a larger regular issue than is accorded to the Saints' Herald, a Latter Day Saints' weekly published at Lamoni, and the publishers of the American Newspaper Directory will guarantee the accuracy of the circulation rating accorded to this paper by a reward of one hundred dollars, payable to the first person who successfully assails it.—Printers' Ink, April 22, 1896.

PAPAL INFALLIBILITY.

BY CHANCELLOR YORKE.

It is only fair that every religious order be allowed to declare its own faith. In keeping with this idea, we give space to the following digest of the very intelligent statement of Chancellor Yorke, of the Catholic Church upon the subject of infallibility, in Metropolitan Hall, San Francisco, California, sent us as a clipping from the San Francisco Chronicle of a late date, by Sr. Regina Rohrer, of Colton, California. By the way, it is peculiarly and happily true that many of the sisters are as alive to and competent to judge of many of the subjects relating and incident to this great work as are the men folks and elders. They judge quickly of the import of what they see and read, and when to them it is relevant to the progress of the work, it is seized upon by them and sent to the HERALD for all. God bless the sisters, may their interest never grow less.

"My subject," continued Father Yorke, "is The 'Infallibility of the Pope.'" Like all dogmas of the Catholic Church, it has been misrepresented. Few non-Catholics have a correct idea of what it means. My object will be to explain its nature as clearly as I can, to state the arguments in its favor and to show how it agrees with that loyalty due to the republic revered as much by us as by any denomination in this land. I shall confine myself to an outline, the details of which can be found in Catholic books. You should not be content with second-hand information, though that is the only kind that finds favor with pseudo-scholarship over in Oakland. If you want to know the truth, ask it of the old church. We invite investigation and desire to let in the light. We want those outside of the church to treat her as they would a man in whose honor they have confidence when gossip has been busy with his name, not to listen to calumny, but to go to her and ask what she teaches.

"We priests do not parade our scholarship, but we claim to know our business. We believe, and we are not afraid to proclaim our belief, in the old church, which is not a light concealed under a bushel but the city of God set on a hill and which cannot be hid.

"Many of you may remember the outcry which went up when it was proposed to proclaim the dogma of Papal infallibility. Prophets of evil foretold all sorts of disaster, but the church has never been afraid to state the truth, and did not hesitate to perform her duty. It does not matter to her that rebellious children should shake the dust of her sanctuaries from their feet; it does not matter to her that whole nations should join the schism and heresy, or that kings and princes should smite her. Of course, as a good mother, she deplors the evil acts of her wayward children, but she has been set as a testimony of the truth, and must fulfill her divine mission. Greater than all nations, the church has been set to declare the truth of the living God. So whenever the need has arisen she has not feared to proclaim the truth.

"In the sixteenth century reformers went out of the Catholic Church and formed churches of their own, which have become divided into countless sects, each hating the other and only united in hating Rome. So long as the Protestant churches were maintained by the civil power they maintained themselves in a measure, but when the nineteenth century came and these bonds were relaxed or severed the inevitable result ensued. They first protested against the church, then against the Bible, then against Christ, and then against God. I do not mean that they all reached this result. I merely wish to speak of the system based on protest, which must end in protesting against everything. There is a direct road from the first protest against the church to the protest of the agnostics against God. There are intermediate stations, I know, but they serve only to prove that the road exists and that it is the same road.

"The Episcopalians protested against the Pope—that was the first milestone. The Presbyterians protested against the Pope and prelacy—that was the second milestone. The Congregationalists protested against the Pope, prelacy, and presbytery—that was the third milestone. The Baptists protested against the Pope, prelacy and presbytery and infant damnation—that was the fourth milestone. The Unitarians protested against all of these and Christ—that was the fifth milestone. Robert Ingersoll protests against all, and adds in God, and sits on the last milestone with his legs hanging over the abyss, and laughing the whole procession to scorn.

"The result of the Protestant Reformation has been a divided Christianity, founded on private interpretation of the Bible. Although all of the sects believe in this private judgment, the peculiar thing is that scarcely any of them carries it out in practice. Thus, a few years ago when an estimable lady, a member of Calvary Church, came to the conclusion from her reading of the Bible that she could not believe in infant damnation, she was tried for heresy and put out of the church.

"The result of all this has been the spread of indifference. Business men, as a mass, have reached the conclusion that all the sects are wrong and that none of them is right. Nowhere is this conclusion stronger than in our own country. Out of a population of 60,000,000 which should be divided into Protestants and Roman Catholics, there are only 20,000,000 church members, of whom half are Catholics. Of the 50,000,000, who by birth, education, and training should be Protestants, only 10,000,000 are such. The ordinary man thinks religion is good enough in the abstract, but has no sanction behind it. As a matter of fact, all over the United States and in the greater part of Europe the old idea of revelation is practically dead and is fading out of the hearts of men.

"It was to meet this widespread idea that religion was only a matter of speculation, and that there was no such thing as God speaking to man that the council of the Vatican was called twenty-five years ago. From his watchtower Peter looks out on all mankind, with the experience of 1900 years. He knows what is needful for the times. Therefore, when, in our generation, he saw the danger of indifference he lifted up his voice of warning. It was nothing to him that voices were lifted up against him. He was placed on the watchtower and he would perform his duty, though he should suffer the fate of forty of his predecessors.

"Between 700 and 800 bishops from all parts of the world responded to his call. They spoke with the wisdom of the Holy Ghost that God spoke to men that there was a revelation, and that that revelation was infallible."

Father Yorke then explained the difference between reason and faith. "Each of us," said he, "is imprisoned in his five senses. By the senses we know many things and by faith many other things. Some people say belief is not rational, yet how could we exist or perform most of the acts of life if we did not give credence to others. There are thousands of us who have not seen Australia, yet we believe it exists, so that giving credence is not contrary to reason. We are cut off from God. No man can see his face and live, yet we have desires after him; we wish to know about his truth.

"So from the beginning mankind has been speculating about things beyond the skies. He is not a far-away God. We cannot look upon nature without feeling that he exists. But has God ever spoken to man? Has he sent anyone to speak for him, to make a revelation? Now you know that Christianity claims revelation, that truth was sent from God to man by an accredited messenger, by Jesus Christ. Supposing Christ's message was really from God, let us consider the characteristics of that message. In the first place that message must be one—the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, the same for all classes, races, and ranks of men. If it be God's truth it must be immutable and one. It must also be certain. When revelation is in accord with reason it must be believed. If revelation demands our belief it must never err. God cannot command us to believe a lie or to do a wrong. Revelation must be unqualifiedly true. Hence, if God appointed anyone to be his mouthpiece, that mouthpiece must be infallible.

"Outside of the Catholic Church no body of Christians claim infallibility. They claim to have revelation, but not infallibility. If God's word can be corrupted or clouded what good was there of his speaking at all? It is not reasonable to suppose that God, having spoken, was unable to preserve his word intact."

The lecturer then spoke of the foundation of the Christian church and of the supreme authority given therein to St. Peter and his successors, the Roman pontiffs.

"If," said Father Yorke, "the Pope could err in interpreting revelation, then the gates of hell would have prevailed against Christ's church and his purpose would have come to naught.

"Infallibility does not mean that the Pope cannot sin. He is a man, like other men, and some have not been worthy of their high station. But though there have been two hundred and fifty Popes, these can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

"Infallibility does not mean inspiration. We do not believe that when the Pope speaks he is inspired by God. Infallibility is another prerogative—it is the privilege of not falling into error. It means that when the Pope says that certain doctrines have been revealed by Jesus Christ we believe that God protects him from error.

"The Pope is not always infallible. Our Supreme Courts are made up of men. Their judgments of law are final, but their private opinions are not conclusive, as for instance after reading the newspapers, and no one thinks their opinions are reversible. The Pope in his ordinary character as a man or a scholar or even as a theologian, may make mistakes. But when he acts as a Supreme Court, when he speaks ex cathedra on a question of faith or morals, we hold, and only then, that he is infallible.

"When, twenty-five years ago the dogma of Papal infallibility was decreed, there was a great uproar. It was said that Catholics could not be loyal citizens and that they could rent out their brains to Protestant scholars. That idea has not yet become altogether extinct. There were men leading in the world who thought that the wires would be pulled by the Pope. To dissipate this idea Cardinal Manning sent a telegram, in which he said that the civil allegiance of Catholics was the same after the definition of infallibility as before it. If, during 1900 years, Christ's words have been a fruitful seed to the nations, each working out its destiny without burden from the gospel, can we believe that they cannot do so now?

"The Pope has authority in spiritual matters derived from Christ, but he has not a title or a shred of a title from Christ of temporal power. The Pope's power is purely spiritual. This authority we Catholics believe we must obey. But at the same time we do not say he never makes any mistakes in his acts or deeds or public policy. We are always ready to receive his commands with respect, but this thing between God and man's conscience neither king nor priest nor pope can touch. If our conscience tells us the Pope's command is wrong we should not obey it. If, too, our conscience should tell us to do that which should lead right through the Pope, we must do that or suffer damnation.

"Some would bind us hand and foot to the state. But what is the state? The United States form a State. Turkey is a state, and Armenia is in a state—in a very bad state. These people do not define what a state is. The Catholic theory of conscience is that it is man's right and duty to preserve that conscience pure before God, and not to betray that reason which God has given into his authority.

"For three month past an association of men has been trying to find proof of the disloyalty of Catholics, but in the 120 years of the Nation's life they have been unable to find one traitor—one Benedict Arnold. From the fact that our record is clean, men should think twice before attacking us. The infallibility of the Pope only makes us better citizens. There is not a language which we speak to-day which the old church has not put in words; not a liberty which we enjoy for which the Popes have not struggled, and for which many have not laid down their lives."

"CHURCH ATTENDANCE."

BRO. JOHN SMITH sends us the following on "church attendance." The name of paper publishing is not indicated. It is reprinted as suggestive:—

To get the men to attend church in this country is what is puzzling those who labor for spiritual ends. The average American is as averse to attending church as the Frenchman though he differs in this that he gives, through the medium of the wife and daughters, to the sustenance of the church. Take New York for instance. A pleasant Sunday its streets are filled with well-dressed and well-behaved men, nine tenths of whom are rarely seen within the walls of a church. Only one man in ten is a regular attendant at religious services on Sunday. Boston glories in 91,000 men and only 8,000 are affiliated with the churches. In San Francisco the pastors took a census. They found 37,000 young men in saloons on Sunday and only 2,000 in the churches. In Milwaukee 12,000 of the 30,000 young men were in the saloons on a recent Saturday night. In two New England cities a census shows that out of 19,000 only 85 young men are church members. In one city 300 young men were sent to jail in one year and not one united with the church. In the second city of 20,000 inhabitants and 4,000 men 39 joined the church and 1,069 went to jail.

The Y. M. C. A., of New York has been issuing circulars to absentees from religious worship asking why they remain away from church. Here are some of the replies:—

"The church goes cold, formal, and unsociable. They have no use for the poor, hence I remain at home."

"I got enough religion in my youth to do me the rest of my life. I was overdosed."

"The church caters to the rich. When I have made my 'pile' I will join the church."

"I refrain from church because there are so many knaves who use it to cloak their crookedness."

"I cannot attend church because I lie in bed Sunday morning and am bicycling in the afternoon. Too tired to attend evening service."

"The preaching is poor and the minister is indifferent and that is why I prefer my library to the sermon."

"I am kept from the church by the pastor, who instead of giving a good sermon is content with pious platitudes which fail to satisfy those thirsting for God's truth. A hundred pastoral visits a week, sipping tea, nibbling cake, and patting the baby on the head will be of little account if the sermon is weak and pointless."

"I blame my parents for not going to church. Had they expressed its importance on me in early life I should have found it advantageous in mature years. It is too late to begin now."

"The lack of cheerfulness in religious exercises keeps me out. Too much fire and brimstone and too little of the beauties of Christianity in the preacher's talk is responsible for my absence."

"I get more enjoyment by staying away than I would by going to church."

"The airs of church attendants long ago disgusted me and mine. Silly pride and Christian teaching do not go well together."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is the revelation, section 119, paragraph 9, for elders only?

Ans.—No. It is primarily addressed to them; but is intended to apply to all, the whole church.

Q.—Is it right to have the Saints' social meeting at six p. m.?

A.—Yes; if the branch so decides, or conditions require.

Q.—Is it wisdom to take children to meeting at six p. m. and have them fall asleep?

A.—It may not always be best for the children; but many parents cannot attend without their children; and it is better to take them than to leave them under certain conditions, or when they do not have proper attention and care. The circumstances must govern in the question of wisdom.

Q.—Should not the social meeting be held in the daytime when the young, middle aged, and old can attend?

A.—Yes; other conditions being equal. As in above answer, conditions must govern.

Q.—Has a branch the right to pass a resolution binding each member to pay a certain amount per week, and punish those who fail to comply?

A.—It may be within the province of a branch to make such a rule; but the church has not considered that it had any power to collect such a tax, hence had not the right to levy it. The right to assess an amount signifies the right to collect it when levied; but the Book of Covenants, section 112, paragraph 10, declares, virtually, that the church has not such right, as we understand it. It might be made a test of fellowship, but such a measure might work injuriously to many who could not comply.

No man can be made rich whose happiness depends on money.

"POINTED OUT."

THE above is made the heading of an article in the Hedrickite paper styled The Searchlight, of April 1, wherein the writer attempts to point out some of the "inaccuracies" and "misstatements" which the Searchlight had before averred were contained in the article written by Bro. E. L. Kelley under the caption of "Court of Appeals Decision," and published in February 26 number of HERALD.

The writer says:—

We asserted in our first number that the Court of Appeals had declared us to be a part of the great Mormon Church. Bishop Kelley in his articles denied that the Court made any such declaration.

Upon this statement this organ of Hedrickism finds its charge of misstatement. Now what are the facts? The quotation made from the Searchlight and the articles of Bro. Kelley referred to, (See HERALD Vol. 43, page 139,) read as follows:—

The Church of Christ at Independence, known sometimes as Hedrickites, was declared a part of the great Mormon Church as organized A. D., 1830, despite the contention of the Reorganized Church that they were heretical.

Bro. Kelley, in his article referring to this, page 139 HERALD, says:—

We might stop and ask, Where in the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is to be found the statement declaring "the Hedrickites a part of the great Mormon Church as organized A. D. 1830;" but the claim made by them of the Court's decision to this effect is so far out of the way that it calls for no reply either by interrogation or argument.

Compare this now with the assertions in the article headed "Pointed out" in the Searchlight:—

We asserted in our first number that the Court of Appeals had declared us to be a part of the great Mormon Church.

Why does this writer deliberately mutilate his own statement after it had been fairly and fully quoted by Bro. Kelley in his article so that there could be no just misapprehension? The reader will notice that this professed Searchlight organ, in order to show a seeming contradiction by Bro. Kelley, deliberately left out the qualifying clause of its own statement where not even a comma stood to indicate a separation; to wit:—

As organized A. D. 1830, despite the contention of the Reorganized Church that they were heretical.

There has been no contest waged by the Reorganized Church over the question as to whether the Hedrickites, or the Brighamites, or the Strangites were what might be commonly called by the world a part of the great Mormon Church. Our claim has been and is, that these factions have incorporated false and erroneous doctrines as a part of their faith, and this is admitted by the article quoted from in this Hedrickite paper—that the Reorganized Church has contended that they were heretical.

The Court of Appeals made no decision or finding showing or intimating that the Hedrickites were not heretical as claimed, neither did it reverse the ruling of the Circuit Court to the effect that they were heretical. The Court of Appeals, in fact, makes no decision in the case touching the Hedrickites and their position as a church, but simply makes reference to them as "that branch of the Mormon Church termed Hedrickites."

Now it is easy to see that there has been a serious misstatement of this matter; it is not in the article of Bro. Kelley, however. It is found in the misstatement of the case by the Searchlight.

The Searchlight party say at the conclusion of their article that,

We endeavor to speak and write the truth at all times, and by so doing we have no fear of the result of an investigation.

Will the Searchlight now please inform its readers why it mutilated its own statement and also mutilated the statement of Bro. Kelley in leaving out of the sentence of the former the words, "As organized A. D., 1830, despite the contention of the Reorganized Church that they were heretical," and from the latter the words, "as organized A. D., 1830," in order to prove Bro. Kelley's article at fault? Was it done purposely to show an apparent contradiction between the statement of Bro. Kelley and the Court, when in fact none existed? If so, was it honest?

Will this organ which poses as a Searchlight now place the exact language it used, also the language of Bro. Kelley and the statement of the court, without change or mutilation, before its readers so that they may fairly judge who made the "misstatement"? It will not do to make the loud claim of searching for light, and then change positions and try to shut the light out as soon as it appears. First of all in religious teachers let us have truthfulness and honesty. Was this breach of the Searchlight a mistake, or made purposely? Which?

IN MEMORIAM. W. W. BLAIR.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

A voice that many years Has cried throughout the wilderness is stilled.

My brethren, your tears
In a just cause are justly spilled.

O voice that many years
Has cried through sunlight mingled yet with gloom;

No moan of ours nor tears
May break the silence of the tomb.

But friends, weep not at all for him
Who nobly did a noble work;
Whose eyes, still on the fight, grew dim;
Whose hands, that all untaught to shirk,
Were stayed by him who doeth well—
Our God, who mindful of our loss,
Still called our brother up to dwell,
And serve perchance a greater cause.

The ever-cheerful heart
And brain that death, not doubt, lit down upon,

Are still a space and part
With a great soul that journeys on.

O voice that many years
Has spread the truth o'er valley and o'er hill,

Who doubts, to other ears
In some far land it crieth still?

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Pray! though the gift you ask for
May never comfort your fears,
May never repay your pleading,
Yet pray, and with hopeful tears!
An answer—not that you long for,
But diviner—will come some day;
Your eyes are too dim to see it,
Yet strive, and wait, and pray!

MARRIAGE; IS IT A FAILURE?

THE sole aim of some, yes, nearly all men seems to be the finding of a wife; and why? Is it merely that they want a housekeeper? Some one to make the beds, to darn the socks, to cook their food, to sweep the house, to sew on buttons, etc? If so, what need of anything more than a hired servant? But no; these are minor matters. It is true they have their value and he is not a wise man who does not give them careful consideration. But what the true man wants is a helpmate in the truest and fullest sense of the word; he wants a wife because he needs her sympathy, companionship, and love.

In the walks of life are many pitfalls, he wants her ready help in avoiding them; many dreary places, he wants her bright smile to cheer him through them; many trials and reverses, he wants her ready sympathy to cheer him onward to victory or to solace him in defeat. A man may be overtaken by misfortune, may meet with disaster, temptation may beset him, then, he needs some one to stand with him and sympathize. In the stern battle of life he needs a woman that, while he places his arms protectingly around her and feels that he has something to fight for, will help him to battle bravely; that will place her sweet lips to his ear and by her wise counsel inspire him to renewed effort until he feels confident of success.

All through the vale of life, through sunshine and shadow, victory or defeat, pleasure or pain, favorable or adverse circumstances, man wants, yes, absolutely needs a woman's love. His soul yearns for it, and without it his span of usefulness is narrow indeed. A sister's or even a mother's love will not, cannot supply his need. There does not exist the psychic affinity that is necessary to develop the capabilities of a true and earnest man. These should be "Two minds with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one."

O, what is more beautiful than marriage under such circumstances, where each believes, and finds, the other, an inexhaustible treasury of sympathy, courage, and love. How noble is the spectacle of a full and complete life as exemplified by such a union. How great the power of its participants for good to their fellow beings.

The consummation of marriage is not merely the completion of the ceremony and subsequent cohabitation of the parties thereto, but it is the full and free intercourse and intimate association in all the affairs of life and the mutual aid and sustenance so necessary to success, by which life becomes full and complete and ends peacefully and without regret. Under such circumstances as these marriage is not a failure in any sense of the word.—Sci.

To prevent divorce neglect the whole world beside, rather than one another.

THE GRAY HEAD BY THE HEARTH.

A PRIVATE letter from a lady who is spending the year among the peasants of Tyrol, says: "The morning after our arrival we were awakened by the sound of a violin and flutes under the window, and hurrying down found the little house adorned as for a feast—garlands over the door and wreathing a high chair which was set in state.

"The table was already covered with gifts brought by the young people whose music we had heard. The whole neighborhood were kinsfolk, and these gifts came from uncles and cousins in every far-off degree. They were very simple, for the donors are poor—knitted gloves, a shawl, baskets of flowers, jars of fruit, loaves of bread; but upon all some little message of love was pinned.

"Is there a bride in this house?" I asked of my landlord.

"Ach, nein!" he said. "We do not make such a pother about our young people. It is the grandmother's birthday."

"The grandmother, in her spectacles, white apron, and high velvet cap, was a heroine all day, sitting in state to receive visits, and dealing out slices from a sweet loaf to each who came. I could not but remember certain grandmothers at home, just as much loved as she, probably, but whose dull, sad lives were never brightened by any such pleasure as this; and I thought we could learn much from these poor mountaineers."—Youth's Companion.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. MAGGIE STRATTON, of Kansas City, Kansas, asks your faith and prayers in behalf of Sr. Annie Harvey, that if it be God's will her hearing may be restored. Sr. Jane Edwards, of the same place, also requests your prayers in behalf of her little daughter, who is deaf and dumb.

Sister Rosa Tracy requests the prayers of the prayer union in behalf of her husband, Lorin Tracy, who met with an accident while working in a logging camp, that he may be restored to health, and strength; also of all the Saints wherever assembled together. We are situated so we cannot have the elders to administer in times of sickness, but the Lord has been merciful to us and answered our prayers when he was nigh death's door but he is still bedfast.

THE WEAK.—The man who leans contentedly and perpetually upon some one else, whether it be for his livehood, for sympathy, or help of any kind is not being really aided, but only still further enfeebled. He drains another not merely to no purpose, but to the injury of both. But if, on the other hand, he receive the help, whatever it be, with thankful gratitude, and use it as a stepping-stone to better things—if he regard it as a temporary loan, which he in his turn may repay to some weaker than himself, if he be inspired by it to greater efforts, and through it gain strength to stand on his own feet—then it has fulfilled its true mission, and is no longer a dead weight, but a living force.

There is no greater commandment than "love one another."

OUR INFANT CLASS.

OUR infant class! What does it comprise? Why yes, what does it comprise? Well, that is hard to tell. There is material for a Frances Willard, a Henry Ward Beecher, a Napoleon, a Washington, or a Paul; one and all of them. There they stand, one bright-eyed little girl of six summers, and four little boys, ages from four to seven, all fun-loving little mischiefs and truth-loving, and God-loving little souls as well. Yes, even the lone little girl is full of mischief; and, little girls, we are told, should be very dignified. Nevertheless, she is just as apt to laugh as the boys.

But when the organ begins to swell with tones of melody every one is in his place and when the song service begins they are earnest listeners, if they do not try to sing, which it is not at all uncommon for them to do. When prayer is announced, folded is each pair of little hands, closed the shining orbs, and bowed the little heads. When the bell is tapped for marching in single file they follow their teacher to their place of recitation. When the teacher gives the greeting every little voice rings out in the response.

Again each little head is bowed, as in concert they repeat their little prayer taught them by the teacher. We now have the pennies taken up and counted. Then such a lively review of previous lesson or lessons. Who can tell us what to-day's lesson is about? Where is Jesus to-day? How did he get there? and such questions as lead to the thought of to-day's lesson. And what a nice story and talk we have! Sometimes most of us have not been taught the lesson previous to coming to Sunday school. Our mammas are too busy; as one little tot expressed it, "Mamma has been too awfully busy for any use." When such is the case we do not have quite such a nice time, but the teacher reads us the story and we learn it and then tell it to the superintendent.

Our "golden text"—we nearly forgot that. Was there anything in the lesson about it? Who said it? What does it mean? Now who can tell the whole story of the lesson? O how they enjoy it as each one holds up the little hand, eager to tell what he knows about it! Again they form in line, and keeping time to the music of the organ march back to their former place in front, where the superintendent can review them; and how quickly do the little hands go up to repeat the golden text and respond to questions on the lesson.

But now comes the trying ordeal of the hour; namely, to keep still while the superintendent reviews the rest of the school. But their teacher is alert and where she sees mischief brewing there is just room enough between participants to admit of her body, and quiet is preserved. Were it possible to have a separate room for the little ones they could better be entertained by their teacher until the close of the senior review, or were the lessons uniform the attention and interest of the little ones could be held by questioning at the same time while reviewing the senior grades.

"Heaven lies about us in our infancy," and it is our duty as Sunday school teachers to create an atmosphere as near heavenly as possible for the cultivation of these tender plants, "who have so lately left the hands of their Creator that they have not lost the divine impress of their Maker."

They need the sunshine of sweet smiles, pleasant words, pure thoughts, and noble deeds. With such characters as Joseph and Moses, Christ and his apostles as models and a study, what limit to human achievement can we place upon our infant class?

CLASS QUESTION BOOKS.

TEACHERS who find it difficult to get their pupils to study their Sunday school lessons in advance might try the following plan, which has proved successful in the experience of the writer. This plan is to have individual question books.

Small blank books can be purchased for a few cents each, and one should belong to each pupil. Into these books the teacher puts some question on the lesson of the following week, adapting the question to the understanding of the pupil. For advanced scholars, the question ought to require considerable research. The books can be kept as a sort of a private postal system between teacher and scholar, into which each can feel free to write a personal word. Thus opportunity is frequently given to the teacher to ask a personal question or to impress a needed truth. One teacher had a revival begin in her class through the personal questions which she asked in some of these little question books.

The books should be given to the scholars the Sunday previous to the lesson to which the questions refer; they, taking them to their homes, to bring them answered on the following Sunday. The teacher can then keep them for a week, and give the pupils a second set, or can ask them to each hunt up (in the intervening week) a hard question to bring the teacher on the following Sunday. These questions are of almost as much value as the others, as the scholars, and often their parents become interested in hunting up hard questions.

The scholars should be encouraged to keep the books neatly, and to answer the questions carefully. A word of praise occasionally written in the books by the teacher will help to this end.—A. W. Pierson in Sunday School Times.

HOW TO DO THE BEST FOR THE WORLD.

THE child's need is the supreme need. It is said by balloonists that the voices of children are heard at a greater height than is any other sound that goes up from the earth. They travel higher than the screech of the steam whistle, the roar of the cataract, or the shout of a mob. So to the attentive ear which can estimate the true force of social appeals, the requirements of the younger generation come the first and rise the highest. They are the plastic element of the race, upon which wise shaping is given with best results. They are the springtime of the world's year, from which its summers and harvests derive their possibilities of gain. And they are the channels through which those older than themselves may be reached most effectively. The affection of many a rough and godless father for his child has been the opening of the joints of his armor, where gospel grace smote him to his healing. If we do the best we can for the children, we are doing the best we can for the world.—S. S. Times.

DISPATCH, Kan., April 14.

Editors Herald:—Elder W. S. Pender and the writer came to this vicinity recently and found one F. Osborn of the Christian (Campbellite) order anxious to meet our people in public discussion, he having loudly proclaimed that our claims were untenable and an imposition upon any Christian community. Accordingly two propositions were agreed upon:—

"Resolved that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and entitled to the respect and belief of all Christian people." W. S. Pender affirms, F. Osborn denies.

"Resolved that the Christian Church (sometimes called the Campbellite Church), is identical with the church organized by Jesus Christ and his apostles as described in the New Testament Scriptures, in organization, doctrine, gifts, and blessings." F. Osborn affirms, W. S. Pender denies.

I am pleased to state that Rev. Osborn did not stoop as low as some and resort to vituperation and mud throwing, but exhibited a kindly spirit. However, at times he would misrepresent and distort the language used by Bro. Pender. His arguments were very weak and frail and showed that he had not yet attained to the zenith of a successful debater against the doctrine taught by the Saints. Bro. Pender very ably defended our cause, his arguments being forceful, logical, and to the point, showing plainly that Mr. Campbell did not have or claim to have received a divine command to reorganize the church after the apostasy; that the Christian Church organized by Mr. Campbell and his associates rests solely upon the little word "if." "If we have authority to preach, we have authority to baptize," etc.

The reverend gentleman also made quite a bluster about disciplines governing churches instead of the Bible, saying the Christian Church people did not worship God through any little "black covered book." This was easily refuted by Bro. Pender producing a little "black covered" book called the Christian System, which read on page 85, "Christian Discipline." Mr. Osborn did not, evidently, expect this little turn, for he appeared much surprised. He had repeated to his members that their church believed in no discipline, and now when the searchlight was turned on, bringing to light the real truth, some of his members stated that they were done with Mr. Osborn and his church.

The discussion was to have occupied seven nights, four for the first and three for the last proposition. When the first proposition was ended Mr. Osborn had to rest six days and on the seventh he appeared again on the stage of action with considerable fire and vim. The next evening he had less fire and his vim was nearly all gone. On the third evening Mr. Osborn failed to make his appearance, concluding, no doubt, that he had enough debate for a time.

I believe much prejudice has been removed and that good will result from the discussion. There is but one family of Saints in this vicinity now, Bro. and Sister A. J. Bly, who have kindly provided us with our daily wants. They are striving to let their gospel light reflect on those around them. It is pleasing indeed to meet Saints who are endeavoring to live pure, upright lives. Many honest-hearted people can thus be led to investigate our claims.

From here we go to Gaylord, about twenty miles west, where we learn that another clash of theological swords may begin. Thus the war against error and false teaching continues. Ever praying for the ultimate triumph of truth and our acceptance with God, I remain,

In gospel bonds,

L. F. JOHNSON.

ST. EDWARD, Neb., April 18.

Editors Herald:—The Herald is a welcome visitor. I don't know how I could get along without it out here all alone. I am the only Latter Day Saint in town. There is no Presbyterian minister here now and I attend their church. They had me on decoration committee for Easter entertainment. My children attend their Sunday school every Sunday, and I don't know any excuse they would have against one of our ministers preaching in the church, and I would like to have the passing elders stop and make us a call. Really, I did think Bro. H. O. Smith might have come when he was so close as Clearwater.

I would be glad to see anyone. Bro. Gillen labored so near and yet so far that I don't get to see them. I leave this invitation open to any coming this way.

Yours in gospel faith,

E. A. GILL.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., April 16.

Editors Herald:—It may be better not to write when there is nothing particularly encouraging to be written, but we cannot desist. The few Saints here have not given up, though obstacles to progress are many, the chief one, being the lack of a public building in which to hold meetings. However, they are trying by God's help to hold prayer meeting the second Sabbath in each month. Some of them live from six to nine miles out in the country, which makes it very inconvenient for them to attend, especially so the last few months, as the roads have been very bad, almost impassable. Last Sunday's prayer meeting was at the home of Bro.

James Edwards, and was the last Bro. and Sr. Baldwin will be likely to attend here, as they left for Chetopa, Labette County, Kansas, the 13th inst., with the intention of locating there. We were sorry to have them leave, but solaced ourselves with the pleasant thought that through their instrumentality the results of work done at Oakland City, may be felt for good in "Kansas land." Such is our heart's desire and prayer. Their move leaves twenty-two members here.

Kansas elders, please take notice of their address. They are anxious that the seed of the kingdom, which "is the word of God," be sown and grow where they expect to make their home.

We moved to this place March 3, and are well pleased with our new location. Nature is gorgeously arrayed just now, as fruit trees, apples excepted of course, are in full bloom, and prospects for a good crop of fruit are seldom if ever better.

Dear Saints, don't forget this part in your prayers for the success of God's work.

Yours in Christ,

ALMA C. BARMORE.

LANSING, Mich., March 31.

Editors Herald:—We all know what is meant by temperance; we all know what is the natural result of intemperance.

We have some very imperative ideas of how a community can prosper without intoxicating liquors being sold for other than medical uses.

Let us consider for our remarks the condition of Kansas. We who read the papers regularly are some acquainted with the unfortunate conditions that Kansas has labored under for some years—the drought first and the legions of grasshoppers following immediately after it. These were great drawbacks in the history of the State.

In 1880 Kansas was especially prominent before the world by its adoption of a constitutional amendment by a direct vote of the people which forbids the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors except for medical, mechanical, and scientific purposes. This was adopted after an exciting campaign. For fifteen years prohibition has been the law of the commonwealth. It has met with continuous opposition of the most radical nature from enemies backed by the liquor powers of the nation. Repeated efforts have been made to supplant the people's law and to retrograde to the old license law, but every move made has only added one more rivet to the strong band that protects the rights of Kansas' most honorable citizens.

From the United States census reports of 1880 and 1890 we learn that Kansas has more than doubled its net wealth in ten years of prohibition.

This gain was made in spite of repeated crop failures in various parts of the State.

If Kansas can prosper under prohibitory laws why cannot any State in the Union? We unhesitatingly say it can.

The liquor man says, "Take the saloon away and you take all enterprise away." Let us consider for one moment what is really taken away:—

1. We take the whisky away.
2. We take the drunkard away.
3. We take the revolver out of the assassin's hands.
4. We take the razor or the musket from the hands of the awful murderer of wife, mother, son, or innocent, helpless children.

We could enumerate scores of other crimes that the crazed brain of the drinking man is incited to commit.

We take away the liquor and we would be comparatively free from all crimes; for no sane man could do those awful deeds without having his brain excited by that terrible fiery serpent—alcohol.

Remove the saloons from the State and it would be but a few years until the drunkard would be shunned as the murderer or thief is to-day.

I would like to ask every civil citizen of the United States whether the improvements of our country are better made by money received from liquor licensed saloons than they would be if they were received by direct tax on the property of the citizens?

Allow me to advance one idea that could make this United States of America one prohibition country. My idea is to stop issuing licenses to any man for saloons. Let our government operate, authorize, and control a sufficient number of distilleries to manufacture all the liquor necessary for medical, mechanical, and scientific purposes. Allow druggists to sell liquor for the above purposes only. I would not favor any license to be paid at all. Impose a heavy penalty for anyone who sold liquors for any other purpose.

Yours most respectfully,

E. J. ERNSBERGER.

CAPLINGER MILLS, Mo., April 22.

Editors Herald:—I promised the Saints before leaving Council Bluffs that I would write the Herald and tell them about this country. I like it, but the Saints are scarce in this locality. We were the only ones here, but another family have come since we did.

Soon after arriving here I wrote to Bro. Duncan, also to Bro. F. C. Keck, telling them our wants. Bro. Duncan came and preached twice, then had to go home in a few days. Afterward Bro. Keck came and gave us fourteen sermons and had good attendance for the time of year, and good interest manifested, and left some interested. I think if this opening can be attended to there will be souls gathered into the kingdom.

There is a strong branch at Lebeck, about thirteen miles from here. I have not had a chance to meet with them, but am told they have very spiritual meetings and that the signs do follow the believer. There are several local preachers there and I hope some one will come here.

We have been using the Presbyterian church here, and I think we can occupy once a month or oftener, as they only use the house on the last Saturday and Sunday in each month. I do not know yet how much opposition there will be against us.

I think this is the place for Saints to come that have but little means, as they can get homes cheap, and it costs but little to live here as compared with the North. This is a good country for the traveling ministry to have homes in, as they can raise a good part of their living, and land is cheap. It will afford me pleasure to answer any questions in regard to this country, if any want information.

May God help us to occupy wisely is my prayer. Amen.

L. C. WILLIAMS.

DICKENS, Neb., April 17.

Editors Herald:—We got home after a long six weeks, but we found so many kind friends, both of the Saints and those not Saints that the time did not seem so long. My health is no worse than it was, and I can say that the Lord has been good to me.

Many thanks to the Saints, and may God bless them. Several of the Saints that are too poor, like ourselves, to take the papers wish me to ask that if any of the Saints have reading matter they will be so kind as to send them some. I will send the names of a few, ours with the rest, as we can't get the money to take them ourselves and some of the Saints said if we would like, they would send their papers to us.

I will give my name: Mary A. Anway, Dickens, Nebraska; E. Kelsey, Lexington, Nebraska; John Strood, Sumner, Nebraska; James Hivey, North Platte. If the sister that wrote to me from Illinois last summer will write to me, I would like to write to her. She sent me papers and Autumn Leaves. I have been away from home ten months and lost her name and address.

Yours in bonds,

MARY A. ANWAY.

WOODBINE, Iowa, April 20.

Editors Herald:—I have just returned from a most enjoyable trip into Central Nebraska district. I was gone from home fifty-six days; preached fifty-four sermons and baptized twelve. It seems that God's hand was in the movement from first to last; no two months' work ever gave me the satisfaction that this has. I found the people fairly hungering for the gospel.

I stopped first at Clearwater and preached nine sermons, and while the weather was good had full houses. Then at the solicitation of Bro. E. Downey I went on to Inman, Holt County, where I spoke twenty times, baptizing four; Belle Wisdom, Hartman Ek, and Bro. and Sr. Butler, daughter and son-in-law of Sr. Gilbert Watson. I mention the names of those baptized, that Brn. Caffall, Peak, and E. A. Davis may know that some of the seed sown by them has borne fruit, although they were not permitted to reap. Sr. Wisdom was the first to give her name for baptism, thereby verifying the statement made by Solomon in Proverbs 8: 20: "I [Wisdom] lead in the way of righteousness, in the midst of the paths of judgment."

I then returned to Clearwater and began meetings in an empty farmhouse belonging to a Mr. Crum (having been refused the use of the Methodist church at that place), and in the Saints' church at Clearwater twelve times, baptizing Sr. Pearl Smith and another young lady, Miss Olive Harris. I left a fine interest and many near the kingdom. I then, on the 4th of April, returned to Inman and on Sunday the 5th organized a Sunday school to be known as the "Evanelia" Latter Day Saints' Sunday school, of Inman, Nebraska; Sr. Belle Wisdom superintendent, Ella Butler assistant superintendent, L. H. Downey secretary, Hartman Ek treasurer, and Miss Hattie Crosser chorister and organist. Only one of the teachers was a member of the church at the time of the organization, but I began services that same afternoon and immediately at the close went to the water and baptized a fine young man, Jesse Loucks, the first of his family to obey the gospel, but who, if faithful, I feel assured will be the means of influencing others in the right. The next day at three o'clock went to the water again and baptized the teacher of the primary class, and organist and chorister of the Sunday school—Miss Hattie Crosser, who will no doubt be remembered by the brethren who preceded me at Inman. She will be a wonderful help in the Sunday school and an earnest worker in all that is right. Much of the Spirit was present at the baptism and confirmation and Sr. Downey remarked that it seemed to her the happiest day of her life.

But our happiness seemed to have been doomed to have a sad interruption: for that night in the midst of my sermon I was interrupted by the cry of "fire," and it was discovered that Bro. Downey's barn was in flames. In a few hours it had burned to the ground, destroying one hundred tons of baled hay, a fine span of horses, two calves, several chickens, one dog, a buggy, two good sets of harness, six or seven hundred bushels of oats, corn, and other things to the amount of at least two thousand dollars, with no insurance whatever. Quite a good deal of indignation was expressed against the perpetrator of the deed, as it was generally supposed that it was set fire; but Bro. Downey suspects no one. He has no enemies and can think of no motive that would prompt the action, and prefers to believe it an accident.

I continued my meetings until the 15th and took charge of the Sunday school at ten o'clock on Sunday, and although it was raining hard there were nineteen present and the prospects are fine for a grand work to be done in that vicinity. On the 15th I went to the water twice, in the forenoon baptizing another of the Sunday school teachers, Mrs. Brumbaugh and son Ezra, and in the afternoon Mrs. Julia Crosser, mother of the young sister spoken of before, and a promising young man, Mike Peterson; making ten in all, increasing the membership from five to fifteen.

I gathered the Saints together at the confirmation, talked to them for a half hour on their various duties, and administered the sacrament. All are full of zeal for the work and expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied, and as one sister expressed herself to me: "God only knows how thankful I am that he sent you here," seemed to be the sentiment of all. Many more are believing, and what is best of all is that it is the very best of the community that is on our side. I left there the 16th; stopped two nights at Norfolk where Sr. Abbie Legeman lives. Spoke the first night in the front room of her house and the second night in the G. A. R. hall. Only small audiences greeted me, but I felt well in talking. I arrived home on the 18th, and on the 19th spoke twice in our own church at Woodbine.

May God be with his people everywhere is my prayer.

H. O. SMITH.

KNOX, Indiana, April 22.

Editors Herald:—I wish to say a word of Bro. G. H. Hilliard's short visit with us on his way to Kirtland conference. My pen cannot describe the appreciation of his visit and the five noble sermons he preached. We hope he will not stay away so long again.

We do hope and pray the Lord will send us an elder here. We need one, O, so badly. Some of the Saints have gone to the Christian Church. Your sister, MARY PRETTYMAN.

CONCERNING CHRIST.

WE hear a great deal said about Christ among the teachings of men; some tell us he was the Son of God, others he was the natural son of Joseph, while others say there was no such man as Jesus Christ. I have read in one of the leading State papers a learned attempt to prove that Christ was one of the myths of the past ages. He who would take time to reason with any degree of common sense, will say the evidence is against this, for we have just as good a knowledge of Christ as we have of any other man of renown in history. What do we know of Washington, Columbus, or Frederick the Great? Just what history tells; so it is with our knowledge of Christ, and surely those who wrote about Christ were just as truthful in their writings as those who wrote about Washington or Columbus.

This is the year of our Lord 1894, which means that men reckon their time from the birth of Christ, this being what is called the Christian era; as to just when he was born there is much dispute, some say in April; others, May or September; the Catholic Church says it was in December. Christ was crucified on the day of the preparation for the passover, and the passover was on the fourteenth day of the first month which we call April. The Book of Mormon tells us he was crucified in the thirty-fourth year, in the first month, on the fourth day of the month. Then he was thirty-three years and four days old, so we must conclude he was born just four days before the day of the preparation, which would be the ninth day of April.

Christ has two genealogies, one by Matthew, another by Luke; so Joseph had two fathers. Now, asks the infidel, "Can a man have two fathers?" "Yes." "How?" "Why, his own father, and the father of his wife." It is said that Mary was the only child of Heli and so she was an heiress, and Joseph by his marriage with her, according to Jewish law inherited the rights of a son, because the female line blended in the husband the rights of her father, so the two genealogies became one in the person of Joseph.

Now Christ was the supposed son of Joseph, but we know a supposition does not establish a fact. We learn from the Scripture that he came not by the will of the flesh, but by the will of the Spirit; that the first man was of the earth, earthy; the second man was the Lord from heaven. He was baptized by John, as he said, to fulfill all righteousness as it was in accord with the law of God to be born of water and of the Spirit; for, as he came to show and teach man the way of life and salvation, he was willing to be an example to mankind in all the commands of God.

Matthew bears record concerning the baptism of Jesus as follows:—

John saw, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Jesus. And lo, he heard a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear ye him.—Matt 3: 46. (I. T.)

Then he was the Son of God, and, therefore, had nothing to do with the genealogy of Joseph. He was more than man though he appeared among men as one of themselves; yet, though like a man he was the most remarkable character that has ever come upon this earth. It is written, he came to do the will of his Father:—

For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life.—John 3: 16.

We understand the first man, Adam, had the right to the tree of life and would have lived forever, had he been obedient to the commands of God, but through disobedience he lost that right; death came upon him and all his descendants. All mankind die, there is nothing surer than death; but here came one who had power over death; so, of necessity, he must have come of another lineage; and by his word the sick were healed; the lame walked; the blind saw; the dumb spake; the devils obeyed; the dead arose to life. Why? Because in him was the life, and the life was the light of men. Then, as he had power over death, he could have lived forever. He would not have died like other men if the Jews had not killed him. "O no," says some one, "he would have died of a broken heart." But this is said to escape the quibble of infidels, who say that if the Jews had not killed him, the plan of redemption would have failed. If he had died of a broken heart, where would have been his power over death, and what better would he be than those of Adam's race who cannot save themselves?

Men, in reasoning thus, forget that in a great house there are vessels of honor and dishonor; the vessels of dishonor are as needful as are the vessels of honor, but we never think of keeping clean water for family use in the slop bucket. So God permits men to choose what they will be, and if they of themselves choose to do a dishonorable act, they cannot be honorable men. Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus, though Jewish rulers, did not consent that Christ should be put to death; but, being overruled, did an honorable act in begging the body and laying it away in the tomb.

That Christ could have lived forever, is clearly understood from his own words:—

I lay down my life that I might take it up again. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.—John 10: 17, 18.

He said to Pilate:—

Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above.—John 19: 11.

What other man who ever came to earth could say, "No man taketh my life from me," or that he had "power to take it again"? And how many are there who would like to and would live forever if they could? How many say, "Well, I have just begun to learn how to live, but must soon die." Yes, all men die; and here the king, the millionaire, and the beggar meet on the same level. They die and their bodies go to dust whether they are laid in a silver casket or a pine box.

Why should Christ die? Why should the innocent suffer for the guilty? Is it right and just they should? And what real good was obtained by his death? These and many like questions, are men asking; and because they can find no satisfactory answer they reject the history of the whole matter as something that cannot be understood, and while believing in a God or a Great First Cause of all things, they believe not in Christ. Now the wisdom of God is such that he does nothing in vain, and his economy has no superfluities; all that he does is needful to do, and what he does cannot be left undone. Then we must find some simple reason why it was needful that Christ should suffer death.

Death, what is it? After all that learned men have been able to tell us, we know nothing more than that death is the absence of life. Men know enough of life to know that it is sweet to live. There is nothing they value so dearly as their lives; but they cannot escape the grasp of the grim monster, Death. Then, as death holds all mankind in its icy grasp, it was most needful that some one should pass through death and hell, over whom death and hell had no power. That one was Jesus Christ. That the innocent suffer for the guilty, and that most willingly, is oftentimes illustrated in everyday life. A man has been tried as a law-breaker before a judge and condemned to pay a fine. The man has no money to pay, so must go to prison. But the man has a friend who says to the judge, "I will pay his fine." "All right," says the judge, "that satisfies the law." So the prisoner goes free, rejoicing that he has a friend in need; and the friend is happy to be able to assist him.

Christ, in passing through death and hell, purchased gifts for men, more especially for those who have made friends with him through the gift of the gospel; when they come before the great Judge on the day of judgment, they are the ones he will own before the Father as his friends; and they go free, rejoicing. Men say there have been sixteen or more saviors. Yes, and ever so many Christs. What does this prove? Why! that the world had need of a Savior, for there never was a real or true that had no counterfeits. Then Christ was the true from the fact that he had power over death; he arose from the grave and brought to pass the resurrection of the dead; for it is written that when he arose

Many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.—Matt. 27: 52, 53.

The Book of Mormon bears record that many of the Nephites arose. Yes, but men say, "What of all this; death still reigns and men die and go down to dust?" True, because the days of man's probation have not passed, so that those that now are and those who are yet to come may have the same opportunity to prove and choose for themselves what they will or shall be; the Father may know what they will be, they do not and cannot know till they learn for themselves by actual personal experience. Peter was much displeased when told he would deny his Master, yet he did deny him. Judas betrayed him with a kiss, and how many more like him, for personal advantage, have turned traitor to friends and kindred. The prophet wept when Hazael stood before him, the man says, "Why do you weep?" The prophet said, "Because I know the evil thou wilt do unto the children of Israel." Hazael said, "But what, is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing?" Yet in after years he did that great wickedness. The world has had many who like him, had they been told of all the deeds of wickedness they would do in after years when they would have power over their fellowmen, would have most bitterly resented the charge; yet when they filled up the measure of their lives, the record of their acts was cruelty and inhumanity to their fellows, and so proved themselves what they really would be, and then they knew it for themselves.

Herein do we see the great wisdom of God, that when men have proved themselves, they are not permitted to do more. What would this world be if the tyrant oppressors were able to live for ever? The Almighty Power that rules the destiny of kings and nations, says, "Thus far, but no farther." Men have tried to prove that the present order of things is as it was in the morn of creation when God declared all very good; famine, floods, disease, and earthquakes have ever been, and some of them have written learned explanations on the benefits of earthquakes.

See the beautiful deer as it innocently eats the herbage of the forest, a lion pounces upon it, tears it all to pieces; did God, who gave the life to the deer, mean that it should be food for such a bloodthirsty monster? "O yes, you know the little fish were made for the big fish." If so, where is the wisdom and harmony of such an order of things?

The preacher says, God is infinite in power, goodness, and mercy; the skeptical farmer says, I don't believe it; scientific men tell us that there is ever in the atmosphere that which will make the rain cloud. See that crop that has perished for lack of moisture! How often have I longed earnestly and wished for the needed rain, but it came not! Now we are in want and misery, over the way lives one of your religious, praying men; he not only lost his crop, but lightning killed the only cow he had, and now his little children have no milk. The preacher says, God did not kill the cow; 'twas the lightning. The skeptic says, Did not God make the lightning?

We see a beautiful home where dwells a happy family,—husband, wife, and children,—the husband lovingly cares for and provides for all their wants, but there comes a day when he reaches home staggering, cursing, quarreling, fighting. What is the matter? He has lost his reason, he is drunk; he is the same husband and father, but there is something in him that has destroyed his senses, made him cruel and unkind.

Man lost his abode in Eden; he is said to be fallen man. He was placed at the head of creation; nature through man looks up to God, he is the head. If the head has fallen, what condition will the body be in? Is there not something in it that is not of it that causes it to be at war with itself? How few of the many among men who claim to know, have understood the mission of Christ? Even those who were with him and knew him said they trusted it was he who should have redeemed Israel. But when he died their hope was gone. They would have fought for him with the sword; he said, Put up the sword, for they that take the sword perish by the sword. What a truth! for is not this the history of the world, strife, envy, war, and bloodshed? All great conquerors have strewn their path to victory with the lives of their fellow men, and at best could only sing, By the sword we seek the calm repose of liberty. Christ was a conquering hero, the only true and great conqueror that has ever appeared among men—he conquered death. He was born to be a king, yet when men would have made him their king, he would not; because his kingdom was not after the order of this world.

The coming of Christ was a mission of, "Peace on earth, good will to men," to teach them the true way of life, and that true nobility could only be obtained in love to God and in living in obedience to his laws, that man, in order to be enabled to love and obey, must be engrafted by the Spirit of promise as it is revealed in the gospel, that this Spirit of promise would create in him a lively hope of life eternal in that world which is to come. Men are now looking for him to come again as King of kings and rule supreme over all the earth. Then will be fulfilled that which is written:—

With righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth. . . . The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.—Isa. 11: 4-6.

In the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water.—Isa. 35: 6, 7.

They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.—Isa. 11: 9.

What a great change this will be from the present condition of things among men, and in the world to-day! It brings to mind the saying:—

Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.—1 Cor. 2: 9.

Just think of it! One thousand years of peaceful happiness! Who can describe and tell what it all means? this great love of God our Father. Let us ever be diligent and faithful, ever watch and pray that we may be worthy of such a great reward.

WILLIAM CAIRNS.

ELMIRA, Kansas, Jan. 19, 1894.

A NAIL.—NO. 1.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

THERE was a consistent signification with the ancients in using the caption of this paper.

And now for a little space grace hath been shewed from the Lord our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a nail in his holy place, that our God may lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.—Ezra 9: 8.

The marginal reading for "a nail" is: a pin, that is, a constant and sure abode.

The very genius of the restored gospel is to inspire in the hearts of those who embrace it a desire for that which is constant, unchangeable, and steadfast in promise and fulfillment, and an earnest hope that when the inconstant changes of this mortal life have ended, the "sure abode" of an eternal inheritance may be vouchsafed. No sooner was the heraldic cry of the angel's message preached by the first elders of the church unto the people than that Satanic influence moved upon the evil disposed to overthrow or destroy the work of the true gospel.

The object of this paper is to drive a nail in a sure place in refutation of misrepresentation and false statement. I first lay down the scriptural authority for examination of all subjects that ask for our acceptance and indorsement, as also the scriptural rule of evidence, used to establish that which purports to be truth, and in any manner affects our present or future condition for happiness and continuance in the peace and glory of the Allwise.

Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.—1 John 4: 1-3.

Many have erroneously concluded from the reading of the above that all prophets after the death of John the Baptist and Jesus Christ were to be false prophets. No prophet or spirit should be rejected or condemned until the scriptural rule has been carefully and faithfully complied with.

The revelation of Jesus Christ unto John on the isle of Patmos was for him to write to the church at Ephesus:—

I know thy works, and thy labor, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and thou hast tried them which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars.—Rev. 2: 2.

This, without doubt, demonstrates that the church possessed the authority to examine those who claimed to be ministers, and pass upon the validity of their calling. Were there an ecumenical council or synod holding universal authority assembled today, and all those in the whole world who are standing as ministers were to be tested according to the rule and law in use at Ephesus, the probability is that the following prophecy would have a fulfillment:—

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord: and they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.—Amos 8: 11, 12.

For individual protection and to guard and guide for our best interest the following should be all sufficient:—

Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.—2 John 1: 9-11.

The gospel ladder that all must climb to obtain rest and glory with God in his kingdom, requires that every step must be taken and not one omitted if we desire to win the crown and the palm.

The wise man said:—

He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him.—Prov. 18: 13.

Nicodemus cites the law as follows:—

Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doeth?—John 7: 51.

If the enemies of our cause would observe the foregoing their spitefulness and intolerance would soon cease.

The great jurist and leader of the people of God gave the following to ancient Israel:—

And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for the judgment is God's: and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.—Deut. 1: 16, 17.

It will be noticed that the above was instruction to those who were to act as judges for the people. Decisions are to be governed by the following:—

At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death.—Deut. 17: 6.

The rule of establishing a cause by witnesses is:—

One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth; at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.—Deut. 19: 15.

The quotations from Deuteronomy were those which applied to Israel under the Judges and Kings, and were transferred to the Christian economy by Christ himself:—

But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.—Matt. 18: 16.

And this rule is a part of the organic law of this church of Christ in the following:—

And every word shall be established against him or her by two witnesses of the church, and not of the enemy; but if there are more than two witnesses it is better.—D. C. 42: 22.

Paul observed this rule in his labor:—

This is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.—2 Cor. 13: 1.

The work of the restored gospel in the very nature of things was that of an iconoclast; in fact all ages seem to prove the truthfulness of the saying of the Master:—

Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.—Matt. 10: 34.

From April, 1830, when the church was organized, true to God's promises, the gospel produced its natural fruit, and those who suffered loss by having their images smashed could say truthfully:—

So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at naught; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.—Acts 19: 27.

The machinery of false statements, misrepresentation, and slander was set in motion against the chief officer of the church in particular and the rest of the ministry in general. The special attack was made upon the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon.

Samuel M. Smucker, A. M., gives place to the following in his book:—

The question will be asked, could Joseph Smith, a notoriously illiterate though clever man, really write the Book of Mormon? Without pretending to state positively that Joseph Smith was not the sole author of the volume, or that he was not aided by other persons in its composition, we present the following short history, which the American opponents of Mormonism consider to be a true statement of its origin.

It is stated by them that, in the year 1809, a man of the name of Solomon Spaulding, who had formerly been a clergyman, failed in business at a place called Cherry Valley, in the State of New York. Being a person of literary tastes, and his attention having been directed to the notion which at that time excited some interest and discussion; namely, that the North American Indians were the descendants of the lost tribes of Israel, it struck him that the idea afforded a good groundwork for a religious tale, history, or novel. For three years he labored upon this work, which he entitled The Manuscript Found. "Mormon" and his son "Moroni," who act so large a part in Joseph Smith's Book of Mormon, were two of the principal characters in it. In 1812 the MS. was presented to a printer or bookseller, named Patterson, residing at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, with a view to its publication. Before any satisfactory arrangement could be made, the author died, and the manuscript remained in the possession of Mr. Patterson, apparently unnoticed and uncared for. The printer also died in 1826, having previously lent the manuscript to one Sidney Rigdon, a compositor in his employ, who was at the time a preacher in connection with some Christian sect, of which the proper designation is not very clearly stated. This Rigdon afterwards became, next to Joseph Smith himself, the principal leader of the Mormons. How Joseph Smith and this person became connected is not known, and which of the two originated the idea of making a new Bible out of Solomon Spaulding's novel is equally uncertain. The wife, partner, several friends, and the brother of Solomon Spaulding, affirmed, however, the identity of the principal portions of the Book of Mormon with the novel of The Manuscript Found, which the author had from time to time, and in separate portions, read over to them. John Spaulding, brother to Solomon, declared upon oath that his brother's book was an historical romance of the first settlers in America, endeavoring to show that the American Indians are the descendants of Jews, or the lost ten tribes. He stated that it gave a detailed account of their journey from Jerusalem by land and by sea, till they arrived in America under the command of Nephi and Lehi; and that it also mentioned the Lamanites. He added that "he had recently read the Book of Mormon, and, to his great surprise, he found nearly the same historical matter and names as in his brother's writings. To the best of his recollection and belief, it was the same that his brother Solomon wrote, with the exception of the religious matter."—History of the Mormons, pages 40 and 41.

I desire to call the attention of the reader to the following points in the foregoing:—

1. Mr. Smucker questions if one so illiterate as Joseph Smith could write the Book of Mormon.

2. Mr. Smucker does not express an opinion as to whether Joseph Smith wrote the Book of Mormon himself, or whether he had help to write it.

3. Mr. Smucker satisfies himself by adopting the threadbare, worn-out tales of others. He is, however, adroit enough not to commit himself to any theory.

4. We are furnished the title of the novel written by the ex-Reverend Solomon Spaulding; namely, The Manuscript Found.

5. It is sought to identify the Book of Mormon and The Manuscript Found as one and the same book, and that each contains the names of Mormon, Moroni, Lehi, Nephi, and Lamanites.

6. That the chief character of Spaulding's novel came from "Jerusalem by land and sea."

7. John Spaulding upon oath states that the novel of his brother was a "historical romance" written with a view to have people believe that the Indians of America were Jews, or the long lost ten tribes of Israel.

8. The statement is made that Sidney Rigdon procured the loan of the manuscript of Spaulding's novel, and the inference is left that in some way not explained he is the responsible party for the transformation of the "romance" into the religious, historic record, the Book of Mormon.

Before making an argument or offering rebuttal evidence, I will make one more extract from Mr. Smucker. He gives what purports to be a letter of Matilda Davidson, the widow of Solomon Spaulding, wherein she is made to say:—

After the Book of Mormon came out, a copy of it was taken to New Salem, the place of Mr. Spaulding's former residence, and the very place where the Manuscript Found was written. A woman preacher appointed a meeting there; and in the meeting read and repeated extracts from the book of Mormon. The historical part was immediately recognized by all the older inhabitants, as the identical work of Mr. Spaulding, in which they had all been so deeply interested years before. Mr. John Spaulding was present and recognized perfectly the work of his brother. He was amazed and afflicted that it should have been perverted to so wicked a purpose. His grief found vent in a flood of tears, and he arose on the spot, and expressed to the meeting his sorrow and regret that the writings of his deceased brother should be used for a purpose so vile and shocking.—History of the Mormons, p. 44.

For more than fifty years, all the enemies of the Book of Mormon flaunted the Spaulding "romance" in the face of the elders as the foundation of the Book of Mormon. This is true of all from E. D. Howe down to Clark Braden. The elders invariably insisted that the Manuscript Found be produced that its contents might be compared with the contents of the Book of Mormon. According to the Spaulding theory for the Book of Mormon, Mr. Spaulding failing in business, and his health also failing, sometime between 1809 and 1812 he wrote a tale or novel about the Indians. Mr. Spaulding and family moved from Cherry Valley, New York, to New Salem, Ashtabula County, Ohio; from the latter place to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and from there to Amity, Washington County, Pennsylvania. The widow of Spaulding is made to say that the manuscript was loaned to one Mr. Patterson and she says, "At length the manuscript was returned to its author." This was prior to the death of Mr. Spaulding. At his death she says, "The manuscript then fell into my hands and was carefully preserved." She further states that in 1834 Dr. Philastus Hurlbut came with an "introduction and request for the manuscript." These statements are made over the signature of Matilda Davidson, nee Spalding in 1839. I now ask your consideration to the following letter:—

GIBSONBURG, Ohio, Aug. 19, 1879.

I visited Mrs. Matilda (Spaulding) Davidson at Monson, Massachusetts, in 1834, and never saw her afterwards. I then received from her a manuscript of her husband's which I did not read but brought home with me and immediately gave it to Mr. E. D. Howe, of Painesville, Ohio, who was then engaged in preparing his book, "Mormonism Unveiled." I do not know whether or not the document I received from Mrs. Davidson was Spalding's Manuscript Found, as I never read it; but whatever it was, Mr. Howe received it under the condition on which I took it from Mrs. Davidson, to compare it with the Book of Mormon and then return it to her. I never received any other manuscript of Spaulding's from Mrs. Davidson or anyone else. Of that manuscript I made no other use than to give it, with all my other documents connected with Mormonism, to Mr. Howe. I did not destroy the manuscript nor dispose of it to Joe Smith nor to any other person. No promise was made by me to Mrs. Davidson that she should receive any portion of profits arising from the publication of the manuscript if it should be published. All the affidavits procured by me for Mr. Howe's book, including all those from Palmyra, N. Y., were certainly genuine.

D. P. HULBURT.

I now ask your attention to a paragraph in Howe's book, the first anti-Mormon book, published as follows:—

The trunk referred to by the widow was subsequently examined and found to contain only a single manuscript book in Spaulding's handwriting, containing about one quire of paper. This is a romance purporting to have been translated from the Latin, found on twenty-four rolls of parchment in a cave on the banks of Conneaut Creek, but written in modern style, and giving a fabulous account of a ship's being driven upon the American coast while proceeding from Rome to Britain, a short time previous to the Christian era, this country then being inhabited by the Indians. This old manuscript has been shown to several of the foregoing witnesses who recognize it as Spaulding's, he having told them that he altered his first plan of writing by going farther back with dates, and writing in the old scripture style, in order that it might appear more ancient. They say that it bears no resemblance to the Manuscript Found.—Mormonism Unveiled, p. 288.

Bishop E. L. Kelley waxed hot in public debate in February, 1884, when he said:—

They say, says Howe, it bears no resemblance to the manuscript. But it is evident that they lied, if they said so.—Braden and Kelley, p. 91.

This was a bold utterance for a man that did not know the whereabouts of the manuscript; but he was absolutely safe in so declaring, for had there been any manuscript of Spalding that would have militated against the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon, it would have been published in every language of earth, for the angel's statement, as true as gospel, to Joseph Smith was:—

That God had a work for me to do; and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues, or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people.

I have traced the whereabouts of that wonderful Spalding manuscript from the time of its writing until it was deposited by D. P. Hurlbut with E. D. Howe in 1834. Subsequent to the death of D. P. Hurlbut his widow wrote February 5, 1884:—

Mr. Hulburt never obtained but one manuscript from Mrs. Davison. That one he let E. D. Howe have. When Mrs. (Spaulding) Davison let him have it, he said he promised to return it; and when he let Howe have it Howe promised to restore it to Mrs. Spaulding, but he never did. Hulburt spent about six months' time and a good deal of money looking up the Spaulding manuscript and other evidence, but he was disappointed in not finding what he wanted. This was the reason he turned the whole thing over to Howe. He never was satisfied with what he found, and while on his death-bed he would have given everything he had in the world could he have been certain there was ever a Manuscript Found, as claimed, similar to the Book of Mormon.—Braden-Kelley Debate, p. 135.

No individual that I am aware of that has made war upon the Book of Mormon, was ever satisfied with his effort, and all have the misfortune of using misrepresentation or resorting to falsehood. From 1834, the time D. P. Hurlbut placed the manuscript in the hands of E. D. Howe, until 1884, when Mrs. Hurlbut wrote, the whereabouts of the manuscript was unknown. I will now drive "a nail in a sure place" by establishing the whereabouts of Spaulding's manuscript from the the time it went into the hands of E. D. Howe, to its present resting place.

A REMINDER.

WITH what measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again.

I believe that sometimes they that are weak in faith instead of being helped are caused to lose faith in those that are appointed to be judges in Israel, when they appeal to them for redress of wrong, and sometimes they are neglected by those in whose hands they have have put their complaints, and receiving unsatisfactory answers such as, "You can obtain no redress on account of the rule of limitation," when it sometimes may have been the neglect of the one to whom complaint has been first made, to promptly give the case their special attention and do all that is possible to settle the matter.

A case of this kind brings to my mind the late decision of the courts in our demand for redress, and suggests the above quotation.

I believe those who have this duty cannot be too particular in using every energy in their power to bring to judgment any who may be accused, and those who may be false accusers.

Surely one transgression permitted in the church is worse for the church than five hundred outside, and the prosecution of such is of more importance than the prosecution of the work among the world.

Miscellaneous Department.

PASTORAL.

MISSOURI, KANSAS, AND SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

Having been placed in charge of the above-named mission, I take this method of notifying the Saints, and especially the traveling and local ministry, in the territory named, of my willingness and anxiety to cooperate with them in the building up of the work and the proclamation of the gospel to the people.

I may not be able to travel and preach extensively, but will gladly do what I can, or try to at least. There is need of a special effort on the part of the ministerial force, both traveling and local, this year. May God inspire them to see the needs of the work, and give courage and wisdom to perform it.

All concerned will please act in harmony with the following appointments for the conference year, or till other arrangements are made and published:—

Bro. I. N. White will have charge of the same field as last year; that is, Clinton, Independence, South Missouri, and Spring River districts; Bro. M. H. Bond, St. Louis district; Bro. W. S. Pender, Kansas, excepting the territory contained in the "field" of I. N. White; Bro. F. M. Slover, Southern Illinois. The brethren who have been appointed to labor in the Northeast and Far West districts, Missouri, will please report directly to me. Should it become necessary to place some one in formal charge of this field, it can be done at a later date. Meanwhile the missionaries are, of course, authorized to do whatever work belongs to their office, calling, and appointment; but this must not be construed to mean that they are at liberty to ignore, or unduly interfere with district and branch organizations. (See D. C. 120: 4.)

During the last conference year, the time and talent of Bro. I. N. White has been heavily drawn upon by public debates. Should it be necessary to continue this, he can, of course, do but little preaching, as the work of directing the ministers in his "field of labor," and preparing for and holding these discussions, will be about all that he can or ought to do. Do not be overanxious for debates; but when it becomes necessary to arrange for them, let those who are not in charge refer the whole matter, with a plain statement of the situation, to those who are in charge of their respective "fields of labor," so that they may make their own arrangements, directly, or through their assistants.

By agreement between Bro. A. H. Smith and myself, Bro. William Anderson will have charge of the Decatur district.

Please give proper and prompt attention to the matter of reporting, so that we may know where you are and what you are doing. If you have any doubt concerning your duty in this respect, do not guess at it, but consult the conference minutes for 1893, p. 68.

As heretofore, Nodaway district, Missouri, will be considered a part of the Iowa mission which is under the charge of Bro. A. H. Smith.

May success attend our efforts this year, with an increase of integrity, spiritual light, and power, is the prayer of

Your coworker in Christ,

J. R. LAMBERT.

N. B.—Those who are in charge of "fields of labor," or sub-missionaries in charge, should publish their permanent post office addresses in the Herald, so that all will know where to reach them. My permanent address will be Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa. All those who are not doing missionary work should when writing for information, inclose a stamp. This has been usually overlooked by those writing to me, which has caused a heavy draw, at times, for stamps. For instance, a brother applies for a mission, but is not appointed. He then writes for the "reasons why" he "was not appointed."

J. R. L.

*To the Officers and Members of the Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia, and Eastern Kentucky Mission; Greeting:—*Having been appointed in charge of the above-named mission for the current conference year, I herewith take this method of soliciting your hearty support and cooperation, that together we may be able to accomplish a work for the Master that will meet the approval of our heavenly Father.

The following ministers have been assigned to the mission and will labor as follows, for the ensuing quarter: R. Etzenhouser, W. H. Garrett, A. H. Mills, Pittsburg and Kirtland district; J. Moler and M. T. Short, Ohio district; J. L. Goodrich and G. H. Godby, West Virginia and Eastern Kentucky; F. C. Smith and Francis Ebeling, Virginia; D. L. Shinn, West Virginia and Pittsburg and Kirtland districts.

We sincerely trust that the Saints will heartily support these brethren by their faith and prayers, and also see, according as the law directs, that their wants are supplied. "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me, and the same will feed you, and clothe you, and give you money. And he who feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward: and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple: by this you may know my disciples."—D. C. 83: 16. And it will be well to bear in mind the present depleted condition of the treasury. The Bishop's agents for the mission are: L. W. Powell, Temple, Lake County, Ohio; S. J. Jeffers, Arbaugh, Vinton County, Ohio; J. Beall, Goose Creek, West Virginia; Isaac Coffman, New Hope, Augusta County, Virginia. I have made the discovery of late, that a number of the Saints have been sending their tithes and offerings to the Bishop, directly, thus failing to encourage the men whom we promised to sustain as agents. It is to be hoped that we all will endeavor to obey the temporal law by imparting of our substance as the Lord shall prosper us. We feel confident that if the presidents of districts and branches will keep the local forces in line, and the missionaries attend faithfully to their calling, our present year's work will be crowned with success.

Praying our heavenly Father's peace and blessing to abide with us,

I remain your co-worker in Christ,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

*To the Saints in the Southeastern Mission; Greeting:—*As you see I am appointed to labor in the Southeast again this year, my desire is to do all I can for the advancement of this great work. All Saints in my field of labor are requested to write me, Garland, Alabama, care of J. G. Vickery, if you desire my labors during the year.

I expect to confine my labors to Alabama and Mississippi mostly, as I do not think best to scatter from Dan to Beersheba, unless in case of necessity. But I will try and reach every place I can. Bro. T. C. Kelley, missionary in charge, and Bro. D. E. Tucker are acquainted with the work in Kentucky and Tennessee. I am not, therefore think it best to turn that part of the mission over to them.

I think of going home in September, Texas—but will put in all my time until then. The summer is the best time to hold meetings in the South, hence I do not want to lose any time from now until summer is over,

In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

The office of temptation is to teach us our need of Christ.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints and Friends in Minnesota and the Dakotas; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Every week brings us nearer the 20th of June, at which time we are to meet at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, to hold a reunion. Are we all getting ready for the occasion? Remember the new tent, and all contribute, as requested in the other notice.

We want this meeting to be a success in every particular. President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley will be with us. Bro. A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, with all his assistants will be present to break the bread of life and feed the hungry souls of men with the heavenly manna that never gets old nor becomes stale to the lover of right doing. The committee has secured the services of Sr. Arra Way to preside at the organ, she to select her assistant and also chorister.

Please come and assist us in the effort to save mankind and to have our own spiritual strength renewed. The committee will see what board can be had at and report in due time. Hay and straw will be on hand at prices to suit the times. Those wishing to camp in tents and who have not purchased their outfit will do well to write E. A. Nunn, Lock Box 175, Detroit, Minnesota, and get his prices on tents.

Dear Saints, will you please come to our aid in purchasing the new tent, as it will be but a small amount apiece. Let all cast in their mites and the good Lord will bless it to our good. Send all money to W. W. Gould, Battle Lake, Minnesota.

Come one and all to the great reunion of God's people at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, on the 20th day of June, at ten a. m.

Yours in bonds of truth,

I. N. ROBERTS,
Secretary of Committee.

LAMONI, IOWA, April 22.

SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

At the session of conference just closed Bro. Columbus Scott, of the Presidents of Seventy, was selected to preside over the Second Quorum of Seventy, and he is now also a member of the same. It will be gratifying to you to learn that we are now fully organized. Ten new names were recommended for ordination and to be enrolled in Second Quorum when ordained. They are: Richard T. Walters, F. M. Slover, Swen Swensen, M. F. Gowell, C. L. Snow, J. L. Goodrich, Joseph Ward, S. D. Condit, W. W. Blanchard, Holmes J. Davison; and that of S. W. Simmons was ratified anew. Two of the above were ordained at conference. Provisions were made that the missionaries in charge of the respective fields where the others reside should attend to their ordination.

Will the brethren, as soon as they are ordained, please send me the items thereof and their permanent address and I will forward license at once. Will all the brethren please keep a complete record of all labor done that we may have a full report next spring? Our record so far has been commendable. Let us labor to make it even better. The permanent address of the president, Columbus

Scott, is Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa; that of the secretary, No. 420 Harrison Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa. If you desire information and write either of us it will be gladly furnished.

T. W. WILLIAMS, Sec.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, April 20, 1896.

NOTICES.

To Whom it May Concern:—I have received word from some who subscribed for the Plain Dealer, stating that they failed to receive their papers. And some of these complaints have come several days after conference closed. Had these persons notified me as per my request through Herald they would have got their papers, hence there is no one to blame but themselves. Out of one thousand and one hundred papers that were sent daily, only about twenty-five complaints have come it hand. Several did not give full addresses. Some did not give name, some failed to give town, and we had to depend on postmarks, etc. Hence it is not strange that some did not get their papers. Some orders just arrived as conference closed. These orders have been duplicated as far as possible.

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

TEMPLE, Ohio.

To Whom it May Concern:—By agreement between Bro. Heman C. Smith and myself, Bro. John T. Davies, of Netawaka, Kansas, will continue to do ministerial work in his former field, Kansas, until such time as the recovery of his wife from illness will enable him to depart for his new field, the Rocky Mountain mission.

J. R. LAMBERT.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Our next quarterly conference of the Alabama district will convene at Lone Star branch, in Monroe County, May 23, at ten a. m., as appointed at our last conference. Come one, come all. Bro. J. D. Erwin will be with us. We desire a good representation and a good conference. J. G. VICKERY, Pres.

The Nevada district conference will convene at Fairview schoolhouse, Carson Valley, on June 7, 1896, at eleven a. m. Saints, come; one and all. Bring the Spirit of God with you. Also a general invitation to all is given.

DIED.

BLAIR.—The sudden stroke by which Father Time laid one of Israel's nobles low, and removed one half of the late presiding quorum of the church militant to the realms of paradise, is felt and mourned deeply wherever the knowledge of its great loss has gone. The one of whom we thus write was American by birth, but Scotch by descent, and was named by his parents William Wallace, a name that to some who are familiar with the history of that noble Scotchman, his faithfulness to principle, and his integrity to his chief, will seem almost prophetic as they recall President Blair's devotion to principle and his personal integrity to the prophet of Israel whose counselor Divine Wisdom had chosen him to be.

William Wallace Blair was born at Holly, in Oneida County, in the State of New York, on October 11, 1828, and died April 18, 1896. He had therefore lived in the flesh 67 years, 6 months, and 7 days, filling a little less than the proverbial threescore and ten of earthly pilgrimage; but as his life was not one of those which are measured by years so much as by deeds, we feel assured that he filled his mission ere he took his departure, and has gone to his reward.

Our departed brother, notwithstanding the position to which he attained in the Church of Christ, charged himself with being, at one time, quite skeptical on religious questions. His skepticism, however, was not an innate quality of the man. He loved truth and admired consistency in doctrine. He believed that if the Bible was to be accepted as containing the word of God, then all so-called Christian dogmas, as well as the ethics and personnel of Christians, should be weighed and measured by it. Unsatisfied with what he heard, disappointed in what he saw, he lost faith in professing Christians, and in Christian professions. But when he heard "the eleventh hour message" delivered by William Smith, a brother of the Palmyra Seer, he accepted it in good faith, and adhered to it thenceforth to the end. It was to him the Good Shepherd's voice. This was in 1851. Like others under Mr. William Smith's leadership, he looked forward to and hoped for the restoration of the church to the order and system of government it was under before the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and from which he believed there had been serious apostasy. In consequence of this hope he took an active interest in the organization known as the Reorganized Church, and became identified with it on April 7, 1857. This was during a conference held at Blanchardville, Wisconsin. He was there ordained a high priest; this on the day following his admission to church fellowship. On October 7, 1858, he was ordained an apostle.

As an apostle and a traveling minister, he was conscientiously and almost continuously employed. As such he was, perhaps, the most widely known minister of the church in America. Personally, he had many friends, and by his kindness of heart and suavity of manner he made friends for the cause wherever he went, as well as for himself, and by implication, for his compeers, and for every worthy representative of the cause he so well loved and so worthily adorned.

As a counselor, an official character the Divine Leader alone can determine his value in, little can be said by man. His reverent and pacificatory disposition would of necessity prevent him from attempting to lead where he should but counsel and guide, equally as his manly and courageous qualities would preserve him from sycophancy, prevent him from fawning, and deter him from offering the adulations which would mark the policy of him who would rather seek for meeds of praise from his chief than the establishment of what in his judgment would involve honor and truth. To stand by one holding the important position of President of the Church in all the world, to drink sufficiently deep draughts of inspiration to sufficiently grasp every new truth revealed, to be competent to teach such truth, to defend it against opposition, and its revelator against the suggestions of doubt, and the objections of unbelief, requires spirituality, judgment, firmness, and courage such as few men possess; but President Blair possessed all these qualities in an eminent degree. The church has lost an able and loving representative; but none will feel the loss more keenly than the one of his quorum who is left to mourn alone. We all deplore our loss; but confident that He who has taken our brother does all things well, we meekly bow and pray for grace to say from the deepest depths of the heart's fountain, "Thy will, O God, be done." Israel has thousands of good men; but had only one William W. Blair.

Brother Blair was married to Miss Elizabeth J. Doty, at Dixon, Illinois, on December 25, 1849. Seven children blessed this union, one of whom, a daughter, preceded him in "the goodly land."

The editorial notice in the last number of the Herald gives an account of his sickness and the manner of his death.

The faithful wife of forty-seven years' companionship, and the six children—five sons and one daughter—who remain behind, have the deepest sympathy of all who knew the worthy husband and father. He has but gone a little while before. M. H. F.

EHLERS.—Ida Grace Ehlers, April 16, 1896, aged 5 years, 6 months, and 20 days. She was the family pet, a sweet, loving child. It was hard for her parents to give her up, but she has gone to join the host of which it is said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." Funeral at the German church, Elder J. T. Kinnaman preaching the sermon, assisted by C. P. Faul.

STONE.—Sr. Stephen Stone, of New Canaan, Connecticut, departed this life April 15, 1896, after a painful illness of about four weeks. Although many earnest prayers were made to our heavenly Father for her relief, yet for some cause best known to him the disease that had set in some two years ago continued to exert itself till death came, which was a welcome guest to our sister. For some days before she died she longed to see those who had gone before to the place of rest. Sister Stone had passed through some severe trials since she came in the church, yet her faith was firm. A number of friends and relations were present to pay the last tribute to our departed sister, who will be greatly missed from the family circle. The service was conducted by Elder Joseph Squire, Sr., of Brooklyn, New York.

SMITH.—In St. Louis, Missouri, March 25, 1896, Sr. Susie, wife of Bro. Samuel Smith. She was born in St. Louis, Missouri, August 11, 1866; was baptized by Elder Joseph Luff in 1893; April 30, 1895, was married to Bro. Smith at Oak Hill, Missouri. Is she dead? Ah no! She lives for us, her friends, her brothers and sisters in the church of God, and all those who were fortunate enough to know her, as a gentle spirit, without guile, whose memory sheds perfume as beautiful, as sweet as earthly flowers and as lasting as perennial bloom that sheds its fragrance now around her in the paradise of God. She lives in the young life she gave to her husband; she lives in his memory, and in the memory of her father, mother, sister, brother, friends, who now mourn their great loss. She lives in our assurance, because of her tried and unshaken faith in him who said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." The chapel in St. Louis was thronged by a tearful assembly, at her funeral, which was conducted by Elders W. W. Blair and M. H. Bond.

THE GREAT ENIGMA.

THE origin of Egyptian civilization has been the enigma of the world for the last twenty-five centuries. Presenting no historic or even mythic infancy, it appears before the world at once as a highly civilized and organic community centuries before Moses was a boy. Upon this subject Renan says: "Egypt has no archaic epoch, but suddenly takes its place in the world in all its matchless magnificence, without father and without mother, and as clean apart from all evolution as if it had dropped from the unknown heavens."

Would not an explanation at least feasible be found in the hypothesis that it received its civilization from some source no longer existing? Menes, the first historic figure in its long line of dynasties—the outlines of whose personality loom up waveringly indefinite but grandly impressive against the deep mythic background of prehistoric story—at least 4,500 B. C., conceived and executed enterprises, extorting the warmest admiration from the best engineers of the nineteenth century. Did he not alter the course of the Nile by vast embankments, to gain stable foundations other than in shifting sands for his sacred City of Memphis; construct the artificial lake of Moeris, 450 miles in circumference and 350 feet deep, as a reservoir for the waters of the Nile?

Look, too, at the colossal achievements of his successors, in architecture, sculpture, engineering, astronomical, political, medical, social, and military science, to say nothing of navigation and theology. Witness the ruins of the Labyrinth recorded by Herodotus, which had three thousand chambers, half of them above ground and half below, a combination of courts, chambers, colonnades, statues, and pyramids. Witness the wonders of the magnificent temple of Karnac, which still awakens our admiration—a temple, as Denon says, wherein the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris, could be set inside one of its halls and yet not touch the walls. Witness the sublime pyramids, originally built in honor of the sun god Ra, and for use as astronomical observatories, the splendors of Memphis, Thebes, and Heliopolis, of the Sphinx and the obelisks, the statuary, and the numerous temples, with the ruins of which the land is still filled.—Westminster Review.

BE PATIENT.

THE Bishop of Manchester, in a recent address to young men, advised them to be patient, be Patient. It is the hardest lesson in the world to learn, particularly for young people. Do your duty, and leave success to take care of itself, and then you will see the wisdom of the old proverb, "Everything comes to the man that can wait." And this is not only true with respect to social success, but it is even more true to the discipline of the intellect and the will.

You know, for instance, how hard it is to learn a difficult subject. All the ideas are unfamiliar, all the words are unfamiliar. We go on laboring month after month, and seem to make no way. Now, that disheartens and drives away nine students out of ten—the nine out of ten that will always be obscure people; but the tenth man goes on. He works harder and harder, he lets his mind play around the subject, he lets the idea of that subject soak into his brain, he is determined that nothing can possibly resist persistent effort, and one fine day a great flood of light comes in; he suddenly sees all about it; his work is easy, his work is delightful. Everybody says for him, "What an amazing amount of ability that young man has!" No, it was not ability, it was patient perseverance. The man had learned to labor and to wait.—Ex.

The rearing of silk worms and the production of silk during the years before the Revolution, promised to become one of the most important industries of America.

Among the coronation presents of Queen Elizabeth, a list of which is still preserved, two pairs of silk stockings are found. They were sent to her from Spain.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. Paper covers 10c.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

OBJECTIONS TO THE BOOK OF MORMON AND BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS ANSWERED AND REFUTED.

BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT

The author states and answers the leading criticisms made upon the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants that have been urged by opponents of the latter-day work since its inception.

In answering objections, other and general lines of defense are suggested.

The work is valuable, both as a specific vindication of the books named and as a general defense of the principles of Christianity.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

PREACHERS AND PLAGIARISM.

IT is a singular fact that the pulpit, which should be a model of propriety, is unenviably prolific in plagiarists. The latest instance, being that of the Rev. Dr. D. Parker Morgan, of New York, would be less important if it stood alone; but the fact is that it merely serves to remind the public of many similar cases, and to emphasize what seems to be a law of repetition in the work of the clergy. People have ceased to be surprised at the preaching of second-hand sermons. It is the expected that happens when a minister is caught at that sort of thing; and yet the minister should be the last man in the world to practice such a form of deception. The fact that it is very difficult to present religious truths in a new light is well understood, of course, and proper allowance should be made for it; but it does not justify the appropriation of other men's exact language and passing it off as original. There are certain similarities of thought and even of expression which must necessarily occur in a series of discourses by different men upon the same general subject; but when these similarities assume identicalness, they are not to be explained upon any other theory than that of deliberate plagiarism. The preacher is like other men in the respect that he does not hit upon the precise words of somebody else in a given relation without intention, and it is useless for him to enter that plea of defense or extenuation.

In the case of Dr. Morgan, it is refreshing to observe, there is no attempt to secure immunity by the familiar pretense of unconscious cerebration or assimilation. He frankly admits that he borrowed liberally from a sermon delivered about eight years ago by another clergyman, to whom he unfortunately referred as “a quaint old writer,” which was certainly a conscious falsehood. His explanation is to the effect that his labors during the week had been so exacting that the preparation of an original discourse was impossible, and so decided to “adapt” a published one that was probably better than he could have written. This is all very well as a confession, but he spoils it by insisting that his conduct was right. If he had told his congregation the truth to begin with, no harm would have been done, and there would have been no subsequent criticism. That was where he made his mistake and he cannot now rectify it by saying what he should have said before he was found out, and claiming the indulgence that he might properly have asked if he had chosen to do so instead of taking the chance that his fraud would escape detection. The fact is, manifestly, that his offense was premeditated, as such offenses always are; and it follows that there is nothing to be said of him except that he took what did not belong to him, and kept it until he was forced to give it up by the conclusive proof of his dishonesty.

There is reason for profound regret when a prominent preacher is thus convicted of kleptomania, to put it mildly. Such a deviation from the path of rectitude where the people look for the best examples of integrity is seized upon by the cynics and scoffers to discredit the cause of religion and impair the influence of its accredited teachers. It is not permissible for the clergy to take the least risk of being accused of plagiarism. An indifferent original sermon is preferable to a superior stolen one, and the preacher who is careful in the matter of avoiding coincidences that imply deception will win more respect and do more good than one who is less scrupulous as to that kind of service. The same rule applies, of course, to all classes of writers and speakers. There have been men who could afford to plagiarize, because they did it greatly and gave an added value to everything that they appropriated. But such men are not now in evidence, and the art of literary borrowing as they practiced it is no longer known in the world. It is still possible, however, for a conscientious man to express himself in an effective way without copying from anybody. The dictionaries are larger than they have ever been before, and there is no scarcity of new words to meet new occasions. In short, there is no excuse for plagiarism, and the pulpit in particular should be free from it under all circumstances.— Globe Democrat.

DR. HENSON ON “THE FLOOD.”

DR. P. S. HENSON preached his fourth sermon at the First Baptist Church, Chicago, on “Stumbling Blocks in the Bible,” taking for his theme “The Flood.” He said:—

“Singular it is that so many so-called scientists should scout with scornful incredulity the Bible story of the flood, when geology itself unequivocally testifies that the whole earth was once enveloped in water, and sea shells in multitudes are imbedded in mighty mountain ranges a thousand miles away from the sea. And considering that two-thirds of the earth's surface is covered with water, miles upon miles in depth, and considering the Titanic forces that are tugging at the earth's heart of fire, causing continual and sometimes sudden and violent upheavals and subsidences, the wonder is not there was a flood in the time of Noah, but rather that there has not been a flood in our time, and more frequent floods all along down the ages.

“But is it credible, a caviller may ask, that since the earth assumed its present configuration there has been a flood that covered the whole face of it, and every mountain top on the globe? We reply that to assume that the flood with its attendant geological convulsions did not materially change the configuration of the earth is practically to beg the question. There are scientists who maintain that all the dry land of the globe was originally contained in a single continent, but a little elevated above the sea level, and in that case but a little subsidence would have submerged the whole of it.

"But this is not a strained hypothesis to which Bible expositors are driven in order to defend the book. We are not obliged to suppose that the deluge covered all the earth. The object was to drown the race, and there was no occasion to roll the flood beyond the regions that the race had covered.

"True, the scriptures say every mountain under the heavens was submerged, and so they say, and without any falsehood, there went out to see John the Baptist 'Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan.' And we say after a snowfall in Chicago all the earth is wrapt in a wintry shroud, and yet at the very time there may be flowers blooming beneath soft skies in the sunny South. Nobody misunderstands such language, and nobody would misinterpret it if it were anywhere else than in the Scriptures.

"If the flood were only coextensive with the locality then inhabited by the race of man, then all the imaginary difficulty as to the sufficiency of the ark's capacity vanishes in a moment. Only the skeptic still makes merry over what seems to him the impossibility of one man's collecting so miscellaneous a menagerie under a single roof. And yet, how absurd such incredulity in the presence of facts with which all men are familiar!

"No valid argument from reason, science, or philosophy can be urged against the acceptance of the record of the Noachian deluge as veritable history, and yet it is more than history, for it is far-reaching typology and prophecy—for it was a profoundly significant foreshadowing of salvation by Jesus Christ—in whom, safely sheltered, they who have fled for refuge to the hope set before them in the gospel pass from the old world of sin and sorrow and condemnation and death, to a new life, glorified by the rainbow of God's covenant of mercy, and beautiful with the fruits of righteousness and peace."

THE BODY AND THE MIND.

In his article on "The Best Thing in the World," Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst discusses with forceful emphasis, physical development, and lends point to his argument by scintillating epigrams, some of which are here given:—

Asceticism and debauchery are companion branches sprung from one stalk.

Fidelity to physical conditions is the first thing for a man to think of who has any ambition to be a personal success, and not only the first thing for him to think of but the thing for him to seriously continue thinking of.

Those various anomalies of intellect classed under the general term of insanity have their grounds in some abnormal condition of the physical organism.

Climb high as we like our ladder will still require to rest on the ground; and it is probable that the keenest intellectual intuition, and the most delicate throb of passion would be carried so far, be discovered to have its connection with the rather material affair that we know as the body.

It is an interesting fact that all of those to whom Christ made his revelations were out-of-door men—men, therefore, presumably whose anatomy and physiology were not of a kind to interfere confusingly or becloudingly with their apprehension of the realities tendered to them.

Temperament is almost as important a factor in opinion as is the mind itself, and temperament is an affair of the body.

A NEW COLONY.

A PARTY of twenty-one Dunkards with their families are to move from Anderson, Indiana, to North Dakota in June, to found a model Dunkard colony. Two thousand acres of land have been purchased, and each family will have an allotment of about eighty acres for farming purposes. The houses will be built to form a village, and a fine church will be erected. The laws of the State will, of course, be observed, but the colony will also have a code of its own. Each member will be required to set aside a certain portion of all that he has for the support of the church and the colony as a whole. The intending emigrants are all well educated and thrifty.—Information.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints and Friends in Minnesota and the Dakotas; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Every week brings us nearer the 20th of June, at which time we are to meet at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, to hold a reunion. Are we all getting ready for the occasion? Remember the new tent, and all contribute, as requested in the other notice.

We want this meeting to be a success in every particular. President Joseph Smith and Bishop E. L. Kelley will be with us. Bro. A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, with all his assistants will be present to break the bread of life and feed the hungry souls of men with the heavenly manna that never gets old nor becomes stale to the lover of right doing. The committee has secured the services of Sr. Arra Way to preside at the organ, she to select her assistant and also chorister.

Please come and assist us in the effort to save mankind and to have our own spiritual strength renewed. The committee will see what board can be had at and report in due time. Hay and straw will be on hand at prices to suit the times. Those wishing to camp in tents and who have not purchased their outfit will do well to write E. A. Nunn, Lock Box 175, Detroit, Minnesota, and get his prices on tents.

Dear Saints, will you please come to our aid in purchasing the new tent, as it will be but a small amount apiece. Let all cast in their mites and the good Lord will bless it to our good. Send all money to W. W. Gould, Battle Lake, Minnesota.

Come one and all to the great reunion of God's people at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, on the 20th day of June, at ten a. m.

Yours in bonds of truth,
I. N. ROBERTS,
Secretary of Committee.

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 6, 1896.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH'S ADDRESS TO THE MINISTRY.

WE give herewith the address of President Joseph Smith to the ministry at the late Kirtland conference:—

There is a difference among the elders in the language used in administering in the rite of confirmation by the laying on of hands. While we would like to have a unity of thought and understanding regarding this rite brought about, I do not wish you to take what I shall say as a criticism upon any one of you; as I have only the good of all at heart.

The church which our ministry represents is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; hence those confirmed by them are confirmed into that church. Some use the term "Church of Christ;" some, "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints;" others say, "I confirm you into the Reorganized Church;" varying in terms in confirmation as in their prayers; though Jesus said, "After this manner pray ye," etc.

I suggest that in the administration of laying on of hands for confirmation those who administer in the rite confirm those being administered to "into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as the same has been reorganized in these last days by the command of God."

Again, some elders say, "We lay our hands upon you to confirm you." It is understood that that is what is intended to be done by such administration; hence, in the language of another's criticism made elsewhere, and of which I heard an elder speak at this conference, I suggest that the elders avoid the terms, "We lay on hands to confirm," and adopt the terms, "We lay hands upon you and confirm you," etc.

Again: I have noticed, and doubtless so have you, that some elders while administering in this rite, from the lack of thought, or because of embarrassment will address the candidate and the Lord alternately, and sometimes so often and so markedly as to provoke confusion in the minds of those present and listening; sometimes causing unfortunate comment. I suggest that anything to be said to the candidate be finished before using the name of or addressing the Lord in the necessary prayer of confirmation.

There is no act that we perform as ministers of Christ that is so solemn as the laying on of hands for the conferment of the rights of membership in the Lord, and the bestow-ment of the gift of the Holy Ghost; no act in which we should be so careful in word and conduct as in this administration.

The Apostle John in one of his epistles shows that the Father and the Son, and the Holy Ghost are one, and bear record in heaven, of that which is done on earth by those authorized to represent the Lord and administer in the rites of the gospel in accordance with the royal call and commission; and that the Spirit, and the water, and the blood bear witness in earth; and that these three agree in; that is, that whatsoever is done on earth in accordance with the command and will of God under the administration and direction of the Master is borne witness to on earth and recorded in heaven; the Spirit bearing witness below and record above; the work being one in earth and in heaven.

When brethren find themselves embarrassed when administering in laying on of hands, or even preaching, the best method of procedure is to go slow, pausing in speech, so far as can be without attracting undue attention, until the embarrassment passes, and then proceed with the work in hand. This is much better than to blunder along in an embarrassed condition, in which one is liable to make a great mistake.

The ordinance of baptism is one in the administration of which the greatest of care should be observed; every detail of the performance of the rite being carried out with a view to the utmost demands of propriety and the sense of solemnity that should always attend so sacred an ordinance.

The greatest care should be taken that nothing should occur calculated in any sense to mar the beauty and grandeur of the ceremony. Especially should this be the case in the baptism of those who are by nature timid, nervous, or afraid at the sight, or by the contact with water.

A few general rules, if remembered and observed, will greatly aid the elders in administering this rite. One is, that every part of the person being baptized should be fully immersed. If one is too hastily immersed, it is possible that the water may not come in contact with the whole body. The immersion should be carefully and deliberately performed; the administrator holding himself in control, as well as the candidate. A too hasty putting the person being baptized into and raising him out of the water, though it may splash the water over the head, face, and arms, may not be such a covering in the water as the nature of the rite demands.

Another rule is, that the administrator should enter the water with the candidate. The church has provided by conference action that baptisms performed where the candidate only is in the water, are not valid baptisms. The Scriptures say that John and Jesus both went down into the water. One brother was made to say, in the reporter's notes of yesterday, that it did not make any difference when one was baptized whether it was in water, beer, or wine, in which the person was baptized, the virtue being in the obedience to the command, and the immersion of the body in the element used. I do not know whether our brother was correctly reported or not, but this is sure: Jesus said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." To us it is water, and not wine nor beer. The Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants both teach this; and I fully believe in it, as it seems essential to the beauty and efficacy of the design of the rite.

When I get so old that I am afraid to get wet in attending to the ordinance of baptism with the one I baptize, I will yield that work to a younger and more capable man.

In regard to the manner of baptism. When I was a boy, I witnessed many baptisms. I saw the elder have a handkerchief tied around the waist of the candidate, or a belt was used. The elder took hold of this handkerchief or belt, as a help to raise the candidate from the water. The candidate would clasp the arm of the administrator. I have seen some of those thus baptized, loose their hold, and struggle in an unseemly way; the hold on handkerchief or belt fairly balancing the person being raised from the water, and a difficulty be experienced in raising them to an erect posture.

Unless the hands of the one being baptized are kept closed, and held by the administrator, they are apt to struggle and break away from the hold. The natural tendency of one strangling or gasping for breath, after immersion is to turn to the one baptizing, to grasp him. If the administrator has a firm and steady grasp upon the hands of the candidate, he can prevent much or all of that struggling, and will thus avoid any disturbing accident, or display of the person.

Before going into the water to baptize ascertain for yourself how deep and where the best spot for the purpose is. Then taking the candidate into the water to a sufficient depth, have the candidate clasp his own hands with fingers interlaced, then clasp the closed hands from the under side with one hand, which will enable you to hold the hands securely. After saying the formula, raise the hands to under the chin of the candidate, placing your free hand at the back of the neck; then place the head, hands, and person of the candidate wholly under the water. In raising the candidate up, all that is needful is for you to tip the head forward and raise both yourself and candidate to an erect position. The very natural tendency of the candidate is to rise, and it is a very easy matter to raise even a heavy or partly helpless person in the manner here stated.

handed, as it is better in baptizing to always have the candidate between the administrator and the audience, the administrator thus facing the audience. In baptizing in running water be sure and immerse the candidate with the head up the stream. The current will thus help to keep the clothing from becoming disarranged, and also aid the baptizer to raise the baptized to an erect position.

Some persons are subject to timidity and fright, and those who are easily frightened in approaching the water and going into it to be baptized should be carefully treated so as to create confidence in the administrator and overcome their nervous dread. To do this the elder should have confidence in himself, and, by his calm assurance, create like confidence in the candidate. To illustrate: I knew a sister who had been baptized into the church and lived as a member for eighteen years, and had never let her husband know that she had been baptized or belonged to the church. At length her husband died, still in ignorance of his wife's connection with the church. From long continued poor health she had become extremely nervous at the sight and sound of running water, being under the necessity of sitting down in the bottom of wagon or buggy and covering her head when crossing a stream of water. Several years after her husband's death she attended a meeting at Bro. Rogers', near Fox River, Illinois. She desired baptism, but expressed great dread of the water. I tried to reason with her, and finally told her that there would be baptism the next day at the ford, and that if she desired baptism, and would come down to the ford and give me her hand at the water's edge, I could baptize her and she experience no ill effects from her nervous trouble. She promised to come, and I assured her I would so manage that she need have no fear of the water. She came with her daughter, and stood among others on the water's side. After I had baptized several persons, I walked up to her without previous warning and said to her, "Come," looking her quietly in the eyes. She put her hand in mine, and walked with me into the water as quietly and trustfully as a child could trust a father. I baptized her, led her to the shore, and there left her, she having neither sighed nor shown any other sign of nervousness or dread. She afterwards told me that it was a great wonder to her that she was not in anywise afraid or disturbed; and seemed to be a little bit in awe of me because of the influence I had exercised to prevent her from being so disturbed. All I had done was to get her confidence in me as a servant of the Master.

Now there is another thing: In prayer service, and in leading a prayer meeting it is not uncommon to hear an elder say, "Now friends, do your duty, don't go away until you have borne your testimony. Be brief, don't occupy too much time." I remember once hearing an elder who took twenty-five minutes out of the possible hour and a half allotted to the prayer service, in telling the audience to do their duty and exhorting them to be brief. It is certainly want of thought that will cause an elder to so occupy the time of the many assembled on such an occasion. If a man has anything to say let him say it at once, and be done with it. Don't say, "I want to say," so and so; but say the thing wanting to be said. There are two hundred people here, now suppose it was a prayer and testimony service. If each were to speak one minute it would take two hundred minutes, or three hours and twenty minutes; if two minutes each it would be six hours and forty minutes; if one occupied five or more minutes, it must cut off a great many from speaking at all. It makes me nervous for a presiding officer to say to a congregation like that, "Let every one speak, or pray; you will be under condemnation if you go away without bearing your testimony," when he knows that it is impossible, if he will only think what he says. Elders will say, "Now, do your duty; all of you speak. If you do your duty all will be blessed." If under such injunction each of two hundred people should take five minutes how many hours would it take when such two hundred people were present? If you stop to think you will not tell two hundred people to get their testimonies into an hour and a half of time.

There is another thing that is worth speaking of, though I sometimes am guilty of it myself, and that is the using of slang phrases in the stand in preaching, and among the Saints. Anything that will reflect on your standing as ministers of the gospel and detract from your usefulness, should be avoided. To illustrate this: I once used in the stand before an intelligent audience the expression, "I can't see it." It was at one time a very common slang phrase. It caused me great mortification at the time, and I was severely rebuked by my feelings for my carelessness in using it as I did.

I think we should cultivate the faculty of expressing our thoughts as directly and as neatly as possible.

While I do not want to be over nice or hypercritical, I do think that we should not drive people from us by our ill manners and uncouth speech, but draw them to us by the exhibition of kindness of manner and attractiveness of speech. I believe in making one's self understood by the use of proper emphasis and gesture; but if a speaker drives his hand down on the stand so hard as to make the church ring, and in such way that those listening cannot hear the closing words or sentence of what he has said, I think it is a very unwise thing to do. To illustrate: A good old Scotch lady was asked how she liked the new minister. To this she replied that she did not like him as well as she did the old one; for the old one "had not been there three months until he had danged the insides out of three Bibles," referring to his habit of pounding on the Bible lying on the stand, with his fist. Any such emphasizing sounds are liable to cause the hearer to lose the force of the passage intended to be emphasized by confusing the hearing, thus losing the sense of what is said.

In all services, of whatever kind, always take thought and cognizance of the conditions, and strive to see to it that all the preliminaries have been arranged in such a way that nothing shall be likely to occur to disturb the solemnity of the occasion, or mar the beautiful effect of any ordinance that may be engaged in.

We witnessed the baptism of a number of young people to-day. It was a pleasing and impressive occasion. I remember once standing by the waters of a milldam in which I had baptized some sixteen persons, when a brother brought his little daughter to me for baptism. She was quite small, like one of those baptized by Bro. Bond; so small indeed that I hesitated. However, I asked him her age. She was over eight years. I then asked him whether she had been instructed in regard to baptism; he answered, "You can question her." And I did; and was astonished at the answers to the questions I asked of her. She gave correct replies in regard to the mission of Jesus, his death, the object and result of baptism. I was constrained to say as did one of old, "Can any man forbid water" that she should not be baptized? I baptized her, and she grew to womanhood, filling her place in the church and society, as a Christian should.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENCY.

By action of a Council of the President, and Brethren A. H. Smith, Herman C. Smith, J. W. Gillen, Joseph R. Lambert, and Joseph Luff, and the Bishop; Bro. Joseph F. Burton, of San Benito, California, was appointed to the Society Island mission, to take charge. It is expected that Bro. Burton, will as soon as practicable, proceed to the islands and enter upon the active discharge of his duties as minister in charge.

Bro. Burton was appointed to the Pacific Slope mission at conference; but subsequent information and consideration seemed to make it needful that some one be sent from the States to the Islands, and Brother Burton consenting to go, he was chosen and appointed.

We request all who may be affected by this appointment, to aid Bro. Burton in the needful provisions in getting ready to go, and to assist in the prosecution and success of the mission.

Efforts will be made to get Bro. James B. Price, of Oakland, to take the field in the Pacific Slope mission in place of Bro. Burton.

Bro. T. J. Sheldon, of Rock Island, Illinois, has been appointed by the Presidency, Elder F. G. Pitt, missionary in charge concurring, to labor in the Northern Illinois field. His address is No. 2512, 8½ Avenue. Bro. Sheldon is a young man, and we believe will make a good record in the field, if he continues humble and faithful, as he now gives promise to do.

Bro. Henry C. Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, has been appointed by the Presidency, Elder Alexander H. Smith, of the Twelve, missionary in charge, concurring, to labor in the Wisconsin field, with headquarters at Rhinelander, Wisconsin.

Bro. Smith expects to get into his field at an early day.

WE are receiving letters from all over the country, written by elders and members of the church, expressing the greatest sorrow for the death to the life of earth of Bro. W. W. Blair; and containing assurances of the deepest sympathy with the President, the family, and the general ministry among whom the official life of President Blair was passed for so many years.

To the writers of these letters of condolence and sympathy we join the family of President Blair in returning the sincerest thanks; because the earnestness and sincerity of these assurances of sympathy are known to convey but faintly what the Saints so universally feel in this visitation of death.

Memorial services have been and are being held in various branches, in which the grief-stricken ranks of the Master's forces gather and publicly express their grief at the loss from the field of one so long tried, so faithful, so true. As expressed by Bro. James Crabb, himself no laggard soldier of the great army:—

One of our very best soldiers has left the earthly ranks to join the heavenly throng; and who will stand in his stead; that remains to be seen. God alone can give the needed help. Let us not mourn as those who have no hope.

One of these letters, written to Sr. Blair by Sr. S. C. Good, of Chicago, at whose house President Blair spent his last night of earth-life and ate his last meal, is a kindly worded epistle descriptive of the visit; and giving some of the details of how President Blair was attacked and how cheerfully and manfully he bore his distress. This letter Sr. Blair permitted us to read; and in a note accompanying it, says:—

I am very grateful to all the dear Saints that have written me expressing their sympathy. A friend in need, the Lord has given me peace.

So may the same loving Friend give peace to all. Blessed be his holy name.

TWO OF A NAME.

A BROTHER sends us a clipping from a New York City paper stating that a "Mormon mission" has been located in Brooklyn, of which Elder Samuel W. Richards, of Utah, is the presiding genius; and that Elder Richards was acting under the "direct authority from Joseph Smith, the present head of the church." From this clipping we excerpt the following:—

Joseph Smith the present successor of the prophet and head of the Mormon church, has within the last few days paid a visit to the Brooklyn mission in his official capacity. He expressed himself as being more than pleased with the success of the work, and in an interview made some interesting statements in regard to Mormonism and the followers of the prophet.

He said: "There is absolutely no truth in the rumor that we are sending converts from Brooklyn to our settlements in Utah and Mexico. We already have a large population there, and it is constantly being augmented by arrivals from Europe, where we have a number of missionaries. Our mission in Brooklyn is a permanent one, and as converts are gained in other parts of the east more missions will probably be started.

"Of one thing be assured: We, as Mormons, court the fullest investigation. There is no secret about our professions of faith. Polygamy is now contrary to the laws of the United States and is no longer a necessary part of our faith. We believe as those of the Christian church in Jesus Christ and in his commandment that 'Ye shall have faith in his son Jesus Christ.' From the scripture we learn that we must believe in God and worship him in the name of Jesus Christ if we wish to be saved."

It may possibly mislead some, this confounding of names; as, if it should be thought from the reading of this notice of this mission of the Utah Church in Brooklyn that Joseph Smith, the son of the Palmyra Seer, the present head of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, had been in Brooklyn making statements to reporters of the New York press, it would be a great mistake, as this man has not been in Brooklyn for several years, and has had nothing to do with directing Elder Samuel W. Richards in his work there.

The mistake is not hard to understand, for the Patriarch Hyrum Smith, had a son whose name is Joseph Fielding Smith; and it is possible that this man, who is one of the presidents of the Church in Utah, may have been in Brooklyn, on this mission affair, (though we doubt it,) and careless and uninformed reporters could easily misunderstand how to discriminate between the two Joseph Smiths. This Joseph F. Smith is our cousin in the flesh; a man of brain and push; thoroughly in touch and sympathy with Utah's religion and philosophy, a man of considerable ability and standing in the State of Utah. We hope that President Joseph F. Smith will not take umbrage if the news reporter mistook him for the son of his uncle rather than of his father, if such mistake was made.

The Saints will do well to remember that there are two Joseph Smiths, connected with this so-called "Mormon movement" as leading men; one, the son of Joseph Smith, the Palmyra Seer; the other, the son of Hyrum Smith, the Patriarch, the brother of the Seer. The name of the first referred to is Joseph Smith, who is president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and resides at Lamoni, Decatur County, Iowa; the other is Joseph F. (Fielding) Smith, is second counselor to Pres. Wilford Woodruff, and one of the three presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints commonly called "Mormons," and resides in Salt Lake City, Utah. By remembering this it will be easy to understand allusions like the one made in this notice of the Utah mission in Brooklyn.

CARPENTER ORDERED TO LEAVE.

BRINTON CITIZENS ANGERED AT HIS DEFENSE OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

BRINTON, Mich., April 24.—Brinton has a congregation of Latter Day Saints, or followers of Joe Smith. Joseph Musser, of Boyne City, gave a series of lectures here, attacking their teachings, and Elder J. A. Carpenter, of Beaverton, replied, roasting other denominations, especially the Roman Catholic. The angry people at once sent Carpenter a written notice to leave the place before the setting of another sun or suffer the consequences. There is trouble in several homes on account of religious differences.

The foregoing notice is cut from the Kansas City World for April 24.

We sincerely hope that if Bro. Carpenter was ordered to leave Brinton, it was not for abuse heaped upon any other denomination; though we can readily understand how a moderate comparison of statistical information concerning defections from grace in the churches as contrasted with the Saints would be construed into abuse. It is not pleasant for mud slingers to be met with their own weapons. We hope the alleged reason for ordering Bro. Carpenter to leave Brinton is a mistake, or a misstatement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—Is any officer in the church warranted in teaching that if a member has not received the Holy Ghost after baptism that said member should refrain from partaking of the sacrament until he received the Holy Ghost?

Ans.—The sacrament is the right of all baptized believers; and the right to partake of it accrues to all without the reception of the Holy Ghost as a prerequisite qualification. Anyone who regards the church as the "Lord's body" is entitled to partake; and no one should teach to the contrary, as we believe. We should therefore answer the above question, No.

Q.—Are the prison to which Christ went to preach to the spirits, and the paradise of which Christ spoke when he said to the thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise," one and the same place? and do the spirits of the Saints, the spirits of the good and the bad, all go to the same place?

A.—We understand them to be two separate places; the one, the place where the spirits of the bad and the wicked go to wait the lapse of time decreed and the divine pleasure of God, and called the prison; the other, the place of rest, contentment, and hope, to which the spirits of the Saints and the good go to wait the transpiring of events that shall bring in the resurrection of the just and the millennium, called paradise, place of rest.

WOMEN will not be admitted as delegates to the next General Conference of the M. E. Church, according to the following:—

CLEVELAND, O., April 23.—Women will not be admitted as lay delegates to the big Methodist Episcopal General Conference which meets here next month. Word was received here to-day that the North Dakota conference had voted against the admission of women. This conference was the last one to vote on the question and as a result the proposition has met with defeat.

In a cold prayer meeting the back seats are the warmest.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. W. S. PENDER, Dispatch, Kansas, March 30:—

I enclose you herewith an "interview" which you are at liberty to publish in Herald, or make any other use of you wish. Thought it might be of some value. Major Brooks is a man of considerable influence; is very liberal in his views, and is a friend of ours. If you publish the interview, please send him a copy of the Herald containing the publication of it. I begin a seven nights' discussion here (Chandler schoolhouse) to-night; four nights, two hours each night, on Book of Mormon; three nights on Campbellite Church. My opponent's name is Rev. F. Osborn. He appears to be a gentleman. Will write results later.

Bro H. P. Curtis, laboring in Texas, secured an excellent notice of the work of the Reorganized Church in the Daily Express, of San Antonio, for April 26, of which Franklin Price was the writer. Bro. Curtis seems to be quite alive in the work; in a note accompanying the papers he writes:—

I am well and busy striving to put this work where it belongs. "Hail the day when success shall be complete."

Bro. M. H. Bond, St. Louis, Missouri, April 29:—

Returned yesterday from conference via Michigan. Spoke in Grand Rapids seven times. Good audiences; excellent interest; the work should be looked after by a first-class man. Bro. Grant expects to return soon. He has done a good work there.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRAYER is requested for Sr. S. E. Olson, of Newell, Vista County, Iowa, who is afflicted and in need. Request sent by her sister, Sr. M. A. Wilcox, of Blake Mills, Ohio.

Sr. Alice M. Joslyn, of Greenbush, Michigan, writes that her aunt, Mrs. Thomas Horne, living at Plympton, near Warwick, West Ontario, not far from Watford, would like to hear the gospel. She requests some of the ministry to visit that locality and call on Mrs. Horne.

Brn. J. C. Clapp and A. Haws left Lamoni for their fields of labor on Wednesday, the 29th. Bro. J. F. Burton left for California, via Independence, Missouri, on Thursday, the 30th. Brn. I. N. Roberts and E. A. Stedman left for Minnesota the same date. Bro. Columbus Scott went to his field in the Des Moines district on the 2d inst.

Bro. B. F. Ordway has an advertisement of a cure for the tobacco habit, with which he says he has reached results for good. Those who have failed to find deliverance from the habit may find just what they need in this remedy. Others testify to its effectiveness in freeing them from tobacco slavery.

Bro. A. B. Moore, who has been laboring in Texas for the past few years, is at Lamoni, en route to Montana, where he will locate for a time.

Five persons were killed, three fatally and seventeen badly injured, and great destruction of property caused by a cyclone in Clay County, Kansas, on the 25th ult.

Wind and rainstorms caused much damage to property at and near Waterloo and Grinnell, Iowa, and Sheboygan and Marinette, Wisconsin, April 29. Severe storms attended by similar damage were reported from Nebraska, South Dakota, and Northern Iowa, on the 28th. The little town of Ephiphany, South Dakota, was entirely destroyed—not a building escaped.

The Herald Office has received several public documents lately sent by the Hon. W. P. Hepburn, Congressman from the Eighth District, of Iowa. Mr. Hepburn has shown himself to be quite friendly to the people whom the HERALD represents, and has our thanks for several acts of kindness, which will long be remembered.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"I look forward to the time when the impulse to help our fellows shall be as immediate and as irresistible as that which I feel to grasp something when I am falling."

DON'T SCOWL.

WE have many times met with people whose faces would have been beautiful if they had not been disfigured by scowls. It was never designed by the Author of our being that we should thus disfigure ourselves. We will boldly repeat it, it never was. Beauty is one prominent characteristic manifested in all his works, and we believe that it is pleasing to him for us to retain our beauty, and especially the beauty of a pleasant expression, and thereby prevent the formation of wrinkles and scowls. We should never cover them up by the use of cosmetics and dyes, but by refraining from all habits that prematurely cause them, such as drawing the face unnecessarily in laughter, and yielding frequently to irritable impulses, and letting them settle into a chronic state instead of rising above them. The emotions of the brain and heart are photographed on the countenance, and those who give attention to our expressions can readily know what kind of emotions we have generally indulged in. They will as surely leave their peculiar impressions on the face as a potter's instruments leave their impressions on the clay.

We have often been surprised, and sometimes disgusted, to see young people excessively indulge in scowls when there was no cause, only, perhaps, some little wish was not favorably met. We expect time to leave its impressions on our faces as well as on all matter, but we do not think that it is our duty to unnecessarily assist in the matter, for in all probability he will perform the work as soon as we are prepared for it.

What is more beautiful than a fair countenance? It matters not if one's features are plain or a little irregular, if they wear smiles they will soon become attractive and even beautiful.

"I feel so sad, so disappointed, so vexed, or so sick," says not only one but many. "I can't help scowling, and I'm looking prematurely old in spite of myself." But if the minister and his wife or any friend you consider a superior should call, your scowls are laid aside, only the footprints are visible. By all means one must appear amiable in the presence of company, if she is irritable in the family the remaining portion of the day: so says, or so acts, custom. The destiny of all the powers of the mind and the body are controlled by the will power, as much as the destiny of the ship and the cargo are controlled by the helm. O, if we could keep a steady helm all the way through the voyage, as well as on particular occasions, how much better our lives would be!

Let us not store away our smiles for visitors and public assemblies, but bring them out and use them for family benefit, and in a short time the twinkle of cheer will make bright the countenance as the stars brighten the blue expanse of the firmament. Shopkeepers always exhibit their articles of trade; in like manner our words and expressions exhibit our goods within, and that, too, in an honest manner, whether we will it or not.

SR. ALMIRA.

P. S.—I am of a nervous temperament, but do not wear scowls, so can conscientiously preach on that subject.

LITTLE DUTIES.

"TREAD not upon the flowers while reaching for the stars."

How many, many times has the force of that quotation been realized when we review the past and see all the blessings and opportunities we have allowed to pass unnoticed.

Human life is nothing, except as the years, months, days, hours, moments, and even the little seconds have been made great by the accomplishment of their required duty. Each moment of life has some duty which man must perform in its proper time or suffer the disastrous results in the time yet to come. The greatest victories have not been gained by unusual brain power, but by persistence. The most successful man in life is the one that realizes the necessity of doing each duty in its proper time and place. It matters little how great energy a man may possess, if he works only "by fits and starts" he can accomplish little in comparison to what he could do by steady, methodical work. It is the man that never rushes and never lags behind that does the substantial work, and in the end finds a glorious result of his tireless labors.

A little thought convinces us that this is as true of the spiritual as of the temporal work. It is the little things, moment by moment, that build or destroy the perfect character. Those who have succeeded in attaining this character are those that have had their eyes ever open to the little duties and the golden opportunities lying about the pathway of life. Others we see traveling along life's highway with their eyes turned always to the rear. They are the ones that see nothing in the future or the present, because they look so obstinately into the past and cry, "O, had I only known what blessings and rare opportunities were mine, I would have appreciated them while I had them." But still they prefer to march on with their faces to the rear, rather than to look into the future and gather those fair flowers as they come, hoping always and trusting that God will deal kindly with them.

There are others also that journey onward with their faces turned skyward—they see the stars and all the countless beauties of the heavens, and believe earthly things too insignificant for their use, so spend their time in a vain endeavor to pluck the stars in time to ornament their crowns in eternity, and have no knowledge of the beautiful lilies being trodden beneath their feet, or the little children about their pathway that gather the lilies.

We see about us on every hand the little opportunities for a word of cheer to some one, and these little things are considered of no account. Ever before the eyes like an endless panorama pass the want and misery, crime and shame of human life. There are those that are starving for bread and dying for spiritual food, each and every one a brother or sister in God's great family, yet there is no one to relieve their misery, cheer the darkened life, or point the wayward soul to the love and mercy of Heaven. Man knows not the law of mercy while he still spurs to fill his idle moments in an effort to lessen their burdens or brighten their gloom with a knowledge of a better life. Many of these are the little duties that lie around our pathway, and being well performed, some prove of great consequence while others seem to yield no result, but nevertheless we are doing our duty and plucking the flowers as we travel onward.

I can well remember my experience as a child gathering the early spring flowers. I did not wish to spend my time picking each solitary flower I found, but was ambitious to go further where they would be found in abundance, and often I would be disappointed by finding no more. But the bitterest part of it all was to know that I had no time to go back and gather the single ones, but must go without my bouquet, when I might have had one had I not been so greedy to find them more plentiful elsewhere.

The disposition of the child is often found in the man or woman. We forget the daily blessings in longing for something greater, and lose sight of the little duties in hoping by one great bound to form a character that will be honorable before men and acceptable to God. We forget that the character is the result of long years of patience, self-crucifixion, and a loyalty to the smallest duty of the shortest moment, and would we have a perfect character we can hope to gain it by no other means than this. If it require all of man's life, he has done well if he builds his character thus, with every element in its proper place, and he can lay down his tools whenever his Master may call, with the consciousness that he has done his best.

THE SILENT BELL.

IN an interesting volume, "Notes of Travel in Northern Europe," the author relates that when seven or eight hundred feet under ground in one of the mines of Falun, Sweden, the sound of a muffled bell attracted his attention and excited his curiosity.

What was it for, striking every moment? It meant that all the pump works were in order; for if any of the long pumping arms should get out of order that dreadful bell would cease to be heard, and by its silence give the necessary alarm, the cessation of sound proving a more striking warning than the clanging of gongs or the clash of trumpets.

There are many places where silence is ominous, and should create alarm. There is the silence of conscience, that warning voice which God implants within the soul. Once conscience was heeded as the voice of God, but it has been disregarded, neglected, forgotten, and at last the bell strikes no more; all is silent; but it is the silence of danger, and should alarm the careless soul.

This is the silence of enmity; when foes have ceased threatening and denouncing, and with smiles and composure have gone quietly to work to accomplish some deadly purpose. Their silence is like the silence that precedes the tempest or the cyclone. By and by the cloud will burst. Woe to him who has been unwatchful or is unready for the worst.

One night in the summer of 1882, while crossing the Atlantic in the steamer Hanoverian, while lying in my stateroom, there came a sudden hush. The screw of the steamer, which had been steadily revolving day after day and night after night, suddenly was silent. The steamer had stopped in mid-ocean, hundreds of miles from land. There were some twelve hundred souls on board, besides the sixty-five little lasses and laddies from the orphan homes of Scotland, who were in our especial charge, and in the case of disaster there was abundant reason for care, if not for anxiety; and the silence that reigned was sufficient to awaken concern.

We hastened on deck to see what was the matter. We were among icebergs! Looking here and there, there were not less than a dozen of the monsters around us. Grand, massive, majestic, they lifted their icy forms on the right hand and on the left; and if our new iron steamship should strike one of them it would crush like an eggshell against the mighty mass.

But no harm came to us. The God of the sea and of the land was guiding our way, and the God of the fatherless, whose mercies we sought in song and prayer and praise, morning by morning and evening by evening, watched over the wanderers on the sea, and a path was cleared before us. The vessel did not need to turn to the right hand or the left, but went straight on its way till the danger was passed; and so in due time we safely reached our haven. But we did not soon forget the sensations of that hour when we were alarmed by that portentous silence, and aroused to a sense of impending danger.

Let us be warned by silence, and let us learn to beware of the cry of "Peace, peace, when there is no peace;" and remember that silence may sometimes be more ominous than tumult, and that the dangers that steal on so quietly and unperceived are often greater than those of which we are forewarned by tumults and alarms.—Selected.

PIGEON, Iowa.

Dear Sisters:—While reading the letters in the Home Column I felt impressed to send in my mite if perchance it should help others as others have helped and strengthened me. I love to read the letters from my sisters, for they cheer and help me when I am sad and cast down and need a word of cheer. I will relate a dream I had some time since. I had been sick for some time, and after retiring one night I was told in a dream to write to the Sister's Prayer Union, which I did, and I got well as soon as I wrote, and was told to pray for the gift of prayer and faith to be healed and I would receive a testimony for myself. I ask your prayers that I may be worthy of such a gift and that I may overcome all my weakness, for I feel there are none so weak as I am. I desire patience and wisdom to teach my children in the fear of the Lord that they may accept this latter-day gospel.

Your sister,

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SPECIAL request for prayer is made in behalf of a dear sister who is afflicted in mind, that the Lord will heal her of the sad affliction.

Sister R. C. Barmore, of Oakland City, Indiana, requests your faith and prayers in her behalf that if it please God her health may be restored.

Sister Harriet A. Agan, now of Allegan, Michigan, asks that the members of the Prayer Union make special supplication in her behalf. She is past the threescore years and ten, and is also very feeble. Her wish is that she may feel and realize the blessing when prayers are offered. She has not been privileged to hear a sermon during the past ten years, but she holds to the gospel of Christ with firmness.

Sr. Lydia, of Pigeon, Iowa, requests your prayers and faith that if it is the Lord's will she may be healed of affliction.

WEST PULLMAN, Ill., April 30.

Editors Herald:—We had the pleasure of organizing a branch here last evening, to be known as the West Pullman branch. Priest George Henley was chosen to preside. Brn. Francis Earl and R. N. Burwell were chosen priests of the branch, Bro. H. Morgan was ordained and chosen teacher, and Bro. James King was ordained and chosen deacon. Bro. A. Bowers formerly of Plano was elected secretary, and Bro. Burwell, formerly of Bay Port, Michigan, treasurer. An excellent spirit prevailed. The Spirit bore witness to the divine calling of the two brethren ordained, promising them blessings, providing they were faithful. Brn. Henley and Earl have been holding meetings here several months. They secured a good store building fitted up neatly, purchased an organ, and are now nicely situated for doing a good work.

The Plano Harvester Works are located here, and a number of the Plano Saints have moved here and work in the shops. Several good people have recently been baptized, others are very near the door. We hope to hear good reports from this branch in the future.

The work in Chicago we think is doing as well as we can reasonably expect. Three have recently been baptized; others are investigating and expect to unite soon. The workers are encouraged and feeling well. The drones, of course, are expected to grumble. Fault-finding is generally the mission of those who do nothing, not only in Chicago, but wherever they are found; hence we expect nothing better from them. We are very thankful therefore that this class is not numerous with us. Our cause is well named a "work;" and to enjoy it one must be active; and in our branch we have good active workers—those who are willing to work and make sacrifice. Upon this class the prosperity of the work depends.

I am preaching, nights, at Pullman this week. Next week I expect to visit De Kalb and Plano, the week following Rock Island and other points in the Kewanee district till the convening of Kewanee conference which I hope to be able to attend. Northern Illinois is a big field for just two missionaries. How these two are going to spread themselves over this vast territory and come anywhere near meeting the demands, is a problem that at present is too big for us to solve. But we propose to keep active, doing the best we can under all circumstances, leaving the rest in the hands of a higher power to provide for.

We hope the local brethren will do all in their power to push out and build up the work in both branch and district. Tent work in this field will depend largely on the efforts of the local force. We need several active men for this line of work. Who will respond—at least for a few weeks at a time during the summer months? Let such report to the district conference, or to me, stating when and how long they can stay with the tent. By several helping a few weeks we may be able to keep both tents in the field all summer. Let us all do what we can to get this glorious work before the people. The hastening time is upon us. Let us not falter.

Yours in bonds,
F. G. PITT.

DENVER, Colo., April 26.

Editors Herald:—The work in Denver is still alive and has, we believe, taken another step forward, we having secured the control of a large hall on Washington Avenue—No. 2442—where we will worship hereafter. We now hold service at eleven a. m. instead of the afternoon as heretofore. We find we have to conform to the ways of the sectarian churches in some things if we expect to get a congregation; viz., to hours of service—the people are in the habit of attending divine service in the forenoon and will not attend to any extent in the afternoon. We can now hold night service during the week, if we so desire, without increasing the rent. We are glad Bro. Duncan is to return to Colorado, and think it will benefit his health and that he will accomplish good in this mission.

The entertainment given by the Z. R. L. April 10 was a success financially and otherwise. The net proceeds were near twenty-five dollars. Prof. Lippfert rendered some fine selections on the piano free of charge. The Columbine Piano Company also furnished the use of one of their grand pianos free.

SUTTON'S BAY, Mich., April 23.

Editors Herald:—Here we are again. After enjoying the General Conference I returned home and spent two days with my family; then went to Ludington and preached twice on Sunday, and confirmed four more who were baptized by Bro. George Washburn; then left for this place, nearly one hundred miles further north, to attend to a discussion agreed upon some time ago, this time with a Lutheran minister.

I preached last night in a schoolhouse to a quiet and fair-sized congregation, and to-night the debate is to commence in the town hall. Some of the people are entertaining fears of the debate not taking place, as they say, "Each party is afraid of the other." The Rev. J. J. Maaksted, the gentleman with whom we are to discuss, has been busy ever since I was here last winter, lecturing against us and going around and warning the people against our doctrine. He has also advertised the debate two or three times through the public press, in a misleading manner. But I am here in the faith and feeling good in body and spirit.

This is a place where Bro. F. C. Smith has labored last fall and winter. There are several places up in these parts where there are from five to fifteen scattered members with no one to look after them. They look for Bro. Smith to return, but I see by the conference appointments that he has been appointed to labor in Virginia. I am afraid that many of the scattered ones will be neglected this year in Michigan, according to the appointments made for the laborers; yet I am feeling well in spirit and will do all I can wherever called; but I cannot labor in two places at one time.

The local officers are doing well in their branches, and some are moving out and are helping in other places; and so the good work moves on.

I move out from the conference to labor with renewed energy. While I feel we need "more laborers" and see there is a lack of means to supply those who could labor, I feel I must labor all the more to feed the flock and bring others to the knowledge of the truth. I am in the faith and hopeful.

Editors Herald:—I think it my duty to tell of the love of my heavenly Father to me. He has been very merciful and we can do a very great deal for each other by speaking a word for him. I know that the letters I read have given me much strength and more of a desire to press forward.

I know this is the gospel and a pure one, and to make it known is what we ought to do. I have a desire to press forward along with all my brethren and sisters, praying my heavenly Father will give you such things as you all stand in need of—I feel sure he has a deep interest in us all. This work gives me to understand that he lives and loves and encourages his children to press forward to the mark of our high calling which is in Christ Jesus.

SISTER DOWNES.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, April 19.

Editors Herald:—We are much pleased to have Bro. Williams with us for another year. He preached to a full house Sunday night, and the discourse was well received. But Sunday was a day of sadness to the branch, having heard of the sudden death of dear Bro. Blair. Our hearts swelled within us, and tears filled many eyes during our social meeting as the brethren spoke in tender tones of him who was so dear to us all. But we try to say, God's will be done, and to feel that our loss is his gain. We do pray God that he will bless and strengthen the heart and hands of our beloved President who has thus been deprived of the wise counsel and companionship of one who was ever at his post of duty, willing to do all that his hand found to do to further the interests of the work in which his soul delighted. He was as the well-ripened sheaf, ready for the Master's garner; a life well rounded out, and like the full blown rose, leaving behind at death a sweet and grateful fragrance.

Our branch is in a good spiritual condition, walking in love and unity and leaning on the arm of her Beloved. The health of the branch is excellent, and we have every reason to thank God for his mercies.

Many of us are deeply impressed with the thought that a new era is soon to dawn on the church, and that God will make bare his arm; that the church will come up to a higher plane of spiritual excellence, in the keeping of the law in temporal as well as spiritual things. When we are willing to take God at his word and bring our gifts into his storehouse and not withhold that which belongs to him he will open the windows of heaven and send us a blessing that we shall not have room to contain; but if we withhold our tithes we need not expect God to bless in temporal or spiritual things. If we can only give a penny let us give it and remember the poor widow who cast in her mite.

O that God would give us a true conception of his law, and of our duty to keep the same. My prayer is that God will so move upon the hearts of his people that they will be willing to make any sacrifice he may require at their hands.

Yours in bonds of love,

J. S. STRAIN.

COOK'S POINT, Texas, April 24.

Editors Herald:—I met Elder J. W. Chisholm in debate in Lee County on the church question. He affirmed his church to be the Church of Jesus Christ and I affirmed the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to be the Church of Christ. We met on Wednesday the 15th inst. We held twelve sessions of two hours each; six sessions on each proposition. The good cause was sustained and Campbellism was set aside by the truth. I never saw a man resort to such means to sustain his claims. I will give you some of them. He said that the disciples were baptized upon the day of Pentecost to enter into the kingdom of God or Church of Jesus Christ; said they there passed out of the fold that John the Baptist baptized them into, and that women had as much authority to preach and baptize as men, for all laymembers had a right to preach and baptize, and that women were priests as well as men in the church. He went back on Alexander Campbell and said that Walter Scott was the man that commenced to cleanse the sanctuary or set up the church in these last days. He went back on his church in this day; said he did not represent the Christian Church because it was teaching and practicing things that he did not indorse, such as receiving members from the Baptist, Methodist, and other churches, who had not been baptized upon a profession of faith in baptism for remission of sins. He said they were not in the church at all.

I then asked him if he indorsed the church at the place where we were debating. He then asked as many as indorsed him to arise. Some half dozen arose. I asked him if he indorsed them, and if so to stand up, but he would not do it; for some of them had been received without being baptized by the Campbellites. So he was left out of the Christian Church or Church of God, as he called it.

I never saw a man so overcome by the truth in my life as he was. He had been in the habit at the close of discussions with our brethren of challenging for an apostle to meet him in discussion, but this was one time he did not challenge at all. He was asked if he challenged. He said he did not. My moderator asked him about the matter, as he wanted a discussion to be held at Cook's Point in July next. Chisholm seemed to want no more debates with our people. He went on his way sorrowing.

The people invited me to come back again, his brethren as well as others. We had a good turnout and good attention—the best interest I believe I ever saw at a discussion of the kind. Mr. J. J. Pressley was my moderator. He made a good one. None of our elders attended the debate.

I go to Martin to-morrow to commence a meeting there to continue a week; some waiting to be baptized there. The good cause moves on in spite of all opposition. To God be all the glory now and evermore. Amen. Yours in the one faith,

E. W. NUNLEY.

FRANKLINVILLE, Kan., April 29.

Editors Herald:—We have no branch here, though what few there are of us are still striving for the cause. We are pretty well scattered, as it is very thinly settled here. The most of the Saints live near Boeler. That is about seventeen miles distant. They have meeting about every two weeks.

We are not often visited by the elders and wish some of them would happen along our way, as we believe much good could be done here. There have been but very few here. Bro. Joseph Brown, of Iowa, was here and held meetings at Franklinville over a year ago. He was the last visiting elder. The people were all well pleased with him. We are in hopes that some of the elders will smile upon us again here and hope that they will come a little oftener than in the past.

Your brother,

SHERIDAN, Wyo., April 21.

Editors Herald:—This beautiful afternoon I feel very happy; because twenty-four years ago this afternoon my beloved husband, Niels Nielsen, and myself went together and were baptized, and confirmed in the evening members of the Reorganized Church, at Nebraska City, Nebraska.

February, 1872, it was told in Nebraska City, that David H. Smith, son of the late Prophet, Joseph Smith, would preach Monday evening in Simpson's hall opposite the now called Morton House on Main Street. The Saints held their quarterly conference at that time and Niels and I were to their afternoon testimony meeting and heard many bear testimonies of the gospel. There I heard Elder E. C. Brand speak in tongues, the first I had ever heard of that kind, and I thought he must be drunk as he reeled to and fro and talked so queer. That is my first impression on hearing speaking in tongues, as Niels and I belonged to the Episcopal Church then and were not used to testimony meetings, let alone hearing unknown tongues. We came back in the evening to hear them preach, but the Prophet's son did not preach, but would on Monday evening, and I was to go and hear him of course.

But on Monday it was a fearful snowstorm; it looked as if it was out of question to go in such a storm as there would be nobody there. Finally Niels and I thought we would venture down to the hall; so we started and went in, and to our surprise the hall was so packed with people that there was no seating room left. Niels was placed somewhere behind, close to the door, while I was escorted up to the preacher's table and placed on the elders' bench in front or on the side of the table, as a pulpit was too expensive in those days in a hall. I could have put my elbows on the table had I wanted to; but I sat straight enough on the bench. After singing and prayer and singing the preacher, Elder David H. Smith, arose and began to preach, and as he kept on I got so enraptured that I came near putting my elbows on his table and looking him in the face, like a child to a good school-teacher; for his voice was so soft and gentle that I was wondering who he was and what he was preaching, and I said to myself, "I do not quite understand his doctrine;" but the spirit he spoke with drew my soul out as with a child, and I wished whatever he preached that I could have a share of it; as I could understand him so well, and he was so like a school-teacher in teaching us. But the voice was so extremely gentle and pure that to this day I have not heard a voice so enchanting as that of David H. Smith.

The next day he left Nebraska City and never came back that I know of; but that one sermon and his voice have always remained with me, and it never dawned on me that the Saints had anything better than my own creed.

In the first part of March, 1872, Elder W. W. Blair came to Nebraska City, and held preaching service in the large Christian church, now the property of St. Mary's Catholic Church. That church was full every night with Elder Robt. M. Elvin as president over these meetings. Elder Blair preached plain and powerful and it convinced Niels that the doctrine was from God; so he said to me, "I would like to be baptized, for he preaches the truth."

I told him short not to come to me with them, as I was not going to join any Mormon Church, and for him not to speak to me about being baptized, for I thought it was Brighamism.

So that settled Niels from being baptized by Bro. W. W. Blair; but in a short time after Elder Blair's departure, my eyes were opened to my own unsaved condition, or, in other words, I saw that the church I belonged to could not save my soul at the last day, as I had not been baptized as Jesus was. That so surprised me that as soon as I was alone I began to pray to the Lord to let me know if these Latter Day Saints preached the truth as Jesus preached. And as I prayed a power came over me that nearly lifted me from the floor and a voice whispered distinctly to me these words: "It is the only true and living church of God upon the face of the earth;" and said that Joseph the Martyr was the true leader of the flock. I believed the power was from God, and as soon as Niels came home for dinner I told him I was ready to go with him and be baptized.

He looked at me so strange that I told him of my prayer and the answer to it. So we got ready and went Sunday afternoon, April 21, 1872, and were baptized. I was baptized first, in the Missouri River; then, while waiting on the shore by myself for the rest to get ready, I was also baptized by fire and the Holy Ghost. It was as if scales fell from my eyes, and I asked myself, "What fire is this; what unspeakable joy is this within me?" and my whole being was filled with music and I wanted to sing; but I refrained, because I did not know what this change meant. I then looked up to heaven and said, "O Jesus, I am thy child now. I have done thy will, have I not?"

I was then eighteen years old, and I have never regretted that covenant; but have daily rejoiced that I went and obeyed the gospel of Christ and received of his Spirit. On April 1, 1889, Niels was released from this earthly toil and care, in that his pure and meek spirit entered into the Paradise of God, to remain till the resurrection morn. His countenance in death showed the peace and glory of the life to come, as he looked unspeakably happy.

On Saturday afternoon, July 30, 1881, my dear mother, Karen Dahl, was baptized and confirmed a member of the church and she died August 13, 1882, aged 63 years. She, too, bore her testimony to the power of God through the elders' administration and her death was peaceful as a child that goes to sleep. And I have witnessed, too, that God is with his Saints in death, that death has no terror to the faithful Saints.

In these twenty-four years I have learned many things; have been healed by the power of God; shown many things in dreams; have seen the Lord Jesus and his holy angels, and the power of darkness and his angels; have been preserved from his evil designs by the power of God; that though my trials have been greater than I care to relate, yet I thank God for the power of the gospel and for his tender mercy and love toward me.

In those twenty-four years I have been permitted to see the three sons of Joseph the Martyr, and his grandchildren, that is, children of his three sons. The last one was in 1891 at the Logan Reunion when I saw the son of David H. Smith. So I feel to praise God that the great restoration was brought by the angel to Joseph the Seer, and that I have also been honored by his son, our present beloved prophet, in my home and heard him preach the gospel to the people, and that I have helped to sing by his side in our church. And I hope the blessing of God may ever attend the Saints and myself until our warfare shall be over and then be permitted to be reunited in the kingdom of God with all the redeemed.

A NAIL.—NO. 2.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

CONCERNING the finding of the long lost manuscript Professor James H. Fairchild, president of Oberlin College, writes:—

The theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon in the traditional manuscript of Solomon Spaulding, will probably have to be relinquished. That manuscript is doubtless now in the possession of Mr. L. L. Rice, of Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, formerly an anti-Slavery Editor in Ohio, and for many years State Printer at Columbus. During a recent visit to Honolulu, I suggested to Mr. Rice that he might have valuable anti-slavery documents in his possession, which he would be willing to contribute to the rich collection already in the Oberlin College Library. In pursuance of this suggestion, Mr. Rice began looking over his old pamphlets and papers, and at length came upon an old, worn, and faded manuscript of about one hundred and seventy-five pages, small quarto, purporting to be a history of the migrations and conflicts of the ancient Indian Tribes, which occupied the territory now belonging to the States of New York, Ohio, and Kentucky. On the last page of this manuscript is a certificate and signature, giving the names of several persons known to the signer who have assured him that to their personal knowledge the manuscript was the writing of Solomon Spaulding. Mr. Rice has no recollection how or when this manuscript came into his possession. It was enveloped in a coarse piece of wrapping paper, and endorsed in Mr. Rice's hand-writing, "A Manuscript Story." There seems no reason to doubt that this is the long-lost story. Mr. Rice, myself, and others, compared it with the Book of Mormon, and could detect no resemblance between the two, in general or in detail. There seems to be no name or incident common to the two.

The solemn style of the Book of Mormon, in imitation of the English Scriptures, does not appear in the manuscript. The only resemblance is in the fact that both profess to set forth the history of lost tribes. Some other explanation of the origin of the Book of Mormon must be found, if any explanation is required.—Bibliotheca Sacra.

For one I feel like thanking Professor Fairchild for what he has written. Mr. Rice explains as to how he obtained possession of Spaulding's manuscript:—

The Spaulding Manuscript in my possession came into my hands in this wise. In 1839-40 my partner and myself bought of E. D. Howe the Painesville Telegraph, published at Painesville, Ohio. The transfer of the printing department, types, press, &c., was accompanied with a large collection of books, manuscripts, &c., this manuscript of Spaulding among the rest. So, you see, it has been in my possession over forty years. But I never examined it, or knew the character of it, until some six or eight month since. The wrapper was marked, "Manuscript Story — Conneaut Creek." The wonder is, that in some of my movements, I did not destroy or burn it with a large amount of rubbish that had accumulated from time to time.—Manuscript Found, p. 6.

In a letter to Pres. J. H. Fairchild by Mr. L. L. Rice he says:—

Herewith I send to you the Solomon Spalding Manuscript, to be deposited in the Library of Oberlin College, for reference by anyone who may be desirous of seeing or examining it. As a great deal of inquiry has been made about it since it became known that it was in my possession, I deem it proper that it be deposited for safe keeping, where anyone interested in it, whether Mormon or Anti-Mormon, may examine it. It has been in my possession forty-six years—from 1839 to 1885—and for forty-four years of that time no one examined it, and I was not aware of the character of its contents.—Manuscript Found, pages 9, 10.

After the Spalding manuscript dropped out of sight the enemies of the Book of Mormon presumed upon the credulity of the people, and taking their cue from what was recorded in the Book of Mormon they adroitly foisted upon the gullible the mischievous belief that the long lost manuscript contained the same. When Mr. L. L. Rice of Honolulu deposited the long lost Spalding manuscript in the Library of Oberlin College, Bishop E. L. Kelley procured a copy of the same prepared for him by Prof. Jas. H. Fairchild, and it was printed in book form by the Herald Publishing Company, Lamoni, Iowa, 1885.

Here is what the man has to say, who held in his possession the manuscript for forty-six years, and his opinion is worth more than a passing thought:—

Upon reflection, since writing the foregoing, I am of the opinion that no one who reads this Manuscript will give credit to the story that Solomon Spalding was in any wise the author of the Book of Mormon. It is unlikely that any one who wrote so elaborate a work as the Mormon Bible, would spend his time in getting up so shallow a story as this, which at best is but a feeble imitation of the other. Finally I am more than half convinced that this is his only writing of the sort, and that any pretence that Spalding was in any sense the author of the other, is a sheer fabrication. It was easy for anybody who may have seen this, or heard anything of its contents, to get up the story that they were identical.—Manuscript Found, pages 7, 8.

The opinion of so astute a man as Mr. L. L. Rice, who for the past six decades has been familiar with composition of numerous men upon multitudinous topics is worth manifold more than that of a prejudiced, bigoted, intolerant opposer.

Again Mr. Rice says:—

Two things are true concerning this manuscript in my possession: First, it is a genuine writing of Solomon Spaulding; and second, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon. My opinion is, from all I have seen and learned, that this is the only writing of Spaulding, and there is no foundation for the statement of Deming and others, that Spaulding made another story, more elaborate, of which several copies were written, one of which Rigdon stole from a printing office in Pittsburg, &c. Of course I cannot be as certain of this, as of the other two points.—Manuscript Found, p. 8.

Mr. Rice reached a righteous conclusion as it is quite evident that Solomon Spaulding wrote but one manuscript—the one he (Rice) obtained from E. D. Howe and deposited in the library of Oberlin College. While contemplating the situation I exclaim with James, "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth!"

As to the names in the Book of Mormon and the Manuscript Found being identical, I prove that untrue by carefully copying from each.

I have carefully searched both books and find that there is no agreement in the names, so that is a sure nail in the coffin of falsehood.

Joseph Smith never by himself or through any of his friends pretended or claimed that he wrote the Book of Mormon, but he, using the Urim and Thummim, dictated the words while helpers wrote them down. The widow of the prophet, an eye and ear witness of the translation of the "golden plates," bears a grand testimony,

Her son, Joseph Smith, the President and Prophet of the church, asked:—

Mother, what is your belief about the authenticity, or origin of the Book of Mormon?

"My belief is that the Book of Mormon is of divine authenticity. I have not the slightest doubt of it. I am satisfied that no man could have dictated the writing of the manuscripts unless he were inspired. For, when acting as his scribe, your father would dictate hour after hour; and when returning after meals, or after interruptions, he would at once begin where he had left off, without either seeing the manuscript, or hearing any portion of it read to him. This was a usual thing for him to do. It would have been improbable that a learned man could do this; and for one so ignorant and unlearned as he was it was simply impossible."—Life of Joseph, pp. 794-5.

Reader, perhaps you, like thousands of others, are incredulous about that wonderful event. Consider the following:—

Could not father have dictated the Book of Mormon to you, Oliver Cowdery, and the others who wrote for him, after having first written it, or having first read it out of some book?

"Joseph Smith, (and for the first time she used his name direct, having usually used the words, 'your father,' or 'my husband'), could neither write nor dictate a coherent, and well worded letter, let alone dictating a book like the Book of Mormon. And though I was an active participant in the scenes that transpired; and was present during the translation of the plates, and had cognizance of things as they transpired, it is marvelous to me, 'a marvel and a wonder,' as much so as to anybody else."—Life of Joseph, p. 793-4.

As to the statement of John Spalding by Smucker:—

He said that it (Spaulding's manuscript), gave a detailed account of their journey from Jerusalem by land and sea, till they arrived in America under the command of Nephi and Lehi.

This is refuted by the Manuscript Found, itself:—

My name was is Fabius The family name I sustain is Fabius, being descended from the illustrious general of that name. I was born at Rome & received my education under the tuition of a very Learned Master. At the time that Constantine arrived at that city and had overcome his enemies & was firmly seated on the throne of the Roman empire I was introduced to him as a young Gentleman of genius and learning & as being worthy of the favourable notice of his imperial majesty. He gave me the appointment of one of his secretaries, & such were the gracious intimations which he frequently gave me of his high approbation of my conduct that I was happy in my station. One day he says to me Fabius you must go to Brittain.—Manuscript Found, p. 14.

The foregoing proves that John Spalding either did not know what he was talking about or that he willfully prevaricated, and it also proves that E. D. Howe with the manuscript in his possession misstated the time of the departure of Fabius from Rome by about three hundred years. Such lapses from the truth by those men may be of small moment, or it may be they went on the theory that "all things are fair in time of war," or that the "end justifies the means."

As to Sidney Rigdon stealing Spalding's novel he states under date of May 27, 1839:—

There was no man by the name of Patterson, during my residence in Pittsburg, who had a printing office; what might have been before I lived there I know not. Mr. Robert Patterson, I was told, had owned a printing office before I lived in that city, but had been unfortunate in business and failed before my residence there. This Mr. Patterson, who was a Presbyterian Preacher, I had a very slight acquaintance with during my residence in Pittsburg; he was then acting under an agency in the book and stationary business and was the owner of no property of any kind, printing office or anything else, during the time I resided in the city. If I were to say that I ever heard of the Rev. Solomon Spaulding and his wife, until Dr. P. Hulburt wrote his lies about me, I should be a liar like unto themselves. . . . This said Doctor was never a physician at any time, nor anything else but a base ruffian. He was the seventh son, and his parents called him Doctor; it was his name, and not the title of his profession. He once belonged to the Methodist church, and was excluded for immoralities. He afterwards imposed himself on the church of Latter-Day Saints, and was excluded for using obscene language to a young lady, a member of the said church, who resented his insult with indignation, which became both her character and profession.

After his exclusion he swore—for he was vilely profane—that he would have revenge, and commenced his work.—Boston Journal.

Smucker, after giving Rigdon's letter a place in his book, refers to him as "the vulgar and abusive Sidney Rigdon."

Had Smucker lived when the Savior said:—

Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.—John 8: 44, he would have called Jesus "vulgar and abusive" in all probability.

There is no law in the church for the ordination of women-preachers, and I am not aware that any ever preached at New Salem. Upon the marital relation I put in comparison the following:—

SPALDING.

Let thy citizens be numbered once in two years, & if the young women who are fit for marriage are more numerous than the young men, then wealthy men who are young & who have but one wife shall have the privilege with the permission of the king to marry another until the number of the single young women & the single young men are made equal. But he who hath two wives shall have a house provided for each & he shall spend his time equally with each one.—M. F. p. 44.

JACOB.

Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord, wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife: and concubines he shall have none: For I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me.—B. of M. p. 102.

With the above quotations put in parallel columns, there is no necessity for argument or commentary.

In closing this article I confess my faith in the promise:—

No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord.—Isa. 54: 17.

IS IT BIGOTRY?

AS A rule, whenever or wherever the elder faithfully presents the exact position of the church, and preaches its faith and doctrine in a plain and simple, but effective manner, it creates a feeling of disgust in the minds of some people. They think we are the most bigoted class that ever existed, in claiming the exclusive right of being the Church of God and the only people that have in their midst the full gospel blessings. It will not do to say that all of those rejecting our teachings upon first hearing are dishonest, for many that are now active members in the church were once horrified to see and have ideas they held so dear proven misleading and unscriptural, but after due consideration the horribleness of the situation passed away and they saw the beauty and consistency of such claims as urged by Latter Day Saints.

While there are a few willing to reconsider and make amends for so hasty a conclusion, there are many that seemingly cannot or will not look upon us as anything else but bigots. Some of these latter know considerable of our teaching and acknowledge it as right, but the exclusiveness of our claim to divinity is so narrow in their way of thinking that they prefer to remain as they are rather than become so uncharitable as to claim one right and the rest more or less wrong. Others more indignant oppose us bitterly. Thus we make enemies and keep out of the fold the ones that fear the people; yet it is not we, but the truth itself; however, as we dare not deny this truth more than any other, the blame is attached to us as a people.

It is not pleasant to be in opposition to every other, still our understanding of the way of life is of more importance and worth to us than the good will of any people. It would not become faithful Saints to sacrifice any principle of truth to please fellow creatures that are contented with less light than it is their privilege to receive. Never in New Testament times did Christ have the majority of religious people to think and see as he did. They thought it outrageous to submit to such an idea as he taught about himself having the light and truth and in the right while those differing, no matter how zealous, were in darkness concerning the true character of God, and that while they thought they were doing God service they were of their father the Devil.

Christ was extremely positive in his claims and had no fear of being successfully contradicted. Undoubtedly they considered him uncharitable and narrow minded, to set himself up and work against the learned rabbis, numbering then about twenty thousand. It terrified them to hear him say, Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and where he is made, you make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves.

Beware of the leaven [doctrine] of the Pharisees.

Ye are of your father the Devil.

Ye have not his word abiding in you.

Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

No wonder they raged and threw stones at him. The very thought of Jesus, a man whom they had known from infancy, questioning the religion of their fathers was preposterous and a just reason in their eyes for the ill-treatment he received. In their judgment he was not fit to live, nor were others that dared to advocate his teaching. In nailing him to the cross and in the killing of the saints they exhibited the bitter feeling they cherished toward any that would claim a better and more scriptural belief than what they had. Notwithstanding the abuse heaped upon the saints of the first century they were positive of their being right and the others mistaken in their zeal. The masses were against them, but they were the recipients of evidences the masses knew nothing of. So satisfied were they that they willingly met death sooner than relinquish their belief.

Paul was so confident the faith of the Saints was correct, that he said, after some experience:—

For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.—Rom. 8:38, 39.

This same apostle's life was in one sense made miserable when he left the Pharisee's religion and joined in with the people he had before concluded the worst of heretics—people that he thought worthy of death for teaching such offensive doctrine. Prior to his conversion he was one of the smartest and most intelligent among his class. It was then that he was honored by his friends; but when his conscience was pricked, he could not withstand, so, almost immediately set himself to building up the faith of the people he once did his utmost to destroy. He then saw plainly that the Pharisee's religion was wrong, and in opposition to them argued that Christ was crucified, and that his gospel was the power of God unto salvation.

When his old associates were made acquainted with his change of opinion they said he was "beside himself" and "much learning hath made thee mad," and was counted as unfit to live. They thought none but crazy people would ever allow themselves to think and do as Christ taught; for his claims were so high, and unwarranted, compared with others, that the learned concluded the whole a heresy, and Jesus as having a devil. John was so positive he was right, although he knew the most of the people thought him as crazy as the rest, that he makes us of the following language:—

We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us.

The word "us" has reference to those of like belief as himself. His argument was that those that were of God were of the same mind as himself, while those refusing to believe and obey as they did, were not of God. Does it not sound as much like bigotry for John to say that they that refused to believe as he did were not of God, as it does for any servant or child of God to say so in this age? By what rule are the first justified and the last condemned? Eighteen long centuries of time do not destroy the truth of any Bible principle. Christ said, "He that is not with me is against me," and, "If a man love me he will keep my sayings." By this rule John and the rest decided, for "if there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed," etc.

It was a part of Christ's work to make manifest all deception, and this work was handed over particularly to his servants. They cannot sanction any teaching or doctrine that is in any measure contrary to the doctrine of Christ. The moment they do, they forfeit their claim upon God; for they then serve another Master.

To be consistent with ourselves, and the work of Christ, we point the inquiring to the same narrow way the Savior taught. In following Christ on this narrow way our thoughts and actions are necessarily narrowed down according to the way. Our teaching must be as narrow as the way itself; no more nor no less. We hold no authority to make it any wider than the Son of God made it. To do so would be adding to the word of God, which is forbidden. We wish to be as liberal and charitable as Christ, but no more. To be more liberal than he was, or to sanction things that he condemned, is repudiating the work of the Savior. He made the claim of speaking and working as his Father gave command, therefore, he never ignored or condemned anything worthy of acceptance. Our safety lies in following him, loving what he loved, and denouncing what he denounced. To be more charitable, or liberal than Christ, is anti-christ. If he has ever by word of mouth, or act of life countenanced the idea that a man or woman will be saved, irrespective of his or her belief, or individual obedience, then we should; but, on the other hand, if he has plainly and decidedly said that we must "do the will of his Father" to enjoy eternal peace, then without any quibbling we are under obligation to teach and do as he commanded. This would be following the voice of the Good Shepherd.

Voices that differ in command, no matter how heavenly the tone, are deceptive, and to be condemned. Oft-times the tone is taken for the import. The work allotted to the Saints of God is to stand by, and advocate the plain and simple teachings of the Master, fearless of what those having established religion might say or think.

We do not boast, but simply express our gratefulness to God for his favors in zealous efforts to convince people of the goodly pearl we have. We love the whole truth, and purpose teaching it, even though some may think us uncharitable, narrow-minded, and very bigoted. Charity being the pure love of God, those possessing will not misrepresent God, nor allow others to do so without a rebuke, mild or otherwise.

If we are narrow-minded, or bigoted, because we believe there can be but one true order of things in the Church of God, and that those not in harmony with its order, wrong, more or less, then the pure Christ, Paul, John, and in fact the entire church of the apostles' day, were also narrow-minded, and equally as bigoted. While the heathen rage and the people imagine vain things, we are willing to let the case come before God for decision. God being no respecter of persons, will not condemn his people of the nineteenth century, for doing things that he justified his people of the first century in doing.

We count truth as truth wherever found, but never can we allow a part to be equal with the whole, and further consider that,

He is a coward who dare not be
In the right with two or three.

AN INTERVIEW.

MAJOR JAMES T. BROOKS, OF CONCORDIA, KANSAS, INTERVIEWED MARCH 23, 1896, WITH RESPECT TO THE TRAGIC DEATH OF JOSEPH AND HYRUM SMITH.

LEARNING that Major Brooks, of Concordia, Kansas, was at Carthage, Illinois, and witnessed the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, the writer called upon him and obtained the following statements, thinking they might be of benefit in giving a correct history of that lamentable event and also be of interest to readers of the Herald.

The venerable Major has a military record of which he is justly proud. His first service was as militiaman in Illinois. Next he was a Mexican soldier, enlisting in the First Illinois Infantry, E. W. B. Newby as colonel. Brockman, who is mentioned as the preacher who led the mob that assassinated Joseph and Hyrum Smith, was a candidate for colonel of the regiment, but was defeated by Colonel Newby. Major Brooks was honorably mustered out at close of the Mexican war. He served in the late war as captain of the 107th Illinois and was mustered out as major same regiment.

Entering upon the subject of our interview, the Major said:—

“I was born in McMinnville, Warren County, Tennessee. I am seventy-three years of age. I left the South and came to Illinois when I was a mere boy. My father entered land in Pike County, Illinois, at Chambersburg. I first became acquainted with the Latter Day Saints by hearing them preach at my home in Chambersburg, Illinois. They made some converts in our town. I distinctly remember one family—that of William Litz. He was a respectable man, a blacksmith by trade. I also remember William Peacock and his sister Sarah, who united with the church and removed to Nauvoo.

“I went to Nauvoo just before the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, as a militiaman. A man named Ford was Governor of Illinois at that time, a warrant having been issued for the arrest of the Smiths and some others, whose names I cannot now recall. The Governor having called out the militia for the arrest of those men, a company was formed in our town. A Campbellite minister named Van Pelt organized the company at Chambersburg, Illinois. I do not remember the names of all the officers, but I remember that Harvey Dunn, Sr., was sergeant of the company. He has a son now living at Perry, Illinois, who is a prominent physician there. Harvey Dunn was a class leader in the Methodist Church. James Williams was a private in said company. Two years ago he was living at Metropolis, Illinois, and was a prominent physician there. He was an intimate friend of mine. I was also a member of the company. I will give you the names of a number of the company to which I belonged: Thomas Loer, living at Wheatland, Missouri, the last I knew of him; Anthony Randall, Joseph Rigg, John Rigg, James Brown. These are all I can call to mind.

“Our company started from Chambersburg for Nauvoo in the month of June, 1844. We went direct to Rushville. There the regiment was organized under personal directions of the Governor. The Governor's staff, so far as I remember, was Stephen A. Douglas, Judge McDougal, and General John J. Hardin. General Hardin was given command of the regiment. I judge there were between seven hundred and one thousand men in the regiment. After remaining one day at Rushville we started for Nauvoo, Illinois, going by way of Carthage, Hancock County. Before reaching Carthage, we overtook an organized mob consisting of several hundred men. I recognized the leader of the mob, with whom I was well acquainted. His name was Thomas Brockman. He was a Campbellite preacher of considerable note. I heard him preach frequently. His action, in getting up the mob was not fully indorsed by the Campbellite Church where he preached at Chambersburg. They denounced his course.

“Shortly after the assassination of the Smiths, at Carthage, Brockman returned to Chambersburg where the Campbellites were holding a grove meeting. After entering the pulpit he was handed a note by one Benjamin Johnson in behalf of a committee appointed by the Campbellite Church. This note or report of the committee denounced Brockman as the leader of an unlawful mob, which mob accomplished the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. I heard Brockman read the note aloud, after which he denounced the committee as cowards, and drew two revolvers and placed them on the stand and said: ‘These are my defense, and I will preach if I have to preach to empty benches.’ About one third of the people got up and left the grove. I remained and heard him preach. In his sermon he denounced everybody that found fault with his course and tried, in a ‘fire eating’ way, to vindicate himself.

“When we met the mob the Governor ordered them to disperse and go to their homes. Brockman, the leader of the mob, promised him they would disband and go to their homes.

“We then proceeded to Carthage, unmolested at any point. We had not even loaded our guns as yet. We staid all night at Carthage in camp. The next morning we were ordered into line of battle. A short inspection took place by the Governor and his staff. Each company was then ordered by its captain to load, which we did. We then took up our march to Nauvoo. We entered the city unmolested and surrounded the temple. Joseph Smith and several elders came up and held a consultation with the Governor and his staff. We then marched down the river to the outskirts of the city and went into camp. We remained there, to the best of my recollection, a week or ten days. The following Sunday after arriving, a number of our friends from Chambersburg, who had joined the Latter Day Saints Church, visited us in camp with their carriages, intending to take us to their homes to visit, but we were not allowed to leave camp. When we broke camp we marched back into the city of Nauvoo and were halted again by the temple. Joseph and Hyrum Smith (and I think other prisoners) surrendered themselves and went ahead of the command with a guard. They were incarcerated in Carthage jail when we reached there. The Governor made a short speech to the militia, stating that all had been done that the law required, and any who wished could be mustered out there. Those that wished to remain with the command until it got back to Rushville could do so. All were finally disbanded there. My friend, James Williams, and myself only, took advantage of the Governor's offer and were 'mustered out' at Carthage. We did this in order to return to Nauvoo and visit some of our friends there.

"The next morning after we were mustered out we heard rapid firing in the direction of the jail. We went immediately to the jail and found a howling mob. The guards had surrendered. The Smiths had both been shot in the jail, but Joseph fell out through a window. His body fell on a well curb and was dragged off on the ground. He came very near falling into the well. Hyrum I did not see. I recognized Thomas Brockman, the leader of the mob and also a few others whose names I cannot now recall. Brockman sat on a horse near the jail fence. Part of the mob were mounted and part were footmen. None of them were painted or in any way disguised. Immediately after the mob had murdered the Smiths they started for Nauvoo. In a field adjacent to the city they were met and dispersed by the Nauvoo Legion."

WILL S. PENDER.

DISPATCH, Kansas, March 30, 1896.

FAITH.

FAITH. What is it? It is a principle underlying and permeating every other principle, action, law, or power known throughout the universe. There is no principle more universally taught and least understood among men, than the principle of faith. There are a few attributes involved, which, when taken alone, are not faith, full and perfect, although, by many, spoken of as faith. For grandeur and power it stands unsurpassed. It is the principle that moves the universe. By it the worlds were made.

(Heb. 11:3.) As a principle, the writer has failed to see it clearly defined by any one writer, as he, while meditating at times, and the mind for a few moments clears to the subject, seems to comprehend its magnitude, grandeur, and power.

As a principle, it points to intelligence, and intelligent action. It points to the past until the mind is swallowed up in eternity. It points to the future until the mind is again swallowed up in the same unfathomable sea. It points to one whose intelligence is superior to that of all others, who, by this principle, intelligent, perfect faith, created the worlds, controls in the affairs of men and nations, and not only designs, but will bring about the redemption of the race. It does not point to him as existing alone in the unfathomable past, but as surrounded with individual intelligences, governed by law, the permeating principle of which was faith; having the power of choice, exercising faith in their sphere, with all its attributes. Having a sensation of joy, when God, who was in, through, and above all, in intelligence and power, revealed to them his purposes, concerning the creation of the earth. See Job 38:7; Gen. 2:6, I. T.; D. and C. 90:4, 5; also Book of Abraham, as quoted in the pearl of great price (I think).

They existed before, they shall exist after, for they are . . . ETERNAL.

With the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.—Rom. 10:10.

Is belief, taken alone, faith? If so, why did not the seven sons of Sceva meet with better success? (Acts 19:13.) These men believed to a certain extent in Christ and in the power of his name, but had they had faith in Christ, with all its attributes, so making it perfect, they would not have undertaken that which they did. Did all the people to whom Enoch preached, exercise faith in God and the promised Savior? They believed, and so strong was their belief that great fear came upon them. (Gen. 6:40, 41; 7:17, 18, I. T.) Joseph's brethren believed his dreams, but for the want of faith sold him into bondage. Nadab and Abihu, Aaron's oldest sons, believed in God, but for the want of faith failed to recognize his word, and therefore perished. (Levi 10:1.) Cain believed in God and made an offering, but not being made in faith it was rejected, however strong his belief might have been. Had it been made in faith, he would have obeyed God, even as Abel, his brother, had done. (Gen. 4:5; and 5:6, 7.)

By the above references, and many others too numerous to mention, we learn that belief, taken alone, is not faith. Belief, however, is an attribute of faith, for—"With the heart man believeth," etc.

But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.—John 1:12.

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.—Heb. 11:6.

We further learn that it is possible to have a knowledge of God and still be without faith. As evidence we turn to Hebrews 4:2:—

For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

The people referred to by Paul were the children of Israel when the word was preached to them, at the shores of the Red Sea.

Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea; and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea; and did all eat the same spiritual meat; and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ.—1 Cor. 10:1-4.

And the church organized in the wilderness. (Acts. 7:38.) They had a knowledge of God, insomuch that they saw the mountain on fire, heard the noise of the trumpet and above all, heard his voice as he spoke to them the ten commandments, which shortly afterwards were written on stone, and placed in the ark. (Deut. 5:4, 24.) Yet with all this knowledge, combined with belief, "The word preached was not mixed with faith in them that heard."

Another instance: When Lehi and his family had left their homes, and gone into the wilderness, being admonished of the Lord, Lehi sent his sons back to Jerusalem to obtain certain records, among which was the genealogy of his fathers, which records were engraven on plates of brass.

Laman and Lemuel, stubborn and rebellious, had knowledge of the mission assigned them and of the author of that mission and that Nephi, their younger brother, was called to be their leader. This knowledge was given them by the visitation of an angel, and afterwards demonstrated by the power of God, manifest through Nephi. (See 1 Nephi 1:30; 5:31.) Yet for all this, their knowledge was not mixed with faith.

While knowledge alone is not faith, it is, however, an attribute of faith, and without it faith would be imperfect. Enoch knew God and walked with him over three hundred years. His knowledge of God and belief in his word were so combined, as attributes of a principle, that it was afterward written of him:—

By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony [assurance], that he pleased God.—Heb. 11:5.

Works, alone, are not faith, but when they form an attribute of faith, they stand out in bold relief as the result of knowledge, belief, hope, love, truth, and trust, all attributes of faith. Naaman, the Syrian, believed in divine power insomuch that the testimony of a little captive maid caused him to go to the land of Israel in search of the prophet, Elisha. Yet how strong was his faith? It entirely forsook him when word came from the prophet, "Go wash in Jordan seven times." Yet by faith he was healed, his servant persuading him to obey what had been told him. In Abraham belief, knowledge, and works, were so combined that it was said of him afterward, "His faith was imputed to him for righteousness, and he was called the friend of God." These attributes were so combined in Rahab, the inn keeper of Jericho, and Ruth, the Moabite woman, as to form a perfect, intelligent faith and bring upon themselves the blessings of heaven, and make their names great among women, insomuch that they stand among the ancestors of the "Holy one of Israel."

The gospel is termed "the law of faith." (Rom. 3:27; Heb. 12:2.)

Christ in speaking of this principle, said, "If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye could say to this mountain, etc." Paul informs us in Hebrews 11:1:—

Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.—I. T.

And in the same chapter, relates some of the mighty works wrought through faith. And in Genesis 14:30, 31, I. T., we learn that these manifestations are to be in harmony with the will and commandment of God. Therefore, when those mighty works were performed, through those ancient worthies of whom Paul wrote, those works were performed according to the will and commandment of God. Exercising those attributes that make an intelligent faith, they received the word, or will of the Lord, an assurance of what would be, and in obedience to the will thus manifest, they spoke, and the result was the mighty works, spoken of by Paul. In Christ, our example, was manifest this principle in its perfection. Hear what he says:—

I can of mine own self do nothing: . . . because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me. But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.—John 5:30, 36.

For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.—John 6:38.

For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.—John 12:49.

I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.—John 9:4.

Of his life he says:—

I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of my Father.—John 10:18.

My father worketh hitherto, and I work.—John 5:17.

The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.—John 5:19.

Another plain illustration is found in Nephi's faith:—

And it came to pass that I, Nephi, said unto my father, I will go and do the things which the Lord hath commanded, for I know that the Lord giveth no commandments unto the children of men, save he shall prepare a way for them that they may accomplish the thing which he commandeth them.—1 Nephi 1:21.

And I said unto them, If God had commanded me to do all things, I could do them. If he should command me that I should say unto this water, Be thou earth, it should be earth; and if I should say it, it would be done. And now, if the Lord has such great power, and has wrought so many miracles among the children of men, how is it that he cannot instruct me, that I should build a ship.—1 Nephi 5:29.

When Amulek saw his brethren cruelly tortured by fire, he sought to call upon God to interfere in their behalf, but Alma, filled with faith, said to him:—

The Spirit constraineth me that I must not stretch forth mine hand; for behold, the Lord receiveth them up unto himself, in glory.—Alma 10:7.

And in the tenth paragraph we learn that when the Spirit came upon them and they spoke according to the will and commandment of God, the result was the overthrow of the prison. In Alma 16:21 we see a portion of Alma's definition of faith:—

And now as I said concerning faith: Faith, is not to have a perfect knowledge of things; therefore if ye have faith, ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true.

Faith, being the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, is it possible, then, to do away with the spiritual gifts and blessings promised in the gospel, and still retain faith in Christ? (Mark 16:17; John 15:13; 1 Cor. 12; Eph. 1:14; 1 John 2:20, 27; Rev. 19:10.) Is it possible for men to tell to the world that God does not manifest himself in this age of the world as he did anciently, and still retain faith in God? To the writer it does not seem possible. For those spiritual gifts and blessings are the earnest of our inheritance, the assurance of our acceptance with God, and therefore of our redemption. When, therefore, in petitions to our Father, we cry, "Increase our faith," the prayer is neither improper, nor unwise; for it is the Father that bestows the Comforter by which these gifts and graces are manifested. Through them it is the assurance of those things for which we hope, the evidence that we shall receive that for which we ask. We cannot receive it at our will. It is not subject to our command. We can only ask, trusting in our Father's wisdom to bestow as he will, he knowing better than we what is best for us to receive.

When James said in his epistle, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick," he said what was, and is, true, as many Latter Day Saints can testify. How often they have testified that as the elder, or elders, laid their hands upon the sick one, assurance was given plainly, unmistakably by the Spirit, that the administration would be blessed and the thing for which they hoped would be granted, even the recovery of the sick one; while on the other hand, the Father saw best that the earthly conflict be ended, he has, by his Spirit given evidence of the same, thus preparing the mind of the afflicted and those connected for the presence of that grim visitor, death, thus increasing the faith of those who believe in his word.

As the writer comprehends faith, from a study of the sacred records, the testimony of God's chosen people, and the manifestations of the Spirit, making clear the mind while meditating upon the subject, it is the principle that will bring us in complete harmony with God, give us knowledge of his handiwork, and make us understand all his ways, as a principle. It is the only source of knowledge and wisdom. It will lead us to love God, not to fear him, with all our hearts, minds, and strength, and as his children, it will cause us to love one another. It will lead us to do his will, not our own; to obey him, not our impulses. It will make his pleasures ours. It will make his mind ours. It will make us one, even as Christ prayed. It will lead us to know the only true God and Jesus Christ whom he sent. Well did the Master say seemingly to wonder whether he would or not: "When the Son of Man cometh, will he find faith on the earth?"

O that we may lay hold of this principle and increase therein, until there shall be within us a full, intelligent, and perfect faith, is the prayer of the writer, FRANCIS EARL.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS.

ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF PUBLICATION ON THE DEATH OF PRES. W. W. BLAIR.

Whereas our heavenly Father, in his inscrutable providence, has permitted the removal, by death, from our midst, of Pres. William Wallace Blair, and

Whereas, by this removal the Board of Publication loses one of its oldest and most active and untiring workers, whose services have contributed for many years to the growth and prosperity of the literary department of the church work, and whose store of accumulated information was always cheerfully laid at the feet of the church,

Resolved that we, the remaining members of the board, hereby record our appreciation of the lifelong services of Pres. W. W. Blair, and our feeling of profound sadness at his death. That we sense, in his departing, the going out of one whose mental competency, profound study, and heart devotion has made his name monumental among us.

Resolved, that we commend the moral excellencies, intellectual qualities, the holy zeal, and unwearying energy of our departed brother to the Saints everywhere, and that we revere his memory because of the self-sacrificing devotion that characterized his years of righteous service in the church.

Resolved that we extend to Sr. Blair and family an expression of our deepest sympathy in this hour of their terrible bereavement, and that we commend them to the grace of Him who was the strength of our departed brother's hope and the inspiration of his unflagging zeal in gospel work.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Sr. Blair, also one copy each to the Saints' Herald and Zion's Ensign for publication. Signed,

E. L. KELLEY, President.

A. S. COCHRAN, Secretary.

PASTORAL.

In order that a general understanding shall obtain, and the work be carried on systematically as heretofore in mission work, I have deemed it advisable to assign in sub-charge as follows in the mission placed in my charge by the late General Conference:—

Northern Illinois, Brn. F. G. Pitt and James McKiernan; Nauvoo district in Illinois and Iowa, F. M. Weld and J. R. Evans; Wisconsin, W. A. McDowell and C. H. Burr; North and South Dakotas and Minnesota, I. N. Roberts and Peter Anderson; Eastern Iowa district, C. E. Hand; Des Moines district, C. Scott; Pottawattamie district, T. W. Williams; Nodaway and Fremont district, Henry Kemp; Northeastern Nebraska, J. F. Mintun; Omaha and suburbs, Fred A. Smith; Southeastern Nebraska, Warren E. Peak and J. W. Waldsmith; Galland's Grove district, Iowa, Chas. E. Butterworth; Little Sioux district, Iowa, David Chambers.

Let these brethren where two names are associated confer together and organize their labors to the best advantage; and to facilitate reporting I shall expect the first-named to report to me the status of the work, and I will render all the aid I can during the mission year. Where only one is named in charge, of course the brethren know the rules of reporting, and to them also I extend the promise of aid as I can come to them. If I find it advisable to make other changes I will consult with my collaborators and notify in Herald.

Brethren, there never was brighter outlook for a successful year of ministerial labor. It is true that finances are short, but this work is a work of sacrifice, and the greater the sacrifice the greater the reward. The earth is teeming with promise of a fruitful year. Prospects of a glorious harvest are grand, and if all the promises are fulfilled the tightening grip of hard times must loosen and the work triumph gloriously. Be faithful, discharge your duties as if the eye of our loving Lord was all the time upon you, and this year's report will exceed any ever made by the church heretofore.

May the good Spirit be and abide with you in all your work, I shall ever pray.

Your coworker in the Lord,

ALEX. HALE SMITH.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 2, 1896.

To the Ministry and Saints of the Southwestern Mission; Greeting:—It has pleased the conference to again appoint your humble servant in charge of the Southwest mission. Of the wisdom of this choice I have nothing to say, but will say that I am willing to serve the Master to the best of my ability in any place my brethren may appoint; if it were only a door keeper in the house of the Lord, I would feel honored by the appointment. I wish to say that a hearty cooperation is as necessary to a successful campaign in the gospel field of battle as in any other and greatly desire that harmony of action may be had among the ministry of the mission, to the end that a grand work may be done for the Master in the coming conference year. There is plenty of work for all; more calls than can possibly be filled; therefore let each remember that faithful, diligent labor is essential to accomplish the best results and that envy, jealousy, or pride of place or power will effectually bar out the Spirit of God, so that whoever indulges such unholy passions disqualifies himself for effectual work as a minister for Christ. Let us then, as faithful ministers for the Master, guard well the avenues to our hearts that the adversary gain no entrance there. So shall we be prepared to move forward the work intrusted to our care and win the souls of men to the service of Christ. I desire to hear from the various parts of the field as soon as practicable and hereby invite all that have anything of importance to communicate to write me at my permanent address, Moorhead, Iowa. Farther announcements will be made later.

Hoping to ever remain your brother in Christ,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

BORN.

PRUDEN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, February 12, 1896, to Bro Lewis M. and Sr. Stella M. Pruden, a daughter. The name of Olive Irene was given her, and she was blessed March 22, 1896, under the hands of Elders H. A. Stebbins and A. S. Cochran.

DIED.

MIDDLETON.—Gerald David, infant son of Mr. Andrew and Sr. Elsie Middleton, was born May 22, 1895, and died April 10, 1896. Funeral sermon preached by Elder M. M. Turpen, at the Saints' church, Pleasanton, Iowa, on the 11th.

HOLLENBECK.—At Clearwater, Nebraska, April 19, 1896, Sr. Fances Ann Hollenbeck. She was born in September, 1842, in Indiana; was baptized about thirty years ago in Iowa. She was afflicted for fifteen years, but her sufferings grew worse the last two months. She was patient and fully reconciled to depart. She said to one of the family in the morning that she would die that day at twelve o'clock, and wanted them all to be there at that time, and just as the clock was striking twelve her spirit took its flight. Her end was peace. The rest of the Saints is hers. She leaves a husband and four grown sons. Burial from the Saints' church. She was loved by the whole community, who attended her funeral. Sermon by Elder W. M. Rumel, assisted by Elder Levi Gamet.

BRUSH.—Bro. John Brush was born in Erie County, Pennsylvania, May 22, 1815; died May 27, 1895. He accepted the gospel in an early day, about 1835. Many will doubtless remember the history of his early life and of the trials and persecutions endured for the gospel during the "dark and cloudy day" of the church, as given in his autobiography in the Autumn Leaves some years ago. Bro. Brush came to San Bernardino during the early emigration of the Saints to that place, and embraced an early opportunity of joining the Reorganization, being baptized, confirmed, and ordained an elder July 3, 1864, by H. H. Morgan, at San Bernardino, California. Bro. Brush died as he had lived, strong in the faith. His confidence in God and in the latter-day work was strong and abiding as was his love and charity unbounded for his brethren. He suffered greatly during his last illness, and his patience was very enduring, though he often prayed the Lord to take him home, and begged the Saints not to hold him longer. The funeral services were conducted by Elder E. J. French; sermon by Elder D. L. Harris, in the Saints' chapel, Newport branch, California.

WARREN.—Sr. Cornelia Ann Warren was born in Canaan, New York; died January 27, 1896, aged 92 years, 9 months, and 8 days. She was married March 4, 1828, to Zephaniah J. Warren. Two children were born to them, Alva Warren and Susan P. Brush, with the latter of whom she made her home. She leaves also six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Sr. Warren obeyed the restored gospel in September, 1841, under the hands of Elder Asaph Blanchard. After passing through the dark and cloudy day subsequent to the death of the Prophet and the scattering of the church, and still holding fast to her integrity and retaining her faith in the gospel of Jesus Christ and in his promises, hearing the gladsome message as brought to her by the Reorganized Church, she gladly accepted it July 10, 1864, under the hands of H. H. Morgan. Our sister loved the latter-day work; and rejoicing in the hope of eternal life, fell quietly asleep, the nature of which her attendants did not discover until the cold hand of death had laid his icy fingers upon her brow, and her freed spirit had sped away to the paradise of God, there to await the resurrection morn. Funeral services were conducted by Bro. James Prothero; sermon was preached on April 19, her ninety-third anniversary, by Elder W. P. Pickering, assisted by Bro. John Morris.

BASS.—At Lamoni, Iowa, April 16, 1896, Bro. S. P. Bass. The deceased was born February 18, 1822, at Marshall, Oneida County, New York; was baptized and confirmed into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in 1874. Honored and respected by all who knew him, faithful to duty and holding to his integrity to his last moments, he was (as he often expressed) anxious and ready to go hence. Happy is the man whose God is the Lord. His wife, two sons, and four daughters remain to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon by Elder T. J. Bell assisted by Elder Henry C. Smith.

REVEL.—At his grandson's, B. R. Rollet's, four miles east of the Pleasant Grove church, Dekalb County, Missouri, April 24, 1896, Bro. Thomas Revel. He was born November 4, 1813, at Radford, near Nottingham, England; was united by marriage to Miss Elizabeth Brierley. January 28, 1838, at Nottingham, England; united with the church in 1847; came to America in 1851; went to Utah in 1852. Not being satisfied with the teachings of the church they came back to St. Louis in 1856; remained there until 1861; when he moved to Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he was baptized into the Reorganization by Bro. Charles Derry, being one of the first two that were baptized in that city, on the 8th of May, 1862; was ordained an elder by Elder Charles Derry the same day. In 1864 he was ordained a seventy by Bro. W. W. Blair, at Nauvoo, Illinois. He was sent to England the same year on a mission, and returned in 1865 to Nauvoo, where he resided until 1890; then moved to this place and remained here until his death, realizing that he had outlived the age of man and had worn out his body in the service of his Master, and for some time had desired to go home to rest. He went with full assurance that he would come forth in the first resurrection. He was aged 82 years, 5 months, and 20 days. He was buried at the Pleasant Grove cemetery, April 26, 1896, and notwithstanding the heavy rain in the morning between two and three hundred people viewed his remains. He was loved by all that knew him. The funeral was in charge of Bro. A. W. Head. T. T. Hinderks offered prayer, and Elder William E. Summerfield preached the sermon; text Revelation 14: 13.

Because of the increasing demand for the Inspired Translation in home and class study in general and in Sunday school work, also because of the increasing number of Book of Mormon and Book of Covenant classes being formed in various branches of the church, and the consequent growing demand for the "three books," the Herald Office management has decided to issue popular low-priced editions of each.

The books are all well bound and printed on good paper, the paper and plates being the same as used in higher priced editions.

They are good and durable, and with ordinary care will last the necessary wear of years. They are bound in cloth and sold at the low price of 65 cents for either Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants; the Inspired Translation at $1.

VISIONS OF JOSEPH SMITH, THE SEER.

A 48 page pamphlet, 32 pages of which contain an account of the angel's visits to Mr. Smith, the finding of ancient plates—the records from which the Book of Mormon was translated. It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Lederer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

BARON DE HIRSCH, THE PHILANTHROPIST.

BARON MAURICE DE HIRSCH, widely known for his philanthropy, died suddenly, April 20, from a stroke of apoplexy, at his estate near Presburg, Hungary. The New York Evening Post gives the following account of his early life and the methods employed by him in acquiring his vast wealth, estimated at $200,000,000:—

"Maurice de Hirsch was born at Munich just sixty-three years ago, and went to Brussels as a boy of thirteen. His career at the Athenée was not marked by any peculiar promise, and at seventeen he went into business. Before long his capacity as a financier became evident; his moderate patrimony soon doubled itself, and his personal influence was greatly increased by a matrimonial alliance with Mlle. Bischoffsheim, the daughter of a Belgian Senator. In 1866 the commercial collapse of M. Langrand Dumonceau, which shook the money world of Belgium to its foundations, gave him his opportunity. He secured the most valuable of the assets, including the Turkish railways, and by his skillful manipulation of them built up, in a quarter of a century, a fortune which is almost equal to that of the Rothschilds."

Early in his career he became interested in the wretched condition of the Jews in Russia and began to lay plans for their relief. What he was able to accomplish and the estimate in which he is held are thus set forth in the New York Tribune of April 22:—

"The death of Baron Hirsch is a loss to the whole human race. To one of the most ancient and illustrious branches of that race it will seem a catastrophe. No man of this century has done so much for the Jews as he. Perhaps that is in part because no one had a greater opportunity than he, or so great financial ability to improve it. He found the Jewish people oppressed throughout half of Europe as they had scarcely been for ages. . . .

"In his twelfth-century castle of Eichorn, in Moravia, he conceived vast schemes of beneficence. On his more than princely estate of St. Johann, in Hungary, he elaborated the details. In his London and Paris mansions he puts them into execution. He rose early and worked late, and kept busy a staff of secretaries and agents in all parts of the world. He not only relieved the immediate distress of the people, in the most practical and permanent way he sought to free them from further danger of distress. He founded schools to train them to useful work. He transported them by thousands from lands of bondage to lands of freedom, and planted them there in prosperous happy colonies. How much actual cash he spent in these undertakings can merely be estimated. It is safe to say it amounted to more than the entire fortune of any man in the United States, excepting perhaps a dozen of the richest.

"In his administration of these vast charities he displayed in marked measure the worldly wisdom and the catholicity of spirit that are characteristic of his race. He first offered to spend $10,000,000 on the Jews of Russia if the Russian Government would cooperate with him. That Government declined to cooperate, but was ready to do all the work itself if he would intrust the money to its control. That, of course, he would not do. He knew too well what itching palms and tenacious fingers Russian officials have. So he spent the $10,000,000 himself, and more than one other like sum after it. And at the same time he gave $200,000 for the Orthodox Greek Church schools of Russia, handing it straight to the very Government that was so infamously persecuting his people, and even to the arch-inquisitor Pobiedonotseff himself! The Moravians for miles around Eichorn regarded him as a Lord Bountiful. The Hungarians in all the region near St. Johann saw in him the man who built leagues of good roads and bridges by the dozen for their benefit. So, also, in countless other directions he gave his wealth freely for the benefit of mankind, without regard to race or creed."

The New York Herald, of the same date describes his gifts in the United States and the purposes he had in view as follows:—

"In 1890 Baron Hirsch carried out his plan for aiding Hebrews in this country. In April of that year he sent to a committee, in this city, the first installment of the sum promised—$120,000 annually—for immediate distribution. This sum, $10,000, he promised to send every month, during his life, and after his death, it would be found that a trust fund had been created, with a sum the interest of which would produce an equivalent amount forever. The deed of trust stated the specific objects for which the money would be used, namely: The education and relief of Hebrew immigrants from Europe, chiefly from Russia; for the transportation of immigrants, selected after their arrival at an American port, with reference to their age, character, and capacity, to such places where the conditions of the labor-market or the residence of friends will tend to make them self-supporting; for training immigrants in a trade and contributing to their support while learning such trade, and for furnishing them necessary tools and implements, and for their assistance to enable them to earn a livelihood; for improved mechanical training for adults and youths, whereby persons of industry and capacity may acquire some remunerative employment, either by the payment of apprenticeship or tuition fees, or the instruction of adults in trade-schools or otherwise, with contribution for temporary support; for the instruction of immigrants in the English language, in agricultural and industrial work.

"On February 7, 1891, Baron Hirsch cabled to Mr. Jesse Seligman that the trustees of the Hirsch fund in the United States for the benefit of impoverished immigrants to this country might draw upon him for $2,500,000, to be used in carrying out the work which the Baron had already endowed with a monthly payment of $10,000.

"In May, 1891, the trustees for the carrying out of the provisions of the Hirsch Trust for relief of the persecuted Jews, arriving in this country from Russia, purchased a large tract of land at Harrison, N. J., and erected upon it fifty cottages, intending it as the first step toward the establishment of a Hebrew colony in the above State. The trustees said they desired to stimulate among these immigrants the spirit of agriculture, for they realized that many thousands of them would have to till the soil for a living. With the object of Americanizing the Jewish immigrants the trustees established a score of classes for instruction in English, and the imparting to them a general idea of the country, the best way to begin life, the laws and Constitution of our country, and how they should observe them and become good citizens."—Literary Digest.

GLADSTONE ON THE FUTURE LIFE.

"DESTINIES depend upon character," says Mr. Gladstone in one of the most striking parts of his chapter on "The Future Life and the Condition of the Man Therein" (North American Review, March). At one place, quoting the words of John (5: 28, 29), "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation," he remarks:—

"Large, in proportion to the small volume of his recorded instructions, was the eschatological teaching of our Lord, but it all went straight to the most central and the simplest truths—his mission to draw all men unto him; the beatitude of those consenting to be drawn, in being one with the Father and the Son; for those who refuse, a state of darkness, exclusion, weeping, and gnashing of teeth, a scene of misery and affliction, on which the curtain of Gospel drops. That curtain is never lifted: and all that is behind it would seem to be withheld from us and reserved for the counsels of the Most High."

Further on he reasons as follows:—

"The skeptical mind may frame questions as it will: death sternly refuses to give it any satisfaction. The love of money may heap around us mountains of gold; all this is but to lower the ratio of that which a man is, to that which he possesses. The fever of self-indulgence may multiply our enjoyments; but each new enjoyment is, for the common run of men, a new want, and each new want is a new link in the chain of moral servitude, a new deduction from our high prerogative of freedom. Schemes of negation may each for awhile fret and fume upon the stage of human affairs. It is death, the great auditor of accounts, that reduces them, one and all, to their natural and small dimensions. The present is louder than ever in its imperious demands; but injured nature takes it upon her to reply that the present is the life of animals, and the future is the life of man. In the development of luxury, we are immeasurably ahead of the ancient Greek, and we might have been proportionably more successful in shutting off the questionings of the soul respecting that which is to come, had not a new voice sounded forth in the world to proclaim the word resurrection; since which it has become impossible, by any process within our resources, to stifle the longings of the human spirit to obtain the command of some instrument for measuring the future which expands before it.

"I suppose it to be an acknowledged fact that for the apostles, and for the first following teachers of Christianity, the doctrine of the resurrection lay at the very threshold of the gospel. It was a salient proof, of matchless force for the new scheme that, whereas the great enemy to be destroyed, according to the ancient promise, was death, death was at once and visibly destroyed by the resurrection. Moreover, it was the road toward the solution of that cloud of mysterious problems which lay spread all round the idea of our own future life. It might have been imagined, then, that as the resurrection was the first word of the gospel, the handling of these mysteries would be the next. But no. The teaching which at once traveled so far into the darkness before us as the resurrection, forthwith traveled back from it. It came back, in due order, from the resurrection which lay on the farther side of the grave, to the resurrection which lies on the hither side. Under the Christian system, destinies depend upon character: and it is the character which has to be formed here which will shape the destinies that are to be undergone hereafter. It might almost be said without levity that the early Christians set about the work of character, and left destiny to take care of itself."—Literary Digest.

POPULATION OF INDIA.

By the last census of India the total population is 287,223,431, or about one-sixth the world's population. Of these seventy-two per cent., or 207,000,000, are classified as Hindus, 57,000,000 are Mussulmans, 7,000,000 are Buddhists, and 2,000,000 are Christians. Of the 15,000,000 who are returned as literate and learned, approximately three-quarters of a million only are females.—Information.

LAMONI, IOWA, MAY 13, 1896.

"JOSEPHITES."

WE are told that in some localities elders of the church in Utah, known as the Mormon Church, in passing from house to house in their canvassing for their cause have seen fit to represent themselves as "Josephites." This is rather out of character, as such elders are not Josephites, in any proper sense of the term, no matter how much they may distort the meaning of the words.

These elders persistently refuse to debate with the elders of the Reorganized Church, following the instructions of their leaders.

If the positions assumed by the church in Utah are correct there should be no sort of hesitancy to permit those who chance to think differently to examine those positions publicly. If the positions are wrong, then like honest men those holding them should abandon them.

We are inclined to think that some of these men sent out to preach by the church in Utah, with hands tied, so to speak, by a command not to discuss with the "Josephites," meaning the Reorganized Church, would get tired and restless under such restriction and begin to make inquiry as to the reasons for such refusal to discuss. And if it should be discovered by them that the cause was for the reason that the positions assumed by the church in Utah upon faith, doctrines, and practices, and authority, are such that they cannot be maintained; then they should notify those leaders that they were done trying to defend what is indefensible. As one young man of the Utah faith said unto one of these leaders not long since: "How is this? We here in the valleys of the mountains claim to be in the light and to be led by inspiration; yet we are all the time taking positions and then receding from them? While the Josephites, the sons of the prophet Joseph, and those with them, have taken their positions and have not receded from them; but seem able to maintain them; notwithstanding we say they are in the dark and are not led by inspiration. I am tired of such work, and am done."

Honest and fair minds will not long consent to be trammelled on insufficient reasons.

To be consistent the leaders of the Utah Church, while instructing their elders not to discuss with the Josephites, should also instruct them to refrain from representing themselves as Josephites.

THAT COLLEGE.

WE are anxious that the Saints shall not forget that the college being built at Lamoni was ordered to be built by the church in conference assembled; and that the committee was chosen and appointed by the same authority.

The committee is extremely anxious to complete the building, and to do this must have help. Material and the labor to put it into an organized form takes money; this the committee have not of their own; and not enough of that subscribed is in hand to finish.

The committee believe that there ought to be from fifty to one hundred of the Saints who could buy a lot each in Graceland addition and be none the worse off than now. There are more than that number of lots for sale, on land donated by members of the church, two of them women, eligible and sightly to occupy if those buying choose to build on them. There is scarcely a bad lot in the entire number, so finely is the whole tract located.

The title is in the church and the Bishop has authority and direction of the Board of Trustees to sell. Now who will buy? The board dislike to beg, but the work intrusted to them demands that they keep the matter before the Saints. Of course, should any of the Saints desire to aid by donation or endowments, there will be no objection on the part of the board to receive such sums as may be contributed. Don't delay in the matter, as work must recommence soon in order to get ready for fall term of school in the building.

IS JUSTICE EQUAL?

THE Economist, a paper published at Shelburne, Ontario, is laid on our table by Bro. J. L. Mortimer, of Lamoni, late of Ontario, in which the question of the right to solemnize marriages by the officers of the Reorganized Church, seems to have been raised again (paper is dated April 16, '96).

It was conceded, however, that Judge Armour's decision, that the church was a religious body within the meaning of the statute and its officers, resident in Ontario, had the right to celebrate marriage, should prevail. The Economist, however, goes out of its way to air a bit of spleen in the following fashion, referring to Bro. Bowley Arnold, the officer whose action was the occasion for raising the question:—

Mr. Arnold says he is a regular ordained elder of the church, and evidently he has the legal right to perform marriage ceremonies. Should he or any of his followers, however, attempt their anointing and faith curing practices, to the exclusion of common sense methods and medical or surgical help in cases of illness or accident, they will find that there is a law to reach them. The Economist has dealt with these things vigorously in the past, and we believe with some effect. In view of the fact that in this regard Mr. Arnold says he would defy the authorities, it may be well to quote the following communication which appeared in the Economist of July 30, 1891.

Equal justice would seem to demand that if a physician should be called to treat a person ill of any known or unknown disease, and should treat such sick person according to the usually received methods, and such person so treated should die; then, in that case, the physician should be held to answer to the inquiry before the courts whether the treatment "had resulted in the death of the patient, or had accelerated the death of the patient," and if so the physician should be held for manslaughter, either as a principal, or as an accessory before the fact of death.

If the treatment of disease by the usual "common sense," or medical methods was uniformly successful, it would be eminently proper to arraign those trying other methods to answer for the disregard of such "common sense" methods; but as it is, in many instances an experiment with life as the stake, and failure so frequently occurs; it seems quite out of the lines of justice to make healers by faith and prayer, and suitable and proper nursing, responsible, and let the other class of would-be healers go unrebuked in cases where death follows treatment.

We have known more than one case of sickness where a physician has signally failed in proper attention and treatment, for reasons that were not good, and death the result. To have prosecuted such physician for malpractice would have raised a storm of indignation in community, for the reason that, "it is not reasonable to suppose that the doctors can save life in every case of sickness."

From years of observation we are of the opinion that there are fewer deaths among the numbers sick who believe the word of Christ, Mark 16 and James 5, and obey the injunction to send for the elders and are nursed in accordance with the instruction given in the revelations to the church, than take place among those who, being sick, send for the doctors and rely on medical treatment at their hands alone.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TAKE NOTICE.

It is the wish of those in charge of the Business Department that all Sunday schools who do not order by the year make up and send in their orders for the new Quarterlies,—those for the months of July, August, and September—not later than June 5. This request is made that it may be known what number will be required and that a sufficient number may be printed; also that orders may be made up promptly and forwarded to be in hand in good time for examination and study of lessons.

Heretofore the office has run short, at times, on some grades of lessons, which it has been unable to supply on late orders. Schools that order by the quarter are therefore requested to learn their wants and send in their orders not later than the date given.

Schools, or secretaries ordering for them, are also asked to be particular to see that orders for supplies are not duplicated. For instance, if Quarterlies are ordered to the address of one officer on the regular list, a newly elected officer should not order Quarterlies sent to him without reference to the standing order. The old address should simply be changed, otherwise, a duplicate order goes forward, causing unnecessary labor and expense.

This request for orders in on time is made for the reason that about one half of the schools order by the quarter and that such orders so change in quantity, in different seasons, that it is difficult to learn how many should be printed.

INFORMATION, PLEASE?

In the Searchlight for May 1, at about the middle of the left hand column on page 29, the following language will be found, referring to the Reorganized Church, as the publishers of the HERALD:—

They have vowed to believe every word that came from the mouth of Joseph Smith, even until the day of his death. What will they do? They have plenty of gods and if one fails they can call on another.

Will the Searchlight please tell us where the avowal of such intention to believe every word that came from the mouth of Joseph Smith is to be found? It will greatly oblige the editor of the HERALD, and a great many others if it will so direct us. We are afraid that the Searchlight is being fed with a bad sort of illuminating oil.

THE following letter to Pres. Joseph Smith will be noted with interest by our readers:—

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 6.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Fall River branch is to have a memorial service to the memory of Bro. Blair, the last Sunday in May, with sermon by Bro. F. M. Sheehy, and the branches of the Massachusetts district are to be invited to attend.

Bro. Blair is well known throughout this district, for in the early days of the work here he organized this district, at Fall River, in 1866, and his labors in the interest of the church of God will never be forgotten.

May his self-sacrificing devotion to the cause of Christ, and his nobleness of character, be an incentive to the ministry of the church everywhere, that all, like him, may be ready when the Master calls. How true, "but a step between us and death." May God in his wisdom, and his own time, give you counselors to fill his place, and help to bear the burdens of this "marvelous work."

Yours in the faith,

JOHN SMITH.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—The following question was asked and answered at the General Conference:—

"A brother who runs in debt to brethren and others, making no effort to pay or settle said debts—branch officers knowing of and acquainted with such conditions—although no charges in fact having been filed against said brother, would it be right to recommend such brother to other branches as a member in good standing?"

The answer was, "Decidedly No."

Another brother does precisely the same as the other brother, except he pays all he possibly can on debts, until sickness of himself and death in his family prevent him from making further payments; branch officers being acquainted with the circumstances, is it right to withhold a letter of removal from such brother; he still being willing to pay as he can?

Ans.—We were aware at the time the first of the foregoing questions was asked and answered, that a counter question could be framed in such way as to partially cover the actions of a man who did not pay. The first question is ingeniously framed, so is the second. Our answer must apply to both questions. Some time ago the church in conference took the question of delinquent debtors into consideration, and passed a resolution to the effect that a person getting into debt, and failing to pay, or to make arrangements with his creditors, could not properly be appointed, or sustained as a representative of the church. The Quorum of the Twelve, acting in view of this resolution declined appointing any who were known to be offending debtors; and the principle has from time to time received indorsement. The object was, not to torment, or harass any honest debtor; but to reach that class, who from indolence, or careless disregard for their word, persistently made debts, and refused, or neglected to either pay, or to make arrangements with their creditors; and still demanded that the church should sustain them as preachers and members in good standing. This the church cannot do; hence, the answer to question first. Our reply to the second is like unto it. The officers and members of the branch, where a brother in the condition supposed in the second question are to be the judges whether the brother has made due effort to pay as supposed, and tried, honestly, to make proper arrangements with creditors; and also, whether the branch can, or should justly give a letter of removal to a brother asking for one. The right is with the branch to withhold the letter or to issue it on request; and to determine in each individual case what the action of the branch shall be.

There can be no possible excuse for a man, no matter how poor, to be dodging from branch to branch, where he is not known, getting help here and there from kind-hearted Saints; and leaving locality after locality with a record of debts unpaid and unprovided for, due to both those in and out of the church, really victimizing the community wherever he goes. The church is in fault if it countenances people of this sort. And in making these statements there is no intention of personating any as guilty of such things, hence no one is at liberty to take offense hereat, as none is intended.

Q.—Have the priest and teacher of a branch the right to call meetings within the limits of the branch and leave the regular meetings, without the knowledge, consent, or advice of the President; said meetings being on the time of the regular meetings, or so near as to interfere with their sessions?

A.—No; these officers are regular officers of the branch, and should be in their places in the regular meetings of the branch, and are not at liberty, by right, to do what might create disturbance of the regular services of the branch.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. E. W. NUNLEY, Martin, Texas, May 2:—

I have been holding meetings about five miles east of this town this week; have had good interest all the time; baptized eight into the kingdom up to date. Meeting still going on.

Bro. S. W. L. Scott, Coldwater, Michigan, May 6:—

I returned last eve from California, Michigan. Found my Book of Mormon awaiting me from the Herald bindery, and I am more than gratified. Thanks. Sunday last was an eventful day with the people of California and "State Line." After a service at Saints' chapel, Clear Lake, Indiana, we repaired to the margin of beautiful Clear Lake and in the presence of hundreds of people, many of whom were from California and adjacent regions, we administered the rite of baptism to seven persons, all heads of families. The day was typical, the sky pellucid, and brilliant sunshine made the shadows dance and all nature dressed in her emerald robes, while the waves so sweetly undulating, surged upon the broken beach, with spray kissing the rays of sunshine, ascending like the spirit of waters slain upon the rocks. God's Spirit tinging the scene with solemnity, broke the cross, and took away the dread. 'Twas a joyful hour. On the Tuesday following, we drove the distance, six miles, once more, and the eighth person experienced the "bath of regeneration," all from California, Michigan, the seal of my ministry the past winter. It can be said truly, these have entered the kingdom through "great tribulation." The popular tide of religious influence, with low species of "doggeral" and "rot" were hurled at these honest hearts; but the Lord is stronger than all their hosts, and led them into the gentle Shepherd's fold. Many more promised to give themselves to the Lord when we return, and scores are believing the gospel; but like some of old time, "fear the people." My next appointment at that place is the last Sunday in May. I also opened up in the Grove district, a promising place; indeed I am on the string (of appointments) and see no prospect of getting off. Our sympathies generally are called out in the death of our beloved Bro. Blair.

Bro. G. H. Godby, Bell Grove, West Virginia, the 30th ult.:—

I have just closed a meeting with the Buffalo City branch. Baptized two, blessed five children, left others near the kingdom. I start to-morrow for Calhoun County. I mourn the loss of Bro. Blair. Sad indeed.

Bro. S. W. L. Scott, writing from Coldwater, Michigan, May 6, has this to say for the present low prices of the Hymnal:—

"Saints' Hymnals" received all right. The postage on books from Lamoni is an eye opener. Sixteen cents on each package of three books is 64 cents on the dozen, over the price of one book. Deducted from the cost of a dozen equals $5.36. Price of one book, the one twelfth of $5.36 is 45½ cents apiece—cheap for the Hymnal. I presented this solution to some. It ought to be presented to all "complainers."

Henry Kemp, Shenandoah, Iowa, May 9:—

I am now about to start for Prescott to assist Bro. O. B. Thomas in a series of tent meetings.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SR. ISAAC HOGABOOM, of Sioux City, Iowa, suffering from paralytic stroke, desires the prayers of the Prayer Union.

Bro. William Lewis, of St. Joseph, Missouri, has been appointed by the Presidency, Bro. J. R. Lambert, missionary in charge, concurring, to labor in Far West District, Missouri, and Eastern Kansas, for conference year.

Bro. I. P. Baggerly departed for his field—Texas, and Bro. F. M. Weld for the Nauvoo district during the past week.

Bro. Amos B. Moore, of Lamoni, late missionary in Texas, will labor for the coming conference year in the Rocky Mountain mission, being appointed thereto by the Presidency. Bro. Heman C. Smith, missionary in charge, concurring in such appointment. Bro. Moore is a quiet, pleasant, unassuming man, a good fireside companion and preacher, a good counselor and a safe defender of the faith. He has had a long acquaintance with the church, and its history.

Bro. Heman C. Smith has been quite severely afflicted with rheumatism in his arms and limbs for the past ten days, being confined to his bed most of the time. Those who have written him will understand why his correspondence has been delayed. They will hear from him when he recovers, which we trust will be soon.

Our readers will find a matter of special interest in the report of the Board of Publication which appears in this issue; viz., the provisions for preparing a history of the church. Bro. Joseph and Heman C. Smith have been selected to prepare a history of the church to date, and Bro. Fred M. Smith as Church Historian, to make record of current events.

Nasir Ed-din, Shah of Persia, was assassinated at Teheren, May 1, by a member of a secret society pledged to kill the Shah because of cruelties to his subjects. From press accounts he was a brutal and absolute ruler who did not hesitate to take the lives of his subjects on any pretext.

SCOLDING.—Scolding is worse than useless. With children it arouses antagonism, if only because angry looks and feelings are so contagious. One should wait until the irritation subsides before correcting any one. A reprimand given in the presence of others is apt to arouse a feeling of mortified pride that quite nullifies any impression that might otherwise be made, and it is an exceptional person that can be trusted to be the bearer of a scolding. It is apt to gather force on route. Argument between parents and children is unseemly, and it is always best to avoid letting the point of contest become too important. —Ladies' Home Journal.

OUR HOPE.

Though now we are wanderers
And are scattered far and wide,
Yet we cherish still the hope
To Saints so dear;
That the time is fast approaching
When we'll all be gathered home
To prepare for the great Sabbathic year.

Sore, sore we have been tried
Since the church was led away
To sojourn in the wilderness so drear,
But we cherish still the hope,
(And we know it will not fail,
'Twill return for the great Sabbathic year.

The Jews will gather home,
And the tribes will gather in
To the regions round about
From far and near;
For the prophets have foretold it,
And we know it will not fail,
They'll return for the great Sabbathic year.

Then spread the glad tidings
To the earth's remotest bounds,
From India's sunny isles
To Greenland drear;
That Jesus Christ is coming
(And we know they will not fail)
For to reign through the great Sabbathic year.

A WORD FROM THE BISHOPRIC.

To the Saints and Friends of the Cause of Christ in All the World; Greeting:—

Through the goodness of God who hath given to us an abiding hope in the gospel of his Son we are permitted to address you, and as servants in a special order of his work, point out therein some duties and obligations that are common to all, and of which there is great necessity that there be immediate and active coöperation in their performance. A new conference year has been entered upon; the church has seen fit in its undertakings to continue to press the proclamation of the gospel and answer the demands of the hour so vividly portrayed in the last revelation to the church in the language:—

The work now lying before the missionary quorums of the church is of such increased magnitude and importance—the field so white unto the harvest, and the need for laborers so great—that the Twelve and Seventy under their direction, together with such high priests and elders as can travel and preach as missionaries, shall be free to wait upon their ministry in gospel work, . . . —D. C. 122: 7.

This is the situation as presented by the great spiritual Head of the Church

A. D. 1894. The years which have come and gone since, have only heightened this state of things, increased the demand for gospel labor, and brought nearer the harvest, so that the General Conference of 1896, in fact, had open to it but one course, and that was to make all the provision within its power to answer the demands for missionary labor.

To have done less would have, to that extent, lost to the church the priceless opportunity offered to it, and lost to us as members, commendation and favor with heaven. We have but one honorable course left us; to go backward will prove that we have been unworthy of the trust granted, and the end to such is degradation and death. A determined effort forward to meet every emergency as men and women of the highest courage and faith is our only safety or freedom, and hesitation at such a time is unworthy such a cause as ours, and suicidal.

The General Conference while taking into consideration the difficulties lying in the way of pushing vigorously the gospel work, spoke in favor of an effort worthy of such a people as the Lord's, placing its ministry in the field, relying, as was its right to do, upon every man and woman to perform his or her duty toward keeping them there.

This effort to fulfill the law and send forth such laborers as are willing to go and preach, abiding at their posts until lawfully relieved, continues the heavy expense the church has been under, with some important incidental items.

1. The missionaries must be made ready and placed in their fields of labor.

2. Families of missionaries must be provided for so that they may live, and the law to the minister that he "Take no thought for to-morrow," be honored.

3. Our esteemed missionaries, Bro. and Sr. L. R. Devore, in the far-off South Sea Islands, after spending full six years in labor, now ask a sabbath in which to regain their failing health and wasted energies. Bro. Joseph F. and Sr. Emma Burton have been selected to supply their places, and we must send them at once and return the others.

4. The poor we have always with us, and we must continue to care for them; to do this rightly we must complete the Home for such as need and are worthy of the comforts of such an institution.

All of these objects are in direct line with the command of the Lord in which he has stated that if we love him we will perform, and impart of our substance in aid thereof, with the statement: "and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors." The duty of each and every member of the church is made clear and distinct. We here and now ask, Is there anyone who cannot help in this work?

But notwithstanding the discouragements to the work and the forces of evil arrayed against it, we are not without the golden shades on the hopeful side. Our missionaries this year have entered their respective fields to do valiant work for the cause of truth with a readiness that far excels that of any other year in the last decade, and we already hear of their victories.

We congratulate you then that the work of the evil one to destroy the faith of the Saints is being met by a brave and courageous army whose weapons are the Holy Spirit and the word of God; these finally will win. Will you also take hold promptly and aid in the work of keeping these men in their fields? Let us not have it justly said that a single one had to return home or stop his work because illy supplied, or that his wife and little ones lacked for the necessaries of life.

With united work the church will win in the present year the greatest victory since its organization; and we confidently look to you, and each of you, to make this year by prayer and consecration a special one of usefulness and good to you and the church, and may the Lord bless you in so doing and sanctify every gift to the good of his cause.

We desire before closing this interview to note the removal by death of one whose official life was closely connected with the Bishopric and who cheerfully sought to perform his full duty; Pres. W. W. Blair, ever hopeful, courageous, and faithful in his work while in the kingdom as represented in earth, he now may fittingly abide with the family in heaven. Let us not forget to keep in mind his active life and many virtues, nor fail to learn from the record of his experiences.

Ever confident in the full triumph of Zion's cause, we are,

Very respectfully yours,

E. L. KELLEY.

SELECT READING FOR JUNE MEETING OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION.

"You hear that boy laughing?—you think he's all fun; But the angels laugh, too, at the good he has done; The children laugh loud as they troop to his call, And the poor man that knows him laughs loudest of all." —Holmes.

It is barely possible that among some of our readers there are those who do not realize the importance of that to which we are trying to direct their attention. If it be so, there is no better argument which can be advanced in its favor. To what end are the efforts of all the truly wise and good directed? Is it not to the bettering of that which is wrong in the world? Granting this is it not wise that the means which lead most directly to this end should be chosen? What father, what mother is there among us but must know that there will never come under their sway, their authority, a kingdom so completely under their control as the kingdom of home? Don't become weary with us, therefore, if we continue to glean a little here and a little there which may help you in governing this kingdom, that your sons and your daughters may go forth to add new honors to your name and bless the world through the very guidance received from you. First, then, let us discuss the

COMPANIONSHIP AND COEDUCATION OF BOYS AND GIRLS.

Writing upon this subject an eminent English physician says:—

"I am certain that harm is done to many girls from their rigid exclusion from the companionship of boys; under proper supervision no harm could happen from more unrestrained association of boys and at this critical period, [the period of dawning manhood and womanhood,] and it seems to me a mischievous plan to draw wide barrier lines between the sexes at a time when they ought to begin to understand themselves and each other. By harmless intercourse many of the risks may be obviated which afterward beset them when an unaccustomed association is opened out at an age when passion has the chief ascendancy.

"There is a whole volume of argument," says our author, "for coeducation in this utterance; and it is in the line of God's directing when he placed boys and girls in the same family. 'What God hath joined together let not man put asunder.' Until God gives all the boys to one set of parents and all the girls to another, we shall not give our voice to 'disjoint education.'"

THE AWKWARD AGE.

"About this time comes to boys and girls the awkward age. Who of us does not remember, and remembrance brings the hot blood to our faces, the tortures experienced as we entered our teens and became suddenly conscious of our own bigness—physically; especially the bigness of our hands and feet which seemed suddenly to have grown beyond the limits of our jurisdiction so that we could not keep them in order. Worst of all, everybody seemed to be watching us and thinking, and perhaps saying, 'How stupid and awkward' or 'how silly and bashful.'"

The cause of this and the remedy it will be well to discuss, for however trivial it may seem to us now, there doubtless was a time when we, too, suffered from this, even as our children may be suffering now, and if we can recall our own feelings it may help us to appreciate theirs. Children at this age especially need to be treated with careful consideration by parents and older members of the family. Our author holds that this awkwardness "is often greatly aggravated by the course of snubbing to which our boys and girls are often subjected."

It is possible for boys and girls to be carried through with such judgment and discretion as to never know this awkward age. "I have now in mind," says our author, "a family of five boys who had no sister, but whose mother is a queen among women, and their father a knightly man after St. Paul's pattern. From their cradle these boys knew nothing but the most courteous treatment from their father and mother, and they grew into courtesy as a second nature. They were wide-awake, manly fellows, every one of them, full of fun and frolic, as healthy, happy boys ought to be, yet never rude, awkward, or ungainly."

GOODNESS SHOULD BE VALUED ABOVE SMARTNESS.

"Be careful not to train your boys and girls to value smartness more than goodness. Francis Gardner, a noted English teacher who has had over two thousand boys under his charge, says that no parent ever forgave him for saying, 'Your boy is not quick or bright, but he is thoroughly pure, true, and good.' They did not forgive him because they really prized smartness above goodness, and took it for granted that purity, truth, and goodness could be attained at any odd hour. If he told them their sons were bright and quick, but he feared they were not honest, pure, unselfish, the father replied, 'Well, I was a little wild myself when I was a boy; that will all come right in time.' They were willing to leave that line of training to chance, if only their boys came out of school brilliant, smart scholars. But it is written in tears of blood on many a hearthstone, that it is not safe to leave the most vital part of training to chance, that it will not come out right if girls are allowed to run wild and boys to sow their wild oats unheeded."

OUR SCHOOLS.

Closely allied to this subject stands that of the relation of parent to teacher and the duties of each in relation to the scholar. The question is asked direct, "What ought school to do for our boys and girls? It ought first to make them good readers of English and so train them that when they read it aloud they shall follow the Bible rule, reading 'distinctly' and giving 'the sense.' In order to do this they must gain the sense for themselves, hence must be trained to read thoughtfully and attentively, when reading silently. It should give such command of language as shall enable them to express their thoughts clearly and concisely. It should train them to observe closely and accurately, and to fit them for the many emergencies of American life, they should be trained to think while standing on their feet. They should become accurate and quick in figures; should learn enough of geography to read the newspapers intelligently, and in this day when all the nations are bound together by bands of iron and nerves of steel, that includes a knowledge of the whole earth.

"They should know enough of history to be worthy their grand birthright as citizens of the American Republic, and this includes a knowledge of the history that is being made to-day and recorded in the newspapers, which is quite as important to them as is the history inscribed on the Moabite stone. They should know sufficient physiology to keep their bodies in health, and to know how to keep a healthy home when they become the heads of one; of philosophy to explain everyday phenomena, and, if necessary, to run the steam engine which is fast becoming a farm and household necessity, and of botany and zoölogy to know the laws governing plant and animal life and successful growth.

"They should also have such a taste of good literature as shall create an appetite for it, so that vile, trashy books and papers shall offer no temptation to our boys and girls, their mental appetite refusing such trash, as their physical appetite does the garbage of the street. It should train them to be prompt, efficient, accurate; to be industrious, honest, temperate; to be truthful, respectful, and obedient to God and man. You have a right to demand this from every school as the least it ought to do for your children; let them do as much more as they can, but let these foundations be laid in solid rock. Is your school doing this for your children? If not, is the home at all responsible for the failure? Home and school must work together to secure the highest results. In order that the two may thus work harmoniously, each must know what the other is doing. . . . Indeed, there is no end of the good you can do by interesting yourself in the school, and unifying its work and that of the home. . . . Finally, most important of all, help the schools to train your boys and girls to be honest, industrious, temperate, truthful, loyal to God, country, and home by your own royally consistent example."

QUESTIONS TO BE DISCUSSED.

The companionship and coeducation of boys and girls.

The helpfulness which should be given the awkward age.

Goodness to be preferred above smartness.

Our schools—what we have a right to demand of them and their relation to the home.

Sr. Walker:—It is with a feeling of backwardness that I present for publication these few lines of sympathy, for I am well aware that far more able writers than myself will put their pens in use in sending sympathy and consolation to the bereaved family of Bro. Blair. But these lines, humble though they may be, come from the heart; and my feelings as I stood in the door of my mother's cottage and watched the casket containing the still form of our beloved brother and friend carried into the house as it was brought from the train, words could not describe. Far away, high up among the mountains of Nevada is a lonely grave, unmarked and perhaps unknown—my father's. But when the Master comes and the dead are awakened he will not forget where his faithful servants sleep.

Asleep! O how sweet is the call of the Master

To those who have served him so faithful below;
A calm, peaceful rest to the heart's weary suffering,
A soft, soothing touch that no mortal can know.

But cruel the message that bears us such tidings,—
Our loved ones departed,—their life work is sealed!
No last, loving look, not a word nor expression!
O, hard is the wound which can never be healed!

We sympathize fully. The depths of your sorrow,
The same bitter grief has crossed over our way.
Though years since have vanished, and time wrought its changes,
The wound is as fresh in our hearts there to-day.

Let them sleep where the sorrows of earth cannot touch them.

Brave soldiers for Christ! while on duty they fell,
Has any done better, or who has been braver,
Though faced by the flashing of musket and shell?

It matters not, then, where the body reposes—
Away in the mountains or here on the plain.

They will rise with the just in the first resurrection,
With Christ and his people in glory to reign.

Sunday School Department.

MRS. J. H. ROYCE, EDITOR,

Baroda, Berrien County, Michigan.

(Send communications for this department to the Editor. Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

WE often wonder who is thinking of the Sunday school column and where our next material is coming from when a voice, perhaps from California, answers our question with an assurance of the deepest interest. We had hoped that our workers would supply us with much material from General Convention but for some reason we have received nothing. Our new Superintendent has our congratulations and we trust that he may make good use of our column in making known his plans. We all want to do the very best that is in us, keeping in view the one object of our work, and all pulling together. We had suggested a systematic course of lesson hints for the column, but, since the convention did not deem it best we gladly take up the work as before, asking that the wants of the workers be made known.

The column is yours to use as you see fit. As this is the official organ, that bears its message to the far-off isles of the sea, may we, as Sunday school workers, see that our column is laden with seeds of thought worthy of finding lodgment in the hearts of those who are laboring to so train for the Master's use a class of standard bearers, that they will be better fitted to take up the work than we were, who had lived to manhood and womanhood without the light of the gospel.

"Every one is sowing

Both by word and deed,

All mankind are growing

Either wheat or weed.

Thoughtless ones are throwing

Any sort of seed."

"To reach the port of heaven, we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it,—but we must sail, not drift, nor lie at anchor."—O. W. Holmes.

THE PRIMARY CLASS AND ITS TEACHER.

Dear Friends, Brothers, and Sisters, and Sunday School Workers:—

I have chosen this for my subject not because I believe I am able to handle it thoroughly or exhaust it completely, but because I regard it as very important and worthy of consideration. I desire to correct a false idea that has obtained if possible and offer a few suggestions relative to this work. Many, no doubt, consider the primary class of the least importance in the Sabbath school and that anyone is capable of teaching that class.

You will be surprised when I express myself as holding views contrariwise, and believing that too little regard is had for this class, and especially in the selection of proper teachers for it. I believe the primary class to be the most important of all classes, because it is right here that the seeds which we hope will spring into beautiful Christian lives, are sown. Consequently, if we wish the work done properly we must select the brightest and most spiritually minded persons to take charge of this precious trust. Only those who love the little ones can reach their sensitive little hearts. Only those willing to devote special care and attention to the work should be intrusted with this class. She, alone, who will let the sunshine of her soul beam forth in her face and actions shedding its warmth and life-giving power to those about her, should undertake so responsible a work. Why be so careful in this matter, I hear some ask? The minds of little children are like potter's clay, capable of being molded into any shape. If incompetent workmen attempt to handle the clay they fail to accomplish the work and the vessel which might have been molded into perfect shape and become a thing of beauty is marred. So it is if an incompetent person is allowed to lead or direct these little ones.

Again, their little minds are like young and tender plants, requiring one of skill and knowledge to handle them to obtain the best results. The little plants if carefully watched and guarded will thrive, grow, and develop into hardy ones and will reward the one who labored over them with beautiful blossoms; but, on the contrary, if neglected they become dwarfed and distorted; or, perhaps worse, they struggle along for awhile and gradually lose vitality and finally droop and die. So with the little minds if properly trained and directed, they grow and develop into that which God designed—beautiful characters, shedding their bright effulgent light to those about them; but how different if misguided and led, they too like the plants gradually droop, fade, and finally from lack of proper nourishment die spiritually. Thus that which should have produced pleasure by becoming useful and ornamental in God's kingdom is robbed of this element and only pity mingled with regret is the result.

If the mind is properly trained while young there is no danger of a departure in after life for the impressions of childhood are the most lasting. Some one has said, "Show me the first five years of a child's life and I will tell you its future." One faction of Christian worshippers say if they can have the first seven years of a child's life they can mould its character and will be able to ever after hold it. I believe this in a great measure is true. I agree with the wise man of ancient times, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." So, I reiterate, select your very best material, spiritually, for teachers of the primary class, and give its members the proper start in this important work. Here we have a class of say eight or ten (and the class ought never to be larger) bright-eyed, merry-hearted little boys and girls. O, how they love their Sabbath school! How they love their teacher! It is painful for them to miss a Sabbath, and they are disappointed when they miss the pleasant face of their teacher. You no doubt inquire, "What has filled them with the desire to always be present and this love for their teacher?" It is this, everything is pleasant there; their teacher loves them and studies in every way to make the class attractive and cheerful. She always greets them with a pleasant word or smile; she notices if any are absent and expresses herself as sorry; she tells others she is glad to see them out again and that she missed them very much. She finds pretty little songs to teach them, songs that are all their own and that the older ones do not know. These are enlivened and made impressive by a few motions which make them more interesting. She teaches them some little prayers, too, and they learn how much they have to be thankful for. She lets those who are capable read the Lesson Story for her, being careful that the others are listening. If there are any words they do not understand she explains what they mean, and, if possible, substitutes easier ones in the place of the hard ones. Besides, they have a desire to learn something new concerning God, the Ruler of all things, the knowledge of whose existence dwells intuitively in their minds. Hence this strong desire to come where they believe they will obtain it.

They love to express their ideas to their teacher and classmates and feel at liberty so to do as they know she will listen to them. They love to listen to the ideas expressed by their teacher and classmates, and they thus get a clearer and better understanding of the lesson. And thus the time is pleasantly passed and the merry boys and girls made happy and are ready at the return of each Sunday to be in their loved Sabbath school. Inasmuch as their little minds are drawn in this direction it is an obligation on the part of the Sunday school workers to see there is the proper material furnished them from which to gain spiritual food, also that the proper persons to use this material be selected as instructors.

I believe the church has wisely provided the Gospel Quarterlies, both Primary and Intermediate, as a basis of instruction. I prefer the Intermediate to the Primary, as it now is, as it gives the same lessons that the Senior Grade does. I think the little ones like to be like grown folks as much as possible; besides it enables them to join in class reviews and concert exercises, which I believe gives them a degree of satisfaction. The teacher by carefully selecting and presenting the simpler points in these lessons can make the minds of very young children grasp the truths underlying the subject matter. If this is accomplished the victory is won.

Besides the Quarterlies, we might suggest the use of blackboards, maps, charts, etc. One of the best means of impressing the lessons upon the minds of the children is the use of pictures. These can be taken from books and papers. They will also be found useful in fixing the attention of the child. With very little ingenuity objects of wood, clay, or other materials can be made to represent men, animals, trees, etc., and arranged upon tables or in boxes of sand so as to represent the scene being studied about. Such aids are invaluable in presenting the idea to the child and establishing it in his mind. "But," you will say, "who has time for all this?" I will answer, She who has the work at heart. She will find the time, even if she have to sacrifice some of her own comforts. It will be a noble sacrifice and one the Lord will recognize. He will bless you in it and you will be surprised to find many useful ideas presented to you while engaged in preparing your work. Can we doubt the presence of the Holy Spirit in this? No, never; it is a work worthy of our best and noblest efforts. Let us each, then, who has taken charge of a primary class, study more diligently to present the truths of the lessons in a more thorough and lasting manner, feeling we have a responsible position and one we will have to give an account of in the final arbitrament before God's throne. May we then have the assurance of duty well done and be able to say, "Of all that thou hast given us, O Lord, we have lost not one."

Letter Department.

MILTON, Fla., May 4.

Editors Herald:—I desire to state that I am feeling well in the ministry of the gospel and am hopeful that there will be a big work done here yet. There has recently been a great revival in this Florida district; about thirty-three new members being baptized by Bro. Powell in the last month. They are all good moral people and will make excellent members. There are about eight more to be baptized soon. We are now vigorously engaged in organizing and reorganizing branches. We are determined to get the district out of its chaotic condition, and everything indicates that it will soon be done.

Yesterday, Sunday, May 3, we had a great meeting at the Santa Rosa church. Bro. Chute was the speaker. He preached the funeral of Sr. Sarah Jones. There was a great concourse of people—about five hundred—from miles around; some coming eighty-four miles, as the sister was known far and wide. We had dinner on the ground. The day was a typical Southern day with pleasant breezes; so you see it was a grand success.

I think I shall remain here until the work is on a sure footing. The longer I stay the better I like the country and the people. I seem to have the confidence of the Saints and outsiders. Your colaborer,

JAMES M. BAGGERLY.

DOW CITY, Iowa, May 7.

Editors Herald:—Having received word from Bro. J. W. Gillen that I am to take charge of the Western Nebraska mission, I take this means of informing all concerned that my permanent address is Dow City, Crawford County, Iowa.

I should like to hear from all that desire labor done in their vicinity as soon as possible, so we may arrange to fill all the calls possible with the least practicable expense.

Missionaries, local officers, and members, let us all put forth our best efforts that the work in Western Nebraska may be advanced and the cause of Christ more firmly planted on these western plains. "Each one can do a little," and many littles united is what is needed in this work.

I will enter the field in a few days, ready to do what, by the assistance of the Comforter, I am able to do.

Praying the blessings of God to be with all his humble Saints I remain,

Your brother and colaborer for Christ,

D. M. RUDD.

FLAT, Mo., April 29.

Editors Herald:—We are still doing our utmost to present the word of truth, the restored gospel, to the people of these regions. The religious complexion of this part of Missouri is overwhelmingly Baptist, three different bodies of Baptists having organized worshipping congregations within a radius of five miles of us. One of those factions, the Missionary element, being aided and abetted by their church paper published at St. Louis, is waging a determined and relentless war against us in these parts.

The said paper, "The American Baptist Flag," is publishing a purported serial "History of Mormonism, by Abe Carlin," in which they deal in misstatements concerning facts, and misrepresentations regarding doctrines. The people here, like one of old, are so attached to their idols that they cannot longer endure their true nature to be exposed to the piercing rays of God's true light and have quit coming to church for fear of having the nakedness of their heroes exposed.

The said serial story began in November last, since which time I have watched anxiously for some of our elders who have opportunity to notice it through the Herald columns, but so far have been disappointed. The people have only right recently shown this spirit in so marked a manner.

Your brother,

J. H. TIBBELS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 8.

Editors Herald:—The work is still progressing here. Baptism will be administered next Sunday afternoon. Bro. J. F. Mintun, I. N. Roberts, and J. F. McDowell have been with us of late, the latter preaching several times. The efforts of each were highly commended. Taking advantage of their presence I preached each Sunday in Omaha, also at Crescent. I speak in each of these places next Sunday and on Monday I leave for Macedonia, intent on holding a series of meetings; thence to Fontanelle, where I anticipate a hearty reception, if the ministers who have been so eager to meet me in public discussion have not lost any of their zeal. I will hold tent meetings there.

The missionary force in this district will be less than ever this year, owing to the appointment of Bro. H. N. Hansen to Utah. The demands for preaching in new localities will take all the time of the present force (and more if possible) and we trust the branches will care for themselves, leaving the missionaries "at liberty to push the preaching of the word into the new fields now widening before them."

There are a number of large towns in this district where we would like to introduce this gospel, such as Avoca, Macedonia, Neola, Walnut, Oakland, Hancock, and Minden, in Pottawattamie county; and Atlantic, Anita, Cumberland, Lewis, Marne, Massena, and Wiola, in Cass; and Adair, Greenfield, Hebron, and Orient, in Adair. If God will bless and direct us we will reach as many as we can.

If there are any Saints or friends in any of these places they will confer a favor by notifying the undersigned. I shall make an effort in some of these places, whether there are members there or not. Surely God can stand by us as well as he did in the early days of this work, and if we do our part he will raise up friends for us.

Shall endeavor to do all I can for the Master. Wish I always knew just what to do and how to do it. I know that humility augments one's success in this work more than any one other qualification. May God help us to be humble and may we each have the submission and trust as expressed by George Kingle in the following lines:—

"Father, I do not ask
That thou should'st choose some other task
And make it mine. I pray
But this, let every day
Be moulded still
By thine own hand; my will Be only thine however deep
I have to bend, thy hand to keep.
Let me not simply do, but be content,
Sure that the little crosses each are sent;
And no mistake can ever be
With thine own hand to choose for me."

Yours ever,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

P. S.—Have just received a letter from Fontanelle containing six propositions for discussion which seem fair. The Methodist and Christian minister each affirm the genuineness of their respective churches and creeds, and I affirm the claims of this church. They together affirm that the canon of Scripture is closed. I affirm that the Book of Mormon is of divine origin and Joseph Smith a prophet of God. The discussion will commence about June 1.

T. W. W.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 9.

Editors Herald:—To-night ends a hotly contested debate with a mortal-soulist at Foster, Missouri. If I had never been established before in the belief of the immortality of the soul, and that man was conscious between death and the resurrection, I certainly am now.

My soul has been fired with the inspiration of God's Holy Spirit, while defending our position upon this important question. I found Bro. J. R. Lambert's book, "What is Man?" a "golden gem," and almost an invaluable aid to me during this controversy. Bro. Lambert's arguments are clear, pointed, concise, and free from ambiguity and meaningless terms.

I feel free in saying that this discussion has been one among the best efforts of my life's work, in bringing "life and immortality to light through the gospel" to the people. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." A large majority of the people have confessed that my arguments have been cheering and grounded in God's noble truth.

This is my second debate at Foster; and while the prejudices of the people have been great, yet there are a number who are believing. Some have already expressed themselves as being ready for baptism.

I will remain over Sunday and preach at eleven and night, then expect to go on to Olathe, Kansas, to assist Bro. R. W. Davis in tent work for a few days, then on to Kingston, Missouri, to commence a debate with Rev. J. H. Carter, on the 26th inst.

The debate that was to have come off during this month at Richmond, Missouri, between myself and J. H. D. Tomson, I guess has collapsed. The Rev. Tomson had it postponed once before, setting his own time in May, and he now writes me saying: "I cannot debate with you this month, neither can I say at present how soon I can; but I shall be glad to meet you in fair and honest debate sometime this year—1896."

I am not at all seeking debates, neither am I on the "war path;" but this man Tomson is the man that made himself so conspicuous at the Russellville church, lecturing against us, and then wrote up a report of the same, having it published in his church paper, the "Primitive Christian," stating that I. N. White had run and left the field as soon as he was upon the grounds to expose our claims, etc. The statement was false. I am not seeking to meet such men, but justice demands that some one shall stand in the front ranks to take care of our cause when assailed by such doctors of divinity.

The Master's cause is moving along finely in my mission field. Every man in my mission that is under my charge is at work in the field. We have in this field such men as F. C. Keck, Henry Sparling, R. W. Davis, C. J. Spurlock, R. T. Walters, F. L. Sawley, W. C. Cather, W. H. Mannering, and G. M. Baker, of the General Conference appointees; besides a few good local workers. I try to keep myself posted in regard to every move, whereabouts, etc., of my coworkers. This is the only way, I find, to systemize the work, to be able to meet the many important demands, oftentimes saving of means in long, expensive trips to fill the calls made in the mission. My permanent address is, Independence, Missouri.

Hastily yours,

I. N. WHITE.

SERMON BY ELDER J. D. ERWIN,

At the General Conference, Lamoni, Iowa, April 12, 1893.

THE FUTURE OF MAN.

I AM glad of the privilege I have this evening of addressing you. It has been my privilege since engaged in the ministry to preach to all classes of people, but I do not remember having the opportunity before of standing before such a large body of Latter Day Saints. I have the same gospel to preach to you that we all preach. So far as I understand the people that I am connected with, we all offer the same thing to the world; some of us are more gifted in dealing out smooth-flowing eloquence and scholarly rhetoric than others, but the truth remains the same.

We will read for the basis of our remarks this evening the language found in the sixteenth chapter of Luke, commencing with the nineteenth verse:—

There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: and there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores, and desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

We will read in connection with this language, that which is found on page 311 of the Book of Mormon, chapter 19 of the Book of Alma:—

Behold, it has been made known unto me, by an angel, that the spirits of all men, as soon as they are departed from this mortal body; yea, the spirits of all men, whether they be good or evil, are taken home to that God who gave them life. And then shall it come to pass the spirits of those who are righteous, are received into a state of happiness, which is called paradise; a state of rest; a state of peace, where they shall rest from all their troubles, and from all care, and sorrow, &c. And then shall it come to pass, that the spirits of the wicked, yea, who are evil; for behold, they have no part nor portion of the Spirit of the Lord: for behold they choose evil works, rather than good:

therefore the spirit of the devil did enter into them, and take possession of their house; and these shall be cast out into outer darkness; there shall be weeping, and wailing and gnashing of teeth.

The subject that I wish to present to you this evening is one that there has been so many books written upon, and that is the subject of hell and heaven. We find by investigating the history of the human family, so far as we have any history of them, that in all ages, among all people and nations they have believed in a life beyond the grave. They looked forward to something better beyond death, than that we enjoy in this world. All minds, from that of the cultured of the enlightened nations to the rude savage of the forest, believe in this grand sentiment that there remains something better for man than the opportunities and privileges that we enjoy in this probationary state. There have been various opinions among the human family in regard to their destiny beyond the tomb. I might present what Mohammed says concerning this matter, but I shall not take time to do that as I will seek to be as brief as possible, but I will endeavor to present to you what the Scriptures hold out to mankind will be the destiny of us all.

I presume, in looking over this congregation, probably there are people here from all parts of the United States, and that there are grand expectations existing in your hearts that have moved upon you to come here, to leave your homes and probably your families and congregate upon this occasion. That grand expectation that stimulates your hearts and makes you glad is the hope of eternal rest in the future, beyond the grave. We find that after we pass over the chilly river of death that there remains something better for man than the trials and troubles incident to this life; that after passing beyond the tomb all is not ended, but there is for the righteous a place prepared. It is called in the Scriptures a place of rest, of joy. We quite likely have all been taught—at least the speaker has—that there is prepared for the human family after death one eternal heaven where the small minority of the human family will go and remain forever and forever. They tell us that there is also prepared a lake of fire and brimstone, or eternal punishment for the wicked, and the majority of the human family will be sent down, down to that eternal despair and ruin to suffer eternal agonies forever and forever. I have heard this taught all my life as far back as I can remember. The first preaching I ever heard pointed out to the people this eternal punishment that awaits the human family in the future; quoting the language of our Savior, 'Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life and few there be that go in thereat.' They tell us that a small minority of the righteous human family will enjoy this eternal rest forever and forever with God and the redeemed, while the great majority will go down to this eternal despair, this lake of fire and brimstone and they will suffer throughout the ceaseless ages to come.

While I believe as the Scriptures plainly teach that all who willfully reject the gospel of Jesus Christ after having had access to it in this life, will have to suffer the penalty for violating law, for if we violate law it is a settled fact that we must pay the penalty, but by turning to the Scriptures we find there is something held out for man that is better than the doctrine that we have been traditioned to believe all our lives; there is something held out to us more sublime, and presents to us a God of justice and love that will deal out justice to all mankind, to all the teeming millions of human souls that have lived upon the face of the earth from time until eternity.

I have read this evening the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. It represents, no doubt, to our minds, the condition between death and the resurrection. It points out the fact that there is something about man that survives death and lives in a conscious state of existence between death and the resurrection. We have many scriptures that we might refer to both in the Old and New Testament to prove this doctrine that death does not end all, that there is a spirit in man that lives after the death of this body. When that separation takes place which brings about death, this spirit, we understand, is taken to that paradise prepared for it where it will remain until the time of the resurrection of the righteous. The text tonight has explained to us in such plain language that anyone that can understand English at all can understand very clearly that there is a space between death and the resurrection, a place called paradise where the righteous live and rest from all their troubles, from all their sorrow until the time of their resurrection. Also there is a place called the prison world, the spirit-world where the wicked go and remain until they are brought out.

We turn to the New Testament and we find that it abounds everywhere with the doctrine that the righteous remain in a state of rest and peace between death and the resurrection. We turn to Revelation 6: 9-11, where John on Patmos was permitted to view wonderful things, to look even beyond this life and view the glories of the redeemed. Here in this chapter he informs us in regard to the condition of the righteous between death and the resurrection:—

And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: and they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

This represents the condition of the righteous between death and the resurrection, the conscious state of existence. The majority of the religious world believes in this doctrine, that the soul of man does survive death and remains in a conscious state of existence between death and the resurrection. There is a minority of the human family that believes that man is wholly mortal. This doctrine cannot be substantiated by the teachings of the Bible, as I have read already sufficient evidence to prove that the inspired writers that gave us this book exercised a belief in the conscious state of existence between death and the resurrection. In Revelation, chapter 19, John declares in plain terms, that he heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, "Alleluiah; salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God." These beings were in a conscious state of existence and enjoyed the pleasures and rest in the paradise of God, remaining until the time of their resurrection.

The first class I have referred to is that of the righteous. We want to understand what will be their destiny. We all claim to be that class of people, that we are following in the footsteps of Jesus Christ that suffered and died that we should have life; we should understand what we are all laboring for. We learn from the teachings of the Scriptures that when death takes place it does not end all, but that a place called paradise is prepared for his people to remain and to cease from their labors, enjoy peace and a rest until the time of their resurrection. The Scriptures present to us the fact that there will be a literal resurrection of the body, and instead of being only one resurrection as has been taught in the past, it holds out to us the plain doctrine that the righteous will be raised first, and hence that term in the scripture, "the first resurrection."

I read in the twentieth chapter of Revelation that the time is coming when the enemy of the human family shall be bound and chained for a thousand years and will not be permitted to deceive them during this time. I also find from investigating the prophets of the Old Testament Scriptures that the time will come when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. I read in the twentieth chapter of Revelation, Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

We understand that we have the promise of a part in this first resurrection if we improve the opportunities and embrace the everlasting gospel and all its teachings faithfully, that in the end we will come forth when the Messiah comes the second time with ten thousand of his saints.

The body will be resurrected from the power of the grave, and the spirit from the paradise of God, and they will be united again, and then we will enjoy the thousand years' reign upon this earth.

We often hear people sing in this world:—

O, waft me off to that unknown land

To walk the golden streets,
And play on a golden harp and sing—
Golden songs for aught I know.

I read in the teachings of the Savior, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." A sister once asked me, "What does that mean?" I answered her, "What does it say?" It positively states that the meek shall inherit the earth, and I believe it, for I find that the Scriptures abound everywhere with the promise that the righteous shall inherit the earth. This is the reward I am laboring for: this is the reward I am sacrificing my time for. I do not hesitate to go forth and declare this unpopular theory in this day and age, because the promise is held out to all people that will accept of the everlasting gospel, and by it they will inherit the earth, and enjoy the thousand years' millennial reign when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. The joys of the righteous do not cease, when we think for a moment in regard to the glory that we will enjoy during the thousand years' millennial reign upon this earth when the enemy will not be permitted to deceive us any longer, or tempt us, or molest our happiness, joy, or peace on this earth, and we will be permitted to enjoy this rest with the Savior when he comes to earth as King of kings and Lord of lords.

I find that the reward of the righteous does not cease there; it extends beyond that, and we have the promise of the holy city and the new heavens and the new earth. We have the promise that we will be with God forever and forever, and he will be our God and we will be his people. We often hear the Latter Day Saint elders talking about the sacrifices that they make in proclaiming the gospel without money and without price to the people, but if they will only stop for a moment and take in consideration the glory that is held out to the righteous, the rest that remains for the people of God, can we possibly do anything that will exalt the promise that is made to us by that loving Father that created us and has called upon us to proclaim the glad tidings and good news to the world? We have the promise that we will enjoy rest and peace between death and the resurrection, and when the Savior comes we will come with him and be like him, and enjoy the blessed thousand years' reign upon this earth, when the Spirit of the Lord is poured out upon all flesh as declared by the Prophet Joel in the second chapter. This is the reward that is held out to the redeemed, to the righteous, those that comply with the everlasting gospel.

The Apostle Paul in presenting to us the glories of the redeemed, tells us of the glory of the sun, he calls it the celestial glory, the greatest of all glories to my mind, that belongs to the people of God. Their glory is the glory of the sun—represented, at least, by that glory. Having discovered what God proposes to do with the righteous, those that embrace the everlasting gospel, and accept and live according to his teachings, now what are you going to do with all the wicked that live upon the face of the earth? There are very few people, according to the Scriptures, that are willing to accept of the gospel of Jesus Christ and keep his commandments and live according to his law unto the end. What are you going to do with all the thousands and thousands of people that willfully disobeyed the gospel and lived in open violation of the law of God? We are told by the popular theology of this day and age, that the majority are going to be lost, that they are going to be sent to that endless hell forever and forever, and they will never be able to pay the penalty or come out. I believe that they that believe not will be damned, but I believe that God is a God of justice and mercy, and that he will judge all mankind according to their circumstances in life and even according to the privileges they have. Those that willfully disobey the gospel of Jesus Christ damnation rests upon them, but it is said of the wicked that they shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God. There is much theological wrangling in this day and age on that word 'hell,' but I find we all agree upon the fact that it means the unseen world; and we turn to the Scriptures and we find that it holds out to us the thought that there is a prison world prepared for the disobedient spirits and there they remain until they are brought out. In the forty-ninth chapter of Isaiah, commencing with the eighth verse:—

Thus saith the Lord, In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages; that thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Show yourselves. They shall feed in the ways, and their pastures shall be in all high places.

Another place in Isaiah we have the same thought held out to us. Also Zechariah informs us in regard to this matter:—

As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water. Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope: even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee.—Zech. 9: 11, 12.

We read over here in the twentieth chapter of Revelation that after the thousand years expire, the sea, death, and hell will give up their dead, and all will stand before God and be judged everyone according to his works. Why people often say that we cannot accept the conclusion that the wicked will be cast down to hell and there burn for a time, and be brought up in that critical condition and be permitted to enjoy the glories of the redeemed, and those that comply with the gospel of Jesus Christ, but we want to understand what revelation teaches in regard to this, because truth is all that will benefit us in this world or in the world to come. Our elders go preaching and the world often asks the question, Why do you not present hell and fire to the people more than you do, why not? We simply answer them that we are not representing that side of the question. While we are willing to tell the people at all times that unless they comply with that gospel they have no promise of the glory that belongs to the redeemed, we do not inform them that they are to suffer the endless torments that are presented to them by the majority of the religious people. While I believe that the spirits will go to the prison world, and stay there until the proper time, and come out, as the Scriptures teach, and as the Savior informs us they will pay the uttermost farthing, yet I turn back to the writings of the Psalmist David, and I read in the second chapter commencing with the eighth verse:—

Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

Also I read from the twenty-second chapter and twenty-seventh verse:—

All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

We find at this time there are about one and a half billion of souls who live upon the face of the earth, and there are not one fifth of them that claim to believe this Bible that I hold in my hand. What is to become of all those heathens? We have been taught by the tradition of the past that they are all lost, but I recently read in some of the papers that are being published in our day and age, where a gentleman said he would never donate money to teach the heathen, if they were all to be lost.

Now as hell means the unseen world and the wicked are said to be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God, we turn to Jonah the second chapter, and he tells us what hell means:—

And said, I cried by reason of mine affliction unto the Lord, and he heard me; out of the belly of hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

We learn from this language that Jonah while he was in the fish's belly, was in the place called hell, and the Lord was inflicting upon him that punishment for the purpose of reforming him; and we believe this is what the word "hell" means, wherever found written in the revelations of God, God's punishment inflicted upon the disobedient to teach them obedience by the things which they must suffer, and that they will pay the uttermost farthing and come out as the Scriptures declare. They tell us that all things shall turn to the Lord and come before him, and we read in Romans that every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus is the Christ.

We find that the salvation of the human family is not confined to this world only, but also extends to those of the other world. We read in the third and fourth chapters of Peter that the mission of Jesus Christ was not confined to this little world of ours, but it extended to the spirit region; he preached the gospel to the spirits who were disobedient in the days of Noah. Salvation then is not confined to this world only, but also extends to the future state, and all people, we believe, that have never had any chance to hear the gospel in this life, have never had any privilege to hear and obey the everlasting gospel that is declared to be the power of God unto salvation, will have a chance to obtain it in the world to come. When the Savior went to the spirit world, he went on the same mission, no doubt, that he came to this world on, to seek and to save that which is lost. Hence we find that he preached the gospel to them, offered to them the plan of salvation that they might have the same privileges, the same chance that we have in this life.

We all believe, that is Latter Day Saints, that there was a dark period came upon the human family in the past, twelve hundred and sixty years of darkness, in which the gospel of Jesus Christ was not taught to the human family, when there was no gospel to come to them in its ancient simplicity and purity, and all its powers and blessings. We believe the people that lived and died in that age will have a chance to hear and obey the gospel, as God is a God of justice and love. While we do believe that the gospel is the means of saving men and we must embrace it to be saved, we have one reward that remains for the people of God, and that Paul declares to us that there is one glory of the sun, one glory of the moon, and one glory of the stars, and as the stars differ in glory, so also does the resurrection of the dead. And the Savior informs the disciples that "in my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you." And the Apostle Paul tells us of an individual that was caught up to the third heaven.

John in the twentieth of Revelation informs us that when the sea, death, and hell give up their dead, that all will be rewarded according to their works in this life. We believe that the righteous that embrace the word and live according to the teachings of the gospel, will enjoy this celestial reward, and in order to do this they must abide this celestial law, they must be among those that come up out of great tribulation and have their robes washed in the blood of the Lamb.

The Bible declares to us that the wicked shall be brought out of the spirit world, and they will come up in the general judgment, that when the sea, death, and hell shall give up their dead, that God will give justice to all mankind. We find that instead of God being a cruel tyrant and punishing his people because he can punish them, he is to the contrary, a God of justice and of love, and only punishes them for their disobedience.

May the God of heaven bless us and help us to live according to the gospel faithfully to the end, that we may be saved, and furnished with a complete salvation, with that celestial glory that awaits the redeemed of all ages, that we will inherit this earth forever and forever, is my prayer, in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE SEAL.

It is with an intense feeling of dependence that I essay the discharge of incumbent duty, fully realizing that finite man, though born again, cannot of himself accomplish the purpose of his creation; namely, radiating light from good works and thereby glorifying God. Such I perceive to be the mission of the born-again, called Latter Day Saints, for the purpose of man's creation is to glorify God. God is glorified when his excellency above all things is acknowledged with due admiration. So when I, with due acknowledgment, reverence the supremacy of God, I prove true, in their heaven-born mission, the words of the poet so often sung by Saints with ecstasy:—

The soul that on Jesus still leans for repose,
I will not, I cannot, desert to his foes,
That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake,

I'll never—no, never, no, never forsake!

And then the light and courage that emanate from the word of God as heard, or as read, which is equivalent to hearing, which word is so adapted to the wants of man, comes repeatedly to my rescue in its life-giving mission. That which prompts me to write is the observance of the following text upon a manuscript I happened to pick up:—

In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise.—Eph. 1: 13.

We perceive that persons, motives, and results are the prominent features in the compilation of this text, revealing with inspirational powers the climax of obedient and trusting man; obedient to the mandates of heaven, and trusting in the promises of a never changing God. The climax of a sealed condition is duly reached. This text, in connection with preceding ones, reveals Jesus to be the object in whom we are to trust. As also the text reveals the word of truth, the gospel of our salvation, as the convincing and propelling power by which the people of Ephesus were moved in an act of obedience and as the result of said act were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise.

I discover that the constituent principles of this text comprise a theme as vast as the universe and the Creator of it; and when dilated involving his laws, his people, and his power. But of them all, the seal of adoption appears the most prominent as well as the most competent to produce the best results. As it embraces a subject that cannot escape the means employed for its production, this seal is but the mission work of what the author of this text denominates the Holy Spirit of promise. This seal, when fully developed by the office work of the Holy Ghost, leaves the recipient in a confirmed condition and gives the earnest of his inheritance. Such a seal is essentially a prerequisite to a permanent and settled condition of citizenship in the kingdom of God. The reception of this seal is subsequent to or following obedience to revealed law and involves the promise:—

If any man will do his [my Father's] will, he shall know of the doctrine.

Without this seal there is no knowledge. Knowledge is the product of a confirmed mind in respect to religious attainments. As knowledge, then, is the legitimate offspring of a sealed, confirmed, and established soul, it is not obtained through and by a mere belief in which the exercise of mental powers are only required as in temporal things; but is an actual result of an experienced demonstration of God's power by reason of man complying with the requirements of gospel law.

It is by this seal of the Holy Spirit of promise that man—so finite in mind—in his conformity to the principles of Christianity, is qualified to say,

"I know," in regard to the divinity of Christ and his gospel. Statements can be and often are made void of knowledge, founded upon vain imagination, and too often are intensely deceptive in influence. For instance, should I say to one seeking for salvation, "I know that Jesus is the Christ and am a living witness of his power to save," if I have not done this or that—some of the this or that might be baptism or the laying on of hands—I therefore mislead him; and in this manner many are deceived, only following blind leaders who say, "Only believe and thou shalt be saved."

I believe it highly necessary, and more, I believe it mandatory, in the nature of all affirmations of a religious character to demand support and demonstration by the word of the Lord. Contemporaneous existence of truth and error necessitate it. And again if God has obligated himself to man in the promise of knowledge,—the result of doing his will,—to confirm his word, why should not man be willing to support his words by comparison with revealed law through the written word of the Father of lights?

I, in company with Bro. Johnson, was to hear one of our city's popular ministers quite recently and was astonished beyond measure to hear the accomplished gentleman make "statements without proof," say, and vehemently declare from his rostrum, solemnly dedicated by his kind to the worship of God, while affirming unity for the churches:—

We are not divided, but are one in faith and doctrine. Why? Because the downfall of sectarian walls is now so far in the remote past that we have forgotten them.

And then to smooth over such a rent in the truth, quoted Jesus in the seventeenth of John where he says, "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me," and then to cap the climax, added, "That time has come." This to me was one of the uncertain sounds of the trumpet whose blasts cry, "Lo here and lo there," with the dull sound of a tinkling cymbal; for never in the history of church building has there been so many conflicting voices to confuse gospel truths.

A creed has not as yet been unanimously agreed upon consolidating all in concert of action; or if it has, it is like the one-talented person of the Bible parable—it is kept in secret, no one knows of it; and indeed if such be the case it would necessitate a discarding of the disciplines containing the creeds of each, which, in the language of Rev. J. Favill, of Wisconsin, they have been loving more than man.

The Author of our faith declared—as his inspired thoughts were vocalized in the last and greatest commission which was afterwards heralded among the people of Judea by the noble, not now fishers of fish, but fishers of men:—

And these signs shall follow them that believe,

And we read:—

And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following.

And he worked with them according to promise:—

Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

So Bro. Paul says to the Corinthian saints:—

We are laborers together with God.—1 Cor. 3: 9.

Thus the gospel provides that man shall declare the whole counsel of his Creator, that as faith cometh by hearing, those who desire to glorify the great I Am may have an opportunity, and as the receivers of the all things, become sealed "fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God."

But Jesus with the eye of inspiration that so characterized his divinity saw—looking down the murky stream of time "whose banks and shores were lined with the banners of sectarianism, casting a dark and gloomy mist over what might otherwise have been the clear and placid waters of peace and unity"—like conditions to those that surrounded him, and for this reason incorporated in the commission this blest prerogative of believers, confirmation by "signs following."

Conflicting voices are heard to-day as we pass by the shoals and breakers of fleeting time, crying, Lo here and lo there, for Christ. But O the condition of the religious world is laid bare as the rays of light emanating from God's word pierce the dark recesses of degeneration! We have only to look at the mission work of the Holy Spirit of promise, using it as a mighty telescope through which we see things as they exist. Though Paul says, "We see through a glass darkly," yet the magnifying power of our glass, when brought to bear directly on the objects so foreign to God's truth, shows them in the light of Christ's presence when the smoky glass Paul refers to is laid on the shelf.

In sealing the receiver of truth, the Holy Ghost is to remain and abide with us, to lead, guide, and direct us into all truth; also showing us things to come, bringing to our remembrance the words of Jesus.

Now "to the law and to the testimony," the only way to settle all theological controversies. Mark testifies that Jesus said, "These signs shall follow them that believe." John testifies that Jesus taught, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine;" Paul testifies, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." Either the Holy Spirit is untrue to its mission or has ceased to abide with the so-called servants of this age; for who, among all the great throng of worshipers, can testify as the subscribers to any of the many religious ways and say they have received the signs spoken of in confirmation of what has been taught them. I could not in justice to the seal I have received charge the Holy Spirit with disloyalty to his mission, and can only say it has taken its flight, leaving many a vacant temple, for we are the temples of the living God if so be the Spirit of God dwelleth in us. The vacant temples say, O, those signs and confirmations were only for the apostles and their immediate followers, and were never intended for anyone else. But this position weighed in the balance, "God's word," is found to be wanting, for I most emphatically believe the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost true to its mission of bringing to man's mind the things that Jesus had taught when Peter declared:—

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

Paul refers back to this very day on which the promise was made and says:—

After that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise.—Eph. 1: 13.

The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his.—2 Tim. 2: 19.

Jesus in that comprehensive and inimitable prayer to the Father of lights in whom there is no variable-ness neither shadow of turning, said:—

This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou has sent.—John 17: 3.

Paul, by inspiration said:—

No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.—1 Cor. 12: 3.

Peter said we would receive this power by repenting and being baptized. In all this we can see the necessity for a continuation of the sealing power of God. If not so, we are forever left as loose and floating subjects to be tossed about by the tides of sectarianism. One reason why this seal occupies such an exalted position in my mind and heart is because through it we have the blessed assurance of being accepted of God, and of all things that bring life and animation, this to me is the greatest, for it comforts and strengthens weak, mortal man, infusing into the very soul bright hopes of an ultimate triumph over sin and Satan, and spurs the saint on and on in the great battle for victory.

So let the watchword to Israel, through the seal of adoption, be Christ, the Son of the living God, with power through the gospel to save; and let the watchman on the towers of God's eternal truth unfurl the banner of King Immanuel and let it wave forth over and above the crumbling walls of creed theology in its effulgence and power as a mighty beacon light to arrest the downward march of a benighted people. Those who walk not in the light as Jesus was, are essaying the task of pointing sinful man to the Lamb of God. You, comrades, know the result—failure. Hasten, then, ye messengers of light and glory, and tell them of the way; how Jesus as our pattern and our guide was in full recognition of his Father through the watery grave, how he was anointed above his fellows with the oil of gladness! Speed the message, proclaim with a loud voice against spiritual wickedness in high and low places, for Jesus will be with you, working by the power of his Spirit to seal and confirm those whom you may gather in.

Yours for Zion's triumph,

J. W. MORGAN.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints in the Southeastern Mission; Greeting:—Having been again placed in charge of the above field by the late General Conference, I write you to ask the coöperation of all the ministry and members in trying to advance the great work in which we are engaged. In some respects the present outlook may appear to some to be a little clouded, but there is nothing for the faithful to fear, nothing over which anyone should be discouraged.

Will the ministry who are under general appointment, please remember to report their labors to me every three months, at least. Send your reports on the 1st of July, October, January, and on or about the 15th of March. I shall be glad to correspond with each of you and thus mutually aid and assist each other in our work.

I hope the local ministry will do what they can in caring for the work in the branches and districts, so that the traveling ministry may have all their time or as much so as possible, to push the work into new fields. There are many, no doubt, who would be glad of an opportunity to obey the gospel and be saved, if only they could hear it. Let us do what we can to give them the opportunity.

Will each one of the membership lend his or her aid in pushing the cause this season. There is no need for our mission to remain behind in anything. A strong, thorough, systematic, and united effort on the part of all will set the mission work going at a pace equal to that of any other field. Why not? Let's try it anyway.

Hitherto the mission has not been self-sustaining in a financial way. Are you satisfied for this part of the work to continue so? A little effort on the part of all would remedy this and make a different showing in the Bishop's report for another year. This hint need not disturb those who have done their part in the past. It is only for those who have overlooked this part of their duty heretofore. Remember, "By our own works we stand or fall."

I feel the responsibility of the place I occupy very keenly, and shall appreciate any help rendered by minister or member, to assist me in the work. If there be difficulties in any of the branches I hope that all parties will be ready to follow the provisions of the law, and that too without calling on the missionary in charge, or any of the general appointees to adjust them. It sometimes happens that parties are unwilling to have the local authorities to adjust difficulties for them, even though they may do so in entire harmony with the law. This should not be. If we honor not those who are called to administer the law, then it seems to me we do not honor the law, and, failing in that, we also fail to honor Him who gave the law. This we cannot afford, or so it seems to me. Think of it, Saints.

I am truly thankful for the kindness universally shown me during last year, and hope to be worthy of it in future. You have my best wishes for your welfare and prosperity, and my prayers are that God's richest blessings may ever rest upon you. My permanent address is Independence, Missouri. Letters addressed to the above place will find me at any time. Peace be with you all.

Yours in bonds,
T. C. KELLEY.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri, May 2, 1896.

To the Saints in Southern Illinois:—I wish to say that my permanent address is Orchardville, Illinois. As I have been placed as missionary in charge of this field under Bro. J. R. Lambert, all those who wish to correspond with me in regard to the needs of the work in their different localities, I would be very glad to have them do so.

Let us each and every one this year put forth a strong effort to advance the cause of Christ. In order to do this it will be necessary for us all to live in harmony with the divine law each and every day of our life. That is the only way that we can secure unto ourselves eternal life and be worthy of a place in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes to reign with his people.

May success crown our efforts this year and the Lord abundantly bless his people, is the sincere desire of

Your coworker in Christ,
F. M. SLOVER.

To the Saints of the Fremont and Nodaway Districts, Greeting; Dear Brethren:—Another conference year is already upon us. The past is gone into eternity. We are here to labor together in the interests of the work intrusted to our care this coming year. And in order that we may do so, let us confer with one another, and be in touch with the spirit of the work, and in harmony with the law and counsel of those whom God has appointed.

We are thankful to our heavenly Father for his bounteous mercies bestowed upon us in the past; and now as we have but two general appointees—one for each district—it will be necessary that we put forth a stronger effort if possible, than before; and we feel grateful for the help received heretofore from our local brethren and humbly pray that God's Spirit may move you to action and inspire you with his love to step to the front in the cause the coming year.

Dear brethren, let us realize that the work is ours; that we are laboring together with God and Christ, and we must not slacken our hands until the angel spoken of by John shall swear by Him that sitteth upon the throne that time shall be no longer.

Dear brethren, many of us have labored locally for ten and fifteen years, putting in at least one third of our time, and now from fifteen to twenty years, devoting our entire time to the building up of the work, shall we say, "It is enough"? No, my brethren, never! The greatest regret we will ever feel will be that we did not do more.

It is a work of sacrifice from beginning to end, for all concerned; but great will be the reward and eternal the glory, for those who can endure to the end. Let us bury all of our little grievances of the past, be one in heart and mind to do the Master's will, while life shall be granted us in this probationary state.

I must say to the credit of my brethren that many of them have done nobly in the past. Now let us labor together in the future, and not forget that we are of the household of faith. Let us be one with each other—one in Christ and God, that this generation may know that God has sent us. With the best of feelings for all and a deep interest for the spread of the gospel, I subscribe myself,

Your brother and colaborer,
HENRY KEMP.

My mission address is, Box 659, Shenandoah, Iowa.

To the Saints of the Galland's Grove District; Greeting:—If those of the local ministry who can do some labor outside of their own branches will be kind enough to notify me of about when they can so labor and how much time they can devote to the work, it will greatly assist me in the discharge of my duties. I shall be glad also to hear from scattered Saints who wish preaching, with or without the tent in their neighborhoods. Presidents Joseph and Alex. Hale Smith have kindly consented to be with us at the dedication of the Auburn church, June the 7th, if it is possible for them to do so.

Brethren and sisters, please assist us all you can this year in order that we may be enabled to do a good work as ministers for Christ and children of God.

My permanent address is Dow City, Crawford County, Iowa.

C. E. BUTTERWORTH, Pres.

BORN.

LEE.—To Bro. Robert E. and Mrs. Louise Lee, a daughter, on July 29, 1895. Blessed at Millersburg, Illinois, April 21, 1896, by John M. and Joseph L. Terry, under the name of Lena Pearl. May she ever be a "pearl of great price."

MARRIED.

DALEY—COOPER.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon Wednesday, at the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints' edifice on Fifth Street, when Mr. George Daley, a prominent lumberman of Sacramento, and who is also an elder in the church, was united in marriage to Miss Ida May Cooper, daughter of Mrs. C. J. Cooper, of this city.

The interior of the church had been beautifully adorned, and with the gas lit and the blinds down, the effect produced was very fine. The ceremony took place under a beautiful canopy in the shape of an umbrella, composed of smilax and tulle, surmounted by two white doves. The altar, font, windows, and galleries had also been tastefully decorated. Beautiful palms, ferns, and pot plants were on either side of the altar.

Precisely at 12:30 the bridal party entered the church to the strains of the wedding march, played beautifully by Miss Freddie Lee. The fair bride looked handsome in an elegant costume of cream colored nun's veiling, trimmed with white ribbons. Her ornaments were pearls and she carried a bouquet of orange blossoms. Her attendants were two little children, Miss Dottie Burgess, who was attired in white, and Master Phillip Howe. Bert Cooper and Johnnie Tapper, cousins of the bride, acted as ushers. The imposing and appropriate ritual of the church was read by Elder Newton, and at its conclusion the joyful strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were again heard. The party then drove to the Cooper residence on Tenth Street, where an elegant repast was served to which only the immediate relatives and friends were invited.

The bride and groom are both well known and highly esteemed here. They were the recipients of a number of beautiful and costly presents, and they will make Santa Rosa their home for the present. The Evening Press joins heartily in the general good wishes extended the happy couple.—Santa Rosa, California, Press.

Streeter, and about five months after their union she was called home, leaving eight children, seventy-three grandchildren, and eighty-six great-grandchildren. She had endeavored to live a life consistent with her baptismal covenant, and always bore a faithful testimony to the truth, and died in hope of a glorious resurrection. DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

MANUSCRIPT FOUND.

This is the notorious Manuscript Found, written by Rev. Solomon Spalding; a verified and certified copy of the original now in Oberlin College, Ohio, of which so much has been said and written in connection with the theory that it furnished Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the chief groundwork and material from which to write the Book of Mormon. The preface to the work contains an account of its coming to light, by which it can be traced back to its author—Solomon Spalding. The work, suppressed for years by enemies of the Latter Day Saints, is a complete refutation of the charge made that it is the basis from which the Book of Mormon was written.

IS OUR CIVILIZATION A FAILURE?

The Canadian Magazine, February.

THE usefulness of any law of a sovereign legislative authority, or any rule of human conduct, is judged by its success. A man is judged by his ability for adapting himself to, and taking advantage of, the circumstances in which he is placed—in a word, by his success. If a Krupp gun will pierce a piece of 12 inch steel armor and thus fulfill what was expected of it, we decide that the gun is a success. Success is the great modern criterion—was the leading ancient standard of quality. Let us examine our boasted and lauded civilization by these tests. Has it been a success? Is it accomplishing all that was expected of it? The heathen Chinese and the semi-civilized Jap go to war, and we intimate that they have not enough of our Western civilization, which abhors war and believes only in arbitration or friendly compromise. A tribe in darkest Africa makes a midnight assault on an unsuspecting village inhabited by the members of another tribe, and the victims are murdered while they sleep. "They are uncivilized," says the Western world. Has this wonderful civilization of ours prevented man's brute nature from predominating over his divine nature?

The nations of Europe and America stand to-day armed to the teeth, glowering at one another like so many ravenous wolves. The poor languish in the byways of civilization or in the debtor's cell, while the governments pile up money in their war chests, build war-vessels costing millions of dollars each, or spend billions yearly on military equipments. They worship the Author of the doctrine of the universal brotherhood of man one day in the week and worship the doctrine of every man for himself during the other six. While these are some of the characteristics of nineteenth-century civilization, can it be designated "a success"?

The feudalism of the middle ages has passed away, and the golden Renaissance ushered in the new and diviner Democracy. It bore healing on its white, peace-wafting wings. But representative assemblies—government of the people, by the people, and for the people—seem to have as great weaknesses, seem to make as many mistakes, and seem to be subject to as many unwholesome influences as the wicked princes who lived and ruled in the darker and earlier periods of our history. Parliamentary government is not the success that the people of the 17th and 18th centuries believed it would be, and it is not certain that the model government of the future has yet been found or even conceived in any human mind. There have been many changes in the past, and apparently there must be many more ere even the extreme limits of the penumbra of the millennium be reached.—Public Opinion.

GOOD ADVICE FROM AN ATHLETE.

J. W. LAING, EX-President Oxford University Athletic Club, in the Bachelor of Arts, New York. Excerpt.

GIVE your brain sufficient food, an abundant supply of oxygen, and then give it a fair amount of good, hard work every day, if you wish to maintain it in a high state of healthy activity. Attorneys and clergymen who use their brains much are the longest-lived men in the State, showing plainly that regular brain work is good for the general health as well as for the efficiency of the nervous system in particular. The muscular system must be treated in a similar manner, if you do not wish it to become subject to fatty degeneration. An unused muscle shrinks and becomes soft and flabby, presenting a marked contrast to the brawny arm of the blacksmith. A muscle is called upon to perform a vigorous contraction, but it snaps in the effort.

The heart itself is sometimes torn asunder in attempting to send an extra supply of blood to some needy limb. No man can afford to lower his general vitality for the sake of mere idle gratification. He never knows when he may require all the energy which can be stored up in his tissues. A railway accident, a runaway horse, a run to catch a train, a fall, or a fit of coughing, may bring a life of misery or an early death to one who would have passed unscathed through them all had he allowed his nerves and muscles to grow strong in glorious activity, instead of carefully preserving them, like smoked bacon, in the fumes of tobacco.—Public Opinion.

HOW A WAR BEGINS.

GEORGE PARSONS LATHROP, LL.D., has an article in the February North American under the above title, giving his recollections of the time immediately preceding the outbreak of our Civil War. He was ten years old then, and it is the recollection of a boy's impressions which he gives us, with the reflections and conclusions to which these recollections and later thought and study have led him. The picture is an exceedingly vivid and striking one, and the moral is no less impressive. We quote the last two paragraphs:—

"The most striking thing about it at the beginning was—and one of the most striking is now—that so much misery might have been avoided had people then known what war is, and had they been more self-contained and magnanimous on both sides, when the trouble was brewing. A great principle was involved, a far-reaching problem was to be settled; but I have never been convinced that it could not have been rightly settled by popular patience, wise statesmanship, a grand exhibition of manly and Christian conduct.

"I confess to an innate love of war; that martial matters fascinate me; that I favor a spirited foreign policy and am jealous in defense of the majesty and honor of the Nation. It is no timidity that prompts these reminiscences and reflections. Yet I believe that, in this age of the world, and with our experience, we should remember what war really is and how unexpectedly it often comes. The cloud rises and passes. People say the war scare is over. Yet they continue to talk war recklessly at intervals. Months go by, and perhaps years. Then suddenly the cloud covers the heavens, and the tempest bursts. Every intemperate word, every rash or unnecessary defiance has gone to swell and surcharge the cloud. It is the people, after all, who make war, in every country—or make it possible. And they make it not so much by a declaration of the Congress or the king as by their careless or unmeasured utterances in times of peace. War is sometimes inevitable, but every citizen has a responsibility, not simply individual, but national, to avoid bringing it on by fiery speech when the issue of force may honorably be prevented by manly self-restraint."—Public Opinion.

THE VICE OF SENSATIONALISM.

Memphis Commercial Appeal.

THOSE who have thoughtfully observed the proceedings of Congress must have noted how largely the emotional dominates the intellectual quality of that body; how easy it may be swept off its feet by gusty declamation, how irresponsive it is to sober reason and to earnest, thoughtful appeals to its judgment, its prudence, its sense of propriety; how ready it is to go to extremes on any proposition, how hastily and with what little thought it takes action on matters of the utmost gravity, and how little it is restrained or influenced by its cool heads and conservative minds. It is not that the standard of mental ability is so low, though it is not of the highest order. The worst offenders are not mere ignorant and shallow noise-makers, incapable of understanding the meaning of their own words or appreciating the consequences of their own acts. They are men who ought to know better and who sin against their own knowledge and intelligence. The fault seems to be moral rather than intellectual. The amazing recklessness, the lack of any sense of responsibility, the tendency to legislate in a whirlwind of passion, is but a manifestation of the vice of sensationalism that seems to have infected every calling which addresses itself directly to public opinion. How deeply it has poisoned a large section of the press need not be said. There are great and successful newspapers in this country whose profession is sensation-mongering and who every day sacrifice all regard for honesty, truth, and decency in their calling. This vice has even invaded the pulpit, appears in sermons, and, in its most shocking form, in prayers ostensibly addressed to the Almighty, but really intended to please or startle the audience.

Probably the first and worst sinners in this matter are the newspapers. They, or a certain class of them, have cultivated this morbid appetite for sensationalism until there is a public craving for sensations, and other callings have begun to compete with the press in catering to a vitiated taste. It is, wherever exhibited, a low and demoralizing passion; but it is fraught with danger of most frightful consequences when it becomes the dominant motive of the United States Congress.—Public Opinion.

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF THE UNITED STATES.

IN 1800 only the country between the Atlantic and the Mississippi belonged to the United States. Since that the Louisiana purchase in 1803, the Florida in 1821, the Mexican acquisitions in 1840, 1850, and 1853, and Alaska in 1867 have been added. The increase, excluding Alaska, has been from 827,844 to 3,025,600 square miles, or three and five-eighths, but the growth of population has been from 5,308,483 to 62,622,250, or nearly twelvefold. In 1800 the inhabitants were a little less than 7 to a square mile, (in 1790 they had been less than 5); in 1890 they were over 21. The place where the population is densest is the District of Columbia, which has 3,839 to the mile; the next is Rhode Island, 318; then Massachusetts, 278; then New Jersey, 193; Connecticut, 154; New York, 125; Pennsylvania, 116; Maryland, 105. The other States and Territories run below 100, down to Montana, Wyoming, Arizona, Nevada, which have less than one inhabitant to the mile. The Census Commissioner notes that in Rhode Island and Massachusetts the density of population is as great as in many of the most densely settled European States, and that the entire North Atlantic division, pre-eminently the manufacturing section, has an average of over 100 inhabitants to the square mile. But it may be a surprise to some that among the old States Maine has only 22, New Hampshire 41, Vermont 26.

A UNIQUE REFERENCE BOOK.

To say that it contains information of nearly universal interest, and that is, practically, obtainable by most readers nowhere else is but the simple truth concerning "Alden's Living Topics Cyclopaedia." The second volume, extending from Boy. to Con., contains the latest facts concerning the nations, Brazil, British Empire, Bulgaria, Cape Colony, Chile, Chinese Empire, and others, and concerning three states, California, Colorado, and Connecticut; also concerning six large cities, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Charleston, Chicago, Cincinnati, and Cleveland. The facts are commonly from one year to five years later than can be found in any of the leading cyclopaedias, and commonly a year later than the 1896 almanacs and annuals. We name only leading titles; besides there are hundreds of others, all of them "living" topics. One wonders how busy seekers after knowledge have got along without such an up-to-date cyclopaedia. The whole series of six handy volumes is to be completed during the year, and at the surprisingly low cost of $1.50 to $3.00 for the set, with liberal discounts for advance orders. Specimen pages may be had free by addressing the publisher, JOHN B. ALDEN, 10 and 12 Vandewater St., New York.

HIS COLLAR EXPLODED.

William Benjamin, a brakeman on the Erie Railroad, caught a spark on the back of his celluloid collar as his train entered the station at Hillsdale, N. J., January 2. The collar took fire and exploded with a loud report. Benjamin seized the collar with both hands and tore it from his neck. He was burned severely on the face, neck, and hands. He was taken to a drug store, where his wounds were dressed, and later was taken to his home, in New York. He will be disabled for some time.—Scientific America.

TITHING, CONSECRATION, ETC.

It is usual to tell the world when preaching the gospel to them that the law of the Lord, when it is known, is sufficient to require obedience thereto. Aside from the methods of collecting moneys and properties by the church, for the use of the church, using the word church to represent the Lord's people, as the same were collected and disbursed under the old dispensation, called the Mosaic, we have in the New Testament that method best stated by the sentence found in the second chapter of Acts, verses 44, 45:—

And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.

This is the usual starting place for the community of interests promulgators and defenders, who from this build the fabric of social and monetary equality. As yet, no fully satisfactory scheme as a whole and in detail has been evolved from human understanding, so far as known to us. The one text remains, unique and steadfast, "All that believed," "sold their possessions," "had all things common," "and parted" the proceeds of what was sold by them to "all men, as every man had need."

In this provision it will be seen that there seemed to be no restriction put on the expenditure of the moneys, so far as the persons receiving it, whether they were in or out of the church; "all men" seeming to mean only those being in need.

It is from this clear, to our thinking, that the method then used was a temporary expedient and could hold only while the company of believers was small enough to be all together, feeding at one common table sustained from one common purse. The subsequent actions of the disciples, under the lead of the apostles, confirm this opinion. (See Acts 11: 29; Romans 15: 26; 2 Cor. 8: 4; 9: 1-12; and 1 Cor. 16: 1-3.)

In all of these last-cited texts there is warrant for believing that the methods employed were adopted for temporary and passing needs; whatever the usual custom might be for local expenditure.

Almsgiving was a feature of eastern social customs then as much as now, in certain localities, and it is only fair to suppose that the care of funds so raised from public alms was provided for by the employment of deacons or agents. But we let that pass; duty leads us nearer home.

The Book of Mormon gives us no special money system in detail; but in places in the history it is shown that the believers flourished and cared for all. They were, as a rule, pastoral people. They held local rule of the country, as well as controlled in the religious way, in the instances where the history shows the people to have lived under righteous rule. The methods employed by unrighteous rulers it is scarcely needful to follow; as they laid burdens on the people not compatible with right principles.

At the revival of the work of God, or of Christ, by the sending of the angel with his message, it is certain that the changed conditions under which the men with whom the work began, and among whom it was to grow, flourish, and become established, as contrasted with the conditions obtaining in New Testament and Book of Mormon times, would require that there should be developed a financial policy or system, which might be dignified with the name of law; as definite in its main features on the temporal side of man's needs, as the gospel was on the spiritual side of his requirements.

It is not competent for anyone to conclude that the law of the Lord should be so exquisitely close and critical in its provisions regarding the welfare of the soul in the present and in the future, and be absolutely silent in regard to temporal conditions, obligations, duties, or privileges. Nor is it reasonable to suppose that new revelation, the great spiritual force in the new dispensation, should be silent on this subject. Nor was it.

One of the first charges to the church has among other things this impressive provision.

That every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded.—Rev. of Jan., 1831, Doc. and Cov. 38: 9.

The things referred to as being commanded included the preaching of the gospel, the enlightenment of the world, the gathering of the honest in heart, and the establishing of Zion. This meant much more than the simple calling of a few to gather as a band, to sing psalms, and become a traveling, charitable institution, scattering money in their pathway to "all men." It meant an organized effort, with men and women as its social factors; a called priesthood; a common burden and a common treasury with proper custodians, and no idlers.

In February of the same year, 1831, following the reinstating of the necessary provisions of the moral commandments, usually called the "ten commandments," there was given a commandment regarding temporal obligations:—

If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken; and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.—Doc. and Cov. 42: 8.

In this early day, the second year of the existence of the church, and less than a year after its organization, the method for an administration of temporalities was being developed by revelation. The word "consecrate" was used to denote the fact that what was given was in the nature of something given to, devoted for, consecrated to the accomplishment of certain purposes understood; and the character of the custodian of such consecrations was stated — “the bishop.”

And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support, after this first consecration, which is a residue, to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer unto those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied, and receive according to his wants.—Doc. and Cov. 42: 10.

There is no clearer declaration of what a “surplus” means than the plain statement “more than is necessary for their support.” In this there is the fact of and necessity for “a support” provided for. Whatever is over and above this was not necessary, therefore was an overplus, a “surplus.”

That this view is not a “strained construction” may be seen by reading section 51, paragraph 4, of Doctrine and Covenants:—

And again, let the Bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church, and let all things, both in money and in meat, which is more than is needful for the want of this people, be kept in the hands of the Bishop. . . . And thus I grant unto this people a privilege of organizing themselves according to my laws. . . . Behold, this shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge, in other places, in all churches.—D. C. 51: 4, 5.

Whatever others may consider, the Lord understands and states, too clearly for misunderstanding that this placing of the amount of either “money” or “meat,” “more than is needful for the want” of the people, in the storehouse “to be kept in the hands of the Bishop,” was the foundation principle of the financial method provided in his laws.

Surplus, according to Webster, means:—

1. That which remains when use is satisfied; excess beyond what is prescribed or wanted; overplus.

2. (In law.) The residuum of an estate after certain deductions are made.

Surplusage, a noun also, is given as meaning:—

1. Surplus; excess; as, surplusage of grain or goods beyond what is wanted.

From this common rendition of what the word “surplus” means, it is easy to see that the Lord, as mindful of the obligations of the dwellers upon earth to him in the things of the world, or in temporal things, as he was in regard to spiritual things, made provision in his laws for both conditions by revelation, at the restoration of the gospel; and made those provisions of such a character that those who yielded credence and obedience to the spiritual, were made to receive large spiritual increase and blessing; he who yielded credence and obedience to the temporal, was entitled to large increase and blessing temporally; he who, being an observer of the spiritual law, also, yielded obedience to the temporal law, put himself into such condition of favor to God as to be entitled to the blessings of both laws.

A confirmatory evidence that the laws affecting the temporal affairs of the believers were taken into consideration by the Lord, and revealed at an early day in the formative period of the latter-day work is found in section 64, paragraph 5:—

Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming). . . .

This revelation was given to the “elders” of the church September, 1831. And from it we gather that from the restoration of the gospel till “the coming of the Son of Man” it is “to-day,” and that in that time “to-day” is the “day for the tithing” of the Lord’s “people.”

In August of the same year it was given to the church that they were on the Lord’s day to “offer their oblations” to the Most High, remember their sacraments, etc. (Sec. 59, par. 2.)

An “oblation” is:—

1. Anything offered or presented in worship or sacred service; an offering; a sacrifice.

2. A gift or contribution for the expenses of the eucharist, or for the support of the clergy and the poor, in the early Christian Church.

The restoration of the gospel involved the restoration of the methods intended of God to be employed by the Lord’s servants and people in carrying on the work to be done in the last days. We have about found them all in the revelations to the church, long prior to the revelation of 1838, in which the word “surplus” is used, against which so many seem to take exceptions. We have “consecrations,” of properties, “more than is necessary for support,” the placing such properties in the hands of the Bishop; the appointment of a storehouse in which may be kept whatever is “more than is needful for the want of the people;” the tithing; the oblations and offering, all provided for before 1838, and as clearly as could have been done what was intended by the law as surplus was pointed out long before that. Whoever may take exception to the word “surplus,” and the revelation of 1838, as the same has been treated of and made applicable by the Bishopric, will do himself justice by examining what is set forth in this article.

The purposes for which the moneys and properties of the church, whether offerings, oblations, consecrations, tithings, or surplus, are straitly stated in section 42, paragraph 10; so that all may comprehend them. If there should be any dubiety in the minds of any whether the elders in the field and their families were to be included in the things named in paragraph 10 of section 42, such dubiety should be removed by what is found in section 72, paragraphs 3 and 4.

It should be borne in mind by all that offerings, called “freewill offerings,” oblations, consecrations, tithing, and surplus are, all of them, each in its time and place when given, donated, or placed in the Bishop’s hands, or those of his agents, or counselors, the effort, effect, and act of the individual making the gift or paying the tithe. In no sense, other than by teaching or advice, can any officer in the church, from the deacon to the Bishop, make any claim or demand upon the member, or enforce the giving up of a penny of money, or a particle of goods, or properties; the whole fact and value of the gifts, whatever the name given to them, must be the voluntary act of the one making them. Any officer of the church, local or traveling, may assist any member in getting an understanding of the law, or in determining by inquiry and advice what, and how much to give, donate, or consecrate; but the Bishop and his counselors and agents are the proper officers to advise with and to pay amounts to, or to place properties in the hands of.

In cases of disagreement between a member and a bishop, or in case of a misunderstanding, there is a provision for an examination by a high council, so that no one may be wronged in any way by the church.

There can be but one conclusion from a consideration of the passages from the books we have used, and that is that the Lord intended to supply by revelation any lack that might have occurred by the failure of the biblical historians to record the general law of procedure in financial matters in the church, or the details to be carried out in its observance.

Whether the law as given in the various parts of the revelations, and the Bible and Book of Mormon, is absolutely adequate for all the purposes of the church in its existence and progress has not yet been practically determined; as only a partial observance of the law has been so far had; there having been too many who decline to see the law as the greater number of the spiritual authorities see it; hence a failure on the part of many to devote any considerable portion of their goods, meat, properties, possessions, or moneys, in the way designated. It is a matter for congratulation, however, that a much better and wider understanding is being reached from the kindly persistent efforts and teaching of the Bishopric.

THE METHODIST CONFERENCE.

WE take the following from the Chicago Tribune of the 14th inst:—

CLEVELAND, O., May 13.—[Special.]—There is much speculation to-night among the delegates to the Methodist Episcopal General Conference over the report of the Committee on Episcopacy. This committee announced to-day it would not be able to report on the number of new Bishops which would be recommended until to-morrow morning. The report will be followed by the elections.

The question of appointing a Bishop of African descent promises to cause some heart-burning, especially among the colored delegates. The colored people constitute one-fifteenth of the entire membership of the church, and feel themselves entitled to representation in high places.

Their candidate, the Rev. J. W. E. Bowen, D. D., Ph. D., is Professor of Historical Theology in the Gammon Theological Seminary. He has the reputation of being an orator and scholar.

Among the white delegates the sentiment is against electing a colored man. They do not think the time has yet come for such a move, and feel that the race has not yet advanced far enough to justify it. A compromise may, perhaps, be reached by appointing a colored man missionary Bishop to Africa as successor to Bishop Taylor.

WOMAN QUESTION AGAIN.

The woman question came up to-day, but was not considered in a serious manner. It came up in the following resolution, presented by the Rev. Granville Lowther, of Southwest Kansas:—

"Whereas, this conference has decided to send to the annual conferences the question as to whether the word 'layman' shall be so construed as to include woman; and,

"Whereas, it is believed by many that on scriptural grounds women cannot be admitted to the General Conference; therefore,

"Resolved, that we also submit to the annual conferences the following question: Are women included in our articles of religion, paragraph 7, which reads: 'Man is very far gone from original righteousness?'

"Resolved, While this question is pending that it be be order of the General Conference that women obey the apostolic injunction: 'Let your women keep silence in the churches.'

"That they do also refuse the knowledge that comes from books, papers, magazines, lectures, lyceums, and reading circles, and 'If they would learn anything let them ask their husbands at home.'

"Since on scriptural grounds some of our brethren have served notice that they will raise this question on the day of judgment, that the annual conference decide by vote whether women are included or excluded in the language, 'Every man in his own order, in Paul's chapter on the resurrection.'

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Eligibility.

BAPTISM OF INFANTS.

A report suggesting a change in the matter of baptism caused a prolonged discussion. The proposition was to the effect that those who were sprinkled in infancy could, if desired, be immersed when they grew older. This was opposed by Dr. Leonard and others on the ground that it was a discrimination against infant baptism. During the debate Dr. Buckley said that he was satisfied that there were in the Baptist Church over half a million members who would now be in the Methodist Church if they had been given the right to choose how they were to be baptized. He moved that a part of the discipline be stricken out so that adults baptized in infancy might be allowed to be baptized again in any way they might elect.

The Rev. W. S. Matthews of Southern California said he did not believe in discrediting infant baptism, but he did believe that adults who have been baptized in infancy should be given the same right to be baptized that unbaptized converts have. The Rev. Dr. J. E. C. Sawyer said that he thought the Methodist Church would be very much bettered by striking out the foot note. He was sure it would help the growth of the church membership. The section was re-committed, with Dr. Buckley's amendment, to the Committee on Revisals.

This report may or may not be correct. However, it probably represents the status of those items of business now before the Methodist General Assembly.

From this statement of proceedings it appears that the colored brother demands recognition and representation among the highest dignitaries of the church, according to the basis of his numerical strength, and seems determined to have it.

So long as the present methods of selection and appointment, according to the dictates of human wisdom based on general obtaining conditions—and probably including the apparent fitness of candidates, obtains, who shall say that the colored brethren are unreasonable or unjust in their demands? If the ancient scriptural methods by which human agency was exercised under the inspiration of the Divine Spirit, and based on a manifest divine call to the ministry, be dispensed with, as "no longer needed," why should the colored brother, the Malay, or any race constituency that may be represented in the Methodist Church, not urge its claims and put forward its best man?

The colored brother is shrewd enough to take advantage of the present rule by which the Almighty is left out as a direct factor in the choice of a bishop; and while the Methodist idea prevails—that God is represented in the popular vote—he proposes to be represented in and honored by such choice, in any event, and to share the benefits of "representation in high places."

The woman question—the right of women to sit as lay delegates, will not down, but assumes such proportions, and is backed so strongly by ministers themselves, that it threatens to involve a discussion if not an entire recasting of "our articles of religion." While the creed states that "man is very far gone from original righteousness," the ladies of the Methodist Church evidently believe they also should be represented in the general efforts of the body to exalt and better his general condition. Will the ladies consent to the admission of even a colored "missionary bishop" and yet be denied direct representation in any form? Hardly. The logic of the situation is at least significant. If to have a part in the judgment and in the resurrection, a reasonable part now, in the present, is their demand.

And, last but not least, "infant baptism" comes in for a share of attention, and an apparent believer of that feature of credo theology urges that those sprinkled in infancy be granted the right, if desired, of being immersed when they reach years of maturity! Another speaker urges that those baptized (?) in infancy be given the same right to be baptized that unbaptized converts have! Still another, that many in the Baptist Church would come to Methodism if restrictions against immersion were removed!

What next? We leave our readers to ponder the question of the value of infant sprinkling, in the light of the admissions of believers in the doctrine—that there is necessity for after sprinkling or immersion when years of accountability have been reached; also, whether the Lord, who instituted the ordinance of baptism, neglected to define the mode—whether sprinkling, pouring, or immersion, or left it to the choice or whim of each several candidate.

Too many points are suggested for further notice here. Our readers are accustomed to the examination of such matters, hence we leave it with them, and beg leave to second the motion to refer the whole matter to "the Committee on Revisals," and respectfully await the result of its recommendations and the subsequent actions of the conference.

THE COLLEGE.

WORK on Graceland College, held in abeyance during the winter, is resumed; and it is expected will be continued until the building is completed. Now is a good time for any interested to show the nature and extent of their interest. The Board of Trustees is anxious that there shall be neither hindrance nor stop in the work; and as they are moving along in the effort to do what was intrusted to them, "in faith, nothing doubting," it is to be hoped that others will, as well as themselves, "show their faith by their works." Those willing to exhibit their faith and works now have a chance to do so. We need the College as a people; and as a pledge to community of our good faith and righteous intentions it will do us a great amount of good. It is only a basis for something better in our effort to "come up higher." Let us be up and be doing.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Has the president of a branch the right to call a special meeting, where there are regular business meetings held, when he believes it to be beneficial and for the best interests of the branch?

A.—Yes. Any business so urgent that there is need for special action would justify the presiding officer in calling a special meeting.

Q.—Has the president of a branch the right to refuse to call a special business meeting when he thinks it not wise to do so, and the business named not being in his opinion of sufficient reasons for calling same?

A.—Yes. The presiding officer must be satisfied that the calling of a special meeting is necessary.

Q.—Has a special meeting, when called, the right to interfere with business done at any previous regular business meeting, such as rescinding motions, changing time of meetings, election of officers, etc.

A.—No. Unless an emergency has arisen and due notice of such business has been duly given. The rule requires that for such business as moving to reconsider, or rescind motions and resolutions adopted by a former assembly must be done at the same meeting, on the same day, or a regular meeting when there are the same number present as there was when the business to be reconsidered or rescinded was done. Motions to reconsider, or to rescind, should of right be made by those who were present when the motion, or resolution sought to be reconsidered, or rescinded, was adopted, and who voted with the majority on such adoption. There would be no limit to vexatious work, if the minority, or those not present when business was done could be perpetually reconsidering or rescinding the actions of former meetings.

Q.—When a special business meeting is called, by the president of a branch, should the business for which the meeting is called be stated at the time of calling?

A.—Yes. It is better and reasonable that such business as demands the calling of a special business meeting should be stated.

Q.—Can any other business than that for which such special meeting has been called, be transacted in the meeting, if not previously announced or specified at time of calling said meeting?

A.—No; unless it is such as properly attaches to or grows out of the business for which the meeting was called—such as is properly incidental to such business.

Q.—In calling a special business meeting should the president announce day and date at any regular "Saints" meeting, when such meeting should be called, or should he take a vote of the branch, for it, after stating the nature of the business to be done?

A.—The day and date of such special meeting may be named by the presiding officer, who should name such time as he knows is best suited to the convenience of the branch membership and is as early after the call as is practicable; or, he may ask the branch to name by vote the time and place of holding such special meeting. In the latter case, if the business to be done has been stated by the presiding officer, it is the branch that calls the meeting.

In calling special meetings, presidents of branches should be careful that no call is for insufficient reason; and that it does not conflict with regular, stated meetings, and that the business to be done at such special meeting is so plainly stated, and such notice of it given that any of the branch interested in or affected by the business to be done, may have the opportunity to be present, if desiring so to do.

Q.—Is it transgression for a brother and sister to unite in marriage without her parents' consent, after such had been duly tried for, the sister being of age?

A.—No; if there are no other objections, or conditions attending such uniting in marriage than the one referred to in the question, there would be no transgression on the part of the persons so marrying. There might be attendant conditions that would make a marriage without parents' consent a just cause for complaint against the parties.

For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife.

This is equally true of the woman; the same cause will make a woman forsake father and mother and cleave unto him whom she choose for her husband. The law governing in the case was enacted at the beginning and will remain in force until the end of time.

Q.—Is a baptized member but unconfirmed entitled to the sacrament?

A.—Several instances are cited in the history of the church in which persons who had been baptized but not yet confirmed, were granted the sacrament; and where the fact of confirmation has been delayed for no fault of the person baptized, there can be no possibly good reason why the sacrament should not be given. Baptized members are in the church and are of the body; hence, if they discern the Lord's body and partake worthily otherwise than having been confirmed they are entitled to the sacrament.

THE latest on "Church Union" is the following:—

ROME, May 12.—Satolli has presented the Pope a long report of the condition of the North American Episcopal clergy and Catholic schools.

The Pope will appoint shortly a committee of Cardinals to examine the question of a union of the Anglican with the Catholic church.

Vaughan and Satolli and five prelates resident at Rome probably will form this body.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. H. GODBY, Beech, West Virginia, May 11:—

Have been here ten days; preached twelve times, baptized one; many more near the kingdom. I am having good liberty and am hopeful in the work, and feel like I want to spend my days in the good cause.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By card from Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths, May 12, we learn that three had been baptized at Wheeling, West Virginia. They were having good meetings there.

Bro. D. W. Shirk, of Belmont, Nebraska, would like to hear from brethren living in the vicinity of Puget Sound, Washington, "describing the general features of that country;" also from some living in good portions of Missouri.

Bro. J. S. Hommes, of Garey, California, sends an account of a discussion held at the Santa Maria branch between Bro. D. L. Harris and C. A. Wickes, the latter representing the Whitmerite view of the Church of Christ, so-called. Bro. Hommes thinks the effort of Bro. Harris was a successful, victorious one for the Reorganized Church. The branch at Santa Maria had been revived of late by the labors of Bro. B. W. Peck. The local ministers and Saints were awake and at work, doing well.

Sr. Nellie Stewart, of Paris, Texas, writes a word of cheer and exhortation to duty. She is encouraged by the word from others and wishes to encourage and exhort others in turn.

Bro. J. R. Lambert, at last accounts, was somewhere in the Missouri portion of his field, leading out in the missionary work.

Brn. A. H. Smith and J. W. Gillen left for Denver, Colorado, on Thursday, the 14th inst.

Bro. Heman C. Smith, who has been afflicted with rheumatism, is slowly improving. He hopes to be able to begin his literary labors on the history of the church at no distant day.

Brn. D. W. Shirk and J. L. Deetrick, of Belmont, Nebraska, will make a preaching tour north and northwest of Crawford, as far as Sheridan, possibly further. Saints and friends along the route are requested by them to communicate with them at Belmont, if they desire to call.

Bro. John T. Davis, one of the Presidents of Seventies, reports the death of his wife at Netawaka, Kansas, at 4:30 a. m., the 12th inst. Sister Davis was an earnest and devoted follower of the Master, and had endured and suffered much for his cause during the past forty years. Her rest is with those who have been faithful, and Bro. Davis and her family may indeed be comforted in the reflection that her reward must be a glorious one.

Cyclones did dread work at Seneca, Sabetha, and Frankfort, Kansas, on Sunday, the 17th. The usual story of death and disaster accompanies the reports.

The Methodist General Conference condemned mob violence in general during its late sessions. This action is creditable. It has its application not only to Armenian and Chinese outrages, and lynchings in the States, but also stands in practical condemnation of the persecution and death of the Saints and the two martyrs, in Missouri, Illinois, and elsewhere.

Dallas, Texas, telegrams dated May 15, report a disastrous cyclone at Sherman, Texas, during the afternoon of that day. The entire western end of the city was destroyed. From fifty to seventy-five persons are reported to have lost their lives. No accurate estimate of the value of property destroyed has been made. Business was suspended while caring for the dead, wounded, and homeless. Death and attendant destruction to property are reported from Gribble Springs, Justin, and Newton, Texas, the same date.

Dr. J. L. Withrow of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago, recently preached on the subject "Baptizing murderers into the church when ready to be hanged," his sermon being based on the late alleged conversion and confession of the celebrated scientific criminal, Holmes, lately executed in Philadelphia, who is said to have killed or caused to be killed twenty-seven persons. The minister practically characterized the religious features of Holmes' case as criminal; saying that to "allow a soul standing under the shadow of the death-trap to think that a little baptismal water will save him—is it less than criminal?" There is a wholesome reaction of pulpit and public sentiment against the preaching of murderers into glory and bliss, once so common and so generally believed in as it was a few years ago. People are learning, though slowly, that religion too should have its sensible side, and that too on all sides.

Damage to life and property by cyclones and lightning are reported from Lincoln and Elkhorn, Nebraska; also from points in Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Kansas, May 12.

The kindest and happiest pair
Will find occasion to forbear;
And something every day they live,
To pity and perhaps forgive."

CONTENT.

A modest home beneath the fruit tree's shade,
Where happy birds their cozy nests have made,

And thus with merry zest from day to day,
Sing cheerily each hour a roundelay.

The humming bird, and bee, and butterfly,
Sip daintily the sweets from flowers near by;
The lovely rose its fragrance sheds for all;
The saucy blue jays from the tree tops call.

And over all, the perfumed breath of May Floats like a dream, the breezes softly sway
The bending branch above you as you pass,
Whilst full-fledged robins chirp amidst the grass.

Without are flow'rs, and birds, and butterflies,
And bees, and perfumed air, and sunny skies;

Within is peace, content, and happy love,
With richest blessings sent from God above.

SONNET ON TIGHT LACING.

"If ye would crash the tree before one flower
Hath made its fragrance or its fruitage known;
If ye would break the harp before one tone
Hath told the compass of its varied power;
If ye would put out the lamp at twilight hour,
Or plant the brier where the rose had grown
Or crush the statue in the encasing stone.
Then make the 'corset curse' your daughter's dower!
But O, if ye reverse your God's impression Stamped on the human form! If ye would arm
Your sons against consumption's ghastly charm;
Banish this crime of every Christian (?) nation,
And know that murder—in whatever form—
Of self, or offspring, is no slight transgression!"

DEAR SISTER WALKER:—I send you the above selection for insertion in the Home Column, as I believe it pertinent in the light of present conditions. While in attendance at large gatherings of the Saints, such as General Conferences and reunions, my heart has been pained to note how vain we as Latter Day Saints are becoming, and the dainty hand and foot, the slender waist, the "up to date" fashionable costume as sought after and admired by so many. Is it possible that we are going to rush blindly on and precipitate the conditions which the Spirit has warned us to avoid? As we review the Nephite history as contained in the Book of Mormon and the shoals on which they stranded; as we read of the blighting curse pronounced upon Israel's fair ones because of their vanity and pride, is it possible that we are going to so far forget our own danger that we rush on to destruction? Think you, mothers, that you are doing your duty to your children when you shackle your body with corsets, and thus compress your vital organism into so small a compass that it blights your health and happiness? Do you think that God can bless you with his Holy Spirit when you are breaking the laws of your being, thus incurring on self and unborn progeny untold misery? Let me remind you of the statement of one who speaks whereof he knows, "No woman who wears a corset is fit to be a mother!"

J. H. Kellogg, M. D., of Battle Creek, Michigan, says of the decline of young women: "But there is another influence at work at this period to which the decline can be traced, and that is the girl is put into corsets and then begins the fatal constriction of the waist. Dressmakers demand that there shall be a difference of ten inches between the measurements of the bust and waist, whereas, from extensive studies and measurements of savage women, Chinese women, and peasant women of Europe, I find that the difference should be only from two and one half to five inches."

Again: "The women amongst the ancient Greeks who were perhaps the most beautiful race of the world, and whose glorious statues people pretend nowadays to admire never wore stays. The use of them was first mentioned about four hundred years after Christ, when some Grecian women were said to have laughed at a poor slave who squeezed her waist."—Good Health.

We can multiply testimony to prove that tight lacing, or the use of corsets, is injurious. Let a woman temporarily discard the use of corsets and soon she is heard to exclaim, "O, I can't stand it. I feel as though I would break in two!" Why? Simply because a persistent use thereof has weakened the muscles of the back so they are practically useless.

Why is it women get out of breath and almost faint in trying to walk up a hill at an angle of ten degrees? The corset. Why do they so often place their hands on their sides and gasp for a longer, deeper breath. The corset.

I must confess that I never was there, but I am credibly informed by those who have been, that in fashionable dressmaking establishments, when they are fitting dresses one stands with hands pressed on either side the subject and another buttons the dress by means of a button hook!

Think also of the example you are setting before the mothers of the future. You are in a measure false to your God-given trust if you permit your daughters to utterly disregard health in their wild devotion to fashion and fashionable attire. As I beheld numbers of our cultured and otherwise intellectually bright middle-aged and young sisters in attendance at General Conference and reunions so tight-laced that they were beyond any natural semblance, and attired in all the habiliments of modern fashions, the thought came, "Are these Latter Day Saints? Wherein does our difference from the world exist? Simply in precept and not in practice?" Good clothing is not necessarily an indication of pride, but wearing it without any regard to health and wise selection always is. A woman that wears corsets because others do so is proud. A woman that conforms her selection of dress and habits to suit the whims and caprices of sin-laden society is proud. The costumes of numbers of those in attendance at the last few General Conferences manifested an entire disregard of the divine injunction, "Thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands."

Can God be pleased with us when we disregard his law? Nature, human judgment, and God's law clearly teach us that it is wrong to adorn one's self with anything which would serve as a restriction to any of the functions of the body. I could add much, but let this suffice for the present; but I do hope and pray that the sisters will stop and think a moment, let reason triumph, and discard forever one of the greatest foes to health—the corset.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, April 27, 1896.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 1.

Dear Sisters:—Let me say unto you, Be of good cheer, no matter what your trial may be, whether temporal affairs or afflictions. God has promised eternal life and he cannot lie. Never since the world began did there live a people of more value than we of the Reorganization, for two grand reasons: First, God has set up his kingdom for the last time, neither shall it be thrown down or given to another people; therefore if we do not hunger and thirst after righteousness we are the losers and cannot be filled. Second, we the people of the Reorganized Church are taught the pure principles of the gospel of Christ.

The memorable conference of 1896 is closed and we are left to dwell upon the blessed feast; yea, and mourn too; but we recall that they "rest from their labors, and their works do follow." Surely God is moving in a mysterious way. I attended a meeting two weeks before conference when Bro. John Lake spoke these words: "The coming conference shall be a memorable one in the history of the church." Will it not? O, you people of God, arise and work for the benefit of your own souls, for surely God is working through his servants. O, may the great Jehovah speak peace to Sister Blair and her children.

In conclusion let me seek an interest in your prayers that I with you may be faithful to the end, for I am one of the afflicted ones; but in my affliction my soul is often made glad. It is a blessing in disguise. May the God of Israel hold up my silvery haired sisters, yea, the young also, to take courage and work while it is yet day, is the prayer of

Your sister in the one faith,

MARY GILLESPIE.

HINT TO BOYS.

I stood in the store of a merchant the other day when a boy came in and applied for a situation.
"Can you write a good hand?" he was asked.
"Yaas."

"Good at figures?"
"Yaas."
"That will do, I do not want you," said the merchant.
"But," I said, when the boy had gone, "I know that lad to be an honest, industrious boy. Why don't you give him a chance?"
"Because he hasn't learned to say 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir.' If he answers me as he did when applying for a situation, how will he answer customers after he has been here a month?"

What could I say to that? He had fallen into a habit, young as he was, which turned him away from the first situation he had ever applied for.—Selected.

LESSON VII.

BY CHARLEY FRY.

God's Character. and Man's Nature.	{	God was	}	Kind. Loving. Patient. Merciful. Forgiving.	} to Israel.
		Israel was		Unkind. Ungrateful. Impatient. Disobedient.

This lesson may be drawn from any of the many instances of Israel's soon forgetting God's blessings. Bro. Fry observes that "while these things were true of Israel, God was teaching them his attributes by example. Christ did likewise in later years."

These outlines are offered simply as suggestions. They may aid you in impressing the central truths of a lesson or series of lessons; or of fixing the historical facts; or of creating an interest in the general line of work. If you have not experienced it, you cannot realize what a little blackboard work will do for your school. Try it, once and again.

HENDERSON, Iowa, May 3.

To my Fellow Sunday School Workers: Greeting:—

This, our first circular for this quarter, is out very late. It seemed all that was possible to be done.

In this quarter you will note:—

1. That the chain of historical events is broken at intervals by a little "law," just enough to make the work "spicy." Are you making it so?
2. That the "Home Study" contains much of the narrative. Do not fail to get it.
3. That this quarter completes the book of Exodus. Will you have it properly reviewed and ready to leave? Begin working to that end now.

Teachers, you will be sent a blank teachers' report just prior to our next district work, in which you will have the opportunity to state exactly what you have done during the quarter. Please fill out carefully and promptly and mail to me by June 1, 1896. You will receive the blank soon.

Cheerfully and hopefully,

T. A. HOUGAS.

Editors Herald:—We were organized into a branch September 29, 1895, by Brn. J. C. Clapp and John Davis. We started with upwards of twenty members; one elder, one priest, one teacher, and a clerk, who is also book agent, and we have been truly made to rejoice. Bro. John Davis came in the summer and preached in the street, improvising a merchant's delivery wagon for a stand. We could get no place to preach, although there were empty churches for anyone else, but not for Latter Day Saints. Well, to say he raised a great excitement is putting it very mildly. Everybody was talking religion, and when he returned in September with Bro. Clapp and he preached a week without looking at his Bible, that capped all; and now they want to know when he is coming again. And, by the way, it seems too bad to leave a place so long where the interest is so good, and there is quite a number ready for baptism.

We were made very sad by the news of Bro. Blair. We got it first from a Seattle paper, and while we bow to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we cannot help feeling that the church has suffered a great loss. May we all be found as faithful as he.

I hope we shall soon have some of the elders here again, as our numbers are growing small. We have lost one by death and six gone away, including our elder and teacher, and the writer is left alone to carry on the work of the branch as to officers. We are still holding our sacrament meetings every Sunday. I am trying to spread the light when I have an opportunity. I have done no preaching since last summer, but expect to again soon, as I love the work more the more I study it. Hoping to be ever found faithful, working as well as praying for the spread of the truth,

Yours in bonds,

ASHER ALLEN.

SHERIDAN, Wyo., April 30.

Editors Herald:—On Sunday evening, the 19th, in company with Sr. Emma Woolsey I went to the Cady Opera House to hear Rev. Charles W. Savidge, of the People's Church, of Omaha, Nebraska, preach, as he arrived here in Sheridan, Wyoming, the 14th; but when I first saw him I did not know that was the great expounder of the People's sanctuary at Omaha, and who had debated with our brother, Elder T. W. Williams, in Omaha a year or so ago. I happened to meet the reverend soon after his arrival in Sheridan, but by reading the newspapers I learned that he was to preach in our fine stylish new opera house, therefore Sr. Woolsey and I went to hear him for the first time.

He is no Goliath in height or stature, but short and slender, or small in body, with heavy moustache, turning gray, dark hair, and very nervous looking, like he was restless; dressed in ordinary black clothes, not just come from the tailor shop, pretty well worn. He is no powerful speaker or what anyone can call eloquent, but plain; not emotional, and when he races back and forth on that stage floor he reminds me of a soldier who is always on the lookout for the enemy, as he is so soft and cautious in his footsteps—as noiseless as a cat. He told us he was born in Ohio, October 24, 1850; so he is not forty-six years old. He looks every bit of fifty years, and had been in the ministry nineteen years, and told us the Lord had sent him here, to Sheridan, Wyoming, to preach to us sinners, and stir us up to serve the Lord. I smiled when he said the Lord had sent him here to preach to us sinners for him, as I of course did not believe the Lord had any gospel business with the reverend.

As he told us all, he belonged to no church, as he had cut loose from all the churches, as he could not have in any of them the freedom he desired; therefore he went about and preached on his own accord for the Lord, and the Lord was blessing him wonderfully.

Therefore I doubted his word about the Lord ever having had any communication with Rev. C. W. Savidge in telling him to go to Sheridan, Wyoming, to preach to this people. Sr. Woolsey and I went to hear him four evenings; twice in the opera house, twice in the Baptist church. The reason he could not continue in the opera house was that the evening collections were not enough to pay for the lights, which I heard cost six dollars per evening alone.

On Monday afternoon, the 27th, the Rev. C. W. Savidge took the east-bound train. I did not hear of any converts he made. I am sure he never affected me any with his little deathbed stories and the wonderful life work of this bishop, and that bishop, and so on; and as there are five pretty big church buildings here the citizens are not deprived of religious meetings, but stick to their own creeds pretty well.

Now you all can readily see how great power this self-made preacher had when he could not get every evening sufficient money to pay the expenses of the opera house, when all the seats were taken up both nights by the crowd that came out to hear him. The first Sunday night he got about twelve dollars out of that vast congregation. First they collected nine dollars and some cents, so he told us he had told the Lord he must have twelve dollars this evening, so he stood there and begged till some gave him some extra to make up the twelve dollars; but after Monday evening he gave up the opera house.

Now I have both seen, heard, and talked with this great self-called minister, who thought with one blast of his trumpet he could overthrow our doctrine, which is established of God himself, by debating with God's true servant, Elder T. W. Williams, but he failed, poor soul, as the battle was against him that time, and ever will be until he in humility of soul and mind confesses that the gospel that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the genuine gospel and let some of our elders baptize him, that he might receive the Holy Ghost and then be called of God to the ministry and be ordained by God's lawfully authorized servants to go forth to preach the everlasting gospel which the angel brought to Joseph the Seer for him to go and proclaim to the people. And not till he has rendered full obedience to God's holy mandates will Rev. C. W. Savidge, Pastor of the People's Church in Omaha, Nebraska, ever be able to gain the victory for the Lord over any people; for the hand of the Lord will be against him, for I feel confident that this reverend was convinced of God's power when he was debating with Elder T. W. Williams of our church; for he looks so restless and queer in his face and manner. All he has got to do is to be baptized like Saul of Tarsus and become a true servant of God, the Most High, and not be running round the country and telling that the Lord has sent him to preach to us to repent when he himself has no claim on or authority from God to preach his gospel.

I believe he would be a good man and preacher if he only would obey the gospel in its fulness, and I hope he will find no rest for his soul until he has been baptized for the remission of his sins by one of the true servants of God. He then would know what doctrine Jesus taught, also what Paul and Peter and the rest of the disciples taught the people in their days; for Mr. Savidge's cry was, "O, for the Jerusalem doctrine, and for the Holy Ghost, the Pentecostal feast."

That showed he had never received it, otherwise he would not be crying after Jesus and Paul's doctrine.

I hope to abide firm to my baptismal covenant to the end of life, and let none deceive me by their self-made theories, for I know the gospel is of God, and that causes me to rejoice in it.

Your sister,

ANNA NIELSEN.

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 13.

Editors Herald:—Brother William Thompson and myself are here with the tent reared at Easton Place, and have begun work in the district for the conference year. We deemed it best to try work here in the city while people are so busy in the country getting crops in.

I see by Herald of May 6, that I am appointed by the missionary in charge, to have subordinate charge of the missionary work in the Des Moines district for the year. I truly trust our report for the coming year shall be better than that of the year past; and to that end hope to have the hearty, united coöperation of the brethren appointed to this field, as has been the case hitherto, as also of the district and branch authorities, and local ministry. May "our Father" help us all to labor unitedly for the advancement of his cause, the salvation of souls, and the advancement of his church.

Let the missionaries not forget that I shall expect them to report a brief of their labors on the 1st of the months of July, October, January, and March. If uninformed as to where to address me, send reports to me at Room 221, Youngerman Block, Des Moines, Iowa, and they will reach me.

The district conference convenes at Boonesboro, the 30th of May. Brother William Johnson, of Angus, Boone County, is district secretary. A large attendance at conference is expected. All regret that Bro. Rudd was not continued in this field, but we trust he will be instrumental in doing much good in his present mission. Bro. Rudd is a good, faithful worker. God be with him and all other true men and workers.

The Saints can aid us very much by helping us into new fields where new openings for labor can be effected. Brethren, come to the aid of the missionaries in this respect, and so help the work onward.

A number of new openings now await labor and will be reached as soon as possible. A move has been made whereby the Saints are to have, at no distant day, an authentic history of the Church, dating from the rise of the latter-day work, a work greatly needed. Let us all try to keep pace with the advance of the work, and so secure the blessings of the diligent and faithful.

Will the Saints of the district kindly remember that a small remittance from each will essentially aid the workers with the tent.

Let us all try unitedly to move the work forward, and surely the Lord will bless the effort.

Hopefully,

C. SCOTT.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., May 5.

Editors Herald:—It has been over a year since I heard an elder. I have been lately been called to pass through one of the sorest trials of my life—our only child, a baby about four years old was taken from us by drowning. The Master called for her and we had to let her go. Standing alone in the battle I had friends that were very kind. Now, with God's help I hope to meet my baby in the paradise of God.

I know the latter-day work is of God. I ask an interest in the prayers of the church that I may ever live faithful and have the desires of my heart that God will give me a child to raise for his service.

I ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of my husband that he will unite with the church, as he believes in the doctrine of the church.

Your sister,

JENNIE R. DIEHL.

FLINT, Mich., May 9.

Editors Herald:—As I sit alone this beautiful afternoon, my mind dwelling on the past two years and the blessings I have received in that time, I feel truly grateful to my Father in heaven. Two years ago this present month, Elder Levi Phelps came to Flint and opened up the work, preaching in a brother's house. I went to hear and listened to seventeen strong gospel sermons. On the evening of the 31st my sister obeyed. At times I thought I would not go again, but when evening came it found me there. I finally said, "I will obey if I, through obedience shall receive the Spirit they talk so much about;" and on the 10th of June, 1894, I, with two others, was buried in the likeness of Christ's burial and to fulfill all righteousness.

There were then four Saints here but now we number eleven (Mother being baptized since), God by his Spirit has promised us if we are faithful there shall be a mighty people here.

I love the cause, for I know it is God's work; and although prejudice runs high yet we see the "clouds are breaking" and friends are being raised up. I truly feel thankful that the gospel ever was restored and that we as Latter Day Saints can bear our testimony that we know the work is of God. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am,

Your sister,

HATTIE ECKLEY.

MEDINA, Texas, May 13.

Editors Herald:—Your columns become dearer every day of my life, as they bring to me week after week the glad news of the grand progress of the Kingdom of our Lord and Savior.

The work sometimes seems to drag in these parts, yet we do not feel to complain, for the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit is always with a few. As we go from place to place we find one of a family and two of a city striving for the faith once delivered to the Saints.

Since my report to conference on the 1st of March, I have been doing local work, preaching about three times per week; and now I am ready, willing, and anxious to enter upon mission work and answer some of the many calls that have been made during the last year. I shall spend most of my time up the river between now and the time of our conference, which convenes on the 11th of next month, in San Antonio. Yes, dear Saints of the Southwestern Texas district, come all, and bring the Spirit that bears with boldness the banner of the restored gospel.

I have just been reading the history of the young man that God chose to bear the message from the hand of the angel, to this world ripe with sin and iniquity. How like the God of ancient Israel he is still, that when a nation is full of sin and has turned from him he sends a messenger of peace to point them to the straight and narrow gate! And in the wisdom of God he has in his choice in these last days placed the responsibility upon one that could carry it under all circumstances. He could stand at the head of an army as a chieftain, command the peace and safety of a mighty city, vindicate his cause in the courts of justice, and when peace and safety no longer reigned, he could, with the boldness of a lion, brandish his sword in the air, point it heavenward, call on men, angels, and God to witness that he was pure from the blood of all men; and when the dread monster of disease and decay laid men women and children upon a fevered bed in every house and camp, he could hang his sword upon the wall, open his doors, give his house and all that he had to hospitality for the sick, lay everything upon the altar of sacrifice, bend every energy to the restoration of the afflicted and the giving of his entire time to the sick, dying, and dead.

And from this scene he could submit tamely to chains and to prison, to satisfy the vengeance of a merciless mob and with the sound of the chains grating harshly upon the ears of those who loved him and were willing to follow him from prison to death, he, like Paul and Silas with those few that were willing to bear his burdens, share his troubles, sorrows, and grief, could sing praises to God at the hour of midnight.

And how like the prophets of old he finally, when like Paul he was ready to be offered up, could submit with tameness and go like a lamb to the slaughter!

Dear Saints, if you will read the history of those that were at all times willing to face death, hell, and the grave in order that you should have the benefits of the gospel in its fullness, you would not only weep for those that loved you unto death, but would appreciate the path of life better than ever before. O, how I wish I could get more of the church literature before the people! Mrs. Wight is with me. We are trying to locate at this place; hope to succeed. Mrs. Wight left quite an interest at Beeville, and her daughter to keep it up. She is receiving encouraging letters from her friends of that place.

I wish to give notice that Bro. Crowfield Jackson, of Floresville, Latter Day Saint, will meet Mr. Charles Aply, of the Baptist faith, in discussion at the Seguin schoolhouse, near Floresville, Texas, on the 22d of June. I very much hope the Saints of San Antonio, or some of them, will attend the discussion.

Glad to learn that Bro. Montague is in this mission for another year. Wish we had more like him. Hope very much that he will reach San Antonio in time for our conference. As for my anticipated hopes, if I accomplish my aim and am not directed differently by Bro. Montague, I shall, after conference and the debate, visit some of the counties north of this, as I did last Spring.

Bro. Davenport and Bro. Johnson are good workers, but they have of late been leaving some of their work for me to do. I wish to tell them, with all brotherly kindness, that I have other fields, and hope hereafter that they will fill their appointments.

With gratitude to God for what he has done for me and mine, and with love toward all, I remain,

Yours for the truth,

L. L. WIGHT.

MANCHESTER, Texas, May 9.

Editors Herald:—I feel desirous to let the world know how much I love this latter-day work. I have been one in the fold nearly five years, and I am firm in the faith. I have never regretted the change I made. I was a member of the Baptist Church, and had been for twenty-two years. I feel happy to say that I know this grand work we are engaged in is of God, and am so thankful I was spared to hear the gospel in its beauty, and led by Holy Spirit to obey.

We are persecuted here a great deal, but that does not weaken us. It strengthens us; for we know they are in the dark, and that some choose darkness rather than light. I can sympathize with them, for I was once in the dark myself; but I know that the scales have fallen from my eyes and that I have received light on the Holy Scriptures.

I don't fear for the church in the least; it is my weakness I fear. I am so weak I don't hardly feel worthy of the name I bear. I don't want to be a Saint by name only, but in truth and in deed.

Myself, husband, and two children belong to the church. I have a great desire to raise my children up aright. We have a branch here; we meet every Lord's day; Sunday school in the morning, prayer meeting at four o'clock, preaching and the Lord's supper every third Sunday. Dear brethren and sisters, I humbly ask you all to pray for me that I may surmount all evil and overcome all temptation and come out victorious in the end and be able to wear a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Your sister,

SALLIE RICHARDSON.

CLOVERSWALE, April 29.

Editors Herald:—In reply for desired information as to how tobacco can be used for good for sick cattle, let me give an experience. One of my cows got a large chunk of ruta-baga fast in her throat, (ruta-bagas having been cut to obtain corners,) and was straining to free it when I discovered her in distress. As I was alone, nearest help being about half a mile distant, I had a chance to use the best of my wisdom.

I had heard of taking a stick and poking the chunk down, but this looked cruel, and under the circumstances probably impossible. I thought if there only was some way to make things slick about that ruta-baga the old cow might clear it, and if tobacco drew moisture to man's mouth why not to the mouths of cattle; so I proceeded to chew up a plug of tobacco which I had to a coarse pulp. Being a tobacco user this was done without sickness to the operator, and as fast as I prepared a bulk the size of a hen's egg I placed it on a large spoon, opened the cow's mouth and put the tobacco well back, nearly in the throat, then by keeping her nose high in the air she was caused to swallow most of it. This I repeated till I used three such bulks. In coughing the cow forced considerable tobacco into the nostrils, that which was swallowed of course lodged on ruta-baga. Shortly the water was exuded from eyes, nose, and mouth; then a violent effort was made, the hind hoof passing along the neck, and ruta-baga was ejected some eight or ten feet as though it were kicked there.

A brother,

GAYLORD, Kan., May 9.

Editors Herald:—I take great pleasure in writing of the good work done by our worthy brethren, W. S. Pender and L. F. Johnson, who came here on the 15th of April and have had meetings every night to very good congregations. Last Sunday Bro. Pender baptized six; five children of the Saints and one lady. She had been sick for twelve years; had been confined to the house and bed most of that time. She was very weak. We took her in a buggy to the river where she obeyed our Father's command. She was also administered to and greatly blessed. She is able to be up some.

Yesterday an old gentleman, wife, and four children were born into the kingdom, and we think there are more very near. They seem to be halting between two opinions. May the Lord help them to come and obey.

Bro. Johnson left us last Monday, and Bro. Pender will go Monday next. We would like very much to have them stay longer, but while there are so many calls and few to labor we must say, "Lord, thy will be done." We will never forget the good teaching we have heard while they were with us. Bro. Pender will arrange meeting and Sunday school for us, so we will not be left to drift away.

We ask the prayers of the Union in behalf of our sister, Annie Hummerger, that she may be fully restored to health and strength if it be the Lord's will. I also ask their prayers in behalf of my father, Abraham Jeffs, once a member of this church and was persuaded to join the Brighamite faith out there in Salt Lake City, that he may see the error and return where he belongs. I do feel to praise the Lord for his goodness and mercy to the children of men. Hoping that we may as a body of Saints do our whole duty and come to a higher standard, Your sister,

THEODOSIA COOK.

ARE WE KEEPING OUR PART OF THE COVENANT?

CHRIST has laid down a plan of salvation which is called a covenant of promise. Now, the word "covenant" brings to mind the thought of free agency; it takes two to make a covenant, one can offer the terms on which he will make a covenant with the other and leave the other to choose whether he will accept of his terms or not. If he chooses to accept and signs the contract, then the covenant is made, otherwise it is not. For an example: Mr. Jones offers me fifty dollars to dig a well, and build a house over it. I sit down and count the cost, and if I think I can do it for that I accept the offer, and that it might be done lawfully and to save dispute and hard feelings Mr. Jones draws up a plan of what I shall do and I sign my name to it, showing to the public, if it should be brought before the public, that I was willing to accept Mr. Jones' terms for digging a well and building a house over it. Then I am bound by the law to fulfill my part of the contract; and if I do this, then Mr. Jones is also bound to fulfill his part by handing over the fifty dollars.

But suppose I dig the well and do not build the house over it, am I entitled to the fifty dollars? I think not, and if it was stated in the plan drawn up that I was to receive the fifty dollars when the work was done, I could not get one cent till I fulfilled my part of the contract if he did not choose to give it to me. Very well, on the account of sin men are separated from God. God being love and loving his children, he wishes to bring them back to him, therefore he drew up a plan of salvation called the gospel or perfect law of liberty, or as Paul puts it, the word or covenant of reconciliation, and sent his Son Jesus Christ into the world to reconcile his brethren unto God his Father and their Father or Creator. Now, how was Christ to bring about this reconciliation? Was it not by making known the plan of salvation or perfect law of liberty that his Father offers as a covenant to take away our sins that separate us from him? I think so. Thus it will be seen that if the thing that separates us from God, which he tells us is our sins, be taken away, then we are brought back so that we can talk face to face with God the same as Adam did before he allowed sin to separate them.

Then as the covenant is called the perfect law of liberty it will be seen at once that we are not forced to accept of it, because if we were we would be in bondage instead of liberty. Therefore, that we might have our liberty we must accept the covenant of our own free will. Then in order that we might have our liberty God should make known unto us the conditions of that covenant. This he has done through his Son Jesus Christ, for when he sent him unto the world he said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him;" that is, he had committed the plan of salvation into the hands of his Son and gave him power on earth to forgive sins, and authority to call men and ordain them to go and teach their fellow men this covenant of reconciliation. And this is what he did, for when he had about finished his mission on earth, he called and ordained men, and said unto them, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you," as much as to say, You take up the mission where I leave off and carry it on, teach this covenant of my Father that I have made known unto you to your brethren. Thus he says, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them," etc.

It will be seen at once that it was a covenant of liberty. If it were not, he would have told them to force all nations to accept instead of teach all nations, baptizing them, etc. It will be seen that they must first teach the covenant to all nations, and when any one was willing to accept the covenant, they (the ministers) had authority from Christ to close it by having him sign his name to the covenant drawn up by the Father. And how do we sign our name to this covenant? Why, by being baptized. Thus the ministers of Christ bind us to our covenant with Christ by baptizing us; as it is written of them:—

Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven.

Then Christ seals the covenant by baptizing us with the Holy Ghost if we have been baptized by his ministers. Now then, let us look into this covenant and see what is contained in it. While all the commandments and promises of God are contained in this covenant, by which he offers to take away our sins and give us eternal life, it is not my purpose to write on them all in this article; but to write on one that, I think, is neglected to be taught to the convert before he accepts of the covenant by baptism in order that he might count the cost and see if he can afford to accept or not. As the ministers of Christ are to teach the covenant to all nations first and baptize them afterwards, and as the covenant contains all the standing commandments of God; that is, the commandments that concern the people in general and not individually, and as we acknowledge by being baptized that we are willing to keep all the commandments of God, therefore we should know what all those commandments are, so that when we accept the covenant we might accept it understandingly. If all the commandments that are contained in the covenant are not taught to the converts, and because of this they are not kept, I will leave the reader to judge which shall be held accountable before the righteous Judge, the minister who fails to declare the whole counsel of God, or the convert?

This commandment that I want to speak a little about is the law of tithing. I do not know whether the system of tithing that I have learned from some of the representatives of the church is the true system of the church or not; but if it is, I will take the stand that it is not in harmony with the system found in the covenant, and I will give my reasons for believing so; and if I am wrong I will thank any brother that will take the Bible and prove to me that I am wrong. I have been taught that if I got fifty dollars a month, after I paid my board out of that or supported my family, then I was to pay tithing out of what I had left. Now let us go to the word of God and see if that is the way he talks about tithing. First, is tithing contained in the covenant? I think it is, because this gospel or covenant must be preached to all nations, and God calls men out of our midst to teach us and our fellow men, and these men have to eat and so do their families, as well as we do. Paul says, "They which preach the gospel should live of the gospel," and as these men devote their whole time in teaching the covenant they cannot labor with their hands to support their families, so the Lord has provided a means by which their families could be supported. That means is an established law of tithing; that law requires one tenth of our income. Now the difference between the way I have been taught to pay this tenth and the way I understand it is this: I have been taught to pay a tenth of my income after I get my living out of it, while I understand that I should pay a tenth of my income before I take anything out of it for myself.

I will try to illustrate my meaning so that it will be understood. I do not own a foot of land to my name, my neighbor, Jones, has one hundred acres, he comes to me and wants to make a bargain, or a covenant with me. He says, "I will let you have twenty acres to put potatoes in on shares." And he would further say to me, "Go ahead and put them in, and when you dig them and get your living out of them give me every tenth barrel;" who would not see at once that Mr. Jones was a very slack man in doing business, for I could justify myself in using them all up for a living, and then where would his tenth come from? But this is not the way a wise man deals or does business. A wise man would say, "Here are twenty acres, you can plant potatoes in them and give me every tenth barrel when they are dug regardless of your living." If I could afford to do that I would accept his terms, and he would get his tenth.

When the tax collectors come for our taxes, do they ask us if we are able to pay taxes or not, and to get our living first, and then pay taxes on the leavings? If men are wise enough not to be slack in these things, is it to be supposed that an allwise God would be any the less slack in his dealings with man? God has order and system, and in fact what order and system men have they have learned from what God has revealed. Now, while we all boast about owning this and owning that, we do not own a single thing when we come to refine it down. Paul says, "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price," much less owning land, and cattle, and so forth. David says, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof;" and again, "the cattle on a thousand hills" are his; therefore he offers his covenant people nine tenths of all they can earn off the earth, and the cattle on a thousand hills, and all things that he has created for their use. But the other tenth he demands for the support of his ministers and their families, whom he calls to teach his covenant to their fellow men, and this is no freewill offering either, and we should know it at our baptism so that we would know just what is required of us before we sign the contract.

The Lord demanded the firstlings of the flocks, and herds, and fruits in olden times, the other nine tenths he gave to his people for their living; and as he is unchangeable he must demand the same yet. We read in one place that his people failed to comply with this law, and what was the result? Why, the priests went every one to his field to labor for the support of his family, for Paul says:—

If any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

Then what happened when the priests had to go and work to support their families? Why, the people made themselves gods of wood and stone, and placed them in the groves, and worshiped them instead of the living God. Hezekiah had all these images broken in pieces, cut down the groves, and appointed the courses of the priests and the Levites. Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give their portion to the priests and the Levites that they might be encouraged in the law of the Lord. And as soon as the commandment went abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithes of all things brought they in abundantly. And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the Lord, and his people Israel. Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps. And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the Lord, we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty; for the Lord hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store. (2 Chron. 31: 4-10.)

This proves the statement of the Prophet Malachi to be true, when he said:—

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes [that you might get your living also], and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts.

Now, dear brethren, will not God do the same thing for us, if we keep this part of our covenant, he being unchangeable; and as the covenant is the perfect law of liberty by which, if obeyed in all its parts, our sins are taken away and we are brought back to God. But "sin is the transgression of the law," therefore, if we fail to obey any commandment contained in the covenant or perfect law, we transgress that far, and we are that far short of being perfect, and we cannot dwell in the presence of a perfect God till we do become perfect.

Brethren, the hastening time is at hand and there is a great work to be done in carrying the gospel to foreign lands and also in our own land, and this will take money, and there are elders and priests now working to support their families, that ought to be in the vineyard of the Lord, because the Macedonian cry is coming from all directions, "Come over and help us."

Then, brethren, let us bring the first fruits of our tithes into the storehouse, and not wait till we get what we think we want out of it, and then give the Lord the tenth of the leavings, and sometimes nothing left to give. Let us prove the Lord and see if he is not the same God he used to be. I could bring lots of good evidence from the parables of Christ to prove the stand I have taken if I had space; but I will have to close or there will not be room in the Herald for it, so I send it out for criticism. I hope it will accomplish what it was written for.

ELIAS B. PORTER.

WORLDS MADE.

NOT for contention, but for education in the things divine do I write. Bro. Francis Earl in the Herald for May 6, writes up "Faith" and uses the following language:—

For grandeur and power it stands unsurpassed. It is the principle that moves the universe. By it the worlds were made. (Heb. 11: 3.) As a principle, the writer has failed to see it clearly defined by any one writer, as he, while meditating at times, and the mind for a few moments clears to the subject, seems to comprehend its magnitude, grandeur, and power.—Herald, p. 301.

Again he writes:—

It points to One whose intelligence is superior to that of all others; who, by this principle, intelligent, perfect faith, created the worlds.—Herald, p. 301.

There can be no doubt but what the intention of the author was to teach that by "faith" the worlds were made. Only one scripture is cited as follows:—

Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.—Heb. 11: 3.

The analogism of this in its simplest form of statement would be: that by and through the principle of faith we are made to "understand"—obtain the knowledge—"that the worlds were framed by the word of God." The revelation of God to us is:—

And it came to pass, that the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, I reveal unto you concerning this heaven and this earth; write the words which I speak. I am the Beginning and the End; the Almighty God. By mine Only Begotten I created these things. Yea, in the beginning I created the heaven, and the earth upon which thou standest.—Gen. 1: 1-3.

We are safe in our teaching when we ask the people to believe the above revelation, for God said concerning the inspired translation of the Holy Scriptures, that when they had "received them in full":—

I give unto you a commandment, that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people—D. C. p. 145.

Thus we are authorized to say to mankind that the first verses of the Holy Scriptures teach that "this earth" with its circumambient was "created" by "mine Only Begotten"—the Christ.

The Israelitish poet sang:—

By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth.—Ps. 33: 6.

There is no ambiguity in the following:—

The Son was with God, and the Son was of God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him: and without him was not anything made which was made.—John 1: 1-3.

No exception can be taken to our preaching if we confine our affirmation to the statement that all things were made—created—by the Christ, without attempting to explain the method, principle, or power by which he performed the matchless work assigned unto him by his Father. The veil is lifted through the plenitude of our heavenly Father, that heavenly light may enter our minds and illuminate the pathway to help us in pointing the way that leads to eternal glory. Paul said in his time, relative to what God had done, that God hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.—Heb. 1: 2.

Neither the detailed nor general principles of operation by which the Christ performed his labors have been revealed to us; we should therefore be satisfied not to go beyond that which is written.

Through faith was the understanding of Peter enlightened so that he wrote:—

For this they willingly are ignorant of, that of old the heavens, and the earth standing in the water and out of the water, were created by the word of God.—2 Peter 3: 5.

To the understanding of the first Seer of the latter days through the principle of faith it was manifested:—

And it came to pass that Moses called upon God, saying, tell me, I pray thee, why these things are so, and by what thou madest them?

And behold, the glory of God was upon Moses, so that Moses stood in the presence of God, and he talked with Moses, face to face: and the Lord God said unto Moses, for mine own purpose have I made these things. Here is wisdom, and it remaineth in me. And by the word of my power have I created them, which is mine only Begotten Son, who is full of grace and truth. And worlds without number have I created; and I also created them for mine own purpose; and by the Son I created them, which is mine Only Begotten. And the first man, of all men, have I called Adam, which is many. But only an account of this earth, and the inhabitants thereof, give I unto you. For behold there are many worlds which have passed away by the words of my power. And there are many which now stand, and innumerable are they unto man, but all things are numbered unto me, for they are mine, and I know them.—D. C. 22: 7.

God did not condescend to inform Moses nor Joseph Smith "by what" he—God—made the world or the worlds. They had to be satisfied with the answer, "Here is wisdom, and it remaineth in me." And, so far as I am aware, the secret is still locked up in the wisdom of the Almighty—a safe place for it to remain!

I was in the world and received of my Father, and the works of him were plainly manifest; and John saw and bore record of the fullness of my glory; and the fullness of John's record is hereafter to be revealed. And he bore record, saying, I saw his glory that he was in the beginning before the world was; therefore, in the beginning the Word was, for he was the Word, even the messenger of salvation, the light and the Redeemer of the world; the Spirit of truth, who came into the world because the world was made by him; and in him was the life of men and the light of men. The worlds were made by him. Men were made by him. All things were made by him, and through him, and of him. And I, John, bare record that I beheld his glory, as the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; even the Spirit of truth which came and dwelt in the flesh, and dwelt among us.—D. C. 90: 1.

The above is most emphatic that the "worlds were made" by the Lord Jesus Christ.

It may be urged that he worked by faith. If true, it is taught by implication and not by direct statement. When the Jews sought occasion against the Christ he informed them:—

My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.—John 5: 17.

If Christ works by faith, the question arises: Does his Father—God—work by faith? And if he does, in whom or in what does he exercise faith? Paul wrote in regard to the Christ:—

Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God.—Phil. 2: 6.

This equality exists in the power he possessed by which he did the work assigned of the Father, for Christ says:—

My Father is greater than I.—John 14: 28.

It may be very exhilarating to take an excursion to the sky in a theological balloon and play "peek-a-boo" among the stars; or navigate the submarine paths of the deep in an ecclesiastical diving bell to bring up the secrets of the ocean to fix the age of Mother Earth; but how much of salvation or righteousness unto the race is there in such? The mental gymnastic evolution of a vivid imagination in a hair-splitting, hypothetical theory may be excellent for developing the art of word pictures. All speculative theorizing reminds me of the words of the prophet:—

Yea, it shall be unto them even as unto a hungry man who dreameth, and behold, he eateth, but he waketh and his soul is empty; or like unto a thirsty man who dreameth, and behold, he drinketh, but he awaketh, and behold, he is faint, and his soul hath appetite.—Isa. 29: 8.

Such is all that fails to establish "The pillar and ground of the truth." Perhaps it will require a long space in eternity to fully reveal to our finite minds the infinite work accomplished by the captain of our salvation, for we receive the Holy Spirit in degree or proportionate to our faithfulness, while the Son of God receiveth "not the Spirit by measure, for he dwelleth in him, even the fullness." (John 3: 34.) There is importance in the instructions in the organic law of the church which says that the officers shall teach the principles of the doctrine "as they shall be directed by the Spirit; and the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith, and if ye receive not the Spirit, ye shall not teach." (D. C. 42: 5.) The necessity of this was manifested in the testimony of Paul, when explaining the ministers' labor:—

Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter, but of the Spirit; for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life.—2 Cor. 3: 6.

It is possible that the tradition of the elders has been that the worlds were made by faith, but surely it is clear that there is absent such reveal-ment. And all should hold in mind that it is possible that the same rules that are for our government and direction in labor may not govern the Allwise and his Son Jesus Christ; for of old it was said:—

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.—Isa. 55: 8, 9.

To close let me cite:—

The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.—Deut. 29: 29.

So mote it be with latter-day Israel.

FORGIVENESS.

THAT it is not only a blessed privilege, but our imperative duty, to fully and freely forgive all mankind of each and every imaginary or real wrong, is quite evident, both from a gospel standpoint and the domain of well-ordered reason.

From the watchtowers of observation and the harvest-fields of experience, this great evangel of light, this tranquil harbinger of peace and good will, asserts her immaculate authority in tender yet absolute fidelity. Its reflex benefits fill all the channels of thought and action with light, peace, and love. Its outward and visible mission is to alleviate sorrow, assuage grief, and soften all the asperities of life.

Self-preservation, which is an exorable law in all nature, can be conserved by dethroning evil with good; and extending mercy when least expected; and returns are seemingly unavailable. To subdue an antagonist with the weapons of kindness is to convert a bitter enemy into a fast friend. To pity and pardon where neither are sought, and both are resented, and spurned, is a thankless task indeed, and an uphill business in the absence of unbounded charity. That loving child of ineffable grace, whose warp and woof are in the soft, silken bands that belt the universe, is ever indulgent and kind, even when the shafts of malice and the poison-arrows of hate fall harmless at her feet and spend their strength in vain.

If the All Father could not or would not forgive, our fondest hopes would expire, and the green leaves of joy would become fiery red, and golden yellow, somber brown, and melancholy gray. The corroding hand of time would entomb the aspirations of a sinking, dying, ruined world. While the great monarch of the day spreads light and heat over the simmering sea, amid mountain heights, and throughout budding orchards and blooming fields, kind Providence, with an inexhaustible hand, will scatter broadcast his rich gifts and blessings in the royal garden of the human heart where the perennial flowers bloom and the tree of life bears ambrosial fruit. The more we drink into and partake of the divine nature, the more we are shielded with and endowed by the divine power, the easier it will be to importune for the welfare of those who despitefully use and maliciously and persistently abuse us. Jesus practiced what he preached while expiring upon the transverse wood, as also Stephen the Martyr while his assailants were consummating their awful work. Many of the ancient worthies took joyfully the spoiling of their goods; and praised God in the flames. Paul finished his illustrious career with joy and sealed his testimony with the sanguine tide, as also Joseph and Hyrum, and others unknown to me and numerous. Blind, heartless, cruel unbelief rails at the forgiveness of sins and the benefits of the atonement. The skeptic claims that stern justice cannot be tempered with mercy, howbeit they are alarmingly lenient with their own offspring, and toil and tug, vicariously, for the ease, luxury, and benefit of their consorts, children, and friends. It is not at all consistent to find fault with Deity for allowing and doing the things which are the most meritorious for an earthly parent to perform. Every springing blade of grass, every newborn leaf of the forest, the sprouting grain, the budding flower, the blooming orchards, from a mote to the solar system, and on up to all worlds, the great Author of this subject is revealed to seeing eyes and hearing ears.

Because the wayward may regain his footing and make ample reparation, bemoan himself, and seek and obtain pardon, this periodical sinning, repenting, and confessing is not a legal tender at all times. When a person, either knowingly, or inadvertently, makes an infraction on the golden rule, the jar is evident, and the recollection thereof is coordinate with a retentive memory. You can take the crowfoot, or a clawhammer, and draw a misplaced nail from a door, or a piece of furniture; but, behold, the ugly scar is a fixture! Woe to the denizens of the world! for "man's inhumanity to man" hath made the "countless thousands mourn." Woe to the offending, and the offended ones, because it means all that are affected thereby. In Psalms 119: 165 we are informed that:—

Great peace have they which love thy law: and nothing shall offend them.

Again in verse 163, he stated; viz.:—
I hate and abhor lying: but thy law do I love.

As I trace these lines, and jot down these thoughts, I reflect about many, both in and out of the church, that I take precious little stock in; for it appears self-evident merit is not. The good Lord only knows, full well, their temperaments, their native, and acquired abilities; their environments; how much they have striven, and the amount they have resisted; their struggles, prayers, and tears; and the measure of their accountability and responsibility; hence I will seek to be "to their" faults a little "blind, and to their failings very kind;" so that a similar measure will take care of me. Restoration, and reconciliation on the basis, and evasive plea of, "If I have wronged a brother, or a sister, I am sorry indeed, and humbly beg their pardon," is a fig leaf covering, and a rope made from the quicksands of the sea. If guilty, own up squarely, and acknowledge the corn freely. When a person unloads his storm-swept heart fully and makes a clean breast of his questionable demeanor, then the tide of mercy and the flood of peace will rush into the chambers of his soul. If church members would talk to instead of about one another, mutual understanding, explanation, and concessions would take the place of scandal, the loss of confidence, and almost every evil work. To think that dignitaries will listen to the chronic fault-finder, the professional tattler, an aspiring partisan, and even pump from such bitter fountains and hawk abroad this swelling tumult is strange indeed! Let us hope for better things; and shield, and protect the household of faith, from the least to the greatest, and then delight and strength will spring up in our souls like a "cherishing fountain." Busybodying and backbiting keep the pot boiling; and, forsooth! such work should be discouraged and circumscribed. Let the ministry and laity stand by each other in the right.

The one faith, and the unity of the Spirit, and the fellowship of the gospel, will bring a concord of feeling, concurrence of action, and harmonious results pleasing to behold. A redoubling of diligence all along the line will pay a hundred cents on the dollar.

The good Lord cannot fully pardon us if we forgive only a favorite few, or even a respectable majority. We need not be in the dark as to how the books are kept, and the appearance of the balance sheet. Let us be far from exacting, or contentious, and impatience, petulance, spite work, and hatred, and such things, let them be far beneath our feet. May we love, seek, and ensue peace so that God can and will speak to and through us. On the imperishable foundation of truth and righteousness let us go to in the strength of the unicorn and with the speed of "swaying furnaces," or the "chariots" of Nahum, as "swift messengers" of salvation. That health and happiness, peace and prosperity, the love of God, the blessings of Jesus Christ, the uplifting influence of the Holy Spirit be with the weary, watching, waiting ones, I pray.

at the Logan reunion, 1895. The reunion committee met May 11, with the citizens' committee, consisting of fifteen of Woodbine's business men at which time all preliminary plans of work were arranged. The committee on location of the Fremont and Pottawattamie district reunion appointed at the last reunion, after due deliberation, have decided to locate the next reunion at Thurman, commencing August 20, and continuing over the 30th. The branch at Thurman or Plum Hollow will appoint a committee on arrangements, who will attend to all preliminaries as the work of the present committee now ceases. It is to be hoped that every effort will be made by all the Saints throughout these districts to make the reunion a success. We know of no reunion being held at the same time. Trusting that the reunion of 1896 will excel in spirituality and results any ever held in these districts,

NOTICES.

All those who will attend the Des Moines district conference to be held at Boonesboro, Iowa, May 30, 1896, please notice that the members of the reception committee appointed by the branch are Samuel McBirnie, Fred Bell, Wm. Lane, and Mary M. Clark. This committee will be at the church on the morning of the 29th at eight o'clock to receive all the brethren and sisters that will come, and appoint them places to stay during conference. This committee will be known to strangers by a blue ribbon on lapel of coat. Come one and all, and bring the Spirit of the Master with you, so we will have a good time and a conference long to be remembered.

SAMUEL MCBIRNIE, Pres. Com.

The Saints coming to conference at Chatham will find hall nearly opposite Market King Street. The Sisters' Aid Society here will have a supper Saturday, twenty-five cents each, for a church building benefit; or any time during conference twenty-five cents will be thankfully received. A church is greatly needed here as it costs us nearly one hundred dollars a year for rent. So please encourage the sisters as we are under a heavy burden; have borne it these nine or ten years in order to hold the fort here. If you cannot come send the twenty-five cents. It will not hurt you, and it will do a power of good in relieving us. We expect a good time. Yours,

J. H. TYRRELL,
Pres. of Chatham Branch.

The Fall River Branch will hold a memorial service May 31, in respect to Bro. W. W. Blair, to which a cordial invitation is extended to all the branches of the district.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and Seekers for Truth in North-eastern Nebraska, Greeting in the Lord:—As sub-missionary of this part of the Lord's vineyard under appointment of Elder A. H. Smith, missionary in charge, I at once address you. Since there is but one General Conference appointee in this part of the Eastern Nebraska mission it will be necessary for all to be patient, and each do that which is within their power to do, hoping that some of the local ministry will come to our aid.

Any of the ministry who can aid in the missionary work will correspond with me at their earliest convenience.

All who may desire labor will please notify me at once, so that I can make such arrangements as it is possible to make to satisfy all demands.

With the help of the blessed Master, and the coöperation of all lovers of the gospel I hope to see much good accomplished this conference year. The field is truly white for the harvest, and the laborers are few. May God give you a prosperous year, and inspire each with a zeal seasoned with knowledge to use of your mites or your abundance in the spread of his truth, remembering that "after the sacrifice cometh the blessing," but the sacrifice must be made willingly.

My permanent address is Box A., Magnolia, Harrison County, Iowa.

DIED.

SHERARD.—At Maysville, Missouri, May 9, 1896, Louis Earl, son of Bro. and Sr. Charles Sherard, passed away from earth life in the beauty and innocence of childhood, being but 10 months and 28 days old. Funeral from Christian church, whose choir kindly furnished the singing, led by Professor Millard, who rendered an appropriate solo. Services in charge of Elder C. P. Faul; sermon by Elder J. M. Terry, from Jeremiah 22:10.

MCKEE.—Martha McKee was born March 15, 1833, in Maine; was baptized September 15, 1872; united in marriage March 16, 1848, to Jonathan McKee; died at Persia, Iowa, April 4, 1896. Seven children mourn their loss. Funeral sermon April 6, 1896, by Elder Joseph Seddon.

BENJAMIN.—Bro. Joseph L. Benjamin was born in Benton County, Indiana, July 20, 1819, and died at his home in Panama, Iowa, May 6, 1896. He was married to Miss Rosey A. Crandall, August, 1856, making nearly forty years that they have enjoyed the companionship of husband and wife together. Bro. Benjamin was baptized into Christ at Leando, Iowa, about sixteen or seventeen years ago, by Elder John H. Lake, being at death a member of the Galland's Grove branch. Funeral services were held in the M. E. church at Panama, conducted by Elder C. E. Butterworth, assisted by Rev. M. T. Tweedy, pastor of the church.

HENNING.—Near Ellis, Missouri, May 7, 1896, Bro. John L. Henning, aged 60 years, 7 months, and 23 days. He was born September 14, 1835, at Rydding, Denmark; baptized September 3, 1859, by Elder H. E. Goff. His wife preceded him to the paradise of God January 15, 1895. Six children mourn this loss. Like Sr. Henning, he calmly surveyed his end. His last testimony at prayer meeting a short time before was one never to be forgotten by the Saints, and they feel a saint in all the word implies has left to return at the first resurrection morn. Funeral sermon was delivered by Elder F. C. Keck, assisted by Elder A. Lloyd, to a large congregation of friends, who gave evidence of his moral worth and high standing in their midst.

COPELAND.—Near Waterford, California, May 8, 1896, Marbary C. Copeland, wife of Henry P. Robins, of Stockton, California, in the 74th year of her age. A native of Ohio. Funeral conducted by Elder C. A. Parkin. The number of friends and neighbors that attended showed the high esteem in which Sr. Copeland was held. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

CHAPMAN.—John Chapman, Sen., was born July 14, 1818, in Wiltshire, England; came to America in 1861; baptized into the Reorganized Church April 7, 1863; ordained an elder January 21, 1865; died February 25, 1896, at the home of his son, John Chapman, Jr., near Persia, Iowa. Funeral sermon by Elder Joseph Seddon.

DAVIS.—Sr. Catherine Arthur Davis was born August 4, 1833, in Meshynlleth, Montgomeryshire, Wales. Baptized and confirmed a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in her native city in the thirteenth year of her age, for which she has faithfully devoted her life. Married Elder John T. Davis December 14, 1857, to which eight children were born. Her greatest desire for them was to see them all accept the faith and become members of the church of her choice as soon as they arrived at the age of accountability, which desire has been realized. Her husband was an active missionary at the time of their marriage and has been almost all the time since. She has been called on to make those trying sacrifices peculiar to such a position, yet she has met and passed through them cheerfully, encouraging her companion to do the same. Her record has been a good one, and tells the history. She came with her husband to America in the spring of 1861. She departed this life at 4:30 a. m., May 12, 1896, leaving her husband, four children, and a host of friends to mourn her death as a faithful wife, a loving mother, a devoted Saint, and a trusted friend. She died as she had lived, firm in the faith and strong in the hope of everlasting life. Funeral services were conducted by Elders H. Green and David Williams. We do not mourn as those "which have no hope."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE
USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

 tlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

 Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added

FREE . . . TO MINISTERS

AND Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Klingerich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell;" and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,

THE MYTH-THEORY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

PROF. CRAWFORD HOWELL TOY, of Harvard, has been delivering a series of three lectures in this city on the results of the "Higher Criticism." One might just as well, so The Observer thinks, writes the word "myth" on the first cover page of the Bible and place the book on a shelf in the attic, as to accept Professor Toy's teachings on the subject. The lectures were delivered in the Lenox Avenue Unitarian Church, and we give below portions of them as reported in The Tribune. Professor Toy said:—

"Although Israelitish history solves no political problem, it is nevertheless full of interesting events and great names. It did not begin in Genesis. The story of the flood and kindred tales form an interesting collection of legends and myths, permeated, nevertheless, with a strong religious feeling. Little of Genesis can be accepted as history. It must be regarded either as a combination and reflection of dim recollections of old tribal history or of later events. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are but the incorporated forms of the old tribes. There are several reasons why the account of the abode in Egypt and the Exodus cannot be regarded as historical facts, and one of them is the fact that in the Egyptian records that have thus far been discovered there is no reference to these occurrences, so that this portion of the Old Testament must be regarded as a reflection from a much later time—the history of a subsequent period incorporated into the Book of Exodus. The tablets of Amarno, found nine years ago and inscribed about 1500 B. C., or before the time commonly assigned to the life of Moses, contains not a word of the Israelitish history as found in the earlier books of the Old Testament. Hence we have to dismiss these early accounts as the legendary, imaginary pictures of a past life reconstructed in the light of much later times."

In referring to David, Professor Toy said that, contrary to what has been thought, he was not a spiritual man, though a religious one; that he did not write a single one of the Psalms, which were the work of a later period; and that the only one of his poems that we have is his lament over Jonathan. We quote again from The Tribune's report:—

"Writing was hardly used for literary purposes by the Israelites long before the time of David, and it is not till the eighth and seventh centuries B. C. that we have the first attempt at history. Those attempts concerned themselves with the early traditions, the forefathers, the judges, and the early kings. One of these histories is called the Jehovistic (or Yahwestic), because it employs the divine name Jehovah (or Yahweh); it is made up of delightfully told stories, picturesque, naïve, frank. Most of the familiar stories of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob belong to it. The other, called the Elohist (because it has the divine name Elohim, that is, God) is more restrained in tone and more advanced in thought. In contrast with these are the mythical narrations of Genesis 1-11, which are almost wholly borrowed from the Babylonian. The Books of Judges, Samuel, and Kings received their present shape in the sixth century (the exile). Several centuries later Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah were written under the influence of the developed ritual law. Finally, the history of the heroic struggle of the second century is recorded in the books of the Maccabees. Israelitish history, in the classic period (except contemporaneous annals), is a picture of things not as they were, but as the writers supposed they must have been. Legend and myth were, of course, interwoven into much of it."

Again the lecturer said:—

"The romances, Ruth, Jonah, and the others, are admirable narrations, vivid, clear, impressive. The Hebrews are the inventors of the short story. Finally, the Apocalypse is a striking Hebrew creation—it is a story of the past and the present dramatically put as a predictive vision. The hero of the Book of Daniel never existed in the flesh, and its visions are not predictions; but its pictures are full of life and movement, and it is a literary classic."

The Observer (Evang.), after making the remark referred to, comments as follows:—

"We have heard it said by more than one of the followers of these bold and erratic scholars that to them the work of the higher critics has made the Bible a new book, disposing of many difficulties in the way of its acceptance. We confess that at last we are ready to assent to the claim that under the sweeping treatment of the critics the word of God does become an entirely different book. The book is seen to be so much more human, say the critics. It certainly is if all that the critics declare is true. To make history entirely out of one's imagination and palm it off as true, as the later B. C. writers must have done, is just as human in character as any kind of fraud of which we ever heard. But what shall we say of the ignorance of Peter when he quoted the Psalms and attributed them to David? It was Peter who protested that he and others of the disciples had not followed cunningly devised fables when they made known the power and coming of our Lord Jesus, but were eyewitnesses of his majesty. But even the eyes which saw the transfiguration glory and the ears which heard the divine voice, were not such powerful arguments, Peter intimates, as the more sure word of prophecy. It is this sure word of prophecy that the higher critics pronounce practically a romance and a string of cunningly devised fables.

"Such teaching eliminates the divine element in the Bible. Inspiration is no longer there. Our ethical code is built up on a book that seems to be one thing, but is another. It seems to be history, but is fiction. The spiritually-minded Jews of the apostles' time and the merely religious Jews of Christ's day evidently believed in the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, and the Davidic authorship of many of the Psalms. Were they ignorant, or did they know all that the present critics know, and for policy's sake keep the common people in ignorance? It hardly seems possible that they knew as much as some of our critics of today know, and we can only conceive that six hundred years after the Old Testament was hatched up from legends, romances, fiction, tradition, and folklore generally, so well was the work done that scribes and Pharisees, apostles and saints believed the work genuine, and its attributed authorships fact. To this complexion have matters come, that is, if the Toy school is correct, namely, that the Old Testament is largely the product of legend writers and fiction gatherers, and the New of ignorant men who did not know fiction from fact, or knowing, built up a New Testament on the fiction of the Old. Under this view our Bible is the offspring of fiction and ignorance, manipulation and deceit. How remarkable that it should give the civilized world its moral and legal code, and inculcate, from Genesis to Revelation, doctrines that make men truthful, honest, self-denying, Godlike! This is creation outdone. To bring something out of nothing is the act of omnipotence, but to bring the world's highest morality and the way of eternal life out of ignorance and tradition is a more astounding performance. We shall be prepared to believe that this has been accomplished when some wiseacre of a higher critic or any number of them can turn the story of Jack the Giant Killer, Mother Goose's tales, and the Arabian Nights into a book and a force that will revolutionize the world, fill the heart of the hopeless with heaven, break the chains of guilty passions, and set at liberty them that are bound in sin.—Literary Digest.

THE OCCUPATION OF WIFE AND MOTHER.

Two Republics, City of Mexico.

A WOMAN was sworn as a witness in an El Paso, Texas, court the other day and gave her occupation that of "a wife and mother." The El Paso Herald says the court smiled. Perhaps if the woman had replied that she was a public lecturer on the rights of downtrodden women, an advocate of bloomer-dress reform, or even a concert-hall singer, the court would not have smiled but gone on with his business. True, in this generation of female emancipation, when so many women have their time completely taken in fashionable slumming, attending Friday morning clubs, and discussing the amelioration of the sex, it does sound strange to hear a woman plead guilty to the crime of being a wife and mother. This occupation, in the sense that the world has known it for ages, is becoming old-fashioned and out of date. The new fads which have grown up leave no room for the cradle and trundle bed. Girls are being trained to believe that for several thousands years man has exercised an autocratic authority over the weaker sex and they are taught to write essays and make speeches on what is termed equal rights.

Really have women such unequal privileges? And doesn't the wife do just as much toward making the world move along as the typewriter girl or the female minister? Whether or not women would be better conditioned with the elective franchise, is a question that only the experiment would decide. It would certainly do no great harm, for even with the spoils of office thrown open to our fair companions, there would still be a great many women who would prefer the protection and refinement of the fire-side to being politically besmattered. But if the bars are to be let down, so that women may occupy all the avenues of men, there ought, in fairness, to be a division line so that the women whom men love to court and to fight for, to show special deference to and protect, with their lives if necessary, might sit apart from the man-woman who wants to be a justice of the peace and exercise all the functions possible, of the male. The man-woman has no demand for special consideration from the real man, on account of her sex, for she has renounced it.

Let us hope, though, that the race of the old-fashioned womanly women is not to be immediately extinct. Let women pride themselves on being good wives and good mothers. Laying aside as rather out of date the commands for woman to obey man in all things, it certainly is still not inconsistent for woman to obey her highest instincts, which are maternal. The El Paso judge ought on reflection to be thankful to have met a woman in his court whose highest ambition was to be a good wife and mother.—Public Opinion.

A MANUSCRIPT DISCOVERED.

BIBLICAL classes throughout the world are awaiting with great interest further particulars concerning the manuscript Gospel which was recently discovered in a village church near Cæsarea, in Asia Minor, and which the Czar of Russia is said to have purchased. All that is known of it now is that it is very old and beautiful, being written upon the finest and thinnest vellum, which has been dyed a deep red purple. The letters are in silver, and are square, upright uncials; the abbreviations of the sacred names are in gold. The pages are thirty-two centimetres by twenty-six, and the writing on each page is in two columns.—Information.

People who wish to go to Buffalo to attend the N. E. A. Convention, who want fast time, the most excellent train service and superior accommodations, will do well to consider the Nickel Plate Road before purchasing tickets. CONFIRMATORY EVIDENCE.

SOME things which the enemies of Joseph Smith charge against him as criminal and which some of his alleged friends state of him as evidences of his good character, in their esteem, would, if true, make him a breaker of the laws of the land, as well as a transgressor of the laws of God, given of God through him to the church. Our contention is, that because he would neither break the laws of the Lord, nor the laws of the land, he could not have done the things charged against him. Here are a few collateral evidences strongly in favor of our contention.

Pres. Brigham Young in an address delivered in Salt Lake City, Utah, July 11, 1852, six weeks before the presentation of the so-called revelation on celestial marriage, made the following statement regarding the character and conduct of the Prophet Joseph Smith:—

Joseph Smith was not killed because he was deserving of it, or because he was a wicked man; but because he was a virtuous man. No law or constitutional right did he ever violate. He was innocent and virtuous; he kept the law of his country and lived above it. . . . He was pure, just, and holy as to the keeping of the law.—Mill. Star, vol. 14, page 675.

George Q. Cannon, in his work, "Life of Joseph Smith," page 473, states that at the time the little band going to Carthage, Illinois, on the morning of June 24, 1844, met Captain Dunn with his troop of sixty men going to Nauvoo with an order for the arms of the Nauvoo Legion, the Prophet Joseph turned to the company of men, including Dunn's corps and those accompanying himself, and said:—

I am going like a lamb to the slaughter, but I am calm as a summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense toward God and all men.

Mr. Cannon has put this in small cap letters, thus doubly emphasizing it.

Mr. Cannon, in reciting what took place during the three or four days prior to the assassination of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, states concerning the night of the 26th of June:—

That night in prison Hyrum read from the Book of Mormon concerning the sufferings and deliverance of the servants of God from the hands of their enemies. Joseph arose and bore a powerful testimony to the guards to the divinity of the book; he declared that the gospel had been restored and that the kingdom of God was again established on the earth, for the sake of which he was then incarcerated in prison, and not because he had violated any law of God or man.—Life of Joseph Smith, by G. Q. Cannon, pages 480, 481.

Here are two statements said to have been made by Joseph Smith concerning himself and his conduct as a man and a citizen, published to the world by George Q. Cannon, one of the presidents of the Utah Church, as an evidence in favor of the noble character, and law-abiding conduct of the martyred prophet; such evidence being strongly corroborated by the statement of Pres. B. Young made in 1852, before the publication of the alleged command to disregard the laws of the land.

In the Deseret News for May 12, 1896, under the heading, "A Relic of 1844," there is a letter published, written by William Critlow to Mr. George Fox, Leechburg, Armstrong County, Pennsylvania, dated at Nauvoo, August 10, 1844, and bearing the Nauvoo postmark, August 18, 1844.

The letter is a long one, and near the middle of it occurs the following:—

Joseph and Hyrum have been taken like lambs and put into Carthage jail, where the dogs fell on them and shed their blood—what for? Was it because they had broken any law of God or man? No. But they have risen up against God's anointed ones and put them to death because they had the testimony of Jesus, "and they loved not their lives unto the death."

This letter, written so near the time of the death, and at the place where the last years of Joseph and Hyrum had been passed, is evidence that rises like grateful incense to the memory and character of the men. Mr. Critlow in the thoughtless pleasantness of spirit of a cheerful and friendly correspondence, bears witness to the innocence of Joseph Smith in either intention, or fact of having transgressed the laws of God or man. This was August 10, 1844. Eight years after this letter was written, lacking a month, President Brigham Young, in the enthusiasm of a public speech, made a similar statement of the fact that Joseph Smith was a virtuous man, and in his life had violated no law, or constitutional right, had "kept the law of his country" and thus "lived above it," and with regard to keeping the law "was pure, and just, and holy." Joseph Smith during the passing of his last night on earth; with the shadows of a strange and tragic death gathering darkly about him; with the consciousness that the toils of his enemies—enemies because of his religion and the message of peace and good will to man that he bore—had finally closed about him and would release him only in his death, pressing gloomily upon him; with the burden of the church in the event of his death pervading his mind, and filling him with anxiety and foreboding, bore a faithful testimony to the truth and divinity of the Book of Mormon, and of his own innocence of crime or transgression, and that he had not "violated any law of God or man."

With those two men, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, on that last sad night, were John Taylor, Willard Richards, John S. Fullmer, Stephen Markham, and Dan Jones. Of these, all now sleep in their graves. John Taylor was grievously wounded in the jail, receiving the same number of bullets that killed the prophet and patriarch, but preserved by the inscrutable mercy of God. The guards, too, must have all passed into the beyond; or if any still live, the part they took in that eventful night and day is unknown to any but the Lord and the invisible but living witnesses who shall give evidence in the court of Divine justice by and by. But, if the testimony borne that night, to the divinity of the Book of Mormon, the restoration of the gospel and the establishing of the kingdom of God, shall be heard against those guards for their unbelief and hardness of heart, in that day of settlement before that august Judge; why shall not the testimony of the same man, borne on the same occasion, under the same solemn conditions, borne to his own innocence of crime as to the violating the laws of either God or man, be heard against those—all of them—who since his death, have so persistently charged him with doing those things which were at that time violations of both the law of God and the law of the land; whether those thus testifying against him were and are his friends, or his enemies? Why shall not his testimony in both instances stand?

We are now impressed with the thought that the things of the past, comprising the things appertaining to the history of the church, public and private, will when brought to the light, corroborate the truth and divinity of the work itself, and tend to establish the innocence of the martyrs from guiltiness and crime.

CHECKING EVANGELISTS.

PREVIOUS to the announcement of the ballot the committee on state of the church reported. The report provided that no pastor should be permitted to employ an evangelist without the written consent of the presiding elder. It was violently opposed by pastors, who claim it is an attempt to usurp authority by the presiding elders.

The Reverend Robert Forbes of Minnesota created some amusement by remarking that out west they were getting things down so fine that every man who held up his hand for Jesus was declared converted. They would soon have it down so fine that a man would be allowed to send in his cabinet photograph to be baptized by sprinkling.

Efforts to strike out the second portion were futile, and the report was adopted.

The committee on the "state of the church," of the Methodist Conference, evidently thought it necessary to check to some extent the common practice of employing revivalists, indulged in quite freely by some local ministers and churches. Whether it was designed to shut off the specialists in religious and worldly sensationalism, such as Sam Jones, Sam Small, Harrison the "boy preacher," or other types of professional evangelists, we do not know. It is the opinion of many good people in the popular churches that the methods of some modern revivalists or "evangelists" are travesties on religion and do more harm than good; that there is good reason to believe that the bank check for services rendered is the chief consideration, or at least a chief one, for the reason that very high prices are demanded by and received for the platform performances of those whose reputation for awakening an interest by their sharp, witty, sensational sayings is established; and that said "evangelists" need to be checked in a different or negative manner.

We do not call attention to such items or to the general proceedings of any religious body simply to find fault or to unduly criticise proceedings; but to get at the truth in doctrine and method, both in the light of the word of God and as general experiences demonstrate the manifest correctness of that word. Perhaps some religious teachers will be willing to admit the faultiness of certain things in modern revival methods when their own representatives find it necessary to take action concerning them.

Reverend Forbes' remarks are significant. Does he mean to reflect also on the practice of "sprinkling"?

THE MODERN METHOD.

UNDER the heading, "The New Methodist Bishops," the Chicago Tribune has this to say editorially:—

The General Methodist Conference, in session at Cleveland, has wisely acted in breaking its deadlock and electing the Rev. Dr. Charles C. McCabe, of the New York conference, and the Rev. Earl Cranston, of Denver, as Bishops. It would have done still better had it elected some such men as Dr. Neeley, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Frank M. Bristol, of Evanston, Illinois, out of the pastoral ranks, but as it is the election has resulted in the choice of two excellent men.

It is another interesting feature of this election that the deadlock was broken by a compromise. The machine men, owing to the two-thirds rule, found it impossible to accomplish the objects of their combination. Seeing the uselessness of further contention, Dr. McCabe was selected as a compromise in place of Dr. Hamilton, Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society.

One is led to ponder the significance of the terms "deadlock," "machine men," "combination," and "compromise," in this account of the selection of bishops in one of the largest and most popular religious bodies of Protestant Christianity. With due allowance for the political education and tendencies of the secular editor, is he wholly responsible for the use of such language in giving expression to his conception of the methods used in the Methodist General Conference?

Possibly they are the best methods available to the gentlemen composing the delegations to said conference, and all the combinations and efforts of said methods but fair and frank expressions of the personal choice of delegates from among the list of candidates, and all conducted in the spirit of good fellowship, etc. But with all that admitted, is it not true that the announcements of certain ministers—that they were candidates for the office of bishop, also the methods employed in the selections—are strikingly out of harmony with the letter and spirit of the teachings of the Master and his apostles, that "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron," "He that exalteth himself shall be abased," etc.?

How would it impress us did we read of Barnabas and Saul presenting themselves as "candidates" for the apostleship, at Antioch, and to find the brethren there in "combination" or "compromising" on some "dark horse" in the ecclesiastical race? With such a record, instead of the facts given, would we have had as high opinion of the methods peculiar to the ancient church and of the men chosen to fill the position named? Would we have as exalted conceptions of the character of God and the sacredness of the methods he employs? We confess to a prejudice in favor of the ancient pattern by which men of God were selected by the Spirit of revelation. We believe it to be as necessary now to a proper choice as in former times when Jesus "called his own servants," to whom he said, "I have chosen you, and ordained you;" and, "As my Father sent me, even so send I you."

The need of modern times is self-confessed; that need a restoration of the gospel with its methods, powers, and gifts. Judged by its own statements modern theology is found wanting.

REVISION, IMMERSION, ETC.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 18. — The proposition to revise the catechism into a more popular form next caused general discussion. A general complaint was made that the present form did not meet the needs of the masses. It was finally decided to make a revision, which was left with a committee of five to report at the next General Conference.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 21. — At the Methodist Protestant Conference to-day the Rev. J. T. Murray, of Maryland, introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of seven to serve four years, whose duties shall be to revise the "discipline" and report at the next quadriennial conference. All amendments proposed hereafter are to be referred to this committee.

The Committee on revision presented a report on an amendment to the discipline sanctioning immersion in baptism. A recommendation was that for the publication of a new hymn book. President Hering was recommended as Chairman of a committee to prepare it. Reports of the Baltimore and Pittsburg publishing houses showed them to be in a flourishing condition.

The work of revision continues and the tendency toward it becomes general; in fact, the necessity for it seems to be generally confessed. How long it may take to complete the work, is difficult to determine. It seems to be dependent on the theory adopted in late years by many, that theology must be made to conform to the spirit and thought of the times and made conformable to modern interpretations and progress. Probably no candid mind would deny that if any system of theology be found inferior to the spirit of the age it should be either amended or discarded, according to conditions governing. But the query naturally arises, Does theology represent finite humanity or infinite divinity? If humanity, should it not be discarded and the divine plan adopted? If it be a revelation of the Divine Mind, should it not and will it not be a means of development in all true lines of progress and carry man forward to perfection itself? The only logical conclusion it seems possible to reach is that creeds and catechisms based on systems of men must be discarded and "the law of the Spirit of life" adopted as the rule of faith and practice, and which the Savior commanded to be taught to "all the world."

It is probable, however, that, as in the past, human wisdom and human progress will be the line of march pursued by the great masses. The results of such a policy are apparent and confirm the truth of the divine plan, the gospel of the kingdom. The theological formulas of men are faulty, but "the statutes of the Lord are right."

The action "sanctioning immersion" will be noted—a step forward.

Here is another item. The atmosphere seems to be charged with theology. It is a question of authority here. Did the Baptists mean to repudiate a Congregationalist ordination?

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 21.—The Twin City Congregationalists to-day adopted a resolution expressing disapproval of the action of the Baptists in reordaining and baptizing the Rev. W. G. Trower when he left the Congregational Church. The matter has caused something of a religious sensation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—It is in harmony with the three inspired books of the church for an elder to teach, impressing upon the minds of the Saints that the spirits of the departed dead "hover" around the living, being fully conversant with every move we make in earth-life? That paradise proper is just inside the veil or curtain that obstructs us from seeing them?

Ans.—We know of no such teaching, or of Scripture justifying it, and of no declaration of such belief as a part of the teaching of the church. We presume that if anyone taught anything of the kind, it is as a matter of opinion, belief, or speculation, with which the church has nothing to do, as the church does not presume to dictate the personal beliefs of its members. Certainly no one should teach such as the faith of the church, and if stating a belief should be willing to give reasons for it, including scriptural proofs if having any. It is not a very tormenting idea if true, so far as we can see; and if anyone takes comfort in the thought, why should they be too severely condemned for holding it?

None seem to know just where, or how far or near from the veil paradise may be. Dives saw Lazarus in Abraham's bosom, so that the gulf between was not so wide but what it could be seen across. Dives wanted a messenger sent, but was told that there was a gulf fixed between the places where the two men were. Whether that or another gulf of similar character intervenes between earth and paradise, or between the conditions of men on earth and men beyond the veil is a matter of traditional teaching, and needs to be treated carefully, lest tender hearts, yearning for the companionship of those departed, are unnecessarily wounded by the careless sneers, or jests of unbelief. Many of the Saints hold the memory of departed friends so dear that oftentimes they seem to feel and hear them; hence the thought that our friends can and do take cognizance of those with whom they have associated in life.

That those who have lived on earth still live, we all believe; and that when the life that now is is over, those going will meet those already gone. How thin the veil, or wide the space between the two classes now is, is a matter of small moment compared with the happiness of meeting worthily when done with life here. That is our chief concern—to be ready and worthy for the friends on that other side.

THE Commercial Advertiser, of May 4, published at Honolulu, Hawaii, contains the following account of the death and funeral of one of our native Hawaiian brethren:—

Hon. J. G. Hoapili was buried from the meetinghouse of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, of which he was a member, at two p.m. Sunday. The church was crowded by representative Hawaiian friends of the deceased. The services were conducted by G. J. Waller, who has charge of the congregation during the absence of the regular pastor.

Mr. Hoapili's death was quite unexpected, for with the exception of a slight trouble he has had with one of his limbs, he has had his usual good health until Wednesday, when he was taken ill and confined to his room. Friday morning he was very much better, but in the afternoon he was taken suddenly worse and before his son, who was in the employ of Theo. H. Davies & Co., could be summoned he was dead.

The deceased was born in Kona sixty-three years ago and was one of the old aliis. He was an honest, upright man and one of the best of the race. He was for years a judge in Kona, and represented the district in the Legislature several sessions. He enjoyed the friendship of Kalakaua during the latter's reign, and at the funeral yesterday the Queen Dowager sent Cupid Kalaniana'ole to represent her. Hon. W. O. Smith met the cortege at the cemetery and the Hawaiian Band played a dirge.

The pallbearers were: Moses K. Nakuina, Isaac H. Sherwood, Charles Kalaiki; Morris Keohokalole, J. Wahinealii, S. Kamaopili, Hoapili, and A. K. Palekaluhi.

The Independent of the same place and date also publishes a lengthy notice of Bro. Hoapili's death, indicating the presence of representatives of the government and of members of leading families at the funeral. Our work has reached prominent men and women of the native population of Hawaii.

THE annual mineral production of but one portion of Joseph's land is given in the following extract:—

In mineral production last year was a remarkably good one for the United States. The total reached $628,881,505, an increase over 1894 of $84,411,447. The aggregate yield of metals was $240,000,000, an increase of $40,000,000. The production of bituminous coal increased from $103,758,967 to $125,489,488.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. T. W. WILLIAMS is to meet Clark Braden in discussion at Fontanelle, Iowa, June 3, of which discussion he writes under date of May 8:—

A letter from Clark Braden received Saturday gives information that he has been selected to meet me at Fontanelle. The discussion commences June 3. I expect the Methodist man will now modestly (?) withdraw. Should he do so the debate will last seventeen evenings, if not, then twenty. I am disappointed that Mr. Braden has been selected, not that I fear for the truth, but that we are under the necessity to meet such a Christian.

Bro. I. N. White is booked for another discussion, of which Bro. F. M. Slover writes from Parrish, Illinois, May 18:—

Please publish in Herald that Bro. I. N. White will meet the Rev. Marion Boles in discussion at the Oak Grove church seven miles northwest of Benton, Franklin County, Illinois, beginning June 22, to last six days. The propositions to be discussed are the claims of the two churches as found in Braden and Kelley Debate. Then after a few days' rest they will come to the Saints' church near Parrish, Illinois, and discuss the claims of the Book of Mormon and the Christian Church of which Rev. Boles is a member. I hope that good will be done in those conflicts.

Bro. W. S. Pender, Dispatch, Kansas, May 18:—

Rainfall here nearly every day, and this section, which has suffered so much from drought hitherto, promises an abundant crop this year.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, in a note to Bro. Criley, of the HERALD, dated May 16, states:—

My discussion with Elder H. W. Bowman closed last night. I am to start Monday (day after to-morrow morning) for my mission field. The debate lasted five nights, and we had a big audience throughout. I feel very well satisfied with the result.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ELDER W. H. GARRET having accepted a position on the Ensign and expecting to remove to Independence, Missouri, is hereby released from his missionary appointment to Ohio and West Virginia, made at last April session of conference; the release to take place from June 1 next.

Elder Henry C. Smith, of Lamoni, appointed to labor in the State of Wisconsin, left last week for that field. His postoffice address is Rhinelander, Wisconsin.

Bro. W. H. Garrett was at Apollo, Pennsylvania, May 20, preaching to attentive audiences.

The Methodist General Conference promptly refused to modify the restrictions of its discipline against dancing, card playing, the theater, etc., believing proper restraint better than a practical license to indulge in such amusements.

By card from London, Ontario, May 20, we learn that there is reason to believe that the long-standing trouble between the London branch and Elder E. K. Evans, late of St. Mary's, Ontario, and now of Grand Rapids, Michigan, is permanently settled. We are pleased to note this, and as soon as official notice is received will make note of the status of parties.

ERRATUM.—In the minutes of the late conference, page 42, in section 1 of the report on Marriage and Divorce, beginning with the words, "marriage is a condition," about middle way down the page occurs a typographical error, which reads after the words "two individuals," "man and women." It should read, "two individuals, man and woman." It was an error in typesetting and proof-reading.

Jews have been excluded from the religious ceremonies at the coronation of the Czar of Russia, but Heathen of every shade of belief and about every degree of civilization were admitted. Is this the spirit of the Orthodox Greek Church? Are its religious principles brought to the level of Russian political policies? Israel evidently has nothing to hope for from the Slav.

Twenty-eight killed, fifty injured, and a property loss aggregating about $1,000,000 is now given as the estimated damage done by the recent Kansas cyclone. Reports are incomplete and fuller ones may increase the estimate.

THE CHILD ACROSS THE WAY.

I saw her to-night
In the soft twilight,
As she stood at the window there;
A sweet surprise
In the dear bright eyes,
Framed in by the dusky hair.

I wished from my heart
For the painter's art;
Fair fame would I win for aye,
Could I there the face
On the canvass trace
Of the child across the way.

With a roguish look
From her curtained nook,
She tossed me a loving kiss,
So pure and so sweet,
And in all complete,
The lips of that winsome miss.

In a future year
Some one standing here,
Will say as I do to-day!
Alas for my heart
When the curtains part
For the child across the way.

THE TRAINING OF OUR BOYS.

WHY is it, dear Saints, that the moral training of our girls is so different from that of our boys? Why is it that an impure thought or expression coming from the lips of a boy is excused, while the same thought or expression coming from a girl is met with serious disapproval? Why is it that boys are taught that what is unseemly in girls is proper and seemly in themselves?

I have had many answer this question by saying, "Boys will be boys, you know! and if you sacrifice your entire life on this point it will make no change, for this is public opinion." It does not seem to me that mothers make the effort they ought in guiding the young lives of their sons, and there is little help to stay the boy and to keep him pure in heart and soul, until he reaches manhood.

"There are thousands," says a writer in Union Signal, "of brave and noble men and women, working unremittingly for the redemption of the depraved and fallen woman. God prosper them and give them strength for their grand work! Are there any trying to rescue the immoral man? That would be a herculean task? Not at all. When our sons are taught from the cradle that purity is as sweet in them as it is in their sisters, then we may expect a safeguard for our daughters. As a rule boys enter into the vices of men with a chuckle from their fathers and a wink, and perhaps a little sigh, from their mothers. Why does the moral ruin of a daughter cause so much sorrow and so many heart-breaks, when that of a son is scarcely noted? Surely, there is sometime in a boy's life when he is pure and knows nothing of the vices of his sex.

"You may ask why I am pleading for the boy instead of the girl? Why? In the first place I love the stout-hearted, brave boy as well as I do the sweet and confiding girl. Secondly because the girl has received for generations what the boy needs, instruction in purity of character from the very cradle. Again, boys make our men, men rule our great nation, and—I am loth to say—ruin our girls. And let me go farther, these same debased, self despised, and sex-shunned women ruin our young boys. A boy trained from his earliest recollections to purity in thought and action will make a man who will be as chaste as he would have his own wife, sister, and mother to be, and no moral sin will lie at his white door crying out against him as he crosses the threshold.

"What would I do? I am asked. I would choose my boy's associates as I would his books—ah, there is another point, yes, choose his books; let them be the best, the very best. Give the young child the works of our best authors, and instead of hours spent on the street, give him the pleasure of your own society, either in a pleasant walk or car ride, if one cannot afford a carriage, or a quiet evening in the home, with an hour in general conversation, reading, or harmless games. If possible, give him a corner of his own, where he can put away his treasures; allow him to have his companions, whom you know to be suitable for him to associate with, to come into his home; put the thoughts of your personal comfort and quiet aside sometimes, and exchange thoughts and ideas with these same boys, remembering that they need the encouragement of wise mothers and fathers. Give them the company of the sweet-minded girl, one who is the true daughter of the true mother; she will bring into his life the harmonizing influence, which does not come to him from his mother. To her he owes respect and courtesy, but the gentle girl will teach by her presence the true politeness and courtesy with which he must meet women when he has passed to the state of manhood."

As the ship builder builds his vessel staunch that it may withstand the fierce waves and billows of the great sea, and carry its precious freight safely from shore to shore, so should Latter Day Saints build or mould the character of their boys from the cradle that they may be such a bulwark of moral strength that the firesides of their neighbors would be as sacred to them as their own.

Give your boys this motto: "Touch not, taste not, handle not" that which does not belong to you. I have known parents to cheat in many small ways, and boast of it before their children. One example comes very strongly before me. A very young and beautiful woman married an artist for his beautiful face, not looking for that true principle that should be in every man's heart. They were constantly on the move, and as years rolled on a large family of boys was given them. When the children were old enough to enter their father's studio they were taught how to use the camera, and the father would take them with him when he went out on the road attending fairs, etc.

This father never missed a chance to cheat the unsophisticated farmers. He taught his sons the art of cheating on a small scale as well as the art of the camera, and upon his return home would rehearse his petty frauds before his gentle wife and smaller boys. It is needless to say that she was shocked, but she was too gentle and had not force of character enough to overcome the dishonest influence of her husband upon the children. The sons, when grown to manhood, never did anything so very terrible, yet they never hesitated to touch, taste, and handle all that came within their reach, whether it were their own or their neighbors. The honest mother element was not strong enough to overbalance that of the dishonest father's principle. They were men with whom I would trust neither my purse nor my daughter.

On the other hand I know a boy who was taught not to handle that which was not legally and lawfully his own. That boy never for a moment forgot his early training, and had the true principle of right and honor in him. Dear Daughters of Zion, see what a great work rests upon you, and remember the old adage, "As the twig is bent, so is the tree inclined," will apply to boys and girls as well as twigs.

"In a quiet farm-house in Kentucky," writes Mary Allen West, "two children grew in beauty side by side, and filled one home with glee.' The same wise, loving care watched over the son as over the daughter; they knelt at the same mother's knee and listened to the word of God reverently read by the same father. They shared each other's sports, work, and study. Hers was the more daring spirit of the two, his the more sensitive and religious. He first gave his heart to Christ, she not till years after. The first divergence of their life paths was when he went to college. It was before the days of coeducation, and though as thoroughly prepared as he, she was not allowed to accompany him.

"Remember he was a Christian boy in a Christian college, whose professors were Christian men, but they, like all the world then, held a different standard of morality for men and for women. I do not know whether any of them smoked, or sipped their wine, it would not have been anything strange if they had, but this I know, they winked at these things in the students, 'All young gentlemen do these things, we must not be too hard on the boys.'

"The first premonition of danger came in the home letters of the boy. 'The boys here all smoke, I don't like the smell of it, but suppose I must get used to it.' And later, 'Beer drinking is all the go here; I hate the taste of the bitter stuff, but it seems to be the thing here to drink it, so I suppose I must learn it as I do Latin and Greek.' 'And,' said the sister who told me the story with a sob in her voice, 'we were so blind we never saw the danger in these signals; we only laughed at the picture our fancy drew of the wry faces Brother made in trying to learn to like the bitter stuff or as he essayed his first cigar, and thought no more about it. Oh! if God had only opened our eyes then as they were opened later!' Had the case been reversed, had it been the daughter who was learning to smoke and drink, parental love would have been shocked into alertness; she would have been instantly withdrawn from such influences, the whole power of parental authority and social opinion would have been exerted to turn her from such dangerous ways. But no one seemed to think they were alike dangerous for the boy; they were accustomed to a different standard of morality for boys and girls, and not even a whisper of mother love sounded its warning. So the two who had been as one in childhood and in youth, went on to widely different destinies.

"The fell work begun in college did not end there; stronger drinks succeeded the beer; little by little alcohol took possession of that delicate, sensitive nature. The fine-strung physical and moral organism had less power of resistance than a coarse nature would have possessed; gradually he succumbed and was dragged down to the grave, over which that sister bent in agony. . . .

"I solemnly believe that the wreck of that promising young life is directly traceable to the different standards of morality set up for boys and for girls. We must teach our boys and girls that there is but one law of right set up for man and for woman; that in the eyes of God it is as wrong for man to be intemperate and unchaste as it is for a woman; as wrong for a woman to lead an idle life, to prevaricate, to stoop to underhanded means as it is for a man to do the same, that for neither of them are there any little sins, nor white lies, in God's sight. If we would have them grow into worthy manhood or womanhood we must train boy and girl alike to yield unquestioning obedience to the law of right, which is God's law, and make it the law of their lives."

"CHILDREN'S DAY."

HELEN PEARSON BARNARD, IN Superintendent and Teacher.

THE child of the nineteenth century is not only "seen" but "heard," his friends listening eagerly for his first utterance, believing that in it they have the key to his musings. Keeping pace with the trend of education, the church recognizes the children in its services. . . . In many a temple every Sabbath is "children's day," the pastor serving to them especially the bread of life, not the crumbs from the old folks' table, but fresh, appetizing bits, called the sermonette. It has been noted that on those who "feed" his "lambs" with such loving pains the Master bestows these fruitful gifts for the maturer disciple,—simplicity, directness, and the vivid illustration that makes the hearer preach to himself!

Several years ago we visited a church in Western Massachusetts, which was one of the first to set apart as Children's Day a Sunday in June. All Saturday afternoon, young and old were carrying through the streets branches of blossoms or potted plants. Meeting a round-faced boy who was trundling a cart filled with daisies, we asked:—

"Trimming the church?"

"Yes."

"What's up? A wedding?"

"Why, haven't you heard?" with a touch of scorn at such ignorance. "Termorrer's Chil'un's Day!" he added, with a comprehensive gesture toward his load; "that's why we're putting on the frills. Termorrer's all our'n!"

Curious as to the "frills" that were to glorify the to-morrow which was "all our'n" we followed the sturdy wagoner. The church was a scene of lovely confusion, pew and aisle being strewn with odorous blossoms. These were rapidly woven into garlands or disposed in masses. Chattering like birds, the busy workers flew about, those who brought met by those who arranged. Deft fingers soon transformed the bare little sanctuary into a bower fit for the queen of summer. The masterpiece of floral art was a huge cross of crimson roses reaching from the pulpit to the floor. This was on an inclined plane, and surrounded by other flowers whose quiet hues were carefully blended. Almost the whole village was interested in the decorations, many an old-fashioned garden yielding up its spicy treasures. Of course there was a full house on Sunday, and the simple service received the close attention of all, even of some who rarely entered "the meetinghouse." It was touching to see the tear start down a furrowed cheek, as the pastor spoke of what sorrow lay before the little child whose parents did not lead it in the right way. The visitors from the suburbs of Boston took it all in, and one—afterwards a superintendent—wrote on memory's tablet:—

"Every church should observe Children's Day!"

In ours, "Flower Sunday" crowns the year. It is the summer thanksgiving, held in the main auditorium Sunday morning, instead of the usual preaching service. We extend the pulpit platform for the primary department, fencing it off with a fairy trellis of flowers and vines. Although the little folks who occupy the tiers of seats make the scene lovely with their bright faces and many-hued ribbons, we decorate it with the best from field and garden. There is a profusion of roses, "curled and soft like baby hands," and chains of daisies. Last year a "floral clock" eight feet high, after the pattern of the ancient one that "stood on the stair," was on the platform. The golden cages of singing birds are suspended from the arches, and to the aid of the great organ we bring the orchestra and piano. When to these are united the fine flute-like delicacy of the young voices and the rapturous notes of the birds, the listener thinks of the morning stars that sang together, and of hosannas in the White Temple. Surely it was in such an hour that "An angel heard, and straight appeared, Mistaking earth for heaven!"

On one of these occasions we were attracted by the fine pose of a head, and a rugged face that stood out from the rest like the central figure of a painting. But who could depict its varying emotions in that hour of seed-sowing and quick harvest? On the platform, singing with all her might, was his little girl, her eyes shining like stars. The father knew the reason of her joy. It was because he shared her festal, an innocent cup of pleasure, of so fine and celestial a flavor that he suddenly loathed those that he had so often quaffed.

Afterwards he grasped the superintendent's hand, saying tremulously:—

"I haven't been in a place like this for years. I vowed I'd never come, but my little girl's brought me, and this," showing a familiar card that read, "Children's Day Service, at half past ten. You are invited to come with little Annie." He added, "That fetched me!"

Believing the song service to be of marked importance, we begin in April to train the children, taking ten minutes of each Sunday session, as it is impossible to get a full rehearsal at other times. Good work can be done in that brief period, if the words of new hymns have been learned at home from printed slips. The kindergarten motion songs are of great value, as they not only secure the child's thought, but afford an excuse for healthful change of position. As one of the features of Children's Day is the public recognition of progress, the candidates for the intermediate and junior departments are examined, and the diplomas signed by the pastor and superintendent. The latter also hints from the desk that it would seem more of a gala day to the children if the women and girls wore light dresses.

"It is absurd,—the idea of my going into white!" observed one whose locks were fast assuming that color. "My days for that are past, and then, there's the expense."

"He don't mean costly dresses," replied a friend, "challie or cheese-cloth will do, or the fine gingham. Really it is the cheapest way to gown yourself, if you begin in season. I am sure that it will please your class, too."

She tried it, and was surprised at the effect upon her girls. They touched the soft fabric lovingly, telling her how pretty she looked.

"I couldn't be a black crow in my flock of white doves," she said, a late rose blossoming on her cheek, which reflected the purity of her gown. She found herself nearer to them, because she had entered into the spirit of their day, and put on a festal robe.

At ten o'clock last Children's Day, our school met in the vestry and formed for the processional march, beginning with the smallest and closing with the adults,—a panorama of human life, as "morn into noon did pass, noon into eve." Twelve young girls in white acted as "aids" to the primary department, whose toddling step must be assisted to their "airy shelves" on the platform. We started when the full organ above gave the signal in the inspiring measure of the "March from Damascus." Promptly at half past ten the school entered the portal of the auditorium, singing these words to the music of the "Chorus of Maidens":—

"Praise him, praise him, praise the glorious Savior, Praise him, praise him, wonderful in all his ways!
Unto him his children render
Praise, praise this day and all their days!
Crown with laurels, crown the glorious Savior,
Praise him, wonderful in all his ways!
Unto him his children render
Praise, praise this day and all their days!"

An impressive feature of that service was the parents bringing their little ones to be christened, publicly evincing their desire to train them for the church. During this a choir of young girls sang softly, "Suffer the children to come unto Me." The name of one sweet babe had been kept secret from the rest of the family until they should hear it uttered by the pastor on the children's own day.

Then there was the presentation of Bibles by the pastor to the baptized children of the church who had reached the age of seven years [eight would be better because in harmony with God's plan.—ED]. After each had clasped its Bible, he gathered them about him and, extending his hands over their heads, asked God to help them make the Good Book their life guide.

When, afterwards, he talked to the school about the flowers and "His love who sends the dew,

The rain and sunshine too,
To nourish one small seed,"

there were many seeds of divine truth planted in older hearts.

Every one went home better for "Flower Sunday." And as for the little ones, mingling with visions of the land from whence they came, will always be the bright earthly festal, when song, perfume, and sunshine culminated into "Children's Day!"

IN many churches the seating of the school for the concert appears to receive little attention. Whispering and a general air of disorder are the result. Have the pews or seats carefully marked for each class, alternating boys and girls. See that the teachers sit with their classes. If you know that a teacher is to be absent, arrange for a substitute. An orderly and attentive audience is a courtesy due the speakers.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Tune.—"I am so glad that Jesus loves me" (G).

List to the sound of the Sunday school bell,
Seeming in haste its sweet story to tell;
Sweetest of music, it floats o'er the way,
Telling us this is the dear Children's Day.

Cho.—Little ones, come! O, little ones, come!
This is your day! This is your day!
Little ones, come! O, little ones, come,
This is the Children's Day.

Hark to the tread of the Sunday school throng,
Forming their ranks as they hasten along,
Coming from north, and from south, and from west.

This is the day that the children love best.

Truest and bravest of soldiers are they,
Flinging their banners along the bright way,
Adding recruits as they journey along,
Tempting them out from the pathways of wrong.

ROCKLAND, Maine, May 20.

Editors Herald.—Since I got home from General Conference my health has been very poor, yet I have put in some time in preaching the word. I was at Little Deer Isle, last week; and on Sunday I baptized four and on Monday two more—all heads of families. Old Father Hutchinson, who stood for the latter-day work for years, and who is in his eighty-fifth year, was one of the six baptized. Many came to the meeting on Sunday, but had to go home; the schoolhouse could not hold them. Others are near the kingdom.

I was assisted by Bro. J. J. Billings, who is president of the branch, also vice president of the Western Maine district. Everybody likes Bro. John. He was one of the first on the coast of Maine to obey the gospel. His wife and children have stood nobly by him.

I visited Brooksville, and found the Saints firm in the faith, though they have had trials to pass through. I found Bro. Mace Cousins very sick. Willie, his brother, is thinking soon of obeying the gospel. He is a good boy.

I shall leave for my field of labor in Canada after I hear from the Bishop. I go to Niagara Falls, Ontario, first. My family will remain here. Yours very truly,

J. C. FOSS.

REDFIELD, Kan., May 16.

Editors Herald.—Because I have not written to the Herald for over a year is not because I have been idle. I never was as busy as I am now and have been for the last few months. I am now preaching at Redfield, Kansas. Three were buried on the 12th beneath the liquid wave; two women, heads of families, one the postmaster's wife who had membership in the M. E. Church, also her son, a promising young man; the Spirit indicating he would hold the priesthood if faithful. The other, Mrs. Lola Bolinger, Bro. Leaton's daughter. After confirmation all testified to the truthfulness of the gospel.

Last Sunday we closed a very successful meeting at the Christian Advent church, a new place. Many friends were made for the truth. O, how God did stand by me in delivering the message. Bro. A. Lloyd was with me a week and rendered valuable assistance. How lonesome without him now!

Effectual doors are opening up in every direction in fulfillment of revelation, and I never have received such an unusual flow of the Spirit in my preaching as I have in the last few months. How thankful to God we should be that he proves his work true! I have got to preach in other churches more in the last few months than in all my ministerial work.

The writer was requested to preach the memorial sermon next Sunday at Moundville, Missouri, in the M. E. church, by Moundville G. A. R. Post. I did not think it wise to leave my meeting and lose four sermons to preach one.

We all feel the loss of our dear brother, Bro. Blair. It seems as though the church has had much to contend with this last year.

Everything is looking very prosperous for this year's work. I never felt more encouraged than I do now. Yours for truth,

F. C. KECK.

TUSHKAHOMMA, I. T., May 15.

Editors Herald.—On the fourth day of the present month I bade farewell to the loved ones at home and started to my field of labor stopping off on the 6th at the Standley branch, where I was made welcome by our enterprising brother, Ellis Short. It was quite a surprise to me to find a branch of the church here amid the mountains of this Territory, numbering seventy-five members. One hundred in all have united with the church at this place. All this has been done in the last five years.

This branch is in quite a prosperous condition. When I noticed the ability of its presiding officer (Bro. Short), financially and in the government of his home, I recognized that he was qualified to take care of the church of God.

I preached here from the 6th to the 11th, when the brethren urgently requested me to come here, the capital of the Choctaw Nation. This is a town of about three hundred inhabitants of whites. The Council House of the nation is about two miles north, the principal religious element being of the M. E. Church. The church-house is free for all denominations.

On Wednesday night I began meetings. On the first evening I received the following notice:—

"TUSHKAHOMMA, Ind. Ter.

"To Whom it May Concern:—Be it known that we, the people of Tushkahomma, do not believe and will not tolerate the advocating or preaching of the principles or doctrines of the organization known as Latter Day Saints or Mormons, and intend to do all in our power to prevent it. Beware! A hint to the wise is sufficient."

Being in a strange land, out of the United States, and not knowing the disposition of the people, made my surroundings, to say the least, a little discouraging. The evening after my first meeting there was to be a prayer meeting, and when it became known that I had received this peculiar notice a sentiment in my favor began to set in. Those in charge of the prayer meeting were plainly told by the boys that there would be no prayer meeting, that there was going to be preaching by Mr. Baggerly; so the leader of the prayer meeting came in proper time and informed me to go ahead with my meetings. As a consequence a fair crowd greeted us last night, very attentive and orderly; and it is likely I will hold over till after Sunday. There is a good interest here. It is the beginning of the church in this place and some will accept the work. There is another point in this part of the Territory where they invite me to come and preach, but I am reminded that my field is in Texas.

O, the world is white for the harvest. We ought to have a minister here in this nation. Bro. T. Webb and wife live here, baptized by Bro. J. W. Gillen.

My health is fair and I feel blessed of the Lord in the work. Will say to Saints and friends in Texas, I will be in your midst as soon as possible. In bonds,

I. P. BAGGERLY.

OBLONG, Ill., May 11.

Bro. Smith.—Your letter of the 6th inst. was received to-day, and reading its contents imparted a great deal of comfort to the recipient. I am induced to believe an expression made a good while ago by one of the brethren, "Its almost heaven to be among the Latter Day Saints." The treatment I receive at their hands, together with the fellowship of the Spirit, serves me to refresh me from the effects of that fearful ordeal and make life pleasant to me yet. I feel strengthened and encouraged to cling to the great hope of glory. There will be no mangled bodies, no crushed and mutilated limbs, no broken and severed bones, no jet full of spilled blood, and no hideous apparatus of death in the future world where we shall reign with God. In that holy, happy land where we shall take the ancients by the hand and behold Enoch, Seth, Elijah, Alma, Isaiah, Amos, and the twelve apostles of the Lamb face to face with all the medieval martyrs, and the two who stained the floor of Carthage jail with their blood, we shall see no persecutors pointing the fingers of scorn at the despised Saints and our ears will no longer be greeted with the cries of "Mormonism!" "Imposture!" "Delusion!" "Away with them; they're not fit to live!"

Some will find out their sad mistakes when they come before the great white throne and these hissing cries will echo in their ears with appalling distinctness, while the thunders of Almighty wrath are shaking the shores of eternity and the poor, despised, downtrodden ones are basking in the sunny climes of celestial bliss. O, may we be included among the blood-washed throng who shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, whom the Lamb shall lead unto the fountains of living waters and shall rest in the shade of the trees which dot the banks of that crystal river with never fading beauty! Thanking you for granting my petition and begging an interest in your prayers, I remain, Yours in the Lord,

H. E. EASTMAN.

OLATHE, Kan., May 18.

Editors Herald:—Of our work in Olathe with the Independence district gospel tent. Bro. R. W. Davis, his wife, and I came here on the 8th and put up the tent on the 9th. We had preaching in it that evening; Bro. R. May, of Independence, was the speaker. The people turn out well. We had three meetings on Sunday the 11th. Bro. R. May was with us, and left on Monday morning for home. But the weather has been against us all the time; wind, thunder, lightning, and rain making it bad for tent work. But notwithstanding bad weather we have had meetings every night but one, and that night it was so very bad. But the tent still stands the storms right well.

We held two meetings in the tent yesterday, and prayer meeting at three p. m. in Bro. Charleton's house. The good Spirit of the Master was present with us. Bro. Davis went to the Grandview schoolhouse, nearly four miles north of town, and preached to a full house to-night. I stayed at the tent, and so we are trying to do all we can for the good of the Master's cause. We do ask the prayers of all God's people in our behalf.

In bonds,
GEORGE HICKLIN.

SHERMAN, Texas, May 17.

Editors Herald:—I believe I can offer a few items of interest about the cyclone that passed through the western part of the city on Friday evening. I was in the mill when it came up; heavy rain, thunder, and lightning preceded it. The rain stopped very suddenly and an awful roaring was the only sound I heard, being half a mile from the path of it. Going to the north door on the fourth floor I beheld a cloud as a mighty arm reaching from heaven unto the earth westward, which was the cyclone. It appeared to be about six feet in diameter, four or five miles north. Near the earth it was spread rather wide and very dark, while the main trunk of it was rather white. It traveled about five or six miles north. We could see it twisting quite plainly, but saw no obstacles flying in the air. The "arm" or clouds then broke and gradually disappeared. Little did I think of the awful destruction it had done.

It passed through the southeastern corner of the cemetery. Trees, tombs, and monuments were torn and shattered to pieces. It was traveling toward the center of the city, but turned northward and followed Post Oak Creek for a short ways, tearing an iron bridge from its place and dashing it into the creek, bent and broken into pieces. Many trees were stripped of their limbs and bark, great oaks twisted and splintered, and many trees were torn up, roots and all, and fences, corn, oats, etc., stripped. Many horses, cattle, animals, and fowls of all kinds are lying wounded and dead all along its path. Many houses were also dashed to pieces.

But the awful, awful part of it all was the many lifeless bodies of men, women, and children, colored and white, being brought into the temporary morgue; heads, arms, limbs, and bodies crushed and broken in an indescribable manner. It is hard to learn the exact number of dead and wounded, but there are somewhere about seventy or more dead in this vicinity, and possibly a hundred altogether in the whole path of the cyclone. There are about as many more seriously injured; some are yet missing. Bro. Clarence Hays helped to take some dead and wounded from the ruins. I shall spend to-night as nurse in the temporary hospital.

As Bro. A. Hays and family are the only Saints in this country besides myself, I am quite sure there were no latter Day Saints in the cyclone.

Your brother in Christ,
GEORGE F. BARRACLOUGH.

BELMONT, Nebraska.

Editors Herald:—I am coming to seek advice of the Saints in Missouri. I wish to move among them in October or November. I want to rent a fair-sized farm with wood and water on it; in fact all natural advantages possible. Will not pay cash rent. Have good-sized family; am an elder; have presided over the Evergreen branch here several years with fair success. I don't want an unhealthy locality. I am willing to move among isolated Saints, or take charge of a branch if it should be an advantage to the work in general; but we are not hunting for ease, temporally or spiritually; but if my family was better located I could do more ministerial work, which I long for. Please address as above.

DANIEL W. SHIRK.

ANNEX, Va., May 18.

Editors Herald:—It is not far from twenty-two years since I united with and was ordained an elder in the Reorganized Church under the hands of one of the Master's faithful workers, Elder T. W. Smith, who has some years since passed behind the veil to his peaceful rest. In the position taken as above stated I have had nothing to regret, only my lack of ability to magnify the great and important calling; and while I have done some little in my official capacity in trying to get the angelic message of the restored gospel before the people, were I compelled to plead as to being guilty or not, perhaps my most truthful pleading should be, guilty. However, under different circumstances I may have done some better.

In addition to my efforts in my official capacity I have bought and distributed at my own expense, far and near, a considerable amount of our church publications. I would like now to have a small supply of tracts that will be plain on the difference between the Reorganized and the Utah Mormon churches, as I learn that in a neighborhood not far from me two Utah elders got in a few nights ago and held a meeting that I did not learn about until I suppose they were out and gone. If you can, please send the tracts.

I see Bro. F. C. Smith is appointed to the Virginia mission. Will try to get an opening where the Utah Elders held forth. I am now in my seventy-fourth year. Am destitute financially; my health has declined so fast in the past year that I am now becoming quite infirm.

I don't like to do without the Herald, but the time for which I have paid will be out June 10, 1896, and I don't expect to be able to pay for it any longer. In bonds,

O. E. CLEVELAND.

MCARTHUR, Ohio, May 19.

Editors Herald:—In company with Bro. M. T. Short I am holding a series of meetings in Elk Fork schoolhouse, about one mile from McArthur. I began here last Thursday and Bro. Short joined me last evening. Bro. James Moler preached here once on his way to Hocking branch.

Bro. Short held a series of meetings at a place about nine miles from Creola, and reports good hearing and interest. He previously held nine services with the Creola branch with good interest. The work in Byer branch is making some progress. Six have been baptized here since General Conference.

I was with Bro. T. J. Beatty at the baptism and confirmation of five of the six. Bro. Beatty is well received and is an efficient laborer in the vineyard. My brother, V. M. Goodrich, baptized a promising young man by the name of Rowe, a United Brethren preacher, a week ago, and who, I believe, will yet make his mark in this latter-day work.

Bro. Elmer Long informs me that the Legislature of this State has become so thoroughly Americanized that it has thrown open its schoolhouses to all religious societies. If this is correct we should press our rights and occupy in places where we have heretofore been denied.

We expect to go from here to Radcliffe, and from there to Vale's Mill, thence on to Wilkesville, probably with the tent at that point.

Bro. James Moler, A. B. Kirkendall, and myself, held a council as to when and where we should hold our next reunion and conference (Bro. S. J. Jeffers is also one of the committee but was not present), but were unable to decide anything definitely. The prevailing sentiment, as far as expressed, seems to be in favor of McArthur, Ohio, about September 1. If anyone has good reasons why it would be better somewhere else, or at some other time, let the committee hear from you at once.

I enter on this conference year with brighter hopes than in any previous one, and believe that by persistent effort, though our laborers are few, we shall achieve greater success than ever before. May the Master bless all to this end.

J. L. GOODRICH.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 19.

Editors Herald:—Our visit to the General Conference at Kirtland is one of the bright spots in memory, it being the first visit; and finding it far exceeding our anticipations, there attaches greater significance than otherwise would have done. In all of the selections of lands by the Saints in those early days there seems to have been a guiding hand. Kirtland, Independence, Far West, and Nauvoo, are all fine selections, and naturally adapted for the maintenance of large cities.

After viewing the magnificent sights of Lake Michigan and Lake Erie as we were whirled along the famous Nickel Plate railroad, we arrived in Kirtland amid a blinding snowstorm and found our genial W. H. Kelley up to his eyes in hotel work, with a house full of delegates. . . . Bro. J. M. Terry and the writer, however, were hied away to Bro. Ed Miller's, where we found pleasant quarters and a genial host and hostess, to whom we became closely attached because of their moral worth and kindness manifested. We were soon joined by Brn. T. C. Kelley and J. W. Peterson, who shared with us the hospitality of the roof-tree. We made the acquaintance of many "new" Saints from the East and the Canadas, enlarging our circle of acquaintances considerably, notably one John Gillespie, the "smoky chimney doctor," also the model deacon; and if he can make a chimney draw like he can draw a crowd together in a small space, we pronounce him a cure.

The old mill on the raging Chagrin came in for a full share of our attention. After reconnoitering for a day or so we invited Brn. Terry and Short to go down and see the old overshot waterwheel, the kind we dreamed of in our boyhood days—sixteen feet in diameter. The great, ponderous thing moved very slowly, but the old buhrs in the mill were grinding very rapidly.

The conference over, the good-byes said, and the parting hand given, we took train for the city of Cleveland, taking in the sights for a day, tarrying over night with Bro. Theodore Schmidt and wife, whom we found very comfortably situated on the bank of the great Lake Erie, where fish is a staple article. Theodore visited the "hooks" and I noticed J. M. doing justice to a fine trout for breakfast.

We again took train for Chicago, finding on board Brn. Blair, Weld, and Salyards. Arriving at Chicago we found a pleasant home with Bro. Allen. Little did we think when we bade our lamented brother good-bye at the depot in Chicago on the night of the 16th of April that it would be the last time we would see his smiling face this side of the immortal line. There are some things to which it is hard to become reconciled, and all we can say is, Farewell, dear brother, we will try and meet you in the by and by.

Stopping over Sunday at Chicago we attended the Saints' meeting, Bro. Pitt presiding. We tried to preach, but the effort was feeble, in consequence of the sadness of the occasion. Here again we made new acquaintances. The Chicago branch is growing nicely under the wise and fostering care of Bro. Pitt and his assistants.

We remained a day or two with Bro. Pitt and his pleasant family taking in the sights of Chicago. We then hied away to our Zion home, in Independence, Missouri, where we think the trees are greenest and the birds sing the sweetest, and where underlying all the toils there is more satisfaction and assurance than anywhere else in this wide world, feeling that the trip has in some ways fitted us more firmly for the duties before us in enduring the crosses and appreciating the blessings that may be in store during the coming year. We hope so. Yours in gospel bonds, ROCK ISLAND, Ill., May 22.

Editors Herald:—I have been laboring here since the 12th and succeeded last evening in organizing a branch with Priest T. J. Sheldon to preside, William Strang teacher, and John Johnson deacon; Jennie Leland secretary. The Saints here have rented a hall, furnished it neatly, and now have a good place to hold meetings. It is now their hope that elders passing through Rock Island or Davenport will not fail to stop and lend them a helping hand, as they are likely to be left without a preacher much of the time.

Bro. Sheldon, who has been laboring here of late, expects soon to engage in tent work in the district. They will then be dependent on visiting brethren for preaching, who will always be welcomed at the home of Bro. John Johnson, No. 415 Eleventh Street, or at Bro. Strang's, No 2512 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ Avenue. Their hall is located at No. 1612 Second Avenue.

There are three large cities connected here; Rock Island, Moline, and Davenport—in all about seventy thousand people. Surely we ought to have a substantial church here. Elders passing through Davenport will be welcomed at Sister Houghton's, No. 1304 Bridge Avenue.

I remain here over Sunday then go to Dakhinda, and thence to Peoria, and from there to Canton to attend conference, June 6.

Bro. L. E. Hills dropped in on us and gave us a good sermon Tuesday night. On Wednesday Bro. J. B. Roush quite unexpectedly appeared in our midst on his way to his western field. He gave us a good sermon on Wednesday evening. All well.

Yours in bonds,
F. G. PITT.

VASSAR, Mich., May 16.

Editors Herald:—I have just arrived home from St. Charles and Brant. Last Tuesday I baptized two precious souls, one old lady and her daughter, and others are becoming interested. At our confirmation meeting tears were coursing down the faces of outsiders. There is a hungering and thirsting for the hearing of the word of God. There are many places for preaching. One very intelligent man has made his house a suitable place for worship and designs me to occupy. The calls are many. I am strongly impressed that this year will bring grand and good results to the faithful workers in Christ's Church.

In leaving St. Charles I gave them Bro. Frank Criley's address and tried to impress the need of church publications, especially the Herald and Autumn Leaves. I have been a reader of them now for a number of years and can safely recommend them as the very best church literature.

I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Hyrum Dickhout and his excellent wife. Bro. Dickhout is a good, earnest preacher. I listened to him preach one sermon on the basic principles. The word was made plain and I guess every one present could easily understand what constituted a Latter Day Saint.

Yours in bonds,
E. DELONG.

HAVE WE A METHOD OF ADJUDICATION? IF SO, WHAT IS ITS PURPOSE?

To the first I answer, Yes. To the second I answer, To vindicate the innocent, punish the guilty, and protect the fair fame of the church, so far as it may be protected, when a necessity exists for bringing this method into requisition.

God's method of redemption is not one of coercion or compulsion; yet its imperativeness precludes the possibility of enjoying its promised blessings if its reflected conditions are repudiated. Hence the significance of the following:—

Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

Go into the city and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

He that worships "must worship in spirit and in truth." It follows therefore, that man's liberty consists in refusing or choosing to serve his Creator, and no evidence appears to the writer that God has, or will restrain man from unrighteous deeds, or force him to the performance of righteous deeds, irrespective of his will power, which affords a warrant for belief that man must rise to justification or fall to condemnation by the exercise of his will power, otherwise the thought of man's moral responsibility to God were a farce.

I believe and teach that Christ was the same loving and loyal being when unfolding the method of adjudication to his disciples as when inviting all to come to him with a promise of rest to the soul; hence a necessity for bringing into requisition the method of adjudication with all its provisions and conditions, when a necessity shall exist.

For those enlightened by or through the truth there is either justification or condemnation, as they shall evince diligence or negligence; and diligence cannot be construed to mean negligence, nor negligence diligence; hence we must be either negligent or diligent. If negligent, the word says we shall not be counted worthy to stand. (D. C. 104: 44.) Can that be construed to mean that the slothful must be encouraged, his slothfulness passed over, lest any interference should complicate matters? If so, there is an uncertain sound in the word, and who shall prepare for the battle? Paragraphs 8, 9, and 10, of section 10, Doctrine and Covenants, impose studiousness, with a view to an understanding of doctrine, and a proper conception of duty; and all this was imposed at the very inception of the church. And the fact of God having spoken to his servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, gives a guaranty that those of limited qualification or of ordinary mind may study God's law with profit, thus acquiring a proficiency in their several positions; thus by God's grace, teach, act, decide, etc., according to their gifts and callings or office they may be called to fill (D. C. 38: 5); hence the exhortation to studiousness and the command to deal with the slothful are compatible or consistent.

And surely since the body exists in integral parts and these parts are to act according to office, or gifts and callings unto them, there can be no difficulty in learning duties, prerogatives, etc., of these several officials, hence no difficulty in determining slothfulness or negligence when visible.

Nor can there be any great mystery as to who, or how slothfulness shall be dealt with, if admitting all officials are powerful in their appointed positions. To illustrate: The first paragraph of section 46, Doctrine and Covenants, enjoins that the one trespassing shall not partake until he makes restitution. But whose duty is it, or who will evince the requisite amount of "stamina" to suspend the offender from church privileges or prevent him from partaking of the sacrament? In view of the imperativeness of duty he who might incline to nepotism an undue love for nephews, or allow his eyes to be blinded through gifts, or use the law to please friends or vex foes, would be an unfit person to fill any position in the church of the living God.

One purpose of the appointing of branch officers is (as I believe) that by due diligence and cooperation the moral status of the entire membership should be known; this to be reached, if possible, by a presiding elder, priest, teacher, and deacon. But if the membership is too large and scattered to render this possible, the force may be increased and the branch sectionized; for when necessity exists the law does not forbid an increase of forces. It is to be presumed that these officials are to evince a becoming diligence to prevent trouble, which being done, they will be better prepared to meet and adjust trouble when despite their efforts it comes to the surface, than if they stood at ease in Zion, the peace of the branch was threatened because of some sudden outbreak. The law reflecting the method of adjudication prescribes rules of action for the offended, hence he is to visit the offending party and between him, the offended, and the offender alone, the former is to tell the latter of his fault. If he hears him, the offended has gained the offender, and the matter should cease; and friendship be restored and perpetuated as if the unpleasantness had never occurred. Out of such an event a necessity for the trespasser to give evidence of reconciliation, and fail, in which event some one is to interpose to prohibit, which would be the presiding officer of the branch. Of course it were better that such a necessity should not exist; but if it did exist, it were better to prohibit than to fail. And it would be illegitimate for any other to interfere.

But should this official fail to act, and thus the offender be allowed to participate, I believe the teacher might approach the president, and if failing to hear the teacher, the president of the district might be consulted; and thus an adjustment be reached. But should these officials decide to let the matter pass, some one would more than likely be dissatisfied, and if nothing further was done the matter would be more than likely to break out in a worse form than it first assumed, after smouldering a little; for it must be an exhibition of folly to claim a wisdom above that reflected in or by the law; hence we learn that a failure to do with the erring one as the law directs is offensive to him who is our law-giver. (D. C. 64: 2.)

The revelation of this method of adjudication should be a preventive to accusations either written or oral, because in view of the fact that labor and charges of wrongdoing should precede citation to trial. And we further learn, that the one charged during the process of investigation has the right of defense, retraction, and confession; and that his guilt is only to be substantiated by the law-required amount of unimpeachable evidence. Hence he is not to be declared a transgressor in Zion until he can be so declared authoritatively, after being tried before a competent tribunal. Hence 'tis just to believe all innocent until proven guilty. But should we know differently, we can afford to wait until the law has been executed and punishment inflicted. Even then there is no room for exultation.

If there are those who take pleasure in berating their brethren to those into whose confidence they have ingratiated themselves to create a prejudice against those who are not present to say a word in their own defense, they ought not to be permitted the use of the church organ to hurl their poisonous darts, setting all to wondering as to who the guilty ones can be and why they are allowed to remain in the church. I learn from Doctrine and Covenants 42: 23 that,

If any shall offend in secret, he or she shall be rebuked in secret, that he or she may have opportunity to confess in secret to him or her whom he or she has offended; and to God, that the church may not speak reproachfully of him or her. And thus shall ye conduct in all things.

Thus the law contemplates that the reputation of the members of the church shall be guarded. Should the professed advocates of the law do despite and willfully violate and trample under foot this plain statement of law to gratify a revengeful feeling, or to reach some coveted point not available through a manly, legitimate procedure? If so, would such be fit representatives of the church? How could they teach others to revere and obey that which themselves violate? I think the suggestion to more frequently teach the Doctrine and Covenants, or its contents, quite timely.

I am frequently astonished at the intense and complicated trouble attributable only to sheer neglect of some of the plainest provisions and statements found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. Why is this? Is the power of ordinations given to compliment or please friends? Should hands be laid so suddenly on men that the recipient of an ordination knows no more of the duties and responsibilities incurred after the ordination than he did before? Should any have thus thought I think a due consideration of the following will disabuse his mind of such thoughts:—

Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him.—D. C. 17: 12.

This affords a warrant for belief that the Holy Ghost should direct in selecting as well as in ordaining; and certainly efforts to instruct as to duties and responsibilities before ordination ought not to be forgotten; for the acceptance of a legally tendered position in the church of the living God is tantamount to making a covenant with God to acquit one's self of the duties attaching to the accepted position. Then let us be diligent in laboring to prevent trouble, and if it then comes, meet and adjust it as God's method directs. In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

"THE GOSPEL."

IN making this reply to the brother who wrote under the above caption in Herald of March 25, I do not do so with the spirit of contention, but principally to make my position more plain. I am sure the brother could not have understood my line of thought in one paragraph at least, in my former article, wherein I intimated that all the different nationalities could have had opportunity to hear "the wonderful works of God" in their own language even if they had not reached the place where the disciples were until the meeting was half over, if all spoke in tongues, seeing there were one hundred and twenty disciples and only eighteen nationalities, for he says: "that style of carrying on God's work would appear to me nothing but confusion."

Let me illustrate my thought. Suppose at the present day a number of Saints assembled together in a certain place and continued in supplication and prayer till the Holy Spirit was poured out upon them so that all who were in the room were filled with the Spirit, and the gifts rested upon them and they arose one after another and spoke as the Spirit gave them utterance; some in tongues, some in interpretation, and some in prophecy, edifying themselves and each other. While the meeting was yet in session, representatives, more or less, of every nation under heaven, entered while the Saints continued speaking in other tongues,—other than their own,—would it not be a matter of course that each or at least a portion of those different nationalities would in turn hear their own language spoken, (unless the language was such that was not known or spoken by any nation under heaven)? And where would be the confusion? And, would it not be a "natural" testimony meeting? Such, I now understand, was the nature of the meeting on the day of Pentecost, though very extraordinary in degree. If I believe that the house of God is a house of order and the operations of the Spirit of God are ever true to itself and in harmony with the laws given the church in First Corinthians, to govern those operations, I must believe that they on the day of Pentecost spoke one after another. For "they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues," plainly indicating that all spoke, but not all at the same time. No need to take time to appoint certain ones to speak; they spoke as the Spirit gave them utterance. True, the gift of interpretation is not mentioned upon this occasion, nor is it upon any other occasion that I know of where we read of the believers speaking in tongues and prophesying; yet we are led to believe that upon other occasions when the Saints spoke in tongues the interpretation was also given. And since the endowment of the spiritual gifts would have been incomplete without it, and having no other record of its descent, it is not hard for me to believe that the gift of interpretation was also bestowed upon that occasion, and enjoyed, at least among the disciples before the multitude came together; and that through it the disciples knew what was being said, just as they do at the present day. It may not have been necessary after the multitude came together, yet even then all would not have been edified through the gift of tongues without interpretation.

We all believe that the gift of tongues and prophecy were exercised, and the brother gives several quotations that go to establish the fact that whenever the gift of tongues was exercised the interpretation of the tongue or tongues should be given also, one of which quotations I here reproduce:—

Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.—1 Cor. 14: 13.

To which I add the verses 27, 28, 30 of the same chapter:—

If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret. But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church. . . . If anything be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first hold his peace.

These scriptures show conclusively what the order of the manifestations was and ever should be; and since the gifts upon the day of Pentecost came to stay, we believe they were given in their order, though given abundantly. Nor would it consume any more time for eighteen to speak in tongues and another eighteen to give the interpretation than for thirty six to speak in tongues.

Now let me show how easy and how probable it was for the multitude to hear the disciples speaking of the wonderful works of God, without any gift further than their natural hearing. We are informed by the narrator that they—the disciples—spoke in "other tongues;" which means more languages than their own, and others besides their own; and, that the multitude was composed of representatives from every nation under heaven. Therefore, whatever languages were spoken by the disciples must necessarily have been the mother tongue of some of those nationalities. And taking the position that "all were filled with the Holy Ghost," and that a gift rested upon all, we believe all would have liberty to exercise it; and upon this extraordinary occasion when the gifts were poured out upon them in such a marvelous manner, I believe they were given to speak in every language that was then in use. If the eighteen nationalities spoken of included every nation under heaven, there would only be that many languages, or tongues, which means dialects. Not a great variety, considering the number of speakers.

What scriptural grounds have I for believing that there were eighteen different languages spoken after the multitude came together? This: St. Luke then records the multitude as saying that every man heard them (the disciples) speak in his own language. Not that some other or unknown language was spoken and they heard it in their own, but they heard them speak in their own language. And again, after naming over of all the nations who were present they say:—"We," "Parthians, and Medes" etc., "Cretes and Arabians," "do hear them speak in our tongues [plural] the wonderful works of God" (not "words" of God). They did not express themselves as being aware of any gift or power resting with themselves, but their wonder and amazement was because the speakers were Galileans, which is to say "unlearned":—

And they were all amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans?

If by the gift of the Spirit the multitude heard each speaker in his own language at one and the same time, where was the cause of others thinking them drunken? Their language would all have been plain to the understanding of each, would it not?

I think we are not warranted in claiming more than what is promised of God. I am aware that there is to be a time when, according to the promise of God, this same Holy Spirit is to be poured out upon all flesh; but upon the occasion under examination the promise had been made to the disciples only:—

Behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.—Luke 24: 49.

And there is this much in the way of accepting the brother's belief that the endowment was "graciously extended to the whole concourse." First; the whole concourse of people was not present at the outpouring of the Spirit when it filled the whole house;

—not until the unusual manifestations were noised abroad. Second; there were some among them who mocked, which would not have been the case if the Spirit were poured out upon all. Moreover we have Peter's authority that it was the disciples only, whom God bestowed the gifts upon. In rehearsing the circumstance attending the baptism of Cornelius, he says:—

Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, what was I, that I could withstand God?—Acts 11: 17.

We understand Peter here to refer to the disciples when he says, "us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ." And when did he give them the like gift? On the day of Pentecost. We understand that the multitude, or a large portion of them, were "devout men," which means religious men. They were believers in God, for they were Jews; but certainly not believers in the Lord Jesus Christ until Peter preached Christ to them. And he farther said to them then and there,

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

Peter did not intimate that they had already received it as in the case of Cornelius, but the promise was to them on the condition of repentance and baptism. The brother says:—

I could hardly believe that Peter's after address would have greater weight with the people than the voice of God himself in tongues wherein they were born.

He does not seem to think the voice of God could speak through Peter in his own language, or that commonly understood. We have every reason to believe that Peter was as much filled with the Spirit when he expounded the Scriptures to them and gave them the law of the Spirit of life as were those who spoke in other tongues the wonderful "works of God;" for it carried conviction to the hearts of those who heard, causing them to inquire what they should do, while the tongues caused them to be "amazed" and "in doubt." This is in accord with the Scriptures which say, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul;" and it ever has been the case in the church at the present time that there is more converting power in one gospel sermon by the Spirit than in the gift of tongues by the same Spirit. Tongues edify, but seldom convert.

That it was but the third hour of the day when Peter began to preach, is no stumbling-block. It is believed that the disciples remained in supplication and prayer all night, and the endowment may have taken place at as early an hour as the resurrection of Christ; yet I prefer to take the narrative as it reads. I understand that six o'clock in the morning was called the first hour of the day. If so, the day would have been "fully come" at that hour, which found them "all with one accord in one place." From six until nine—the third hour—would give three hours for the exercise of the spiritual gifts.

Now the summing up of this event given by Luke, according to my understanding, is: That the Holy Spirit accompanied by the spiritual gifts was poured out upon the disciples both men and women. That some spoke in tongues, some prophesied, some spoke by interpretation; that God divided severally as he would. That the gifts of the Spirit were with the gospel believers only. That the multitude who came together and heard the wonderful works of God were simply listening to their own language being spoken, and that they heard other languages that they did not understand, and were impressed in a similar manner to those at the present day who are learned and who hear unlearned persons speak in classic languages; they are astonished, and do not know by what power they speak; some are seriously impressed, while others mock, though they hear the wonderful works of God spoken in their own language. That the nature of the exercises of the gifts was a revelation of the wonderful works of the kingdom of God—cheering and comforting messages to the sorrowing disciples, prophesying of what should come to pass in their work of the ministry while going abroad with the declaration that Jesus was indeed the Christ. That when Peter preached his gospel sermon he did not speak in other tongues, but in the commonly spoken language. That he was filled with the Holy Ghost as well as the rest, and by its power his words carried conviction to the hearts of those who heard. Thus in like manner as at the present day the gifts are to edify the Saints, while "the law of the Lord" converts "the soul."

I now leave the subject without further controversy for any or all who may possess greater light to turn that light upon it; and if my views have not sufficient merit to stand, let them fall. But, "To the law and to the testimony."

Marshall to the Bishop to be appointed as his agent for Southern Indiana district. Bro. John T. Scott, 19 Cotton Avenue, New Albany, Indiana, was appointed district secretary. A motion prevailed that semiannual conferences be held instead of quarterly conferences, to take effect after September 19, 1896. Thanks were tendered M. R. District financial report: Income £14. 11s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$.; expenditure £13. 11s. 2d.; in hand £1. 8 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. Report received as read. Resolved that in future the conferences of this district be held quarterly. The annual conference to convene on the Saturday before Easter Sunday, and the others on the first Saturday in July, October, and January in each year. The meeting then proceeded to consider the district president's report. A question was asked in regard to his advising the president of the South Manchester branch to suspend certain members from church privileges pending a trial; an elder and a priest, officers of the district whom the president of the district had silenced until such time as the branch had taken action in the matter, were of the number. The president answered, giving his reasons for so acting and advising. The president's report as a whole was indorsed and adopted. All the licenses of the officers of the district were indorsed with the following exceptions: Elders W. J. Armstrong, Samuel Bennett; Priests J. W. Green, J. Morgan, Frederick Manourie, F. M. Armstrong, Robert Hodgson, Sam H. Warren; Teacher J. Clarke; Deacon Joseph Welsh. Recommendations for ordinations from the Wigan branch: Priest Thomas Spargo to the office of elder, also member Edward Edwards to the office of priest. The district president here stated the position of Elder Caffall, the president of the mission: "First, There must be a necessity for such ordination; secondly, There must be a fitness on the part of the one recommended." The district president said he indorsed this opinion and desired all future conferences to observe this. The recommendations were considered and as there appeared to be no immediate necessity for them the matter was deferred until the next quarterly conference. The North Manchester branch recommended that Deacon John Bailey be ordained a priest. It having been shown that there were both necessity and fitness it was resolved that the request of the branch be acceded to and that authority to so ordain be granted. Elder Henry Greenwood tendered his resignation as vice president of the district, and it was accepted. The thanks of the conference were tendered to Bro. John Foden and his helpers, also the three Manchester branches, for the substantial support given to the conference. The authorities of the church, general, mission, and district, sustained. In conclusion the president commended the brethren for the spirit of forbearance mutually exercised during the discussion of the various questions that had come before them, some of which had been very trying and difficult to deal with. He hoped all would leave the conference with renewed determination to be diligent, as signs were hopeful for the spreading of the work of Christ on every hand. He advised presidents of branches to stand by the law. In so doing difficulties would be eventually overcome and the work successfully prosecuted. He advised them not to be backward in asking advice if they felt they needed it. He would answer if he could, and if he could not he would seek it from his superior officer. Let mutual respect and confidence obtain, and then the work would succeed. A vote of confidence in the district president was passed and the business sessions were brought to a close at seven p. m., April 6, 1896.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and Friends Scattered Throughout the European Mission; Greeting.—The General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for 1896, is a past event. And if there is a pang of regret because a better and more competent elder has not been appointed to cooperate in the above mission, the fault is not mine. I therefore think myself entitled to your indulgence and cooperation in the cause we all love. And this necessitates a constant activity in duty's path, according to the gifts and calling of God unto us.

Our President stated at the late conference that when entering into the work he understood it to be a life work. Shall we think less? This was compatible with expressions of his in the long ago. He said: "I want to live to see the name Latter Day Saint made honorable." And further; we want to let it be known that the Reorganized Church has come to stay. Surely we, by the grace of God, can practically subscribe to such sentiments.

The distinction between general (those who by virtue of office are called to be constantly in the field) and local officials, who are expected only (in the absence of General Conference appointment) to travel and preach as circumstances allow, is plain; so that all may enter in and occupy. And I incline to the opinion that a due study of Paul's comparison or likeness of the physical organism to the mystical body or Church of Christ, will prove an effective preventive to official jealousy and the like. For such is the sympathy between the members of the physical organism that the suffering of the least member excites an instantaneous sympathy of the whole body. Hence the saying, "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice." And in view of the inactivity of the mind. If this sympathy fails in any part of the body or Church of Christ, our liberty is being used as an occasion to the flesh, and so we enter into the work of biting and devouring one another, in which event we may be consumed one of another, for hate or malice and unfeigned love are not co-workers. That, I think, is a self-evident fact admitting of no controversy.

The cherished idea that the mere fact of the conferment of power makes the recipient thereof great, were unfortunate, or so I think; but not more so than the idea of priesthood being above the law, or the word which is reflective of the law. For that would be tantamount to a belief that human wisdom was equal or superior to God's wisdom, so that nothing could be more threatening to the peace and spiritual development of the Latter Day Saints than efforts to grow wise beyond that guaranteed by the written word; and a studiousness with a view to learn and understand the exigencies necessitating the revelation of that we read, will in no way tend to a disqualification in obtaining a proper conception as to the import and significance of that we study. And I have thought it advisable to be cautious in giving publicity to our decision upon important matters, supported by evidences reflected by isolated scriptures. To my finite mind the necessity of comparing scripture or revelation with revelation, is made more apparent as the years go by. And some recent editorials in our Herald has greatly tended to confirm me in this belief. Doubtless the words "ever," "everlasting," "destroy," "consume," "everlasting destruction," etc., may by myself be reconsidered with profit.

I am made conscious of some of the disadvantages that confront us in essaying to spread and build up the work in this mission. But this should stimulate in utilizing our available facilities.

I am not an ardent advocate of outdoor preaching, but better do that than nothing, especially so in England and Wales, where it is permissible, of which many representatives of other societies, who have commodious places of worship, avail themselves. Then tract committees may be appointed, and the young men and maidens enter into the work of tract distributing, having, if possible, a series of tracts, leaving No. 1, and exchange next week, etc.

As per an urgent request of Bro. A. N. Bishop, president of the Eastern district, South Wales, I attended a session of conference on the 4th and 5th of April; and subsequent to the adjournment visited Ogmores Valley at the instance of Bro. J. Jenkins, president of the branch in that locality. South Wales presents a romantic appearance. The face of the country is broken and mountainous. Well, whether the mountains are of sufficient altitude to be properly designated as mountains, I know not; but this I know: In traveling with Bro. J. Jenkins from Hafod to Ogmores Valley, a distance of at least seven miles, to shorten the journey we ascended one mountain and descended another, the ascent and descent consuming a full hour, and I thought those mountains were high enough; and up to the present writing I am undecided as to whether the ascent was any pleasanter than the descent, or vice versa. But suffice it to say, I am not anxious to ascend or descend again, unless I have to, and then I might be like the negro who said he would kick against the brick wall and it would be God's business about his going through it.

I remained in the above place from the 11th to the 27th of April, preaching twenty-three sermons, with four meetings different in character, two of an unpleasant character, essaying to adjust wrongs which ought never to have existed. Three outdoor meetings were held, inclement weather preventing more outdoor services.

I came within the precincts of the Penygraig branch, April 28, and up to date have held four outdoor and six indoor services, preaching in English and Welsh, the latter by Bro. R. Jenkins, who is quite efficient in his native tongue and can preach quite effectively in the English language. The Saints here are scattered and have no place of worship but the cottage. Bro. R. Jenkins, who has acted as the president of the branch, has moved from this into the Western district, South Wales, which gives this district a competent defender of the faith; but the Eastern district sustains a loss. But discouraging as the prospects may be, I believe if two active, willing, God-fearing, and persevering young men were available, some good might be effected in this district. There is no necessity to refrain from preaching because one may not always have the wherewith to travel on the railroad, especially at this time of year; for within a radius of a few miles a point might be selected for each night in the week. It would neither be profitable nor sensible for an elder to do little or nothing six days, to only preach on the seventh. No, that wouldn't pay. Saints could not be induced to contribute their earthly substance for a nonindustrious elder; nor would they expect one to live on the "air." If there are two young men who would be willing to climb the mountains and tread the valleys of South Wales, let us hear from them by return of post.

By report from Bro. E. R. Dewsnup I learn they had quite a profitable session of conference in the Western district on the 4th and 5th of April.

I enter into the work of the present conference year with a consciousness of my inability; but with God's favor and your cooperation I hope at least to be active in duty with a willingness to leave the result of the same with him who doeth all things after the counsel of his own will. So far as I have heard, of the doings of conference, I think it encouraging. The rendition of Bishop Kelley touching the Temple Lot suit being worthy of thought.

And I offer the sympathy and condolence of the Saints this side of the Atlantic to the family and church in the unexpected death of Bro. W. W. Blair.

I hereby notify the elders and all members, that the mission conference for 1896 will be held in Manchester, England, the first Monday in August, known as "Bank Holiday." I do this by virtue of the action of conference in 1895, requesting the missionaries or missionary in charge to locate the conference for 1896.

So far as I learn, Manchester is as near or more central than any other points where branches are found. Moreover, the number of elders in the Manchester district exceeds the number by far at any other point that would attend the conference; so that in view of the arrangement by which a part of the elders' railroad fare is paid the nontravel of the elders from Manchester to conference will be a matter of economy.

I am of the opinion that the method of the secretary notifying every individual elder of the conference at the consumption of time and money should be abandoned. However, should the secretary feel bound to carry out the practice for the conference of 1896, I shall prefer no charge against him. But it were well that the elders should keep the time and place in mind. And those seeing the Herald and knowing of elders who do not see the Herald, might inform them. I presume everybody knows all about the Bank Holiday in August. Then let them remember that that is conference day in Manchester.

The elders who anticipate a part of railroad fare being paid, will do well to be on hand in time enough to participate in the business of the conference. So far as I am concerned, I am anxious that the officials of Sabbath school association should calculate on occupying some of the time for Sunday school exercises at the coming conference.

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

To the Ministry and Saints of Rocky Mountain Mission; Greeting:—May the blessing of God and the peace and communion of his Holy Spirit be your portion during the year now before us.

We have an arduous and trying field before us, and have need to labor patiently, trusting that the reaping time may come by and by. Our force is altogether too small for the importance and magnitude of the work intrusted to us, but we must not falter or faint by the wayside.

We have a prospect of some additional and valuable labor during the year, but just now it is not available. Bro. John T. Davies, a tried and true veteran of the cause, has been appointed to the mission, but in consequence of serious sickness of his wife will not be able to reach the field for a season. Bro. H. N. Hansen, who is well known and respected in the mission, will be with us during the fall and winter months. We shall anxiously await the assistance of these worthy brethren.

I will also be detained for a time, as the Board of Publication has requested me to assist President Joseph Smith to prepare or write a history of the church; and President Joseph Smith and those members of the Quorum of Twelve whom I have had an opportunity to consult approved of my doing so. I will, however, do what I can by way of counsel, direction, and advice, and reach the field as soon as possible.

Until further arrangements are announced Bro. R. J. Anthony will be in charge in Montana and Idaho and Bro. H. O. Smith will be in charge in Utah and Western Wyoming. I hope the local and missionary force will render these brethren all the assistance possible.

May grace and peace abide with you, and the work of restoration move on gloriously.

My address will be until further notice, Box 329, Lamoni, Decatur County Iowa.

In bonds,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Having been placed as missionary in charge of Eastern Iowa district, I take this method of notifying the Saints and the local ministry in the district, that we may work together for the good of the cause, which they all seemed willing to do last year. May we all work together for good, not for the vain glory of the world, but for the glory of God.

I would like to hear from the other appointees for the district, hoping that they are doing much good. I will have to be at home for about one month yet, and then hope to be in the field and do what I can. If any know of good openings for the tent please notify me or the one in charge of the tent, so that they can be reached during the summer.

The conference put the tent in care of the district president. If any want the tent, write to him, or to me. Let us all move out and do all the good we can, and work wherever we can find people that want to hear. Sow the seed and scatter it by the way, and then trust the rest to God; he will give the increase. There is a brighter outlook in the district than last year; there seem to be many calls. May God bless and help us to work while the day lasts.

My permanent address is Chelsea, Tama County, Iowa. Yours truly,

C. E. HAND.

May 14, 1896.

To the Ministry and Saints in Kansas:—Having been appointed missionary in charge of the work in Kansas, (except that part of the Clinton, Missouri, and Spring River districts lying in this State,) this is to notify all concerned, that Bro. John T. Davis has consented to act as missionary in charge of the Northeastern Kansas district, so long as he remains in the State. This will give me time to get better acquainted with the condition of the work in the State.

Last year ill health confined my labor very largely to the vicinity of home. Bro. Davis' assistance, as above stated, and also the cooperation and assistance of the ministry appointed to this field, and the local ministry and Saints, will be duly appreciated. Bro. Davis and the writer will arrange to assign fields to the General Conference appointees in the two districts—the Northwestern and Northeastern Kansas districts. To ascertain what this assignment is the ministry will please correspond with the writer at Minneapolis, Kansas. Mail sent to Hallowell, Kansas, at any time will be forwarded to me.

Your brother in Christ,

W. S. PENDER.

To the Saints and Ministry of the Southwest Mission; Greeting:—You are hereby notified that Bro. I. P. Baggerly will please take charge of the work in Texas and Western Louisiana. The brethren laboring in that part of the field will please take notice and report promptly to him. The ministry in Arkansas, Indian Territory, and Oklahoma will please make their reports to me until further notice. And please, brethren, be prompt with your reports—have them in on time.

May God help each one to vigorously push the work forward, that a good work may be done for the Master in the present conference year.

Till further notice address me at Webb City, Missouri, in care of O. P. Sutherland.

Your brother in bonds,

GEORGE MONTAGUE.

WEBB CITY, Missouri, May 20, 1896.

ADDRESSES.

E. F. Shupe, No. 3,600 Cook Street, Denver, Colorado.

FIRST QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

The following named brethren, selected for ordination, were designated for membership in the First Quorum of Seventy, to be ordained by missionaries in charge: T. J. Sheppard, Gomer R. Wells, D. L. Harris, G. W. Robley, S. D. Payne, R. W. Davis, and C. J. Spurlock. Will these brethren please forward dates of birth and baptism; when, where, and by whom ordained to the office of Seventy; also permanent addresses. Licenses will then be issued.

The present rule of the quorum accepts reports made to General Conference. Brethren not under general appointment are required to report direct, to the quorum. All the brethren are requested to keep and present a detailed report of ministerial labor that a complete record of necessary items may be preserved and reported to the General Conference.

A new "circular letter" will be issued sometime during the year. Brethren who have changed their locations should report permanent addresses that they may appear; also that matter pertaining to the quorum may be sent.

In bonds, yours,

R. S. SALYARDS, Sec.

LAMONI, Iowa, May 19, 1896.

NOTICES.

The people of Dahinda, Illinois, have decided to try and dedicate the Saints' church at that place May 31, 1896. Would like to have all of the Saints that can come and help us and encourage us all they can. We have a nice church 32 x 40, with lot 100 x 140 feet, nicely located. We have not many Saints, but a good many believing. Bro. M. T. Short did us some good work when here on his way to General Conference. We are in hopes we will have President Joseph Smith and others from a distance with us on that day. Elder Pitt, of Chicago, will be here, and others. We ask all to help us with their faith and prayers, and also as much as they can with their means, and let us work together for one common brotherhood.

In bonds,

D. C. SMITH.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Northern Michigan district will convene at Coleman in the Saints' church, June 20, 1896, at ten a. m. We request all branches to send in full reports of all changes made in the branches since their last reports. All officers please send in reports of work done since last conference. We expect a large gathering, and an enjoyable time. The Sunday school association will meet on Friday, the 19th. All schools should send one or more delegates to represent their schools, with full reports. On the evening of the 19th, after the Sunday school work is completed, there will be a grand Sunday school entertainment; the principal features or topics will be upon the latter-day work. Prof. Douglass McIntyre will also be present with his graphophone, from which will be reproduced some grand speeches, songs, music, etc., all of which will be free to all. Judging from the past and the present outlook, the coming Sunday school convention and conference will be the best ever held in the district. Everyone come who can.

J. J. CORNISH.

The Southern district of Nebraska will hold its triannual conference, at Fairfield, Clay County, June the 21st and 22d, 1896. As this is the first conference ever held at this place, we would like to see the district well represented. This place was selected to accommodate as many of the Saints as possible, and especially the central and more western part of the district. I hope that the priesthood and branches will not neglect reporting to the conference in time. All Saints and friends cordially invited. Communications can be addressed to the undersigned.

J. W. WALDSMITH, Pres.
FAIRFIELD, Clay County, Nebraska.

REUNION NOTICES.

"The World's Reunion," to be held at Woodbine, Iowa, during the autumn of 1896, will commence September 18, and continue over the 27th as per appointment of the body at the Logan reunion, 1895. The reunion committee met May 11, with the citizens' committee, consisting of fifteen of Woodbine's business men at which time all preliminary plans of work were arranged. There will be another joint meeting of the committees June 8, to further prosecute the plans of the work.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

If the presidents and clerks of districts will attend to the matter of mailing to this office the branch reports soon after they hold their May and June sessions of conference it will be a favor, because the changes by loss and gain, by ordination and marriage, can thus be placed upon the General Church Records in their proper time and order. Some districts hold no sessions between October and June, and the May and June conferences are therefore quite numerous. Hence, many branch reports are due and many changes are to be placed upon the records.

Where district records are also kept it will take a little season, and perhaps some labor overtime, in order to copy the names and items before mailing the reports. But, if this effort is made, it will assist much, because I can then copy the reports in their time throughout the year. If they are retained until later then it makes the burden too heavy during the last half of the year. Not nearly all neglect this, but some do.

It is a pleasure to be able to say that the secretaries of all but three districts (where February or March conferences were held) have forwarded the branch reports before this date, the most of them in March. The Nauvoo district reports have not been received for either December or March. The Ohio reports are expected from Bro. Kirkendall any day. The Spring River reports have not come for some time past, owing to time being needed to transfer to a new book a complete record of all the branches in the district. It is desirable that all shall do the best they can in fulfillment of the law of God and in keeping with the instructions on pages 152-157 of Book of Rules.

H. A. STEBBINS,
General Church Recorder.
LAMONI, Iowa, May 22, 1896.

CHURCH LIBRARY.

We desire to tender thanks to Bro. John Jarvis, Keb, Iowa, for a book entitled, "Modern Controversy; or a Plain and Rational Account of the Catholick Faith;" with an appendix, "wherein it is chiefly proved that Popery is neither a traiterous nor a bloody religion." The book was printed in the year 1720; and with the exception of the loss of the front part of the cover, is in an excellent state of preservation, notwithstanding it is 176 years old.

NOTICE.—PROOF OF WILL.

STATE OF IOWA, } ss.
Decatur County, }

District Court, in vacation.

To All Whom It May Concern:—Notice is hereby given, that an instrument in writing purporting to be the last will and testament of William W. Blair, deceased, was this day produced, opened, and read by the undersigned, and that I have fixed Monday, the 31st day of August, 1896, as the day for hearing proof in relation thereto.

Witness my official signature, with the seal of said court hereto affixed, this 12th day of May, 1896.

J. N. GATES,
20may3t Clerk District Court.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

I herewith give notice that there will be two days' meetings held at the following places:—

Wheeling, West Virginia, June 6 and 7, commencing Saturday, the 6th, at ten a. m.

Glen Easton, West Virginia, June 13 and 14, commencing Saturday, the 13th, at ten a. m.

Blake Mills, Ohio, June 27 and 28, commencing Saturday, the 27th, at ten a. m.

There will be some of the traveling ministry present at these meetings to assist the local brethren in dispensing the word. We trust that the Saints living in these respective places will put forth an effort to make these meetings successful.

I have been informed by Bro. W. H. Garrett, the president of the Pittsburg-Kirtland district, that he expects to leave the mission about June 1 for Independence, Missouri, to become engaged in the work there. Thus the mission will lose a faithful worker, and the district its president. I request that after June 1 all matters requiring the attention of the president of the district be referred to me until the vacancy has been filled.

I have been informed by Bro. James Moler, president of the Ohio district, that Bro. David Davis and another brother by the name of Wilson have been making appointments for preaching and filling them themselves, which right these men do not possess, for the reason that they hold no office in the church, and the law by which we are governed as a church emphatically states that no one has a right to preach the gospel of Christ unless he is called and sent of God. Again, there are those of the high priests, seventies, elders, and priests living in and around the vicinity where these brethren have been operating, who have the authority to preach. I trust the Saints in these localities will not encourage such work, and I hereby request these brethren to cease from doing that which the Lord has designated to others to do. Respectfully,

G. T. GRIFFITHS,
Missionary in Charge.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE
USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

 Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies,
 among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pa-der the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is in-

FREE... TO MINISTERS AND Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Hüngrich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these, other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell," and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

A DISASTROUS STORM.

FOUR States felt the fury of the great storm of yesterday morning. It raged with the destructive fury of contending tornadoes and has left a wake of death and widespread property loss. The area covered by the terrific blast of the elements can only be estimated, for many points have been cut off from the outer world. It is the fourth recent demonstration of the overwhelming forces of nature that defy man's precautions. The disasters in Texas, Kansas, and Nebraska were so far away that their significance seemed impersonal, but enough of the fury of this storm was felt in Chicago to inspire a distinct terror. This feeling was intensified by the fact that the first crash of the thunderbolt came at midnight. The sleeping city was roused to an abrupt realization of helplessness, to be followed in some places by an equally swift dispatch to an awful death. At the height of the storm in this vicinity the uproar exactly resembled the din of a great battle. It is not unlikely that later news from the scene of this widespread storm will bring the intelligence of many fatalities and of great destruction of property.

Central Iowa appears to have been the area of the worst disaster. At Bondurant and Valeria over thirty persons were killed, and it is reported that at North McGregor twelve persons were drowned by a cloudburst. The windstorm in this vicinity was felt from Elgin to the suburbs of Chicago. Fortunately no lives were lost here, but the pretty suburbs of Edison Park, Norwood Park, Irving Park, and Ravenswood suffered severely, many houses being blown down and others badly wrenched and twisted. The signal service station recorded a wind velocity of sixty-two miles per hour between 2 and 3 o'clock. In ten minutes of time the rainfall measured 1.46 inches, which the observer rightly enough denominates a cloudburst. The fearful wind and drenching downpour were accompanied by an electrical exhibit for an hour such as is rarely witnessed. The property loss in the city and its suburbs is heavy, but it is compensated for by the almost miraculous preservation of life.

The premature spring of 1896, which has advanced everything a month ahead of its time, has done the same unpleasant office for windstorms, cloudbursts, and lightning. The cyclone season began its fatalities in the latter part of April, and from that time to this 317 persons are reported to have been killed, the most prominent disasters being the following: April 26, Kansas, 12; May 15, Texas, 126; May 17, Kentucky, 6, and Kansas, 28; May 18, Nebraska, 44; May 21, Oklahoma, 10; and May 24, Iowa, 40. In the same period seventy persons have been killed by lightning.

Such occasions as these bring out into bold relief the limitations of science and man's inventive genius. The elements gather their forces at leisure and sweep down on the earth, and not a barrier can be devised to ward off their fatal stroke. The best minds of the age, trained in the developments of the past, pore over nature's book in a vain search for signs of its changing moods. Without a note of warning, "out of a clear sky," the tornado rushes on its helpless victims. It does not appear that any progress is made year after year in the efforts to forecast these visitations. They find the people as unprepared now as they did last year, the year before, and all former years, and nowhere on the horizon are there signs of progress. They remain nature's final, uncaptured, victorious battery.—Chicago Tribune, May 27.

THE WIND'S HARVEST OF DEATH.

It is not possible to know what disasters caused by the fury of the elements are yet in store for this country, but it would seem that the record of fatalities for May will hardly be surpassed during any other month of 1896. With a single exception—the recent storm in Eastern Michigan—the Southwest has been the area of disaster. Within the last eleven days 120 lives have been lost in Texas, 33 in Kansas, 44 in Nebraska, 16 in Oklahoma, 80 in Iowa, and 15 in Illinois, and to this total must be added hundreds more killed on Wednesday, at St. Louis, East St. Louis, and other points in Missouri and Southern Illinois. The above figures only include the more prominent events of this kind. Adding to them the deaths caused by minor storms the total for May is 485, and this may be increased to over 1,000 when the death lists are complete.

It is certain that the storm record for 1896 will exceed that of any year since 1882, when the Tribune's annual statements began, except the year 1893. The record of loss of life by windstorms during these years has been as follows:—

Year.		Year.
1882.....	369	1890.....	922
1883.....	509	1891.....	133
1884.....	678	1892.....	448
1885.....	111	1893.....	4,462
1886.....	272	1894.....	517
1887.....	188	1895.....	410
1888.....	547	1896.....	*485
1889.....	163

*To date, not including the storm of the 27th.

It will be observed that 1890 and 1893 are the conspicuous years in this list. The record for 1890 was increased much above the average by a cyclone which swept through Southern Indiana and Illinois and Northern Kentucky, and wrought special havoc in Louisville, Kentucky. The exceptionally large figures for 1893 are due to the hurricanes which devastated the South Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico coasts in August and October of that year.

The only compensation which can be found for such wholesale destruction of life and property lies in the fact that it cannot be charged to human neglect, carelessness, or irresponsibility. Whether science will ever be able to forewarn people in time against the approach of these messengers of death, or whether it will be able to mitigate their destructive fury, the future only can determine. At present science stands as helpless as an infant in their presence. —Tribune, May 28.

STATISTICS OF FATALITIES IN THE UNITED STATES FOR YEARS PAST.

THE loss of life in the United States from storms for the year 1896, exclusive of the St. Louis disaster, has been unusually great, the large number of these devastating events, however, occurring during the last two weeks.

In fact the only storm of any extent that has occurred previous to this short period was that of April 26, in Clay County, Kansas, where twelve people lost their lives. The recapitulation of the most devastating tornadoes of the year is as follows:—

April 26, Clayton County, Kansas	12
May 15, Texas	120
May 17, Kentucky	5
May 17, Kansas	28
May 18, Nebraska	44
May 21, Oklahoma	10
May 22, Eldon, Missouri	5

May 25, Eastern Michigan	78
May 25, Oklahoma	8
May 25, McGregor, Iowa, cyclone and cloudburst	40
May 26, Cairo, Illinois, cyclone and cloudburst	13

The number of deaths by cyclones and lightning for the respective months of 1896, to date is as follows:—

	Cyclones.	Lightning.
January	1	0
February	1	0
March	8	3
April	39	8
May (Exclusive of St. Louis)	412	63
Totals	461	74

The number of deaths by wind-storms of each year, since 1882, is as follows:—

Year.	Deaths.	Year.	Deaths.
1882	369	1890	922
1883	509	1891	133

*The year of the terrible South Atlantic hurricane.
†To date, not counting St. Louis, etc.
—Tribune, May 29.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 28. — The angel of death only knows how many victims he gathered unto himself when he rode into St. Louis last night on the wings of the wind.

They are being counted one by one as the masses of shattered brick, stone, and lumber are cleared away, but it will be two days at least before an approximately accurate total can be given.

In all probability the exact number of those whose lives were crushed out by falling walls or who met their fate under the waters of the raging Mississippi will never be known.

A conservative estimate based on the numbers of bodies found and the extent of the wreckage yet to be explored places the total in St. Louis at 250 and East St. Louis at 150.

Neither can the total value of property destroyed be given. Estimates in the various papers here vary from $10,000,000 to $35,000,000. It is not likely, however, the damage will be over $15,000,000.

LIST OF THE DEAD AND INJURED BY TOWNS.

The full extent of the havoc wrought by storms which swept over portions of Illinois and Missouri Wednesday night cannot be known for several days. In many places telegraph wires are down, and communication with these points may not be resumed before next week. The reports so far as received show the storm to have been widespread and fatal to a degree never before known in the history of the country. Appended is a careful estimate of the killed and injured, based on the most reliable information, obtained by the Tribune:—

WASTED MORAL FORCE.

In a recent article contained in the Atlantic Monthly, I came on this sentence: "Possibly there is nowhere else in American social life so great a waste in men and money as is found in the present working of the system, if we may call it such, of religious activity." This charge, made in a calm magazine discussion, apart from heated polemics, and by a man noted for his careful conservatism of statement, led me to reread the passage again and again. For it is best worth our while to digest one vital truth rather than discourse largely over what is of secondary importance. Is it a fact that the moral force of the great Church is wasted to the extent that our author suggests? I remember that many years ago that conviction came upon me, in my orthodox days. Was it right? When one of our famous lecturers, of the days when the platform was a power, went West, he said to me, "Now tell me what is the one chief lesson you have learned by your work out in these boundless regions of newness?" "This," I said: "that we cannot grow pear trees nor save men out here as they can in New York." The fact had forced itself on me that there was no routine method of religious work possible that would adapt itself to diverse places and times. We must take men, like things, entirely as we find them, and adjust our labors to conditions. My pear trees I had planted exactly as I would have done in the Eastern States; but they did not thrive.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

QUES.—1. If an individual has been legally expelled from the church, and then say, fifteen years afterward, is received back by vote of a district conference is he in fact a member of the church?

Q.—2. Should such person afterward be ordained to the office of priest would his official work as priest be valid?

Ans.—The church several years ago adopted in conference a resolution which provided, that in cases where a person was cut off, or expelled from the church for cause, such person could not be received again into fellowship; except he made application to the branch from which he was cut off, or expelled, making such reparation as the branch may justly require and be baptized by consent of the branch, thus showing due repentance and willingness to value connection with body of Christ, the church, as it should be held by true disciple. An effort was made three years ago to get this rule modified in some degree, but this failed, and the rule was left as originally made.

We are inclined, however, to answer the question asked above, that if the district conference that restored the person referred to, with a full knowledge of the case, the person so restored is legally a member of the church. The second question we answer, that, as in case such person had been duly rebaptized, as it is called, it would have been necessary that he should be reordained if he held, or desired to hold an office, so in the case stated; if reordained, or ordained, the church would have to recognize his acts in his calling legal.

SOMETHING GOOD.

THE Saints are known as a missionary people. Having found the truth themselves, their next step is to acquaint relatives, friends, neighbors—everybody else with it; hence the need of proper literature, that they may be supplied with the spiritual weapons of evangelistic warfare.

Another step has been taken toward making more thorough provision for the missionary needs of the people in this respect. The first volume of the "sermon supplements," heretofore published in the HERALD, have been bound in pamphlet form and are now issued in neat binding at the low price of 30 and 75 cents, according to style of binding; 30 cents for paper, 75 cents for cloth—duck—binding.

These sermons reflect the thought of some of the leading ministers of the church of gospel topics. "Man inspirational," by Bro. W. W. Blair; "Service and its reward," by President Joseph Smith; "Fear of God," by Bro. J. R. Lambert; "Revelation continuous," by Bro. Joseph Luff; "Fruits and baptism of the Holy Spirit," by Bishop E. L. Kelley; are among the list of twenty-six sermons included in the volume, and give a fair idea of its contents, which include sermons by other representative men of the church on the principles of the gospel.

This will prove an excellent missionary volume for general circulation and will often be found more acceptable to the average reader than the ordinary regular tract, especially to those who begin an investigation of the work. It has been said that persons like to have things told to them. The preached sermon supplies such want to some extent because it possesses the natural style peculiar to direct address.

Address orders for "Sermons" to the Business Manager; prices, paper covers 30 cents, cloth 75 cents, post-paid.

SAINTS' HYMNAL; CHEAP EDITION.

Words and music combined. To more fully meet the demand for popular publications at low prices a cheaper edition of the Saint's Hymnal has been issued.

The book is bound in paper covers and is sold at the low price of 30 cents per volume; $3.00 per dozen. It contains the Hymnal complete—words and music combined.

Branches and tent workers will be interested in this edition, and should purchase in dozen lots to obtain them at lowest prices.

MAILING RULES FOR GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.

THE following rules have been agreed upon to govern the filling of all orders for Gospel Quarterlies. Subscribers will please take notice and conform to them hereafter that business transactions with the Herald Office may be facilitated:—

1. Yearly subscriptions are the lowest in price and are the only ones placed on the regular mailing list.

2. Single orders, for each issue of the Quarterly, are placed on the order book. They must be renewed every three months, regularly, for each issue. Single orders cannot be filled at yearly rates. (See prices on Quarterlies.)

3. Schools ordering by the year should be particular to avoid duplicating orders, when new officers (who order for them) are elected. Old addresses should be changed, or subscriptions renewed, as may be necessary.

4. Yearly subscriptions are dropped when one year overdue, unless arrangements are made with the Superintendent of the General Association to continue longer, and his indorsement received.

5. Schools unable to purchase Quarterlies may be supplied free by order of the Superintendent. Schools are expected to purchase their supplies, however, when at all possible.

6. Sample copies free; back numbers at regular rates if on hand.

7. Orders should be in thirty days before date of issue, to insure promptness, and that the required number be published.

8. Order through branch book agents when possible, to facilitate business at the Herald Office.

AN IMPORTANT DOCUMENT CHANGED.

BELOW we publish an epistle written by Joseph the Seer and his fellow prisoners while in Liberty Jail, Missouri, as it is found in Times and Seasons, Vol. 1 pp. 99-104, and as it is found in Millennial Star, Vol. 17 pp. 52-56. We publish these in parallel columns that the reader may more readily see the differences and mark the liberty that has been taken by some parties in changing and corrupting the words of Joseph Smith since his death. You will notice the kind and Christlike spirit of the one in contrast with the boasting, railing spirit of the other. Especial attention is called to the fact that a plurality of gods is taught in the one where no mention of such a thing is found in the other. But the differences are so glaring and important that it is useless to point them out further. That found in Times and Seasons was published in May, 1840, when E. Robinson and Don C. Smith were editors, and in the lifetime of Joseph Smith and the other signers of the document; and hence open to their inspection, and doubtless received their indorsement. That in the Millennial Star was published in January, 1855, when F. D. Richards was editor, and purports to be a portion of the history of Joseph Smith written by himself. This was published over ten years after the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and when others of the signers were not in fellowship with the publisher.

Now will Mr. F. D. Richards please arise and explain by what authority these changes were made, and produce the evidence to sustain his explanation? We think it due to Mr. Richards to give him an opportunity to explain; and if there exists sufficient authority for these changes it would be a satisfaction to us to know it; for we dislike to think that any man, especially one professing the high and holy calling which Mr. Franklin D. Richards does, would willfully and maliciously put into the mouth of our martyred dead words which were never used by them.

Should he now fail to explain, and furnish proof, can the church in Utah sustain him as "Church Historian," and expect us to accept his work as such? If you are innocent of duplicity and deceit in this matter, please step forward and let us hear from you:—

TIMES AND SEASONS.

COPY OF A LETTER, WRITTEN BY J. SMITH JR. AND OTHERS, WHILE IN PRISON.

Liberty Jail, Clay Co. Mo.

To Bishop Partridge, and to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in Quincy Illinois, and to those scattered abroad, throughout all the region round about.

Your humble servant Joseph Smith jr. prisoner for Christs' sake, and the saints, taken and held by the power of mobocracy under the exterminating reign of his excellency Governor Lilburn W. Boggs, in company with his fellow prisoners and beloved brethren, Caleb Baldwin, Lyman Wight, Hyrum Smith, and Alexander McRae, send unto you greeting: May the grace of God the Father, and the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, rest upon you all, and abide with you for ever; and may faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly-kindness and charity dwell in you and abound, so that you may not be barren or unfruitful.

We know, that the greater part of you are acquainted with the wrongs, high toned injustice and cruelty which is practised upon us; we have been taken prisoners, charged falsely with all kinds of crimes and thrown into a prison enclosed with strong walls, and are surrounded with a strong guard who are as endefatagable in watching us, as their master is in laying snares for the people of God. Therefore under these circumstances, dearly beloved brethren, we are the more ready to claim your fellowship and love. Our situation is calculated to awaken our minds to a sacred remembrance of your affection, and kindness; and we think that your situation will have the same effect; therefore, we believe, that nothing can separate us from the love of God, and our fellowship one with another; and that every species of wickedness and cruelty practised upon us, will only tend to bind our hearts and seal them together in love.

It is probably, as unnecessary for us to say, that we are thus treated and held in bonds without cause as it would be for you to say, that you were smitten and driven from your homes without any provocation; we mutually understand and verily know, that if the citizens of the state of Missouri, had not abused the saints, and had been as desirous of peace as we were, there would have been nothing but peace and quietude to this day and we should not have been in this wretched place and burthened with the society of demons in human form and compeled to hear nothing but oaths and curses, and witness scenes of drunkenness and debaucheries of every description; neither would the cries of orphans and widdows

MILLENNIAL STAR.

Liberty Jail, Clay County, Missouri,
March 20, 1839.

To the Church of Latter-day Saints at Quincy, Illinois, and scattered abroad, and to Bishop Partridge in particular—

Your humble servant, Joseph Smith, junior, prisoner for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the Saints taken and held by the power of mobocracy, under the exterminating reign of His Excellency, the Governor, Lilburn W. Boggs, in company with his fellow prisoners and beloved brethren, Caleb Baldwin, Lyman Wight, Hyrum Smith, and Alexander McRae, send unto you all greeting: May the grace of God the Father, and of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, rest upon you all, and abide with you forever. May knowledge be multiplied unto you by the mercy of God. And may faith, and virtue, and knowledge, and temperance, and patience, and godliness, and brotherly kindness, and charity, be in you and abound, that you may not be barren in anything, nor unfruitful.

Forasmuch as we know that the most of you are well acquainted with the wrongs and the high-toned injustice and cruelty that is practised upon us; whereas we have been taken prisoners, charged falsely with every kind of evil, and thrown into prison, inclosed with strong walls, surrounded with a strong guard, who continually watch day and night as indefatigable as the devil is in tempting; and laying snares for the people of God:

Therefore, dearly beloved brethren, we are the more ready and willing to lay claim to your fellowship and love. For our circumstances are calculated to awaken our Spirits to a sacred remembrance of everything, and we think that yours are also, and that nothing therefore can separate us from the love of God and fellowship one with another; and that every species of wickedness and cruelty practised upon us will only tend to bind our hearts together and seal them together in love.

We have no need to say to you, that we are held in bonds without cause, neither is it needful that you say unto us, We are driven from our homes and smitten without cause. We mutually understand that if the inhabitants of the state of Missouri had let the Saints alone, and had been as desirable of peace as they were, there would have been nothing but peace and quietude in this state unto this day; we should not have been in this hell, surrounded with demons (if not those who are damned, they are those who shall be damned), and where we are compelled to hear nothing but blasphemous oaths, and witness a scene of blashemy, and drunkenness, and hypocrisy, and debaucheries of every description.

have ascended to God or the blood of the saints have stained the soil, and cried for vengeance against them. But "we dwell with those who hated peace" and who delighted in war and surely their unrelenting hearts,—their inhuman and murderous disposition—and their cruel practices, shock humanity, and defy description! It is truly a tale of sorrow, lamentation and woe, too much for humanity to contemplate. Such a transaction cannot be found where Kings and Tyrants reign, or among the savages of the wilderness, or even among the ferocious beasts of the forest. To think that man should be mangled for sport, after being cruelly put to death. Women have their last morsel stolen from them, while their helpless children were clinging around them and crying for food—and then, to gratify the hellish desires of their more than inhuman oppressors, be violated, is horrid in the extreme.

They practice these things upon the saints who have done them no wrong, had committed no crime, and who were an innocent and virtuous people; and have proved themselves lovers of God by forsaking and enduring all things for his sake. "It must needs be that offences come, but wo to those by whom they come."

O God! where art thou? and where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place? how long shall thy hand be stayed, and thy pure eyes behold from the heavens, the wrongs and sufferings of thy people and of thy servants; and thine ears be penetrated with their cries? How long, O Lord! shall they thus suffer, before thine heart shall be softened towards them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion towards them? O Lord God Almighty, maker of heaven, earth, and seas, and of all things that in them is, and who controlleth and subjecteth the devil and the dark and benighted dominions of Shaole. Stretch forth thy hand, let thine eye pierce, let thy pavilion be taken up, let thy hiding place no longer be uncovered, let thine ear be inclined, let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion towards thy people; and let thine anger be kindled against our enemies, and in thy fury let fall the sword of thine indignation, and avenge us of our wrongs. Remember thy suffering saints, O our God! and thy servants will rejoice in thy name forever.

Dearly beloved brethren, we realize that perilous times have come, as have been testified of in ancient days, and we may look with certainty and the most perfect assurance, for the rolling in of all those things which have been spoken of by all the holy prophets: lift up your eyes to the bright luminary of day, and you can say, soon thou shalt veil thy blushing face, for at the behest of HIM who said, "let there be light, and their was light," thou shalt withdraw thy shining. Thou moon, thou dimmer light, and luminary of night, shalt turn to blood. We see that the prophecies concerning the last days are fulfilling, and the time shall soon come when the "Son of man shall descend in the clouds of heaven, in power and great glory."

We do not shrink, nor are our hearts and spirits broken at the grievous yoke which is put upon us. We know that God will have our oppressors in derision, that he will laugh at their calamity, and mock when their fear cometh. We think we should have got out of our prison house, at the time Elder Rigdon got a writ of habeas corpus, had not our own lawyers interpreted the law contrary to what it reads, and against us, which prevented us from introducing our witnesses before the mock court, they have done us much harm from the beginning; they have lately acknowledged that the law was misconstrued, and then tangleized our feelings with it, and have now entirely forsaken us, have forfeited both their oaths, and their bonds, and are coworkers with the mob.

From the information we received, the public mind has been for some turning in our favor, and the majority is now friendly, and the lawyers can no longer browbeat us by saying, that this or that is a matter of public opinion, for public opinion is not willing

And again, the cries of orphans and widows would not have ascended up to God against them. It would not have stained the soil of Missouri. But O! the unrelenting hand! the inhumanity and murderous disposition of this people! It shocks all nature; it beggars and defies all description; it is a tale of woe; a lamentable tale; yea, a sorrowful tale; too much to tell; too much for contemplation; too much to think of for a moment; too much for human beings; it cannot be found among the heathens; it cannot be found among the nations where kings and tyrants are enthroned; it cannot be found among the savages of the wilderness; yea, and I think it cannot be found among the wild and ferocious beasts of the forest—that a man should be mangled for sport! women be robbed of all that they have—their last morsel for subsistence, and then be violated to gratify the hellish desires of the mob, and finally left to perish, with their helpless offspring clinging around their necks.

But this is not all. After a man is dead, he must be dug up from his grave, and mangled to pieces, for no other purpose than to gratify their spleen against the religion of God.

They practise these things upon the Saints, who have done them no wrong, who are innocent and virtuous; who loved the Lord their God, and were willing to forsake all things for Christ's sake. These things are awful to relate, but they are verily true. It must needs be that offences come, but wo unto them by whom they come.

O God! where art thou? And where is the pavilion that covereth thy hiding place? How long shall thy hand be stayed, and thine eye, yea thy pure eye, behold from the eternal heavens, the wrongs of thy people, and of thy servants, and thine ear be penetrated with their cries? Yea, O Lord, how long shall they suffer these wrongs and unlawful oppressions, before thine heart shall be softened towards them, and thy bowels be moved with compassion towards them?

O Lord God Almighty, Maker of Heaven, Earth, and Seas, and of all things that in them is, and who controlleth and subjecteth the devil, and the dark and benighted dominion of Shayole! Stretch forth thy hand; let thine eye pierce; let thy pavilion be taken up; let thy hiding place no longer be covered; let thine ear be inclined; let thine heart be softened, and thy bowels moved with compassion towards us; let thine anger be kindled against our enemies; and in the fury of thine heart, with thy sword avenge us of our wrongs; remember thy suffering Saints, O our God! and thy servants will rejoice in thy name forever.

Dearly and beloved brethren, we see that perilous times have come, as was testified of. We may look, then, with most perfect assurance, for the rolling in of all those things that have been written, and with more confidence than ever before, lift up our eyes to the luminary of day, and say in our hearts, Soon thou wilt veil thy blushing face. He that said, "Let there be light," and there was light; hath spoken this word. And again, Thou moon, thou dimmer light; thou luminary of night, shalt turn to blood.

We see that everything is fulfilling; and the time shall soon come, when the Son of Man shall descend in the clouds of heaven.

Our hearts do not shrink, neither are our spirits altogether broken, at the grievous yoke which is put upon us. We know that God will have our oppressors in derision; that he will laugh at their calamity, and mock when their fear cometh.

O that we could be with you, brethren, and unbosom our feelings to you! We would tell, that we should have been liberated at the time Elder Rigdon was, on the writ of habeas corpus, had not our own lawyers interpreted the law, contrary to what it reads, against us; which prevented us from introducing our evidence before the mock court.

They have done us much harm from the beginning. They have of late acknowledged that the law was misconstrued, and tangleized our feelings with it, and have entirely forsaken us, and have forfeited their oaths, and their bonds; and we have a come back on them, for they are co-workers with the mob.

As nigh as we can learn, the public mind has been for a long time turning in our favour, and the majority is now friendly; and the lawyers can no longer browbeat us by saying that this or that is a matter of public opinion, for public opinion is not willing to to brook all their proceedings, but are beginning to look with feelings of indignation upon our oppressors.—We think that truth, honor, virtue, and innocence will eventually come out triumphant.

We should have taken out a writ of habeas corpus, and escaped the mob in a summary way, but unfortunately for us, the timber of the wall being very hard, our auger handles gave out which hindered us longer than we expected, we applied to a friend for assistance, and a very slight incautious act gave rise to suspicion, and before we could fully succeed, our plan was discovered. We should have made our escape, and succeeded admirably well, had it not been for a little imprudence, or over anxiety on the part of our friend.

The Sheriff and Jailor did not blame us for our attempt; it was a fine breach, and cost the country a round sum; public opinion says, we ought to have been permitted to have made our escape, but then the disgrace would have been on us, but now it must come on the State. We know that there cannot be any charge sustained against us, and that the conduct of the mob—the murderers at Hawn's mill—the exterminating order of Governor Boggs, and the one-sided, rascally proceedings of the Legislature, has damned the state of Missouri to all eternity. Gen. Atchison has proved himself to be as contemptible as any of our enemies. We have tried a long time to get our lawyers to draw us some petitions to the supreme Judges of this state, but they have utterly refused; we have examined the laws, and drawn the petitions ourselves, and have obtained abundance of proof to counteract all the testimony that is against us—so that if the Judges do not grant us our liberty they have got to act contrary to honor, evidence, law or justice, merely to please the mob; but we hope better things, and trust that before many days, God will so order our case, that we shall be set at liberty, and again enjoy the society of the saints. We received some letters from our friends, last evening, one from Emma, one from D. C. Smith and one from Bishop Partridge all breathing a kind and consoling spirit; we had been a long time without information from our friends, and when we read those letters they were refreshing to our souls, as the gentle air and refreshing breeze; but our feelings of joy were mingled with feelings of pain and sorrow on account of the sufferings of the poor and much injured saints, and we need not say unto you that the flood gates of our hearts were open, and our eyes were a fountain of tears. Those who have not been inclosed in the walls of a prison, without cause or provocation, can have but little idea, how sweet the voice of a friend or one token of friendship is, from any source whatever, and awakens and calls into action every sympathetic feeling of the human heart, it brings to review every thing that has passed, it seizes the present with the velocity of lightning, and grasps after the future with fond anticipation; It fills the mind with tenderness and love until all enmity, malice, hatred, past differences, misunderstanding and mismanagements are entirely forgotten or are slain victims at the feet of love. When the heart is sufficiently contrite, then the voice of inspiration steals along and whispers, My son, peace be unto thy soul, thine adversity and thy afflictions shall be but for a moment, and then if thou art faithful and endure; God shall exalt thee on high, thou shalt triumph over all thy foes, thy friends do stand by thee, and shall hail thee again with warm hearts: thou art not yet as Job, thy friends do not contend against thee, neither do they charge thee with transgression, and those who do charge thee with transgression their hope shall be blasted, and their prospects melt away, as the hoar frost melteth before the rays of the rising sun. It likewise informs us that God has set his hand to change the times and the seasons and to blind the minds of the wicked, that they may not understand his marvellous workings, that he may take them in their own craftiness, because their hearts are corrupt and the distress and sorrow which they seek to bring upon the saints, shall return upon them double; and not many years hence, they and their posterity, shall be destroyed from under heaven. Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the Lord, for they have not sinned before me saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them, saith the Lord. Those who cry transgression, do it because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves, and swear falsely against my servants, that they brook it; for it is beginning to look with feelings of indignation against our oppressors, and to say that the "Mormons" were not in the fault in the least. We think that Truth, Honour, Virtue, and Innocence will eventually come out triumphant.

We should have taken a habeas corpus before the High Judge and escaped the mob in a summary way; but unfortunately for us, the timber of the wall being very hard, our auger handles gave out, and hindered us longer than we expected; we applied to a friend, and a very slight incautious act gave rise to some suspicions, and before we could fully succeed, our plan was discovered; we had every thing in readiness, but the last stone, and we could have made our escape in one minute, and should have succeeded admirably, had it not been for a little imprudence or over anxiety on the part of our friend.

The sheriff and jailor did not blame us for our attempt; it was a fine breach, and cost the county a round sum; but public opinion says, that we ought to have been permitted to have made our escape; that then the disgrace would have been on us, but now it must come on the State; that there cannot be any charge sustained against us; and that the conduct of the mob, the murders committed at Haun's Mills, and the exterminating order of the Governor, and the one-sided, rascally proceedings of the Legislature, has damned the state of Missouri to all eternity. I would just name also that General Atchison has proved himself as contemptible as any of them.

We have tried for a long time to get our lawyers to draw us some petitions to the Supreme Judges of this state, but they utterly refused. We have examined the law, and drawn the petitions ourselves, and have obtained abundance of proof to counteract all the testimony that was against us, so that if the Supreme Judge does not grant us our liberty, he has got to act without cause, contrary to honour, evidence, law or justice, sheerly to please the devil, but we hope better things, and trust, before many days, God will so order our case, that we shall be set at liberty and take up our habitation with the Saints.

We received some letters last evening—one from Emma, one from Don C. Smith, and one from Bishop Partridge—all breathing a kind and consoling spirit. We were much gratified with their contents. We had been a long time without information; and when we read those letters, they were to our souls as the gentle air is refreshing; but our joy was mingled with grief, because of the sufferings of the poor and much injured Saints. And we need not say to you that the flood-gates of our hearts were hoisted, and our eyes were a fountain of tears, but those who have not been inclosed in the walls of prison, without cause or provocation, can have but little idea how sweet the voice of a friend is; one token of friendship from any source whatever awakens and calls into action every sympathetic feeling; it brings up in an instant everything that is passed; it seizes the present with the avidity of lightning; it grasps after the future with the fierceness of a tiger; it retrogrades from one thing to another until finally all enmity, malice, and hatred, and past differences, misunderstandings, and mismanagements are slain victorious at the feet of Hope; and when the heart is sufficiently contrite; then the voice of inspiration steals along, and whispers, My son, peace be unto thy soul; thine adversity and thine afflictions shall be but a small moment; and then, if thou endure it well, God shall exalt thee on high; thou shalt triumph over all thy foes; thy friends do stand by thee, and they shall hail thee again, with warm hearts and friendly hands; thou art not yet as Job; thy friends do not contend against thee, neither charge thee with transgression, as they did Job; and they who do charge thee with transgression, their hope shall be blasted, and their prospects shall melt away as the hoar frost melteth before the burning rays of the rising sun; and also that God hath set to His hand and seal, to change the times and seasons, and to blind their minds, that they may not understand His marvelous workings, that He may prove them also, and take them in their own craftiness; also because their hearts are corrupted, and the things which they are willing to bring upon others, and love to have others suffer, may come upon themselves, to the very uttermost; that they may be disappointed also, and their hopes may be cut off; and not many years hence, that they and their posterity shall be swept from under heaven, saith God, that not one of them is left to stand by the wall: Cursed are all those that shall lift up the heel against mine anointed, saith the may bring them into bondage and death.—Wo unto them, because they have offended my little ones; they shall be severed from the ordinances of mine house, their basket shall not be full, their houses and their lands shall be empty, and they themselves shall be despised by those who have flattered them. They shall not have right to the priesthood, nor their posterity after them, from generation to generation; and it would have been better for them that a mill stone had been hung about their necks and they drowned in the depths, of the sea. Wo unto all those who drive, and murder, and testify against my people, saith the Lord of hosts, for they shall not escape the damnation of hell: behold mine eye seeth, and I know all their works, and I have in reserve, a swift judgment in the season thereof, and they shall be rewarded according to their works.

God has said, he would have a tried people, and that he would purify them as gold is purified; now, we think he has chosen his own crucible to try us, and if we should be so happy as to endure and keep the faith it will be a sign to this generation, sufficient to leave them without excuse; and that it will be a trial of our faith equal to that of Abraham or any of the ancients, and that they will not have much cause to boast over us, in the persecutions and trials they endure. After passing through so much suffering and sorrow, we trust that before long a ram may be caught in the thicket, so that the sons and daughters of abraham may be relieved from their fears and anxiety, and that their faces may once more be lighted up with joy and salvation, and be enabled to hold out unto everlasting life.

Now concerning the places for the location of the saints, we would say that we cannot counsel you in this thing as well as if we were with you; and as to the things written to you before, we did not consider them binding; we would advise, that while we remain in prison and in bondage, that the affairs of the church be conducted by a general conference of the most faithful and respectable of the authorities of the church, and that the proceedings of the same be forwarded to your humble servants, and if there be any corrections by the word of the Lord they shall be freely transmitted, and we will cheerfully approve of all things which are acceptable to God. If any thing should have been suggested by us or any names mentioned except by commandment or "thus saith the Lord," we do not consider it binding; therefore we shall not feel grieved if you should deem it wisdom to make different arrangements. We would respectfully advise the brethren, to be aware of an aspiring spirit, which has frequently urged men forward to make foul speeches and beget an undue influence in the minds of the saints and bring much sorrow and distress in the church; we would likewise say be aware of pride, for truly hath the wise man said "pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall;" outward appearance is not always a criterion for us to judge our fellow man by, but the lips frequently betray the haughty and overbearing mind. flattery also, is a deadly poison; a frank and open rebuke, provoketh a good man to emulation, and in the hour of trouble he will be your best friend, but rebuke a wicked man and you will soon see manifest, all the corruption of a wicked heart, the poison of asps is under their tongue, and they cast the saints in prison that their deeds be not reprov'd. A fanciful, flowery and heated imagination be aware of, for the things of God are of vast importance, and requires time and experience as well as deep and solemn thought to find them out; and if we would bring souls to salvation it requires that our minds should rise to the highest heavens, search into and contemplate the lowest abyss, expand wide as eternity and hold communion with Deity.

Lord, and cry they have sinned when they have not sinned before me, saith the Lord, but have done that which was meet in mine eyes, and which I commanded them; but those who cry transgression, do it; because they are the servants of sin, and are the children of disobedience themselves; and those who swear falsely against my servants, that they might bring them into bondage, and death: Wo unto them; because they have offended my little ones, they shall be severed from the ordinances of mine house; their basket shall not be full, their houses and their barns shall perish, and they themselves shall be despised by those that flattered them; they shall not have right to the Priesthood, nor their posterity after them, from generation to generation; it had been better for them that a millstone had been hanged about their necks, and they drowned in the depth of the sea.

Wo unto all those that discomfort my people, and drive, and murder, and testify against them, saith the Lord of Hosts; a generation of vipers shall not escape the damnation of hell. Behold, mine eyes seeth and knoweth all their works, and I have in reserve a swift judgment in the season thereof, for them all; for there is a time appointed for every man, according as his works shall be.

And now, beloved brethren, we say unto you, that inasmuch as God hath said that He would have a tried people, that He would purge them as gold, now we think that this time He has chosen His own crucible, wherein we have been tried; and we think, if we get through with any degree of safety, and shall have kept the faith, that it will be a sign to this generation, altogether sufficient to bear them without excuse; and we think also, it will be a trial of our faith equal to that of Abraham, and that the ancients will not have whereof to boast over us in the day of judgment, as being called to pass through heavier afflictions; that we may hold an even weight in the balances with them: but now, after having suffered so great sacrifice, and having passed through so great a season of sorrow, we trust that a ram may be caught in the thicket speedily, to relieve the sons and daughters of Abraham from their great anxiety, and to light up the lamp of salvation upon their countenances, that they may hold on now, after having gone so far unto everlasting life.

Now, brethren, concerning the places for the location of the Saints, we cannot counsel you as we would if we were present with you; and as to the things that were written heretofore, we did not consider them anything very binding, therefore we now say once for all, that we think it most proper, that the general affairs of the Church, which are necessary to be considered, while your humble servant remains in bondage, should be transacted by a general Conference of the most faithful and the most respectable of the authorities of the Church, and a minute of those transactions may be kept, and forwarded, from time to time, to your humble servant; and if there should be any corrections by the word of the Lord, they shall be freely transmitted, and your humble servant will approve all things whatsoever is acceptable unto God.

If anything should have been suggested by us, or any names mentioned, except by commandment, or thus saith the Lord, we do not consider it binding; therefore our hearts shall not be grieved if different arrangements should be entered into. Nevertheless we would suggest the propriety of being aware of an aspiring spirit, which spirit has oftentimes urged men forwards, to make foul speeches, and influence the Church to reject milder counsels, and has eventually been the means of bringing much death and sorrow upon the church.

We would say, be aware of pride also; for well and truly hath the wise man said, that pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. And again, outward appearance is not always a criterion for us to judge our fellow man; but the lips betray the haughty and overbearing imaginations of the heart; by his words and his deeds, let him be scanned. Flattery also is a deadly poison. A frank and an open rebuke provoketh a good man to emulation; and in the hour of trouble he will be your best friend; but on the other hand, it will draw out all the corruptions of a corrupt heart, and lying and the poison of asps shall be under their tongues; and they do cause the pure in heart to be cast into prison, because they want them out of their way.

A fanciful and flowery and heated imagination be aware of; because, the things of God are of deep import; and time, and experience, and careful and ponderous and solemn thoughts can only find

How much more dignified and noble are the thoughts of God than the vain imaginations of the human heart: how vain and trifling have been our spirits in our conferences and council meetings, as well as in our public and private conversations; too low and condescending, for the dignified characters of the called and chosen of God, who have been set apart in the mind of God before the foundation of the world, to hold the keys of the mysteries of those things, which have been kept hid for ages and generations, which have been revealed to babes, yea to the weak obscure, and despicable ones of the earth.

We would beseech you to bear with the infirmities of the weak, and at the same time exhort one another to a reformation, both teachers and taught, male and female, so that honesty, sobriety, candor, solemnity, plainness, meekness and virtue may characterise us from henceforth: and that we be like little children without malice, guile or hypocrisy; and now brethren after your tribulations, if you do these things, and exercise fervent prayer in the sight of God always, he shall give unto you knowledge, by his holy Spirit, yea he shall pour out the Holy Ghost in such copious effusion as have not been since the creation until now; yea, the fulness of that promise which our Fathers have waited for with such anxious expectation, which was to be revealed in the last days, and held in reserve until a time when nothing shall be withheld, when all the glories of earth and heaven, time and eternity shall be manifest to all those, who have endured valiantly for the gospel of Jesus Christ.

If there be bounds set to the heavens, the seas, the dry land, they shall be manifest, as well as the various revolutions of the sun, moon, and planets; and a full development of all the glorious laws by which they are governed shall be revealed in the "dispensation of the fulness of times" according to that which was ordained in the midst of the council of heaven in the presence of the eternal God, before this world was.

Ignorance, bigotry, and superstition are frequently in the way of the prosperity of this church, and are like the torrent of rain rushing down from the mountains, which floods the clear stream with mire and dirt, but when the storm is over and the rain has ceased the mire and dirt are washed away, and the stream again is pure and clear as the fountain, so shall the church appear when ignorance, superstition and bigotry are washed away.

What power can stay the heavens, as well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the mighty Missouri river in its course, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven upon the hearts of the Latter day saints: what is the Governor with his murderous party, but willows on the shore to stop the waters in their progress?

As well might we argue that water is not water, because the mountain torrent sends down mire and riles the crystal stream; or that fire is not fire because it can be quenched, as to say that our cause is down because renegadoes, liars, priests and murderers, who are alike tenacious of their crafts and creeds have poured down upon us a flood of dirt and mire from their strong holds, them out. Thy mind, O man! if thou wilt lead a soul unto salvation, must stretch as high as the utmost heavens, and search into and contemplate the lowest considerations of the darkest abyss, and expand upon the broad considerations of eternity's expanse; he must commune with God.

How much more dignified and noble are the thoughts of God, than the vain imaginations of the human heart! None but fools will trifle with the souls of men.

How vain and trifling have been our spirits, our Conferences, our Councils, our meetings, our private as well as public conversations—too low, too mean, too vulgar, too condescending for the dignified characters of the called and chosen of God, according to the purposes of His will, from before the foundation of the world, to hold the keys of the mysteries of those things that have been kept hid from the foundation until now, of which some have tasted a little, and on which many of them are to be poured down from heaven upon the heads of babes; yea, the weak, obscure, and despicable ones of the earth.

Therefore we beseech of you, brethren, that you bear with those who do not feel themselves more worthy than yourselves, while we exhort one another to a reformation with one and all, both old and young, teachers and taught, both high and low, rich and poor, bond and free, male and female; let honesty, and sobriety, and candour, and solemnity, and virtue, and pureness, and meekness, and simplicity, crown our heads in every place; and in fine, become as little children, without malice, guile, or hypocrisy.

And now, brethren, after your tribulations, if you do these things, and exercise fervent prayer and faith in the sight of God always, He shall give unto you knowledge by His Holy Spirit, yea by the unspeakable gift of the Holy Ghost, that has not been revealed since the world was until now; which our forefathers have waited with anxious expectation to be revealed in the last times, which their minds were pointed to, by the angels, as held in reserve for the fulness of their glory; a time to come in the which nothing shall be withheld, whether there be one God or many Gods, they shall be manifest; all thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, shall be revealed and set forth upon all who have endured valiantly for the Gospel of Jesus Christ; and also if there be bounds set to the heavens, or to the seas; or to the dry land, or to the sun, moon, or stars; all the times of their revolutions; all the appointed days, months, and years, and all the days of their days, months, and years, and all their glories, laws, and set times, shall be revealed, in the days of the dispensation of the fulness of times, according to that which was ordained in the midst of the Council of the Eternal God of all other Gods, before this world was, that should be reserved unto the finishing and the end thereof, when every man shall enter into His eternal presence, and into His immortal rest.

But I beg leave to say unto you, brethren, that ignorance, superstition, and bigotry placing itself where it ought not, is oftentimes in the way of the prosperity of this Church; like the torrent of rain from the mountains, that floods the most pure and crystal stream with mire, and dirt, and filthiness, and obscures everything that was clear before, and all hurls along in one general deluge; but time weathers tide; and notwithstanding we are rolled in for the time being by the mire of the flood, the next surge peradventure, as time rolls on, may bring us to the fountain as clear as crystal, and as pure as snow; while the filthiness, flood-wood, and rubbish is left and purged out by the way.

How long can rolling waters remain impure? What power shall stay the heavens? As well might man stretch forth his puny arm to stop the Missouri river in its decreed course, or to turn it up stream, as to hinder the Almighty from pouring down knowledge from heaven, upon the heads of the Latter-day Saints.

What is Boggs or his murderous party, but wimbling willows upon the shore to catch the flood-wood? As well might we argue that water is not water, because the mountain torrents send down mire and roils the crystal stream, although afterwards renders it more pure than before; or that fire is not fire, because it is of a quenched nature, by pouring on the flood; as to say that our cause is down because renegadoes, liars, priests, thieves, and murderers, who are all alike tenacious of their crafts and creeds, have poured down, from their spiritual wickedness in high places, and from their strong holds of the devil, a flood of dirt and mire and filthiness and vomit upon our heads.

No, they may rage, with all the powers of hell and pour forth their wrath, indignation and cruelty like the burning lava of mount Vesuvius, yet, shall Mormonism stand.

Truth is Mormonism, and God is its author, by HIM we received our birth, by HIM we were called to a dispensation of his gospel, in the beginning of the fulness of times, it was by him we received the book of Mormon, by him we remain unto this day and shall continue to remain if it be to his glory; we are determined to endure tribulation as good soldiers, unto the end: when you read this, you will learn, that prison walls, iron doors, screeching hinges, guards and jailors have not destroyed our confidence, but we say, and that from experience, that they are calculated in their very nature to make the soul of an honest man, feel stronger than the powers of hell.

But we must bring our epistle to a close, and send our respects to fathers, mothers, wives, and children, brothers and sisters, and be assured we hold them in sacred remembrance.

We should be glad to hear from elder Rigdon, George W. Robinson, and elder Cahoon, we remember them and would like to jog their memory a little on the fable of the bear and the two friends, who mutually agreed to stand by each other; we could also mention Uncle John Smith and others; a word of consolation and a blessing would not come amiss from any body, while we are so closely whispered by the bear.

Our respects and love to all the virtuous saints. We are, dear brethren, your fellow sufferers and prisoners of Jesus Christ for the gospel's sake, and for the hope of glory which is in us. Amen

No! God forbid. Hell may pour forth its rage like the burning lava of mount Vesuvius, or of Etna, or of the most terrible of the burning mountains; and yet shall "Mormonism" stand. Water, Water, Fire, Truth, and God are all the same. Truth is "Mormonism." God is the author of it. He is our Shield. It is by Him we received our birth. It was by His voice that we were called to a dispensation of His Gospel in the beginning of the fulness of times. It was by Him we received the Book of Mormon; and it was by him that we remain unto this day; and by Him we shall remain, if it shall be for our glory; and in His Almighty name we are determined to endure tribulation as good soldiers unto the end. But, brethren, we shall continue to offer further reflections in our next Epistle. You will learn by the time you have read this, and if you do not learn it, you may learn it, that walls and irons, doors and creaking hinges, and half scared to death guards and jailors, grinning like some damned spirits, lest an innocent man should make his escape to bring to light the damnable deeds of a murderous mob, is calculated in its very nature to make the soul of an honest man feel stronger than the powers of hell.

But we must bring our epistle to a close. We send our respects to fathers, mothers, wives and children, brothers and sisters; we hold them in the most sacred remembrance.

We feel to inquire after Elder Rigdon, if he has not forgotten us; it has not been signified to us by his scrawl. Bro. George W. Robinson also, and Elder Cahoon, we remember him, but would like to jog his memory a little on the fable of the bear and the two friends who mutually agreed to stand by each other. And perhaps it would not be amiss to mention uncle John, and various others. A word of consolation and a blessing would not come amiss from anybody, while we are being so closely whispered by the bear.

But we feel to excuse every body and every thing, yea the more readily when we contemplate that we are in the hands of worse than a bear, for the bear would not prey upon a dead carcase.

Our respects and love and fellowship to all the virtuous Saints. We are your brethren and fellow-sufferers, and prisoners of Jesus Christ for the Gospel's sake, and for the hope of glory which is in us. Amen.

—Millennial Star 17: 52-56.

THE readiness of many as in the past to be duped by "blind credulity" and superstition manifests the need of discrimination based upon a proper education in both spiritual and temporal matters. The true and the false exist side by side, but the masses, as in the past, are easily misled. It is to be hoped that the results of such work as reported below, together with that of all others who deceive and are self-deceived, will be such as to reveal the necessity of a strict adherence to the truth in spiritual things and also to the sensible and sound in earthly affairs. A spiritual man ought to be peculiarly free from wild notions and all forms of hallucination. He who has the Spirit of truth within the heart should show forth the spirit of a sound mind and the results of a proper judgment as a consequence, in all his work. But many "don't think," but run with the crowd after the sensational;—

GALESBURG, Ill., May 27.—Schrader, the divine healer, suddenly left this city last night, and when last seen was pounding ties along the Santa Fé track east of the city. Schrader came here last Saturday, and established himself in a boarding house. He advertised that he would cure people free of charge, and had inserted in the papers an engraving that showed his resemblance to Christ.

At his first meal here he sat barefooted at the table, and when remonstrance was made asserted: "Christ went shoeless at meal times."

Great crowds of people streamed into the house to get cured, and found that before they could get treatment they must purchase Schrader's photograph and a cotton handkerchief, on which Schrader's name was printed, and which he blessed. The two cost fifty cents. The handkerchief was to be applied to the diseased part. A local paper exposed the scheme vigorously yesterday afternoon, denounced Schrader as a swindler, and called on the authorities to investigate.

The healer did not stop for the investigation, but packed up his robe, dressed in citizen's clothes, and left town with four hundred dollars of Galesburg cash in his pocket.

LANSING, Mich., May 26.—Modern day

seers and fortune-tellers will do well to steer clear of Michigan, the Supreme Court having, in an opinion filed to-day, laid down a rule which lays them subject to fine and imprisonment. Last year Arthur Elmer appeared at Ionia and advertised extensively his power to foretell the future. He was patronized liberally, but after advising a woman to leave her husband, saying that while in a trance he had seen the latter in the act of killing her, he was arrested as a disorderly person and convicted. This judgment was affirmed.

THIS from the telegraphic report of proceedings of the Presbyterian General Assembly, dated May 22, is reprinted for the benefit of all whom it may concern or interest. It will be noticed that the item refers to the Presbyterian "Standards" and to the admission of heathen polygamous converts of India:—

Stated Clerk Roberts of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on behalf of the committee on constitution, reported that in compliance with the instructions of the assembly of 1894 the new edition has been issued. The substance of the report is that all the books of God are given by inspiration, and that all standards are founded upon and in accordance with Holy Scriptures.

The Rev. Dr. E. R. Craven, of Philadelphia, as chairman, reported in behalf of the special committee on the memorial of the Synod of India on the propriety of admitting polygamous converts from heathenism to baptism. The committee recommended that the memorial be not granted. The report was received, but action on its adoption was deferred on request of the Rev. Dr. Wisner until the committee on bills and overtures reported on a similar matter from Utah.

THE Nevada, Missouri, Director of April 17, contains the following notice headed, "Caught by Cupid":—

Married, on Sunday last: Willis W. Kearney, foreman of the Nevada Director printing office, and Miss Ermina A. Perkins. Our best wishes for the happy pair, and may they "live long and prosper."

Bro. Kearney was for some years engaged in the composing and book-binding departments of the Herald Office. Sr. "Mina" has written for Autumn Leaves and the Hope. We extend congratulations and best wishes to Bro. and Sr. Kearney.

IN addition to what appears on the HERALD cover we give the following extract from a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune. Many of our readers preserve such statistics, hence we publish quite a full account of items gathered from the public press:—

May, 1896, will be remembered as a month of disaster. On the 3d inst. 12 persons were killed by an explosion in Cincinnati; on the 15th, 120 by a cyclone in Texas; on the 17th, 33 by cyclones in Kentucky and Kansas; on the 18th, 44 by a cyclone in Nebraska; on the 21st, 10 by a cyclone in Oklahoma; on the 22d, 5 by a cyclone in Missouri; on the 24th, 40 by a cyclone in Iowa; on the 25th, 86 by cyclones in Michigan and Oklahoma and 40 by a cloudburst at McGregor, Iowa; and on the 26th, 12 by a storm at Cairo and between 75 and 100 by the fall of a bridge at Victoria, B. C. It will be observed that of this total much the largest number were victims of disasters beyond the power of man to prevent.

A DISCUSSION between Bro. Thomas W. Williams and Rev. Clark Braken, is to begin Wednesday, June 3, at Fontanelle, Adair County, Iowa. The Rev. Clark Braden, true to his instincts, did not choose to meet Bro. Williams "on the square," but proceeded to Fontanelle, and gave some lectures in an "Expose of Mormonism," before the debate was to begin.

Of it in a card dated Council Bluffs, May 29, Bro. Williams said:—

Clark Braden wrote me he could not possibly be in Fontanelle before June 3, and now a card from Bro. Butler reads: "Braden will expose Mormonism here Saturday night" (May 30)! Well, unless unforeseen intervention occurs "when the general roll is called, I'll be there" to hear his "expose." I go trusting in God, with not a doubt as to his power, nor a question as to the truthfulness of his work—the Spirit evidencing.

"That soul that on Jesus still leans for repose,
I will not, I cannot desert to his foes
That soul though all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

Don't forget us, brethren, in your prayers to the good Father that we may have strength to reflect his character and assimilate his purity.

THE following from Bro. M. H. Bond in regard to the terrible tornado at St. Louis, will be interesting:—

2512 Slattery Street,

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 28.

Brother Joseph Smith, Dear brother:—St. Louis' worst disaster came last evening about five o'clock, in the shape of a tornado. I send you early morning papers; later news report a worse condition; 500 to 1,000 lives lost, incalculable loss of property is reported. Just came from the levee, and some of the wrecked district, and the scene is simply appalling in the lesson of man's helplessness in the clutch of a force which God is using in an appeal to the animal sense. Would God that Saints were willing to live above the need of these lessons and warnings. The scene of "flame and devouring tempest" across the Mississippi River, in East St. Louis last night, was simply terrible in its grandeur, and the appearance of the sky was awful as the storm came on.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. John H. Lake, Shaffer Town, Ontario, May 22, we learn that he had held meetings at Tilbury Centre, and three at Shaffer Town, the first preaching ever done by us there; prospects in his mission were fair.

Bro. Fred A. Smith went to Omaha, Nebraska, his field of labor, on Tuesday, the 26th inst.

Elders Walker and Fackrel, missionaries of the Utah Church, and who have been in the vicinity of Lamoni for some time, have left this city of Saints, accompanied by Elder Johnson, missionary in charge. We are not informed concerning their future movements.

Bro. G. H. Hulmes and family visited at Lamoni during the past week, enroute home from Independence, where they have also visited relatives and friends. Bro. Hulmes is president of the branch at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in which he has rendered years of faithful service. He reports the work progressing in the Iron City. He thinks, however, that the appointment of laborers to devote their entire time to pastoral and missionary work is essential to the welfare and progress of all large branches of the church.

Bro. J. B. Roush, appointed to labor in Colorado, made a brief call at Lamoni enroute to his field. He left for the West on Saturday, the 23d.

Local elders, missionaries, and Sunday school workers are active in the regions adjacent to Lamoni, and many points are being reached in the regions round about. As at other points, there yet remain many places to be visited reminding those who desire to reap that opportunities are not lacking.

The Methodist General Conference at Cleveland, Ohio, finally took action admitting lay delegates to the General Assembly, but left it optional with them to sit with or separate from the clergy.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, in session at Saratoga, New York, adopted a memorial asking that the State and National governments appropriate no money for sectarian purposes.

Press dispatches are not always strictly correct in statement. Last week's cablegrams announced that official representatives of Judaism would not be permitted to take part in the receptions of the Czar, while this week's dispatches state that Jewish Rabbis wore white silk robes to mark the first reception of the Czar to representatives of the Jewish Church. It is probable, however, that the heathen orientals were more freely and openly received. It is to be hoped that Nicholas will relax the past harsh measures adopted by the Russian government against the Hebrews.

Between 1,500 and 2,500 people, including many personages of high rank, were trampled to death at Moscow, Russia, May 30. The catastrophe occurred at a public feast, which had been spread in the Hodynsky Plain, in front of the Petrovsky Palace, in honor of the coronation of the Czar. It is difficult to give the exact number of the victims, but 1,138 bodies have been taken out of the wreck, and 470 injured people have been removed to hospitals. The death list may run up to 3,000. Recent cloudbursts and tornadoes with attendant loss of life are reported from several points since the St. Louis disaster occurred. Twenty-seven persons were killed by a cloudburst at Seneca, Missouri, May 30.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

ELDER THOMAS DALEY, Windsor, California, late date:—

I have been preaching here ten nights to a good congregation. Have baptized one and expect to trouble the water again to-morrow. I have baptized fourteen since my report to conference. Have many calls from the people to preach for them. I have none to help me in my mission as yet, as Bro. Newton has not returned from the East. I shall do all in my power with God's help to spread the glad tidings in my mission.

Bro. J. D. Erwin, Harp, Alabama, May 18:—

I have been busy ever since I returned from General Conference preaching in Butler, Conecuh, and Monroe Counties. Have baptized some. Will commence here next Saturday.

Bro. L. H. Ezzell, writing from Brownington, Missouri, May 25:—

Am home from Webb City, where I preached twelve discourses. . . . I am on the volunteer list in the ministry again this year. . . . I feel good in the work in hope.

Bro. J. C. Foss, Little Deer Isle, Maine, May 24:—

This morning I baptized four more at this place. Others are near the kingdom.

Bro. Michael Rasmussen, Sykeston, North Dakota, recent date:—

If any Latter Day Saints live near here I would like to hear from them; or if any think of moving here I will answer correspondence.

LEARN OF ME.

"My yoke is easy, and my burden is light."—Jesus.
Since I learned of the Lord his sweet riddle,
That his love the burden makes light,
And his yoke the badge of his favor,
I wear it with joy and delight.
But once, when he first bade me wear it,

With tears I shrank from its touch,
Till he said: "Who beareth it cheerful Shall find that God loveth him much."

Obeying, I lifted the burden,
And humbly bent to its weight,
Yet doubting why, if he loved me,
He had set me a task so great.

For I thought if he loved me truly,
He would wish me to happy be;
I did not think of the happiness
To be found in his love for me.

And it seemed such a cruel lesson,—
For my eyes were blinded with tears,—
And I saw not the love and patience
That guided and guarded my years.

How kindly his presence walked with me,
Directing my steps to the right!
How often he carried my burden,
Or aid from his hand made it light!

Till slowly I woke to the knowledge:
The burden I shrank so to bear,
Contained only treasure and jewels,
Rich, and precious, and rare.

All mine: His gift for my portion,
The wealth of his boundless love;
And new tokens each day he addeth
From his treasure of bliss above.

And now I can never grow weary,
The burden of love lightens care,
And I know that my burden containeth
The crown that, if faithful, I'll wear.
ELEANOR.

TRUE REST.

BY AGNES MOORE.

"O, some seek bread—no more—life's mere subsistence,
And some seek wealth and ease—the common quest;
And some seek fame, that hovers in the distance,
But all are seeking rest."

THE flippant remark that such and such a one was "born tired" has often been heard, and it might be said, with a degree of truth, of us all, for we scarcely more than reach the years that bring a realization of what life really is, with its manifold duties, its sacred burdens, its joys, laden with responsibilities, and its inevitable sorrows and cares, before our weak mortal natures are wearied, and we begin to long for rest. Not the rest that means cessation from labor, but an inward peace and calm that the fleeting pleasures, or honors, or wealth of this world can never bestow. This spiritual rest comes only from a knowledge of, and trust in, the Almighty, and a right conception of his merciful dealings with us and of our duty to him, and, alas! how few there are who find it. The old-time prophet tells us the wicked are like the troubled sea which cannot rest, and the comparison is a true one. Restless, eager, tossed hither and thither, no quiet, no calm, no rest; thus do thousands of weary, storm-tossed souls struggle through a dark and hopeless existence.

A little child lay dying; fever had led the mind into the cruel fancy that he was far away from his loving mother's care, and so, hour after hour, he moaned these sad words: "Take me to Mamma, O, please take me home to Mamma." In vain did his sorrowing mother clasp her loved boy in her arms and assure him of her presence and love; the painful vagaries still possessed his mind, until, without regaining consciousness, his spirit passed away, while his heart-broken mother would have given her own life to have been able to reassure and comfort his weary, longing little soul before he was taken from her.

In accepting the Savior's tender and loving invitation, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest," every blinded and sin-sick soul can find peace and rest, peace which passeth all understanding, and a rest that remains for the people of God. It remains with us and for us, if we look confidently beyond our weak and sinful selves to him, as the only sure foundation upon which we can rest. O, it seems so easy and natural, through Divine grace, to lay hold of the precious promises of guidance, and peace, and rest, if only we believe and strive to obey.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

SR. POLLY E. MORRIS, of Lebanon, Oregon, requests the faith and prayers of the Union in her behalf, that God may restore her to health if consistent with his will.

LAMONT, Iowa.

Editor Home Column:—While reading the excellent article in the Home Column on the subject of tight lacing, I was much impressed with the idea that it is a move in the right direction. I wish the subject could be presented in such a plain, practical, and convincing way that every girl and woman in the church who has not done so already would discard corsets and tight clothes. I need not say that I wish they would discard them never to resume them again, for there is not one who, having once effected a reform, would ever have the least inclination to return to her former condition of slavery.

The corset is injurious and it is ignorance and folly to claim that it is not. The woman, young or old, is a cripple while she feels a real necessity for anything to keep her erect, other than nature has given her. Nature demands no superficial skeleton of bones, cords, and muscles, but only the proper use of those already possessed by every human being.

Disuse of a muscle causes it to become weak. The muscles that are bound by tight clothes can never develop as they should. Women who wear tight clothes fill only the upper part of the lungs in breathing. Free respiration is impossible. The internal organs are pressed from their natural position, and considering all these things there is little wonder at the innumerable ailments of woman.

It is an insult to our Maker to endeavor to improve by means of the corset the form he has given us. Thoughtful, educated people no longer admire the corseted woman with the wasp waist and tight dress. There is no necessity for the close gown—they are not graceful, nor can those who wear them appear nor feel at ease. Let us as true, progressive Saints, lay aside false pride and dress as nature and therefore as God intended us to dress. We need not dress inartistically, but we can dress sensibly.

In my physical culture work I have many times been asked the question, and it is the all-important one, "What shall I substitute for the corset?" My answer is invariably, Substitute strong muscles! Do not substitute the boned or corded waists—they are little better than the corset. Wear additional undergarments for warmth if necessary, for there is little warmth in whalebones. Reform the underclothes by suspending from the shoulders those garments that otherwise obstruct free muscular activity, chest expansion, and circulation; then will breathing, walking, and all healthful exercise become a pleasure. Control the muscles! Sit, stand, walk properly with the chest raised, abdomen in proper position, hips and shoulders even, and head erect. Stand and walk with the weight of the body on the balls of the feet rather than on the heels, in order to keep the abdomen, hips, chest, and shoulders in correct position—and all these things are more easily accomplished without the corset than with it. In other words, strengthen the muscles by proper use continually, and we can be just as erect and much more graceful, comfortable, and healthful without corsets.

Many prominent educators, as well as the schools and professions of vocal culture, elocution, and physical culture, are taking a decided stand for right in this matter, and doing much to eradicate the evil from society. The time is not far distant when there will be a radical reform in woman's dress—it has already begun, and all thinking people will soon be falling in line with the movement. Let us as Saints remember the injunction to "come up higher," and not be backward in accepting all that may prove beneficial in developing us, physically, morally, and therefore spiritually.

In gospel bonds,

RUTH L. COBB.

[We cannot refrain from expressing our pleasure in and most cordial approval of the foregoing article from the pen of our young and talented sister. To one who has labored, longed, and waited in faith for the young in the church to come to the rescue of God's truth, such communications are like the blossoms of spring, bearing promise of the fruitful boughs in summer and autumn time. If only the young knew their power! knew how great the influence is which they exert upon the young, never would those who love the Lord let the season of youth pass without sowing broadcast the seeds to bloom and ripen into precious fruit as life grows on apace.

How pleased we are, too, to place before our readers the article from the pen of our young friend, Miss Agnes Moore. She is not of our own peculiar faith, but that she truly loves the Lord Jesus Christ we think none can doubt, and we are thankful—always thankful—to hear from her.

It seems needless to say that after so long a time of silence the readers of our Column will greet with pleasure the contribution from Eleanor. She has been very ill but is some better, and we hope not only that she may be perfectly restored to health but that our readers may often be instructed and cheered by her pen.—ED.]

"CHILDREN'S DAY."

HELEN PEARSON BARNARD, IN Superintendent and Teacher.

LITTLE LIGHTS.

THE following exercise, with slight variations, appeared some time since in "Over Sea and Land," Philadelphia.

It has proved so very effective that we recommend it for Children's Sunday.

The first group of children wear on their breasts shields of white cardboard, bearing in red letters the name Faith, Love, Joy, or whatever they represent. The second group may wear the costume of the country they personate, or, if preferred, crowns made of cardboard and lettered with the name of the country. Dennison's gummed letters make the arrangement of these crowns and shields a very simple matter.

OPENING RECITATION.

The world is still in need of light,
Dark places need the radiance bright
Of faith and love, with heavenly glory;
And all who know should haste to tell
The tidings glad they know so well,
The old, old, loving, tender story.
The Little Lights, the children, too,
Before they have great things to do,
Must do their little share of duty.
No hand too small to bear a light
To make earth's darkened places bright
With beams of love and truth and beauty.
A hundred tapers lifted high
Will give more light, both far and nigh,
Than one large lamp in shining.
So light the tapers, let them burn,
And every child take one in turn,
Their beauteous rays combining.

(First group of children march in and take their places at the right of the speaker, each child bearing a wax taper. Faith alone, leading, has her taper lighted. As each one recites she lights her taper from the one that precedes her.)

FIRST GROUP. NO. 1 FAITH.

I carry the light of Faith;
Christ, who gives it, can keep it bright,
Faith will shine in the darkest night;
I carry the light of Faith.

Joy burns first and its blaze I touch,
And kindle peace that is loved so much;

Patience is what I bear;
I light my candle from gentle Peace,
The flame burns on, it must not cease;
Patience is what I bear.

NO. 7. PITY.

Pity is what I bear;
Patience first must constantly shine,
And then sweet Pity, with light divine;
Pity is what I bear.

NO. 8. COURAGE.

Comfort is what I bear.

NO. 10. GOOD CHEER.

I carry the light of Good Cheer;
Comfort shines with a steady flame,
And kindles Good Cheer, till its light is the same.
I carry the light of Good Cheer.

(Group sing "Jesus bids us shine," after which all recite in concert:—)

Here in our own little corner
Brightly our tapers must shine.
And all through the borders of Home-land—
Far out to the uttermost line—
We must shed all the beautiful brightness
That God will allow us to give;
Then send out the light to all nations,
For only by giving we live.

(Second group march, in taking places opposite the Little Lights, each country careful to face the light that is to respond to its appeal. As each light responds, she crosses the platform and lights the unlighted taper carried by the representative of the heathen land.)

NO. 1. INDIA.

India begs for light, more light,
Hasten with your tapers bright,

FAITH RESPONDS.

Faith will light a glowing spark
When all else is sad and dark.
I bring you my little light.

NO. 2. CHINA.

But, in his wisdom, in his love,
He kindles little lights below
And bids us shine to serve him so.
By deeds of love, by gifts and prayer,
We set lights burning everywhere.
Come, come and join this happy band,
There's need of every little hand
To set the lights in every land.

Come, receive your great reward.
All your work of love I see,

Welcome, ye blessed,
Ye blessed of the Lord.

2. Every nation, every tribe,
Endless praise to Christ ascribe,
Ye who showed one soul the way
Hear your loving Master say:—

SUGGESTIONS AS TO CHILDREN'S DAY.

BRIGHT, cheerful songs about birds, flowers, and children are appropriate. Such may be found in "Little Pilgrim Songs," pages 1, 28, 72, 80.

Scripture readings by children are effective
—such as, "Song of Solomon," 2: 11-13;
Matthews 6: 28-30; 18: 1-7.

SUPERINTENDENT'S ADDRESS.

To My Fellow Sunday School Workers; Greeting:—Having been placed in charge of the work of the General Sunday School Association, by the late convention at Kirtland, we send you this greeting and ask your hearty coöperation in trying to advance this great work, especially in the department in which our part thereof is assigned. We are here to labor together in the interests of the work intrusted to our care for the coming year. And that we may best do this, let us freely confer with one another that our actions may be wise and effective; let us keep ourselves in full touch with the progress and needs of the work, and seize our every opportunity to place it a step in advance.

In most respects the outlook for the coming year is, to me, very encouraging. The visible obstacles in our way are few; in fact, there is nothing for the faithful and persistent laborer to fear. But to the contrary, opportunities for work and development, opportunities one after another, are presenting themselves to us. There are many settlements and branches without schools yet needing and desiring them. There are other schools that desire to be organized into district associations; and still more schools now running that can be encouraged, improved, and enlarged. There is practically no end to the opportunities for work.

There will, during the ensuing summer, be a number of Saints' reunions. These, we have found to be splendid places for Sunday school work. There are always a number of children to while away the time for eight or ten days. Many of these are too small to understand the preaching. Would it not be wise to have a few sessions of Sunday school that they may have some teaching too? There should and can be some Sunday school work at every reunion. Will the local or district workers look after these opportunities? If you are so situated that you cannot attend to it, please correspond with us and we may be able to help you out.

Some have asked us to visit their districts and conventions. To this we reply that we will gladly do so whenever practicable and necessary. The item of expense frequently renders it impracticable. However, if the necessity is sufficient to justify, let us hear from you and we will do the best we can for you.

Our late convention gave expression to a growing demand for more original Sunday school literature. This means that we want more from our own workers. And this means that more of our own workers must write and write oftener. We have the Hope for the children, the departments in the Herald and Autumn Leaves for the youth and the more elderly. But they have not always been well supported with contributions, thus obliging the editors to write or to select the subject matter. This evinces a neglect upon our part. Let us realize that the work is ours; that upon us falls responsibility whether we are faithful to the trust or not. Will you not try? Sit down and write a short child-story—brief and simple, or childlike—for the Hope; a short, pithy article or paragraph for the Herald or Autumn Leaves. Make it short. Paragraphs are more often read and appreciated than long, heavy articles. Do not delay it. Next week will come and find you no nearer ready than now. Begin now. "Where there's a will there's a way."

We hope ere the year is ended to be able to recount our advanced steps in many directions; to learn of new schools and new district associations being formed, and of much advancement being made in the work of the older ones; and to number with the already large army of resolute and determined workers others of the ministry and laity who have not heretofore felt the necessity of helping in this department of church work.

We feel very keenly the responsibility of the position we occupy, and assure you that any suggestion, information, or advice you may be able to offer will be thankfully received and appreciated. Let us hear from you.

In writing, send all matter pertaining to reports, or minutes of organization, or other matter of a clerical nature to the General Secretary, Bro. W. N. Robinson, Independence, Missouri. All other matter sent to me will receive immediate attention or be properly referred.

I would like if each district superintendent and secretary would send me name and post office address and state of what district; also superintendents of schools not in a district association. I have a matter of interest I wish to write you about. Please let me hear from you soon.

Hopefully, I am your brother and colaborer,
T. A. HOUGAS,

Superintendent of General Association.
HENDERSON, Mills County, Iowa, May 17, 1896.

Bro. C. W. Sutherland of Webb City, Mo., writes:—

Our enrollment is 96 with an average attendance of 73. We have 10 classes with first-class teachers, as they are always at their post, and if any scholars are absent they are soon looked after. We use two banners which have proven to be of great benefit, in the way of regular attendance and liberal collections. On one we have the following: "We are rewarded according to our works." This we change from class to class once a month; the class having the least number of absentees and tardy ones gets it for the next month. The other banner we change from week to week. It is a reward to the class giving the largest collection. We have on this, "The Lord loves a cheerful giver."

The banners are of Gobelin blue silk, the letters are painted on each with gold leaf and bronze, the banner being trimmed with metal fringe and gold cord and fastened to an eight-foot standard. We have two scholars write essays each Sunday and read at the beginning of the school, using such subjects, "What we must do to be good;" "What it takes to make a good Sunday school." It is surprising to hear the ideas advanced. We are not like a great many schools,—need the attendance of the parents, which is almost a necessity,—but with few exceptions young and old—all—attend, therefore we try to make it interesting for all. Our school is growing. Later I will mail you an essay or two written by some of the scholars."

We are glad to receive such interesting reports as this, and we will gladly read the forthcoming essays. We want to hear what you are doing to get out of the common everyday rut of "come-if-you-please, if not, no questions asked." These short articles are read and relished by all, when they are so full of good practical thought as Bro. Sutherland's.—ED.

Letter Department.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 18.

Editors Herald:—The gospel work is moving to the front in this place. It seems the time has come for the people of the great furniture city to hear the truth. Bro. M. H. Bond favored us with several able discourses while here, which made many friends for himself and the cause. W. J. Smith, of Detroit, has been assisting us for the last two weeks, and by his clean-cut arguments convinced and convicted six more, and yesterday they were buried with Christ in baptism—Bro. Smith officiating. Five more have given their names for baptism and will be baptized next Sunday by the writer. Many others are on their way to the kingdom.

A Methodist lady asked her pastor for a letter. He said, "Oh no; not to join the Mormons." But she is coming to be baptized next Sunday, so she said, letter or no letter.

Nature's fan got to running last Sunday and its breeze uprooted trees, leveled fences, demolished old buildings, tore down telephone and telegraph poles, and raised havoc in general, and the sun shone all the time. The foliage of the trees looks as if it had been bitten by a hard frost. I never experienced such a gale in clear weather before. It was certainly the tail end of a Kansas twister.

This is the most prosperous season for fruit and crops that Michigan has ever seen. We are full of faith as to the future.

In bonds,

R. E. GRANT.

MARLIN, Texas, May 25.

Editors Herald:—I came here about ten months ago and there were none of the Saints here and I went to work to convert some of the people. I talked with Bro. McCallister and wife until they were strong in the faith, and then we talked with others, and they believed. Then Bro. Nunley came up and preached for us and baptized eight. We could not get a hall here to preach in, so we went out about four miles east and got the use of a schoolhouse. There are several more that believe in the latter-day work and are now ready for baptism.

It seems to be my lot to live with the world. I am a bachelor and have no home, though I feel that I am doing something for the truth. The people in Marlin are, I believe, mostly Baptists and Methodists, and are very creedish. Bro. Nunley promised to come and preach for us about the 1st of July. I think there will be several baptized. Those that were baptized are strong in the faith and speak out boldly for the word. It looks as though the hastening time has about commenced. I desire the prayers of the Saints.

Yours in the faith,

J. A. ROBINSON.

FANNING, Kan., May 15.

Editor's Herald:—My humble testimony to the divinity of the latter-day wonder is yet unwavering. This is a consoling thought, and is a source of satisfaction to the writer, feeling desirous to be ever mindful of the injunction to "prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

Judging from observation and experience the church militant is onward.

"God is marshalling his army
For the rescue of his truth."

For one I want to ever appreciate the goodness of God in sending us the gospel to lighten our minds, and the pathway of life with its rays. How differently we now view things to what we used to! and what a charm life with all its surroundings has to those who hunger and thirst after righteousness! It is written, "The peace of God which passeth all understanding." This we know cannot be felt, neither can it always be realized, by the natural man. It is found within the soul who amidst adversity as well as in prosperity leans upon Jesus the Christ; and after all there is a blessed reality in the religion of the meek and lowly One, that, to say the least, is equal to the life that now is. It was Christ who once made the promise, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." And we thank God for it, for we know that those precious words of the Master are in force to-day, and are as applicable now as when they were uttered eighteen long centuries ago. Paul wrote, " whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."—Rom. 15: 4. Therefore, in order that we might learn concerning the true gospel, we will do well to observe the record of the testimony given which says: "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."—Mark 16: 21.

How harmoniously do the words "the Lord working with them" agree with the Psalmist wherein he says: "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it."—Ps. 127: 1. As the gospel of saving souls originated with God, so we may reasonably expect the divine presence with his authorized ministry in superintending the affairs of his church on the earth, as being "the author and finisher of our faith."

I am still striving in my weakness to magnify the name of a Saint, with the help and grace of God, and feel a deep and earnest sympathy for all the people of God. Each day is precious to those who have a sincere longing to "purify themselves," "even as he is pure."

We have but little preaching in our branch at present, and as some of our members are widely scattered, few have the privilege of hearing. Our Sabbath school and social meetings are well attended, however, and the Saints are blessed in so assembling.

"O, how good it is to be blessed And dwell where love in Jesus is."

Ever hopeful in the ultimate triumph of Zion's blest cause, I conclude.

FRANK J. PIERCE.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 27.

Editors Herald:—Bro. W. A. Smith, of Persia, Iowa, left here on the morning of the 15th inst. for Philadelphia—his new field of labor. He is full of life and Western vim and evidently means success. We were very favorably impressed with him, on this first acquaintance, and feel assured that he is not looking for a place to ground arms. May fortune favor him in his new department.

On Monday the 13th, in answer to telegram I went to Glenwood, Ohio, to see Bro. Butler McMillen, who got badly burnt the day previous, from an explosion of gas in a coal mine. On arriving there I soon learned that the burning proved fatal, and that he died about eight o'clock that morning. I remained over and accompanied those in charge of the remains to New Philadelphia next day, and on Wednesday, at two p.m., conducted the funeral services from the Saints' church at that place. Some of the officials of the mining company were present, together with a goodly number of relatives, friends, and sympathizers, all of whom manifest much sympathy for the bereaved wife and daughter. Bro. McMillen was a member of the church, though something of a wanderer; yet he possessed many excellent qualities, and was kind and hospitable to the ministry, and generous. At one time he threw himself in the breach and saved Bro. L. R. Devore from mob violence, because it did not care to grapple with one capable of making so stubborn a resistance. In the prime of manhood he has gone to his reward.

On the way home, Thursday, I attended at Cleveland awhile the great Methodist Quadrennial Conference, to note how they do things. It proved to be a lively body. The question of electing a colored bishop was before the assembly and the colored brethren were in possession of the platform, and loud oratory was flowing profusely and interestingly, the conference applauding. The advantage that would come to them to have a bishop of African descent was set forth in strong terms. Some reasons assigned were, they had a proper man; there was a necessity; they had a large constituency: it would help them in the South by reason of the prestige, and color should count for nothing.

When the speakers were done it was apparent that there was a strong sentiment, if not largely prevailing, in their favor. But the shrewed managers soon rushed in and counteracted it. It was apparent at once that there was to be no colored bishop. It had been proposed to elect three new bishops, so a move was made to reduce the number to two, which carried, and this insured the defeat of the proposed colored bishop. Thus the colored brethren were left in the dark. It was amusing to see how skillfully it was managed in order to make the colored men believe that the conference was sincere and made no distinction between race and color, and that if it was necessary it was willing to grant them a bishop, and still at the same time keep them from getting one just because they were colored. Nothing like knowing how to do it!

The discipline will be revised, but sprinkling infants is to be retained at all costs, just because "Methodists have done so much to support it and cannot afford to abandon it now." Have not seen any Bible reference for it.

Meetings were well attended here yesterday and were interesting. Bro. W. H. Garrett held forth in the morning and the writer at evening. Bro. and Sr. Puggsley and Sr. Temberley, from London, Canada, were among the auditors in the morning. Over on a visit to Kirtland.

The Saints in East are so well equipped for service that the missionary in charge has not thought it necessary to send out a special address as yet. He hopes to meet the most of them, at least ere long.

Have just received word that our neighbor and friend, Mr. Makepeace, is sick at Columbus, Ohio, and not expected to live. He requests, in case of his death, that I attend the obsequies, in charge. So may be detained here a few days, or may not.

There is a hopeful side to things in the main, so far as known.

TEMPLE, Ohio, May 26.—I mailed a letter to Herald at Cleveland yesterday, and it says the ordination of a colored bishop was defeated, etc. All true enough, but towards the close of conference the colored sentiment gained, and so a colored bishop has been appointed. Say by note in said letter, that the conference changed in opinion near its close and made selections of a colored bishop—Dr. J. C. Hartzell.

I leave to-night for various points east. Windy and dry here.

Fraternally,
WILLIAM H. KELLEY.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., May 18.

Editors Herald:—We have been greatly blessed of late by additions to our numbers; not so much by new converts, but by the Saints moving in and settling here. The beginning of the work here was three years ago when Brn. Haws and Pickering came with the gospel tent. Prior to that time I believe the only Saints residing here were the family of Bro. N. S. Moses and Sr. Ella Root. Since that time the work has been kept alive, and has increased, until now we have a branch of about fifty members. We have also a Sunday school in good working order, and a young people's prayer meeting, which is productive of much good. Surely the Lord will bless us abundantly if we are faithful to the covenant we have made.

Bro. J. C. Clapp spent a few days with his family and the Saints here on his return from General Conference. On arriving here he found that Bro. Julian had been arranging for a discussion for him with a Rev. H. W. Bowman of the "First-day Adventist" Church. Bro. Clapp was not long in completing arrangements, and the battle commenced the following Monday. It lasted five evenings of two hours each. The question discussed was, Resolved that man in death is unconscious and is incapable of thought without a physical organism; H. W. Bowman affirms, J. C. Clapp denies.

This was the order until the third evening, when the question was reversed and Bro. Clapp took the affirmative. Rev. Bowman is highly educated, and is regarded as a man of exceptional ability. This is his favorite subject, he having made it a life study, and yet he was unable to prove his position, or to disprove the one taken by Bro. Clapp. His assertions went for naught when confronted by the plain evidence of God's word.

Throughout the debate the greatest interest was manifested, the church being filled. Much good will result from the discussion, as it has caused many to think, and a great deal of prejudice has been removed. On the last evening when the discussion had closed, Rev. Bowman gave permission for questions to be asked on the subject that had been debated, saying that he would answer them. As the meetings had been held in the Adventist church, Bro. Clapp was allowed no privilege in answering questions, which was regarded by many as a breach of courtesy at least, on the part of Rev. Bowman. The questions came more rapidly than he anticipated, and were of such a character that he could not answer them to the satisfaction of his questioners. He soon discovered that it was time to dismiss, and so the discussion ended in another glorious victory for truth.

The Saints here are more than ever grounded in the faith, and determined to press on to the mark of the high calling as it is in Christ Jesus. Bro. Clapp preached two excellent sermons in the Saints hall on Sunday following the discussion and left this morning for his field of labor in Oregon, where he is to hold a ten days' discussion with a Seventh-day Adventist, on the Sabbath question, and mortal-soulism. He is an able defender of the word, and the cause of Christ will not suffer in his hands.

Your brother,
JOHN A. LAWN.

HIGBEE, Mo., May 25.

Editors Herald:—We preached the memorial sermon here on yesterday, in the Christian church, which had been kindly proffered for the occasion. All the other churches adjourned their respective sermons and met with us, this being the first memorial service ever held here. It caused no little excitement. The house was packed and many on the outside were looking in at the windows.

Bro. Richards, our "Welsh" chorister, furnished the music, and with a few voices selected from the several choirs; the singing was simply grand. Everything passed off nicely and the Post was well satisfied.

T. W. CHATBURN.

EUCLID, Ark., May 19.

Editors Herald:—This leaves me at home, after three weeks of labor in Polk and Scott Counties. I met with good success; baptized three honest-hearted people; one of them was a member of the Utah Mormon Church. She joined the Brighamites in North Carolina and moved to Colorado, and there she and her husband became disgusted with their evil practice and came to Arkansas. The other two I baptized were members of a new sect styled "Cecilites," one a minister of that faith, and now a priest in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ. There have been three called to the priesthood and ordained of late; so the good work moves on in this State—ten baptized in the last few months; prospects good for more soon.

I met with Bro. John W. Kent at Blancett. He did a good work at that place. He baptized three. He is laboring with me for a season. We met with Bro. Graham and family and Sr. Nancy Davis. She said to tell all Saints and friends she was still strong in the faith. All Saints mourned the loss of Bro. Blair and pray some one to be called mighty and strong to take his place.

All Saints desiring my labors this year, please write me at Euclid, Arkansas.

Saints who want homes, why not come to Arkansas? Land is cheap; plenty of public land in this part—average land.

In gospel bonds,
J. W. JACKSON.

KNOX, Ind., May 25.

Editors Herald:—Have been holding services here nightly for past week. The light beams brightly; good interest, large attendance. This morning we repaired to the river, and after a sweet service we buried two persons in the waters of baptism, making ten people baptized this month. Could we do this twelve months out of the year, we could close it with Pentecost—one hundred and twenty souls. Those baptized this morning were middle aged. Ever busy,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

DELOIT, Iowa, May 27.

Editors Herald:—Closed a series of meetings at Arion and Dow City this week. Two baptized at the latter place the 25th.

C. J. HUNT.

RUTLAND, Wis., May 21.

Editors Herald:—Myself and wife and Elder C. H. Burr set up our gospel tent and commenced preaching at this place on Sunday the 17th inst. We have held five meetings. The attendance has been fair for so busy a time. The interest is not as encouraging as we had hoped it would be or as we were led to expect. Still there seems to be some who are seeking after more light and truth, and the number in attendance is increasing.

The young folks are taking hold and helping us in our music and singing, which is a great help to us, and also adds interest to the cause. We are hopeful and desire to do all we can for the spread of the gospel of Christ.

"CAN TWO WALK TOGETHER, EXCEPT THEY BE AGREED?"—AMOS 3: 3.

I FEEL like jotting down some of my thoughts, thinking that perhaps they may benefit my brothers and sisters in the like precious faith. I realize that I have been benefited by reading the experiences of others, and the thoughts and deductions consequent upon such experiences have been, as it were, a mirror before me by which I have discovered some of my own discrepancies, and been enabled by the grace of God to remedy them.

I have been reading some of the experiences of Nephi in the fore part of the Book of Mormon, in the which, through his great faithfulness and diligence in keeping the commandments of the Lord, he was singularly and greatly blessed, in being permitted to behold in heavenly vision many things relating to the purposes of God that should come to pass in the future. He was permitted to behold, first of all, the tree which his father was permitted to see, which represented the love of God, the iron rod—which is the word of God—which by holding, and following the narrow path that ran side by side with it, one would be brought to partake of the fruit of the tree, even the love of God. He was permitted to behold the virgin Mary, the birth of Christ, his baptism by John, his ministry, the multitudes of people who were sick and afflicted with all manner of diseases and with devils and unclean spirits, and who were healed by the power of the Lamb of God, and devils and unclean spirits cast out. He was permitted to see the Son of God extended upon the cross, and slain for the sins of the world; and at the same time, saw a mist of darkness on the face of the land of promise; and saw lightnings, and heard thunderings, and earthquakes, and all manner of tumultuous noises; and I saw the earth and the rocks that they rent; and I saw mountains tumbling into pieces; and I saw the plains of the earth, that they were broken up; and I saw many cities, that they were sunk; and I saw many that were burned with fire; and I saw many that did tumble to the earth, because of the quaking thereof.

These and many other wonderful things were shown him in prophetic vision, some of which have been fulfilled, some are now fulfilling, and some remain to be fulfilled; even down to the end of time, which were reserved for the Apostle John to write about. After reading the great condescension of the Lord in making known unto Nephi these his purposes, that should transpire in the future, my thoughts ran in this wise, Man does not make a confidant of his fellow man, unless he has proved him to be a worthy repository of his secrets; they must be agreed, and being agreed, according to our text, they can walk together. The word discloses the fact, that the two—the Lord and Nephi—did walk together, for Nephi did faithfully and diligently keep the commandments of the Lord, and by so doing did walk in the paths of righteousness, and the word says:—

He that doeth righteousness is righteous, as he [God] is righteous.—1 John 3: 7.

It does not follow that the Lord would have to come down to Nephi's plane in order to agree with him, in order that they might walk together; but the Lord, being the Author of righteousness, and fallen man being unrighteous, must ascend to the plane upon which God dwells by virtue of the plan that the Author of righteousness has established.

The thought occurred to me that if Nephi could thus walk with his God in the paths of righteousness, and be so greatly blessed, why could not others of the human family so walk and so be blessed? The word of God gives us to understand that,

God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation [how universal!] he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

This was Peter's language, and he came to that conclusion by the revelation of God to him, through the vision he received while upon the house top, and the subsequent action of the Spirit of God upon the Gentile household of Cornelius. Nephi corroborates this statement of Peter's as will be seen in the first Book of Nephi 3: 8, where he says:—

And it came to pass after I, Nephi, having heard all the words of my father, concerning the things which he saw in a vision; and also the things which he spake by the power of the Holy Ghost; which power he received by faith on the Son of God; and the Son of God was the Messiah, who should come. I, Nephi, was desirous also, that I might see, and hear, and know of these things, by the power of the Holy Ghost, which is the gift of God unto all those who diligently seek him, as well in times of old as in the time that he should manifest himself unto the children of men: for he is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever; and the way is prepared for all men from the foundation of the world, if it so be that they repent and come unto him; for he that diligently seeketh, shall find; and the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto them, by the power of the Holy Ghost, as well in these times as in times of old; and as well in times of old as in times to come; wherefore, the course of the Lord is one eternal round.

The thoughts contained in these statements of Nephi are, that all who diligently sought the Lord should find him, and they who did so were entitled to the gift of the Holy Ghost; no matter whether they lived in the beginning, middle, or latter part of the world, or any other part; for God is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and those who repent of their sins, and come unto the Lord, after receiving the Holy Ghost, and by diligently seeking to the Lord for them, shall have, by the power of the Holy Ghost, the mysteries of God revealed unto them. We here see that both Peter and Nephi agree as to the Lord being no respecter of persons. One says that they that work righteousness are accepted with him; the other says if they repent and come unto God they are accepted with him. If an individual repents and comes unto God, he certainly will work righteousness, and he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he [God] is righteous, and hence they are agreed, and walk together. They are—allowing me the expression—bosom friends, and hence God makes a confidant of him, and reveals his mysteries by the power of the Holy Ghost, in the gift of vision, prophecy, angelic ministration, or in the many ways through the gifts of the Spirit, as enumerated by the Apostle Paul in the twelveth chapter of first Corinthians.

The history of the Bible, all through, from Genesis to Revelation, corroborates the above deductions. If the text is true and applicable to an individual outside of the pale of the church, that if he does not repent of his sins, and work righteousness, he and his God cannot be agreed; therefore cannot walk together, and therefore cannot be on friendly terms. The same is true with an individual inside of the pale of the church, if he has committed sins unrepented of, he is not working righteousness, is consequently not agreed with God, and he and his God cannot walk together, and hence the comforting influence of the Spirit is withheld, and condemnation ensues.

The same is also true of a branch. If a branch, as a general thing, has allowed itself to indulge in backbiting, evil speaking, slandering, contention, division, etc., there cannot be any agreement between such as do these things and God. They cannot be walking together; hence the Holy Spirit cannot dwell there, (we are not speaking of individual exceptions), and spiritual gifts and blessings cease, and darkness obtains; and if those works of evil are not abolished and the works of righteousness established in the place thereof, spiritual death is the ultimate. Now what is true of an individual is also true of a collection of individuals whether in branch capacity or in the church as a whole. God has said to his people:—

Except ye are one, ye are none of mine.

The reason of this, to the writer's mind, is very apparent, because if God's people are not one, they are divided, and if divided they are not agreed among themselves, and do not walk together; neither are they agreed with God—because walking contrary to his commands—and therefore cannot walk with God while in that divided state, and if division is persisted in, it breeds dissensions, and contentions, and bitterness, and darkness, because God's Spirit cannot dwell where such exist, and spiritual death ensues; for as Jesus has said:—

A house . . . divided against itself, . . . cannot stand.—Mark 3: 25.

I do not mean to be understood, for a moment, that if differences of opinion obtain between the people of God, either in branch business meetings, or in General Conference capacity, in regard to the regulating of the affairs of the church, or its polity, in any particular, they fall under the above condemnation; especially if those differences of opinion are held in amity, in good will, in brotherly love, with a due regard for each others' opinions.

Then if such be the case there is a chance for the Spirit of God to enlighten those who are in error, one side, or the other, and possibly both, for it is possible for both to be in error, and then unity of feeling and of action is brought about. But to the writer's mind the great danger of division, with its all concomitant evils, lies, on account of the holding of these differences of opinion, in the indulging of unfriendly feelings one toward another, and allowing these feelings to go unchecked until a feeling of bitterness is engendered, opposition becomes intensified, crimination and recrimination ensues, the breach widens, which if not checked, becomes a gulf which cannot be bridged over and reconciliation is a thing of the past. That such a condition with the church is possible, past history has proven, but I do not believe that it is probable, because God has not revealed the secret to any of his prophets, ancient or modern, that an apostasy of the whole church would take place, after the one which has taken place in this the nineteenth century. Were such a thing to take place, a reestablishment, or reorganization of the church would have to take place, or the prediction of the Savior and others of the prophets would fail, who have declared that a people shall be prepared for the second coming of Christ when he comes to reign on the earth. And in the event of such reorganization, God would have to be the Author, and to fulfill the saying of the Prophet Amos 3: 7:—

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets, he would have to reveal the event of a reorganization of the church which thing he has not done, and consequently the present church will continue until the Savior comes, although as the Savior has declared to that time:—

The kingdom of heaven will be likened unto ten virgins, five were wise and five were foolish.

May our heavenly Father help and strengthen you and me, reader, and all who desire to serve him faithfully, to do his will in all things, loving the Lord our God with all our heart, might, mind, and strength; and loving our neighbor as ourselves, that we may be agreed with our God and our Savior, and so walk with them and be permitted to dwell with them eternally, is the prayer of your brother.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints and Friends in Minnesota and the Dakotas; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—It is but a few weeks until we are to meet for the reunion, and as we need more money to finish paying for our new tent, will all those who have not sent in their mites do so at once that we may succeed in making a success in getting a truth before the people.

The citizens of Fergus Falls have given us the grounds free of charge and say they are willing to aid us further if we will only give them the truth. Our new tent will only cost us one hundred dollars and freight. This includes everything complete ready to set up and go to work.

Now, dear Saints, don't fail to assist us in securing that which is necessary to accomplish the work that our heavenly Father has committed to our charge. The old tent will be put up for cooking and eating purposes.

All those coming to this reunion should bring their bed ticks and blankets. Straw will be on the ground free of charge. Those wishing to board and sleep at hotels can get board from $2.00 to $2.50 per week. There are two railroads coming to this place. Those coming by that kind of conveyance will be met at the depots by some of the committee whom you will recognize by a blue ribbon fastened on the lapel of their coats.

Come one and all and let us have a good time. We have a great work before us, so let us do it cheerfully, and the blessings promised are sure to come to us. I am,

Yours for the truth,

I. N. ROBERTS,

Secretary of Committee.

BARTLETT.—Fredrick Herbert, son of Herbert D. and Ella C. Bartlett; born May 18, 1896, at Denver, Colorado; blessed by Elders A. H. Smith and J. W. Gillen, May 23, 1896.

DUNN.—To Bro. John and Sr. Henrietta Dunn, a son, February 12, 1896, and under the name of Heman Louis, was blessed at the church in St. Joseph, Missouri, May 17, 1896, by Elders J. M. Terry and William Lawrensen. May he like the "Heman" before him, become a staunch and wise defender of the truth.

DIED.

CHUTE.—At Kimball, Ontario, March 6, 1896, Bro. Oliver Chute. He was born in Nova Scotia, April 26, 1819. He leaves his companion, three daughters, and two sons to mourn. Three sons and two daughters had gone on before. Sermon by Elder Samuel Brown to a large congregation.

STUART.—At Santa Cruz, California, April 16, 1896, Sr. Margarette A. Stuart, sister of Elder Joseph C. Clapp. She was born at Nauvoo, Illinois, May 28, 1845; baptized into the Reorganized Church by Elder A. H. Smith in January, 1865. Sister Stuart had been for some years burdened with great surplus of flesh until she became bedfast with a disease the doctors said was incurable; said she could never be well nor stand upon her feet. But by the blessing of God she was raised up in a miraculous manner, and in a few months her flesh was reduced fully 150 pounds, and she was really well of the disease that had brought her to the gates of death. She was up and about the house and had done considerable household work the day she was taken home. At the time she was taken with the smothering spell that proved fatal she was reading the Book of Mormon on the subject of the resurrection. She leaves a most faithful husband, who had patiently and faithfully cared for the dear one for months and years, also a large family of children, to mourn. Sister Stuart always bore a strong and faithful testimony to the work of the Lord, and we feel that while we shall "weep to miss her," still her rest is glorious, and we expect, if we are faithful, to meet her when he comes to make up his jewels.

FLETCHER.—Sr. Mary, wife of Bro. Adam Fletcher, was born at Merthyr Tydvil, South Wales, February 4, 1847, and with her parents, Bro. and Sr. Rees, came to America in 1858. United in wedlock with A. Fletcher, January 28, 1865. During their marriage period of thirty-one years she became the mother of nine children and one adopted child. Two of the number having preceded her in death, husband, seven children, the adopted one, an aged mother, and two sisters mourn. She united with the church at Kewanee, Illinois, February 11, 1865; baptized by her uncle, John D. Jones. Died at Ladd, Illinois, May 8, 1896. She suffered much. Was not a frequent church attendant, but always firm in the faith she had espoused, liberal in her life favors to those around her who were not as well blessed with such. Her remains were conveyed from Ladd by rail to Kewanee to her daughter's, Mrs. Bentham, Monday, the 11th, and on the 12th conducted to the Saints' church at two p. m., where Elder John Chisnall delivered the farewell address, then to the Pleasant View cemetery.

In paradise a welcomed guest,
With those that know and love the best,
While here we lay, in tears, away
In mother earth in peace to rest
Thy mortal clay, until that day,
Ending of the gospel story,
When Christ the mighty, good, and wise,
Will it, like his, immortalize,
Exempt from every saddening pain,
For thy own occupance again!
With him a thousand years to reign
In his celestial glory.

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895. Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition. Yours respectfully,
P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

FREE . . . TO MINISTERS AND Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Jüngerich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these, other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell," and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,
715 and 717 Market St., Philadelphia

To whom all orders for the books must be sent, accompanied by the postage, and a statement that the applicant is a minister, or student for the ministry, as follows:

STRIKING DECLARATIONS ON THE PAPAL CLAIMS.

THE opening of the Church Congress at Norwich yesterday was signalled by two important declarations by the Archbishop of York and the Bishop of Norwich on the question of Papal reunion. Before either pronouncement was made there were two or three interesting prefatory incidents. There was, for instance, the official welcome from the Mayor, Sir Peter Eade; and then there was a cordial greeting from the Nonconformists. This latter greeting—which, by the way, was acknowledged by the Archbishop of York—contained more than one interesting statement. While acknowledging all that had been done by the church, they did not desire (they said) to minimize the great and serious differences which separated them. Unity could never be secured at the expense of truth, and they were well aware that there was a large and powerful section of churchmen who held, both conscientiously and tenaciously, the doctrine of apostolic succession, which made it impossible for them to recognize the validity of ministerial orders which had not been conferred by episcopal ordination. While not desiring in a spurious and unwise charity to deny these differences, they had no wish to magnify them. They believed all the great articles of the Christian faith, and could rehearse with church men the ancient Apostles' Creed. They used many of the same hymns; they appreciated to the full the overtures at the Lambeth Conference; and, whether or not reunion could come, they had much in common. The character of the archbishop's sermon can be indicated in one or two sentences. Churchmen deplored, he said, as much as the Pope the divided state of Christendom, but it was hopeless for the Papacy to ask for absolute submission of the people of England as a condition of reunion. The Bishop of Norwich was in his presidential address to the congress equally definite. Here is one of the most crucial passages from the address:—

"There is no reason, I apprehend, to believe that Romanism is making, or is likely to make, any appreciable progress among our fellow countrymen. We have our principles, and from them we have not the least intention of deviating. There is no question at present of union, or, indeed, of any practical approximation towards union. It may also be said that it is eminently unreal of the Pope to speak of unity while his emissaries, the Anglo-Roman party in England, are with unexampled eagerness endeavoring to entice away our people from our fold and speak of our church in tones of arrogance and bitterness which grieve and repel us, tones in which, truth to tell, we fail to recognize the Spirit of the divine Master. The fact remains that the Pope of Rome, the head of the most numerous section of Christians in the world, has invited us in a letter, to all of whose statements indeed we cannot assent, but of a truly Christian tone, to appreciate the blessings of unity, and to unite with him in prayer that in his own good time God would give us all that blessed oneness in the faith which all Christians must desire. To us on every ground such a request is and must be congenial. There is no need for us to compose a prayer to meet the request of the Roman Pontiff. We pray, and always have prayed daily in our Liturgy, that 'the Catholic Church may be so guided and governed by God's good Spirit that all who profess and call themselves Christians may be led into the way of truth, and hold the faith in unity of spirit, in the bond of peace, and in righteousness of life,' and I suppose that most of us in our private devotions pray daily for the unity of all Christians in the truth. Moreover, we have excommunicated neither the East nor the West. But, as I say, this invitation (which no one could imagine being sent by a Pope of the Hildebrandine period to those who have deliberately rejected his authority) is a Christian one, which every Christian community must be glad to receive. It is, moreover, a touching one, proceeding from an aged prelate whose course is almost run. Coming from one occupying so great, so unique a position in the Christian world, a man of a kindly, gentle spirit and saintly life, we are disposed to give his message a sympathetic and kindly welcome. This we do, unmoved by the inadmissible, nay, preposterous, claims that have been put forward on his behalf, claims which the history of the past rejects, and, in the future, are assuredly doomed to disappointment. Looking to the tendency of men's minds throughout the world, the drift of human thought, the rising intellectual and moral forces which influence the world of men, and appear likely to influence them increasingly in time to come, the growth and prevalence of principles inconsistent with the Papal system, the fact that the great rising nations of the world have not only rejected the Papal rule, but appear to owe their preëminence to the fact that they are under the influence of a spirit incompatible with its spirit, the notion that the Christian world will ever pass under the domination of the Roman Pontiff seems to us inconceivable—nothing but the baseless dream of the religious partisan."—London Leader.

SPREAD OF RUSSIA'S POWER.

THE spectacular and almost stupendous display that is impressing on the minds of the Russians the absolute sovereignty of their Czar is serving also to emphasize more clearly to the rest of the world the unique position Russia holds among the nations. The domain of this mighty monarch is in fact one of the grand divisions of the world, not to be measured by standards that are applied to any of the others. It includes more than one-seventh of the land surface of the earth, and in geographical conformation should properly be embraced in a separate continent, distinct from Europe and Asia. It has a unity apart from either, and can be best comprehended by such a partition.

In addition to this Russian territory the Czar has a mortgage on China to the great wall. He opened a letter of credit for the Chinese after the war with Japan, and it is only a question of time when, through the pressure of these financial obligations, he will be able to absorb all the territory north of the great wall and dictate the policy south of it. The trans-Siberian railroad will provide for the trade of this vast region as fast as it may develop. The methods employed for absorbing Turkey form a part of recent history. He appears to have an absolute protectorate over the land of the Sultan, and that unspeakable creature has shown he acts as the Czar dictates. The inevitable consequence of this alliance will be that the Czar will go down also into Persia, and will not be satisfied until he has actually absorbed Persia and Turkey. This would bring him close to the mountains separating Persia and India, presenting to him the most difficult problem of conquest of all. Whether he attacks India will depend upon future revelations of resources and interests, but no one doubts his desire to subjugate that land of promise. His most notable achievement has been to hypnotize France, making an alliance with this most radical of republics. When he has fairly established his influence in France, gripped Turkey and Persia, annexed China north of the wall, controlled the policy south, and paralyzed Japan he will rise to the stature of Alexander. He has managed, where Napoleon failed, to force Russia into an alliance with France, and he has a firmer clutch on France than France sought to get on Russia. It is not impossible that he may yet smash Germany and Austria unless they get an English alliance and when his resources in men and money are considered no one could hope to define limits to his schemes of future conquest.

Much of this diplomatic progress has been made possible by the era of peace within the confines of the empire. The spirit of revolution and anarchy has not asserted itself since Nicholas ascended the throne, and the ruler and his advisers have had opportunity to devote themselves to the external interests of the empire. Now that the integrity of the widely differing elements that comprise the 120 millions of subjects is being further cemented by this coronation splendor, renewed activities looking to the martial glory of Russia are not improbable.

A BUSINESS CALCULATION.

There are young men whose life is going out inch by inch from cigarettes. Now, do you not think it would be well to listen to the testimony of a merchant of New York, who said this: "In early life I smoked six cigars a day at six and a-half cents each. They averaged that. I thought to myself one day, I'll just put aside all I would consume in cigars and all I would consume if I keep on in the habit, and I'll see what it will come to by compound interest." And he gives this tremendous statistic: "Last July completed thirty-nine years since, by the grace of God, I was emancipated from the filthy habit, and the saving amounted to the enormous sum of $29,102.03 by compound interest. We lived in the city, but the children, who had learned something of the enjoyment of country life from their annual visits to their grandparents, longed for a home among the green fields. I found a very pleasant place in the country for sale. The cigar money came into requisition, and I found it amounted to a sufficient sum to purchase the place, and it is mine." Now, boys, you take your choice. Smoking without a home, or a home without smoking, this is common sense as well as religion.

For some weeks past an Indianapolis bicycle company has been working its men 14 hours. Last week the company put on a day and a night force.

COLLEGE.

At the risk of being guilty of repetition, we again call attention to the college. The work on the building is progressing well, and, if nothing occurs to prevent, the building will be ready to occupy for the fall term of school.

Inquiry for lots is being made by several, and there is still room for others. It must be understood that there is no speculation in either the college, or in the sale of lots; none was intended, neither is there any opportunity for it had there been intention. The church saw fit to declare that the times and the conditions of the church demanded, and were favorable to such an enterprise. The committee set about the work in good faith, devised what appeared to them the best means to accomplish the work intrusted to them; the citizens of Lamoni, irrespective of church relationship, subscribed liberally, in consideration of the shortness of crops and consequent poor business resulting, and it is now incumbent on all who can to put to their might and help to complete the work.

We do not plead for this college because we deem it essential to educate men for the Lord's ministry. The very principle of our faith that the Lord himself calls the laborers whom he may select and command, precludes the idea of educating men for the ministry. God may or may not choose an educated man, for a specific work. Paul said that "not many wise, not many noble" ones were chosen; but the term "not many" suggests that there were some "wise" and some "noble"; though they may have been few. One thing is certain, that is, that though God may have chosen the "weak things, yea the foolish things," to bring to naught the wisdom of the wise; the wisdom and the foolishness written of were the wisdom and the foolishness of this world, not the wisdom, or the seeming foolishness of God.

One of the leading gifts, if not the leading one, is wisdom; second, knowledge; third, faith. Luke, the historian, was an educated man; so was Paul. The most intelligent of the Gospels, for its historical accuracy is that of Luke. The most comprehensive dissertations on the gospel found in the New Testament, are those of Paul. There is no evidence that John, the beloved, was what would now be called an illiterate, or unlearned man; he was of a poetic temperament, mild and pleasant in disposition.

Joseph Smith was an unlearned, uneducated man, at the beginning of his work; but the Lord sent to his aid men of letters and learning, upon whom the literary work of the church was placed.

From all this we draw the conclusion that while there is no intention to attempt to educate a ministry, for the reason that we cannot by so doing indicate to the Lord whom he should choose; it is becoming in us to "seek learning and instruction," "by the spirit of wisdom and revelation;" from "all good books;" a knowledge of countries, their people, language, history, the things in the air, water, earth, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

Let us build, as if for time and eternity, characters of men and women of usefulness to their race, if none of them are ever called to act as his ministers or not. Help the college.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

THE TEN VIRGINS.

In the Herald of February 5, 1896, is an article on the subject of "the second coming of Christ," by Bro. W. W. Blair, in which he treats on the foolish and wise virgins. I became much interested and think it very good and the correct interpretation. There is one question in reference to it which I wish you would please answer through the columns of the Herald. In the fifth verse of the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew are these words: "While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept," meaning both the wise and the foolish.

Ques.—How can they be accounted as wise if they are asleep as well as the foolish when the last cry is given?

Ans.—According to the reading of the occurrence, the wisdom, or foolishness of the party is not shown by their sleeping, as sleep is as natural to the wise as to the foolish and as necessary. The wisdom of those called the wise was found in the fact that they had made their lamps ready, for they were trimmed and burning, and there was oil in the vessels to replenish the lamps when needful. But the foolishness of those called foolish was shown to be for the reason that before sleeping they had not only not trimmed their lamps, nor provided oil in their vessels. There was no great impropriety in the fact of the virgins sleeping, but when the cry was made the wise were ready, the foolish were not. Sleep is a necessity to both wise and foolish; and the narrative points to the idea that there was an uncertainty as to the time of the coming of the bridegroom, the delay, or tarrying not being accounted for. During this uncertainty the usual hour of sleep taking came and the whole band fell asleep. When the cry, The Bridegroom cometh, startled the sleeping virgins to wakefulness, the lamps of the wise were furnished, the lamps of the foolish were not.

Q.—What does this sleeping mean?

A.—It means the having the attention of those looking for the coming of the Lord, so engrossed with those affairs of the life of the flesh that they are in a sense careless as to the time of that coming. The wise make such needful preparation as is practicable for them to do, and go right along waiting in their dulled condition, ready to rouse when the cry comes; "Go ye out meet him."

The foolish are also waiting, believing in his coming, but make no preparations to be ready.

The injunction, "Watch therefore; for you know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh," points to time preceding his coming; and the whole parable is a direct warning to all to make all the preparation that can be made consistently with the conditions surrounding each, to be ready for that coming.

It seems to us so plain that such was the intention of the Savior, that we wonder how anyone can stop to think it possible that there is any hidden or mysterious meaning to be sought for, in order to understand the parable. The methods employed by the wise virgins to trim their lamps, filled with oil and burning, with a supply of oil in the vessels to replenish the lamps when the lights burned dim, or the oil in the lamps burned low, it seems to us to indicate that all the things which watchful disciples can do, in the proper use of the things of this world, their time and talents, should be done; so that when the time comes, that the cry is made, "Lo the Bridegroom cometh," the whole body of believers, wise and foolish, being roused by the cry the wise will at once rise with a welcoming cry, for they are ready and will proceed with him into the city, or to the feast. The foolish will of course not be ready, and while busily trying to refurnish their gone out lights the guests will enter in and the door be closed. Wonderful lesson; let us profit by it.

MELCHISEDIC PRIESTHOOD.

We are asked how many times has the Melchisedic priesthood been on the earth? How many the Aaronic?

To this, all the answer we can make at the present is that we have not the data at command to determine.

It is evident, however, that the Melchisedic priesthood, or the priesthood of the order of the Son of God, has been upon the earth as often as there has been a work being done on the earth for the benefit of man, requiring the ministration of angels, revelation, and the administration of spiritual ordinances.

If from Adam to Moses, from Moses to Christ, and from Christ to the angel's message in these last times, we have three times at least. The second, of course, includes the period from the call of John the Baptist to the final departure into the wilderness of the church on the eastern continent, and the work of Christ on the western. The work done evidently required the priesthood to which belonged the receiving of revelations, the ministrations of the Spirit, and the giving the knowledge that Jesus was the Christ.

We are inclined to believe that the right to the priesthood continued with man all through the ages, but that the privilege to act in the name of Christ being dependent on a call from the Master was not granted through long periods of time, for reasons known to God and Christ. During these periods the priesthood was "hid with Christ in God."

It would seem that the Aaronic priesthood had continued in much the same sense and it is possible in a much more connected way; inasmuch as the language of the revelation on priesthood conveys the idea that there may be literal descendants of Aaron found, entitled for that reason to act in the office of the Bishopric. The passing of the church into the wilderness may have lost this priesthood as well as the other, and its restoration in the last times by the ministration of John the Baptist, restores the line of right to act. The ordination being under the direction of Peter, James, and John, would indicate that the intention was to restore both at the same time, the one presiding and directing the other.

There has been a work more or less enlightening in regard to the things of the kingdom, or the church, going on from age to age. What degree of authority to act the men through whom these enlightening processes were carried on held, is a matter for conjecture, from inferential evidences. That there was much of the leading of the Spirit of truth with many of them, no one need fear to admit. It was necessary to the oncoming of the work, the "strange" work of the last days; and it is fitting to believe that the Lord, in some way more or less direct, attended the work done. That he shaped the political affairs of the world in such way as to facilitate the great spiritual work and make it possible, is equally sure. Hence, whether the two priesthoods were at all times coexistent and coordinate on the earth, or the one existed without the other at different times; and which was continuous and which recurrent, if either; and how many times either has been committed and retaken from the earth, is a matter of knowledge, possibly worth seeking after, but quite likely to be kept to be revealed to the people of God when it should be needful for them to know it for purposes in keeping with the design of God in the coming forth of the work of the last days.

BRO. JOHN SCOTT'S so long connection with the Herald office, in charge of the type-setting and printing departments, closed June 1. Bro. Scott came to the office in Plano, when there was but a small plant, and in the course of twenty-seven years of service has done all sorts of work that the exigencies called for; he being by nature and acquired ability an accomplished printer, qualified for the place he held. During the entire time of his service the present editor has been in the editorial charge, part of the time with others, most of the time alone, and for that entire period has had the closest of business relations with Bro. Scott, and there has always been the warmest personal regard and most satisfactory business relations between the editor and the superintendent. Not a break in those relations ever occurred, and it is with keen regret that we see our long-trying and faithful co-worker depart from the office.

We can and do most cheerfully and cordially commend our departing foreman, as capable and worthy, and qualified for the duties of the printer's profession.

Bro. Scott was also Church Librarian, and as such had charge of the Library located at the Herald Office, where he has filled the office of librarian satisfactorily. Upon leaving the office, he deemed it best to resign the office of librarian, thinking that some one who could be more at the office than he had better be in charge. His resignation was lodged with President Joseph Smith, for conference action. In the meantime the duties of librarian will be provided for by the Presidency. Donations of books, pamphlets, papers, etc., may be sent to Frederick M. Smith, Lamoni, acting church historian, who will receipt for and notice them.

DEATH OF NOTED PERSONS.

THE Chicago Tribune for Sunday, May 31, contains the notice of the death of Miss Kate Field, for many years now, one of the most noted of American women. Miss Field died at Honolulu, May 19, of pneumonia. Of her the Tribune says:—

With the death of Miss Field ends the career of perhaps the most unique woman the present century has produced. She was born in St. Louis of well-to-do parents fifty odd years ago, but left home at an early age to fit herself for her life work.

When a child Miss Field became a protégé of Walter Savage Landor, who gave her lessons in Latin and at his death left her a valuable portfolio of drawings which Miss Field had in her possession up to a year ago. As she gave promise of a great future Miss Field was at an early age sent to Boston to complete her education. From there she went to Florence, Italy, where she perfected herself in music and modern languages and became an intimate friend of George Eliot. She studied music under Garcia and under William Shakespeare, the noted English tenor, and at one time decided upon a stage career.

In fact, she was on the stage for a time, appearing as an actress at Booth's Theater in New York, where she won praise. After a short season on the stage she forsook it for the editorial chair and the lecture platform.

In Miss Field art had one of its most able champions. She was the leading spirit of the National Art Association.

Kate Field's Washington was a paper characteristic of its owner, and when it suspended publication in 1895, it marked the failing health in the woman who dared to brave Congress and direct that body's attention to matters which had until then been kept in the dark.

Miss Field was well known by all writers of prominence, and one of them, in writing of her some years ago, said:—

"When one speaks of unique women one thinks instinctively of Kate Field, who is without doubt one of the most picturesque characters of the day. There is scarcely anything this lady has not turned her hand to—the stage, the shop, the lecture platform the writing desk, and now the editor's chair. She understands politics much better than most men; she proved more of a power against Mormonism than all the laws enacted against this hideous stain upon our government. She was a splendid drummer for the California wine companies, and I am sure she could conduct a post-mortem or preach from any text quite as well as the average doctor of medicine or divinity."

Among her published works which have attracted the most attention are "Planchette's Diary," "Adalaide Ristori," "Mad on Purpose," "Pen Photographs from Charles Dickens' Readings," "Hap-Hazard," "Ten Days in Spain," and "History of Bell's Telephone."

Miss Field a few years ago, made a special study of the religious phenomenon known as "Mormonism," in the journalistic world, and wrote voluminously on the subject. While engaged in gathering materials for her work in Missouri, the editor in company with Brn. W. W. Blair, A. H. Smith, M. H. Forscutt, Stephen Maloney, and J. W. Brackenbury met her at Independence, Missouri, and had quite an interview with her on her then forthcoming articles. In that interview she promised to do the Reorganized Church justice on several points; but this promise was either forgotten, or a pressure brought to bear upon her to cause her to neglect to keep it. At all events she failed to keep it in the spirit of it. However she may have seen the affair in different light afterwards.

The other noted person was M. M. Pomeroy, commonly called "Brick" Pomeroy. He was a noted politician, and newspaper man, gaining his first great notoriety as the publisher of the La Crosse Democrat. He died in Brooklyn, New York, May 30, aged sixty-three.

One of the only two public political speeches the editor ever made was made in Dixon's Hall, Plano, Illinois, in review of a lecture by Mr. Pomeroy on the money question, then as now agitating the public mind. So pass the players on life's stage.

QUEEN VICTORIA, reigning sovereign of the British Empire, was born May 24, 1819, and is now in the seventy-ninth year of her age. She ascended the throne in 1838, in her eighteenth year; and in her long and prosperous reign has compassed one of the most remarkable periods of the world's history. Our exchange says:—

SINCE A. D. 1819.

Born in 1819, her majesty has, of course, passed the period allowed by the psalmist as the average for earthly enjoyments and sorrows. The world into which she was born was troublous; memories of Waterloo were still fresh; Napoleon Bonaparte was still alive, and a prisoner; capital punishment was awarded for almost any offense; the wager of battle was still unrepealed; riots prevailed all over the country; Lord Edward Fitzgerald was under attainder; Sir Charles Wolseley was indicted in Chester; John Cam Hobhouse was committed to Newgate by speaker's warrant for a pamphlet disparaging the house of commons; the Earl of Fitzwilliam was dismissed from the lord lieutenancy of the West Riding; booksellers were imprisoned for selling Paine's "Age of Reason;" the country was ringing with the news of the Peterloo massacre, when the yeomanry fired upon the mob, and Henry Hunt, the chairman of the meeting, coming up to London for his trial, received an ovation.

Such was the stormy political world into which the royal infant came. It is edifying, though purposeless, to compare it with that of to-day. The task of so doing can be accomplished by anybody, and shall not, at least, be attempted by me.—Gentleman's Magazine.

During her first years as a monarch her government was much disturbed by troublesome questions, among them a rebellion in Canada, the anti-corn law league, the chartist agitation, the Jamaica question, disturbed condition in Irish national affairs, and a war with China. Lord Melbourne was Prime Minister when she was crowned. She has survived the ministry of Lord Melbourne who resigned in 1841; Sir Robert Peel, who remained in office till 1846; Lord John Russell, 1846-52; Lord Derby through 1852; Lord Aberdeen; succeeded by Lord Palmerston; Lord Derby again, in 1859, when Palmerston was reinstated; Palmerston died in 1865; and Lord Derby was again Prime Minister; Lord Derby resigned in 1858; and Disraeli, the Jew, succeeded him till 1868, when Mr. W. E. Gladstone, the Grand Old Man; then Disraeli again; and again Gladstone, and now Lord Salisbury. During the different terms of the office of these men, the Queen has been steadily the reigning officer of the great nation that claims her as sovereign; what an eventful life! It is the longest reign of the sovereigns of empire, lasting fifty-eight years.

TWO ITEMS.

THE two items that follow are from special correspondence to the New York Journal and are presented to the Herald readers for what they may be worth and as significant indications; the first, if true, of liberal tendencies in the present Czar that apparently give promise of a more liberal Russian policy toward the Jews in the great empire of the North.

The second item indicates the sullen hostility of the Hungarians toward the present Austrian imperial rule, and furnishes one of the reasons why the rule of the present sovereign is unpopular. The existence of antipathy against a foreign ruler tends to strengthen the growth of democratic tendencies that give promise of ultimate success in establishing popular representative systems of government throughout the world. It is not difficult to forecast the political future in this respect and to discern the growing strength of a sentiment that at no distant day will, without doubt, become so generally popular throughout the world as to render a continuation of monarchical systems of government simply impossible.

LONDON, June 5.—Much interest has been created in Jewish circles here by the honors and decorations bestowed by the Czar on Rabbis in connection with the coronation, and especially the unusual consideration shown to Jewish susceptibilities. For instance, in cases where a gold cross is worn as a sign of an order, and that order has been conferred on Jews, a special gold medal has been made for the Rabbis. It is believed that these various marks of consideration indicate an era of greater tolerance of liberty to the Jews in Russia.

BERLIN, June 5.—The royal regalia was exhibited in Buda Pest streets to-day as a feature of the Hungarian millennial celebration with great pomp and circumstance, but little enthusiasm was displayed by the crowds. The populace cheered the Magyar nobles and the burgomasters, who headed the procession, but was suddenly silent when the Emperor drove by later on.

"WORK OF TORNADOES IN THE PAST."

We have endeavored heretofore to furnish the brethren such statistical items as would prove helpful to them in discussing the signs of the times and other subjects of interest and profit to the general work. If some of our readers have already read the items presented they will perhaps consider that many do not have access to the daily papers, and are therefore not so well equipped with information in some lines as others. The article given below omits mention of many destructive storms that have not been recorded in the annals of the Tribune. It will be noticed that the list only claims to be a partial one.

Wednesday's tornado [the one that struck St. Louis and other points] was probably the most destructive that has ever swept through the territory of the United States since the settlement of the country. Some of the past storms of this character have, however, been very destructive both to life and property. In the long list on record the following of recent occurrence deserve recalling:—

1873, May 22. A tornado passed over several towns in Iowa and Illinois, doing great damage to property, though comparatively few lives were lost. In the storm a schoolhouse weighing 30,000 pounds and occupied by the teachers and pupils was lifted from its foundation and carried a distance of thirty feet, but was not overturned.

1877, June. Nearly a score of lives were lost and $100,000 damage done by a tornado which struck Mount Carmel, Illinois.

1878, June. A tornado struck Richmond, Mo., and 100 persons were killed and injured.

1878, Aug. 9. A tornado which swept away a portion of the town of Wallingford, Connecticut, was very destructive. According to the reports of United States signal officers thirty persons lost their lives and seventy others were more or less injured, fifty-five houses and barns were completely or partially demolished, and the money loss was estimated at $250,000.

1880, April 18. Destructive tornadoes visited Missouri, Illinois, and Wisconsin, doing great damage. At Marshfield, Missouri, about 100 lives were lost, property worth $400,000 destroyed, and 150 families left homeless and penniless.

1881, July 15. New Ulm, Minnesota, was swept by a tornado with terrible effect. There were four great spouts pointing towards the earth, and moving along in a swiftly revolving course in a path a mile and a half wide. The town, which contained 3,000 inhabitants, was wrecked.

1885, August 4. A tornado swept up the Delaware between three and four o'clock in the afternoon, passing through "The Neck" of Philadelphia, crossing the Delaware, and sweeping through Camden, and then recrossing to the upper portion of New York City. The destruction of property was considerable, especially in Camden, and seven lives were lost.

1888, February 19. A tornado struck Mount Vernon, Illinois, destroying 300 buildings, burying many persons under falling walls, and involving a loss of thirty-seven lives, while twice that number were seriously injured.

1889, January 9. A tornado struck Reading, Pennsylvania, demolishing and damaging buildings. By the fall of a silk mill twenty-four persons were killed and ninety-eight injured.

1890. Louisville, Kentucky, was visited by a tornado which plowed a pathway through solid blocks of buildings. Over 100 lives were lost. The property damage footed up into millions.—Chicago Tribune, May 29.

MAILING RULES FOR GOSPEL QUARTERLIES.

THE following rules have been agreed upon to govern the filling of all orders for Gospel Quarterlies. Subscribers will please take notice and conform to them hereafter that business transactions with the Herald Office may be facilitated:—

1. Yearly subscriptions are the lowest in price and are the only ones placed on the regular mailing list.

2. Single orders, for each issue of the Quarterly, are placed on the order book. They must be renewed every three months, regularly, for each issue. Single orders cannot be filled at yearly rates. (See prices on Quarterlies.)

3. Schools ordering by the year should be particular to avoid duplicating orders, when new officers (who order for them) are elected. Old addresses should be changed, or subscriptions renewed, as may be necessary.

4. Yearly subscriptions are dropped when one year overdue, unless arrangements are made with the Superintendent of the General Association to continue longer, and his indorsement received.

5. Schools unable to purchase Quarterlies may be supplied free by order of the Superintendent. Schools are expected to purchase their supplies, however, when at all possible.

6. Sample copies free; back numbers at regular rates if on hand.

7. Orders should be in thirty days before date of issue, to insure promptness, and that the required number be published.

8. Order through branch book agents when possible, to facilitate business at the Herald Office.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A RECENT letter to the Corresponding Editor from Dr. W. H. Cain, of Salt Lake City, relates that about four months ago he was baptized and ordained at San Diego, California, by elders from Utah. He says:—

I was impressed to come to Zion (so-called) feeling I could then enter into the fullness of light and knowledge most rapidly and truly. I have been here since the 27th of March. I have found a great lack of that spiritual instruction and influence expected and went over to the Wednesday evening meeting week before last to see the Josephites. Had a good enjoyment and felt the Spirit of God was there. With this acquaintance I commenced to study of the claims and differences, and a file of the Saints' Advocate has been my main reading ever since. I shall doubtless apply for admission to your fellowship in the Lord. I will see your brother when he comes, and I would with joy make all things worldly secondary to proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom.

Dr. Cain is a graduate of college, and of Princeton Theological Seminary. He has formerly been a prominent minister and Sunday school worker in the Presbyterian Church. We gladly welcome Bro. Cain and sincerely hope and pray that in our fellowship he may find that spiritual comfort and grace which will result pleasantly and profitably both to himself and the body. We are especially rejoiced to hear that the little band of worshipers at Mission Chapel are so enjoying the Divine Spirit that the weary stranger coming into their midst may find spiritual rest and comfort, and may feel that God is there. May the good work go on.

Of the work in Chicago and vicinity Bro. William Strange wrote from that city under date of June 2, as follows:—

Prospects here are good; we are hopeful of increase in membership. We do not believe our prayers for the onward progress of the Master's cause all stayed below the ceiling, but on the contrary, have been assured by divine manifestation that they have gone above it. Since Bro. Pitt and I organized the branch at West Pullman four have been baptized, whom I was called upon to confirm a week ago, and at the same service blessed three children. One of the confirmed ones will, if faithful, be a shepherd in Israel, if our convictions are not faulty. A small place (Hegewisch by name) about six miles from Pullman is calling for the gospel; and so our hope intensifies.

Bro. I. N. White wrote from Kingston, Missouri, June 2, of his late discussion, also of another that is to follow. We are pleased to learn of the success of the ministry in the field of conflict:—

I am at Kingston this morning. Just closed my debate with the Rev. J. H. Carter, last night. Seemingly our victory for the truth was all that we could ask for. Were it not for the prejudice of the people, it looks like we would sweep the world. But O, how few that care for their souls' salvation! It takes lots of nerve and patience to hold debates. This man was scurrulous and clung closely to the old tales that have been told against Joseph Smith, the Book of Mormon, and our work in general. Even when Campbellism was on examination Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon came in for a tirade of abuse. But God be thanked, I was here to take care of our side of the question. They are puzzled to know how readily we are able to meet them and so completely defeat them at every corner and angle. I will leave for home to-day and attend our quarterly conference at Independence, the 6th and 7th, and then arrange my mission affairs so as to be at Benton, Illinois, to commence a debate with the Rev. M. Boles (Christian) on the 22d. I learn that Mr. Boles left the bar for the evangelistic field, and that I will have Illinois' best to meet. The debate will be renewed at Parrish and till towards the middle of July.

Bro. J. J. Cornish, Whittemore, Michigan, June 2:—

Seven have been baptized and added to the branch at this place, and interest is fair. Bro. David Smith and I are laboring together for a few days.

Bro. H. O. Smith, writing to Bro. Heman C., from Lincoln, Nebraska, June 2, says:—

As you see by the heading of this I am on my way West. I will, if I have good luck, reach Salt Lake City Thursday at noon. I baptized eleven more since leaving home; three at Inman and eight at Clearwater, making twenty-three all told in that mission this spring; and many more could be brought in by judicious labor. I see by Bro. Gillen's letter to Bro. Rudd that the ninety-ninth parallel is the dividing line between his field and Bro. A. H. Smith's; so all the work done by me would be in the latter's field, as the line runs about twenty-five or thirty miles west of Inman, the farthest point west reached by me. I will make formal report of my labors there to Bro. Smith, unless directed otherwise, the 1st of July. My name has gone up and down the Elkhorn River as rather a dangerous man among the Methodist flocks; the M. E. pastor at Inman having written to the various pastors in the valley that I had taken some of the finest of his flock; so I learned in Norfolk yesterday.

All the news we have from the Williams-Braden discussion is contained in the following brief word from Bro. H. N. Hansen, dated Fontanelle, Iowa, June 6:—

First proposition closed last night. Bro. Williams fully maintained our claim as being identical with the Bible. Braden only answered with ridicule and insults, as is his manner.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letter from Bro. George W. Hull, Fayette City, Pennsylvania, we learn that Bro. G. T. Griffiths had been in the neighborhood and had baptized a number formerly of those who were organized under the lead of William Bickerton, and had organized a branch; Bro. Hull thought it likely that others of those old-time Saints would accept the faith. Bro. D. L. Shinn was to follow up the effort made by Bro. Griffiths; it will meet success.

President Joseph Smith went to Auburn, Iowa, Friday, June 5, to dedicate a new chapel built by the Saints at that point.

Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana, Kansas, and Missouri points report heavy damages from cloudbursts and windstorms on the 5th inst. Thousands of acres of growing crops were inundated in some sections.

Our neighboring town of Bethany, Missouri, now has a mineral springs health resort, a hotel, and a sanitarium. It is called the Heilbron Springs. It is thirty miles by rail from Lamoni, about the same by wagon road. D. J. Heaston is president; G. W. Wanamaker, secretary of the company. We wish them success.

Bro. J. B. Tinker, Marietta, Iowa, requests prayers of the Prayer Union that he may be healed of affliction. The church publications furnish the only preaching he has heard for years, as he is isolated as a Saint in that region.

Bro. H. E. Moler wrote from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 6, that tent work was then in progress in that city.

Bro. James Farley, of Bisby, Arizona, requests your prayers that he may be healed. He has been afflicted for some time.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"In faith and hope the world will disagree,
But all mankind's concern is charity:
All must be false that thwart this one great end;
And all of God, that bless mankind or mend."

THIRTY-TWO years ago to-day a wee morsel of humanity was born into this world, this school of experiences, to form a character therefrom. So sensitive was this soul! And why should it not be? The mother so sensitive, willful, proud; even back farther, the dear old grandma the same. A love of the beautiful, grand, and brave from the soldier father. Thus this soul set out on life's journey. O the temptations on the way! But a love of the good, and the kind Father's hand always drawing it back before reaching the precipice. A longing for truth and nothing but truth—uniting with a body of Christians with a man made creed—ever reaching out, hungering and thirsting for righteousness through many trials and disappointments—at last believing truth could not be found in the churches, becoming skeptical, but spirituality predominating, turning toward the spiritualists for light. But before uniting with them a light bursts in view; the latter-day light illumines the pathway. This soul is baptized within its folds. O the illumination of the spirit! The joy! The peace. Truth found at last! But is the pathway any easier? O no; rougher; clouds, temptations, worse than ever, the adversary trying hard to draw it away from the light; doubt, persecutions, slander, friends turn away; yea, for a time the dear parents and brother and sister. But the Spirit striving, still the sensitive soul under the rough waves of scorn and coldness, not having yet learned of the Spirit the full lesson of charity, long suffering, kind, thinking no evil charity, draws back; takes an apparently independent stand, grows apparently cold, harbors a spirit of resentment which is felt by neighbors, which makes it harder and harder for the poor soul. Still the Spirit is the chief occupant, and still strives and argues and instructs, until our soul begins to feel the mote in its own eye! Ah! she must do her part anyway, visit the sick, be neighborly, make others happy. "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us" is rung in her ears day after day. Ah, that is hard! No, not with the Spirit's aid. A new milestone reached; advance is the word written thereon. The Spirit of Christ begins to beam from the eye, and so this soul desires to keep advancing, with charity, sweet charity written on her banner. E. S. T.

TROY, Kansas, May 25.

Dear Sisters:—I have derived much benefit from the many instructions for the mothers of Zion in the Home Column, and gained knowledge in regard to raising up children in the way they should go. The mother has a great responsibility to always have patience to govern herself aright toward her children. I often feel my weakness and incompetency, but I pray the Lord to help me, and he does bless me when I am humble before him. I have had many trials to pass through this past winter, but I try to think it is all for the best, for I know the Lord says he will have a tried people. We should try and purify our hearts from all evil speaking and thinking and become as little children. My prayer to God is that we may all meet where parting is no more. Your sister,

SARAH MCGALLIARD.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

COLDWATER, Michigan.

Dear Sisters:—Please permit us to present to you Bro. Samuel Stroh for your special prayers and faith. His illness dates back to November, when he struggled through an ordeal of typhoid fever. While the typhoid symptoms disappeared, his strength returns slowly, his nerves badly disarranged. Blue times, despondent feelings, weakness, etc., seem to be his condition. Bro. Stroh wants health and strength to do service for the Master as Bishop's agent, also as an officer of spiritual things. Will you kindly remember him in fervent prayer that the Lord will rebuke the powers of darkness and give our brother complete health and strength for his day and duty, and the glory will be the Lord's now and forever.

Your brother and sister,

S. W. L. SCOTT.

HINTS FOR THE PRIMARY TEACHER.

CENTRAL TRUTH. Love shown by obedience.

Introduction to Lesson.—Here is a boy (turning to the board and making a straight colored mark to represent the boy will attract the attention) that I know. I wonder if you have ever met him, or if you know anyone else who is like him. Hear what he says:—

"I love you, mother," said little John.

Then, forgetting his work, his cap went on.

And he was off to the garden swing.

And left her the wood and water to bring."

(Change position of the mark.) Do you think that he loved her very much? Did your mother ever hear her boy say, "I love you, mother," and then that same boy forget to try to please her?

Here is a girl (a different colored mark). Shall I tell you about her?

"I love you, mother," said little Nell;

"I love you better than tongue can tell."

Then she fretted and pouted full half the day,

Till mother was glad when she went to play."

(Change position of mark.) I hope that this little girl does not live at your house.

I think these children's love is somewhat like this cane; it promises to be of help, but—Fred, you can try leaning on it. (It breaks.) What is the trouble? It isn't worth anything. It cannot bear any weight. Neither can mother lean on Johnnie's or Nellie's love. The children say well, but don't do well.

Here is Fan (another colored mark):—

"I love you, mother," said little Fan;
"To-day I will help you all I can.
How glad I am that school doesn't keep!"
Then she rocked the baby till it went to sleep.
Then she hurried and brought the broom,
And swept the floor, and tidied the room.
Busy and happy all day was she,
Busy and happy as child could be.

"I love you, mother," again they said,
Three little children [three white marks] going to bed.
Now how do you think that mother guessed
Which of them really loved her best?"

Is Fannie's love like this worthless cane? No; hers is like this one. (Show a perfect cane, and let one of the largest children try leaning upon it) You see, her mother can lean upon—depend upon—her— It may sometimes be hard for Fannie to give up her own way, as it is hard for this cane to be leaned upon, but she chooses, above all other things, to please her mother, and she will bear it. She proves her love by her cheerful obedience.

Jesus wants us to be to him what this little girl is to her mother. He says that which means "It is of no use to say that you love me unless you try to please me—unless you obey me." We will learn the exact words from the Bible: "Why call ye me," etc. (Drill.) Which will you be, a "say well" or a "do well"?

We shall fail even when we mean to do our best, unless we seek God's help. Let us bow our heads and ask him now to help us. (Repeat prayer after teacher.)

HISTORICAL SETTING.

Review briefly last week's interesting lesson. To-day, instead of finding Jesus in the crowded city of Capernium, we see him spending the night alone in prayer on a mountain. (Draw a mountain, with a mark to represent Jesus.) In the morning his scholars, or disciples, came to him (additional marks), and from them he chose—(show the number on your fingers, it will help to hold attention), to be with him all the time. These men he calls apostles.

If there is time, stop to drill on their names, but do not do this at the expense of the spiritual teaching. If you have the picture roll of the last quarter of 1894, containing the picture of Christ and his disciples on the mount, it will serve a good purpose here. If not, the simple drawing already on the board will answer every purpose.

Sitting here among his disciples, what did Jesus say? "Why call ye me," etc. He then told his hearers that he would show them to whom the man is like who listens to hear God's voice, add then obeys it. "He is like a man which built a house," etc.

This illustration and its companion picture may be vividly presented by the picture-roll, or by building with blocks two houses, one on secure, and the other on insecure, foundations.

We are building in one of these two ways every day. Shall we obey God's voice and so be like the wise man, or shall we be careless and so like the foolish one? Let us seek God's help that we may build wisely.

Mrs. Kennedy's song, "Little Builders," found in "Special Songs and Services," will be of great help in fixing this lesson in the hearts of the children.—S. S. Times.

[THE Hints for the Primary Teacher clipped from the Sunday School Times show how a lesson in obedience may be made very impressive even to very little children. The little poem is one that we have often used and always with excellent results. By a skillful teacher, many plans may be figured out from one such lesson. Let us gather good wherever we can and turn all we gather into the Master's storehouse.—ED.]

Letter Department.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 28.

Editors Herald:—Since conference, I have spent three Sundays with the Saints in Cleveland; also attended one of their branch business meetings, in which some changes were made in the working force. Our worthy young brother, E. H. Garrett, was ordained to the office of Priest. He will be quite a help to the work there, as he is a very willing helper and an energetic young man. Parents that are blessed with such sons, who are willing to devote time and talent in the interest of the work of God, in these days when so much wickedness abounds, and so many allurements to entice the young, have great reasons to rejoice. The writer felt impressed during his ordination that the young brother, if faithful to his calling, would become a polished shaft in the work of God. So may it be.

Sr. Case, of St. Clairsville, Ohio, was baptized soon after conference, in Kirtland, by me. The young son of Bro. Barstow, and Sr. Nellie Allen have been recently baptized by Bro. W. H. Kelley.

On the 7th inst. I took my departure for Wheeling, where I held a few meetings. Was greeted with good-sized audiences. I baptized three, one of whom was Bro. Tary's father, who if permitted to see the 30th inst. will have reached his seventieth mile post. And thus he was born again, at the age of three-score and ten years. What a glorious thought, to be transferred while standing on the verge of the grave, from the kingdom of darkness, into the kingdom of light! May his remaining days be those of peace and comfort. The present outlook for the work in Wheeling and vicinity is very encouraging, as there are many investigating our claims.

On the 16th our young brother, A. H. Mills, and I, arrived at Bannings, Pennsylvania, which place is located on the Youghieghen River. While there we had the use of Mr. Wright's hall, gratis. We delivered ten sermons and held other meetings. During our sojourn eight persons were baptized. I blessed twelve children and organized a branch to be known as the Fayette branch. Bro. Joseph Maxon was elected president, F. E. Federer priest, G. W. Hileman teacher, Sr. Ella Maxon clerk, Bro. Milford Maxon treasurer. We have now fourteen members up in that valley, with the prospects of many more being added soon. I ordained Brn. J. M. Kennedy and Robert Perrie to the eldership. Both of these men live on the Monongahela River at the headquarters of the three factions; viz., Bickertonites, Cadmanites, and Hixenbaughtites; the second a faction from Bickerton, the third a faction from Cadman. The leaders of these respective factions claim to be the legal successors of Joseph Smith the Martyr, but strange to say, these aspirants, who make the plea that Joseph Smith, Jr., was a prophet of God, have discarded the revelations that came through him to the church for its guidance and protection, in their entirety, keeping up a continual cry, "Beware of the Josephites!" How preposterous the idea of men accepting a man as a prophet and rejecting his revelations. "O, consistency, thou art a jewel!" However, there are a number of good, honest, upright souls connected with these factions besides many others, who have become disgusted with the inconsistent claims of these organizations and are investigating the claims of the Reorganization. I have arranged to have Bro. D. L. Shinn, who at one time was a prominent member among them, and editor of their church paper, to labor for about two months along the Monongahela River. And I have strong reasons for believing that much good will accrue to the church, through his efforts. A few days after we began operations at Bannings, Bro. Mills became ill and returned to Allegheny and is now confined to his bed, with typhoid fever. He is being kindly cared for by Bro. R. G. Smith and Sr. M. E. Hulmes and others of the Saints. He is better at present writing. We expect soon to see him on his feet again. We trust the Saints will remember him in their prayers.

Good reports coming in from the brethren in the field.

With love to all, I remain,

Yours in gospel bonds,

GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

FARGO, Mich., May 26.

Editors Herald:—Bro. F. M. Cooper and I are at the above-named place, with the gospel tent reared, and have started the campaign in the district for the conference year. We came here on the 15th, reared the tent on Saturday, the 16th, intending to occupy twice on Sunday but the unusual heavy wind rendered it impossible, as we had to lower the tent flat to save it. Monday evening found us at our post, with everything in order. The cool evenings have been somewhat against tent work, nevertheless we have continued each consecutive evening with an increasing audience.

Thus far we have had the best of order and attention, and we have felt blessed in presenting the truth. Bro. Cooper with his terse and logical reasoning is fast removing the prejudice that has obtained in the minds of the religious element here. We have done more or less preaching in this vicinity for the last three years, and have met much opposition from the Christians or Disciples, and the Methodist people; and to crown the climax of persecution they sent for the apostate, Joseph Musser, who delivered several lectures against us. But, thank God, the few Saints have stood the storm well and are more and more confirmed in the truth.

Quite a number of the Methodist people are attending our meetings. We have met the pastor several times. He told us he was not bigoted, but wanted to be fair. We have many friends here, and some are very much interested. Our prayer is that God will add to his church daily such as should be saved.

I left General Conference more fully confirmed in the work than ever before, with a greater desire in my heart to help move it on to victory. I spent a month or more in Detroit after conference, and am pleased to say I found the Saints there a kind and zealous people, whose desires are to push the Master's cause forth in that city. Bro. Briggs suggested to them the propriety of a tent to do missionary work in that city. It met their approval, and accordingly they appointed a committee to see what each member would contribute towards the enterprise, and two of the sisters volunteered to visit some of the business men and give them a chance to help us. When the writer left there they had nearly a sufficient amount to pay for the tent; besides, they had bought material for twenty-four benches, which cost twenty dollars. Bro. Allen and the writer made the benches, donating the labor.

Prospects look bright for a marked advancement of the work in this district. Crops of all kinds look fine. I hope the Saints will not forget the financial department of the work.

Saints of Eastern Michigan district, remember that our conference convenes at Cash, Michigan, June 13. Come, bringing with you the Spirit of the Master, as also a good large lunch basket well filled. We expect Bro. Briggs will be with us, also the missionary force of the district.

J. A. GRANT.

BELL GROVE, W. Va., June 4.

Editors Herald:—I desire to call the attention of the Saints of the West Virginia district to the appeal of the Bishop and his counselors to the general church, in the Herald of May 13, 1896, in regard to tithing law. I hope you will respond nobly to the call of the Bishop and do your part in helping to support the missionary force placed in the field by the last General Conference. The conference placed the missionary force in the field relying upon the confidence they had in the church of supporting them, and if we fail to do our duty in this regard it will bring reproach upon the church and be detrimental to the cause of Zion.

And I want to say to the Saints of the West Virginia district that we have not been doing our part in this respect as we should have done. The Saints of other States have been making a sacrifice of their means for fifteen years to send the gospel to us, and to-day two hundred and fifty precious souls in the West Virginia District are in the kingdom of God because of the sacrifices made by others. And now, dear brethren and sisters, inasmuch as we have been grafted into the vine the Lord means for us to bring forth fruit and the sentence is if we do not we will be cut off.

And I know of no better way than to take of our means and send the gospel to other fields and thus gather the honest in heart into the kingdom of God.

Some may say that times are so hard that they cannot spare anything. Will we let the cause of Zion go down because times are hard? Remember, the Lord's people are those who have made a covenant with him by sacrifice, and if we give only when we can easily do without the amount given, there is no sacrifice in it. Now I can speak for myself. I feel ashamed that we of this district have done so little in this regard, and I think if the brethren and sisters would give this matter proper thought they would all feel ashamed.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, let us covenant with God and each other that we will give to the cause of Zion during this conference year from one to five dollars for every member in the district, and if we will do this it will make the district self-sustaining, and we will feel better, and the Lord will prosper us in our temporal affairs.

As I have been placed in charge of the district during the year it is expected of me to declare the whole counsel of God, and tithings and offerings are a part of his counsel. And we learn that the Pharisees rejected the counsel of God against themselves not being baptized with John's baptism; and it seems to me that if we neglect his counsel in regard to tithing and offerings we would come under the same condemnation.

In conclusion, I will say for the encouragement of the Saints that since General Conference I have preached through the counties of Jackson, Roane, and Calhoun; baptized two in Jackson, three in Calhoun, and one in Roane. I never had better attention and better liberty; and there are more calls for preaching than I can possibly fill.

Your brother in the one faith,

G. H. GODBEY.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 4.

Editors Herald:—The conference of the Des Moines district which convened at Boone, May 30, was a pleasant gathering, all the business being transacted without a jar. The preaching and social service was spiritual throughout. The former officers of the district were sustained, notwithstanding Bro. Nirk's desire to be released from the presidency. It was decided in conference that the writer should be placed in charge of the district tent for the season.

Angus, Boone, Nevada, Milo, and Oskaloosa have desired the use of the tent this summer.

Should there be any other places where the Saints in this district desire us to labor with the tent and will so notify me, we will try and reach them so far as time and circumstances permit.

We are now laboring in the tent, corner Twenty-first and Forest Avenue, West Des Moines. The weather has been somewhat against tent work, but we are still hopeful. Bro. W. H. Kephart is with me at present. My permanent address is Box 308, Centerville, Iowa; my field address, Room 221 Youngerman Block, Des Moines. Should you write to either place, letters will reach me.

In hope of eternal life,

WILLIAM THOMPSON.

HEARNE, Texas, May 24.

Editors Herald:—I feel thankful to God for the pleasure of reading your columns, including the many cheering letters from the different brethren and sisters; also the Home Column. It fills my heart with joy unspeakable; and still if I could I would love for the world to know that this latter-day work is of the Lord; and as I am five miles from the church and my husband sick I do not see the Saints often and cannot go to church for want of health to my husband.

I hope that the Saints will remember him in the Prayer Union, that his health may be restored. He is so old an feeble; he is seventy-six years old and he can't expect to live a great while longer, but we want him to be remembered in the Prayer Union that if it is God's will he may get well again, for he has been healed by the prayer of faith so often that we know nothing else. With love to all the Saints, I am,

Your sister,

M. L. SQUIRES.

KENSETT, Ark., May 29.

Editors Herald:—I entered my field of labor the 1st of May, and preached a short series of sermons at Coats. The Saints and friends seemed to enjoy my visit very much. I then visited Martin's Creek country. An appointment was given out for me at the Ward schoolhouse, but lo and behold! Mr. Ward had the key and said I did not belong to the United States, and that the directors had forbidden my preaching in the house, so I laid my Bible on a large stump that stood in the yard and set a lantern by it and preached to quite a crowd who sat on stumps and logs and some on the ground.

Next day Sunday, at eleven o'clock it was estimated that the house would not have held one third of the crowd, even though the house had been opened; so we preached out in the woods and that afternoon we baptized one and blessed two children. After this we moved to another schoolhouse, having been invited by a member of the Christian Church, and had a house full of overflowing all the way through, except one night, while we preached a series of six sermons. The people seemed to be interested and several invited me to return. Elder D. R. Baldwin, of Raven-den Springs was with me a part of the time in this meeting. He says he will do all he can for the work as his circumstances permit.

The next point was Bald Knob, where I preached four times and had a very good hearing, notwithstanding the busy season of the year and some sickness and one death in the neighborhood. Bro. Sands is the only officer they have in that branch and he is striving to keep the little flock in the faith, and they are getting along reasonably well. I organized a Sunday school for them and promised to return sometime in August.

I came here yesterday to visit Mr. J. H.

Lair, who lately moved here from Iowa. Mr. Lair is not a member of any church, but is a gentleman and his wife is a Saint. Bro. O. B. Thomas will doubtless remember them. Sr. Lair is the only Saint in the town and the people here are unacquainted with our doctrine. Late yesterday afternoon one of the prominent ladies of the town, a member of the M. E. Church, came over and invited me to occupy their pulpit, as their minister had failed to come as per appointment; so I introduced our work here last night and will continue over Sunday.

I have made three charts that I use in preaching and debating. Chart No. 1 is copied largely from Bro. I. N. White's dispensation chart, but charts Numbers 2 and 3 are my work, and as some of our ministry have already got copies of chart Number 2 and some others have asked for copies of it I thought I would give a description of it through your columns, that all may have the benefit of it if they wish.

It is made on a sheet four yards long with loops at the top to hang it up, and is laid off in four columns; and four inches from the top is a black line the entire length of the sheet and above it the following words: "The Church of Jesus Christ." The lines that divide it into columns intersect the line at the top and under the horizontal line at the top and in the first column is the word Organization, and then the column is filled out in the following manner; to wit: Apostles, Mark 3: 14; Seventy, Luke 10: 1-3; Prophets, Acts 13: 2; Evangelists, Acts 6: 6; 21: 8; Bishops, 1 Timothy 3: 1; Elders, Acts 14: 23; Priests, Hebrews 8: 4; Teachers, Ephesians 4: 11; Deacons, 1 Timothy 3: 13.

And in the next column is the word Doctrine.—Faith, Hebrews 11: 6; Repentance, Acts, 2: 38; Baptism, Mark 16: 15; Laying on of hands, Hebrews 6: 2; Resurrection, John 5: 28; Judgment, 20: 12; Sacrament, 1 Corinthians 11; Tithing, Matthew 23: 23; Distributing to the poor, Acts 6. The third column first word is Practice.—Preaching the gospel, Mark 16: 15; Baptizing, Matthew 28: 19; Laying on of hands for the gifts, Acts 19: 6; Laying on of hands for blessing children, Mark 10: 13-16; Laying on of hands for healing sick, Mark 16: 18; Laying on of hands for ordination, Acts 13: 3; Anointing the sick with oil, James 5: 14; Partaking of bread and wine, 1 Corinthians 11: 23-30; Distributing to the poor, Acts 6: 1-4.

And at the top of the last column are the words, "Spiritual Gifts." Wisdom, 1 Corinthians 12: 7; Knowledge, 1 Corinthians 12; Faith, 1 Corinthians 12; Gift of healing, 1 Corinthians 12; Miracles, 1 Corinthians 12; Prophecy, 1 Corinthians 14: 1; Discerning of Spirits, 1 Corinthians 12; Tongues, 1 Corinthians 12; Interpretation, 1 Corinthians 12: 10.

You notice that I have thirty-six points on this chart and it is all proved by the Bible references. Then I have these words written under the column in two-inch type: "A glorious church, without spot or wrinkle."—Eph. 5: 27. I used one and one half inch stencil type to print the body of the work and two inch type for the headings. I do not want anyone to think I claim perfection for this work, but I believe it is the first chart of the kind giving an outline of what we believe and teach, and I find it a great help in new places or in debate.

Chart No. 3 is a description of the so-called Christian Church, commonly called Campbellites. It is laid off the same as the one described in this article; but instead of filling out the columns as in the above I have only put in such points as they teach, and then I cite to the page in Alexander Campbell's work to show where they get their doctrine; and as they teach that certain things have ceased, such as apostles, prophets, and spiritual gifts, I have that all in as their doctrine, and cite to the page in the "Christian System" where Alexander Campbell taught it. But I never use this chart only in debate; then I hang it up by the side of our church chart when they are in the affirmative, and if my opponent teaches their doctrine he affirms that false doctrine, and the people can see the difference.

I reserve no rights in this chart business, but all are welcome to copy and use it.

In bonds,

JOSEPH WARD.

KINGSTON, Mo., June 4.

Editors Herald:—The debate between I. N. White and J. H. Carter is ended. To say it was a onesided affair hardly expresses the situation. It is reported that the Christian Church tried to get Clark Braden to meet I. N. but he wanted his fifty dollars in sight before coming, which was too much for the feeble church to raise. Popplewell was written to, but he was too busily (?) engaged and could not come, and knowing that Carter was no match for Bro. White, they manifested an indifference towards the debate, only two or three of their members attending; also published in both papers at Kingston that they would not indorse Bro. J. H. Carter, thus acknowledging their utter defeat.

It is acknowledged universally that it was a complete walk-over, for the truth. I. N. understands the Campbellite situation thoroughly and anyone in need of such services, will do well to obtain the services of the "Cyclone" debater.

We troubled the waters after the discussion, baptizing Bro. Jesse Seeley, and thus men are pressing into the kingdom.

Yours,

T. W. CHATBURN.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 1.

Editors Herald:—This morning finds me at the pleasant home of Bro. and Sr. Pickering. We have again set up the tent on Dale Street between Pierce and Kellet Avenue, and although the weather has been anything but favorable since we came, yet the people have turned out well considering that Springfield was supposed to be in the path of the coming cyclone; especially when it was to be here Saturday night between seven and nine o'clock, and you may imagine how the people that came to the tent looked and began to leave the tent in a hurry when a slight puff of wind came about 8:50 p. m. I found it necessary to dismiss without singing the doxology.

But I am happy to say that our last year's effort at the point was not lost. I see many of the old faces and they appear more kindly towards us, for I have received invitations from some to call and see them, which we did not have last year; and those who were interested we found to be still interested and the prospects look better.

Bro. and Sr. Pickering have done all they can to make the meetings a success, having had a thousand bills struck and scattered from house to house, and have also sent for tracts and gospel songs to help the meeting.

We do truly feel thankful to our heavenly Father for raising up such noble men and women. Their souls are in this work. We are in hopes of raising up enough new Saints to organize a branch, for we feel that there are many honest-hearted people here who will eventually come into the work.

I am trying to run the tent all alone this season, because of the scarcity of ministers in this large field. I am often asked, "Where is that fat fellow," meaning Bro. Keck, and also Bro. Cather. They are remembered by many here. There are other Saints at this place who are doing all they can to advance the work by loaning tracts and Ensigns to the people, and many are believing the work.

In bonds,

HENRY SPARLING.

HENDERSON, Iowa, June 4.

Editors Herald:—I was with Bro. O. B. Thomas, assisting him in running the tent at Prescott, but was called here to officiate in the funeral of Sr. Beeby; and now our conference comes off at this place, which I have to attend.

At Prescott our attendance was not large but very attentive, the same ones in attendance all the time. I was sorry to leave, as some were to be baptized the next day by Bro. O. B. This would leave him alone in the confirmation, unless Bro. Johnson, of Burlington, came to his help. I wrote him to this effect. Bro. and Sr. Messenger's kindness to us and their zeal and love and earnest desire for the salvation of souls will never be forgotten. May God ever bless them is our earnest prayer. Yours still for the right,

HENRY KEMP.

RUTLAND, Wis., June 4.

Editors Herald:—On May 15, we came to this place with our tent at the request of the people this being one of the places where tent work was done last year by Elders Wildermuth and Peterson.

Since coming here we have held services nightly, with one exception, and two and three services on Sunday, with fair attendance and a seeming interest on the part of some. One has signified his readiness for baptism. Last Sunday, May 31, the Saints of Wilder turned out enmasse and came to the tent, and after refreshing the inner man they, together with the Oregon Saints, assembled in the tent at one o'clock p. m., for prayer and testimony meeting. Forty-two Saints were present, besides a number of outsiders, and for an hour and a half we enjoyed one of those seasons of refreshing which only come from the presence of the Lord. Even the outsiders caught some of the inspiration of the hour, for on the following day the merchant of the village said to me: "I have been in a great many prayer meetings, love feasts, etc.; but I was never in such a meeting as that. Why," said he, "those people were not afraid to talk and could stand up and tell what they knew." Well, thank the Lord, God does not leave himself without witness even among the unbelievers.

We expect to remain here over one more Sunday and then move into Oregon, a small town four miles distant, where tent work was done last year. How long we will remain or where we will go from there time and circumstances will determine. Looking for speedy triumph, I am,

Your brother,

CHAS. H. BURR.

"THE CHRISTIAN SYSTEM."

I WAS requested by some brethren, at the late General Conference, as I told them I had Alexander Campbell's book, "The Christian System," to publish a certain item which some of our people have been quoting, and which not being able to find in the editions now in use, they suppose must have been in the first edition.

I find I have not the first but the second edition. But I find I have extracted, for a work which I have been preparing, "Thoughts on Campbellism," words of the same import, which I will copy here, with various other items from "The Christian System," which may be of interest to some of our brethren.

1. In his address "to Friendly Aliens," on pages 342, 3, Mr. Campbell, persuading them to be immersed, says:—

Enter into the full enjoyment of the blessings of the kingdom of heaven by confessing the ancient faith, and by being immersed in the name of Jesus, into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, for the remission of sins.

Then you may say, as Jesus said to the Samaritan woman, although the Samaritans have a temple on Mount Gerizim, a priesthood, and five books of Moses, "Salvation is of the Jews." Although the sects have the oracles of God, human creeds, many altars, priests, and religious usages, the enjoyment of salvation is among them who simply believe what the apostles wrote concerning Jesus, and who from the heart obey that mould of doctrine which the apostles delivered to us. In so doing you will, moreover, most wisely consult your own safety and security from the signal calamities that are every day accumulating, and soon to fall with overwhelming violence on a distracted, divided, alienated, and adulterous generation—(the sects).

The italics are mine.

Again:—

If you (Friendly Aliens) are the people of God as you profess, and as we would fain imagine, then you are commanded by a voice from heaven, "Come out of her my people that you partake not of the sins of Mystic Babylon, and that you receive not a portion of her plagues."—Rev. 18: 8, 9.

Thus you see the people of God are called out of "the sects;" for notwithstanding they have the Bible, "Many altars, priests, and religious usages," salvation is of us who have been immersed, etc. The sects are the "distracted, divided, alienated and adulterous generation."

2. In section 5, of chapter 27 of "The Christian System," on expediency, Mr. Campbell says:—

So negligent, too, has the kingdom of Christ been on some of these points, that she has not, at this hour, a received copy of the living oracles (the Bible). We, American and English people have a received version by authority of a king, but we have not a received original by the authority of any king, or government, civil or ecclesiastic. A startling fact, truly! but who dare deny it?—Pp. 91, 92.

So you see, brethren, that notwithstanding they have not a reliable version of the "living oracles," what they have is all-sufficient. We do not need new revelation or a refreshing of spiritual "endowment from on high." They build on "the Bible and the Bible alone;" and yet they confess that they have not a received copy of the same. They have no Bible—word of God—by any authority "civil or ecclesiastic." "Startling fact, truly!"

Then what is the real foundation of their boasted reformation? Is it not based wholly upon the opinions of Messrs. Campbell, Scott, et al.?

CAMPBELL ON THE GODHEAD.

3. On page 20 of the Christian System Mr. Campbell says:—

We have, in fact, but one God, one Lord, one Holy Spirit, yet these are equally possessed of one and the same divine nature.

This is a complete sentence and speaks for itself. On page 110 we have a contradiction of this:—

That God exists, is a truth, but not a fact.

In fact, then, we have no God at all! This is also a startling fact, truly!

I know he is splitting a hair to show the difference between the words truth and fact, and in doing so he shows the difference between an imaginary and a real God. The former has an existence, but the latter has not!

ON REGENERATION.

4. Pages 201 and 207 Mr. Campbell says:—

A child is alive before it is born, and the act of being born only changes its state, not its life.

Summing up conclusions on page 207, he says:—

First. Begetting and quickening, necessarily precede being born.

Second. Being born imparts no new life, but is simply a change of state, and introduces into a new mode of living.

Third. Regeneration or immersion; the former referring to the import of the act [of being born] and the latter [immersion] to the act itself, denote only the act of being born.

Thus you see that regeneration or immersion, denotes only the act of being born. That is to say, that the new birth—of which Jesus spoke in John 3: 5,—only means immersion in water!

The word regeneration refers only to the import, or meaning of the act "and immersion the act itself." This language is too clear to be misunderstood. Let no one dare deny Campbell's water regeneration.

But let us "bring to view," as our Advent friends would say, some of Campbell's sophistry. In the first place he declares that: "Being born imparts no new life, but is simply a change of state." Immersion therefore cannot possibly mean regeneration, because in the natural birth (used by him to illustrate the spiritual) generation takes place, life is received, and nothing remains yet to be done only "a change of state." Until generation takes place there is nothing to be born. Even so there must be first a regeneration before there can be a new birth. According to the gospel, we are begotten—regenerated, by the word (begetting and generating are synonyms); then born of water and of the Spirit.

Again Campbell is wrong. A child does not receive its life before it is born. It only lives its mother's life then. But after its birth it receives its own power to live. As Adam was created—born—before he received "the breath of life," so every child receives the breath of life, and its intellectual power after it is born, and never otherwise. On this subject, the great leader and reformer, Campbell, knew less than many a midwife, although they may not be able to reason quite so logically. Such is Campbellite sophistry which has deceived many thousands of honest people.

If regeneration is the import of the act of being born, then generation may be the import of the act in a natural birth, which is an absurdity; for there can be nothing born until it is first generated or begotten. The birth may be a result, or a consequence of the generation; but generation and birth are entirely separate and distinct acts.

A good rule for determining the import of language is to substitute the definition for the word under consideration. That word here is regeneration or generate. Webster defines this "to beget," "begetting," etc., and he defines this by the word "generate," "generating," etc. Now let us try Campbell's logic by this rule:—

Regeneration or immersion—the former referring to the import of the act, and the latter to the act itself, denote only the act of being born.

Now substitute the word "begetting" for "regeneration," thus:—

Begetting, or immersion—the former referring to the import of the act, and the latter to the act itself, denote only the act of being born.

That is as much as to say that to be begotten means to be born!

In Campbell's creed, you see, generation, or begetting, and immersion, all mean one and the same act. A man is born before he is generated or begotten!

WHAT WILL WE DO WITH THE NEGRO RACE?

THIS is a question that confronts all Latter Day Saints. Shall we preach the gospel to them or because of race prejudice be above preaching to them? We build ships and send missionaries to preach for people on the islands, while thousands and thousands of the African race live here in the United States and are advanced far ahead of the islanders. It is true many of them are very illiterate and ignorant, but nearly all of them can understand you readily when the gospel is preached and made plain to them. We do not have to learn a different language before we can get them to understand us.

I was called on a few days ago to go and preach for a small branch of the negroes and some of our people objected to my going; but understanding the race prejudice in the South and being invited by Perry Booker, president of the St. Joseph branch in Monroe County, Alabama, I went down on last Saturday. They had meeting appointed for me and I went to the home of a white member—a member of the Latter Day Saints' Church, and put up there while I preached to the negroes. She received me and cared for me kindly. I preached three times for them and confirmed two members. We have about thirty members at the place. Perry Booker, priest, preaches once a month for them. On Sunday morning I was blessed with great power and while standing preaching the gospel by the power of God's Holy Spirit, I saw some melted to tears. The language of Peter came to my mind that truly God is "no respecter of persons," but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him.

Christ died for all; he tasted death for every man. Did he not die for the negro race as well as for any other people? If not, then the term "every man" is used in a generic sense, and not in a numeric. This is the position S. F. Cayce has taken to establish the Calvinistic doctrine—that Christ died only for his people—the elect. He took that position in debate with me last fall in Arkansas.

But evidently Christ died for all in a numeric sense.

God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

Now if this be true, why not preach the gospel to the negro race? We should be wise servants and harmless as doves.

It would be unwise to put up with them or equalize ourselves with them. This would destroy our influence with the white race. But we can put up with white people while we are preaching to the negroes and not injure our influence with our people. Some of our preachers say, "O, it will not do to preach for the negroes; we will kill our influence with the white race," even one of our leading ministers expressed himself thus a few years ago. Now Sam Jones and other popular evangelists preach to them and nobody says anything bad of them for it. Have we got a higher estimate of ourselves than Sam Jones and noted men have of themselves?

I see but one great evil among the negro race; that is, gross immorality, but we send missionaries out every year to preach against such evils, wherever found. The negro race is humble and willing to hear the gospel. Why not preach for them when opportunities afford? I think I shall do so when I can. In bonds,

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

IN reading Brother Bear's articles on everlasting happiness and punishment I thought his No. 1 was sound, logical, and scriptural; but in reading his No. 2, I think he is on the extreme in one point, which is in regard to the misery of those who shall fail to gain salvation in any of the kingdoms of glory—their misery, suffering, or punishment never to cease.

I beg to differ from the brother on this point and wish to state my reasons for believing otherwise. In the vision of Enoch as found in Doctrine and Covenants and the Inspired Translation, God told Enoch that it is his glory and work to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man. In Doctrine and Covenants 18:1 it is explained that it was written eternal, everlasting, and endless, to work on the hearts of the disobedient, and that it is so written because it is God's punishment and his name is eternal, everlasting, and endless as well as God, Jehovah, etc.

It seems to me that if the torment of them who suffer themselves to be overcome and lose the higher grades of salvation was designed by the Almighty to be unceasing through all eternity, that he, being good and just above all who may have attained to a degree of purity, would have so plainly stated; but there is no scripture that says so. But in several places is stated the end of such punishment; and if there is to be no end of it, what sense would there be in the end being alluded to? The Lord, according to the testimony of Matthew 24: 32, (I. T.,) speaks of the end of the world or destruction of the wicked. If there was not to be an end of the present condition of the world, what sense would there be in saying the end, if anything had no end, like a circle or eternity or space? What sense would there be to say there was an end of it or to it? The same about the kingdoms of glory or heavens,—if there is a third heaven, which Paul bears record there is, then there must be a first and second heaven; else no sense in a third. And if any will to be disobedient they will be except they had knowledge that the disobedient who continue so till death should never cease to suffer torment.

I believe that Lucifer had more knowledge of God's purposes than any of us can attain to in mortality; and it does not seem quite consistent that if he understood, saw reasons to believe, or actually knew that they who should rebel against the laws of heaven would have to suffer misery always, he would not, nor could not, do as he did, rebel and draw the third part of heaven with him.

In the vision of Joseph the Seer and Sidney Rigdon it explains that none but the sons of perdition come under the condemnation of Satan and the hosts that fell with him, who deny after receiving a foretaste, etc. I believe the Devil and all the worst that ever have been or will be will finally be saved; that Satan knew this before he rebelled, but such will never be saved in a kingdom of glory as the brother showed, but have to abide (stay there always in a kingdom that is not one of the glories. I think Paul so understood when he said "every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess;" and that after all have been punished for their evil deeds they will then through the goodness and mercy and justice of God enjoy eternal life, of happiness and peace.

I could not believe in God being good if I believed otherwise, for how could he be perfectly good and have all power if he kept any in misery always? I think that to teach never-ending misery and woe to be to them who fail to live right is discouraging and does more harm than good—like some pills the doctors make.

A LAMONIAN.

ST. LOUIS' AWFUL DISASTER.

THE most terrible atmospheric storm in the world's history, so far as destruction of property and loss of life is concerned, laid its clutch upon the city of St. Louis last Wednesday afternoon, May 27, about five o'clock. Nothing that can be said or written would convey to the Herald readers the awful reality of the calamity that has befallen this city, and the scenes we have witnessed within the last forty-eight hours beggar all attempt at description, as, in order to describe anything properly, comparisons through observation and experience must be had; and nobody on earth has ever seen the likeness or extent of this calamity.

Standing on the corner of Park and Jefferson Avenues last night, as far as the eye could reach anyway almost, nothing but a scene of ruin and destruction met the eye. Magnificent churches, residences, with roofs blown away; walls thrown to the ground, iron fences twisted and broken; the streets full of timber, glass, and rubbish; lace curtains hanging on dangling telegraph wires; trolley wires and broken poles scattered everywhere. Beautiful Lafayette Park is utterly ruined, its trees nearly all gone; fences, statuary, buildings, everything swept away. Magnificent furniture, pianos, pictures strewn everywhere, broken and destroyed.

South and southwest from here the storm tore its way for three miles, leaving scarcely a building uninjured and thousands destroyed. South Broadway from the courthouse south to Lyon Park is one scene of ruin.

This morning I visited in some respects the saddest scene yet witnessed—the morgue. Bodies torn and mutilated beyond recognition,—friends searching and finding their missing dead, are scenes that I cannot dwell upon.

I haven't been able to visit East St. Louis, but the work of destruction and death went on there as it did here, and is seen from the west end of the Ead's Bridge, where serious damage commenced at that point, which is near the center of the city north and south, but east from the line of the worst trouble, although many of the great stores were stripped of windows, goods flooded, etc. The solid arches of masonry that formed the upper part of the east end of the great bridge were lifted by the terrible force, like a toy, and dropped to ruins. A train was on the approaches at the time, but by a miracle seemingly few were killed; the train was blown over and a large number injured. Just below the scene of disaster and loss of life was appalling. Nearly all the fine steamers, and tugboats, and ferry boats, with but one exception, were either sunk or wrecked partially or totally—blown on the other side; and down the Mississippi River, wrecked buildings for miles along the levee; and the scene across the river of ruined warehouses, wharfboats, elevators, etc., makes the heart sick and faint.

Most of the Saints lived in the northern portion of the city and the chapel on Elliott Street will still stand as a place of exposition and warning to the people of this great and wicked city. So far as known no loss of life or limb has come to any of our people; but the returns are not all in, and we cannot tell; but the disastrous part of the storm went south of the residence of most all of our people. Bro. Noah Cooke on Rutger Street, suffers loss, the south end of his home being completely blown out, his neighbor's chimney falling through his roof. The rain flooded his house, damaging furniture, bedding, etc., and the scene from his place indeed defies description. I saw a piano forte nearly battered to pieces taken out of a house corner Seventh and Rutger, where twenty-three people were killed. Bro. Evans' people, near Bro. Cooke's, had their home nearly torn to pieces. This is the only serious damage that I have yet heard of sustained by the Saints. East St. Louis may tell a different story when we get all the news from there.

The roof of the Merchant's Exchange building, occupied by R. G. Dunn's Commercial Reporting Agency, where my daughter Bessie was employed, was torn off and hangs on the telephone and telegraph wires in front of the building. A falling wall struck the car which she was coming up home in during the storm. Some were injured, but she was not; but the line was stopped as well as every other in the city, and she had to grope her way through darkness and tempest home as best she could. The lights were out in the city and the night was one of terror and sleeplessness.

A few of the car lines are running, but the destruction of power houses and lines cripples travel and business still.

The lower part or railway bed of the Ead's bridge was unhurt and trains commenced running across the river yesterday.

It is probable that about five hundred lives were lost, but the number will never be known, as many were drowned, and collection of facts is hard to get at in anything like an exact manner, the path of the storm being so widespread. The death list already found is near four hundred, and the ruins are upon many yet.

The appearance of the sky just before the storm was prophetic of the disaster—terrible in its very appearance and action before the onslaught; and I not only saw but felt disaster in my spirit, and so told the family; but with it came the assurance of preservation, which we believe we can reasonably attribute to divine interference.

The Saints have reason for gratitude and thankfulness that their lives are preserved. Will they heed the tempest's warning voice, if indeed the moral and intellectual reasons for righteous living fail?

The great wonder is, looking upon the extent of the track of the storm, the awful destruction and waste of property, that not hundreds but thousands of lives were not sacrificed. The accounts of escapes are miraculous and wonderful. This is hastily written in reply to note of anxious inquiry received yesterday from Bro. Asa Cochran.

The impression that this old earth is getting to be an unsafe place of abode is growing among the people. It is true that "men's hearts are failing them for fear of those things that are coming upon the earth;" but the exalted position and difference between the prophetic mission and seership of Joseph Smith and his relation to the Almighty God, who sends, controls, or withholds the lesson and judgment of the "devouring tempests," the great mass of people will never discern; as against that army of self-called and self-ordained "prophets," enthusiasts, and cranks, who get hold of or copy enough of truth to mix with their mistakes to confuse, terrify, or disgust and ultimately harden the great mass of the people.

"As it was in the days of Noah." Who so low or slack in faith as desire that Jesus Christ should turn out to be a false prophet?

"But when ye see these things come to pass, lift up your heads and rejoice," not at the destruction of the wicked, but because "the hour of your redemption draweth nigh."

I feel greatly satisfied and at peace because of that mercy and grace that hath showed me the exalted truth of God in these last days.

EXPLANATION.

LAST fall a gentleman claiming to be a "free-thinker" submitted to me quotations from the four Gospels, which he supposed contradicted each other. Herewith I submit my reply to him, as it may assist others in meeting the same or like questions:—

Dear Sir:—As per your request and my promise, I offer the following explanation upon the texts of scripture you gave me. Should this not prove to be satisfactory, please let me know wherein it is not clear to you; for I am mutually desirous of understanding the truth.

Matthew 28:7. This is the first scripture you cite. This was an event of A. D. 33, and written by Matthew either five or thirty-one years later. Matthew wrote two accounts; one in Hebrew, the other in Greek, and Bible scholars are not agreed as to which one furnished the copy of our common version of the Bible. The language purports to be that of the "angel" as he addressed the "women." And it was to them, the angel said, "he goeth before you into Galilee." The time of the conversation of the "angel" with the "women" was "as it began to dawn." Quite early in the morning, you perceive.

John 20:19. John wrote his testimony A. D. 97. This verse is historical and states that it was "the same day at evening." It was the morning of the resurrection that the "angel" said to the "women," "He goeth before you into Galilee," and in the evening of "the same day" "came Jesus and stood in the midst." There was ample time from morning until evening to make the journey from Jerusalem to Galilee and return, waiving all consideration or thought of the unknown powers possessed by the resurrected Christ.

Luke 24:13-33. As I understand Luke was the historian of the church at that early period, and he wrote his book A. D. 63. He is more full and complete in detail of statement, but it will be observed that he is in exact accord and full agreement with Matthew 28:7 and John 20:19. Let us note the points of agreement:—

1. "Two of them went that same day;" that is, the day of Christ's resurrection.

2. From Jerusalem to Emmaus was their journey. This is in harmony with the statement in Matthew 28:7. Then follows the conversation between the "two" and Christ.

3. The "two" had learned of the resurrection from "certain women;" the said "certain women" obtained their information from "a vision of angels."

4. It was "towards evening" when Christ and the "two" arrived at Emmaus.

A word of explanation as to the Jewish use of the word "evening." The Jews count the day from noon or midday. Thus the Jewish evening begins with noon, and as it was "towards evening" that the "two" and Christ arrived at Emmaus, the statement, "He took bread, and blessed it and brake, and gave to them," was without doubt the meal that we call dinner. As the twelve hours from midday till midnight are covered by the word "evening," there is ample time for the return to Jerusalem.

After the meal Jesus "vanished out of their sight." That is he took his leave of those with whom he was eating. The "two" "rose the same hour and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together." This agrees with John 20:19. The "two" inform the eleven of what had transpired, and gave their evidence as to the resurrection of Christ. Now read Luke 24:36, and you have Christ present at that Jerusalem meeting, just as reported in John 20:19.

Mark 16:12. This is your last citation. Mark wrote his book A. D. 65. The verse you gave is taken out of the middle of the narrative concerning the resurrection and appearing of Christ to witnesses. The reference is his going to Emmaus in company of the "two."

I have carefully examined the Scriptures you gave me, with others upon the same topic, and can assure you there is no material contradiction of fact.

If the following simple rule was observed by those who read the Scriptures, as well as those who write or speak in regard to their contents, there would not be so many mistakes made: 1. Be sure who is speaking, 2. Be sure who is spoken to. 3. Be sure of the subject matter spoken of.

Would be pleased to hear from you further upon this subject, or any other; and if I can aid you to an understanding of the Scriptures, I will cheerfully contribute.

Respectfully,

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

More than six months have elapsed since I wrote the above letter, and as it has not been acknowledged, I have concluded that the explanation was not satisfactory, or that no additional opinion from me is desired. Perhaps it may prove helpful to some one in meeting a freethinker's objection, and I am of the opinion that we should ever be willing to assist one another in the gospel work for establishing truth.

In bonds,
R. M. ELVIN.

OUR WILD INDIANS.

EDITORS HERALD:—Below are a few extracts taken from a book entitled "Our Wild Indians," written by Col. R. I. Dodge, who has had thirty-three years' personal experience among the Red Men of the West.

I send them for you to publish if you think they would interest or benefit the readers of the Herald. On pages 42 and 43, he says:—

The Indian is, to my mind, an evidence of the unity of races. Wherever we find them, savages have something in common each with the other. Supposing the western continent to have been originally uninhabited by man, there is no physical or geographical reason why it should not have been peopled from Asia or elsewhere. Even before the days of David, people "went down to the sea in ships;" the winds blew then as now, and a succession of adverse storms might have peopled America, from any one of the earlier maritime nations of the eastern world. Whether the very many customs which the Indians have in common with the ancient Jews are evidence that the "lost tribes" have been found, or whether the fair complexion, blue eyes, similarity of language and "coracle" of the Mandans, prove that the Welsh expedition under Madoc really settled on the banks of the Ohio, it is not my purpose to inquire.

In speaking of the different languages, on pages 45, 46, he says:—

At this moment, there are no less than sixty-six bands of Utes, separated widely in localities, and speaking languages undoubtedly referable to one root, but so various as to dialect, that any but the closest observer might with reason insist that they are different languages. . . .

It will thus be seen that his own warlike temperament and disposition to roam have been to the Indian the cause—fruitful as Babel—of the confusion of tongues.

We read on pages 109, 110, this statement:—

Voudouism and Fetichism, being simply forms of belief in magic or idolatry, are discarded as forms of religion; and accepting polytheism as the starting point of religious belief, the Indians for so utterly savage a race, have made very remarkable progress in their religious tenets.

There is a curious point of resemblance between the beliefs of the wild Indians and the Christian. Both believe in two great beings.

On page 115:—

It is a curious fact, difficult to account for, that no tribe of North American Indians is addicted to Fetichism in any of its forms.

On page 128, after giving an account of a "sacred conclave," witnessed by a friend he says:—

The points of resemblance between this and some ceremonies of the Jews, Greeks, Romans, indeed, of almost all comparatively primitive nations, are worthy of note.

He writes on page 131:—

It is asserted by squaw men, and others in position to know, that almost every tribe of Indians has its secret societies, which have passwords, grips, and signs as the Masons, Odd Fellows, etc. I have never been able positively to ascertain the truth or falsity of this statement. Most of the Indians deny it, but from the grim silence that falls upon an occasional old head-man, when asked about it, I suspect it may be true.

Several of the wild tribes have a mysterious material something, which they regard as the Jews did the "Ark of the Covenant."

The Plains Indians are in no sense idol worshippers, and this "something," is not worshipped but loved, venerated, and held in sacred awe.

Page 358:—

The Indians are not polytheists, nor students of history; yet many of their religious dances and ceremonies might have been adopted bodily from Grecian ideas of three thousand years ago.

Page 512:—

The origin of the Indian custom of taking the scalps of their slain enemies seems to be lost in obscurity. The books of the Maccabees, in speaking of atrocities and cruelties practiced on the Jews by the Syrian monarch Antiochus the Great, state that "the skin was torn from the head." Scalping would seem therefore to have been a Syrian, and probably a Jewish custom, and may be another evidence of the identity of the Indians with the lost tribes of Israel.

I have not commented upon the above extracts, thinking it needless; every Book of Mormon student will note a relation of them with the account given of the Lamanite.

Yours for truth,
RALPH W. FARRELL.

A DAY AT FALL RIVER, MASSACHUSETTS.

On Sunday, May 31, 1896, the Saints assembled from various parts of the district to pay their respects to our departed friend and brother, President W. W. Blair. The church was appropriately decorated in black, relieved by white here and there. The flowers were pretty; a very handsome bouquet was sent by Mrs. Witson, member of the Baptist Church. A portrait of Bro. Blair was tastily draped and hung over the pulpit.

The services began by an organ voluntary, rendered very effectively by Sr. Livina Ashton. Hymn 243 in the Hymnal was sung, and Bro. Samuel Ashton offered prayer. "One sweetly solemn thought" was sung as a duet by Srs. Linney and Ashton. As the melody of the human voices, accompanied by the organ, filled the church with sweet harmony, it seemed to bring us nearer the divine and feelings of a tender and sad character, but not without hope, filled the heart. Bro. F. M. Sheehy, the speaker for the occasion, took no text, but said his sermon would be more on the line of personal reminiscences. The preacher spoke very feelingly and related many incidents and characteristics that were prominent in the life and work of Bro. Blair. Among other things he said that religiously Bro. Blair was a product of this church, and his life and work could not be separated from the church. He came to the church unbiased and was for that reason better prepared for the work. He was a man of whom it could be said or was said that "everybody loved him." He was always cheerful and looked on the bright side of things. "I well remember when I first saw him in California and heard him pray in the house where I was then living. After praying for the church and its officers, he remembered the young man that was staying there. And as a boy I thought how wonderful it was that this man of God should remember me."

Bro. Sheehy spoke with pathos and very many, no doubt, in the audience felt like trying to live as near to God as it was evident that our departed brother did. A solo was rendered by Sr. Linney. Dr. Gilbert then called upon to make a few remarks, which he did, speaking of the time when the work first began in the Eastern States, the first branch being organized at Fall River. Other incidents were related by Bro. Gilbert which brought a wave of sympathy over the audience that left few dry eyes.

Bro. John Smith also spoke a few words in closing, appropriate to the hour. Altogether it was a profitable time and one long to be remembered. The prayer and testimony meeting was spiritual and all seemed to enjoy the meeting. An illustrated lecture on the Book of Mormon, by Bro. Sheehy, closed the day.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Northwestern Kansas District:—The importance of using the tent to introduce the gospel in cities and towns in this district, where buildings to preach in are difficult to obtain and costly when secured, cannot be overestimated. Arrangements have been made to begin work with the tent at once. We expect to use it at Concordia, Kansas, during the month of June and possibly longer. Through the kindness of Col. N. B. Brown, we have secured the use of his beautiful grove, in a central part of the city, free. Bro. C. D. Carson has volunteered ministerial aid with the tent, during the forepart of the summer, at least. As I do not know Bro. J. W. Gilbert's present address, he will please accept this as an invitation to assist us in this district this summer, and especially with the tent.

To transport the tent from place to place, to purchase gasoline for lighting and cooking, to rent chairs or lumber for seating, etc., etc., require some money. All these necessary expenses, incidental to starting the tent work, have been temporarily provided for by a brother interested in the progress of the work, thus enabling us to make a beginning. That the tent work may be continued with vigor and success during the summer I take this opportunity of inviting the branches in the district and the Saints not in branches to contribute to a tent fund. Presidents of branches will confer a favor and materially aid the work by calling attention to this. As times are hard and crops have been light for several years in these parts, a small donation will be a sacrifice to many, but just as acceptable to our heavenly Father. A very little from each one would enable us to keep the tent in use.

Send all donations to Bro. William Landers, Concordia, Kansas. He will make a full report to the next district conference of the amount received from each branch or individual; also a detailed report of expenses will be made.

During month of June, my address will be Concordia, Kansas.

W. S. PENDER,
Submissionary in Charge.

To the Saints in California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, and Arizona; Greeting:—By the action of the late General Conference I have been placed in charge of the above mission. Ill health has thus far prevented me from issuing a pastoral letter or even giving any thought to the field. Nor am I now able to more than announce the appointments of submissionaries. Bro. J. F. Burton has been assigned to the South Sea Islands mission, and it has been agreed that Bro. J. B. Price shall take his place in California. I therefore appoint Bro. Price in charge of California. Bro. J. C. Clapp will have charge of Oregon and Washington; and Bro. J. Arthur Davis will be in charge of Nevada.

I am anxious to get into the field and labor, and as soon as my health will justify will start. I hope to be able to heartily cooperate with all the missionaries and local workers. We are being admonished by unmistakable signs that the time for activity is shortening. Let us be found diligently employed in our several places of assignment and let our hope, prayer, and labor combine to produce a harvest such as the Lord of the vineyard will find pleasure in. Let the year be filled with good works.

Asking your prayers that God, if it be his pleasure, will quickly restore me, that I may come into your midst and thrust in the sickle with the rest, I remain,

Your coworker for Zion's weal,
JOSEPH LUFF.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

I wish to inform the church that Dr. Le Plungeon's new book entitled "Queen Moo and the Egyptian Sphinx" is now on the market. It contains 277 pages with 73 illustrations, price $6.00, published by the Doctor; sold by subscription.

I am authorized as an agent to sell the book; so any of the Saints desiring a copy can buy through me and get the benefit of my commission.

I have not given the book a thorough reading, so am not prepared to comment further than the fact of Dr. L. being the most eminent explorer of the ruins of parts of Yucatan now known to the public, he and his wife having spent twelve years there on the work.

Respectfully,
F. M. SHEEHY.

No. 5 Codman Hill Street, Boston, Mass., June 3, 1896.

REUNION NOTICES.

The Southern Missouri district reunion will commence July 17, at Mountain Grove, to last ten days. The following speakers have promised to be with us: Apostle J. R. Lambert, Bishop E. L. Kelley, and I. N. White; besides our own force of Elders. There will be provision made for camping, and pasture can be had at five cents per day. Those who wish to board, if they will write us we will try and make special arrangements. The singing and music will be conducted by Mr. Ray Schofield and Miss Mattie Sterns, who have kindly offered their services for the occasion.

We look for a good time for the Saints, trusting as many as can will come and bring the Spirit of our Master with you.

Come prepared to take care of yourself and another, and remember it takes money to pay the expenses of these speakers; so come prepared to help.

It will largely depend upon how the Saints turn out to this one whether we shall have another next year or not.

Those that have tents, bring them; those that have not, buy yourself a little muslin and make one. Don't wait until the time, but commence to prepare now.

TWO DAYS' MEETINGS.

There will be a two days' meeting held in the gospel tent at Oregon, Wisconsin, on Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21, 1896. All are cordially invited, and as many as can, bring your blankets with you, so you can be prepared to lodge in the tent.

HENRY SOUTHWICK, Pres.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The Northeastern Kansas district conference will convene on the 20th and 21st of June, at 10:30 a. m., at Atchison, Kansas, where we hope to see the district well represented by all that can make the sacrifice to come, that a profitable time may be experienced by all. The ministry that cannot come, send in a full report of labor done since last conference, that all may be done in order and for the furtherance of this great latter-day work.

JAMES BAILLIE, Sec.

The Southern Missouri district conference will convene Saturday, July 25, at Mountain Grove, Missouri. Conference to be held in the tent. Each branch is hereby notified to hold business meeting at least two weeks before conference and at once send report to district clerk, W. A. Brooner, West Plains, Missouri. Please let us have a report from each of the ministry, whether you have been working or not, and send report before conference convenes. Saints, let us have a full attendance, and come with prayerful hearts, and with the feeling that you have business at the conference. The work is gaining in magnitude in our district, hence requires that each member magnify his calling, and help push the work. Let us do all we can to make the conference and also the reunion a grand success.

W. C. CATHER, Pres.

DIED.

LEWIS.—Mary Lewis was born February 22, 1819; died April 27, 1896, in Boomer,

Iowa. She embraced the latter-day work in an early day, in which she remained faithful until death. Her earthly remains were laid to rest by the side of her companion, who had preceded her over twenty years, in the Boomer cemetery. Funeral sermon by Elder H. N. Hansen.

LARKEY.—Bro. Peter Larkey, at his residence, No. 536 West Lake Street, Chicago, Illinois, May 13, 1896, aged 49 years, 1 month, and 26 days. He leaves a wife and five children, with many other relatives and friends, to mourn. The deceased brother died in the faith with a hope of a glorious resurrection. Services at the house and grave by Elder S. C. Good. Burial at Forest Home cemetery.

LEWIS.—At Malad, Idaho, May 12, 1296, Sr. Elizabeth Lewis. Deceased was born in Carmarthenshire, South Wales, January 19, 1822. With her husband, John Lewis, she emigrated to Utah in 1856, because they had accepted the angel's message and the restored gospel. In 1867 she was baptized into the Reorganized Church by J. W. Gillen, and lived a devoted member till the end. She was known far and wide, and respected as being one of the pioneers of Malad. The funeral services were conducted at her residence by R. J. Anthony. Although the weather was unfavorable and cold, the turnout was large. She left one son and daughter and twelve grandchildren to mourn because she was taken away. Both she and Bro. Lewis are and will be greatly missed. May her rest and new life be glorious.

JOHNSON.—At his home in Merced, California, April 17, 1896, Augustus Johnson, aged 76 years. A native of Sweden, husband of Mrs. Sarah Johnson. Deceased had lived in Merced for many years and was loved and respected by the whole community. Mrs. Johnson was formerly Mrs. Thorley, of Stockport, England. Mr. Thorley was president of Stockport and Stalia Bridge branches of Latter Day Saints. Joined in 1842, and his wife two years later. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have taken the Herald for many years, and while Mr. Johnson did not belong to the church, he was a believer and devoted reader of the Herald.

MCMILLEN.—Bro. Butler McMillen, at Glenwood, Ohio, May 11, 1896, from being burned by a gas explosion in a coal mine where he was working. The explosion occurred at three p.m. on the 10th, and he died the following morning, being 36 years, 10 months, and 17 days old. He leaves a wife and daughter, and other near relatives. He was taken to New Philadelphia for burial, and the funeral services were held in the Saints' church at Blake Mills on the 13th inst. Quite a large number of relatives and friends from a distance was present at the services. The discourse was by Elder William H. Kelley, of Kirtland, Ohio. So passes each in turn to final accounts.

OXENDALE.—Sr. Jane Oxendale was born in 1858, at Norton, Yorkshire, England; died March 21, 1896, at her home near Netawaka, Kansas. Sr. Oxendale was the wife of Bro. William Oxendale, who now mourns the loss of a faithful wife. Three sons and two daughters also are bereaved of a loving and kind mother. Saints and friends were numerous at the funeral and the sermon was by Elder J. T. Davis. Another sister has gone to a more enduring and glorious home.

THOMASON.—At Argentine, Kansas, April 30, 1896, Myrtle Juliet, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Franklin Thomason, in the bloom of childhood, being 7 years, 7 months, and 11 days old. She was loved by all who knew her. Funeral services were held at the house, conducted by Elder Arthur Allen, assisted by Elder George Hicklin. A large concourse of sympathizing friends was present. Her remains were taken to Independence, Missouri, for interment.

PHILLIPS.—Sr. Caroline Philips was born in Bath, Somersetshire, England, July 9, 1821; died at Henefer, Utah, May 16, 1896. A large number of the traveling ministry will remember the hospitality of Sister Philips.

HAWLEY.—Harry J. Hawley, of Audubon, Minnesota, accidentally shot himself May 24, 1896. Was aged 18 years, 10 months, 17 days. Harry was baptized into the church June 9, 1894, at Pelican Rapids, Minnesota. Was a faithful member of the church until the fatal hour. The pride of the family, loved by all. The funeral was held in the Baptist church in Detroit, Minnesota, in charge of Elder T. J. Martin; the sermon by Elder I. N. Roberts, to a full house of sympathizing friends. May God comfort the heartbroken family. The sadness of this affair was deeply felt by all. The accident occurred at the residence of Bro. William Nunns, where Bro. Harry was visiting, and attending meeting and baptism as conducted by the writer.

I. N. ROBERTS.

PREMO.—At Magnolia, Minnesota, May 31, 1896, Bro. Charles Premo. He was a faithful member of the church for nearly twenty years or more, and at his death, as near as could be ascertained, was 79 years and 5 months old. Served in the Union Army for several years. The funeral was in charge of Captain Philander Phinney, in whose company the brother served, the sermon being delivered by Elder I. N. Roberts in the M. E. church to a large audience of friends. The old soldiers did honor to the brother, as they were the pallbearers. Peace be to his ashes. God comfort the mourners.

I. N. R.

BEEBE.—At her home near Henderson, Iowa, May 28, 1896, Sr. Lucy A. Beebe. She was born in Shelby County, Ohio, July 31, 1823; united with the church in an early day; came West with the church in 1846, from Nauvoo, and passed through all the trials and tribulations and sufferings as endured by God's people for the love of the truth. Settled in Mills County, where she listened to the testimony of truth and life as brought to them by Elders Blair and E. C. Briggs. Her mind was opened to conviction, her heart swelled within her with gratitude to God. She believed, obeyed, received anew the evidence of the truth according to promise, and has from that time borne a strong, faithful testimony to the goodness and mercy of her heavenly Father, as manifested to her. She honored her profession, was highly respected, and beloved by all that knew her, both far and near. We all felt to say, "O that our last end in this life might be like hers."

DON'T STOP TOBACCO.

HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.

From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.

Eureka Chemical & Mfg. Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully,

P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR WEEKLY REST DAY.

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabbath" under the Mosaic Law, and "The Lord's Day," "First Day of the Week" or "Christian Sabbath" under the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and able, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added supplementary chapter by Elder W. W. Blair is included.

It briefly recounts the leading events connected with Mr. Smith's early experiences up to the organization of the Church, in 1830. Three additional chapters describe American Antiquities, and Hebrew Relics, one containing the statement of Dr. Loderer, a converted Jew, etc., all corroborative of the claims of the Book of Mormon. FREE... TO MINISTERS AND Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Kueperich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these, other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell" and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls to heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY, 715 and 717 Market St., Philadelphia

To whom all orders for the books must be sent, accompanied by the postage, and a statement that the applicant is a minister, or student for the ministry, as follows:

NICHOLAS II. IS CROWNED.

NICHOLAS II. has been formally crowned Czar of Russia, the religious complement to the actual beginning of his reign more than a year ago. The ceremony in Moscow yesterday was the conspicuous and central feature of the coronation celebration, which is stretching its barbaric splendors through a period of weeks. It was a scene that could not be duplicated in any other land, as unique among practices of men as Russia is unique among nations.

This unrestricted autocrat who expends millions to impress an idea on his subjects probably does not know how vast is the horde of people in his domain. It is believed that 120,000,000 is well within the facts, comprising probably 90,000,000 Russians and 30,000,000 others of every variety of race, from Laplanders and Finns to Cossacks and Circassians. How this absolute rule can be applied to this heterogeneous mass of human beings has been the standing marvel of the world, and probably the explanation of Leroy-Beaulieu comes nearest to the truth. He says:—

“Czarism, this anachronism in the midst of modern Europe, is in reality nothing but a patriarchal theocracy, disguised through the compelling needs of the times and neighborly influences as military and bureaucratic government.”

This close student of Russia believes theocracy is really the basis on which the autocracy rests, and that to the Russian no division is conceivable between the Church and the State. This theory coincides with the religious enthusiasm that is observable everywhere among Russians, even imparting to their revolutions a fervor of devotion and heroic sacrifice that have been likened to the spirit of the martyrs. It is this sentiment that is at the root of the ceremony which was celebrated yesterday at Moscow—a sentiment that inspires a confidence that Russia is ruled by God and the divine law and that the Czar is infused with the gifts of the Holy Spirit when he is anointed with the sacred oil. In spite of this strong underlying feeling, which the government seeks to intensify, and seemingly inconsistent with it, the Russian has a deep appreciation of the fact that the machinery of this autocratic government runs to robbery and oppression. The young Czar has been singularly free thus far in his reign from any violent outbreak in the ranks of the reform element, which is constantly brooding over its oppressions. This must not be attributed to any deserving deeds of the Czar, but to a disposition on the part of the revolutionary party to give him a chance. “The people are waiting,” said Stepniak, and the same authority, who was the authorized spokesman for the more conservative reformers, who do not believe in bombs, declared just before his death that they were waiting in vain. He summed up the new Czar thus:—

“Nicholas II. was the first to confess publicly that the country, through its accredited representatives (the Zemstos) was asking him for constitutional reform, and he, the Czar, was refusing to accede to its demands and meant to refuse as long as he could. Nicholas II., although in all the ardor of youth, is satisfied with following the beaten track of officialism. Under Alexander III. bureaucratic despotism was hidden in the shade of autocracy; now we shall have the frank supremacy of bureaucracy keeping in its shade a Czar as a figurehead.”

Stepniak's revelations of the woes of the Russians confirmed all the harrowing facts set forth by Kennan, coupled with a belief shared by most observers of the Czar's tendencies that no permanent reform was to be inaugurated. Death remained and still remains the portion of any man who shall advocate the principles of the Declaration of Independence within the Muscovite domain. It is of little comparative consequence if the “impetuous nobility” be “relieved” by reductions in the interests on their loans, which they cannot pay anyway; or if Russian prisoners in Siberia receive partial amnesty; or if “warnings” against newspapers be recalled; or if the rest of the proposed program of imperial philanthropy be carried out. The cause of all will remain. “No outward whiteness can ever make Russian autocracy anything but a whitened sepulcher within.” The wheels of the bureaucracy will not be stopped an instant, and the despotic grind will soon catch up again to the point where it may drop a few threads now in deference to the obligations of a new monarch's coronation. Not a suggestion has been made anywhere of any substantial relief to the Russians, and until a Czar is crowned who has the courage to extend civil rights and relax the severity of the laws against honest political agitation Russia must remain a gigantic relic of semibarbarism, still dead to the impulses of the generation.—Ex.

THE FEAR OF THUNDER.

SAFEST PLACE DURING A STORM IS IN THE HOUSE WHERE THERE IS NO DRAUGHT.

“ELECTRIC storms are far less dangerous than the majority of people imagine,” writes Edward W. Bok in June Ladies' Home Journal. “That a severe lightning storm is terrifying admits of no question, and will sometimes bring uneasiness to the heart of the strongest man. But the real danger is slight. The chance of lightning striking a house, for example, is not one in a million. Particularly is this true in cities, strung as most of them are with electric wires. The greater danger from electric storms is in the country, and even there the danger may be lessened if the simplest and most common-sense of precautions are exercised. The surest electric conductor is a draught, and if, when a thunderstorm approaches, it is seen that all the windows and doors liable to occasion a draught are kept closed, the danger is at once reduced to a minimum. If a woman is 'caught' out in a thunderstorm the safest shelter is a house; the most dangerous a tree, particularly an oak tree. It is a peculiar, but nevertheless a proven, fact, that the oak is the most susceptible of all trees to a current of electricity. Over fifty per cent of trees struck by lightning storms during one summer, the Government statistician tells us, were oaks, while the beech tree was the least harmed. Therefore, the worst possible place of shelter in an electric storm is under an oak tree, while by all odds, the safest place is in a house and out of a draught. . . . The actual danger (from an electric storm) is, in truth, not from the lightning nor the thunder, but from the nervous condition into which women allow themselves to fall. And this is a danger which they can avoid. A little calm thought and a few grains of common-sense will do it."

THE PEOPLE'S FOOD.

SO MUCH for the development of the food investigations. But what are the results already gained, and what is to be expected in the future? One thing which is brought out by these and other investigations is that we make a fourfold mistake in our food economy.

1. We purchase needlessly expensive kinds of food. We use the costlier kinds of meat, fish, vegetables, and the like, when the less expensive ones are just as nutritious, and, when rightly cooked, are just as palatable. Many do this under the impression that there is some peculiar virtue in the dear food materials, and that economy in their diet is somehow detrimental to their dignity or their welfare. And, unfortunately, those who are most extravagant in this respect are often the ones who can least afford it.

2. Our diet is apt to be one-sided. It often does not contain the different nutritive ingredients in the proper proportions. We consume relatively too much of the fuel ingredients of food—those which are burned in the body and yield heat and muscular power. Such are the fats of meat and butter, the starch which makes up the larger part of the nutritive material of flour, potatoes, and sugar of which such enormous quantities are eaten in the United States. Conversely, we have relatively too little of the protein or flesh-forming substances, like the lean of meat and fish and the gluten of wheat, which make muscle and sinew, and which are the basis of blood, bone, and brain.

3. We use excessive quantities of food. This is true not only of the well-to-do, but of many people in moderate circumstances also. Part of the excess which is bought is thrown away in the wastes of the kitchen and the table, so that the injury to health from overeating, great as it may be, is doubtless much less than if all of the food we buy were actually eaten. Probably the worst sufferers from this evil are the well-to-do people of sedentary occupations—brain workers as distinguished from hand workers. Not everybody eats too much; indeed, there are some who do not eat enough for healthful nourishment. But there are those, and their name is legion, with whom the eating habit is as vicious in its effect on health as the drinking habit, which is universally deplored.

4. And finally, we are guilty of serious errors in our cooking. We waste a great deal of fuel in the preparation of our food, and even then a great deal of the food is very badly cooked. A reform in the methods of cooking is one of the economic demands of our time.—From "The People's Food—A Great National Inquiry," in June Review of Reviews.

CHURCH AND STATE IN UTAH.

THE following will give our readers an idea of the feeling of many on the question of the Mormon Church interfering in politics. The manifesto referred to is the one recently issued by church authorities, which provides that no leading church officer shall accept of civil office until he has first consulted and obtained consent of presiding authorities in the church. The leading officers of the church all indorsed and signed it except Moses Thatcher of the Quorum of the Twelve, who respectfully declined to do so. The two following clippings are from the Salt Lake Semi-Weekly Tribune for June 2:—

HIS NAME NOT PRESENTED TO THE CONFERENCE YESTERDAY.

Hon. Moses Thatcher is still reaping the fruits of his refusal to subscribe to the so-called "new manifesto" of the Mormon Church, and was subjected to further humiliation at the general conference of the Young Men's and Young Ladies' Mutual Improvement associations at the tabernacle yesterday.

For several years past Mr. Thatcher has been one of the counselors to Wilford Woodruff, General Superintendent of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association, but when the names of the officers were presented for confirmation yesterday afternoon, Mr. Thatcher's name was not read.

It is also understood that Mr. Thatcher's name has been dropped from the list of officers at all of the stake meetings of the associations which have been held since the date upon which he refused to sign the new manifesto.

CACHE COUNTY DEMOCRATS.

MOSES THATCHER EULOGIZED AND SUSTAINED.

Union of Church and State Denounced—Will Wait and See How the Manifesto is Enforced.

[TRIBUNE SPECIAL.]

LOGAN, June 1.—The Democrats of Cache County met in convention to-day. . . .

On church and State this is said: "We are opposed to any union and to any attempt at union, real, apparent, possible, or potential, of the church and the State. We declare the State to be the supreme authority in all matters that concern the political rights and duties of its citizens. We believe it prejudicial to the interests of the State if any organization existing under its laws should visit penalties, disabilities, or disadvantages upon any citizen of this State because of his free participation in the ordinary duties of citizenship. The State has the right to demand that whatever rules of discipline may be adopted by any society for the regulation of the political action of the society's own members, those rules must be consistent with the laws of the land and the genius of free institutions, and should be uniform in operation, applying with strictness and impartiality to each member of the class for whom they are intended, and showing favors to none. We reassert with all possible candor and plainness that any interference with the free exercise of the elective franchise will not be tolerated or condoned in our midst, so long as the Democratic party shall be able to maintain inviolate these sacred rights of our citizens. We reaffirm the correctness of the doctrines of personal liberty which were announced by the reconvened convention, as principles which are dear to the heart of every true citizen of this republic, and we indorse the course of our own esteemed fellow citizen, Moses Thatcher, in maintaining his stand upon those principles of truth and justice, amid the combined misfortunes of sickness, hostile criticism and the honest misconception of perhaps both friend and foe. We herewith nominate him as a delegate to the Chicago convention, with the right of naming his alternate, pledging him in the future, as in the past, our cordial support and sympathy and assuring the electors of the State that as Democrats we have no thought of deserting in his present extremity this upright and courageous, though disabled citizen.

"In relation to the recent manifesto issued by the Mormon Church, we do not feel called upon to interpret or to anticipate in advance the practical workings of the rules of discipline which it promulgates."

The resolution caused much discussion, principally by Samuel Oldham, Joseph Kimball, and William Murray of Wellsville. But all opposition and proposed changes were overruled and the resolution passed.

The Provo Enquirer of June 2, after quoting resolutions passed by the Democrat Convention at Provo, adds:—

The resolutions as reported had a hot reference to the manifesto. This M. M. Warner moved to strike out. He then argued that the convention was to deal with national politics, and local politics need not be considered now.

"The fears that are in the breast of some of a union of church and State are groundless." He said: "The people are too wide-awake to be robbed of their liberties."

A. D. Gash agreed with Mr. Warner's position and asked that manifesto matters be stricken out.

The two leading non-Mormons having thus led out A. O. Smoot agreed with their positions, and Mr. Warner's motion carried.

The Enquirer of same date says editorially:—

The Democrats in Utah County in their convention, very wisely decided that the late manifesto needed no attention in their platform; at the same time, they reaffirmed their endorsement of that new "Declaration of Independence," penned by O. W. Powers, and adopted by the reconvened Ogden convention. B. H. Roberts had to recant his position on that platform, and others may yet feel disposed to follow. We are sorry to see others hold out and reaffirming a former wrong.

The following from the Enquirer of May 29, indicates that not only is the Utah Church disturbed over this question, but even the Sunday school is likely to feel the wave of agitation. Where will it end? We hope in good to priest-ridden Utah.

SPRINGVILLE'S SPITFIRE.

News from Springville is to the effect that charges have been preferred against the Sunday school superintendent for reading a notice in Sunday school of a celebration on Memorial day, under the auspices of the Ladies' Republican Club. There is nothing offensive to the notice. . . .

It happened to be a Republican who read the notice, by request, and he evidently thought it was a matter of general interest that would give no offense. No sooner had it been read, however, than certain Democratic officers of the school, among them James Caffery and J. E. Hall, who both voted against the late manifesto, were up in arms because of another attempt to mix church and state.

It really seems to us that our Democratic friends are oversensitive on this score. It is hardly probable, in the first place, that the good Republican ladies of Springville would desecrate Decoration Day by propagating political principles over the graves of dead veterans and heroes; and, in the second place, we do not believe the superintendency saw any partisanship in the notice, much less had a desire to be partisan by reading it in the Sunday school. In fact, it was explained to the disgruntled Democrats that no thought of partisanship was intended, but the explanation was not believed. Those disturbed by the reading of the notice were determined to carry the case on, and it will be interesting now to see where they will land.

It is only necessary to say that this cannot be an exaggerated report by enemies of the Mormon Church, as both the Editor and manager are zealous Mormons as we know from personal acquaintance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Is an elder who uses tobacco, and who is not enrolled in any of the quorums of the church, eligible to be chosen to preside over a branch or district?

Q.—If a branch or district should see fit to choose such a person to preside, would it be in harmony with the position the church occupies?

Ans.—The church has made no rule by which the eligibility of a man to the office of president of branch or district because of the use of tobacco, is affected. An attempt was made at last session of conference to adopt a rule declaring that no one should be chosen to any office in the church who was addicted to the use of tobacco; but the resolution was denied. From this we should conclude that if a branch or district choose to select such a person to preside he would be eligible.

The Twelve resolved some few years ago that they would not recommend, or support anyone for mission work under their appointment, who used tobacco, or was addicted to drink. This rule remains unchanged by them, but governs their action only. Some of the districts and branches have adopted a rule that no person addicted to the habits of using tobacco, or liquor drinking should be chosen for branch, or district officers. We believe Lamoni branch has such a rule. The general church has left it as a matter to be disposed of by branch, or district, at their discretion. For these reasons, that there is no rule of the general church, it might be said, that it would not be out of harmony should such choice be made.

Q.—When a priest of the branch has been elected presiding priest of the branch, has he the authority to select or appoint others to assist him in the duties of his office; or must the branch as a matter of common consent appoint them?

A.—He has not such authority, unless the branch should so authorize or direct. The branch should by vote either grant such privilege, or direct the priest so to choose.

Q.—Is it the duty of the one who feels that he has been wronged to go to the brother that he feels has offended him and try to be reconciled? Jesus says if thou hast aught against thy brother go to him, etc. A difference of opinion on this matter is causing some trouble.

A.—If a brother wrongs another, and the knowledge that he has so wronged another is known to him, he should at once make an effort to have the matter set right. A proper application of the same principle would dictate, that if a man becomes suspicious, or feels that he has been wronged by another, it is his duty to go to the brother who he thinks has wronged him and ascertain the fact whether he has been wronged or not. However, if a man has no evidence that he has been wronged by another, simply to feel that he has without proof is an unjustifiable suspicion and should be put away from the mind. Many things are done by people, hastily and without thought of injuring, or wronging others, which by being brooded over by those inclined by nature to be suspicious, or oversensitive, become wrongs for which they will accept neither explanation, nor apology. This condition should be carefully guarded against; as it is one of those situations in which it is better to suffer wrong than to do it.

Q.—If an elder is called to administer to the sick would the following excuses be valid? "I am tired," "I have to get up so early to go to work," "I can't leave my business"? It seems to me that when a poor brother has sickness in the family and sends for an elder nothing but sickness should excuse him.

A.—We are not prepared to state whether such excuses would be valid; as it would depend on the circumstances of each case. We believe it to be a fact, however, that elders are sometimes put into such conditions of body and mind by labor, mental and bodily exertion, attendant on their ministry, that they are unfit to administer to good effect; in such a case, an excuse might be justifiable. However, it is in the order and harmony of the faith and the practice of the church, for any and every elder to respond to the calls for the elders to visit the sick and afflicted, when it is at all practicable.

PAPAL ENCYCLICAL ON CHURCH UNITY.

LONDON, June 11.—The Courier de Bruxelles announces that a papal encyclical on the unity of the church and the supremacy of the See at Rome will shortly be issued in Latin. The document is now complete and the translation into the various languages is awaited so that they may appear simultaneously with the original.

It is a doctrinal work in which the Pope's intention is to prove the supremacy of the Papal See by numerous quotations drawn from the Greek fathers and ancient Oriental liturgy.

Copies of the encyclical will be forwarded to all the reigning sovereigns and also to the heads of dissenting churches, because the leading aim of the document is to bring about the union of the various churches with the Church of Rome and show why the union is necessary.

The Pope starts from a fundamental principle that the church must be one. He sets forth the essential features of unity of doctrine and faith and makes an appeal to all well-wishers of humanity to work for this end.

Those who watch the religious and political developments of the modern world will be interested in the foregoing item, a cablegram to the New York Journal. It is held by some that prophetic declarations predict the ultimate union of the Eastern and Western Catholic churches. It may be that the Pope hopes to gain in spiritual supremacy by contributing to the extension of the political supremacy of the Czar. The latter, however, is the head of the Greek Catholic or Oriental Church. How the problem may be solved is a matter for conjecture; an interesting and important one however.

AUGUST SCHRADER, the "divine healer," uniquely costumed, began operations at DeKalb, Illinois, June 8, but fled from the place when confronted by one who recognized him as one who formerly had represented himself as an agent for the Nebraska drought sufferers. We refer to such matters that we may keep track of the modern soothsayers, and necromancers, and other sacred characters, so called. It seems apparent that the protection of the people and exposure of the false is guaranteed only by an acquaintance with the true, the genuine, in spiritual things; that such protection consists in an intelligent conception and application of the truth; a knowledge of the written word and an acquaintance with the Spirit of truth. It should not be difficult for men and women of sound minds to remain uninfluenced by such characters as Schrader; however, there are and have always been errors so cunningly devised and so plausibly clothed in a garb of apparent good that no mind unaided by the divine Spirit could discern or detect their real character. It remains yet true, as of old, that protection is only guaranteed to those who know God, and who out of that knowledge obey and imitate him.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. M. H. BOND, writing from Sorrento, Illinois, June 9, says:—

Two baptized at Alma on Sunday, more to follow; some will be baptized here I expect. New place; none of our people here and no preaching heretofore. Good interest in St. Louis; cyclone stirred things up; lots of strangers out I hear last Sunday. I ought to be several places at once.

BRO. R. M. MALONEY, Wichita, Kansas, June 8:—

Wife and I are here for a few days visiting relatives. Have been in Spring River district for several weeks and have been busy in gospel work; preached forty-two times in seven weeks. We are on our way to Oklahoma. Prospects are good there for the work this year. I am hopeful of many friends being made to the work and several joining the fold. There are many more places to preach than I can respond to. Hope to be worthy of the Divine Spirit to guide me in my ministry.

BRO. RICHARD ELLIS, Sydney, New South Wales, May 11:—

We are still increasing in numbers in this branch; very fair attendance, and interest taken in the work. Bro. Wells has left for other fields, and Brn. Kaler and Butterworth are in Victoria five hundred miles from Sydney; so the local talent is left to do the best they can in Sydney.

BRO. J. C. FOSS, Rockland, Maine, June 2:—

I have just arrived home from Little Deer Isle, where I preached twelve sermons in two weeks and baptized seventeen. Last Sunday it rained very heavily until three o'clock. We then went down to the ocean shore, into a little cove, away from the dashing waves of the sea, and baptized seven. Others are near the kingdom.

BRO. JOSEPH COOPER, Pond Creek, Oklahoma, June 4:—

This is the third year in the Cherokee Strip, and this is the second crop of small grain that proved a total failure, raising only a little corn; and I am afraid that if I wait until I can make an elder comfortable it may be a long time before I see one. I think a good work can be done here. A Cambellite by the name of Hopwood preached last Sunday and baptized five. I think an elder can do as well. There are two waiting to be baptized. I will do all I can. I am willing to meet one at Round Pond if I know when he is coming. I hope to hear from this mission soon.

What news we have from the Williams-Braden debate is contained in the following from Bro. Williams dated Fontanelle, Iowa, the 12th:—

The third proposition closes to-night; everything progressing nicely. We are making friends; B— is making enemies. Two to one in our favor. The work is losing nothing in this encounter; and how could it when we have truth and God's Spirit on our side?

Debate postponed. Bro. I. N. White, Independence, Missouri, June 12:—

Please say through the Herald, that the debates I was to hold with Rev. M. Boles, at Benton and Parrish, Illinois, commencing the 22d inst., have been postponed till August, by mutual consent.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE spirit and condition of the times is quite well indicated in the following happenings reported in a leading newspaper for June 9—a statement of but one day's report:—At Barcelona, Spain, June 8, a dynamite bomb was thrown into the midst of a religious assembly, and exploded, killing fourteen and wounding fifty persons. The city was placed under martial law. A reign of terror was created in the city and extended to other European centers. It is thought to be part of a widespread Anarchistic plot.

Athens advices of the 8th, report that the rebels on the island of Crete have defeated the Turkish troops, inflicting severe punishment and capturing many arms.

The Egyptians defeated the dervishes in the Soudan campaign, killing many, including their leader.

The stores of Chicago merchants have been so boldly attacked and robbed, and during business hours, that clerks, cashiers, and other employees are being armed or otherwise prepared to prevent recurrence of numerous and recent robberies.

Springfield, Carlyle, Belvidere, Benton, and Arcola, Illinois; Mexico and Webb City, Missouri; also Hyde Park and Chicago, Illinois; report tornadoes and rainstorms which did destructive work to city and farm property on the 8th inst.

In addition to the foregoing: New York advices of the 10th report a destructive wind and rainstorm at Newark, New Jersey, on the night of the 9th, doing damage amounting to $150,000.

June 9; a cyclone swept through Wyeth City, Alabama, killing a few and injuring over one hundred people, besides doing much damage to residence and farm property.

Bro. M. H. Forscutt will be present at the conference of the Southern Nebraska district, at Fairfield, Nebraska, next Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21.

The Rev. Mr. Carpenter, Methodist pastor at Kellerton, Iowa, stopped over in Lamoni between trains one day last week, making this office a pleasant call and looking through the establishment.

Man through all ages of revolving time,
Unchanging man, in every varying clime,

UNITY OF THE FAMILY.

IN the home great care should be taken that the silver cords of family affection be closely twined around each heart.

(a) 'Parents' love for their children is instinctive; it is of that kind of which it is written, 'Many waters cannot quench love.' Not so of children's love to their parents or to their brothers and sisters. This is much more a matter of cultivation than of instinct. A child neglected by its parents but cherished by its nurse will soon love that nurse better than father or mother, and we all know many friends beside the great Friend, of each of whom it can be truly said, 'He sticketh closer than a brother.' It is not safe to trust to instinctive love as all-sufficient in family relations. Family love and unity should be cultivated and thus raised into a higher, more enduring plane than mere instinct ever reaches.

(b) 'As the mother is the center of home life, so is the father the band binding the family in one. This fact, so often overlooked, is yet such a fundamental one that it enters into our language, which is but the crystallization of the ideas of those who form it, husband, being Anglo-Saxon for house-band and so expressing this truth. Upon father and mother depends the unity of the family, and they must be a unit, working together for the good of all, if this unity is to be preserved. A divided head makes a divided household. If either parent throws the responsibility or care and governing upon the other, if one tries to shield when the other would punish, if, in short, they be not agreed, harmonious family life is impossible.

(c) 'Perfect respect for and trust in their parents, unquestioning obedience to them, and affection for them on the part of the children, are the foundations on which unity of the family must rest. These foundations are never so sure as when they rest upon the Rock Christ Jesus. Nothing binds the family more strongly together than gathering daily around the family altar, reading together from God's word, and uniting in prayer to him.

"In childhood we saw the influence of the bedtime hour in forming the character of little ones. The after-supper hour is no less potential in unifying the family. It should be kept sacred to the home circle.

(d.) "Through the day we must be separated; in the evening let us all come together, father, mother, older brothers and sisters, and the wee toddlers, for genuine home fun and talk. This is the hour of sweet confidences when parents and children learn to know each other, to sympathize with each other; in short to love each other intelligently, instead of with the mere instinctive love which we share with the brutes. It may take some of the father's time from his farm and from his merchandise, and the mother's from her household cares, but it is time well spent; no parent can afford to forego this family hour; it should be held sacred to the children at whatever expense of business or pleasure.

"It is hard to keep boys off the streets if fathers spend their evenings gossiping at street corners or in stores, or even immersed in legitimate business. 'While thy servant was busy here and there he was gone,' is too often the bitter cry of a father whose son has gone—gone to destruction. It is hard for the daughter to feel that her mother is made for anything but a drudge, or a butterfly, if a constant round of work, or of gait, will not allow her to give this one hour to her children.

(e.) "Closely allied to this in its influence is the mother's hour of secret prayer for her children. Never did I know a mother who kept this hour who was not greatly blessed in her children. Memory brings the picture of one such mother before me as I write. Her home was a humble one and so full of children that she could find in it no quiet place for secret prayer. 'I used to go out in the woods each day,' she told me only a few weeks ago, 'and, kneeling there under a tree, pray God to bless my children and make them useful in his service. I knew those children as men and women, and I never knew a family of more active Christians or more united in their love for each other. Washington's mother had the same habit, and he seems to have learned to follow her example. When the burden of the nation struggling for birth came on him, he was accustomed to leave his officers and men, retire to the woods, and there agonize in prayer to God for the nation, which took the place of children in his heart. A British spy seeing him thus kneeling in prayer, reported to his superior, 'We can never conquer that man; he takes too strong a hold on God.'

(f.) "Sympathy of parents with children and of children with parents is another essential of family unity. Like filial affection it must be cultivated, not left to chance growth. It must be genuine; no counterfeit will here pass current. To really sympathize with the children's hopes, fears, joys, and sorrows, we must enter into their ideas, their fancies, even their caprices. And we old folks must take the initiative in this sympathetic cultivation. If we have not forgotten our own childhood—God pity us and our children if we have—we can understand child-life, because we have once lived it; children cannot enter into our life, because it is still an undiscovered country to them.

"'But this takes more time than we can spare,' says the over-burdened mother, or the harassed, hurried father. It is not so much a question of time as of manner. The mother is busy, we will say, at the washtub; her little daughter runs to her, showing with delight a doll's apron she has made 'all by herself,' her first feat in the dressmaking line. It takes no more of the mother's time to look up pleasantly and say, 'What a pretty apron; put it on Dolly, and play she is going to wear it to school,' than to frown and say harshly, 'Don't bother me with your doll things. It's all I can do to attend to your own things.' In the one case you have entered into your child's life, and strengthened the bond binding her to yourself; in the other case your lack of sympathy drives her from you; you allow the washtub to come between your heart and your child.

"A father returning home from his office meets his son coming from school at the home gate. Through his preoccupied mind floats a dim impression that he ought to say 'something improving' to his boy, but he is so little acquainted with his boy's real life that he can think of nothing better to say than, 'I hope you have been a good boy at school today.' This is a good hope to cherish and may be expressed in such a way as to make the boy feel that it is genuine, but his preoccupied father does not so express it. Charlie instinctively recognizes its 'from a sense of duty' character, and through its commonplaceness feels his father's lack of personal interest in his doings. Any man might have made the same remark to any boy. Nothing is more depressing to the average boy-heart than to be considered as 'so much boy' cut at random 'off the piece.' It wounds his sense of individuality at no age more intense than now.

"Let the father, as he sees his son turn the corner, take but a moment from his thoughts of business to remember that last night he saw Charlie was working hard over his arithmetic lesson, or that he saw the boys in the schoolyard building a snow fort, and say cheerily, 'Well, my boy, how did you come out in your tussle with cube root to-day,' or, 'Did you finish your fort?' It is going to be a capital night for it; it will freeze the water I saw you pouring on the walls, solid as rock; by morning your fort will be a Gibraltar.' At once he enters the domain of his boy's thoughts and establishes a bond of union through the personal interest he shows in his work and play. And Charlie responds eagerly both with heart and tongue. He is at no loss what to say as he was after the 'good boy' salutation. That closed his mouth, or led him to mumble some unintelligible answer. If he really had been a good boy, modesty might forbid his saying so; he does not feel quite certain about the matter, thinking his father's standard of goodness may differ from his own. Again, he might be very certain about the matter, yet lack the courage and honesty which a little three-year-old friend of mine showed, in expressing his convictions. His grandmother was trying to cure him of being afraid of the dark. 'Why should you be afraid?' she said; 'God can take care of you in the dark as well as in the light. Nothing will hurt you if you are good.' 'Yes, but I ain't,' said the little fellow, and Grandmother was nonplussed and dropped the conversation. Here, as in Charlie's case, ill-timed reference to goodness stopped conversation; and that is one of the bad consequences following the first greeting of Charlie's father. It did not lead to a free and easy talk between father and son, as it should have done. How can they enter into each other's lives and establish unity of feeling if they do not thus talk over their affairs together? Nothing is more subversive of family unity, nothing more dangerous than to have children live in a thought world of their own apart from their parents, and nothing is a better safeguard against this danger than free, familiar conversation between parents and children. The art of talking aright in the family is a fine art; alas! in many families it is fast becoming a lost art. Parents and children are busy thinking of their own work, their play, or their individual interests, which they do not talk over together, so that each knows little about what interests the others. Each gradually builds around himself fences of reserve, and dwells in his own little pen, living his own life in selfish disregard of others."

POINTS TO BE DISCUSSED.

(a.) Discuss the difference in the love of parents for their children; of children for their parents, and what is absolutely necessary if parents would retain the love and confidence of their children.

(b.) What relation does the father sustain in home life?

(c.) What are the foundations on which unity of the family must rest, and on what foundation must these rest?

(d.) Discuss the evening or family hour, and have you such an hour in your home?

(e.) What other hour is closely allied to this? Have any here an experience connected with this hour?

(f.) What is another essential of family unity? Discuss this point freely and at length.

THE TEACHER'S PREPARATION.

"Go speak to Jesus first;
Then to the child. Go, let Him Speak to thee, who taught in Judah's warring days,
On the mountain slopes,
Along the pebble beach
And on the joyous billow of the sea.
Yes, in the closet, hear his voice who spoke
As never man did speak.
Ask for his mind
Whose patience bore the burden of a world,
Ask trustingly; the promise is to thee;
Thou shalt receive; then meet the child
As one for whom the Savior died,
That ransomed soul God knows,—
It may be given thee to lift the little Fledgeling to an angel's seat.
O, touch not heedlessly the chords
That thrill to gladness or to woe;
Lay gentle hands on things that tell the tale in other worlds!
Go, speak to Jesus, wait his answering word,
Then tell the trusting child like one
Who comes transfigured from the mount of prayer."

STUDY.

A THOUGHT suggested by a quotation of Dr. Arnold's, as quoted by Sr. Ruth Sheehy, in her paper, read before the General Association, in Kirtland. When asked why he spent so much time preparing a lesson he had so many times taught, he said, "I wish my boys to drink from a running stream, and not from a stagnant pool." This thought has staid with me so tenaciously that I will try to present it to some of my fellow teachers.

Do we spend enough time in preparing our lessons? or do we depend upon the knowledge of the subject we have gained in past years? Do we realize how much better we can teach a lesson if we have very recently studied it out in all its details? It signifies not how old the subject matter be to us, by a prayerful, careful, interested study new thoughts will present themselves to our minds and with these new points fresh in our memories, and as the old points brighten up, how can we do otherwise than make the lesson interesting to our class?

I love teaching, but I have no interest in trying to teach except I am thoroughly conversant with my subject. If we feel that we are "pretty well posted" in the Bible (to use a common phrase), we cannot take a special topic or lesson and draw out perhaps the best thoughts, except by previous consideration. What we need to make our Sunday schools more interesting to teachers and pupils is study.

Try to gain some facts about your lesson which you think will interest scholars of your grade, which perhaps they have not had opportunities to have gathered by themselves. At all times we should strive to keep in advance of our classes. We must not forget that we have an avenue opened up to us whereby we may do much good. And we will all be held accountable for our stewardship. Let us remember Paul's admonition to Timothy as found in 2 Timothy 2:15, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

HATTIE R. GRIFFITHS.

A TWISTED CHRISTIAN.

A GENTLEMAN in New York recently said to another, "Is Mr. L— a Christian?" He replied, "Well, yes; Godward he is all right, but manward he is just a little twisted." How many really good people lay themselves open to this description? They do not carry out their Christian principles so as to be void of offense. Their life is not lived up to their faith. In small things they dishonor God. In some of their common-life dealings they do not carry out their principles among their fellow men. We are afraid the "little twist" is more or less to be seen in us all. Alas! twists of temper, twists of inconsistency, society twists, business twists, home twists! May God set us upright and give us in our daily life a straight backbone, so that we may walk upright among our fellow men on our way to heaven.—The Quiver.

Original Poetry.

A GOLDEN CROWN.

A golden crown in the midst of a light
Unto me was shown as I lay at night,
Silently asking of the Lord to send
To all in need and afflicted a friend;
I had never thought such a sight to see,
As this one of a crown reached out to me.

Though from heart and mind all fear was gone,

Yet weakened in body I felt o'ercome;
The crown lay balanced on a large, strong hand,

On the wrist of which was a golden band;
Again I lifted my heart to pray,
But feeling unworthy could only say,

"What! a golden crown intended for me?
Dear Lord, have I proved so faithful to thee?
How happy I am, instead of a frown
To have promise of a golden crown!

Dear Lord, give strength to thy servant to prove

That deep in his heart there'll be found thy love.

"That Christ may acknowledge before thy throne,

That I've loved him here and am called his own.

Help me and strengthen just witness to bear,
And to keep myself pure, thy glory to share;
In this hope I renew my promise now,
To thy loving voice and thy will to bow"

NEW CASTLE, N. S. W., May 10.

Editors Herald:—I believe you will be satisfied if I inform you that I am still striving to prosecute my mission; and that the press of work prevents a longer communication (which we might give, to some profit).

We feel sorely the need of more laborers. Am now in the midst of a ten-days' series (it is not often we can get in a series) in the new chapel here. Attendance is fair, interest good, and the Spirit's help all we could wish. One is to be baptized and others almost persuaded. Must leave this excellent interest and go to Nambucca River in two days from now. Special liberty and light has been my portion the last twelve months; and conditions for labor seem to have opened before us more favorably than in the past. Some hitherto very discouraging features are less so; the leaven seems more lively and potent; and God's people have a greater desire to advance in the several departments of spiritual culture and labor.

The optical lantern is a new feature, which I have lately added to my work.

In bonds, hastily,
GOMER WELLS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 8.

Editors Herald:—I left home May 13 for my western mission. My first stop was at Clearwater, Nebraska, where I preached five times and left with a promise to return in two weeks. I then went to Inman, my former field in March, spoken of in a previous letter. Found the work, as represented in the Sabbath school, in a flourishing condition. Continued there over one Sunday, baptizing three and holding ten meetings with splendid interest and liberty. On Saturday, May 30, I went to Clearwater again; participated in the decoration exercises. On Sunday I spoke twice in the Saints' church and baptized seven.

Monday, June 1, found me on my westward journey again, going via Norfolk, Fremont, Lincoln, and Denver. I reached Salt Lake City the 4th. Something seems to be in the breeze here. A new Manifesto has been sent out by the First Presidency of the Mormon Church. I have not been able to find out definitely what it is, but the scenes in Nauvoo are being reënacted. The Manifesto it seems is "running against a snag" in nearly all of the quorums, so they are dropping out the recalcitrant ones and putting in more obedient ones. I will try and find out more definitely and report. In the meanwhile I hope for the prayers of the Saints everywhere, and to my friends in this mission and elsewhere, my address is Box 1182, Salt Lake City, Utah. May Zion prosper. Yours,

H. O. SMITH.

KALKASKA, Mich., May 17.

Editors Herald:—I have been a member of South Boardman branch for about nine months, and have no regrets to offer, except that I have not lived more fully in harmony with the will of God. Notwithstanding my shortcomings, God has blessed me very bountifully in that time.

I can say of a truth that this is the fullness of the gospel. I have received many proofs of it and I am thankful to God that he has made me able to do some good already since I obeyed it. I sent for the Herald some months before I was baptized and it did me much good. How eagerly I devoured its contents! Now I hope that this letter will do some one as much good as the letters of the Saints did me.

There have been sixteen of my friends all living in one neighborhood near Kalkaska baptized since I came into this work. Some have already enjoyed great blessings; all are doing well. Surely this gospel is a marvelous work and a wonder, for it makes such delightful changes in home circles, transforming homes that were only places of abode into homes of peace and quiet, where love reigns supreme, giving a new impetus and fresh luster to life, making it worth the living. Surely we have nothing good to leave and we gain more than we could think or ask when we accept of this gospel and live according to its teachings. Now I wish to know if there are any Saints at Battle Creek, Michigan. If so, I wish some of them would call on a friend of mine, Mrs. Charles Butler, No. 10 Carlisle Street, and if some of the Saints there will write me I will be much pleased.

Your brother in Christ,

CHAS L. SESSIONS.

BEVIER, MO., June 5.

Editors Herald:—I feel that I should add my testimony with the many others given that the Herald is truly a periodical to be highly appreciated, and should be in the house of every Latter Day Saint, because of its real worth and the stability and interest it creates in those who make a study of its pages.

The work in this part of the vineyard is fair, but extending many opportunities for improvement. There are many Saints here who are trying to let their light shine as a city set on a hill, and doing all they can under the circumstances governing to forward the work and its interests; but we are sorry to say that there are some, although good and honest people, who have fallen asleep spiritually, and are seemingly blind to their condition and the necessity of trying to keep pace with the work. The cause of much of this condition can safely be credited to neglect of duty by those who have been called and placed in presiding offices. We find also that while many of the Saints are obeying the command to bring their children and have them baptized into the kingdom, that after they have been initiated they are neglected and go for years without an officer visiting, and instructing, and teaching them their duty, which is that they should pray vocally in public, and in secret, and should not lie, backbite, steal, nor speak evil one of another. How quickly children can grow up in some of these things is wonderful; and we often wonder how officers can feel they are living compatibly with their office and calling while neglecting so important a duty. May the kind Master enable them to be up and doing and seeking to build up the kingdom of God.

The local work within a radius of fifteen miles in this locality is being pushed, some of the brethren helping nobly. Two have been baptized in the past month, and others are interested and investigating; so may the Lord bless the honest in heart seeking truth, and enable them to comprehend it when found; and may he bless his servants also, whether local or conference appointees, to do his will and labor to the best of their ability to build up the cause and bring glory and honor to his name, is my prayer.

J. A. TANNER.

Editors Herald:—The Pottwattamie district conference convened on Saturday, May 30, with the branch at Underwood, Bro. John Carlile in the chair, Bro. J. Charles Jensen clerk. A committee on credentials was appointed and the following branches reported: North Star, Wheeler's Grove, Crescent, Council Bluffs, and Hazel Dell. Conference then adjourned until 1:30 p. m., and some of the delegates reported who were not present at the morning session. The district officers were all sustained. The president and clerk were reelected for the ensuing year. The conference closed up all its business at the afternoon session; everything was done in a spirit of love, and harmony prevailed throughout.

At night the writer preached from 1 Timothy 4:16: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee." The Lord helped us greatly, for which we praise him.

On account of rain there was no social service Sunday morning, but Bro. H. N. Hansen preached at 10:30 with his old-time vigor, and our hearts were made glad in God. Many brought their lunch baskets and staid in the church until night. In the afternoon the elders each gave a short talk, and the Spirit was present to bless. At 7:30 the writer again spoke, using Colossians 3:16, 17, to a full house, and the blessed Spirit greatly helped us in our hour of need.

The singing was an especial feature of the evening service. Bro. Thomas Scott's daughter, now Mrs. Ellington, presided at the organ, supported by her sister and a goodly number of young people, and the music was inspiring.

While at conference we lodged with Bro. Isaac Carlile and his estimable wife, and shall never forget their kindness. We returned home on Monday feeling greatly encouraged and strengthened.

Yours in bonds,

J. S. STRAIN.

FONTANELLE, Iowa, June 14.

Editors Herald:—The debate on the third proposition, in which Bro. Williams affirmed the divinity of the Book of Mormon, closed last night, five sessions having been devoted to the question. It was a complete victory. The Lord stood by his servant and enabled him to present the truth in plainness and with power. Braden's negation consisted of ridicule, misrepresentation, and the most bitter sarcasm, making many bold assertions that he did not attempt to prove. He quoted largely from the Book of Mormon, finding fault with its grammatical construction, reading into the book in different places what is not to be found, but his trickery was fully exposed by Bro. Williams.

One night Mr. Braden brayed like a donkey and afterwards told us that he was then speaking in tongues; wanting to know if Bro. Williams did not have the interpretation. Such, of course, pleased the rabble, but it disgusted decent people. He has called Bro. Williams and myself everything that is mean; but we feel that God is with us, and his sarcastic abuse does not hurt. I am glad to say that Bro. Williams has not stooped to the low plain of Clark Braden, but has so far maintained his dignity as a minister for Christ, and I feel proud to be associated with such a brother.

In the next proposition Braden is to affirm that the canon of scripture closed with the apostles and those upon whom the apostles laid their hands, after which Bro. Williams affirms the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith, each proposition to occupy three sessions. Rev. Hall of the M. E. Church has agreed to affirm that his church is identical with the Bible when Braden is through.

The course pursued by Braden, both in his lectures before and during the debate, has made many friends to us; yet I think as a rule the ministry of the church can well afford to pass him by as a character too contemptibly mean to stoop to discuss with. I, of course, knew the man by reputation before I met him here, but no description of him that I have seen does him justice. He must be seen and heard to be fully appreciated (?).

Bro. Williams' health was poor before and during the first of the debate, but he is feeling better now. It was through the blessings of God he was made strong enough for the arduous task. The meetings are well attended, though the weather has been disagreeable part of the time, the audiences ranging from about three hundred to one thousand people, and the best of order has been had. The few Saints here feel strengthened and encouraged, as the cause has been maintained and truth victorious in each proposition discussed. With confidence in God and in hope of the final victory,

Yours in bonds,

HANS H. HANSEN.

Editors Herald:—It is generally known that in Western Nebraska there has been almost a total failure of crops for the last three years, because of which the people have a very hard time to get even the necessary food and clothing. This condition has caused many of the Saints to discontinue their church papers. Now what I want is, to hear from Saints that have the Herald and will be willing to remain it regularly, after they have read it, to some of these worthy poor. The Saints are willing to help this way, I know, for a brother told me that he would get nearly a flour sack full of mail every few days that was sent by Saints in answer to a request made for church papers. To avoid the useless piling up of papers at one brother's door and having others go without, I ask you to drop me a card stating how long you would be willing to furnish the paper remailed (either Herald or Ensign), and I will then send you the address of the brother or sister you are to send to.

Let me hear from you at once as some are now hungering for the church paper they so long for but are not able to take at present.

Prospects at present are for a fair crop this year. In love of God's truth and people,

Your brother,

D. M. RUDD.

Submissionary in charge of Western Nebraska.

AUTER VILLAGE, Ind., June 4.

Editors Herald:—I am at the above-named place, holding forth in a union churchhouse. This is a new opening; there are no Saints near here. For two years or more I have preached considerably in the regions round about and have written several articles for the county paper relative to our faith and claims, which work has awakened quite an interest among people who never heard our representatives. My work, seemingly, has been like the pebble dropped in the waters—the waves extend far and wide; calls are far more than I can fill. It seems as if the old boy (Satan) is always ready to do something to hinder the progress of the work. However, through faith, prayer, and fasting the influence of His Satanic Majesty can be overthrown.

An M. E. divine named Cloud made his appearance among the inhabitants of the village, "warning" them to be on the lookout, telling the usual string of falsehoods that are prevalent among sectarian divines, advising the door to be closed: but our friends were too many, so we are occupying with splendid attention and excellent interest. Truly have I realized the fulfillment of the promise made to the ministry relative to opening up of the work in new places. I baptized three of late, and others have expressed a willingness to unite with us soon. So the good work goes on.

I thought I would have been on my way to the Eastern Michigan district, previous to this time, via Knox, South Scott, Clear Lake, Coldwater, Detroit, etc.; but I must abide the advice of those in charge.

I am informed by Bro. Briggs that the brethren appointed to this field will not be in the district before fall and for me to remain here until then; so this will explain to Bro. S. W. L. Scott and others my failure to do as they requested.

To the Saints in Southern Indiana who have written for help: I will take this means of answering that I will labor as fast as I can and do what I can to fill all the calls possible. I am well pleased to see the effort made by Saints to spread the gospel to new hearers. I am encouraged to see the outside element making an intelligent investigation, in consequence of which their minds are in good condition to receive the truth. The goodly degree of God's Spirit that prevails gives liberty to the preacher and leads the hearers to want to learn more about the glad message.

I ask an interest in all God's people's prayers, that my health, which seems to be failing, may increase so I may be instrumental in doing much good.

In the faith,

M. R. SCOTT, JR.

MOORHEAD, Iowa, June 9.

Editors Herald:—Lest some material might be lacking to fill up your valuable space I have concluded to annoy your readers with a scratch from my pen, or rather from a borrowed one.

This finds me well and hopeful. I started to the Kirtland Conference with inflated hopes and high aspirations, but soon after the convening thereof felt depressed, but for what, could not tell. When told that Bro. Blair was sick I felt impressed that he would not recover; but while visiting him he seemed so hopeful, I concluded that my impressions might be wrong, but after results proved that my impressions were right.

From Kirtland I visited my birthplace—Jackson County, Indiana. I preached in the town of Seymour to the colored Methodists by invitation. They crowded around the preacher at the close of the service giving the hearty handshake, with a God bless you accompanied therewith, which reminded the preacher of an old-fashioned Latter Day Saint congregation (all except the color) back in the sixties and seventies. I preached in two other places with similar results. Whether an entire stranger could do any preaching in that country or not, I could not say, as I stopped with relation and old acquaintances; in fact, they seem inclined to accept so much of our faith as will not disturb them in present religious connections. But when it comes to informing them, as the Angel told Joseph, "Their creeds are an abomination in the sight of the Lord," they are ready to kick—and some kick desperately. Preached in St. Louis, Cheltenham, New Canton and vicinity, Rock Creek, Montrose, and Burlington. In all of which places the Saints seemed hopeful. I witnessed the baptism of a formerly good Methodist sister in Montrose, and likewise another sister in Burlington; don't know what her former church connections were.

I find in my experience that whether members join the church, previously having been members of other churches, or formerly members of no church; that if faithful in their present church relationship the Lord blesses them, and that abundantly; so that they no longer need to say, "I believe," or I think that I am right; but that they can say, and that truthfully, "I know that the work in which we are engaged is the work of the Lord." And how consoling is the thought, as the Master truly said, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen."

Our conference held at this place on Saturday and Sunday last was a success. The brethren present all seemed hopeful for the future. We are highly favored in this district with what is known as the "local ministry." The younger ministry growing into usefulness in the church seem to be possessed with the same old fire, manifested in the past, among the ministry, in the early days of the church. And it seems that Sabbath school work is a good school to manufacture such ministry in. I learn that the Sunday school convention held here previous to conference session was a success. I did not get to attend on account of rain.

Bro. Chambers and I have resolved to carry out the instruction in the late revelation, to open up "new fields," that the work may widen; and unless we run against a circumstance larger than is looked for at present we intend to at least view the country, in the northern part of our district; and should we fail to see the line and get over into Galland's Grove district, or into Minnesota or Dakota, woe be unto the inhabitants thereof.

Well, there is nothing like a prospect ahead; and a head to carry it out. I like to travel with Bro. Chambers, for when it becomes necessary he is willing to sit up and watch the rats while I sleep.

If we keep up (as the ministry for the church) with our part of the work, so as to keep in pace with Him that brings to pass that class of testimony, as it is said, "After your testimony cometh wrath, and indignation upon the people," we will have need to be up and doing. And that we may not be a whit behind, is my earnest desire.

J. C. CRABB.

LEAVENWORTH, Ind., June 8.

Editors Herald:—Bro. H. C. Bronson and the writer came to the Baker schoolhouse on the 30th of May and began services. Two were baptized on Sunday, May 31.

We are here now, and on yesterday, in the waters of Blue River we had the privilege of leading two more precious souls into baptism. This makes twenty members for this place. The work in this part is gaining prestige, notwithstanding we have some opposition to contend with. Yesterday when we got to the house of worship we found that the enemy of truth and of justice had left a notice for us to leave. As this enemy is not our captain, we thought best not to take his advice but remain here over next Sunday and hold a basket meeting here then and baptize more. I send you the notice that was left, please publish the same in Herald.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT.

The following reports came to hand too late to be incorporated in the Bishop's Annual Report for the years to which they properly belong: Two of them, that of the agent, Metuaoro, in Tahiti division of the South Sea Islands Mission, and the individual report of Elder Mark H. Forscutt, ending March 15, 1894, were overlooked in publishing report of 1895, and are here inserted so that the brethren in the islands may have privilege of examination.

The individual reports of elders, inserted, came to hand too late to be incorporated in the body of the Annual Report of 1896.

I also append by request of the Saints in the Society Islands Mission, the special message of the Church in the Islands to the Church in America, bearing their words of appreciation and gratitude for the work done by the Saints in America and elsewhere in fitting out a vessel to aid them in their missionary work in the Islands.

By way of explanation to those who may not have carefully examined the Summary of the Annual Report of the Bishop for several years past, I also call attention to the fact of the excess in totals which has occurred from the methods of incorporating the balances due the Church each year as shown by the reports of agents, with their annual receipts; also the amounts paid to agents by the Bishop as receipts, thus making the totals several thousand dollars larger than they actually are. For illustration:—

The amount represented as received by Bishop's agents includes the balances brought forward from the former year, and amounts forwarded to agents by the Bishop to assist them in district work. Example: Reports for 1894-5 from agents show their receipts to have been $44,521.76, but as of that amount $4,031.97 was balances from 1893, and the amounts furnished by Bishop, $4,817.20, these two sums, $8,849.17 deducted from $44,521.76 show actual receipts to have been but $35,672.59.

The other special funds attached will be interesting to the Saints and friends, and, although the publication of the Annual Report of the Church is getting to be expensive as well as laborious, we trust that the Saints may feel sufficient of interest in a critical examination to overbalance the time and expenditure so long as it shall be deemed wise by the body to publish the Bishop's statistical report.

Very respectfully submitted,

E. L. KELLEY,

Presiding Bishop.

COMMUNICATION.

TARONA, Papeete in Tahiti, February 10, 1895.

To the beloved brethren, Joseph Smith, President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and also Mr. Kelley, Bishop of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saint:-

We salute you in the name of the Lord Jesus, the Messiah!

We your two beloved brethren in the Lord, viz., Metuaoere, representative of the Bishop in the Tahitian division, and D. M. Pohemiti, Secretary of the Church in the Society Isles.

In accordance with that which has been agreed upon by the body of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, which has come together this day:—who have positively requested us to clearly represent to you the greatness of their thankfulness to the whole body of the church in America; who have sent us by the hand of our beloved brother, Joseph Burtin, the token of your love and assistance, the little vessel, "The Evangelia," which will remove difficulties and facilitate the work of the mission for the future benefit of the Church in these deep waters of great peril.

As a finishing to our letter we would request an unceasing interest in your prayers, and may the love of the everlasting Father, and of the Lord Jesus the Messiah rest upon you all. Amen.

We two, your beloved brethren in the Lord by the appointment of the church which has been convened this day.

METUAORE,
 D. M. POHEMITI.

[This was translated by Mr. Henry, in Papeete, who has been a friend to us all through our sojourn here. Please so state. I am pleased and proud to acknowledge such a beautiful vote of thanks from our brethren here. No other one of our force here.]

MARRIED.

SMITH—GREENWOOD.—At the home of the bride's parents, Bro. and Sr. George Greenwood, Manteno, Shelby County, Iowa, June 10, 1896, at 11:45 a. m., Bro. S. F. N. Smith and Sr. Eliza E. Greenwood were united in marriage by Elder C. E. Butterworth. A few relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony and partake of the bountiful dinner that was prepared for the occasion. The young people are well and favorably known in this section of country, and all wish them much joy and happiness. May the blessings of God crown their efforts with success and fill their home with joy, peace, and love.

DIED.

RAY.—Died at her earthly home, Lamoni, Iowa, and in the seventeenth year of her age, Sr. Nellie A. Ray. This event, a source of present happiness to the departed, and one which gives to her the sweet assurance of ever-continuing love, has clouded the atmosphere of her former home; and though upon the edges of the somber cloud they see the glory fringes that indicate the beauty of her new home, that cloud interposes between them and the light she dwells in whom they loved most fondly here below. Nellie is gone; her departure was conducted by the heavenly gardeners under the Master's direction. She was a lily too fragile for earth, too tender for its stormy atmosphere. Yet as the earth life was necessary to the higher life of a redeemed world, she was sent, she filled her place, and before passion's corrupting forces had chance or time to stain her purity, the Master had this delicate lily transplanted to the garden of Paradise. There unbroken and not hindered from development by storm or want, it shall garner and exhale the sweets made its own by heavenly soil and angelic culture. An orphan, the God of the orphans noticed her. He also prepared the hearts of Bro. and Sr. Ray to receive from him the gift of a child's affection, and then transferred the chosen little one to the tender care of those dear ones to it. Who would have, who could have suspected this child to be other than their own? Surely no one without evidence. And she "grew in stature" and in favor with man and woman. Never physically strong, something more than a year ago the strong power decay marked her as his prey, and on June 13, 1896, soon after the midday hour, her spirit left its earthly tenement for the heavenly one awaiting her beyond. She was born at Roxville, Marion County, Iowa, on June 27, 1879, and was therefore, on the day of her death, fourteen days less than seventeen years of age. The elders often administered and relief came at each administration; but cure never. It was not so designed. She refused to take any medicine. "God has directed his sick people to trust in him, and to prove it by sending for the elders to anoint them and pray over them. If they live, they shall live unto the Lord: if they die, they shall die unto him. In either case they will be the Lord's." This was Nellie's faith, in it she lived, in it she died. She adorned the home and her own character by a truly Christian walk, by pureness of speech, and by gentleness of manners. She proved the truth of her claim that she was a child of God, by her perfect trusting of self and all to him; by her patience in suffering; by her thoughtfulness for others, by avoiding those fretful and complaining moods that so often make the task of an attendant on the sick an almost insufferable one. The great esteem shown for her was manifest by the overcrowded condition of the large church in every part of it on Sunday morning, June 15, when Elder M. H. Forscutt preached her funeral sermon from the words of 2 Corinthians 5:16, 17. The theme was, Man's duality, outward, the body; inward, the spirit: The trials of time and the glories of eternity. The speaker was assisted by Elder Asa Cochran; both in the church and at the grave.

HUPP.—Sister Geneva, daughter of Wesley and Mary Ann Hupp; born February 12, 1872, at Woodbine, Harrison County, Iowa; baptized August 15, 1889, by Elder Charles Derry; departed this life June 6, 1896. Geneva was a dutiful daughter and an affectionate sister, and strove to live a consistent life, as a child of God, and was highly esteemed. She had suffered long from consumption. She went to the West in hopes of finding relief, but returned home to die. Her faith in God was manifest by her calling for the healing ordinance, and her patient resignation to God's will. She expressed her trust in her Redeemer and departed in hope of a glorious resurrection. Her loss is keenly felt, but our loss is her eternal gain. Funeral sermon by Elder C. Derry, assisted by Elder Seddon; text, "Verily there is a reward for the righteous."—Ps. 58: 11.

In patient faith her race was run,
Her weary frame is laid to rest;
Her spirit hears the glad "Well done!"
And sweetly mingles with the blest,
Until the resurrection morn,
When earth shall yield her sacred trust,
No more to feel pain's piercing thorn,
Nor mingle with the sordid dust;
But crowned by her redeeming Lord
With endless life and boundless joy,
As promised in his holy word
Where death, nor hell can e'er destroy.

DOWNES.—Sr. Emily Newell Downs died at Taunton, Massachusetts, May 27, 1896. Funeral at Plainville, Massachusetts, the 29th, at the home of Mr. Eugene Coombs, her nephew; sermon by Elder F. M. Sheehy. She was born in Attleboro, Massachusetts, August 17, 1830. Her maiden name was Foster. She was married twice, first to Geo. Jackson, who died; second to Charles Downs; was the mother of three children who died young. Had been a member of the Baptist Church at West Mansfield previous to her baptism into this church by Elder C. N. Brown some twenty years ago. She maintained her faith in the gospel until the end.

WINEGAR.—At her home in Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, May 5, 1896, Elizabeth Winegar, aged 64 years, 5 months, and 16 days. Elizabeth Smith was born in Henry County, Indiana, and was the daughter of John Smith. In her youth she moved with her parents to Illinois and was living near Carthage when Joseph and Hyrum were killed. She remembered well of hearing the beat of the drums as the mob marched to the jail. She was familiar with all the trials and persecutions the Saints had to endure in Illinois and Missouri. She was married to John Winegar, May, 1846, and these two journeyed this life together until June 30, 1888, when the husband departed this life. Deceased united with the Reorganization in its first incipency and continued faithful to the end. This dear sister was a true type of charity, being always ready to sacrifice for the welfare of others. She was a loving, gentle mother, a faithful sister, and a true Saint. She leaves nine children whom she told just before she died, "Be faithful through life, and when you come to die it will be well with you." Funeral in the Saints' church, in charge of Elder D. Hougas.

Mother's gone and we're so lonely,—

Mother,—sweetest name e're spoke.

In her love our hearts found shelter

When life's storms and tempests broke.

Mother's gone! the Master called her,

He who died her soul to save,

And she's gone in triumph homeward,

Though her pathway's through the grave.

INDEPENDENCE.

Convention of Independence district Sunday school association convened at Independence, Missouri, June 5, at nine a. m.; Bro. W. N. Robinson superintendent in charge. The morning hours were spent in class teaching with criticisms, and short speeches from delegates. Assembled at two p. m. for business, each school in district reporting and all represented by delegates except two. Report of Literary Exchange was read and adopted, and the officers of the same were requested to meet just prior to each convention and report to same. After the transaction of business the time remaining was spent in discussion on the following topics: "Importance of teachers' meetings," and, "Should we award prizes either to classes or individual scholars?" The evening session began with a talk on "Uses and abuses of blackboard in Sunday school work" by Sr. B. C. Smith; vocal solo, Sr. W. H. Mills; address, "The organization and progress of General Sunday School Association" by A. Allen; anthem, Independence choir; "The Teaching Process—methods in practice," led by Bro. W. N. Robinson; benediction by Bro. H. R. Mills. Met again at eight a. m. Saturday for Sunday school prayer meeting, and those assembled found it a sacred and pleasant hour. DON'T STOP TOBACCO.
HOW TO CURE YOURSELF WHILE USING IT.

The tobacco habit grows on a man until his nervous system is seriously affected, impairing health, comfort, and happiness. To quit suddenly is too severe a shock to the system, as tobacco to an inveterate user becomes a stimulant that his system continually craves. "Baco-Curo" is a scientific cure for the tobacco habit, in all its forms, carefully compounded after the formula of an eminent Berlin physician who has used it in his private practice since 1872, without a failure. It is purely vegetable and guaranteed perfectly harmless. You can use all the tobacco you want while taking "Baco-Curo." It will notify you when to stop. We give a written guarantee to cure permanently any case with three boxes, or refund the money with 10 per cent interest. "Baco-Curo" is not a substitute, but a scientific cure, that cures without the aid of will power and with no inconvenience. It leaves the system as pure and free from nicotine as the day you took your first chew or smoke.

Cured By Baco-Curo and Gained Thirty Pounds.
 From hundreds of testimonials, the originals of which are on file and open to inspection, the following is presented:—

Clayton, Nevada Co., Ark., Jan. 28, 1895.
 Eureka Chemical & Mfg., Co., La Crosse, Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms.
 For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years
 I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies,
 among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.
 Yours respectfully,
 P. H. MARBURY.

THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH, OR

By Elder Columbus Scott. This is a work of 174 pages, divided into fifteen chapters, in which the "Sabder the Gospel Dispensation are fully treated from Scriptural and historical standpoints. The work is concise and plain, and clearly refutes the arguments of the Seventh-day Sabbatarians, establishing the first day of the week as "The Lord's Day." An added

FREE... TO MINISTERS AND Students for the Ministry

Under the will of the late L. C. Jüngerich, of Philadelphia, a large fund was provided for the free distribution to ministers of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, entitled "The True Christian Religion" and "The Apocalypse Revealed." To these, other donors have added "Heaven and its Wonders, and Hell," and "Life of Emanuel Swedenborg." All of these are handsome volumes, substantially bound in cloth. They are now offered FREE OF COST, except for postage, to the Clergy of America and Theological Students who are studying for the ministry.

It is because the donors of these books believe that there will be found in them a clear solution of all the difficult points of doctrine that disturb, perplex, and separate Christians from each other, keeping so many honest and sincere people out of the churches, and strengthening infidel sentiments, that they are so desirous of placing them in the hands of clergymen, whose office it is to teach spiritual truths and lead souls heavenward.

Arrangements have been made for the distribution of these volumes through the large and well-known publishing house of

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY,

THE BIBLE AND ITS CRITICS.

Rev. Dr. GEORGE WORKMAN, in the North American Review, New York, May.

THE article entitled "Christianity's Millstone," by Prof. Goldwin Smith, in the December number of this Review,* has made considerable stir throughout the continent, and in some communities has created a sensation. Dr. Smith is a practiced writer, as well as an accomplished scholar, and his article is both interesting and stimulating; but his treatment of the Old Testament, with which his essay deals, is disappointing and unsatisfactory. The aim of the essayist is, apparently, to foster a more rational view of the Scriptures, which is certainly a consummation devoutly to be wished; but the way in which he seeks to accomplish his object is extraordinary. Were a Biblical critic to discuss history as this critic, who is an adept in history, discusses Scripture, the distinguished historian would undoubtedly complain of unfairness, if not of incompetence. No impartial scientist would treat the subjects of his department, or suffer them to be treated, as Professor Smith has treated the writings of the Old Testament.

The method he has adopted is peculiar. Assuming that Biblical inspiration is equivalent to dictation by the Holy Spirit (a theory which no scholar holds), he shows that the Old Testament contains some things which are incompatible with such a view (a truism which no scholar doubts), and then he asks if these things are inspired (a supposition which no scholar entertains). Pursuing this plan throughout his article, he presents, perhaps, the most misleading, if not the most mischievous, critique of the Hebrew Scriptures that has ever been written by a reverent, religious scholar; so that to the superficial reader his essay seems like a formidable arraignment of the Old Testament, whereas it is simply an arraignment of an obsolete theory of the Old Testament. That is to say, he arraigns the difficulties connected with an old-fashioned view of Scripture, which a recent, but truly evangelical, review removes. To use the results of criticism, as Dr. Smith does, to arraign the misconceptions of traditionalism, without showing the elements of truth which the latter contained, is as unwarrantable as to take the established facts of chemistry to demolish the absurd superstitions of alchemy, without showing the important service which it rendered in the development of the more perfect science. By such an unfair use of facts, a modern specialist could make almost any ancient department of knowledge appear ridiculous.

Professor Smith is too profound a student not to know that the account of the Fall in Genesis, which was once regarded by theologians as literal history, is now regarded by Christian scholars as religious allegory, an allegory, like a parable, being a form of narrative employed by the sacred writers to illustrate and inculcate spiritual truth. This portion of Scripture is an allegorical or a parabolical representation of the beginning of moral evil in human nature. While Paul uses the familiar form of Genesis in introducing the doctrine of Atonement, and, in that sense, connects it with the fall of Adam, the Apostle really connects the doctrine with the entrance of sin as a moral fact into human nature. When the essayist suggests that "the first step toward a rational appreciation of the Old Testament is to break up the volume, separate the acts of Joshua or Jehu from the teachings of Jesus, and the different books of the Old Testament from each other," he must certainly know that what he so sagaciously proposes is just what Christian teachers are doing and just what they have been doing for a great many years. Modern scholars do not put all the books of the Bible on the same level, or attach to all parts of it the same importance.

The story of Balaam is a traditional account of an ancient angelic appearance, belonging to a time when the idea of animals talking with men was practically universal, and is to be interpreted in harmony with that fact. The account of the sun and moon standing still also belongs to a time when men had no strictly scientific conception either of the nature of a miracle or of constitution of the universe, so that physical phenomena which would now be called extraordinary would then be considered miraculous. The citation from the book of Jasher, to which Dr. Smith refers, is part of an ancient Hebrew poem, which must be interpreted as Oriental poetry. Hence, consistently with the character of the account, the best modern expositors regard the extraordinary phenomenon it describes as a prolongation of the daylight by ordinary laws of atmospheric refraction.

It is not the Hebrew Scriptures regarded as a sacred literature, however, but these Scriptures regarded as a supernatural revelation, which renders them, in the estimation of the essayist, a millstone to Christianity. "The time has surely come," he says, "when as a supernatural revelation they should be frankly, though reverently, laid aside." These Scriptures are now acknowledged by all scholars to be the record of a revelation which was received, during a long period of time, by a large number of men who spoke or wrote on religious subjects, as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, but who made use of a great variety of materials, traditional, historical, and philosophical, according to the fullest knowledge they had, and the soundest judgment they possessed.

Though he rejects the Hebrew Scriptures as a revelation in the obsolete sense which no modern scholar holds, yet, toward the conclusion of his article, he grants that the Old Testament may, so far as it is good, be a manifestation of the Divine. "As a manifestation of the Divine," he says, "the Hebrew books, teaching righteousness and purity, may have their place in our love and admiration forever." In making this admission, he allows substantially the very thing which Christian scholarship maintains. If these books are a manifestation of God, they must not only, in some sense, be an inspired literature, but also, in some degree, contain a divine revelation. It is this divine element in them which distinguishes them from all other ancient writings.

In their inner spiritual contents, the Hebrew Scriptures are an organic part of the Christian Scriptures. The divine element in the Old Testament was the spiritual germ from which the Gospel evolved, the rudimental teaching out of which the doctrine of Christ was developed. Instead of being Christianity's millstone, therefore, the Old Testament is rather Christianity's foundation-stone, because it forms the spiritual groundwork, so to speak, from which the Christian superstructure rises, or on which the Christian system rests.—Condensed for Public Opinion.

THEY MADE EXCUSES.

"I CAN call spirits from the vasty deep."

"Why; so can I, or any other man—but will they come when you call them?"—Shakespeare.

The readers of the News are entitled to know the result of the experiment with Dean Hart's $100 bill. It was deposited subject to a written escrow payable to me in case the correct number was furnished to me by spiritualists or anyone else. I invited six of the public mediums of the city, including one "psychic" to secure the number through their "controls" or "guides," or "impressions," or "table-tipping" or otherwise.

"They all with one accord began to make excuse." Some were too lofty in their purposes! Some would not descend to mercenary or sordid motives! Some frankly expressed doubt of their ability—one pretended to the audience that he knew all about it, but it was not proper to speak of it in public, but confessed privately that he knew nothing of it. All told me of more wonderful things than this that had been done, but would not attempt this easier job.

Three numbers were submitted. One by an "automatic writer," who is not a spiritualist. One by a novice in mediumship, who got it by "impression," and one was given Dean Hart by a lady not a spiritualist.

The number obtained by automatic writing was confirmed by table tipping and by different "spirits," who all asserted that it was correct. At the same time the date on the outside of the envelope was secured which was a double confirmation of the accuracy of the number. But, after all this, it lacked over half a million of the correct numbers being P838843. The other number, were D81207 and 18993. Several mediums claimed to have secured the number, but would not submit it—nor seal it in an envelope to be opened later. They may, if unscrupulous, now claim that they had it and if they will bring me the number sealed in an envelope I will enable them to verify the correctness of the same.

If any person who has been inclined to accept the "spirit return" theory will be saved by this crushing demonstration of the weakness of occultism in matters claimed by its devotees, I will rest satisfied that some good has been accomplished, foolish as it seemed to make the test.

No doubt mediums, clairvoyants, astrologers and seventh daughters, psychic, trance mediums, etc. will continue to call "spirits from the vasty deep" (and personate them), so long as fools will be bamboozled and make a living for them.—George Varnum in Rocky Mountain News.

MISCONCEIVED HIS MISSION.

At the time Rev. Clark Braden was making his arrangements to meet Bishop Kelley in discussion, at Kirtland, he wrote us that he expected that "Mormonism to then do its best and last," for the war was to be "to the knife, and the knife to the hilt." We wrote him that the church had had nothing to do with the getting up the discussion, as that was a matter solely under arrangement between himself and Bishop Kelley; but that he would please remember that we stood by our brother in all proper ways, trusting in our cause; and that he need be under no uneasiness about Bro. Kelley; that should he succeed in slaughtering Bro. Kelley, there was a whole phalanx behind him ready to maintain the cause. It now seems that after meeting Bro. Robert M. Elvin, at Wilber, Nebraska; Bishop Kelley, at Wilber, Kirtland, Ohio; Bellair, Illinois, and Lamoni, Iowa; Bro. Gillen, at Stewartsville, Missouri; Bro. Mintun, at Logan, Iowa; Bro. McDowell, Moorhead, Iowa; Bro. Leonard Scott, at South Scott and Knox, Indiana; Bro. I. N. White, at Eldorado, Missouri; and lastly Bro. T. W. Williams, at Fontanelle, Iowa;—in none of which discussions he was able to "down Mormonism," as he has been pleased to style what he contended against; he should be contented to discover that either he has misconceived his mission, or the cause he is contending against is the cause of right.

In a letter from Fontanelle, Iowa, June 13, Bro. Williams wrote characteristically as follows:—

The Saints are rejoicing here to-day. The debate is but two thirds over, yet Elder Braden has met his Waterloo, so far as Fontanelle is concerned, already. It was not I who did it, but the impregnable character of God's work and the supreme power of his Spirit.

Last night closed the Book of Mormon proposition—a large crowd in attendance. During my last speech the closest attention was given, God blessing with his Spirit. When I closed the audience gave us an ovation. It was loud and prolonged. When Elder Braden commenced to speak a great number left the tent, others began to talk, some brayed like donkeys, etc. The reason therefor was that Elder Braden the night before, in imitating the Saints sing and talk by the Spirit, placed his hands above his head to represent huge ears, impersonated a donkey, and then brayed like one. The result is that now when he goes along the street persons bray after him. He begged so hard for sympathy in his last speech, but not a response followed. We have the sympathy and support of the community, while he has but few friends. The Disciples wish they were out of it.

We have been far more successful than I ever expected to be. It is God who has done it, not we. Before the debate Elder Braden and his people said that if he (Braden) did not succeed in downing Williams he would never debate with the Mormons any more. Had a vote been taken last night he would not have had a respectable showing. Thank God for his truth. Prejudice has flown away like the hoar frost before the sun, and people who were bitter enemies now say there might be something in Mormonism after all.

I expect to remain here for several weeks.

The Reorganized Church has shown, both in its public spirit, as a body, and in its eldership, as individuals, from Bishop Kelley to Bro. Williams, that there was neither hesitancy nor fear to meet the examination the public might demand; and all the way from Wilber to Fontanelle the work of the Reorganized Church has been maintained by each of our brethren in turn, successfully. For the sake of his reputation as a debater Rev. Clark Braden should now call a halt, and let the cause of true primitive "Mormonism," so-called, triumph. Members were baptized at Wilber, Lamoni, Eldorado, South Scott after each discussion, and in no place has he scored a victory for his employers, those who have sent for him to oppose our work. What the result will be at Fontanelle, remains to be seen.

DEDICATION AT AUBURN, IOWA.

UPON the invitation of the branch of Saints at Auburn, Sac County, Iowa, the editor attended the dedicatory services held in the new chapel at that place, reaching there Saturday, June 6, in time for the Sunday school convention, business session in the afternoon, and the entertainment in the evening.

The branch is in the limits of the Galland's Grove district, and there was a very good representation from the various parts of the district present, it being district conference time as well. The list of delegates was swelled some by the addition of Bro. Alexander H. Smith, missionary in charge, and the editor.

The branch is known in the district as the Camp Creek branch. The town of Auburn, at present, is situated on the north side of the Northwestern Railway, some miles east of the Missouri River, on the prairie, and numbers about four hundred inhabitants. There are some half dozen families of the Saints in the place, comprising about forty members of the church, a small number, indeed, when the size and nature of the chapel built by them is considered.

The report of the building committee, consisting of Brn. William A. Carroll, David Hain, E. M. Reynolds and C. E. Butterworth, is a marvel of conciseness, and states, in substance, that one year to a day, from the time of dedication, the branch resolved to build, decided the size and dimensions of the house, and appointed the building committee. The house is twenty-four by thirty-six feet square with fourteen feet ceiling, a vestibule five by eight, and alcove five by nine. The lumber and lime cost $600.03, hardware $78.30, oil, lead, etc., for painting $31.70, pew ends and freight $57.13; making cost of material $767.16; mason work, $46; carpenter work (paid), $13; painting $8; material and labor, donated; stone and draying $45; carpenter work and painting (estimated), $250. Total cost, including stove, lamps, etc., $1,129.16.

The Saints and their friends gave freely, as is seen by the cost of the building; the labor having been mostly done by the Saints themselves. The bills were not all paid when we reached Auburn, but the brethren of the committee, especially Brethren W. A. Carroll and David Hain, so arranged affairs that there was no incumbrance on the building or lot, to prevent dedication. This is most commendable; and the brethren of the Camp Creek branch are entitled to great credit for the energy and successful management of the whole affair. It is true that not all the money had been raised when we reached Auburn, but a liberal donation from those present, and what was still due on list of original subscriptions, would pretty nearly meet the full amount; and not leave too heavy a burden on those who assumed the indebtedness. Those who subscribed should not forget their promises, now that the building is assured.

It is not proper to prefer any one in praise for what is done, where all have done so well; but we were much pleased to see the pluck and energy manifested in the enterprise.

The branch in business session passed resolutions to the following effect:—

Our motto is, Do unto others as you would have them to do unto you.

For this reason we wish to state that the Camp Creek branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, have decided by vote that when not in use by themselves, this chapel shall be open for the use of any and all religious societies, or their representatives; and, believing that truth has no cause to fear an open and fair combat with its worst enemies; therefore, under proper restrictions, Atheists, Deists, and Freethinkers, so-called, shall be permitted to use this house.

This is signed by W. A. Carroll, president, and Amelia F. Hain, clerk of branch; and C. E. Butterworth, and W. W. Whiting, presidents of district.

The occasion of this dedication was an auspicious and enjoyable one; Saints from all over the district, many of them miles away from branch privileges, gathered to be present. The houses of the few families of members in the town overflowed with guests. Where they were all stowed and fed is yet a surprise to the visitor, but sunshine of spirit shone from the faces of all, and not a cloud arose to mar the pleasant season. Long may "Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the plain," remain, and the Saints be blessed in the enjoyment of the house they by sacrifice reared.

The house was full to overflowing Saturday evening and all day Sunday, the 6th and 7th of June, 1896.

The programme of the dedicatory services was as follows: A voluntary by the choir; opening prayer by Elder J. F. McDowell; hymn 164, Hymnal; soliciting exercises; Scripture lesson, 1 Corinthians 3, read by Elder J. F. McDowell; dedicatory hymn 764, Harmony; sermon by President Joseph Smith; hymn 767, Harmony; dedicatory prayer by Pres. A. H. Smith; hymn; and benediction by President Joseph Smith.

At the suggestion of Elder Whiting, Elder Brown, of the Christian Church, was invited to a seat on the platform, and was asked to pronounce the benediction, but declined. The exercises lasted for two hours, but were interesting to the close.

By card, from Fontanelle, June 12, Bro. Williams states:—

The third proposition closes to-night. Everything progressing nicely. We are making friends, B— is making enemies. Two to one in our favor. The work is losing nothing in this encounter. And how could it, when we have truth and God's Spirit on our side? O how great the contrast! I praise God that I am considered worthy to defend his cause.

President Alexander H. Smith, with the editor, and Elder Joseph F. McDowell, occupied at Auburn, from Friday June 5 to Monday June 8, and Bro. McDowell, was left to fill up the week ending June 14. Pres. A. H. Smith and the editor visited Deloit on the way to Des Moines, speaking once each, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the 9th and 10th to houses packed full, finding an excellent interest, the result of a faithful winter's work by Brn. W. W. Whiting, president of district, and James Turner, president of branch, and other help occasionally. It always pays for the local forces to keep busy, even if it may appear at the time to be labor lost. Pres. A. H. Smith, and the editor also called at Des Moines, where Brn. William Kephart and William Thompson are keeping the work of a gospel tent going at the corner of Twenty-first and Forest Avenue. These brethren are having limited interest, and our call was intended to sanction and encourage their effort. Their work is well seconded by the branch, Bro. Mark Cook, president of branch, and others being present on the night of June 11, when Bro. Alexander preached to a fair audience. Sr. Polly Allen and Bro. Thompson are the musicians and lead the song service well, Sr. Polly at the organ.

Bro. Alexander Smith delivered some excellent sermons; especially, the Sunday evening at Auburn, on the subject, "Beware of false prophets." Bro. McDowell's sermon in the afternoon on the beauties and forces of modern revelations, and their correspondence with the inspiration of the Bible, was most excellent and timely.

THE State Woman's Equal Suffrage Association which recently held its annual meeting at Pontiac, Michigan, adopted a resolution "against tight lacing and other evils of modern dress." We do not know that this association represents the "new" woman who demands the suffrage and other privileges long monopolized by man; but it is certain that the organization named has done well to resolve against a very injurious practice by which woman has voluntarily denied herself great privileges long enjoyed by man, and necessary to full enjoyment of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; viz., room to breathe—to live, move, and have her being unhampered by unnatural hindrances to comfort, liberty, and growth, as designed and provided by the Creator, and guaranteed by the constitution of Nature and not interfered with by the Constitution of the United States. "Equal suffrage" yet remains an open question, but equal opportunity and proper dress in which to enjoy it—to breathe freely and move about naturally, are undisputed rights open to the gentler sex, and essential to the health of woman and the welfare of posterity. When woman manifests a disposition to avail herself of present and necessary liberties, man may be more willing to recognize her privileges in other respects. At all events, with dress reform that will permit unrestricted development of lung power and muscular action, woman would certainly be better qualified to bear her part in fighting every battle in life necessary to her own and the welfare of the sterner sex. "Tight lacing" ought to go and the corset and kindred abominations with it. Angels with feathered wings are considered unnatural and rejected as such. Women with whalebones will doubtless share the same fate, and for more practical reasons, as the world moves.

CHURCH LIBRARIAN.

THE resignation of Bro. John Scott, librarian, placed in the hands of the President, pending action of the conference of 1897, makes it necessary that some one be named to act until the conference shall meet.

Notice is hereby given that Frederick M. Smith, lately appointed Historian, will act as Church Librarian until the determination of the conference upon the resignation of Bro. John Scott; and that he has chosen Israel A. Smith as his assistant; the latter being an employee of the Herald Office; will be present to attend to the demands of the library when the librarian is not at hand.

JOSEPH SMITH, President,
A. H. SMITH, of the Twelve, Acting Counselor.

June 18, 1896.

ONE of the most intensely happy men in the latter-day work we have seen lately is Bro. John A. McIntosh, commonly called "Uncle Johnny Mack," formerly of Galland's Grove, but now of Denison, Iowa. He was ninety years old last March, and is in full possession of his mental faculties as yet; though living more in the past than the present.

We met Bro. McIntosh at Deloit, seven miles north of Denison, to which place he came on hearing that "the boys," meaning Bro. A. H. Smith and the editor, would be there. He was much pleased to meet us again; and we confess that to see the kind, manly old man, who for so long a time had testified to the work of God in these last days, and who had so resolutely put away the evil habits of the world to live godly, was a pleasure to us un-mixed with regret to see him whitened for the reaper's hand.

Uncle John was baptized, confirmed, and ordained an elder in 1842; was sent South, to his native State, on a mission and was successful in converting many. He loves now to tell of the events of his missionary life; and as he tells them the apparent hardships encountered by the elders of to-day are hardly worth naming. He attended both meetings we held at Deloit and enjoyed them much.

At the close of the effort of the editor on Tuesday night, June 9, he said to us: "Bro. Joseph, I believed all that a long time ago; and I believe it yet."

His now aged wife and two members of his family were with him at the meetings. We bade the veteran good-bye, with a hope to meet him at the reunion at Woodbine, this fall.

STILL INFORMATION, PLEASE?

THE Searchlight in the number for June, in reply to our inquiry for information, makes a quotation from Latter Day Saints' HERALD, Vol. 3, No. 1, page 64, as follows:—

If you "are determined to advocate and practice old fashioned Mormonism" as you say you are, you will have to give heed unto all Joseph's words and commandments instead of rejecting all, except those contained in the first edition of the Book of Covenants, and even some of them."

We have carefully read the volume, number, and page referred to and find nothing of the quotation there. Will the Searchlight please give its flashlight a half turn or so and tell us where we will find the language quoted and the article referred to? We are willing to answer to any reasonable inquiry based on what has been done in the past, when we hear the inquiry and see the basis for it, if we can so reply.

TERRIBLE EARTHQUAKE IN JAPAN.
THE following Associated Press cablegram contains a brief account of the late Japanese earthquake:—

YOKOHAMA, June 17.—News of a terrible earthquake involving the loss of over a thousand lives has reached here from the island of Yesso, which contains the northern provinces of Japan, including Shirebeshe, Oshima, Furi, Hitaka, Tokachi, Ishikari, Kirshiro, Teshiwo, Kilami, and Nemoro. All these sections of the island seem to have been more or less shaken.

The subterraneous disturbance lasted about twenty hours and during that period the utmost terror prevailed.

The ground rumblings are described as resembling the roaring of distant cannon. Shock followed shock in almost uninterrupted succession about every eight minutes. In all it is estimated there were one hundred and fifty shocks of more or less force.

It is impossible to obtain, for the present, accurate details of the disaster, as communication between the mainland of Japan and Yesso, is said to be interrupted, or, more likely, in the hands of the authorities.

The whole town of Kumbaishi, however, is reported to have been destroyed. The awful series of earthquake shocks were accompanied by a tidal wave and it is believed that it was this onrush of a giant wave from the sea which practically wiped out the Town of Kumbaishi, which is situated towards the Japan Sea on a narrow neck of land separating it from Volcano Bay on the Pacific side of the island.

The island of Yesso has in the past had several similar visitations and contains a number of active and extinct volcanoes.

It is rumored that the number of lives lost and the amount of damage done is far in excess of the figures contained in the brief official dispatch. A full official report of this great calamity has been asked for and is expected shortly.

It is feared that disasters to shipping must also have resulted from the tidal wave.

June 19.—It is now estimated that 10,000 people were drowned by the tidal wave on the Island of Yesso. In addition to the Town of Kumbaishi, which was wholly destroyed, many other coast towns have been washed away entirely or in part.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. J. H. LAKE, Chatham, Ontario, June 15:—

The conference of this district has just closed. We had a peaceful time and five were baptized. Brn. R. C. Evans and William Flegg were here from the London district. I expect to go hence to Ridgetown and be there over next Sunday, thence to Proton for the conference of the London district to hold on the 27th and 28th.

BRO. F. M. SLOVER, Taylorville, Illinois, June 15:—

I have been laboring here during the last week. Two have been baptized and others seem interested.

BRO. JOHN A. DAVIS, Topeka, Kansas, June 15:—

Have been holding preaching services at Topeka of late. The audiences were not very large, yet were very attentive. Through the labor of others as well as myself six were baptized here yesterday, Bro. James Baillie consenting to officiate. There are others interested. And now that the branch is in its infancy and in a fair way to become permanent, we hope it will not be forgotten by the brethren passing through. The local force here are alive in the work.

BRO. M. R. SCOTT, JR., Wirt, Indiana, June 10:—

Have been holding forth at Maple Grove and Autervillage for the past two weeks; large crowds and splendid interest prevailed throughout in spite of Methodist opposition.

On the 7th we gathered on the banks of Auler Creek, where a large crowd witnessed for the first "legal" baptism. On the 9th we troubled the waters of Seavren. Five have been baptized of late.

Bro. D. L. Shinn, Banning, Pennsylvania, June 13:—

I came here from Pittsburg yesterday. And will commence operations this evening in the town hall. Prospects seem good here for the work. In my article on "the Christian System," page 110 should be 114. I left Bro. Griffiths in Wheeling. Will open the skirmish with Bickertonism as soon as my scouts locate them, and capture as many as possible. There are said to be three factions of them in these valleys. I will report progress soon.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy, writing from Boston the 16th inst., says:—

We start tent work next week. Bro. Kelley is with me. We are working on Book of Mormon map. Bro. I. M. Smith is now in our district.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRETHREN sending matter for publication should address it to the Editors, in all cases, to insure attention. Matter connected with book orders, subscriptions, changes of address, etc., should be addressed to the Business Manager.

A letter from Bro. W. H. Cain, who has before been mentioned in the HERALD, written from Salt Lake City the 10th inst., announces that he was that day baptized by Bro. H. O. Smith, and is rejoicing in the restored gospel. He expects soon to remove to Georgetown, Colorado. May success as the reward of humility attend him. He also announces the presence in the city of Brn. J. A. Davis and E. B. Morgan, on their way to their missionary field in Nevada.

Bro. M. H. Bond baptized two at Sorrento, Bond County, Illinois, on the 14th.

Bro. Columbus Scott was at Milford, Iowa, on the 12th. He writes in a personal letter that he has been quite busily engaged during the present conference year, trying to meet various demands for labor. Brighamite elders were in his field and had attended some of his meetings.

A young brother living at Malvern, Iowa, wrote in the HERALD of June 29, calling attention to certain social evils and requesting that we publish and also make note of the matter contained in his letter, that others might be warned against such evils, etc. His desire was to do good, but he feels that his expressions have brought upon him unjust suspicion, if not ostracism. We trust that such, if true, will not continue to be his lot, inasmuch as he proves worthy of fellowship and confidence. Those who turn from evil and manifest repentance and uprightness thereafter, are worthy of sympathy and encouragement, and we doubt not will be aided by the friendship and coöperation of the true in heart everywhere. Our mission is to help and to save.

Bro. R. M. Elvin baptized three at Norwood, Iowa, on the 16th. He was enroute to Hiteman, Iowa, to attend conference of the Decatur district.

"VIROQUA, Wisconsin, June 16.—A destructive hailstorm passed over this section last night, destroying all growing crops, killing sheep and hogs, and doing other great damage. The extent of the storm's path is five by fifteen miles, in the best farming section. Hailstones as large as goose eggs were the average size, and the ground was covered from six to eighteen inches."

"ST. PAUL, Minnesota, June 16.—A heavy hailstorm occurred last night in Southeastern Minnesota. In some places the grain and corn crops were utterly destroyed. A farmer was killed by lightning while plowing."

Brazil, Indiana, reports damage by wind, rain, and lightning storms the same date.

We commend to the brethren, and especially to those actively engaged in spiritual concerns, the conclusion of Bro. S. D. Allen, of Milton, Florida, so far as it applies to active participation in partisan issues of the day. He writes under date of June 13 as follows: "I took issue with a lawyer recently, to maintain the fundamental principles of Democracy, as I understand them, and carried the measures I advocated by a large majority; but I find, Bro. Smith, that such has a tendency to lessen a Saint's spiritual condition, so I think of leaving off, as much as possible, all worldly issues in the future." We congratulate Bro. Allen on his being able to discover this tendency so quickly. Some, to their sorrow and spiritual loss, have followed this course until involved in complications from which it was difficult to disentangle themselves. It is encouraging to hear of a man, who while exulting in real or supposed victory, can discern the tendency to spiritual loss, and resolve to avoid the danger.

President Joseph Smith returned to Lamoni, from Auburn, Iowa, on the 13th inst. Bro. A. H. Smith arrived from Colorado, Nebraska, and Iowa points on the 15th, leaving again on the 19th, in company with Bishop E. L. Kelley for the reunion at Fergus Falls, Minnesota.

BLAIR, Neb., June 6.

Editors Herald:—It has been a season of peculiar and I trust profitable experience to me since my last letter was written for your perusal and thought. I remained in the Northern Nebraska district, except about a week I was at home making repairs on home property, preaching continuously until the 29th of March, when I started to the Sunday School Convention and General Conference at Kirtland, stopping a couple of days at home on my way. I felt especially blessed in all my ministrations. At Fremont two were baptized and at Decatur five were led into the waters of regeneration. Those baptized were adults, and gave evidence of having received the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, and from what I learn since I am happy in the thought that God gave the increase. Prospects are bright for several additions at Decatur. The influence of Bro. and Sr. But's of that place has been and is of a transforming character and is attracting the attention of their neighbors. Srs. Della and Orpha Owens have shown a self-sacrificing spirit and commendable example of zeal by using their musical talents to encourage the work there, oftentimes coming night after night about nine miles to assist. I pray that both the young men and maidens of this mission may go and do likewise, for with such work God is well pleased, and from such assistance has much good resulted in all parts of this blessed work.

Bro. William T. Owens exercised a good influence at Valley, Fremont, and near Bancroft where he has labored, and assisted me much in my services. A promising future is before this young minister if he is not discouraged in his efforts by those from whom he should look for encouragement. The young should be encouraged in all their righteous efforts, and from that source principally do we as a church look for our future help. Especially is it so in this mission, and in Western Iowa where I have done most all my labor in the church for about ten years. The counsel and encouragement of the more experienced will, if wisely given, assist in raising up a generation more perfectly adapted to the present demands of the work. Undue and unwise criticism should never be exercised, because by so doing those who would do good are crippled, and the good they would do they cannot.

Since the General Conference I feel much encouraged with the thought of the necessity of a greater endowment of God's Holy Spirit, that, though differences may exist, those differences may be met with the consideration that those who differ from them may be just as conscientious as they, and though different results may obtain than thought wisest, those results should be submitted to until the proper time for re-examination of the matter previously decided. To correct an error or a supposed error necessitates the fulfillment of the Christian rule. To avoid adding insult to injury, or injury to injury, we should not engage in the profession of talebearer, because by doing this one not only injures the individual or individuals of whom the supposed error is reported, but injures the progress of the work we profess to love, and hinders the development of those who would willingly more fully prepare themselves for service in the Master's cause. Besides, those who permit themselves to be used as talebearers to the injury of any, show themselves not inspired by proper motives, and it is apparent to the thoughtful that they do not understand their responsibility in the family of God. Sustain each other in love.

There is a better understanding being obtained in this mission by both members and ministers, and I look for many to arise from a lethargic condition to activity. Brn. W. T. Owens and H. W. Bellville expect to labor continuously, and I bespeak for them a hospitable reception by all among whom they may labor; for they are worthy, and I believe that by proper assistance they will be able to do much good, in spreading the glad news of the restored gospel.

The conference of the Northern Nebraska district, held here the 29th-31st, ult., brought about a better understanding among the Saints in regard to their duties temporally and spiritually, resulting largely from the wise counsel from the missionary in charge and the Bishop's counselor, Brn. A. H. Smith and G. H. Hilliard, who were present. The tent of this district was used in which to hold the conference, and since then tent services have been continued here, much interest being shown at times. Rains have prevented holding two services last week. While the wind did some damaging work near by on either side, yet the tent was preserved from injury. There are but few Saints here, yet should all who are here unite their efforts continuously, it is evident much good will be done in the near future. The tent will remain here yet for several days.

In the Lake Shore branch the Saints have been severely tried by the manifestation of evil spirits, but at present writing they are rejoicing over the fact as they now know it to exist that God's servants are endued with power over these evil spirits to cast them out. Bro. Arthur Palmer, who was the unfortunate victim whom evil spirits sought to destroy, is a boy of about twelve years of age and rather frail physically, yet very bright in his understanding of the Scriptures. For some reason, God knows best, Bro. Arthur was possessed with evil spirits that made it a task for three strong men to hold him, especially whenever any who held the Melchisedic priesthood were present; but on every occasion when the authority of that priesthood was exercised in righteousness the evil spirits departed. Many times did the evil spirits return, and as many times made to depart. Why it was permitted to return is partially left to conjecture, yet I am assured that a lesson of great value was learned, which is that in no sense should we entertain the evil spirits or permit them to be entertained, no matter what ability the evil spirit may manifest to entertain. The manifestations in this case were not only that of a serpent, dog, cat, owl, and other animals; but also that of one who could tell events transpiring of which the boy knew nothing, and one who could talk as one educated in the mute's language, not only with both hands and either hand, but also with his toes. It was because of these latter manifestations that the evil spirit was entertained, the people being thoughtless in regard to results. The spirit possessing the boy at one time told the people that he was the Devil. To show how shrewd the spirit was it was said that one brother asked him to tell his name and the spirit answered that he would if the brother would call him by the name he would tell him. The brother thoughtlessly said he would. He said his name was "God." The brother said he was a liar, that that was not his name. The evil spirit said the brother was a liar, because he had promised to call him by the name he would tell him and then would not. Many other peculiar features were shown by this boy when possessed. But now God has shown his kindness in giving complete deliverance, and a very valuable lesson learned I trust may never be forgotten. There are many spiritualists here, and of the most peculiar kind I have ever met. They defend, so far as I have been able to determine so far, every principle the Bible represents, denying none, yet place their own interpretation upon it; and several of the leading ones defending their right of church membership in the various churches. I am shown great kindness here by both members and non-members.

For the information of those who reside within the mission under my charge I give the limits of the mission. It comprises the following counties: Antelope, Boone, Burt, Colfax, Cedar, Cuming, Dodge, Dixon, Dakota, Greeley, Knox, Madison, Nance, Platte, Pierce, Stanton, Thurston, Washington, Wheeler, Wayne, and the eastern parts of Valley, Garfield, and Holt, or all east of the ninety-ninth degree of longitude. Any interested in missionary work, or having information of interest to the missionary, will not forget to correspond with me at Magnolia, Iowa; and where you can, please inclose a stamp if reply is immediately desired, as there are times when it is just possible I would be without postage or means to obtain it without asking others for it who might not be any more able to give than you.

I pray for the welfare of God's work everywhere, and exhort all to purity of thought and life, preparing for the usefulness to which God may call, and to shrink not but where "duty calls or danger, be never wanting there;" and then will blessings attend and this work move on to an ultimate victory more rapidly.

Your brother in hope,

J. F. MINTUN.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 3.

Editors Herald:—On May 4 I left my home, Persia, Iowa, for the Philadelphia district, my field of labor, leaving a dear little family and many friends. I have lived here or near here for nearly thirty-seven years, and this is my first year in the ministry from appointment of General Conference. There is nothing that I would leave my dear companion and darling children for, who are as dear to me as my own life, only to carry the gospel to a perishing world, that the honest in heart might be gathered into the kingdom of God; and I could not do this if I did not know this to be God's work.

As the train moved out of our little town of Persia, there were many Saints and friends there, and the handkerchiefs waved in the air to me and for two and three miles up the valley, at the homes of the Saints that knew I was going on that train, they were waving their handkerchiefs in the air. It seemed as though I could read their hearts and they were saying, We welcome you on your journey and bid you Godspeed.

I stopped off at Des Moines a few days with Bro. M. Cook, the president of the branch, and Bro. William Goreham, and they all treated me with kindness. Bro. Goreham took me around the city in his carriage, and we visited the capital, and as we stood in that grand building, which is an honor to the State, while looking at those grand old flags the tears came to the eyes of Bro. Goreham when he looked upon those old flags and his mind went back to the days when they waved over many a brave heart. While at Des Moines I saw the pleasant face of Bro. C. Scott; also saw other brethren that were to commence tent meetings there. I stayed a few days, attended one prayer meeting, spoke to the Saints once, and left them feeling quite well in the work of the Lord,

From there I went to Muscatine, Iowa, and stopped with Bro. C. Dykes and family a few days. I found Bro. L. E. Hills holding meetings in that neighborhood, and assisted him in a few meetings and preached once to the Saints and friends there and left them feeling strengthened in the gospel work. From there I went to Kirtland, Ohio, to see the Saints and the grand old temple. I stopped with Bro. W. H. Kelley and kind family and was treated with kindness.

One morning I went down to the foot of the hill below where the grand old temple stand, and while standing there looking at the old house where Bro. Joseph was born, and as I looked at the old home of Bro. Joseph and then up the hill where the temple stood, I could see that it was uphill for Joseph to go to the temple; and while standing there the thought came to me very strongly that if we ever reached entrance into that beautiful city it would be up hill all the way.

While at Kirtland I attended a prayer meeting and was blessed, and one afternoon I got the key of Bro. Richardson and entered into the temple and was there about an hour, praying, singing, and reading, and went up into the pulpit and knelt down, no one with me but the Lord, and prayed to God and thanked him that I had the privilege to kneel there where the prophet had stood and where angels had been seen to stand; and it seemed to me that it was a holy place, and I felt thankful that I had been permitted to kneel in a house that the Lord had ordered built, and that it had been built according to his plan and the only house that stands upon this earth that was built according to his revelation to man.

On the 15th I started for Philadelphia, by way of Pittsburg, reaching Pittsburg about seven a. m. the 16th, and in the general passenger agent's office of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad what should I see but the pleasant face of Bro. Griffiths, and he requested me to stop over Sunday and took me to the home of Brn. G. H. Hulmes and Ralph G. Smith, and I was made welcome there. I preached to the Saints and friends in the morning in the hall they have rented and was blessed, and the promise that was made to me before I left home—that was the Lord would be with me—was fulfilled, and my heart was made glad, and many of the Saints were made to rejoice. There are some noble-hearted Saints there.

Monday, the 18th. At eight a. m. I took the train for Philadelphia and arrived there about seven p. m. and stopped over night with Bro. Bacon and family, and went to Bro. Parsons' next morning, and the next day joined Bro. H. E. Moler at Baldwin, Maryland, and found good Saints there. This is part of the district that Bro. Parsons has been laboring it for the last few years. He has done a good work here. He is a noble man, and I pray that I may labor for God and keep humble, and that wherever I may labor I may have the love and respect of those that I labor with, that Bro. Parsons has. I wish the field was full of such noble men.

Bro. H. E. Moler and I are holding tent meetings here, in the city. Our crowds have been small, but they are growing and the work looks brighter. Bro. Parsons is assisting us now.

Well, I feel thankful that I am permitted to labor with as noble a man as Bro. H. E. Moler, and I pray that the Lord will bless us that we may have souls for our labor, and some of the honest be brought into the kingdom, and that the Saints here may be made to rejoice.

I wish to say to my Persia brethren and sisters that I often think of them and of days past when God has blessed us in our meetings together, and I look fondly forward to the time when I can return and see their kind faces. I ask the prayers of all the Saints that God will bless us so that we can meet at that great reunion where parting will be no more. Your brother in Christ,

W. A. SMITH.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 10.

Editors Herald:—This spring has been an eventful one; tornadoes, suicides, murder, and political scheming are certainly indications of the last days. The world is fast ripening for destruction. If all the Saints could only read Paul's statement to Timothy understandingly as here quoted, "This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come," (2 Timothy 3: 1), noting the dissolute condition that would exist among those who profess to be God's children (a woeful state), I am sure some would take a step in advance of the position they now occupy. Yet we read, "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Is it possible that Saints who have or profess to have the greater light will indulge in these worldly amusements, such as spending their Sabbaths in parks, horse racing, bicycling, instead of attending church and meditating upon the word of God? There are many other "amusements," called by the professed followers of Christ "innocent amusements;" yet they tend toward evil. Their influence is bad.

I know it is hard for some to recognize the fact that sin is sin. It is not sanctified because I, a professor, indulge therein. Wisdom is so much needed to aid God's covenant children to discern the tendency of the act prior to acting, so that good may be the result of every move.

Grateful hearts welcomed our stalwart brother, H. E. Moler, on his arrival in the city of brotherly love, eager for the fray. He delivered his maiden effort to the Saints and friends in our hall on May 3, with good effect. After visiting Hornerstown, New Jersey, the writer and family accompanied him to Baldwin, Maryland, May 13. The tent was erected and the Saints and friends of that place held a social which netted them nearly eighty-five dollars, which cleared the debt on the church. It has been quite a long pull to accomplish this, yet the Saints can congratulate themselves that while the building is small, it is paid for.

On Sunday morning, the 17th, the writer made the opening address to a small audience in the tent, and baptized two young men who have been halting between two opinions for some time. After confirmation we left for home, leaving Bro. Moler alone to storm the fort; the Devil is doing his best to hold it.

The following week Bro. W. A. Smith, of Persia, Iowa, arrived, and joined Bro. Moler, full of zeal and faith in the ultimate of Zion's cause. On May 24 one was baptized in the city by Bro. Moler. This was a renewal of the party's covenant. On the 29th the tent was set up in the city and work begun, attendance fair for this city. The brethren have done nobly. If only all those called to be Saints were able to discern the golden opportunity, their effort would have a larger effect and result in a greater amount of good; however, we must patiently labor and pray that the day may come when none will hesitate to sacrifice all desires that tend to lead them from making one of the number in pushing Zion's cause to the front. The world's people are looking on and watching where we cast our interest.

Bro. Smith led a young man into the waters of baptism last Sunday morning. If faithful his wife will soon follow. So the good work is slowly moving in this city of spiritualism, infidelity, and hypocrisy in high places. Surely the day of evil is upon us. May God help his people to keep pure and "walk in the light as he is in the light."

A. H. PARSONS.

NACOGDOCHES, Texas, June 11.

Editors Herald:—I have not been able to be in the field for nearly three years, on account of my afflictions. My health has improved very fast; since last General Conference I have been able to preach two discourses. I baptized two women and confirmed them, and administered to four. One had a large wen on the neck, and she came to me one afternoon and asked me to pray to God to take it away. I asked her if she believed that God would heal her through my prayer. She said, "I know he will." Next morning the wen was gone. One of the women I baptized was a member of the Baptist Church. When I baptized them, the eldest son commenced. The world loves his own, and hates to give them up.

Prejudice is high here. I live in a Methodist community, and they say their fathers and mothers were Methodists and that they know they are in heaven, and will meet them there; they will not hear truth. They will not hear their own preacher if he is not a third party man. The community where I baptized the two sisters is composed of Catholics, and they turn out to hear truth. If I am able I will preach there the third Sunday; prospects are good there for more to come to the latter-day work. There are nine members, and we want a branch organized here. I find some good people who say that if we had a branch they would be with us, and I believe they would. We want some of the Texas elders to give us a call as they pass through the county. I live ten miles west of Nacogdoches, which is my address. If one will come, send a card to me when he will get to Nacogdoches, and I will have conveyance there to bring him out.

I am weak in the flesh, but strong in the faith of the latter-day work. Oh, what a bitter thing it is to talk with a preacher of the different creeds and he will say, "The doctrine you preach is better than what we preach, but it is so unpopular with the people"! It was popularity that made me leave the Methodist Church. I wanted to be popular with Christ. How can they have on the wedding garment and say that the doctrine of Christ is not popular? In vain they do worship God, "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." They will be beaten with many stripes.

My humble prayer is that the latter-day work may prevail here and elsewhere. Brethren, I earnestly request your prayers for the same, and also for me to be restored to my health. May we all live in the way that we may obtain eternal life, and enjoy the celestial glory.

Yours in the faith,

HENRY GRIM.

JACKSONVILLE, Arkansas, June 3.

Editors Herald:—I herewith send you "the preacher's dream," it is as follows:—"Once a preacher dreamed that he . . . was getting along nicely. One day an elderly looking man stepped up to him and said: 'How is your zeal?' and he answered, 'All right,' and putting his hand in his bosom and taking out his zeal he said: 'Here it is,' and the old man weighed it in a pair of balances and found that it weighed one hundred pounds. The preacher thought he should be complimented for having so much zeal. But the old man took a hammer and broke it to pieces, and put it in the fire and melted it analyzed it and found that it contained ten pounds bigotry, twenty-three pounds of personal ambition, nineteen pounds of love of praise, fifteen pounds of love of denomination, fourteen pounds of talent, twelve pounds of love of authority, four pounds of love to God, three pounds of love to man; total one hundred pounds."

I had a large crowd out to hear me at the close of my meeting at Kensett. The good Methodist people furnished their church, and played the organ, and did the singing. Some of them seemed to be interested, and some said, "Come again, you can have our church when you come."

I commenced a meeting in this town last night in the Methodist church, but with not much of a hearing. This is a new opening and so was Kensett until I commenced there last week. It seems to be easy enough to find a place to preach, but the people are slow to take hold of the work. It is hard to predict what this field will amount to, if anything. Nevertheless I will do all I can for our cause while here or elsewhere. I am within thirteen miles of the State Capital.

VAN WERT, Iowa, June 3.

Editors Herald:—Sunday night last closed a series of tent meetings in Prescott, Adams County, of a little more than two weeks, in which quite an interest was manifest. Two precious souls had the moral courage to act upon their convictions, regardless of what the world might say, and were obedient to the faith. Bro. Henry Kemp was present, participating in the work. If regular attendance, good attention, and words of encouragement are any criterion, together with financial help on the part of some, we can but hope that others will follow in time, if the field is not neglected. Bro. and Sr. Messenger feel their forces strengthened by the acceptance of and obedience to the gospel by Bro. and Sr. Minor. This little band of Saint has already encouraging words from others in the contemplation of prayer meetings and the starting of a Sunday school.

I shall go to Eastern Iowa next week for the summer's work.

CARTHAGE, W. Va., May 31.

Editors Herald:—I am a sinner in the sight of God, but I am going to live better in the future. My prayer is to all Latter Day Saints to pray for me that I may have an opportunity to come into the church soon. My health is not good. Pray for me, Saints, that I may enjoy good health.

I believe this is the work of the Lord. I have a companion; she is a believer; pray for her. My father and mother both belong to the church. My desire has been to come into the church for a long time, but Satan has held me back; but this time I am going to conquer him.

C. O. WILLIAMS.

GREENE, Iowa, June 4.

Editors Herald:—I have been a member of the church one year last April, was baptized by Elder J. R. Sutton, although I have believed the doctrine much longer. My mother was baptized when a little girl, at Kirtland, Ohio, and has always been strong in the faith, and taught it to her children.

This spring we had a cow with a bunch under her ear as large as a man's fist, and one on each shoulder; those on the shoulders, my husband said, would weigh five pounds each before they broke and began to discharge. I read in the Word of Wisdom, Doctrine and Covenants that tobacco was good for sick cattle. We poured boiling water on fine-cut tobacco and saturated the diseased parts, and a few applications cured the cow. I know that if we obey the Word of Wisdom we will be blessed.

MRS. HATTIE FARR.

PORCUPINE, Wis., June 11.

Editors Herald:—I left home about the 8th of May and stopped at Janesville, where Brn. O. N. Dutton met me. I remained two or three days. We then started across the country, stopping with Saints at Wilder and that evening met with them in prayer meeting. A good time was enjoyed. There we met Brn. Wildermuth, and Burr, ready to start for Rutland with one of the district tents; also Brn. Peterson and Hackett on their way to Yellowstone to commence labor with the other district tent.

The next day Bro. Dutton drove out to Rutland, where we helped the brethren put up the tent. We remained there a few days, and then went on to Oregon branch, where we met with the Saints. On the 21st we drove to the lake, where the writer had the pleasure of baptizing a noble sister. On the 22d I started for North Freedom, and Bro. Dutton returned home. I stopped over night with Bro. Hackett, and the next day took train for Valley Junction and remained there over one week. Did some preaching and spoke for them on decoration day; a good time was enjoyed. On Sunday, May 31, I baptized two and others are near the kingdom.

On June 4 I started for Porcupine to attend the Northern Wisconsin district conference to commence on the 6th. They met in their new church and a good time was enjoyed; not many Saints from a distance, but at each meeting the house was packed with Saints and outsiders. The Spirit of God was present from beginning to end and the Saints were encouraged to press on. On the evening of the 6th while Bro. Cook was taking care of his team in the barn he was struck by lightning and his hat crown was burnt, also a large spot of hair was burnt on his head and a spot on his breast, and his shoe was ripped open and his ankle burnt some. He lay in an unconscious state until Brn. Closson and Whiteaker were called. They administered to him twice and he recovered consciousness. The next morning we administered to him again, and he was able to attend the meetings, and on Monday was able to ride fifteen miles home. The Saints rejoice that the Lord still remembers his people, and they are willing to press on.

Bro. Whiteaker and the writer continued the meetings up till last evening and had a good turnout. Yesterday a number of Saints and friends took their teams and we went to the lake where Bro. Closson baptized four. So the good work goes on. To-morrow I expect to baptize one more. Others are almost ready. We hope the Saints will live faithfully, and if they do others will soon obey.

On Saturday next we go to Ono, Pierce County, to hold a week's grove meeting. I am glad to say that in all of the above-named places the work is onward. May the Lord be with his servants.

In bonds,

BATTLE LAKE, Minn., June 11.

Editors Herald:—Since leaving home, on the 30th of April, I have been as busy as a bee. Have baptized nine, and others have given their names for baptism, to be attended to at the reunion in Fergus Falls.

I have so many calls for preaching it almost makes me sick because I cannot respond to them, either in person or by substitute. This mission is ripe for a good harvest of souls, but where are the reapers? The burden of my prayer is that our heavenly Father will send more laborers into the harvest field. Just think, only four missionaries in three States, and calls coming from all parts of them for preachers! O, how I wish and pray that our local brethren in this mission would awaken to a true sense of duty and take better care of the flocks that they have under their watchcare!

We have had some very sad things to bear up under here this spring. One was the accident with our young brother, Harry J. Hawley, that occurred on Sunday evening, of May 24; he innocently but carelessly shot himself while fooling with a pistol. I hoped ere long to see him standing in the front ranks of God's army, declaring the angel's message of latter days to sinful man. Harry was loved by all who knew him. The large crowd that attended his funeral and saw him laid to rest speaks but mildly of the esteem in which he was held by the people. Nice wreaths of flowers from all parts decorated the casket and the pulpit, not for show, but in love for Harry. One gentleman, a druggist, I believe, sent to Minneapolis and bought five dollars worth of beautiful flowers as a token of esteem in which he held our young brother. May our heavenly Father bless the bereaved ones. Father, mother, one brother, and two sisters, are left to mourn, but not without hope.

The continued wet weather has hindered some in holding meetings, as well as the farmers in their work. Nine days more and our reunion is to begin, and if the people mean what they say we expect a large crowd and are hopeful of much good being done. Come Saints, awake! and let us make this conference year the crowning one of this mission.

Will the brethren of the missionary force please be prompt in reporting their labors to me, as requested by the missionary in charge, that I may have my report to him in due time. Bro. Peter Anderson and Bro. E. A. Stedman will take charge of South Dakota and Southern Minnesota, including the city of Minneapolis. The writer and Bro. Swen Swensen will occupy in North Dakota and Northern Minnesota. Come, brethren, let us push the work onward, but wisely; don't urge anyone to join the church until he understands what he is doing. Don't interfere with local matters unless called upon by those in authority. Push out into the world as the law of God directs, and success will attend your labors.

My mission address will be from now on, Audubon, Minnesota, Box W.

Editors Herald:—Our course is still onward. I had the pleasure of leading two more into the beautiful waters of Lake Michigan on Sunday morning—nice people. Our hall was well filled Sunday afternoon with attentive hearers; our theme, "the future life;" the occasion, the funeral services of Bro. Peter Larkey. Sister Larkey is left with five children to care for, one a babe in arms. She has the sympathy of the entire branch and of many friends whom she has found to be "friends indeed."

At our business meeting last evening the former president was sustained. F. M. Pitt was chosen presiding priest, E. Lang presiding teacher, E. S. Allen deacon and treasurer. The report of our treasurer showed our branch to be in excellent financial condition—over eighty dollars on hand and no debts.

It was decided to change our place of meeting to Custer Post Hall, on Sangamon Street, near West Madison Street. This is a nice, large, light hall, well ventilated, and which we can occupy all day Sunday, and where we hope to make still greater progress. Our city prospects are encouraging.

I returned last week from a four weeks' trip in Kewanee district. Our conference at Canton was a success; the good Spirit prevailed throughout. Bro. John Chisnall was sustained as president, Bro. James Terry was chosen to assist him as vice president. The absence of Bro. McKiernan was a disappointment to many. Bro. John A. Robinson's presence, however, went a great way in making up for loss occasioned by the absence of others. He gave us one of his best sermons on Sunday morning. The Spirit was present in melting power and the Saints were blessed. The local brethren are coming to the front in missionary work. The spirit of unity and peace prevailed.

We met a united little band of Saints at Peoria. They find it difficult, as in other large cities, to obtain a hearing, but are still struggling onward in the hope that in due reason they shall reap if they faint not. Sunday, May 31, was a big day in the little village of Dahinda. Word had gone out for miles into the surrounding country that the Latter Day Saints had erected a church and that an effort would be made to dedicate it. Bro. Joseph Smith and other leading men were expected, and we were assured that if the day was fine our little church would not hold the crowds that would attend. Of course we prayed for fine weather—that is, until Saturday; when Bro. Joseph failed to arrive, likewise the other leading men, and we found ourselves alone—we began to almost hope it would rain. But the day was fine with the exception of a little sprinkle of rain about noon, and teams from the country began to arrive early, so that by the time services were announced the church was packed. Many who arrived later could not find an entrance, but listened at the windows and doors. Appropriate mottoes decorated the walls. Prominent behind the pulpit were the words "Welcome;" also "A free pulpit and an open Bible;" on one side was, "Our creed, all truth;" opposite this, "Thy word is truth." The good Spirit was with us; we had excellent liberty presenting the word, morning, afternoon, and evening. In the afternoon we baptized two in the presence of several hundred people. All seemed deeply impressed with the services, and we have reason to believe much prejudice was removed.

The prospects of the work here are excellent. We have never had a better hearing among outsiders than we have had at Dahinda. We organized a branch there to be known as the Dahinda branch, with Elder D. C. Smith president. The work at Dahinda is principally through the efforts of Bro. Smith, seconded by his excellent wife and family, and the few Saints living in the neighborhood.

We did not dedicate the church, as we failed to raise quite enough money to pay off the indebtedness. So the dedication was postponed for a future occasion. We think you may expect to hear good news from Dahinda in the near future.

Yours in bonds,

F. G. PITT.

P. S.—Chicago Sunday school will hold their annual picnic in Lincoln Park, on the 4th of July, and will be pleased to welcome all Saints and friends who may wish to join us. They will be likely to meet some of us at the spring near the boathouse between the hours of ten a. m. and one p. m. F. G. P.

SORRENTO, Ill., June 12.

Editors Herald:—The Thursday following the General Conference we left the friends at Kirtland and Willoughby, on evening train for Cleveland, securing ministerial favors of the Detroit boat agent, who took occasion to inquire concerning the differences between ourselves and the people in Utah. Hearing that some of the conference brethren were over to Sr. Woolson's we went over there to meet them, but were disappointed. At ten a. m. met Bro. Willard Smith at the boat, journeying with him to Detroit, sojourning in that pleasant city until Saturday noon, when we left for Grand Rapids. Arriving there at five p. m. found Bro. Grant and my daughter Lottie, with her husband, Mr. Putnam, waiting for me.

On Sunday I spoke in the hall, which the faithful have secured, afternoon and evening, to a good, a very attentive congregation; and also again on Monday evening. On Tuesday left for Cadillac, finding things vastly changed in the lapse of passing years; new faces, new scenes, but with the old memories still walking and stalking with us; pleasant visit among friends of other days however. Returning to Grand Rapids, spoke to a good crowd of Saints and interested people on Friday night. On Saturday went with Bro. Fred Stevenson out to Alpine via the bicycle and fine roads, to visit Bro. and Sr. Norton. Saturday evening, spoke again to the people, as also Sunday afternoon and evening. We had thought to get away from Grand Rapids sooner; but the Saints and people, with Bro. Grant, who had to leave for Bay City on Thursday, were so urgent that we should remain to speak to them and nourish the interest there in our work, that we felt that we could not do better than to yield, and are glad that we did. Grand Rapids certainly offers a good field for the presentation of the restored gospel, and great things seemed possible for a "wise servant" of God in that locality. I never saw better interest among intelligent people. By word from Sr. Zonie Stephenson the other day I learn that twelve have been baptized since I left.

Sunday night at 11:30, we, my daughter Lottie, babe, and myself, left for Chicago, where we spent the following day, leaving at nine p. m., for St. Louis, arriving home the following morning, finding everything fairly well, with exception of Sr. Bond's health, which has since, however, improved.

The first shock of the news of President Blair's death was given me at the close of Friday night's meeting at Grand Rapids, through press reports, and the shadow that fell upon our spirits then has not yet passed away. Coming as it did so soon after his very pleasant visit with us at St. Louis, our pleasant journey together to Cleveland and conference, it seemed all so sudden, so unexpected, and the circumstances of his death unsurrounded by his family—those nearest to him, that even the natural and ordinary event of death seemed clothed with changes for which we were all unprepared.

Although disagreeing in interpretation or application of governmental or church law in some respects, with the departed, we never entertained other belief than that he spoke his honest conviction and thought in these matters. His long and faithful service in the cause of truth—unpopular, but heaven-sent and heaven-approved truth—will not soon be forgotten by any of us. As a man of social parts and gentlemanly qualities he certainly ranked high. Devoted and loyal to wife and family, a man without reproach in his demeanor or behavior as a minister of Christ, we are assured that notwithstanding his sudden removal, he now "rests from his labors, and his works" will "follow" him unto the day of final approval and reward. May the comfort and consolation which comes through knowledge that it is well with him and a glorious reunion made possible by the power of Christ by which he only "is able to subdue all things unto himself," comfort his companion and bereaved ones, is our prayer.

Since returning to our reappointed field we have been laboring in and out of St. Louis as duty and events seemed to point us our way, aided by the Spirit's suggestion and counsel. The great cyclone seemed to have turned many people our way. Reporters have been after us, and we have been sorry that other engagements have prevented our meeting the public, more especially on Sundays during the excitement that followed St. Louis' great disaster. Two weeks ago last Sunday evening two were baptized. We spoke there also in regard to the lesson which the truth as we understand it should teach thinking people, reports of which more or less distorted were in nearly all the papers, which, however, only seemed to draw the public. In the report published in the Republic sent Bro. Criley are some things which are the work of the reporter's brain so far as personality is concerned. But we are losing nothing nowadays in St. Louis, so far as the world is concerned, and we trust that wisdom will be given to all to "hold fast" what we have got, and by godly lives as well as voice, give effectual warning to the people of that great and wicked city.

Bro. Archibald gave them an excellent sermon last Sunday, we hear. "Archie" is a great help and comfort to us, as other brethren whom we might name. Last Sunday two were baptized at Alma, more near the door, and we expect soon to return there.

Came to this place last Tuesday. No Saints here, and the gospel as Jesus taught it, a "new thing" to them all. But we are not without friends already, and expect to leave brethren and sisters behind us when we leave this place. Preaching every night, hall packed, and standing room only for late comers. No one occupying the three churches in town, but Jesus Christ or his servants will not be permitted to occupy. The trustees of the Methodist church were willing, but the shepherd of the flock was not; but we have the crowd just the same, and we will get some of the flock if they don't act a little more christianlike, at least I think so. Mr. Joseph Barraclough, a brother of Bro. George Barraclough, of Sherman, Texas, and through whose zeal and generosity I am here, is one of the trustees of said church, and with their push and our pull I think he will bid good-bye to the Methodist fold ere I leave.

Excellent liberty and power, seemingly of a convincing sort, was given us, especially last evening, but the Devil is around and the tender seed is easily killed in the minds and hearts of honest people, or people who think they are honest, but who have never been taught by their spiritual advisors to cultivate thought or independence of character in religious matters.

We expect to be at the district conference which convenes at Bellville, Illinois, the 20th. We had hoped to have with us Bro. Lambert to survey the situation, suggest or inaugurate what we are certain is called for of needed reform; but alas! one man may wisely direct but who will go? A leader must have followers, and the sad history which the Book of Mormon gives, of rebellion against law and government of our heavenly Father, comes too near repetition in our day, not to make the wise at times sad and fearful.

In gospel bonds,
M. H. BOND.

FONTANELLE, Iowa, June 19.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—The debate has closed. It was a long encounter and was quite a physical strain. The attendance was good throughout. The night that the debate closed the members of the Christian Church at the solicitation of the Honorable (?) Clark Braden, proceeded to the Christian church, held a short session, passed a resolution denouncing me, and extolling "I Clark Braden" in the highest terms. They will publish these as the expression of a "mass meeting" of the citizens of Fontanelle. I expected something of this kind and attended. When the vote was called, although my friends were not present, the vote was lost. They then tried again and called for a rising vote, and although as many or more voted against the resolution, they decided that they had carried. It was the most cowardly act I ever heard of. When the people heard the next day what had been done the storm burst, and everywhere, all over the town, some Christians and Methodists and Infidels, as well as all leading citizens, denounced the act. If the vote had been taken in the tent we would have had three to one. As a result the next day some of the best citizens of the town got together and in three hours in the afternoon raised a purse of thirty-five dollars for me and presented it at the evening meeting with the following note:—

"FONTANELLE, Iowa, June 18, 1896.

"Rev. T. W. Williams:—Please accept the tribute herein inclosed; being from the citizens of Fontanelle as an expression of their esteem for you as a Christian gentleman and as a tribute to the unbiased manner in which you have conducted the debate just closed. And we denounce in unmeasured terms the brutal and unchristian language used by Rev. Hall, in declining to debate a question previously agreed to."

As regards their opinion of Clark Braden, I understand it is to come out in next week's paper.

Senator Kilburn, the banker, and the leading doctors, lawyers, and merchants indorsed the above letter. Braden went off in a corner and indorsed himself. My indorsement came unsolicited from the "best citizens of Fontanelle."

I have it on good authority that several of the members of the Disciple Church, and also of the Methodist, have requested that their names be stricken from the rolls. Members of the Christian Church came and expressed their sympathy and confidence and denounced Braden's actions in unmistakable terms.

In looking over the ground I am assured we have gained much more than we anticipated.

The Rev. Mr. Hall (M. E. minister), the night that the debate closed with Elder Braden, came forward and read a short address extolling the actions and efforts of "Professor" Braden; and stating that since my mask had been taken off I was beneath his notice!!! I replied to his assault and told the people that when I promised to do anything I kept my word, and that whether Rev. Hall was present or not, we would discuss Methodism three nights.

When Elder Braden saw that he was defeated in this discussion he issued a circular containing three challenges and scattered them everywhere, and on the last night he defied me to meet him according to the provision of the challenge. I replied that this circular alone was evidence of complete defeat. That a man who had vanquished his opponent was not clamorous for another investigation. That I had come to Fontanelle and waited patiently for Elder Braden to bring forth his proof; and that now when the discussion is over he comes forward with the pitiful plea that if I give him another trial he would show me what he could do. The people saw how weak he was—he promised to furnish the finances to defray all expenses for the board of arbitration that this circular provides for, and to confine himself to only such testimony as would be admitted in a court of law. I knew he would never do so when it came to the test, and that he was only trying to bluff me; so I accepted, and told him I would meet him the next day at ten o'clock to consummate arrangements. We met; I had seven witnesses and he three besides himself, and he utterly refused to come up to the stipulations. He wanted that we choose a board of arbitration and let them decide what testimony would be admitted. How cunning he was! He knew that this court of arbitration were not amenable to anyone but the ones that selected them; and as Clark Braden paid all the money, you can see how easily the decision could go in his favor! He backed squarely out. He announced that he would meet E. L. Kelley, the Scotts, or T. W. Williams, and prove that Solomon Spalding was the author of the Book of Mormon. When I wanted him to so debate he refused. And now, since Clark Braden has virtually acknowledged his defeat in this encounter, and has offered challenges and then deliberately refused to meet the issue, I feel that I, nor any other of our ministry, am under no obligation to meet this man again. He has deliberately backed out.

If the Disciples had the matter to do over again, I am assured they would never employ Clark Braden again. After the time he brayed like a donkey, claiming to thus imitate our people speaking in tongues, the boys and young men, and some old men, when they see him on the streets, or when he is talking, they commence to bray.

How he squirmed when I read your and Bro. Kelley's denial about buying Ebenezer Robinson off for seventy-five dollars. He went back on the whole thing. I am satisfied it is no exaggeration to say that five sixths of the people are against Braden. Where we had one friend we now have ten. I propose to remain here for a week or two and hold meetings. There are some points that came up in this discussion that I may report next week, as I think them of interest to your readers, but will send no synopsis, as I think you have been burdened with synopses of discussions already.

Yours hastily,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

P. S.—Elder Braden had five moderators, and we had four different chairmen.

MOUND CITY, Mo., June 14.

Editors Herald:—On May 8 we pitched our district tent at Stanberry, remaining there four weeks. Notwithstanding the rain we preached about twenty sermons, Bro. Peter Anderson doing most of it, and doing it well. Some seemed to be interested.

From there I went to Guilford and held four meetings with good congregations of outsiders. I then came here and commenced meetings at the Blair schoolhouse. This is a new opening, but there were sixty grown persons at our first meeting. Will continue till our conference, June 27 and 28, at the Union Church.

We hope the results will be for good. There have been two of the Utah elders near here preaching, and they do not tell the people the difference between us and them. But we expect to tell them of it.

Yours for truth,

M. P. MADISON.

SERMON BY PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH.

At LAMONI, IOWA, June 24, 1894.

I HAVE chosen as a text this morning a portion of scripture found in the eighth chapter of the gospel according to St. Luke. The words are simple in their nature, and yet they are very suggestive:—

My mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God and do it.— Luke 8: 21.

At present there is a peculiar state of unrest in the world. It is not only found in what we recognize as the economic world, the every-day work-a-day world, and the political world; but is found in the religious world. And while perhaps the lines of difference may not be any more sharply drawn now than they were years ago, there is, either purposely from the design of God, or from the gradual drifting away from the consideration of the letter of the law, a degree of latitude allowed in the minds of men tending largely to uproot many of the things of the past; and there is at large, in the congregation and to a certain extent in the pulpit as well, an endeavor to escape from a strict consideration of the word, and allow a degree of belief that is supposed to be capable of teaching men to dwell with God hereafter. I do not purpose this morning to dwell at any great length upon this condition of the world, but want to point to it for this reason, that upon this division we have something to offer, having helped to some extent in creating the confusion. I do not mean to say that we, personally, have been at the bottom and the root of all the division there is in the world; but we have been fostering for many years a peculiar kind of philosophy, that has served to agitate the world more or less, and though we may not have been the personal agitators of it those who have preceded us in a certain sense have been; and it has been designed of God that it should be so. For instance, as a people we have been teaching to the world the doctrine of present and direct revelation to man; and, while it has been the general belief in the religious world that in the history of the past this was the case that men believed in revelation, yet for many centuries it has not been taught as a specific dogma of belief, until this angel message was projected upon the world, and it became a household word with them with whom this angel message found a lodgment, and they went out telling the people that God designed that men should believe that he could not only reveal himself, but that he absolutely did reveal himself not only in ages past but now. They cited evidences to prove that God had both the will and the power and claimed that he had spoken to them by audible voice, by vision, and by dream, and that he had absolutely ministered to them by angels, telling them what they should believe; and that among the things they should believe was, that Christ should come to reign on the earth personally, in glory. And not only that, but this angel told these men that the far-off heaven that men have sought for and believed in, was not the place designed for the future abode of the Saints of God; but that the earth, the pillars of which God had fixed immutably, was to be the final abode of the Saints. That it was to be cleansed and purified, and everything that was of an evil and obnoxious nature should be taken from it, that it might be made an abode for the people of God to dwell in. And as a matter of consequence this sort of teaching brought the people of the new faith into contact with the belief of the world. But the question was, If the manifestation was true, they secured their salvation by receiving it; if it was untrue, time would certainly develop and prove it; and hence accepting as true what they heard they went out declaring what the angel told them. And as they went they challenged everybody for discussion. I do not mean by this that they became special advocates of contention, but they were told to tell the people to bring forth their strong reasons; for, using the language of the word, the Lord says, "Bring forth your strong reasons;" and the spirit of manhood says, "Come, let us bring our reasons and compare them together, and let us stay by them until we shall disprove one or the other." They were told that if they would go out in the spirit of meekness, they would not be left alone; and in the presentation of the thought that God had revealed himself, and that by obedience to the renewed gospel message the children of men could be saved from their present condition, they should not be founded.

I was born into this church in one sense of the word, although it is said that there can be no natural born citizens of the kingdom of heaven;—but I was born two years after the church was organized. It was organized in 1830, and I was born at the close of 1832; and it is not in my own recollection; in fact, I cannot recollect far enough back not to remember that the elders were told to invite the people to meet them, both in public and in private, and call upon them to bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord, or his truth which they bore. In addition to this they were told to tell the people that Jesus was to come and reign on the earth, and that there was to be a dispensation of preparation first. In 1843 while the elders were going forth making the proclamation that Jesus was coming to reign on the earth, they met a class of religionists believing also in the coming of Jesus telling the people that he was due and would be here, with the end of earthly things in that year. The elders of the new faith, however, believed in the New Testament theory in regard to that coming; and hence taught contrary, to this class of second Adventists, telling the people that neither those ministers nor their membership knew when Jesus would come; that they did not know, and that they could not tell the day, nor the hour, nor the year in which Christ would come.

My attention was this morning called to a statement published in one of our exchange papers, made by a man at Chariton, whom I don't know; but his name is Cushing, who writes that there is only one thing that will save this nation. I want you to bear in mind that I am not a politician, but simply tell you what this man tells the people will save the nation. He says that if they shall abolish the tariff, have free-trade, put all the railroads in the hands of the government, take out of the hands of the President and Senate all power, and let it rest with the voters, they may save this people, they may save the world. He adds, "but I fear you will hear from Gabriel inside of sixty days, if the New Testament is true." That is about the 20th of August. I am sorry it is to come in a hot month. Professor Totten and others say that the earth is coming to an end soon, fixing a later date.

We have individuals all over the world exciting the people in every possible way with the thought that Jesus is coming. I am not averse to his coming. I am satisfied that everything that has been within the province of the human brain to devise, everything that has been done by man to bring about a state of rest and peace has failed, and failed miserably; and that everything that can be done by mere humanity in this connection will fail, must necessarily fail to bring the reign of peace, for it will never be accomplished until he whose right it is shall come to reign, and by his royal power as well as his love shall compel every one to comply with his edict, and every one thus compelled will be benefited by it. If you compel a man to conform to human laws, he rises up and says, You are an enemy to me and are working against my interest.

We have, in the United States, an immense number of foreigners. They come from Russia, from Poland, and other parts of the earth. They do not come among us with the highest aspirations for liberty, but they come seeking labor, and after awhile they strike for higher wages. Nobody is blaming them for that; but when they propose to keep other men from work that are ready to work, when they say, "You shall come to us for work, we will do your work and nobody else shall do it, they themselves are against the law and against the good of society, and they with such methods never will prevail. In many places they have become so disorderly and riotous that the State troops are called out against them; but they say, We will wait till the State troops are gone, and then you will hear from us.

Some may think from this that I am finding fault with the poor man for striving to better his condition; that I am not in sympathy with the laborer. I tell you I am in sympathy with the laborer, I feel with him in his toil, and would help him; but when I go down and take the drunkard from the ditch into which he has fallen and in which he is grovelling, and if he, after I have done everything I could do, to save him, should still persist in his course, I might say, Now, I have done all I could for you, seek your own salvation in your own way, and be contented to accept the consequences. When men resist the law and ignore it, although they may think that their labor is a benefit to the organization to which they belong, they sow the seeds of anarchy and must necessarily reap the fruits thereof.

We expect that until Christ shall come to reign and rule in righteousness, this diversified state of things that now exists, will continue until men are educated, not only in their brain, in their capacity for thought, but in their will; until they are willing to comply with the law of God, there will be anarchy and unrest in the world.

We have been talking to our elders that the time is coming when everything that can be shaken will be shaken, and I am not sure but that the time will arrive when it shall be shaken all to pieces. It has been revealed to us, however, by direct revelation, that there is to be safety, somewhere, for them that shall call on the name of the Lord. But you say that there is to be a class that shall say, "Lord, Lord," and the Master shall say to them, In vain have you worshiped me in the precepts of men. In vain call you me Lord, Lord, and say unto me, In thy name we have done many wonderful works; what is there that prevents us to be accepted? And it shall be said unto them, "Depart from me, I never knew you." This book [King James' Translation] says, "I never knew you." That puts it beyond, or out of the knowledge of God. The Inspired Translation says, "You have never known me," which is more reasonable. The reason why they have never known him is, because they would not, not because they could not; and against them the Savior says, and says it well, "My mother and my brethren are these that know the will of my Father, and do it; who hear the word of God and do it."

Just at present there is a peculiar movement going on in Chicago; and almost everything has its seat in Chicago since the world's fair. Professor Dr. Thomas, Raphael, Hirst, and a good many others; some, members of the Presbyterian Priesthood; some of them going back on their Jewish position; some of them from among the great thinkers, all able men; and they are trying to lay down a platform upon which to unite all the different churches, one that is sufficiently broad to take in every thinker in the wide world, and the power of this association is to be found in the principle that is to make it become absolutely liberal and broad in religion.

I have thought of that idea a good deal. I should like a good deal of that kind of latitude myself, if I could but discover that it was available to me. But I see a difficulty in the way, and that difficulty is what I want to talk about this morning. The difficulty is, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." That is spoken by him who is the author of life and salvation; the Savior himself says it. The individual whom God sent to be the minister plenipotentiary from the powers of heaven to the world; the individual who testifies as recorded by John,

I came not to condemn the world, but to save the world;
this man says:—

No man cometh to the Father but by me.

Make the portals of the church as wide as you possibly can; make the platform upon which men may be called to stand in religious belief just as broad and as deep as you possibly can make it, and you still have that same declaration of the Savior staring you in the face,

No man cometh to the Father but by me.

A few years ago when the elders of the church began to make this declaration, and preach the restored gospel in its light, they were told by the people that their doctrine was too narrow. Just a few days ago, when my boy was in the cars coming home from Mount Ayr, he was told that our church was too narrow. I do not know what the conversation was, but the lad had said something to an elder of a different church talking in the Sunday school, and must have been advancing the claims of this church. "Now that excludes all but you," said the teacher. A man wrote me in a similar strain the other day, to which I answered as well as I could. He wrote to ask me if I knew that all the balance except the little band that belonged to our church was rejected of God. I did not know where this man got that thought. Bro. Gillen was preaching in a schoolhouse not far from Bro. Rogers', and in the course of his remarks he made use of this expression, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." There was a man in the congregation who took it that Bro. Gillen claimed that we alone are saved and said, "What are you going to do with that seven by nine glory?" He thought Bro. Gillen as the preacher held to the idea that none but the church to which he belonged would receive life and salvation; and he called it a seven by nine glory.
